Ask: What details in the photograph reinforce the theme of despair? (Details such as the child's facial expression and the ramshackle appearance of the dwelling reinforce the theme of hopelessness.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English learners may need help with figurative language—expressions such as "cotton was king" or "what the farmer could do to lift himself from the hole he stands in." Have students discuss the meaning of each phrase. Have students rewrite the sentences that contain figurative language, using literal translations. For example, for "Cotton was king," they might write, "Cotton was the crop that made the most money for plantation-owners, and their decisions were ruled by it."

Assess

1. Students' summaries should mention that the excerpt explores the historical roots and negative effects (on both people and the land) of the sharecropping system.
2. (a) Sharecropping encouraged families to increase in size so that they would have more workers. It also deprived children of an education.
   (b) Larger families and poor education would have increased the poverty in sharecropping communities.
3. Many students will say that the images vividly convey the harshness and poverty of sharecroppers' lives.
4. (a) The sharecropping system is unfair and destructive. (b) Most students will think they are successful.
5. Most students will feel an increased sympathy for Wright's father, as Wright himself does at the end of the excerpt from Black Boy.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 243–244.

inability to suggest what the farmer could do to lift himself from the hole he stands in. There is cotton to be raised, and he has trained himself to raise it. That is his specialty. It is his life and, if sharecropping continues as an institution, it will become his death.

The tenant farmer in the South is trying to hold onto a spinning world until by some means he is enabled to get a grip on a better way of life. He knows he cannot buy land of his own from the profits of sharecropping. He knows just as well that he cannot save until he earns, and that he cannot earn much more than a bare living from sterile, barren land. He does well, under the circumstances, to hold on at all.

Now that his condition has sunk to depths that stop just short of peonage,[8] there has appeared the first sign of hope. What there is in store for him in the future remains to be seen, but now for the first time there is hope. There has been talk, from one end of the South to the other, of joining with other tenant farmers to take collective action against the institution of sharecropping. The day when it was a sacred bull has passed. The sign of its passing was when the landlords began putting into force other forms of farm tenancy. Farms were leased to tenants, but sharing of the cotton continued; tenants were paid to work by the day, but their pay was received in a share of the cotton. No one was fooled, least of all tenant farmers themselves.

The farmer has little, if anything, to show for his years of labor in the past. But the hardships he has experienced will stand him in good stead when the time comes for him to begin thinking about taking over the job of raising cotton—the job in which the landlord failed to treat him fairly and squarely.

---

[8] Peonage is the use of workers who are forced to labor for someone to work off a debt.

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Write a brief summary of the main ideas in this article before you answer the following questions. For help on writing a summary, see page 79.
2. (a)What effect did sharecropping have on the size of families? Of what did sharecropping deprive children? (b)What might be the outcome of these two effects?

Analyze and Evaluate

3. In a short paragraph, describe how the images add to your understanding of sharecropping.
4. (a)What is the main idea of this selection? (b)Are the authors successful in conveying it? Explain.

Connect

5. Does this selection change your opinion of Wright's father as depicted in Black Boy? Explain.

Writing Practice

Implied Main Idea Point out that sometimes the main idea of a paragraph is not stated but implied. Have students examine the first paragraph of this selection. Guide them in recognizing that the implied main idea of the paragraph is a contrast between the fertile soil of the Mississippi Delta and the Black Belt and the infertile soil of other areas. Challenge students to write a topic sentence expressing this main idea.

Some students may find it helpful to write the main idea of each paragraph as they read the selection and then use their sentences as a summary of the selection.

Before You Read

The Life You Save May Be Your Own

Meet Flannery O'Connor
(1925–1964)

Flannery O'Connor often delighted in telling friends and interviewers that the highlight of her life occurred when, as a five-year-old, she taught a chicken to walk backwards. It was on such odd yet ordinary experiences that O'Connor later based her work.

☆ "Highly Unladylike" Mary Flannery O'Connor was born in Savannah, Georgia. Soon after, her family moved to Milledgeville, a small city in central Georgia. After graduating from college in 1945, she attended the prestigious Iowa Writers' Workshop at the University of Iowa, earning an MFA degree. While at Iowa, O'Connor had her first short story, "The Geranium," published in the summer of 1946.

> "The truth does not change according to our ability to stomach it."
>
> —Flannery O'Connor

More short stories and novels followed, in which O'Connor often drew upon her experiences as a devout Roman Catholic to explore harsh and disturbing realities: hard luck, hypocrisy, and failed expectations. Her work was widely read by the public and highly praised by critics. A review appearing in Time magazine hailed O'Connor as "highly unladylike [with] a brutal irony, a slam-bang humor, and a style of writing as balefully direct as a death sentence."

Along with William Faulkner, Carson McCullers, and Tennessee Williams, O'Connor is sometimes classified as a Southern Gothic writer because of her detailed renderings of small town Southern life and her flair for creating eccentric—even grotesque—characters. Commenting on these characters, Alice Walker, an African American writer, observed, "O'Connor's characters—whose humanity if not their sanity is taken for granted, and who are miserable, ugly, narrow-minded, . . . with not a graceful, pretty one anywhere who is not, at the same time, a joke—shocked and delighted me."

Return to Georgia In 1952, at the age of 27, O'Connor was stricken with a near fatal attack of lupus, the incurable disease from which her father had died. She was forced to move back to her mother's dairy farm outside Milledgeville, where she remained for the rest of her life. Despite her illness, she managed to correspond with friends, lecture on writing, raise her prized peacocks—and continue to write. She died from lupus at 39. Despite the brevity of her life, O'Connor's fiction has inspired generations of writers.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Flannery O'Connor, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 57

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 83

Or show students photographs of people of various ages, occupations, ethnic groups, and levels of wealth. Ask: How would you describe each person? What assumptions would you make about him or her? Why? Tell students to consider, as they read, the way they form ideas about new people they meet.

Writer's Technique ☆

Grotesque Characters Flannery O'Connor is known for her grotesque characters. The term grotesque refers to the bizarre, twisted, or abnormal.

Selection Skills

The Life You Save May Be Your Own

Literary Elements
- Dialogue (SE pp. 914, 916, 917, 918, 920, 922, 923)
- Foreshadowing (SE p. 925)
- Irony (TE p. 922)

Reading Skills
- Apply Background Knowledge (SE pp. 914–917, 921, 923, 925)
- Visualize (TE p. 916)
- Compare and Contrast (TE p. 918)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Usage (SE pp. 914, 925)
- Double Negative (TE p. 914)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Review (SE p. 926)
- Sentence Formation (SE p. 926)
- Characterization (TE p. 920)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

A one-armed man named Shiftlet arrives at the isolated farmhouse of an old woman, Mrs. Crater, and her mentally disabled daughter. He agrees to fix up the farm buildings in exchange for food and a place to sleep. Within a week, Mrs. Crater convinces Shiftlet to marry her daughter. After a town-hall wedding, the couple leaves in Mrs. Crater's car. When they stop at a restaurant, the bride falls asleep, and Shiftlet abandons her.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 80–85.

Vocabulary

Antonyms Say: Match the following words with their antonyms in the vocabulary list.

cheerful (morose)

satisfied (ravenous)

plump (gaunt)

slouching (stately)

acclaim (rue)

ENGLISH LEARNERS To ensure understanding of meaning, ask: Which words describe appearance? (gaunt, stately) Which word describes a feeling or attitude? (morose)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 88.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

How reliable are first impressions? Discuss this question with a partner. Consider a time you judged someone by his or her clothing, accent, or behavior.

Build Background

During the Great Depression, unemployed men, and occasionally women, often became wanderers, referred to as "tramps" or "hoboes." They went from place to place, particularly in rural areas, seeking odd jobs in return for food, clothes, or shelter.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Return to Regionalism

As you read, ask yourself, How does this story reflect life in the rural South during the later years of the Great Depression?

Literary Element Dialogue

Dialogue is the conversation between characters in a literary work. Through dialogue, an author reveals the feelings, thoughts, and intentions of characters; develops conflicts; and moves the plot forward. As you read, ask yourself, What does the dialogue reveal about the characters in this story?

Reading Strategy Apply Background Knowledge

Background knowledge refers to what you already know about the setting, characters, and situations in a literary work. You can add to your background knowledge by reading carefully the information included under the Build Background section preceding the selections in this book. As you read, ask yourself, What do I already know about the features of this story? By relating what you know to what you are reading, you create meaning and enrich your understanding of the text.

Tip: Use a Preview Chart Skim the story for information about setting, characters, and possible conflicts. Use a chart like the one below to record details and relevant background knowledge.

Details	What I Know
rural setting	fewer people, less technology
Great Depression	people needed money and work

Learning Objectives

For pages 913–925

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing dialogue.

Reading: Applying background knowledge.

Vocabulary

gaunt (gônt) adj. thin, bony, and hollow-eyed, as from hunger or illness; p. 915 Her face looked long and gaunt, as though she were ill.

ravenous (rav´ ə nəs) adj. extremely hungry; p. 918 After fasting for a long time, the prisoner was ravenous for food.

stately (stāt´ lē) adj. noble; dignified; majestic; p. 920 The mansion was elegant and stately, like a palace.

morose (mə rōs´) adj. bad-tempered, gloomy, and withdrawn; p. 921 His morose disposition led him to keep to himself and brood.

rue (roo) v. to regret; to be sorry for; p. 923 When the car did not start, I rued the day I had bought it.

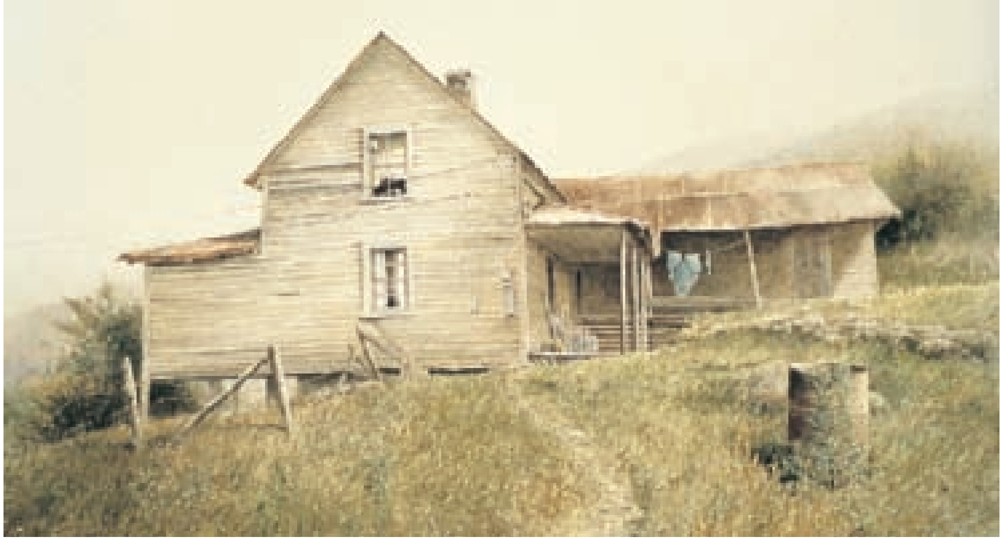
Tip: Word Usage When you encounter new words, it might help you to answer a specific question about the word. Example: How might a ravenous dog behave? A ravenous dog might growl, whimper, or snap in hunger.

Vocabulary Practice

Double Negatives Tell students that in this story they are about to read, the characters speak in a regional dialect that includes the use of the double negative—two or more negative words in the same clause to express the same idea. Give students an example of a phrase that uses the double negative: I didn't go nowhere today. Ask: How would you express this using standard English? (I went somewhere today.)

Have students make a list as they read of sentences containing double negatives. When they are done reading, have them revise each sentence into standard English.



Setzer Cove Homeplace, 1982. Hubert Shuptrine. Drybrush, $14\frac{7}{8}$ x $21\frac{1}{2}$ in. Private collection. ★

The Life You Save May Be Your Own

Flannery O'Connor

1 The old woman and her daughter were sitting on their porch when Mr. Shiftlet came up their road for the first time. The old woman slid to the edge of her chair and leaned forward, shading her eyes from the piercing sunset with her hand. The daughter could not see far in front of her and continued to play with her fingers. Although the old woman lived in this desolate[1] spot with only her daughter and she had never seen Mr. Shiftlet before, she could tell, even from a distance, that he was a tramp and no one to be afraid of.

His left coat sleeve was folded up to show there was only half an arm in it and his gaunt figure listed slightly to the side as if the breeze were pushing him. He had on a black town suit and a brown felt hat that was turned up in the front and down in the back and he carried a tin tool box by a handle. He came on, at an amble, up her road, his face turned toward the sun which appeared to be balancing itself on the peak of a small mountain.

The old woman didn't change her position until he was almost into her yard; then she rose with one hand fisted on her hip. The daughter,

---

[1] A desolate spot is miserable, lonely, and cheerless.

2 Apply Background Knowledge Why is the old woman relieved when she realizes that the stranger is a tramp?

Vocabulary

gaunt (gônt) adj. thin, bony, and hollow-eyed, as from hunger or illness

Teach

Big Idea 1

Return to Regionalism

Say: Keep this question in mind as you read: How are O'Connor's characters typical of Southern Gothic writing? (They behave bizarrely.)

Reading Strategy 2

Apply Background Knowledge

Answer: She sees tramps as harmless vagabonds looking for work. They were common in the South during the Depression.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 87.

View the Art ★

Ask: How does this painting illustrate the setting? (It suggests that the Craters' home is rundown.)

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 6.1

DRP: 54

Lexile: 970

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging To begin to understand the character of Mr. Shiftlet, have students list the details that describe his appearance. (long, slick black hair; a forehead that takes up half his face; a jutting "steel-trap" jaw; one arm) Ask: What is the general effect of these details? (Possible answers: unattractive, unappealing, repellent) What do you expect from a character like this? (Possible answer: Such an unappealing character will probably not do good things; he may cause problems.)

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Grotesque Characters Have students further explore the grotesque character in Southern Gothic literature. As students read, have them note how each character exemplifies the grotesque type. Have them present their observations to the class.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Apply Background Knowledge Answer: Shiftlet probably wants to acquire the car for himself. As a tramp, he is always traveling, but so far he has had to do it on foot.

Literary Element 2

Dialogue Answer: He believes that people and things were better in the past than they are today. He keeps suggesting that although he is young, he is dissatisfied with life because he understands it deeply.

Cultural History ☆

Heart Surgery Heart surgery was emerging at the time of this story. In 1938, Dr. Robert E. Gross successfully repaired a heart defect through surgery.

a large girl in a short blue organdy dress, saw him all at once and jumped up and began to stamp and point and make excited speechless sounds.

Mr. Shiftlet stopped just inside the yard and set his box on the ground and tipped his hat at her as if she were not in the least afflicted; then he turned toward the old woman and swung the hat all the way off. He had long black slick hair that hung flat from a part in the middle to beyond the tips of his ears on either side. His face descended in forehead for more than half its length and ended suddenly with his features just balanced over a jutting steel-trap jaw. He seemed to be a young man but he had a look of composed dissatisfaction as if he understood life thoroughly.

"Good evening," the old woman said. She was about the size of a cedar fence post and she had a man's gray hat pulled down low over her head.

The tramp stood looking at her and didn't answer. He turned his back and faced the sunset. He swung both his whole and his short arm up slowly so that they indicated an expanse of sky and his figure formed a crooked cross. The old woman watched him with her arms folded across her chest as if she were the owner of the sun, and the daughter watched, her head thrust forward and her fat helpless hands hanging at the wrists. She had long pink-gold hair and eyes as blue as a peacock's neck.

He held the pose for almost fifty seconds and then he picked up his box and came on to the porch and dropped down on the bottom step. "Lady," he said in a firm nasal voice, "I'd give a fortune to live where I could see me a sun do that every evening."

"Does it every evening," the old woman said and sat back down. The daughter sat down too and watched him with a cautious sly look as if he were a bird that had come up very close. He leaned to one side, rooting in his pants pocket, and in a second he brought out a package of chewing gum and offered her a piece. She took it and unpeeled it and began to chew without taking her eyes off him. He offered the old woman a piece but she only raised her upper lip to indicate she had no teeth.

Mr. Shiftlet's pale sharp glance had already passed over everything in the yard—the pump near the corner of the house and the big fig tree that three or four chickens were preparing to roost in—and had moved to a shed where he saw the square rusted back of an automobile. "You ladies drive?" he asked.

"That car ain't run in fifteen year," the old woman said. "The day my husband died, it quit running."

"Nothing is like it used to be, lady," he said. "The world is almost rotten."

"That's right," the old woman said. "You from around here?"

"Name Tom T. Shiftlet," he murmured, looking at the tires.

"I'm pleased to meet you," the old woman said. "Name Lucynell Crater and daughter Lucynell Crater. What you doing around here, Mr. Shiftlet?"

He judged the car to be about a 1928 or '29 Ford. "Lady," he said, and turned and gave her his full attention, "lemme tell you something. There's one of these doctors in Atlanta that's taken a knife and cut the human heart—the human heart," he repeated, leaning forward, "out of a man's chest and held it in his hand," and he held his hand out, palm up, as if it were slightly weighted with the human heart, "and studied it like it was a day-old chicken, and lady," he said, allowing a long significant pause in which his head slid forward and his clay-colored eyes brightened, "he don't know no more about it than you or me." ☆

"That's right," the old woman said.

"Why, if he was to take that knife and cut into every corner of it, he still wouldn't know no more than you or me. What you want to bet?"

Apply Background Knowledge Why does Mr. Shiftlet focus his attention on the automobile? 1

Dialogue What does this exchange reveal about Mr. Shiftlet? 2

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Visualize Explain that by visualizing characters—seeing the characters in their minds—readers can imagine them as three-dimensional people. Have students read the first four paragraphs on this page. Tell them to consider the women's intellectual and physical characteristics.

Ask: Which characteristics make the women seem strong, and which make them seem weak? (The mother's stolid appearance suggests a no-nonsense, capable person. However, the girl's limitations and the mother's reaction to Shiftlet's obvious sentimentality suggest that both are vulnerable.) In order to better assess the characters, have students first make a two-column list, writing the descriptive details about the mother in one column and about her daughter in the other.

"Nothing," the old woman said wisely. "Where you come from, Mr. Shiftlet?"

He didn't answer. He reached into his pocket and brought out a sack of tobacco and a package of cigarette papers and rolled himself a cigarette, expertly with one hand, and attached it in a hanging position to his upper lip. Then he took a box of wooden matches from his pocket and struck one on his shoe. He held the burning match as if he were studying the mystery of flame while it traveled dangerously toward his skin. The daughter began to make loud noises and to point to his hand and shake her finger at him, but when the flame was just before touching him, he leaned down with his hand cupped over it as if he were going to set fire to his nose and lit the cigarette.

He flipped away the dead match and blew a stream of gray into the evening. A sly look came over his face. "Lady," he said, "nowadays, people'll do anything anyways. I can tell you my name is Tom T. Shiftlet and I came from Tarwater, Tennessee, but you never have seen me before: how you know I ain't lying? How you know my name ain't Aaron Sparks, lady, and I come from Singleberry, Georgia, or how you know it's not George Speeds and I come from Lucy, Alabama, or how you know I ain't Thompson Bright from Toolafalls, Mississippi?"

"I don't know nothing about you," the old woman muttered, irked.[2]

"Lady," he said, "people don't care how they lie. Maybe the best I can tell you is, I'm a man; but listen lady," he said and paused and made his tone more ominous[3] still, "what is a man?"

The old woman began to gum a seed. "What you carry in that tin box, Mr. Shiftlet?" she asked.

"Tools," he said, put back. "I'm a carpenter."

"Well, if you come out here to work, I'll be able to feed you and give you a place to sleep but I can't pay. I'll tell you that before you begin," she said.

There was no answer at once and no particular expression on his face. He leaned back against the two-by-four that helped support the porch roof. "Lady," he said slowly, "there's some men that some things mean more to them than money." The old woman rocked without comment and the daughter watched the trigger that moved up and down in his neck. He told the old woman then that all most people were interested in was money, but he asked what a man was made for. He asked her if a man was made for money, or what. He asked her what she thought she was made for but she didn't answer,

---

[2] To be irked is to be annoyed or bothered.

[3] Something ominous is, or seems to be, threatening.

3 Dialogue How does this statement make you feel about Mr. Shiftlet?

Applying Background Knowledge Should the old woman trust Mr. Shiftlet or not? Explain. 4

Teach

Literary Element 3

Dialogue Answer: Although Shiftlet appears to be stating the obvious, he may be lying about his identity and place of origin.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Clarify what a "sly look" is and how it affects the reader's view of Shiftlet. (Being sly is being dishonest or deceptive; the sly look suggests that he is not being honest)

Reading Strategy 4

Apply Background Knowledge Answer: Students may say that the old woman should be careful—Shiftlet does not seem sincere.

View the Photograph

In Flannery O'Connor's time, many American families lived in isolated places, like that in the photograph. Point out that Shiftlet says that "he wished he lived in a desolate place like this."

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Point out that Mr. Shiftlet had been a foreman on the railroad. Identify the prefix fore- and ask what other words students know with this prefix. (Possible answers include forehead, forecast, foresee.) Ask them to determine the meaning of the prefix fore-. (front or in front of) Ask: What is a foreman? (a person in charge of others)

Advanced Point out the multiple-meaning word trash. Students probably know trash as "something you throw away." Explain that Mr. Shiftlet is using this word with another meaning. Ask them to determine its meaning from the context. (someone of low social standing or bad reputation)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging To help students increase reading fluency, point out that in dialogue, words are often omitted or used in informal ways. Model how to restate dialogue into Standard English. For example, "You ladies drive?" means "Do you ladies know how to drive?" Have students read dialogue aloud for practice.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Return to Regionalism Answer: These details reflect the character of the South during that time. Gospel music was and still is popular there; Uncle Roy and the Red Creek Wranglers sound like country musicians.

Literary Element 2

Dialogue Answer: Mrs. Crater wants Shiftlet to think that Lucynell can be a good wife.

Reading Strategy 3

Make Inferences Explain that Mrs. Crater may have an agenda for marrying Shiftlet and Lucynell. Ask: What would Mrs. Crater gain by such a union? (She would have an unpaid handyman available; someone would be there to take care of Lucynell after her own death.)

APPROACHING Remind students that you make an inference about what is unstated by applying your own knowledge to the information given. Ask what knowledge we need to infer Mrs. Crater's intent. (People often say the opposite of what they mean in order to lead someone along.)

Writer's Technique ☆

Character Names Authors often give characters names that provide clues to their personalities. The name Shiftlet, for example, is reminiscent of shifty, suggesting that Shiftlet is a shady character.

she only sat rocking and wondered if a one-armed man could put a new roof on her garden house. He asked a lot of questions that she didn't answer. He told her that he was twenty-eight years old and had lived a varied life. He had been a gospel singer, a foreman on the railroad, an assistant in an undertaking parlor, and he had come over the radio for three months with Uncle Roy and his Red Creek Wranglers. He said he had fought and bled in the Arm Service of his country and visited every foreign land and that everywhere he had seen people that didn't care if they did a thing one way or another. He said he hadn't been raised thataway.

A fat yellow moon appeared in the branches of the fig tree as if it were going to roost there with the chickens. He said that a man had to escape to the country to see the world whole and that he wished he lived in a desolate place like this where he could see the sun go down every evening like God made it to do.

"Are you married or are you single?" the old woman asked.

There was a long silence. "Lady," he asked finally, "where would you find you an innocent woman today? I wouldn't have any of this trash I could just pick up."

The daughter was leaning very far down, hanging her head almost between her knees, watching him through a triangular door she had made in her overturned hair; and she suddenly fell in a heap on the floor and began to whimper. Mr. Shiftlet straightened her out and helped her get back in the chair.

"Is she your baby girl?" he asked.

"My only," the old woman said, "and she's the sweetest girl in the world. I wouldn't give her up for nothing on earth. She's smart too. She can sweep the floor, cook, wash, feed the chickens, and hoe. I wouldn't give her up for a casket of jewels."

"No," he said kindly, "don't ever let any man take her away from you."

3 "Any man come after her," the old woman said, " 'll have to stay around the place."

Mr. Shiftlet's eye in the darkness was focused on a part of the automobile bumper that glittered in the distance. "Lady," he said, jerking his short arm up as if he could point with it to her house and yard and pump, "there ain't a broken thing on this plantation that I couldn't fix for you, one-arm jackleg[4] or not. I'm a man," he said with a sullen dignity, "even if I ain't a whole one. I got," he said, tapping his knuckles on the floor to emphasize the immensity of what he was going to say, "a moral intelligence!" and his face pierced out of the darkness into a shaft of doorlight and he stared at her as if he were astonished himself at this impossible truth.

The old woman was not impressed with the phrase. "I told you you could hang around and work for food," she said, "if you don't mind sleeping in that car yonder."

"Why listen, Lady," he said with a grin of delight, "the monks of old slept in their coffins!"

"They wasn't as advanced as we are," the old woman said.

The next morning he began on the roof of the garden house while Lucynell, the daughter, sat on a rock and watched him work. He had not been around a week before the change he had made in the place was apparent. He had patched the front and back steps, built a new hog pen, restored a fence, and taught Lucynell, who was completely deaf and had never said a word in her life, to say the word "bird." The big rosy-faced girl followed him everywhere, saying "Burrttddt ddbirrrttdt," and clapping her hands. The old woman watched from a distance, secretly pleased. She was ravenous for a son-in-law.

1 Return to Regionalism Why does the author include these details?

2 Dialogue Why might Mrs. Crater say this to Mr. Shiftlet?

---

[4] A jackleg, like a jack-of-all-trades, can do many different kinds of work for which he or she has not been trained.

Vocabulary

ravenous (rav′ ə nəs) adj. extremely hungry

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Compare and Contrast Explain that comparing characters can help students gain insight into the story. Have students compare and contrast Shiftlet and Mrs. Crater, using a Venn diagram or a comparison chart. Have them examine each character's background, strengths, weaknesses, motives, and problems. In small groups, have them share their comparisons, discussing how characters' similarities and differences play off against one other and move the story along.

CHELSEA MILL

☆

Mr. Shiftlet slept on the hard narrow back seat of the car with his feet out the side window. He had his razor and a can of water on a crate that served him as a bedside table and he put up a piece of mirror against the back glass and kept his coat neatly on a hanger that he hung over one of the windows.

In the evenings he sat on the steps and talked while the old woman and Lucynell rocked violently in their chairs on either side of him. The old woman's three mountains were black against the dark blue sky and were visited off and on by various planets and by the moon after it had left the chickens. Mr. Shiftlet pointed out that the reason he had improved this plantation was because he had taken a personal interest in it. He said he was even going to make the automobile run. 4

He had raised the hood and studied the mechanism and he said he could tell that the car had been built in the days when cars were really built. You take now, he said, one man puts in one bolt and another man puts in another bolt and another man puts in another bolt so that it's a man for a bolt. That's why you have to pay so much for a car: you're paying all those men. Now if you didn't have to pay but one man, you could get you a cheaper car and one that had had a personal interest taken in it, and it would be a better car. The old woman agreed with him that this was so.

Mr. Shiftlet said that the trouble with the world was that nobody cared, or stopped and took any trouble. He said he never would have been able to teach Lucynell to say a word if he hadn't cared and stopped long enough.

"Teach her to say something else," the old woman said.

"What you want her to say next?" Mr. Shiftlet asked.

The old woman's smile was broad and toothless and suggestive. "Teach her to say 'sugarpie,' " she said.

Mr. Shiftlet already knew what was on her mind.

Teach

Reading Strategy 4

Apply Background Knowledge Recall with students what they know about the Great Depression and men who wandered the country, looking for work. Ask: How do you think Shiftlet learned about cars? (Perhaps he had a job as a mechanic.)

Cultural History ☆

Automobiles In the first half of the twentieth century, automobile use increased dramatically in the United States. In 1900, only 8,000 people owned cars; by 1929, about 23 million did. Once the Depression hit, many car owners could not afford to buy gasoline or service their cars, and therefore their cars sat idle, like Mrs. Crater's.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Point out that sometimes dialogue is indirect. Instead of putting the characters' specific words in quotation marks, the writer restates what the character says. Provide this example: "Mr. Shiftlet said that the trouble with the world was that nobody cared . . . ." Have students find other examples of indirect quotations. Remind them that indirect dialogue reveals as much about characters as direct quotations.

Emerging Point out that Shiftlet often says or does one thing and means another. Start with this example: "Mr. Shiftlet pointed out that the reason he had improved this plantation was because he had taken a personal interest in it." Ask: What does he mean? (that he cares about her property) Why does he say that? (to make the woman think he cares about her and her daughter) How do you know that his words and actions have different meanings? (He immediately brings up his interest in the car.) Have students identify other examples and evaluate his intent.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Dialogue Answer: She is exaggerating her feelings for her daughter. She wants to convince Shiftlet to marry Lucynell, and therefore she tries to make Lucynell seem like a prize.

Literary Element 2

Dialogue Answer: Mrs. Crater wants Shiftlet to accept her daughter and her home as a package deal. She thinks that recalling his plight as a one-armed, homeless drifter will make him more receptive.

Cultural History ☆

Value of a Dollar "Seventeen-fifty" doesn't sound like much money. However, what cost $1.38 in 1935 cost $19.37 now, so Mrs. Crater's $17.50 would be equivalent to about $250 now.

The next day he began to tinker with the automobile and that evening he told her that if she would buy a fan belt, he would be able to make the car run.

The old woman said she would give him the money. "You see that girl yonder?" she asked, pointing to Lucynell who was sitting on the floor a foot away, watching him, her eyes blue even in the dark. "If it was ever a man wanted to take her away, I would say, 'No man on earth is going to take that sweet girl of mine away from me!' but if he was to say, 'Lady, I don't want to take her away, I want her right here,' I would say, 'Mister, I don't blame you none. I wouldn't pass up a chance to live in a permanent place and get the sweetest girl in the world myself. You ain't no fool,' I would say."

"How old is she?" Mr. Shiftlet asked casually.

"Fifteen, sixteen," the old woman said. The girl was nearly thirty but because of her innocence it was impossible to guess.

"It would be a good idea to paint it too," Mr. Shiftlet remarked. "You don't want it to rust out."

"We'll see about that later," the old woman said.

The next day he walked into town and returned with the parts he needed and a can of gasoline. Late in the afternoon, terrible noises issued from the shed and the old woman rushed out of the house, thinking Lucynell was somewhere having a fit. Lucynell was sitting on a chicken crate, stamping her feet and screaming, "Burrddttt! bddurrddttttt!" but her fuss was drowned out by the car. With a volley of blasts it emerged from the shed, moving in a fierce and stately way. Mr. Shiftlet was in the driver's seat, sitting very erect. He had an expression of serious modesty on his face as if he had just raised the dead.

That night, rocking on the porch, the old woman began her business at once. "You want you an innocent woman, don't you?" she asked sympathetically. "You don't want none of this trash."

"No'm, I don't," Mr. Shiftlet said.

"One that can't talk," she continued, "can't sass you back or use foul language. That's the kind for you to have. Right there," and she pointed to Lucynell sitting cross-legged in her chair, holding both feet in her hands.

"That's right," he admitted. "She wouldn't give me any trouble."

"Saturday," the old woman said, "you and her and me can drive into town and get married."

Mr. Shiftlet eased his position on the steps.

"I can't get married right now," he said. "Everything you want to do takes money and I ain't got any."

"What you need with money?" she asked.

"It takes money," he said. "Some people'll do anything anyhow these days, but the way I think, I wouldn't marry no woman that I couldn't take on a trip like she was somebody. I mean take her to a hotel and treat her. I wouldn't marry the Duchesser Windsor,"[5] he said firmly, "unless I could take her to a hotel and give her something good to eat.

"I was raised thataway and there ain't a thing I can do about it. My old mother taught me how to do."

"Lucynell don't even know what a hotel is," the old woman muttered. "Listen here, Mr. Shiftlet," she said, sliding forward in her chair, "you'd be getting a permanent house and a deep well and the most innocent girl in the world. You don't need no money. Lemme tell you something: there ain't any place in the world for a poor disabled friendless drifting man."

The ugly words settled in Mr. Shiftlet's head like a group of buzzards in the top of a tree. He

1 Dialogue Do you think Mrs. Crater's tender feelings for her daughter are genuine? Explain.

Vocabulary

stately (stāt´ lē) adj. noble; dignified; majestic

---

[5] Shiftlet is referring to the American woman for whom Britain's King Edward VIII gave up the throne in 1936. The new king gave them the titles Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Dialogue Why does Mrs. Crater insult Mr. Shiftlet? 2

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Characterization Explain that characterization emerges from the various ways a writer reveals a character's personality. Note that in this story O'Connor has developed interesting characters by contrasting their words and actions. Discuss the character of Mr. Shiftlet by asking students to give examples of his words and actions. Then have students write two- or three-paragraph vignettes that showcase two characters with clear contrasts in words and actions. Review with students the rules for paragraphing and punctuating dialogue.

didn't answer at once. He rolled himself a cigarette and lit it and then he said in an even voice, "Lady, a man is divided into two parts, body and spirit."

The old woman clamped her gums together.

"A body and a spirit," he repeated. "The body, lady, is like a house: it don't go anywhere; but the spirit, lady, is like a automobile: always on the move, always . . ."

"Listen, Mr. Shiftlet," she said, "my well never goes dry and my house is always warm in the winter and there's no mortgage on a thing about this place. You can go to the courthouse and see for yourself. And yonder under that shed is a fine automobile." She laid the bait carefully. "You can have it painted by Saturday. I'll pay for the paint."

In the darkness, Mr. Shiftlet's smile stretched like a weary snake waking up by a fire. After a second he recalled himself and said, "I'm only saying a man's spirit means more to him than anything else. I would have to take my wife off for the weekend without no regards at all for cost. I got to follow where my spirit say to go."

"I'll give you fifteen dollars for a weekend trip," the old woman said in a crabbed voice. "That's the best I can do."

"That wouldn't hardly pay for more than the gas and the hotel," he said. "It wouldn't feed her."

"Seventeen-fifty," the old woman said. "That's all I got so it isn't any use you trying to milk me. You can take a lunch."

Mr. Shiftlet was deeply hurt by the word "milk." He didn't doubt that she had more money sewed up in her mattress but he had already told her he was not interested in her money. "I'll make that do," he said and rose and walked off without treating[6] with her further.

On Saturday the three of them drove into town in the car that the paint had barely dried on and Mr. Shiftlet and Lucynell were married in the Ordinary's[7] office while the old woman witnessed. As they came out of the courthouse, Mr. Shiftlet began twisting his neck in his collar. He looked morose and bitter as if he had been

---

[6] Here, treating means "negotiating or discussing terms."

[7] An Ordinary is a local judge who, in many states, is called the "justice of the peace."

Vocabulary

morose (mə rōs´) adj. bad-tempered, gloomy, and withdrawn

3 Apply Background Knowledge Why does the author compare Mr. Shiftlet's smile to a snake?

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Apply Background Knowledge Answer: Students may say that the author is making a comment on Shiftlet's slyness, since a snake is a symbol of evil.

APPROACHING Have students identify other qualities of snakes that make this comparison appropriate. (Snakes are considered sneaky; poisonous snakes are dangerous.)

View the Photograph

The first diners were horse-drawn wagons, but by the 1920s, diners had fixed locations. Many were made of shiny metal and resembled train cars. In the mid-1900s, diners declined in popularity—perhaps the reason for the run-down appearance of this diner.

Ask: How does this diner compare with your vision of the counter where Shiftlet takes Lucynell? (Possible answer: The Hot Spot probably looks a lot like it.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate Explain that English has expressions that are not taken literally. Have students work with a small group to identify the meaning of the following expressions.

- "to milk me" (get all her money or other goods)
- "make that do" (manage with what he has, even though it is not exactly what he wants)

Advanced Draw students' attention to the word isolated. Explain that the root -sol- means "alone." Have them define isolated using the meaning of the root. (being set apart or separated from others) Ask them what word explained in a footnote on the first page of the story has the same root. (desolate)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Dialogue Answer: She thinks that he has kept his part of their first agreement with his efforts around the house. Since he honored their first agreement, he may be a man with "a moral conscience" who will honor their second agreement.

Big Idea 2

Return to Regionalism
Answer: Local diners were a common sight in the South, and ham and grits were popular foods in this region.

Literary Element 3

Dialogue Answer: He plans to abandon Lucynell and run off with Mrs. Crater's car and money. He wants to avoid arousing suspicion about his relationship with Lucynell.

insulted while someone held him. "That didn't satisfy me none," he said. "That was just something a woman in an office did, nothing but paper work and blood tests. What do they know about my blood? If they was to take my heart and cut it out," he said, "they wouldn't know a thing about me. It didn't satisfy me at all."

"It satisfied the law," the old woman said sharply.

"The law," Mr. Shiftlet said and spit. "It's the law that don't satisfy me."

He had painted the car dark green with a yellow band around it just under the windows. The three of them climbed in the front seat and the old woman said, "Don't Lucynell look pretty? Looks like a baby doll." Lucynell was dressed up in a white dress that her mother had uprooted from a trunk and there was a Panama hat on her head with a bunch of red wooden cherries on the brim. Every now and then her placid[8] expression was changed by a sly isolated little thought like a shoot of green in the desert. "You got a prize!" the old woman said.

Mr. Shiftlet didn't even look at her.

They drove back to the house to let the old woman off and pick up the lunch. When they were ready to leave, she stood staring in the window of the car, with her fingers clenched around the glass. Tears began to seep sideways out of her eyes and run along the dirty creases in her face. "I ain't ever been parted with her for two days before," she said.

Mr. Shiftlet started the motor.

"And I wouldn't let no man have her but you because I seen you would do right. Goodbye, Sugarbaby," she said, clutching at the sleeve of the white dress. Lucynell looked straight at her and didn't seem to see her there at all. Mr. Shiftlet eased the car forward so that she had to move her hands.

The early afternoon was clear and open and surrounded by pale blue sky. Although the car would go only thirty miles an hour, Mr. Shiftlet imagined a terrific climb and dip and swerve that went entirely to his head so that he forgot his morning bitterness. He had always wanted an automobile but he had never been able to afford one before. He drove very fast because he wanted to make Mobile[9] by nightfall.

Occasionally he stopped his thoughts long enough to look at Lucynell in the seat beside him. She had eaten the lunch as soon as they were out of the yard and now she was pulling the cherries off the hat one by one and throwing them out the window. He became depressed in spite of the car. He had driven about a hundred miles when he decided that she must be hungry again and at the next small town they came to, he stopped in front of an aluminum-painted eating place called The Hot Spot and took her in and ordered her a plate of ham and grits. The ride had made her sleepy and as soon as she got up on the stool, she rested her head on the counter and shut her eyes. There was no one in The Hot Spot but Mr. Shiftlet and the boy behind the counter, a pale youth with a greasy rag hung over his shoulder. Before he could dish up the food, she was snoring gently.

"Give it to her when she wakes up," Mr. Shiftlet said. "I'll pay for it now."

The boy bent over her and stared at the long pink-gold hair and the half-shut sleeping eyes. Then he looked up and stared at Mr. Shiftlet. "She looks like an angel of Gawd," he murmured.

"Hitchhiker," Mr. Shiftlet explained. "I can't wait. I got to make Tuscaloosa."[10]

The boy bent over again and very carefully touched his finger to a strand of the golden hair and Mr. Shiftlet left.

---

[8] Placid means "calm" or "peaceful."

[9] Mobile (mō′ bēl) is a port city in southwestern Alabama.

[10] Tuscaloosa, in west central Alabama, is nearly 200 miles north of Mobile.

1 Dialogue Why does Mrs. Crater think Mr. Shiftlet will "do right" by her daughter?

Return to Regionalism How do these details contribute to the setting? 2

Dialogue Why does Mr. Shiftlet lie to the boy behind the counter? 3

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Irony Explain that irony arises from a contrast or discrepancy between appearance and reality. Flannery O'Connor uses several kinds of irony in her story. Clarify that verbal irony is a person's saying one thing and meaning another, as when someone says of a mean person, "Nice guy!" Dramatic irony occurs when the audience has important information that the characters do not know. Have students identify instances of both types of irony on this page and the next. Have students explain how the irony contributes to the Southern Gothic aspect of the story.

He was more depressed than ever as he drove on by himself. The late afternoon had grown hot and sultry and the country had flattened out. Deep in the sky a storm was preparing very slowly and without thunder as if it meant to drain every drop of air from the earth before it broke. There were times when Mr. Shiftlet preferred not to be alone. He felt too that a man with a car had a responsibility to others and he kept his eye out for a hitchhiker. Occasionally he saw a sign that warned: "Drive carefully. The life you save may be your own."

The narrow road dropped off on either side into dry fields and here and there a shack or a filling station stood in a clearing. The sun began to set directly in front of the automobile. It was a reddening ball that through his windshield was slightly flat on the bottom and top. He saw a boy in overalls and a gray hat standing on the edge of the road and he slowed the car down and stopped in front of him. The boy didn't have his hand raised to thumb the ride, he was only standing there, but he had a small cardboard suitcase and his hat was set on his head in a way to indicate that he had left somewhere for good. "Son," Mr. Shiftlet said, "I see you want a ride."

The boy didn't say he did or he didn't but he opened the door of the car and got in, and Mr. Shiftlet started driving again. The child held the suitcase on his lap and folded his arms on top of it. He turned his head and looked out the window away from Mr. Shiftlet. Mr. Shiftlet felt oppressed.[11] "Son," he said after a minute, "I got the best old mother in the world so I reckon you only got the second best."

The boy gave him a quick dark glance and then turned his face back out the window.

"It's nothing so sweet," Mr. Shiftlet continued, "as a boy's mother. She taught him his first prayers at her knee, she give him love when no other would, she told him what was right and what wasn't, and she seen that he done the right thing. Son," he said, "I never rued a day in my life like the one I rued when I left that old mother of mine."

The boy shifted in his seat but he didn't look at Mr. Shiftlet. He unfolded his arms and put one hand on the door handle.

"My mother was an angel of Gawd," Mr. Shiftlet said in a very strained voice. "He took her from heaven and giver to me and I left her." His eyes were instantly clouded over with a mist of tears. The car was barely moving.

The boy turned angrily in the seat. "You go to the devil!" he cried. "My old woman is a flea bag and yours is a stinking pole cat!" and with that he flung the door open and jumped out with his suitcase into the ditch.

Mr. Shiftlet was so shocked that for about a hundred feet he drove along slowly with the door still open. A cloud, the exact color of the boy's hat and shaped like a turnip, had descended over the sun, and another, worse looking, crouched behind the car. Mr. Shiftlet felt that the rottenness of the world was about to engulf him. He raised his arm and let it fall again to his breast. "Oh Lord!" he prayed. "Break forth and wash the slime from this earth!"

The turnip continued slowly to descend. After a few minutes there was a guffawing peal of thunder from behind and fantastic raindrops, like tin-can tops, crashed over the rear of Mr. Shiftlet's car. Very quickly he stepped on the gas and with his stump sticking out the window he raced the galloping shower into Mobile. ∾

---

[11] Here, oppressed means "distressed" or "burdened."

4 Apply Background Knowledge What does the road sign mean to motorists?

5 Dialogue What is ironic about Mr. Shiftlet's prayer?

Vocabulary

rue (ro͞o) v. to regret; to be sorry for

Teach

Reading Strategy 4

Apply Background Knowledge Answer: The sign is a warning intended to prevent accidents and save lives.

Literary Element 5

Dialogue Answer: He thinks the hitchhiker has no morals. In fact, he has none either.

APPROACHING Ask students to define the word slime. Then ask: What might be some of the qualities of a slimy person? (dishonest, immoral) To whom is Shiftlet referring? (the boy hitchhiker) What things has Shiftlet done in this story that could be called "slimy"? (stealing the car; marrying then abandoning Lucynell) Explain that this is why Shiftlet's prayer could be considered ironic.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 91.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Remind students that some words have more than one meaning. Ask students to think of three ways in which the word dark can be used. (Possible answers: having little or no light; indicating anger or hostility; the beginning of the night) Ask: Which meaning is correct in this example: "The boy gave him a quick dark glance and then turned his face back out the window"? (indicating anger)

Ask students to determine the correct meaning of the multiple-meaning words strained and peal in these expresssions:

- "My mother was an angel of Gawd," Mr. Shiflet said in a very strained voice. (not natural but done with effort)
- After a few minutes there was a guffawing peal of thunder from behind . . . . (a loud sound that repeats)

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) As an honest man down on his luck (b) She overlooks his interest in her possessions and the discrepancy between his behavior and his words.
2. (a) She is speech impaired and mentally challenged, which makes her vulnerable. (b) He is single, handy around the house, and appears virtuous.
3. (a) He will work for food and will sleep in the car; he will marry Lucynell, take her on a trip, and return to live at the farm. (b) The first agreement gets Shiftlet food and a place to stay; the second gets him money and a car.
4. Shiftlet, because he is the central character, even though readers do not sympathize with him
5. Shiftlet saved himself from a life with Lucynell; the women were saved from a lifetime of Shiftlet's reckless behavior.
6. Making the two women the losers and the tramp the winner is situational irony. She wanted to surprise readers and show human nature's darker side.
7. Mrs. Crater would have been less trusting of strangers, found help for her daughter, and hired workers to repair her home. The characters would not speak in a rural Southern dialect.
8. Her experiences on a farm might have taught her that people do what they need to do to survive. She might have learned that life is not always fair or just.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 245–246.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)How does Shiftlet present himself to Mrs. Crater? (b)What clues to his true character does she fail to notice?
2. (a)What is Lucynell's disability, and how does it affect her? (b)Why does Mrs. Crater consider Mr. Shiftlet a good match for her daughter?
3. (a)What two agreements do Mr. Shiftlet and Mrs. Crater make? (b)Why does Shiftlet go along?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. Whom do you think O'Connor intended to be the protagonist of the story? Explain.
5. Whose life—if anyone's—do you think may have been saved at the end of the story?
6. Situational irony occurs when the outcome of a situation is different from the expectations of a character or the reader. What is the situational irony in this story and why does O'Connor use it?

Connect

7. Big Idea Return to Regionalism How might this story have been different if it were set in a modern-day city?
8. Connect to the Author How might O'Connor's experiences growing up in the country have contributed to her characters' outlook?

Primary Source Quotation

Music of the Depression

Although the 1930s are known for Duke Ellington and Benny Goodman's over-the-top big bands and George Gershwin's larger-than-life musicals, popular music also reflected the grim realities of economic hardship. Music from the Great Depression often mourned the loss of an earlier happy time:

> "Once I built a railroad, I made it run, made > it race against time.
> Once I built a railroad; now it's done.
> Brother, can you spare a dime?
> Once I built a tower, up to the sun, brick,
> and rivet, and lime;
> Once I built a tower, now it's done. Brother, > can you spare a dime?"
>
> —"Brother, Can You Spare a Dime," lyrics by Yip Harburg, music by Jay Gorney (1931)

Group Activity Discuss the following questions with your classmates:

1. How does the speaker of these lines compare his or her current economic conditions to those of the past?
2. What elements of these lyrics are reminiscent of ideas and themes from "The Life You Save May Be Your Own"?

FREE
SOUP COFFEE & DOUGHNUTS
FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

Primary Source Quotation

1. The speaker's economic conditions have gone from very wealthy and successful to very poor and desperate.
2. Possible answers: Life is not fair or predictable; as far as we know, Shiftlet is also a man with little money, having to work for food and shelter.

To create custom assessments online, go to Progress Reporter Online Assessment.

Literary Element Dialogue

In this story O'Connor uses dialogue to provide local color and to reveal characters' personalities and traits. Dialogue brings characters to life by showing what they are thinking and feeling as they react to other characters. Think about the dialogue in "The Life You Save May Be Your Own" as you answer the questions below.

1. How does the dialogue between Mrs. Crater and Mr. Shiftlet reveal their true characters? Give specific examples.
2. What impact does Lucynell's lack of dialogue have on the story?

Review: Foreshadowing

Foreshadowing, as you learned on page 875, is the use of clues by the author to prepare readers for later events in a story.

Group Activity Meet with a small group to discuss O'Connor's use of foreshadowing in "The Life You Save May Be Your Own." Use a chart like the one below to record examples of foreshadowing throughout the story.

Event	Foreshadowing
Mr. Shiftlet steals Mrs. Crater's car.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Reading Strategy Apply Background Knowledge

To understand the interactions between Mrs. Crater and Mr. Shiftlet, you must apply what you know about the Great Depression and the rural South. Review the preview chart you created on page 914, and then answer the following questions.

1. Why does Mr. Shiftlet agree to work for Mrs. Crater?
2. How important is money to both Mr. Shiftlet and Mrs. Crater?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Usage Respond to these statements to help you explore the meanings of vocabulary words from the selection.

1. Describe the appearance of a gaunt person.
2. Give an example of what a ravenous person would do.
3. Name a stately person who is in the public eye.
4. Explain your behavior if you had a morose disposition.
5. Explain a circumstance or action that you might rue.

Academic Vocabulary

Mr. Shiftlet is disheartened by the questionable morals of the younger generation.

Generation is an academic word. In more casual conversation, older people may say that they do not understand younger people because of a generation gap. Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of generation in the sentence above about "The Life You Save May Be Your Own." Check your guess in a dictionary.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

After You Read

Assess

Literary Element

1. Mrs. Crater says that if someone were to marry Lucynell and live on the farm, he would be "no fool"; this shows that she wants Shiftlet to marry Lucynell and take care of the farm. Shiftlet says that you "need money" to do anything; this shows that he is interested in money.
2. Lucynell cannot express her desires—for example, whether she wants to marry Shiftlet. She won't be able to speak when she wakes up at the diner.

Progress Check

Can students analyze dialogue?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 86.

Review: Foreshadow

Mr. Shiftlet's duplicity and his two main agreements with Mrs. Crater foreshadow the end.

Reading Strategy

1. The prospect of a place to sleep and food to eat appeals to him, especially as he will have time to figure out a way to get the car.
2. Shiftlet values material things. His greed motivates his abandonment of Lucynell and theft of Mrs. Crater's car. Mrs. Crater values money; she has money hidden in a mattress but won't pay Shiftlet. She uses money to tempt him to marry Lucynell.

Vocabulary

1. A gaunt person looks thin and bony.
2. A person who was ravenous would eat food.
3. The Queen of England is stately.
4. I would be morose and ill-tempered.
5. Not studying for a test is an action I would rue.

Academic Vocabulary

Mr. Shiftlet is disheartened by young people like the boy hitchhiker and does not understand younger people.

After You Read

Assess

Writing

Each student's review should express his or her personal opinion about the value of the work, support his or her evaluation with examples from the text, and predict and refute potential counterarguments.

Scoring Guide

Assess students' performance in the following categories using the scoring guide at the bottom of the page:

- Address all parts of the writing task.
- Provides a meaningful thesis, maintains focus and organization.
- Supports the thesis with details and examples.
- Provides a variety of sentence types; uses precise, descriptive language.
- Follows English language conventions.
- Makes a logical, convincing analysis.

For grammar practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 90.

Respond Through Writing

Review

Convince an Audience People often consult reviews when deciding whether to see a movie or read a book. How would you rate this story? Write a review of it that you could post on the Internet. In your review, evaluate O'Connor's use of plot, dialogue, characterization, and other literary techniques. Use examples from the text to support your evaluation.

Understand the Task A review is a critical evaluation of a work's worth. When you evaluate, you make a judgment and support it with evidence.

Prewrite Use a chart like the one below to evaluate the author's use of literary techniques. Support each of your opinions with evidence.

Literary Technique	My Evaluation	Evidence
imagery
characterization

Draft Give your review a logical, easy-to-follow structure. For each claim regarding the story, be sure to supply evidence. Try to predict arguments readers might make and refute them using rhetorical devices and textual evidence. Finish with a concise evaluation of the story.

Revise Exchange papers with a partner and evaluate the effectiveness of each other's arguments using the checklist on page 154. If your argument seems weak, incorporate rhetorical techniques such as repetition, parallelism, analogy, and rhetorical questions to enhance your argument.

Example

ORIGINAL "The Life You Save May Be Your Own" showcases Flannery O'Connor's vivid, offbeat style.

REVISION: "The Life You Save May Be Your Own" showcases Flannery O'Connor's vivid, offbeat style. What other author would think of comparing an old woman to a "cedar fence post"? [rhetorical question]

Edit and Proofread Proofread your paper, correcting errors in spelling, grammar, and punctuation.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objectives:

Writing:
Writing a persuasive essay.
Writing a review.

Grammar Tip

Sentence Formation

Short sentences can have great dramatic impact:

I have a dream.

Using short, simple sentences mixed with longer ones can help persuade an audience to agree with you.

As you write and revise your review, include a variety of sentence types to maintain the reader's interest. One way to vary sentence length in your revising stage is to combine sentences.

ORIGINAL: Mrs. Crater trusted Tom. He betrayed her.

REVISION: Mrs. Crater trusted Tom, but he betrayed her.

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Task addressed	fully	mostly	partially	barely
Thesis	meaningful	provided	partial	weak
Support	thoughtful	provided	limited	weak
Language	varied, descriptive	varied, often descriptive	predictable, imprecise	repetitive, limited
Convention errors	few or none	several	many	serious
Evaluation is	convincing	mostly convincing	partially convincing	not convincing

Grammar Workshop

Introductory Phrases and Clauses

Literature Connection In the sentence below, Flannery O'Connor uses an introductory clause—a dependent clause that begins a sentence. Always use a comma after an introductory clause.

> "As they came out of the courthouse, Mr. Shiftlet began twisting his neck in his collar."

In the sentence below, she uses an introductory phrase.

> "After a second he recalled himself and said, 'I'm only saying a man's spirit means more to him than anything else.' "

After a second is a prepositional phrase that tells when the action happens. Use a comma after an introductory phrase if it contains a verb form (participle, gerund, or infinitive). In addition, use a comma after a long introductory prepositional phrase or a series of prepositional phrases.

Examples

To fix the car, Mr. Shiftlet raised the hood and studied the engine.

To fix the car is an introductory infinitive phrase. It tells why Mr. Shiftlet raised the hood. Because it is an infinitive phrase, it needs a comma.

In the evenings Mr. Shiftlet sat on the porch steps and talked.

The introductory prepositional phrase in the evenings is short, so it needs no comma.

In the afternoon of the next day, Mr. Shiftlet got the car to start.

A comma is necessary after the two introductory prepositional phrases.

"If you come out here to work, I'll be able to feed you and give you a place to sleep."

If you come out here to work is an introductory clause, so it needs a comma.

Sentence Combining Combine each pair of sentences by changing one of them into an introductory phrase or clause.

1. O'Connor was disabled by lupus in 1952. She spent the remainder of her life on her mother's farm.
2. Mr. Shiftlet came up the road for the first time. The old woman and her daughter were sitting on their porch.
3. Eudora Welty was raised in the South. Much of her work was inspired by Southern settings.

Learning Objectives

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Grammar: Understanding how to use introductory phrases and clauses.

Vocabulary Terms

An introductory phrase or an introductory clause begins a sentence and provides additional information about the main clause.

Tip

To decide whether an introductory phrase needs a comma, decide whether the sentence makes sense without the phrase. If so, the introductory phrase probably needs a comma after it.

Language Handbook

For more about phrases and clauses, see Language Handbook, pp. R42 and R45.

Literature Online

Grammar For more grammar practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Grammar Workshop

Introductory Phrases and Clauses

Focus

Write on the board: In the early weeks of December, students often wake up for school in the dark.

Discuss how the introductory phrase gives additional information about the main clause.

Teach

Introductory Phrases and Clauses Explain that most introductory phrases and clauses answer the question when, where, or why. Review the examples to determine which question each introductory expression answers.

Assess

Sentence Combining

1. After O'Connor was disabled by lupus in 1952, she spent the remainder of her life on her mother's farm.
2. When Shiftlet came up the road for the first time, the old woman and her daughter were sitting on their porch.
3. Because Eudora Welty was raised in the South, much of her work was inspired by Southern settings.

For additional grammar practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 93.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Tell students that you will state a main clause and a question. Have them come up with a detail that answers the question. For example, say: We will go to an assembly. When? (Students respond by saying, for example, "before lunch.") Then have students use their answer as an introductory phrase. (Before lunch, we will go to an assembly.) Give other examples, such as: He studied math for two hours. Why? (Students may say, for example, "to prepare for the test.") Ask students to form a sentence using their answers as an introductory clause. (To prepare for the test, he studied math for two hours.)

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 58

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 84

Or list the following terms on the board: college education, car, home, career, family, wisdom, happiness, love. Read each aloud and have students discuss whether they consider it an important life goal. Ask: Does everyone have the same goals in life? Why or why not? Have students consider, as they read, how people's life goals influence their actions.

Before You Read

The Second Tree from the Corner

Meet E. B. White

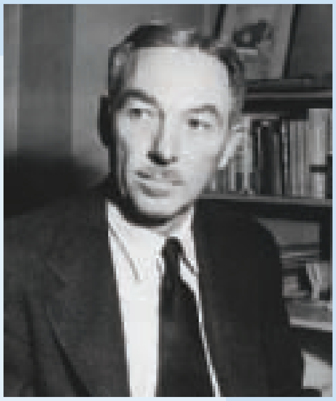
(1899–1985)



Although the beloved children's classics Charlotte's Web and Stuart Little remain two of Elwyn Brooks (E. B.) White's best-known works, he is also highly acclaimed for his essays and short stories. In fact, it was while working for The New Yorker magazine in his late twenties that White first captivated the American public. There, he worked with other legendary writers such as James Thurber, Dorothy Parker, and Robert Benchley to create a sophisticated and clever "New York" voice for the new magazine.

The Road to The New Yorker The youngest child in a large, affectionate family, White was born in rural Mount Vernon, a suburb of New York City. In 1921 he graduated from Cornell University. At Cornell he received the nickname Andy, by which he was known for the rest of his life. (All Cornell students named White were dubbed "Andy," after the university's co-founder, Andrew Dickson White.)

After college, Andy White traveled and worked at a series of miscellaneous jobs for about five years. Returning to New York, he worked in an ad agency and began sending manuscripts to The New Yorker. The editor of the magazine, Harold Ross, recognized talent when he saw it, and he soon hired White as a staff writer. White married Katherine Sergeant Angell, the magazine's literary editor, in 1929.

On the Farm In 1938 the Whites decided to leave the city and return to a simple rural life, this time in North Brooklin, Maine. White kept animals on their farm there, some of which made their way into his stories and books. He remained on the staff of The New Yorker, continuing to produce essays and his unsigned column "Notes and Comments." He also contributed to Harper's Magazine from 1938 to 1943, writing the column "One Man's Meat."

On the farm, he penned his famed children's stories. The first one, Stuart Little, features an adventurous mouse-child, born into a human family. The second, Charlotte's Web, is about the friendship between Wilbur, a young pig, and Charlotte, a spider who saves his life through her clever web weavings. The third, The Trumpet of the Swan, tells the story of a mute swan who becomes a celebrity after learning to trumpet. The themes of friendship, tolerance, loyalty, and rural living are common threads in these books.

> "I arise in the morning torn between a desire to improve (or save) the world and a desire to enjoy (or savor) the world. This makes it hard to plan the day."
>
> —E. B. White

White was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1963 and the Laura Ingalls Wilder Award from the American Library Association in 1970. In 1973 he was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about E. B. White, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Selection Skills

The Second Tree from the Corner

Literary Elements
- Plot (SE pp. 929–935)
- Irony (SE p. 935)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Apply Irony (SE p. 936)
- Pronoun Antecedents (TE p. 934)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Text Structure (SE pp. 929–932, 936)
- Draw Conclusions (TE p. 930)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Parts (SE pp. 929, 936)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 929, 936)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

What is most important in life? Write a journal entry about your priorities in life.

Build Background

"The Second Tree from the Corner" takes place in Manhattan, a part of New York City, probably in the late 1940s. One clue to the story's time frame comes from a reference to Ethel Merman, a popular Broadway singer and actress of the time. Other references to famous New York institutions and places appear in the story as well: the Times, which is The New York Times newspaper; the "Park," which is Central Park; the "East Seventies," a section of Manhattan known for its wealthy residents; and Madison Avenue, a famous luxury shopping district.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Life in the City

As you read, ask yourself, Which references to city life, transportation, scenery, and culture could happen only in a city and not in the country?

Literary Element Plot

A plot is the sequence of events that constitutes a narrative, usually involving characters in conflict. A plot includes rising action (development of the conflict), climax (sometimes called the crisis or turning point), and falling action (sometimes called the resolution of the conflict). As you read, ask yourself, How does White develop these elements of the plot?

Reading Strategy Analyze Text Structure

Analyzing text structure means taking a close look at the organizational pattern of a piece of writing. A writer might use chronological order (order of time), comparison and contrast, cause and effect, or order of importance as a frame on which to hang the text. Most fiction, including this story, is organized primarily in chronological order. As you read, ask yourself, How does White structure the story?

Tip: Find Time References Use a graphic organizer like the one below to keep track of the time references in the story.

Trexler felt the time passing.

He had already used up pretty nearly four seconds.

Learning Objectives

For pages 928–936

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing plot.

Reading: Analyzing text structure.

Vocabulary

amorphous (ə môr´ fəs) adj. without definite form; p. 931 Amorphous clouds filled the sky.

retractable (ri trak´ tə bəl) adj. capable of being drawn back or in; p. 931 Cats have retractable claws.

hemorrhage (he´ mə rij) n. a severe discharge of blood; p. 931 The doctor was able to stop the hemorrhage.

inquisitor (in kwi´ zə tər) n. one who asks questions; p. 933 Jennifer refused to answer the rude inquisitor.

intimation (in´ tə mā´ shən) n. a hint; a suggestion; p. 934 Mike's reputation was hurt by the intimation of scandal.

Tip: Word Parts Root words can be combined with prefixes and suffixes to form new words. Knowing the meanings of these word parts can help you determine the meaning of unfamiliar words. For example, if you know that the prefix a- means without, you can infer that amorphous means without form.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Mr. Trexler is plagued by depression, mysterious physical symptoms, and anxiety. The narrator describes Trexler's visits to a psychiatrist and implies that Trexler's problem is fear. The story ends soon after a visit during which the doctor asks Trexler, "What do you want?" This question leads to Trexler's epiphany: he realizes that "all men" want something "deep, formless, enduring, and impossible of fulfillment"—something he cannot explain but recognizes when he sees the second tree from the corner saturated with the evening light.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 94–99.

Vocabulary

Word Parts Have students indentify the roots of the words in the vocabulary list. Students may need to use dictionaries to verify root definitions. Say: Match a vocabulary word with each of the following definitions of root words: to seek or ask (inquisitor); to pull (retractable); blood (hemorrhage).

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 102.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate To comprehend the story's meaning, readers must fully understand some difficult words, such as apprehensions, melancholy, inexpressive, and unattainable. Have English learners work in pairs and have each pair make a chart that includes a definition of each unfamiliar word, along with a brief explanation of the word's importance in the story. Refer students to English dictionaries for definitions, helping them choose senses that fit the story context.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Life in the City Say: Keep this question in mind as you continue to read. How does the city play a role in Trexler's anxiety? (The narrator feels time pressure and assumes the doctor is "overloaded." He imagines the next patient in the waiting room, worrying about an incident that happened on a city bus.)

View the Art ★

English painter Julian Barrow (1939–) studied painting in Florence for several years. The subjects of Barrow's paintings include landscapes, country homes, interiors, and townscapes (images of urban scenes), such as this painting of the Frick Gallery in New York City.

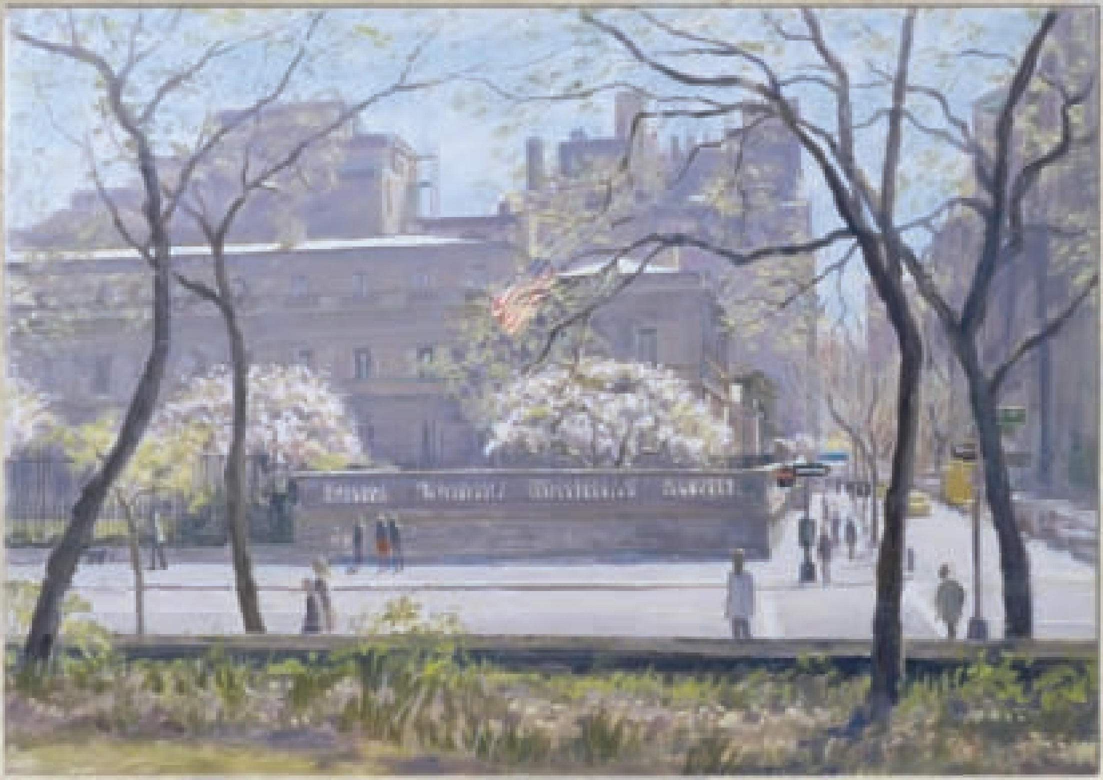
For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 5.7

DRP: 57

Lexile: 1110



The Frick Gallery, 1997. Julian Barrow. Oil on canvas, 18 x 24 in. Private Collection. ★

The Second Tree from the Corner

E. B. White

Reading Practice

Draw Conclusions Most short stories require readers to draw conclusions early in the stories. After students have read page 931, have them reread the page up to the beginning of the last paragraph. Have them list, on the basis of their rereading, everything about the setting and characters that they know. For each fact, they should jot down a note explaining how they came to that conclusion. Have students share their lists with the rest of the class and point out the conclusions they drew in order to develop their lists.

1 "Ever have any bizarre thoughts?" asked the doctor.

Mr. Trexler failed to catch the word. "What kind?" he said.

"Bizarre," repeated the doctor, his voice steady. He watched his patient for any slight change of expression, any wince. It seemed to Trexler that the doctor was not only watching him closely but was creeping slowly toward him, like a lizard toward a bug. Trexler shoved his chair back an inch and gathered himself for a reply. He was about to say "Yes" when he realized that if he said yes the next question would be unanswerable. Bizarre thoughts, bizarre thoughts? Ever have any bizarre thoughts? What kind of thoughts except bizarre had he had since the age of two?

Trexler felt the time passing, the necessity for an answer. These psychiatrists were busy men, overloaded, not to be kept waiting. The next patient was probably already perched out there in the waiting room, lonely, worried, shifting around on the sofa, his mind stuffed with bizarre thoughts and amorphous fears. Poor fellow, thought Trexler. Out there all alone in that misshapen antechamber,[1] staring at the filing cabinet and wondering whether to tell the doctor about that day on the Madison Avenue bus.

Let's see, bizarre thoughts. Trexler dodged back along the dreadful corridor of the years to see what he could find. He felt the doctor's eyes upon him and knew that time was running out. Don't be so conscientious, he said to himself. If a bizarre thought is indicated here, just reach into the bag and pick anything at all. A man as well supplied with bizarre thoughts as you are should have no difficulty producing one for the record. Trexler darted into the bag, hung for a moment before one of his thoughts, as a hummingbird pauses in the delphinium. No, he said, not that one. He darted to another (the one about the rhesus monkey), paused, considered. No, he said, not that.

Trexler knew he must hurry. He had already used up pretty nearly four seconds since the question had been put. But it was an impossible situation—just one more lousy, impossible situation such as he was always getting himself into. When, he asked himself, are you going to quit maneuvering yourself into a pocket? He made one more effort. This time he stopped at the asylum, only the bars were lucite[2]—fluted, retractable. Not here, he said. Not this one.

He looked straight at the doctor. "No," he said quietly. "I never have any bizarre thoughts."

The doctor sucked in on his pipe, blew a plume of smoke toward the rows of medical books. Trexler's gaze followed the smoke. He managed to make out one of the titles, The Genito-Urinary System. A bright wave of fear swept cleanly over him and he winced under the first pain of kidney stones.[3] He remembered when he was a child, the first time he ever entered a doctor's office, sneaking a look at the titles of the books—and the flush of fear, the shirt wet under the arms, the book on t.b.,[4] the sudden knowledge that he was in the advanced stages of consumption,[5] the quick vision of the hemorrhage. Trexler sighed wearily. Forty years, he thought, and I still get thrown by the title of a medical book. Forty [1] An antechamber, or waiting room, is a smaller room serving as an entrance to a larger or main room.

---

[2] Lucite is the trademark name of a transparent plastic.

[3] Kidney stones are small, hard calcium deposits that sometimes form in the kidneys and cause pain.

[4] Tuberculosis, a disease that often affects the lungs, is sometimes referred to as t.b.

[5] Consumption is another name for tuberculosis.

2 Plot How would you describe Mr. Trexler's internal conflict at this point?

Vocabulary

amorphous (ə môr´ fəs) adj.	without definite form

3 Analyze Text Structure How do you know the author is using chronological order to organize the story?

Vocabulary

retractable (ri trak´ tə bəl) adj.	capable of being drawn back or in hemorrhage (he´ mə rij) n.	a severe discharge of blood

Teach

Literary Element 2

Plot Answer: Trexler wrestles with bizarre thoughts, though what these are remains unknown to the reader.

Reading Strategy 3

Analyze Text Structure

Answer: The author makes references to time, such as "nearly four seconds."

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 101.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established After students have read this page, discuss some sections of the selection that could be confusing. For example, Trexler thinks that "if he said yes [to the psychiatrist's question] the next question would be unanswerable." Say: If Trexler says yes, he is saying he has bizarre thoughts. Ask: In that case, what is the psychiatrist likely to ask Trexler next? (What are they?) Why do you think Trexler says this question is unanswerable? (Trexler has too many bizarre thoughts to be able to tell them all.) In the same way, discuss the following: "Poor fellow . . . wondering whether to tell the doctor about that day on the Madison Avenue bus."

Emerging Explain that this page contains some of Trexler's "bizarre thoughts." Assist students in identifying them. (a rhesus monkey; an asylum; thinking he has a disease when he sees a book on the subject) Ask students to describe the images. (bizarre, frightful)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Plot Answer: He is consulting a psychiatrist.

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Text Structure
Answer: Four or five weeks have passed. The phrases "a week later" and "for several weeks thereafter" are evidence of this.

Cultural History ☆

Causes of Death Heart disease is the leading cause of death of both male and female Americans. In 2002, about 700,000 Americans died of heart disease. Ask: Is the concern that Trexler describes reasonable? (Yes, but worrying about it constantly would not be.)

Gridlock NYC, 1998. Bill Jacklin. Oil on canvas, 152.4 x 152.4 cm. Private collection. ★ years and I still can't stay on life's little bucky horse. No wonder I'm sitting here in this dreary joint at the end of this woebegone[6] afternoon, lying about my bizarre thoughts to a doctor who looks, come to think of it, rather tired.

The session dragged on. After about twenty minutes, the doctor rose and knocked his pipe out. Trexler got up, knocked the ashes out of his brain, and waited. The doctor smiled warmly and stuck out his hand. "There's nothing the matter with you—you're just scared. Want to know how I know you're scared?"

"How?" asked Trexler.

"Look at the chair you've been sitting in! See how it has moved back away from my desk? You kept inching away from me while I asked you questions. That means you're scared."

"Does it?" said Trexler, faking a grin. "Yeah, I suppose it does."

They finished shaking hands. Trexler turned and walked out uncertainly along the passage, then into the waiting room and out past the next patient, a ruddy pin-striped man who was seated on the sofa twirling his hat nervously and staring straight ahead at the files. Poor, frightened guy, thought Trexler, he's probably read in the Times that one American male out of every two is going to die of heart disease by ☆ twelve o'clock next Thursday. It says that in the paper almost every morning. And he's also probably thinking about that day on the Madison Avenue bus.

A week later, Trexler was back in the patient's chair. And for several weeks thereafter he continued to visit the doctor, always toward

---

[6] Woebegone means "sorrowful" or "filled with grief"; it can also suggest "dreary and miserable."

1 Plot In what way is Mr. Trexler trying to resolve his internal conflict?

Analyze Text Structure About how much time has passed since the opening scene of the story? How do you know? 2

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Subtle Humor Students may know from White's stories for children that he is often subtly humorous. Explain that some of the humor comes from the contrast between Mr. Trexler's inner thoughts and what he tells his doctor or how he acts. Explain that White is using irony, a difference between appearance and reality. Help students by pointing out some of the contrasts on this page and the previous page.

Trexler's Inner Thoughts	Trexler's Words or Actions
"It seemed that the doctor… was creeping slowly toward him, like a lizard toward a bug."	[The doctor says,] "You kept inching away from me while I asked you questions. That means you're scared." "Does it?" said Trexler, faking a grin.
"What kind of thoughts except bizarre had he had since the age of two?"	"I never have any bizarre thoughts."

Have students extend the chart as they continue to read.

the end of the afternoon, when the vapors hung thick above the pool of the mind and darkened the whole region of the East Seventies.[7] He felt no better as time went on, and he found it impossible to work. He discovered that the visits were becoming routine and that although the routine was one to which he certainly did not look forward, at least he could accept it with cool resignation, as once, years ago, he had accepted a long spell with a dentist who had settled down to a steady fooling with a couple of dead teeth. The visits, moreover, were now assuming a pattern recognizable to the patient.

Each session would begin with a resumé of symptoms—the dizziness in the streets, the constricting pain in the back of the neck, the apprehensions, the tightness of the scalp, the inability to concentrate, the despondency[8] and the melancholy times, the feeling of pressure and tension, the anger at not being able to work, the anxiety over work not done, the gas on the stomach. Dullest set of neurotic symptoms in the world, Trexler would think, as he obediently trudged back over them for the doctor's benefit.

As he became familiar with the pattern Trexler found that he increasingly tended to identify himself with the doctor, transferring himself into the doctor's seat—probably (he thought) some rather slick form of escapism. At any rate, it was nothing new for Trexler to identify himself with other people. Whenever he got into a cab, he instantly became the driver, saw everything from the hackman's angle (and the reaching over with the right hand, the nudging of the flag, the pushing it down, all the way down along the side of the meter), saw everything—traffic, fare, everything—through the eyes of Anthony Rocco, or Isidore Freedman, or Matthew Scott. In a barbershop, Trexler was the barber, his fingers curled around the comb, his hand on the tonic. Perfectly natural, then, that Trexler should soon be occupying the doctor's chair, asking the questions, waiting for the answers. He got quite interested in the doctor, in this way. He liked him, and he found him a not too difficult patient.

It was on the fifth visit, about halfway through, that the doctor turned to Trexler and said, suddenly, "What do you want?" He gave the word "want" special emphasis.

"I d'know," replied Trexler uneasily. "I guess nobody knows the answer to that one."

"Sure they do," replied the doctor.

"Do you know what you want?" asked Trexler narrowly.

"Certainly," said the doctor. Trexler noticed that at this point the doctor's chair slid slightly backward, away from him. Trexler stifled a small, internal smile. Scared as a rabbit, he said to himself. Look at him scoot!

"What do you want?" continued Trexler, pressing his advantage, pressing it hard.

The doctor glided back another inch away from his inquisitor. "I want a wing on the small house I own in Westport.[9] I want more money, and more leisure to do the things I want to do."

Trexler was just about to say, "And what are those things you want to do, Doctor?" when he caught himself. Better not go too far, he mused. Better not lose possession of the ball. And besides, he thought, what the hell goes on here, anyway—me paying fifteen bucks a throw for these séances[10] and then doing the work myself, asking the questions, weighing the answers. So

---

[7] Most of the streets that run east to west in Manhattan are identified by numbers rather than names. East Seventies refers to the section of streets from 70–79 that are on the east side of Manhattan.

[8] Despondency means "hopelessness" or "depression."

[9] Westport is a residential community and summer resort on the coast of Connecticut.

[10] A séance is a meeting in which people attempt to communicate with the spirits of the dead. Here, Trexler is questioning the scientific validity of his psychiatric sessions.

3 Life in the City How does this paragraph give the reader an idea of what it would be like to live in a big city such as New York?

Plot In what way does the doctor's original question help Mr. Trexler begin to solve his own problems? 4

Vocabulary

inquisitor (in kwi´ zə tər) n. one who asks questions

Teach

Big Idea 3

Life in the City Answer: It describes riding in a taxi, which people who live in the country or in the suburbs rarely do.

Literary Element 4

Plot Answer: The doctor's question acts as a trigger for Trexler, forcing him to think about what he really wants.

ADVANCED Say: Trexler imagines that he is the doctor and asks "his patient" what he wants. How does this role reversal end up helping Trexler feel better? (He realizes that he has the ability to ask questions—of the doctor and also of himself. He begins to see that he can answer the questions as well.)

View the Art ★

Bill Jacklin (1943–) grew up and studied art in England. Since 1985, he has lived in New York City and worked to capture the city's many faces in his work. This painting is one of Jacklin's "urban portraits."

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Ask: What does the doctor do when Trexler asks him, "Do you know what you want?" (He slides his chair back slightly.) Why do you think Trexler smiles inside? (The doctor is doing what Trexler did on his first appointment.) Point out to students that when White describes Trexler's fifth visit to the doctor, he uses words and phrases that show Trexler's sense of power and enjoyment.

Ask students to work in small groups to find words that show how Trexler feels triumphant. (Look at him scoot!; pressing his advantage; his inquisitor; better not go too far)

Teach

Vocabulary 1

Idiom Explain that "another day over the dam" is a variation of "water over the dam." Like "water under the bridge," it means that something is over and cannot be changed. Point out to students that slightly altering the phrase makes it sound more hopeless, as if the day is not only over, but it has plunged from a high wall. Trexler paints the doctor as sad and overworked.

Big Idea 2

Life in the City Answer: Central Park, brick and brownstone buildings, Third Avenue, and dim saloons would not be found in the country.

Literary Element 3

Plot Answer: He has recognized that what he wants from life is unique to him and that no one else can provide it for him. Even though he is afraid, he can show a certain amount of courage in facing life. Ask: Why does Trexler feel "glad in a way" that what he wanted "was both inexpressible and unattainable, and that it wasn't a wing"? (He is glad that he can appreciate how mysterious and complex life is, and that for him, life does not boil down to something as mundane as a new wing on a house.)

he wants a new wing! There's a fine piece of theatrical gauze for you! A new wing.

Trexler settled down again and resumed the role of patient for the rest of the visit. It ended on a kindly, friendly note. The doctor reassured him that his fears were the cause of his sickness, and that his fears were unsubstantial. They shook hands, smiling.

Trexler walked dizzily through the empty waiting room and the doctor followed along to let him out. It was late; the secretary had shut up shop and gone home. 1 Another day over the dam. "Goodbye," said Trexler. He stepped into the street, turned west toward Madison, and thought of the doctor all alone there, after hours, in that desolate hole—a man who worked longer hours than his secretary. Poor, scared, over-worked guy, thought Trexler. And that new wing!

Visual Vocabulary Brownstone is the name of a reddish-brown sandstone as well as a type of house made with it.

It was an evening of clearing weather, the Park showing green and desirable in the distance, the last daylight applying a high lacquer to the brick and brownstone walls and giving the street scene a luminous and intoxicating splendor. Trexler meditated, as he walked, on what he wanted. "What do you want?" he heard again. Trexler knew what he wanted, and what, in general, all men wanted; and he was glad in a way, that it was both inexpressible and unattainable, and that it wasn't a wing. He was satisfied to remember that it was deep, formless, enduring, and impossible of fulfillment, and that it made men sick, and that when you sauntered along Third Avenue and looked through the doorways into the dim saloons, you could sometimes pick out from the unregenerate ranks the ones who had not forgotten, gazing steadily into the bottoms of the glasses on the long chance that they could get another little peek at it. Trexler found himself renewed by the remembrance that what he wanted was at once great and microscopic, and that although it borrowed from the nature of large deeds and of youthful love and of old songs and early intimations, it was not any one of these things, and that it had not been isolated or pinned down, and that a man who attempted to define it in the privacy of a doctor's office would fall flat on his face.

Trexler felt invigorated. Suddenly his sickness seemed health, his dizziness stability. A small tree, rising between him and the light, stood there saturated with the evening, each gilt-edged leaf perfectly drunk with excellence and delicacy. Trexler's spine registered an ever so slight tremor as it picked up this natural disturbance in the lovely scene. "I want the second tree from the corner, just as it stands," he said, answering an imaginary question from an imaginary physician. And he felt a slow pride in realizing that what he wanted none could bestow, and that what he had none could take away. He felt content to be sick, unembarrassed at being afraid; and in the jungle of his fear he glimpsed (as he had so often glimpsed them before) the flashy tail feathers of the bird courage.

Then he thought once again of the doctor, and of his being left there all alone, tired, frightened. (The poor, scared guy, thought Trexler.) Trexler began humming "Moonshine Lullaby," his spirit reacting instantly to the hypodermic of Merman's[11] healthy voice. He crossed Madison, boarded a downtown bus, and rode all the way to Fifty-second Street before he had a thought that could rightly have been called bizarre. ∾

---

[11] Ethel Merman (1909–1984) was an American actress and singer known for her powerful voice.

2 Life in the City What elements in this paragraph are unique to the city and would not be found in the country?

Plot How has Mr. Trexler resolved his internal conflict? 3

Vocabulary

intimation (in´ tə mā´ shən) n. a hint; a suggestion

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Pronoun Antecedents Remind students that a pronoun takes the place of a noun or another pronoun. The noun or other pronoun is the pronoun's antecedent or referent. For example, she refers to Mary in this sentence:

I gave Mary the apple she wanted.

Ask students to find ten pronouns in the story. For each, have them identify its antecedent and tell whether the antecedent is a noun or a pronoun. If it is a pronoun, have students continue tracing the text back to find the original antecedent.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What question does the doctor ask Mr. Trexler at the beginning of the story? What is Trexler's answer? (b)In your opinion, what does Trexler's reaction to the doctor's first question reveal about Trexler's state of mind?
2. (a)What, according to the doctor, is wrong with Trexler? (b)Do you agree with the doctor's early diagnosis of Trexler? Explain.
3. (a)How does Trexler respond to the question "What do you want?" (b)What does the question make him think about after his visit to the doctor? (c)What do you think Trexler wants?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. Is Trexler's reaction to his discovery of what he wants in life realistic? Why or why not?
5. (a)Why do you think Trexler pities others? (b)Do you think his observations are accurate? Explain.
6. (a)What personality traits—both positive and negative—does Trexler exhibit? (b)On the basis of these traits, do you find Trexler to be a sympathetic character? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea Life in the City What does "The Second Tree from the Corner" reveal about city life? Explain using details from the story.
8. Connect to Today Do you think "the second tree from the corner" is an effective symbol, or representation, of what people often want from life? Explain.

Literary Element Plot

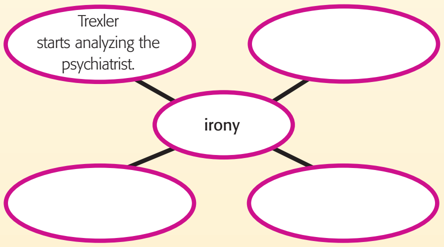
At the center of a story's plot, there is usually a struggle, or conflict, between two opposing forces. The conflict might be external—between the main character and another person or an outside force—or it may be internal—between opposing thoughts or desires within the character's mind.

1. Identify and discuss Trexler's internal conflicts after the psychiatrist asks him if he has ever had any bizarre thoughts.
2. Consider Trexler's comment that his identification with other people is "some rather slick form of escapism." Is it possible that Trexler's ability to look through others' eyes leads to a resolution of his conflict? Explain.
3. Discuss how the psychiatrist's question "What do you want?" helps Trexler to resolve his inner conflict.

Review: Irony

As you learned on page 574, irony is a contrast or discrepancy between appearance and reality. Verbal irony occurs when someone says one thing but means another. Situational irony exists when the outcome of a situation is the opposite of someone's expectations.

Group Activity Meet with a small group to discuss E. B. White's use of irony in "The Second Tree from the Corner." Together, create a web diagram like the one below, filling in the circles with examples of irony in the story.



After You Read

Assess

1. (a) "Ever have any bizarre thoughts?" Trexler answers, "No, I never have any bizarre thoughts." (b) He is confused, fearful, and unsure of how to express his thoughts.
2. (a) He is scared. (b) Trexler is scared, but probably not of what the doctor thinks he is.
3. (a) He challenges the doctor with the same question. (b) He thinks about the nature of what "all men want." (c) Possible answer: fulfillment, happiness, and a sense of inner peace
4. It is realistic; inner peace is something that people can attain.
5. (a) Trexler is compassionate and identifies with others. (b) Students' answers will vary, but many will say that his observations seem reasonable.
6. (a) Positive: empathy, compassion, reliability, friendliness; negative: fear, nervousness, evasiveness, insecurity (b) Students may say his fears make him sympathetic and admire his effort to overcome them.
7. It shows the complexities of city life, such as crowding in buses, transportation by taxis and buses, and a rich cultural environment.
8. Yes, because trees are often symbols for life, the universe, and life processes.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 247–248.

Literary Element

1. He cannot decide which, if any, bizarre thoughts to share.
2. Possible answer: Yes. By looking through others' eyes, Trexler realizes that most people have the same fears and hopes.
3. When Trexler turns the question back at the doctor, he notices that the doctor, too, is scared.

Review: Irony

Trexler says he has no bizarre thoughts; he says sickness is health.

Progress Check

Can students analyze plot?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 100.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. (a) The doctor observes Trexler inching his chair away from the desk and infers that Trexler is scared. (b) Readers gain insight into Trexler's character when he infers that the next patient is frightened. This shows Trexler as a man who perceives other people's feelings.
2. (a) The contrast of Trexler's and the doctor's answers to the question "What do you want?" (b) Trexler is more thoughtful than the doctor and less materialistic.

Vocabulary

amorphous

Prefix: a-, "without"; Root: morph, "form"; Suffix: -ous, "full of"; Related words: formless, shapeless, obscure

retractable

Prefix: re-, "back"; Root: tract, "movement"; Suffix: -able, "capable of"; Related words: tractor, feasible, return hemorrhage

Prefix: no prefix; Root: hemo, "blood"; Suffix: -age, "state of"; Related words: hemoglobin, suffrage

inquisitor

Prefix: in-, "in"; Root: quis, "question"; Suffix: -or, "one who"; Related words: quizzical, investigate, lector intimation

Prefix: no prefix; Root: intimus, "innermost"; Suffix: -tion, "the act of"; Related words: intimate, probation

Reading Strategy Analyze Text Structure

Authors often embed several organizational methods within the same text. For example, a story might proceed mainly in chronological order but also show cause-and-effect relationships.

1. (a)Identify an instance in which White uses cause and effect as an organizational method. (b)How does this example advance the plot?
2. (a)Find an example of comparison and contrast in the story. (b)What does this example reveal about Trexler's character?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Parts Use a printed or online dictionary to help you find the meaning of each vocabulary word's root and of any prefixes or suffixes in the word. Then find three words that contain the same prefix, suffix, or root. Underline the word part that could help a person guess each word's meaning.

amorphous	retractable	hemorrhage
inquisitor	intimation

EXAMPLE:

unattainable prefix: un-, "not"
root: attain, "to get"
suffix: -able, "capable of"
related words: unreachable, attainder, intractable

Academic Vocabulary

Because all of his thoughts seem to be bizarre, Trexler cannot determine an evident answer to the doctor's question.

Evident is an academic word. In a research paper, facts that need no further explanation by the author are evident. To further explore the meaning of this word, answer the following question: Is the cause of Trexler's condition evident to the doctor? Why or why not?

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Write with Style

Apply Irony

Assignment White uses irony to create humor that engages his reader in the story. Based on White's example, write your own account of a fictional situation. Incorporate irony into your story.

Get Ideas With a partner, discuss ironic moments in "The Second Tree from the Corner" to help you understand how White uses irony. Then brainstorm your own list of ironic situations you might like to write about. Make a chart like the one below to record your ideas.

Ironic Situation	Why It Is Ironic

Give It Structure Choose one particularly strong situation from your list. Decide on characters and a setting, and select example(s) of irony to include. In addition to your ironic situation, you could use irony in your dialogue (verbal irony) or allow your audience to know information your characters do not (dramatic irony).

Look at Language Evaluate the effectiveness of your use of irony. What types of irony do you use: dramatic, situational, or verbal? (See Literary Terms Handbook, page R11.) Does the irony engage the reader and propel the story along? You may want to get a classmate's feedback as well. Then revise to improve your irony's effectiveness.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Academic Vocabulary

No, the cause is not evident because Trexler is not honest with him. The doctor thinks he can tell by the position of Trexler's chair that fear is his problem.

Write with Style

Use these criteria when evaluating students' writing:

- Does the writer incorporate irony into his or her story?
- Is the writer's use of irony effective?

Before You Read

To Don at Salaam and The Bean Eaters

> "I want to write poems that will be meaningful . . . things that will touch [readers]."
>
> —Gwendolyn Brooks

Meet Gwendolyn Brooks

(1917–2000)

Brooks once said, "I wanted to write poems that I could take into the streets." With an ear for the beat of the city and the hum of everyday life, Brooks re-created the lives of African Americans in the city and elsewhere.

Although born in Topeka, Kansas, Brooks grew up in Chicago. A shy girl, she spent much of her childhood alone reading books and writing poetry. "My mother says I began rhyming at seven. . . . Of course I would be a poet! Was a poet! Didn't I write a poem every day? Sometimes two poems?" Her mother's belief in her talent gave her the confidence she needed to keep writing, and Brooks published her first poem, "Eventide," when she was thirteen. By the late 1930s, she had published seventy-five poems in the Chicago Defender.

Literary Influences Brooks's mother took her to see poets read whenever they came to Chicago. Two of them—James Weldon Johnson and Langston Hughes—became important influences on her career and writing. Johnson played the role of advisor, urging her to read modern poets such as T. S. Eliot and E. E. Cummings—poets whose styles would be reflected in her later work. When Brooks was sixteen, she went to see Langston Hughes read. After the reading, she gave him some of her poems, which he read immediately. He encouraged her to continue writing and would later become her close friend and inspiration. As a poet, Brooks shared Hughes's ability to respond to the struggles of the black community and express the black experience in a time of rapid change.

Poetic Transformation In 1945 Brooks's first book, A Street in Bronzeville, was published to rave reviews. In her early work, Brooks wrote poetic narratives, using traditional verse forms—such as the sonnet and ballad. In the 1960s, however, her voice and style changed, and she brought a new consciousness of her racial identity to her work. Inspired by black activism, Brooks began to overtly address political issues, especially the need for racial unity. As she became more involved with the Black Arts movement in Chicago, Brooks moved from major publishing houses to smaller ones run by African Americans.

Role of the Poet Success and recognition made Brooks even more committed to art and to helping young artists. With the publication of Annie Allen, she became the first African American to win the Pulitzer Prize. ☆ She would later be named Poet Laureate of Illinois, poetry consultant to the Library of Congress, and a member of the National Women's Hall of Fame. Most important to Brooks were her visits to local schools and the classes and contests she sponsored to help urban children "see" the poetry in the world around them. Today, Brooks remains one of America's most beloved and inspirational poets.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Gwendolyn Brooks, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 85

Or display images of city life, from your own community or others in the United States. Ask: How are these cities similar? How are they different? What are some ways that cities influence their inhabitants? Tell students that city life plays an important part in Brooks's poems.

Cultural History ☆

The Pulitzer Prize The Pulitzer Prize is named after its creator, American journalist and newspaper publisher Joseph Pulitzer. In his 1904 will, Pulitzer established the prize to encourage excellence. Pulitzer established a board to oversee the awards after his death so that the number and type of awards could continue to grow. Since the first awards in 1917, the Pulitzer Prize categories have grown to include 21 awards in subjects including journalism, letters and drama, music, and photography.

Selection Skills

To Don at Salaam and The Bean Eaters

Literary Elements
- Rhyme Scheme (SE pp. 938, 941)
- Tone (TE p. 940)

Reading Skills
- Evaluate Diction (SE pp. 938, 939, 941)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE pp. 938, 941)
- Connotation (TE p. 938)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write an Essay (SE p. 941)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In "To Don at Salaam," the speaker celebrates Don, who watches life on the street with impudence and occasional joy. In "The Bean Eaters," an old couple eats beans in a rented room and remembers joys and sorrows.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 107–112.

Vocabulary

Connotation Tell students that synonyms may have different connotations than the word they define. Have a student read aloud the definition of impudent. Tell students that this word typically has a negative connotation, whereas the connotation of its synonym, bold, depends upon context. Ask: What word in the sample sentence indicates the connotation of impudent? (The word "punished" gives students a context clue.) Ask students to come up with examples of using the word bold with both negative and positive connotations. (Positive: She was bold to fight for women's suffrage. Negative: Her bold demand to move to the front of the line offended me.)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 115.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poems

What is unique about your neighborhood and the people who live there? Freewrite for a few minutes about the people and places in your neighborhood.

Build Background

Many of Brooks's characters, such as the couple in "The Bean Eaters," were inspired by people from her neighborhood on Chicago's South Side. Through such characters, Brooks chronicled the dreams and disappointments of the African American urban poor. Other characters, like the man in "To Don at Salaam," were inspired by young black artists and activists of the 1960s and onward, who possessed what Brooks called "a general energy, an electricity, in look, walk, speech, [and] gesture. . . ."

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Life in the City

As you read, ask yourself, How are the characters influenced by their urban setting?

Literary Element Rhyme Scheme

Rhyme scheme is the pattern of end rhymes in a stanza or a poem. Rhyme schemes are designated by assigning a different letter of the alphabet to each new rhyme. For example, the rhyme scheme of a poem that repeats the same rhyme in every other line is abab. As you read "The Bean Eaters," ask yourself, How does the rhyme scheme affect the poem's theme?

Reading Strategy Evaluate Diction

An important element of a writer's voice and style is word choice, or diction. As you read, ask yourself, How do Brooks's individual word choices help create the tone and convey meaning?

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart like the one below to write down important words and their effect on each poem's meaning.

Word or Words	Effect on Meaning
beans	suggest ordinariness or poverty

Learning Objectives

For pages 937–941

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing rhyme and rhyme scheme.

Reading: Evaluating diction.

Writing: Writing an essay.

Vocabulary

impudent (im´ pyə dənt) adj. cocky, bold; p. 939 Sean stopped his impudent behavior only after being punished by an officer.

tribute (tri´ byüt) n. something given to show affection, gratitude, or respect; p. 939 Marco gave a speech in tribute to his son on his wedding day.

consolidation (kən sol´ə dā´ shən) n. the process of uniting or merging; p. 939 The consolidation of the two companies led to greater efficiency but fewer jobs.

twinge (twinj) n. a sudden, sharp physical or emotional pain; p. 940 She felt a twinge of sadness at the sight of her dead grandmother's photograph.

Tip: Context Clues To determine a word's meaning, use the other words in the sentence. Example: The child's impudent behavior got her sent to the principal for a reprimand. She is being punished by the principal, so the child's behavior must have been rude.

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Rhyme Scheme Tell students that reading aloud can help them find a poem's rhyme scheme. Write a simple poem on the board such as: Jack be nimble, / Jack be quick; / Jack jump over / The candlestick. Have a volunteer read the poem aloud. Then, have students read the poem to themselves, trying to "hear" the rhyme. Finally, have students assign a rhyme scheme to the poem (abcb). Have students work in pairs to identify another rhyming poem from memory, from the textbook, or from an outside source. Then have students read their poems aloud to the class and explain their rhyme schemes.

To Don at Salaam

Gwendolyn Brooks

I like to see you lean back in your chair 1 so far you have to fall but do not—your arms back, your fine hands in your print pockets.

Beautiful. Impudent.
Ready for life.
A tied storm.

I like to see you wearing your boy smile whose tribute is for two of us or three.

Sometimes in life things seem to be moving and they are not
and they are not there.
You are there.

Your voice is the listened-for music.
Your act is the consolidation.

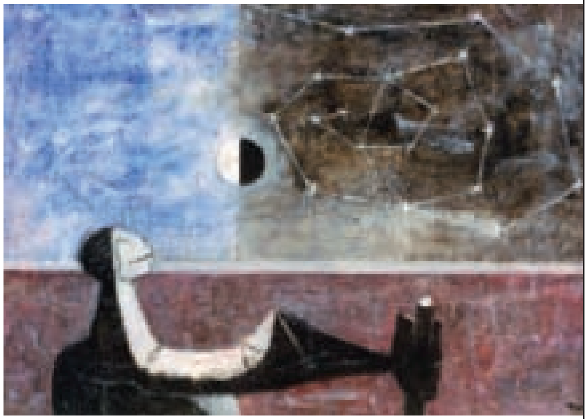
I like to see you living in the world.



Hombre ante el infinito (Man before the infinite). Rufino Tamayo. Musée d'Art Moderne, Brussels, Belgium. ★

Salaam is an Arabic word that means "peace."

Evaluate Diction Why do you think Brooks uses the word impudent in line 5 to describe the man? 2

Vocabulary

impudent	(im´ pyə dənt) adj. cocky, bold
tribute	(tri´ byüt) n. something given to show affection, gratitude, or respect
consolidation	(kən sol´ə dā´shən) n. the process of uniting or merging

Teach

Big Idea 1

Life in the City Say: Keep this question in mind as you read: How does the city contribute to Don's impudence and the old couple's experience? (The city may require Don to be impudent in self-defense. The city has left the old couple alone with their memories and familiar possessions.)

Reading Strategy 2

Evaluate Diction Answer: Brooks may use the word to stress his self-reliance and power.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 114.

View the Art ★

Many paintings created during the twentieth century reflect features of Modernism. Modern art expresses ideas and feelings rather than realistic people or places. It is often abstract rather than realistic.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Have students paraphrase the poem by writing prose versions of "To Don at Salaam," in which they convey only the actions of the characters. Have students share their prose versions with the class. Then segue into a deeper analysis of the poem.

SMALL GROUP Emerging Students who are struggling to interpret and analyze the poem may benefit from first isolating the literal meaning of the poem. Have students work in groups to paraphrase the poem, line by line. Then have students share their results with the class. Using the literal interpretation as a jumping off point, engage the class in a deeper analysis of the poem, using questions such as these: What images and feelings does this line evoke? What else could Brooks be talking about here?

Teach

Literary Element 1

Rhyme Scheme Ask: What word does Brooks rhyme with wood? Why is this choice unusual? (good; the two words are in different stanzas.)

APPROACHING Ask: What does Brooks mean by creaking wood? (Brooks refers to an old table.) Point out that by using this creative imagery, rather than just saying "old table," Brooks appeals to the reader's senses. Ask: What senses does Brooks appeal to with this image? (visual and auditory)

Big Idea 2

Life in the City Answer: City life is a plain, poor existence of eating beans, putting on clothes, putting things away, and enjoying memories.

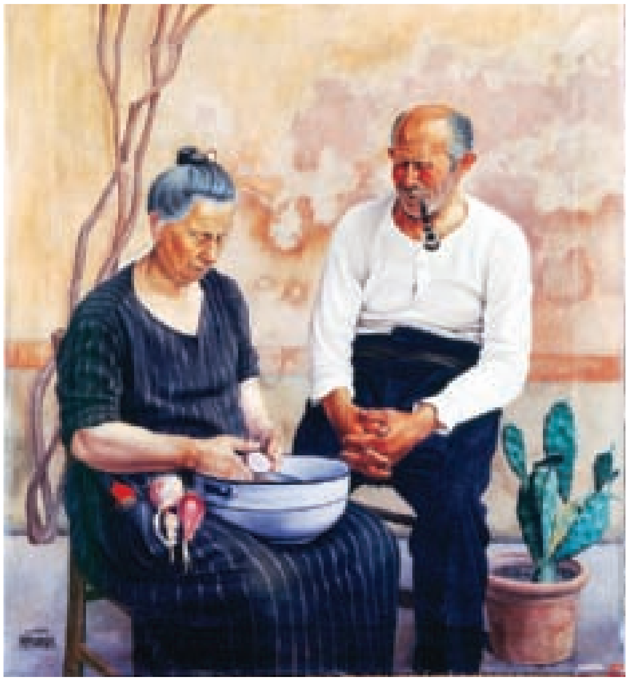
To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 117.

The Bean Eaters

Gwendolyn Brooks



Onion Tears, 1929. Cagnaccio di San Pietro. Camera di Lavoro, Trieste, Italy.

They eat beans mostly, this old yellow pair.
Dinner is a casual affair.
Plain chipware on a plain and creaking wood,
Tin flatware.

Two who are Mostly Good. 1
Two who have lived their day,
But keep on putting on their clothes
And putting things away.

And remembering . . .
Remembering, with twinklings and twinges,
As they lean over the beans in their rented back room that is full of beads and receipts and dolls and cloths, tobacco crumbs, vases and fringes.

Life in the City What is city life like for the bean eaters? 2

Vocabulary

twinge (twinj) n. a sudden, sharp physical or emotional pain

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Tone Remind students that the tone of a work is an expression of the author's attitude toward the subject matter; it might, for example, be sympathetic, angry, humorous, or sad. Tone is reflected in an author's choice of words, punctuation, sentence structure, and figurative language. Point out unusual punctuation and capitalization in this poem, such as "Mostly Good," and the ellipsis in line 9. Ask students how these contribute to the tone. (The capitalization of the words "Mostly Good" gives a certain amount of dignity to the status, indicating that being imperfect is still noteworthy; the ellipsis suggests a musing voice.)

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What is the setting in "The Bean Eaters"? (b)What do the details of the setting show?
2. (a)How does Brooks describe the characters in "The Bean Eaters"? (b)What do the couple's actions suggest about them?
3. (a)In "To Don at Salaam," what adjectives or adjective phrases does the speaker use to describe the man? (b)What do these modifiers suggest about the man? (c)What do they suggest about the speaker?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)How would you describe the tone of "The Bean Eaters"? (b)How does the tone help you understand the meaning of the poem?
5. (a)How does Brooks use imagery to describe the man in "To Don at Salaam"? (b)How well do the images tell you what the speaker sees in him?

Connect

6. Big Idea Life in the City What aspects of life in a big city does "The Bean Eaters" show?
7. Connect to Today Would you be able to see people today who resemble the characters in Brooks's poems? Explain.

Literary Element Rhyme Scheme

Rhyme schemes reinforce meaning and aid the reader by providing a logical structure.

1. (a)What is the rhyme scheme of "The Bean Eaters"? (b)Is it predictable? Explain.
2. Explain how the rhyme scheme affects the poem's tone and meaning.

Reading Strategy Evaluate Diction

Look at the chart you created to evaluate diction in the poems to answer the following questions.

1. In "The Bean Eaters," how do the words "twinklings and twinges" communicate both meaning and attitude?
2. In "To Don at Salaam," the speaker says, "Your act is the consolidation." What does this mean? Why does the poet choose consolidation?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Look back at the poems to find context clues for the words below. Record your findings as in the example.

impudent	tribute
consolidation	twinge

EXAMPLE:
Word: tribute
Textual clues: Don's "boy smile" is intended "for two of us or three," showing affection to a select few
Meaning: something given to show affection, gratitude, or respect

Writing

Write an Essay In "The Bean Eaters," Brooks describes everyday objects and actions with carefully chosen words to reveal something deeper about the lives of her subjects. Think about some of your own possessions and activities. What do they say about you? Write a brief essay exploring these images and their meaning.

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) A rented back room full of odds and ends (b) The home is cramped and holds memories.
2. (a) As an "old, yellow pair" who are "Mostly Good" and "have lived their day" (b) They still put things away, which suggests they continue to carry on.
3. (a) Beautiful, impudent, and ready for life (b) He is daring, smug, and energetic. (c) The speaker admires him.
4. (a) Matter-of-fact, but kind (b) It stresses their ordinary lives.
5. (a) The images of leaning back in a chair, hands in pockets, and a boyish smile (b) The speaker enjoys the man's relaxed approach to life.
6. City life can be isolating; people live in small spaces, packed with the clutter of their past.
7. Students should note that Brooks's characters can be seen today, as their personality traits are universal.

Literary Element

1. (a) aaba bcdc efghf (b) No, it is not regular.
2. It suggests the disorder of daily life.

Progress Check

Can students analyze rhyme scheme?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 113.

Writing

Students' essays should make connections between objects and actions and their deeper meanings.

Reading Strategy

1. Twinklings suggests responses to pleasant memories; twinges, feelings of regret about unpleasant memories. These words show the range and persistence of the couple's memories.
2. Don's actions bring harmony and unity; the word completes the poem's praise of Don's beauty.

Vocabulary

Word: impudent. Textual clues: The subject of the poem leans back, appearing "Impudent. / Ready for life."

Word: consolidation. Textual clues: The "act" is the consolidation of the whole experience.

Word: twinge. Textual clues: They remember the past with "twinklings and twinges."

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 59
Daily Language Practice
Transparency 86

Or ask students to name some books or films about people finding romance. Ask: What are some common ways that people meet romantic partners? Have students consider, as they read, what role luck or accident plays in bringing people together.

Political History ☆

Czarist Russia and the Russian Revolution For centuries, Russia was ruled by one czar after another. A Russian form of "caesar," czar (also spelled tsar or tzar) is the Russian word for emperor. Czars had unlimited power over all the citizens of Russia. Then in 1917, during World War I (1914–1918), the Bolsheviks started a revolution and overthrew the czarist government. Communism took the place of the czarist rule.

Before You Read

The Magic Barrel

Meet Bernard Malamud

(1914–1986)

Bernard Malamud was born to Russian Jewish immigrants who worked sixteen hours a day in their small grocery store on New York City's Lower East Side. Reflecting on his childhood, he would recall that there were no books in his home, no records or musical instruments, and no pictures on the walls. He would, however, recall the generosity of his father, who bought him the twenty-volume Book of Knowledge in 1923, when he was a nine-year-old recovering from pneumonia.

Inspired by his father's stories of life in czarist Russia, Malamud began creating stories of his own for his boyhood friends. He graduated from City College of New York and Columbia University, and while teaching evening classes he wrote short stories that appeared in Harper's Bazaar and other magazines. His first novel, written in 1952 when he was in his late thirties, was The Natural, the story of the rise and fall of a baseball player. The novel was later made into a popular movie starring Robert Redford. His second novel, The Assistant, written in 1957, brought him fame as a major Jewish American writer. His novel of injustice in czarist Russia, The Fixer (1966), won both the National Book Award and the Pulitzer Prize.

> "People say I write so much about misery, but you write about what you know best."
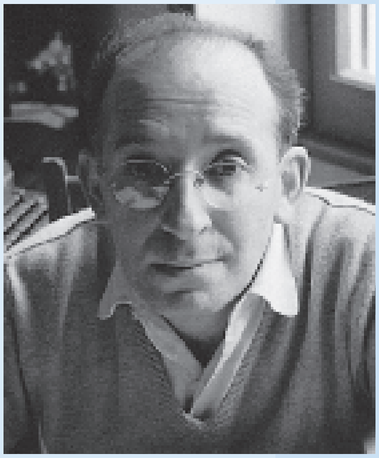
>
> —Bernard Malamud

Master of Characterization Though most of the characters in his stories and novels are Jewish, Malamud thought of Jewishness as a spiritual condition rather than as a cultural heritage or religious creed. To be Jewish, he felt, was to struggle with life's limitations and responsibilities. Malamud said that he wrote about Jews "because they set my imagination going. I know something about their history, the quality of experience and belief, and of their literature, though not as much as I would like."

He saw himself as a storyteller whose fictions were about "simple people struggling to make their lives better in a world of bad luck." His characters are often pursued by a sense of injustice, burdened with grief, and strengthened by their own persistence. They are intensely aware of the past as they try to make a life for themselves in the modern world. The mixture of victory and defeat in their lives endows Malamud's work with a tragicomic character.

Malamud won highest acclaim as a writer of short stories, and "The Magic Barrel" is considered one of his best. His stories contain a robust humor, striking contrasts, a strong sense of compassion, and a complete understanding of his characters and their way of life.



Literature Online

Author Search For more about Bernard Malamud, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Selection Skills

The Magic Barrel

Literary Elements
- Dialect (SE pp. 943, 947–949, 951, 957; TE p. 946)
- Motivation (SE p. 957)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Characterization (SE pp. 943, 945–948, 950–954, 956, 958)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Evaluate (SE p. 958)
- Journal (TE p. 948)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Origins (SE p. 943, 958; TE p. 950)
- Parts of Speech (TE p. 943)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing
- Debate (SE p. 558)
- Analyze Art (TE pp. 944, 949)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

What is the best way to find a spouse? Discuss this question with a small group. Consider the role that love and shared interests might play in your choice.

Build Background

Between 1880 and 1914, about two million Jews from Eastern Europe immigrated to the U.S. The largest concentration of Jewish immigrants settled on the Lower East Side of Manhattan. They brought with them their culture and traditions, which included the use of matchmakers—people paid to bring young men and women together for the purpose of marriage.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Life in the City

Malamud mentions various locations, newspapers, customs, and sights that are unique to New York City. As you read, ask yourself, What does the story reveal about life in that city?

Literary Element Dialect

Dialect is a way of speaking and writing that is characteristic of a particular group, often within a particular region and time. Dialects may differ from the standard form of a language in vocabulary, pronunciation, or grammatical form. As you read, ask yourself, How does Malamud use dialect?

Reading Strategy Analyze Characterization

Analyzing characterization means examining the methods an author uses to reveal a character's personality. In direct characterization the writer makes explicit statements about a character. In indirect characterization the writer reveals a character through the character's thoughts, words, actions, or appearance or through what other characters think and say about that character. The reader must then use these details to make inferences about the character. As you read, ask yourself, How does Malamud reveal Finkle and Salzman's characters?

Tip: Take Notes on Characters For each main character, list details in the text and the inferences you make from them.

Character	Details	Inferences
Pinye Salzman	dresses shabbily	not wealthy

Learning Objectives

For pages 942–958

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing dialect.

Reading: Analyzing characterization.

Speaking and Listening: Debating.

Vocabulary

meager (mē´ gər) adj. deficient in quantity or completeness; p. 945 The orphans were fed a meager breakfast of oatmeal and water.

amiable (ā´ mē ə bəl) adj. friendly; p. 945 Marla's amiable smile put her guests at ease.

animated (an´ ə mā´ tid) adj. full of life; active; lively; p. 945 The zoo visitors enjoyed the monkeys' animated antics.

enamored (en am´ ərd) adj. inspired with love; charmed; captivated; p. 951 Ben was completely enamored with Julie.

abjectly (ab´ jekt lē) adv. in a humiliating, mean, or degrading manner; p. 952 Disappointed with his performance, Carl abjectly accepted his third-place medal.

Tip: Word Origins Etymology is the study of word origins. A typical dictionary entry will include the etymology of a word. For example, enamored derives from the Latin word amare, meaning "to love."

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate English learners may find it difficult to grasp the concept of dialect. Have students work in pairs to look for examples of dialect in the story. Have students share their examples with the class, explaining what they show about time, place, and character.

Beginning Tell students that dialect makes characters more realistic. It gives the reader clues, such as where the speakers are from or what time period they are in. For example, if a speaker says that he had dinner with a flapper, he gives a clue that it is the 1920s.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Leo Finkle, a rabbinical student who wants to marry to improve his chances of getting a job with a congregation, asks the marriage broker Pinye Salzman for help. Finkle rejects all but one of Salzman's prospects. His date with Lily Hirschorn makes him realize that he has never truly loved anyone but his parents. Later, Finkle finds a girl's photograph in a group left by Salzman and feels love for her. Salzman at first refuses to introduce the two because the girl is his daughter. Eventually, he consents.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 119–124.

Vocabulary

Parts of Speech Tell students that not all words ending in –ed are verbs. Point out that the words animated and enamored are defined as adjectives in the vocabulary example. They can also be used as verbs. Ask: How do you know if these words are being used as adjectives or verbs? (The function of the word in the sentence determines the part of speech. If the word modifies another adjective or a noun, then it is an adjective. If the word expresses an act or mode of being, it is a verb.)

Teach

Big Idea 1

Life in the City Say: Keep these questions in mind as you read: How is Leo Finkle's New York City community important to the story? (It functions according to traditions that generate the story plot.) What are some ways the characters reflect their city community? (They speak a dialect specific to Eastern European Jewish immigrants in New York.)

View the Art ★

Jewish culture places great emphasis on studying and teaching. Scholars and rabbis are therefore honored in Jewish communities.

Ask: How might this painting relate to the story? (Both the student in the painting and Leo Finkle probably spend a lot of time studying in a "meager room.")

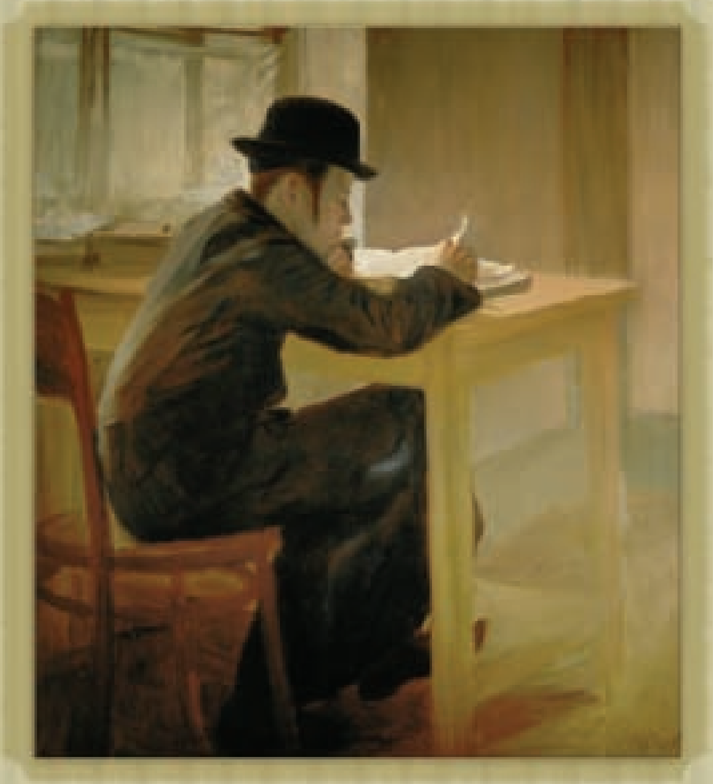
For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 6.3
DRP: 62
Lexile: 1010

THE MAGIC BARREL

Bernard Malamud



Intensive Study, 1910. Unknown. Oil on canvas, 32¼ x 29 in. Judaica Coll. Max Berger, Vienna, Austria. ★

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Compare and Contrast Explain that comparing and contrasting characters can help students enhance their understanding of the characters, as well as of a story's theme and plot. Have students create Venn diagrams to compare and contrast the two main characters, Leo Finkle and Pinye Salzman. Students should list unique characteristics in the nonintersecting parts of the circles labeled with the characters' names. In the center overlap, they should list shared characteristics.

1 Not long ago there lived in uptown New York in a small, almost meager room, though crowded with books, Leo Finkle, a rabbinical student in the Yeshivah University.[1] Finkle, after six years of study, was to be ordained in June and had been advised by an acquaintance that he might find it easier to win himself a congregation if he were married. Since he had no present prospects of marriage, after two tormented days of turning it over in his mind, he called in Pinye Salzman, a marriage broker whose two-line advertisement he had read in the Forward.[2]

The matchmaker appeared one night out of the dark fourth-floor hallway of the graystone rooming house where Finkle lived, grasping a black, strapped portfolio that had been worn thin with use. Salzman, who had been long in the business, was of slight but dignified build, wearing an old hat, and an overcoat too short and tight for him. He smelled frankly of fish, which he loved to eat, and although he was missing a few teeth, his presence was not displeasing, because of an amiable manner curiously contrasted with mournful eyes. His voice, his lips, his wisp of beard, his bony fingers were animated, but give him a moment of repose and his mild blue eyes revealed a depth of sadness, a characteristic that put Leo a little at ease although the situation, for him, was inherently tense.

He at once informed Salzman why he had asked him to come, explaining that his home was in Cleveland, and that but for his parents, who had married comparatively late in life, he was alone in the world. He had for six years devoted himself almost entirely to his studies, as a result of which, understandably, he had found himself without time for a social life and the company of young women. Therefore he thought it the better part of trial and error—of embarrassing fumbling—to call in an experienced person to advise him on these matters. He remarked in passing that the function of the marriage broker was ancient and honorable, highly approved in the Jewish community, because it made practical the necessary without hindering joy. Moreover, his own parents had been brought together by a matchmaker. They had made, if not a financially profitable marriage—since neither had possessed any worldly goods to speak of—at least a successful one in the sense of their everlasting devotion to each other. Salzman listened in embarrassed surprise, sensing a sort of apology. Later, however, he experienced a glow of pride in his work, an emotion that had left him years ago, and he heartily approved of Finkle.

The two went to their business. Leo had led Salzman to the only clear place in the room, a table near a window that overlooked the lamp-lit city. He seated himself at the matchmaker's side but facing him, attempting by an act of will to suppress the unpleasant tickle in his throat. Salzman eagerly unstrapped his portfolio and removed a loose rubber band from a thin packet of much-handled cards. As he flipped through them, a gesture and sound that physically hurt Leo, the student pretended not to see and gazed steadfastly out the window. Although it was still February, winter was on its last legs, signs of which he had for the first time in years begun to notice. He now observed the round white moon, moving ☆

---

1. Yeshivah (yə shē′ və) University in New York City, originally a seminary for rabbis, today offers both theological and secular courses.
2. The Yiddish-language newspaper the Jewish Daily Forward was published daily in New York.

2 Life in the City Which details in the first paragraph tell you something about Jewish life in New York City?

3 Analyze Characterization Why does the author include these details about Salzman?

Vocabulary

meager (mē´ gər) adj. deficient in quantity or completeness amiable (ā´ mē ə bəl) adj. friendly animated (an´ ə mā´ tid) adj. full of life; active; lively

Teach

Big Idea 2

Life in the City Answer: Details include Yeshivah University and the Forward newspaper.

Reading Strategy 3

Analyze Characterization
Answer: The details reveal that although Salzman is amiable, he is deeply sad.

APPROACHING Ask: What other details in this paragraph support the characterization of Salzman as sad? (His eyes have a "depth of sadness.") Remind students that Malamud is known for his striking contrasts. Point out the contrast between the job of matchmaker, which would seem to be a happy profession, and the descriptions of Salzman as deeply sad.

Writer's Technique ☆

Symbolism Malamud uses two symbols in the last sentence that starts on this page. First, the moon has long symbolized love, which fits with Finkle's search for love. In addition, the reference to a hen laying an egg suggests an image of birth, perhaps foreshadowing Finkle's hope to have children with a future wife.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Ask: What is the main plot on this page? (Finkle hires Salzman, a matchmaker.) Students may find the concept of a professional matchmaker unfamiliar. Explain that matchmaking and arranged marriages remain common in some cultures.

Intermediate Have students reread the paragraph starting "He at once informed Salzman . . . ." Have students paraphrase Finkle's reasons for hiring Salzman. Engage the class in a discussion of whether they feel Finkle's reasoning is sound.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Characterization

Answer: The details reveal that Finkle is educated, scholarly, and sensitive and that Salzman admires these qualities.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Ask: What word choices let you know that Salzman's reaction is one of admiration? (Salzman notes "with pleasure" Finkle's face and lets out a "soft, contented sigh" in reaction to all he sees.) Point out to English learners that once again Malamud uses contrasts to paint his picture. By contrasting Salzman's pleasure with a rather harsh description of Finkle, Malamud makes Salzman's reaction all that more noticeable. The contrast also provides an edge of humor to the passage.

View the Art ★

The Torah consists of the first five books of the Hebrew Bible. Scrolls of parchment containing the Torah are held together by a binder such as this one. The image at the far left of the binder is a chuppah—a wedding canopy used in traditional Jewish weddings to symbolize the building of a home.

Torah Binder, 1848. Shimshon Kurzman. Ink and watercolor on cotton. The Jewish Museum, NY. ★ high in the sky through a cloud menagerie,[3] and watched with half-open mouth as it penetrated a huge hen, and dropped out of her like an egg laying itself. Salzman, though pretending through eyeglasses he had just slipped on, to be engaged in scanning the writing on the cards, stole occasional glances at the young man's distinguished face, noting with pleasure the long, severe scholar's nose, brown eyes heavy with learning, sensitive yet ascetic[4] lips, and a certain, almost hollow quality of the dark cheeks. He gazed around at shelves upon shelves of books and let out a soft, contented sigh.

When Leo's eyes fell upon the cards, he counted six spread out in Salzman's hand.

"So few?" he asked in disappointment.

"You wouldn't believe me how much cards I got in my office," Salzman replied. "The drawers are already filled to the top, so I keep them now in a barrel, but is every girl good for a new rabbi?"

Leo blushed at this, regretting all he had revealed of himself in a curriculum vitae[5] he had sent to Salzman. He had thought it best to acquaint him with his strict standards and specifications, but in having done so, felt he had told the marriage broker more than was absolutely necessary.

He hesitantly inquired, "Do you keep photographs of your clients on file?"

"First comes family, amount of dowry,[6] also what kind promises," Salzman replied, unbuttoning his tight coat and settling himself in the chair. "After comes pictures, rabbi."

"Call me Mr. Finkle. I'm not yet a rabbi."

Salzman said he would, but instead called him doctor, which he changed to rabbi when Leo was not listening too attentively.

Salzman adjusted his horn-rimmed spectacles, gently cleared his throat and read in an eager voice the contents of the top card:

"Sophie P. Twenty-four years. Widow one year. No children. Educated high school and

---

[3] A menagerie (mi naj′ ər ē) is a collection of wild or unusual animals.

[4] Here, ascetic means "severe" or "stern."

[5] A curriculum vitae (kə ri′ kyə ləm vē′ tī) is a summary of a person's education and work experience, usually given to a prospective employer. Finkle has provided Salzman with a summary of the "highlights" of his life.

[6] A dowry is money or property a woman brings to her husband at the time of marriage.

1 Analyze Characterization What do these details reveal about Finkle and Salzman?

Reading Practice

Dialect Explain that Malamud is well known for his use of dialect, especially that spoken in New York City. Explain that dialect establishes setting and gives clues to character. Discuss the characteristics of the dialect in this story, including the use of sentence fragments, the introduction of clauses with time references, and the lack of prepositions. Have students identify examples of dialect on pages 946 and 947. Discuss what the dialect tells about the characters.

two years college. Father promises eight thousand dollars. Has wonderful wholesale business. Also real estate. On the mother's side comes teachers, also one actor. Well known on Second Avenue."

Leo gazed up in surprise. "Did you say a widow?"

"A widow don't mean spoiled, rabbi. She lived with her husband maybe four months. He was a sick boy she made a mistake to marry him."

"Marrying a widow has never entered my mind."

"This is because you have no experience. A widow, especially if she is young and healthy like this girl, is a wonderful person to marry. She will be thankful to you the rest of her life. Believe me, if I was looking now for a bride, I would marry a widow."

Leo reflected, then shook his head.

Salzman hunched his shoulders in an almost imperceptible gesture of disappointment. He placed the card down on the wooden table and began to read another:

"Lily H. High school teacher. Regular. Not a substitute. Has savings and new Dodge car. Lived in Paris one year. Father is successful dentist thirty-five years. Interested in professional man. Well Americanized family. Wonderful opportunity."

"I knew her personally," said Salzman. "I wish you could see this girl. She is a doll. Also very intelligent. All day you could talk to her about books and theyater[7] and what not. She also knows current events."

"I don't believe you mentioned her age?"

"Her age?" Salzman said, raising his brows. "Her age is thirty-two years."

Leo said after a while, "I'm afraid that seems a little too old."

Salzman let out a laugh. "So how old are you, rabbi?"

"Twenty-seven."

"So what is the difference, tell me, between twenty-seven and thirty-two? My own wife is seven years older than me. So what did I suffer?—Nothing. If Rothschild's[8] daughter wants to marry you, would you say on account her age, no?"

"Yes," Leo said dryly.

Salzman shook off the no in the yes. "Five years don't mean a thing. I give you my word that when you will live with her for one week you will forget her age. What does it mean five years—that she lived more and knows more than somebody who is younger? On this girl, God bless her, years are not wasted. Each one that it comes makes better the bargain." ☆

"What subject does she teach in high school?"

"Languages. If you heard the way she speaks French, you will think it is music. I am in the business twenty-five years, and I recommend her with my whole heart. Believe me, I know what I'm talking, rabbi."

"What's on the next card?" Leo said abruptly.

Salzman reluctantly turned up the third card:

"Ruth K. Nineteen years. Honor student. Father offers thirteen thousand cash to the right bridegroom. He is a medical doctor. Stomach specialist with marvelous practice. Brother-in-law owns own garment business. Particular people."

Salzman looked as if he had read his trump card.

"Did you say nineteen?" Leo asked with interest.

"On the dot."

"Is she attractive?" He blushed. "Pretty?"

Salzman kissed his finger tips. "A little doll. On this I give you my word. Let me call the

---

[7] Theyater is the way Salzman is pronouncing the word theater.

[8] The Rothschilds were a prominent, wealthy Jewish family.

2 Life in the City What information about New York City can you infer from this passage?

3 Analyze Characterization What qualities does Salzman consider important in a wife?

4 Dialect How does the use of dialect in this passage contribute to the characterization of Salzman?

Teach

Big Idea 2

Life in the City Answer: New York was a center of culture, including theater.

Reading Strategy 3

Analyze Characterization
Answer: Salzman thinks that a wife should be educated, employed, and financially secure.

APPROACHING Tell students that to determine what qualities Salzman considers important, they should look not only for the qualities he lists but also for what he leaves out. For example, Salzman mentions the educational background of every girl but he leaves out her age until Finkle asks for it.

Literary Element 4

Dialect Answer: Salzman is eager to find a match for Finkle, so he describes Lily almost the way a salesman would talk up an item that he or she wanted very much to sell.

For additional literary element practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 125.

Literary History ☆

Yiddish Salzman's inverted sentences and use of questions as a rhetorical device reflect the influence of Yiddish. Once the prevailing language of Eastern European Jews, Yiddish is a blend of several languages, including German and Hebrew. Some Yiddish words have been adopted by English speakers, including bagel, chutzpah, and klutz.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Roleplaying Students can better understand Finkle and Salzman by roleplaying. Have students work in pairs on different sections of dialogue between the two men. Have them analyze the attitudes, motivations, and speech patterns. Have students rehearse their sections with staging and gestures. Instruct students to pay particular attention to rehearsing the dialect, so that when they perform their scenes for the class, the dialogue sounds as natural as possible.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Dialect Answer: "Of course, she is a little lame in her right foot because of an auto accident that occurred when she was 12 years old, but nobody notices because she is so brilliant and beautiful."

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Characterization
Answer: Although the earlier description alluded to Salzman's age and frailty, it emphasized positive qualities. This description is more negative, though Salzman is still said to be smiling.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Tell students to pay attention to the connotation of the words in the description to help them get a better feel for the character. Ask: Which adjectives in the sentence "His face was gray . . ." have negative connotations? (gray, meager, hungry).

father tonight and you will see what means pretty."

But Leo was troubled. "You're sure she's that young?"

"This I am positive. The father will show you the birth certificate."

"Are you positive there isn't something wrong with her?" Leo insisted.

"Who says there is wrong?"

"I don't understand why an American girl her age should go to a marriage broker."

A smile spread over Salzman's face.

"So for the same reason you went, she comes."

Leo flushed. "I am pressed for time."

Salzman, realizing he had been tactless, quickly explained. "The father came, not her. He wants she should have the best, so he looks around himself. When we will locate the right boy he will introduce him and encourage. This makes a better marriage than if a young girl without experience takes for herself. I don't have to tell you this."

"But don't you think this young girl believes in love?" Leo spoke uneasily.

Salzman was about to guffaw but caught himself and said soberly, "Love comes with the right person, not before."

Leo parted dry lips but did not speak. Noticing that Salzman had snatched a glance at the next card, he cleverly asked, "How is her health?"

"Perfect," Salzman said, breathing with difficulty. "Of course, she is a little lame on her right foot from an auto accident that it happened to her when she was twelve years, but nobody notices on account she is so brilliant and also beautiful."

Leo got up heavily and went to the window. He felt curiously bitter and upbraided himself for having called in the marriage broker. Finally, he shook his head.

"Why not?" Salzman persisted, the pitch of his voice rising.

"Because I detest stomach specialists."

"So what do you care what is his business? After you marry her do you need him? Who says he must come every Friday night in your house?"

Ashamed of the way the talk was going, Leo dismissed Salzman, who went home with heavy, melancholy eyes.

Though he had felt only relief at the marriage broker's departure, Leo was in low spirits the next day. He explained it as arising from Salzman's failure to produce a suitable bride for him. He did not care for his type of clientele. But when Leo found himself hesitating whether to seek out another matchmaker, one more polished than Pinye, he wondered if it could be—his protestations to the contrary, and although he honored his father and mother—that he did not, in essence, care for the match making institution? This thought he quickly put out of mind yet found himself still upset. All day he ran around in the woods[9]—missed an important appointment, forgot to give out his laundry, walked out of a Broadway cafeteria without paying and had to run back with the ticket in his hand; had even not recognized his landlady in the street when she passed with a friend and courteously called out, "A good evening to you, Doctor Finkle." By nightfall, however, he had regained sufficient calm to sink his nose into a book and there found peace from his thoughts.

Almost at once there came a knock on the door. Before Leo could say enter, Salzman, commercial cupid, was standing in the room. His face was gray and meager, his expression hungry, and he looked as if he would expire on his feet. Yet the marriage broker managed, by some trick of the muscles, to display a broad smile.

"So good evening. I am invited?"

Leo nodded, disturbed to see him again, yet unwilling to ask the man to leave.

---

[9] [ran . . . woods] Here, this phrase means that Finkle was nervous and distracted.

1 Dialect How would this passage be written in Standard English?

Analyze Characterization How does this description of Salzman differ from the description of him when he first entered Finkle's home? 2

Writing Practice

Journal Recall with students that Finkle must decide which, if any, of the proposed brides to meet. Instruct students to imagine that they are Finkle and to write a brief journal entry exploring his feelings about one of the potential candidates. Tell students to use Finkle's reactions in the story to help guide them in expressing his thoughts. Tell students to use details from the story about the candidates. Have students share their finished journal entries with the class.

Beaming still, Salzman laid his portfolio on the table. "Rabbi, I got for you tonight good news."

"I've asked you not to call me rabbi. I'm still a student."

"Your worries are finished. I have for you a first-class bride."

"Leave me in peace concerning this subject." Leo pretended lack of interest.

"The world will dance at your wedding."

"Please, Mr. Salzman, no more."

"But first must come back my strength," Salzman said weakly. He fumbled with the portfolio straps and took out of the leather case an oily paper bag, from which he extracted a hard, seeded roll and a small, smoked white fish. With a quick motion of his hand he stripped the fish out of its skin and began ravenously to chew. "All day in a rush," he muttered.

Leo watched him eat.

"A sliced tomato you have maybe?" Salzman hesitantly inquired.

"No."

3 The marriage broker shut his eyes and ate. When he had finished he carefully cleaned up the crumbs and rolled up the remains of the fish, in the paper bag. His spectacled eyes roamed the room until he discovered, amid some piles of books, a one-burner gas stove. Lifting his hat he humbly asked, "A glass tea you got, rabbi?"

Conscience-stricken, Leo rose and brewed the tea. He served it with a chunk of lemon and two cubes of lump sugar, delighting Salzman.

After he had drunk his tea, Salzman's strength and good spirits were restored.

"So tell me, rabbi," he said amiably, "you considered some more the three clients I mentioned yesterday?"

"There was no need to consider."

"Why not?"

"None of them suits me."

4 Dialect What inversion does Salzman make?

Portrait of Miss Stryker (Portrait of an Aristocrat). Ella Condie Lamb. Pastels on paper, 26½ x 22⅝ in. Collection of The Newark Museum, NJ. Gift of Charles Rollinson Lamb, 1942. IN:42.133. ★

"What then suits you?"

Leo let it pass because he could give only a confused answer.

5 Without waiting for a reply, Salzman asked, "You remember this girl I talked to you—the high school teacher?"

"Age thirty-two?"

But, surprisingly, Salzman's face lit in a smile. "Age twenty-nine."

Leo shot him a look. "Reduced from thirty-two?"

"A mistake," Salzman avowed. "I talked today with the dentist. He took me to his safety deposit box and showed me the birth certificate. She was twenty-nine years last August. They made her a party in the mountains where she went for her vacation. When her father spoke to me the first time I forgot to write the age and I told you thirty-two, but now I remember this was a different client, a widow."

Teach

Literary Element 3

Point of View These paragraphs give clear clues to point of view. Ask: From what point of view is this story told, and how can you tell? (It is told from the third-person omniscient point of view. The narrator has no role in the story and tells the reader what each man is thinking.)

Literary Element 4

Dialect Answer: He puts strength, the subject of the sentence, after the verb phrase "must come back."

Reading Strategy 5

Make Inferences Have students reread this dialogue. Ask: Do you believe Salzman? Why or why not? (Possible answer: No, he appears to be lying. He changes the information about two of the potential brides, apparently to renew Finkle's interest.)

View the Art ★

Ella Condie Lamb began studying art at age 16. She is best known for her mosaics and stained glass. Ask: Which of the possible brides does this portrait suggest to you? (Students' answers will vary but should be supported with details from the selection.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Give students practice with third-person omniscient point of view by asking them to paraphrase a sequence of events. Point out that in their paraphrases, they are using third-person omniscient point of view. They are all-knowing, and have a "fly on the wall" perspective on events.

SMALL GROUP

Advanced Have students analyze the effects of the author's use of third-person omniscient point of view. Have groups discuss how it affects the tone and mood of the story. Then have the groups share their findings with the class.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Predict The narrator says that Salzman thinks he and Leo are close to reaching an agreement. Ask: What do you predict will come of the meeting between Finkle and Lily Hirschorn? (It will not go well, because Leo feels tricked into it rather than genuinely eager.)

APPROACHING Point out that Malamud's word choice provides clues to help students predict what will happen next. Although he is amused, Leo feels "entangled." Malamud lets readers know that Leo feels annoyed and entrapped before he has even met Lily.

Big Idea 2

Life in the City Answer: Details include the reference to Riverside Drive and the description of Finkle's formal clothing.

Reading Strategy 3

Analyze Characterization
Answer: Finkle's awareness of Salzman's role, not just in getting him together with Lily, but in skewing their responses to each other, has colored the entire experience for him, making it seem artificial and uncomfortable.

"The same one you told me about? I thought she was twenty-four?"

"A different. Am I responsible that the world is filled with widows?"

"No, but I'm not interested in them, nor for that matter, in school teachers."

Salzman pulled his clasped hands to his breast. Looking at the ceiling he devoutly exclaimed, "Yiddishe kinder,[10] what can I say to somebody that he is not interested in high school teachers? So what then you are interested?"

Leo flushed but controlled himself.

"In what else will you be interested," Salzman went on, "if you not interested in this fine girl that she speaks four languages and has personally in the bank ten thousand dollars? Also her father guarantees further twelve thousand. Also she has new car, wonderful clothes, talks on all subjects, and she will give you a first-class home and children. How near do we come in our life to paradise?"

"If she's so wonderful, why wasn't she married ten years ago?"

"Why?" said Salzman with a heavy laugh. "—Why? Because she is partikiler.[11] This is why. She wants the best."

1 Leo went silent, amused at how he had entangled himself. But Salzman had aroused his interest in Lily H., and he began seriously to consider calling on her. When the marriage broker observed how intently Leo's mind was at work on the facts he had supplied, he felt certain they would soon come to an agreement.

Late Saturday afternoon, conscious of Salzman, Leo Finkle walked with Lily Hirschorn along Riverside Drive.[12] He walked briskly and erectly, wearing with distinction the black fedora[13] he had that morning taken with trepidation out of the dusty hat box on his closet shelf, and the heavy black Saturday coat he had thoroughly whisked clean. Leo also owned a walking stick, a present from a distant relative, but quickly put temptation aside and did not use it. Lily, petite and not unpretty, had on something signifying the approach of spring. She was au courant[14] animatedly, with all sorts of subjects, and he weighed her words and found her surprisingly sound—score another for Salzman, who he uneasily sensed to be somewhere around, hiding perhaps high in a tree along the street, flashing the lady signals with a pocket mirror; or perhaps a cloven-hoofed Pan, piping nuptial ditties as he danced his invisible way before them, strewing wild buds on the walk and purple grapes in their path, symbolizing fruit of a union, though there was of course still none.

Visual Vocabulary
In Greek mythology, Pan was a god of pastures, flocks, and shepherds who was believed to foster reproduction and growth. He was traditionally depicted as a musician who was part man and part goat.

Lily startled Leo by remarking, "I was thinking of Mr. Salzman, a curious figure, wouldn't you say?"

Not certain what to answer, he nodded.

She bravely went on, blushing, "I for one am grateful for his introducing us. Aren't you?"

He courteously replied, "I am."

"I mean," she said with a little laugh—and it was all in good taste, or at least gave the effect

---

[10] Yiddishe kinder (yid' ish ə kint' ər) means "Jewish children" or "Jewish young people."

[11] Partikiler is the way Salzman is pronouncing the word particular.

[12] Riverside Drive, a major road on the west side of Manhattan, runs beside the Hudson River.

[13] A fedora (fi dôr' ə) is a soft felt hat with a curved brim and a lengthwise crease in the crown.

[14] The French words au courant (ō ko͞o rän') literally mean "in the current" but are most often used to mean "fully informed" or "up-to-date."

2 Life in the City Which details depict a stroll in New York City rather than in the country?

Analyze Characterization What does this passage reveal about Finkle's state of mind? 3

Vocabulary Practice

Word Roots Explain that a word family is a group of words containing the same root. By identifying an unfamiliar word's root, students can often guess the word's meaning. Point out that the root of enamored, which appears on page 951, is the Latin word amor, meaning "love." Have students brainstorm a list of words with the same root. Then have them check a dictionary to see whether the words belong to the same word family.

Create a master list on the board from the students' lists and have students copy the master list into their notebooks.

of being not in bad—"do you mind that we came together so?"

He was not displeased with her honesty, recognizing that she meant to set the relationship aright, and understanding that it took a certain amount of experience in life, and courage, to want to do it quite that way. One had to have some sort of past to make that kind of beginning.

He said that he did not mind. Salzman's function was traditional and honorable—valuable for what it might achieve, which, he pointed out, was frequently nothing.

Lily agreed with a sigh. They walked on for a while and she said after a long silence, again with a nervous laugh, "Would you mind if I asked you something a little bit personal? Frankly, I find the subject fascinating." Although Leo shrugged, she went on half embarrassedly, "How was it that you came to your calling? I mean was it a sudden passionate inspiration?"

Leo, after a time, slowly replied, "I was always interested in the Law."

"You saw revealed in it the presence of the Highest?"

He nodded and changed the subject. "I understand that you spent a little time in Paris, Miss Hirschorn?"

"Oh, did Mr. Salzman tell you, Rabbi Finkle?" Leo winced but she went on, "It was ages ago and almost forgotten. I remember I had to return for my sister's wedding."

And Lily would not be put off. "When," she asked in a trembly voice, "did you become enamored of God?"

He stared at her. Then it came to him that she was talking not about Leo Finkle, but of a total stranger, some mystical figure, perhaps even passionate prophet that Salzman had dreamed up for her—no relation to the living or dead. Leo trembled with rage and weakness. The trickster had obviously sold her a bill of goods, just as he had him, who'd expected to become acquainted with a young lady of twenty-nine, only to behold, the moment he laid eyes upon her strained and anxious face, a woman past thirty-five and aging rapidly. Only his self control had kept him this long in her presence.

"I am not," he said gravely, "a talented religious person," and in seeking words to go on, found himself possessed by shame and fear. "I think," he said in a strained manner, "that I came to God not because I loved Him, but because I did not."

This confession he spoke harshly because its unexpectedness shook him.

Lily wilted. Leo saw a profusion of loaves of bread go flying like ducks high over his head, not unlike the winged loaves by which he had counted himself to sleep last night. Mercifully, then, it snowed, which he would not put past Salzman's machinations.

He was infuriated with the marriage broker and swore he would throw him out of the room the minute he reappeared. But Salzman did not come that night, and when Leo's anger had subsided,[15] an unaccountable despair grew in its place. At first he thought this was caused by his disappointment in Lily, but before long it became evident that he had involved himself with Salzman without a true knowledge of his own intent. He gradually realized—with an emptiness that seized him with six hands—that he had called in the broker to find him a bride because he was incapable of doing it himself. This terrifying insight he had derived as a result of his meeting and conversation with Lily Hirschorn. Her probing questions had somehow irritated him into revealing—to himself more than her—the true nature of his relationship to God, and from that it had come upon him, with shocking force, that apart from his parents, he 4 Dialect How could you rephrase this sentence using a standard grammatical form?

Vocabulary

enamored (en am′ ərd) adj. inspired with love; charmed; captivated

Analyze Characterization What does this confession reveal about Finkle? 5

---

[15] Subsided means "decreased in intensity."

Teach

Literary Element 4

Dialect Answer: "Did you see the presence of the Highest revealed in it?"

ENGLISH LEARNERS Ask: What does Lily mean by "the Highest"? (God) Point out the capitalization of "Law" in the previous line. Explain that Lily knows that by the Law, Finkle means the study of Jewish law. She assumes that Finkle was drawn to the Law by a love of God.

Reading Strategy 5

Analyze Characterization

Answer: It reveals that Finkle has never been totally honest with himself and that he has personal issues that he has never confronted. It may be that Finkle longs for meaning in his life and has sought that meaning through religious studies. Or perhaps there was a particular event in his life that caused him not to love God.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Help students analyze the events that lead to Finkle's revelation in the sentence bridging pages 951 and 952. Say: As a result of his talk with Lily, Finkle has a major revelation. Ask: What does he realize? (He is unloved and loveless.) Ask: How does this affect him? (He has the worst week of his life. He stops eating, going to classes, and reading, and grows ragged.)

Established Help students relate to the impact of Finkle's revelation by having them write a brief description of a moment of realization in their own lives. Tell students that the moment does not have to be as dramatic as Finkle's but should have had an emotional impact on them. Tell students to include descriptions of what occurred and how it affected them.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Characterization

Answer: It suggests that Salzman is more tired, decrepit, and depressed than he appeared before.

Ask: What might explain the change in Salzman since the story began? (Perhaps he feels himself a failure at his job.)

Cultural History ☆

History of the Jews Finkle's comment that Jews suffer is a reference to the history of the Jewish people. Nearly always a minority in the lands where they have lived, Jews have often been persecuted. The most infamous example in modern history is the Holocaust, the Nazis' murder of 6 million Jews in Europe.

had never loved anyone. Or perhaps it went the other way, that he did not love God so well as he might, because he had not loved man. It seemed to Leo that his whole life stood starkly revealed and he saw himself for the first time as he truly was—unloved and loveless. This bitter but somehow not fully unexpected revelation brought him to a point of panic, controlled only by extraordinary effort. He covered his face with his hands and cried.

The week that followed was the worst of his life. He did not eat and lost weight. His beard darkened and grew ragged. He stopped attending seminars and almost never opened a book. He seriously considered leaving the Yeshivah, although he was deeply troubled at the thought of the loss of all his years of study—saw them like pages torn from a book, strewn over the city—and at the devastating effect of this decision upon his parents. But he had lived without knowledge of himself, and never in the Five Books and all the Commentaries[16]—mea culpa[17]—had the truth been revealed to him. He did not know where to turn, and in all this desolating loneliness there was no to whom, although he often thought of Lily but not once could bring himself to go downstairs and make the call. He became touchy and irritable, especially with his landlady, who asked him all manner of personal questions; on the other hand, sensing his own disagreeableness, he waylaid her on the stairs and apologized abjectly, until mortified, she ran from him. Out of this, however, he drew the consolation that ☆ he was a Jew and that a Jew suffered. But gradually, as the long and terrible week drew to a close, he regained his composure and some idea of purpose in life: to go on as planned. Although he was imperfect, the ideal was not. As for his quest of a bride, the thought of continuing afflicted him with anxiety and heartburn, yet perhaps with this new knowledge of himself he would be more successful than in the past. Perhaps love would now come to him and a bride to that love. And for this sanctified seeking who needed a Salzman?

The marriage broker, a skeleton with haunted eyes, returned that very night. He looked, withal, the picture of frustrated expectancy—as if he had steadfastly waited the week at Miss Lily Hirschorn's side for a telephone call that never came.

Casually coughing, Salzman came immediately to the point: "So how did you like her?"

Leo's anger rose and he could not refrain from chiding the matchmaker: "Why did you lie to me, Salzman?"

Salzman's pale face went dead white, the world had snowed on him.

"Did you not state that she was twenty-nine?" Leo insisted.

"I give you my word—"

"She was thirty-five, if a day. At least thirty-five."

"Of this don't be too sure. Her father told me—"

"Never mind. The worst of it was that you lied to her."

"How did I lie to her, tell me?"

"You told her things about me that weren't true. You made me out to be more, consequently less than I am. She had in mind a totally different person, a sort of semi-mystical Wonder Rabbi."

"All I said, you was a religious man."

"I can imagine."

Salzman sighed. "This is my weakness that I have," he confessed. "My wife says to me I shouldn't be a salesman, but when I have two [16] The Pentateuch (pen' tə took'), or first Five Books of the Hebrew Bible (Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy), are known collectively in Judaism as the Torah, or the Law. Commentaries provide explanatory and scholarly information about the biblical texts.

---

[17] Mea culpa (mā' ə kool' pə) means "my own fault" in Latin.

Vocabulary

abjectly (ab´ jekt lē) adv. in a humiliating, mean, or degrading manner

Analyze Characterization What does this third description of Salzman suggest about him? 1

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Definition Point out that although we use the word love frequently, its meaning is often imprecise. People may "love" Chinese food, a friend's new car, their parents, or a spouse. Each of these uses has a different shade of meaning. Have students write extended definitions of love that include important kinds of love while excluding notions of mere preference. Invite volunteers to share and discuss their definitions in the context of the views that Finkle and Salzman convey in "The Magic Barrel."

fine people that they would be wonderful to be married, I am so happy that I talk too much." He smiled wanly.[18] "This is why Salzman is a poor man."

Leo's anger left him. "Well, Salzman, I'm afraid that's all."

The marriage broker fastened hungry eyes on him.

"You don't want any more a bride?"

"I do," said Leo, "but I have decided to seek her in a different way. I am no longer interested in an arranged marriage. To be frank, I now admit the necessity of premarital love. That is, I want to be in love with the one I marry."

"Love?" said Salzman, astounded. After a moment he remarked, "For us, our love is our life, not for the ladies. In the ghetto they—"

"I know, I know," said Leo. "I've thought of it often. Love, I have said to myself, should be a by-product of living and worship rather than its own end. Yet for myself I find it necessary to establish the level of my need and fulfill it."

Salzman shrugged but answered, "Listen, rabbi, if you want love, this I can find for you also. I have such beautiful clients that you will love them the minute your eyes will see them."

Leo smiled unhappily. "I'm afraid you don't understand."

But Salzman hastily unstrapped his portfolio and withdrew a manila packet from it.

"Pictures," he said, quickly laying the envelope on the table.

Leo called after him to take the pictures away, but as if on the wings of the wind, Salzman had disappeared.

Perhaps love would now come to him and a bride to that love.

March came. Leo had returned to his regular routine. Although he felt not quite himself yet—lacked energy—he was making plans for a more active social life. Of course it would cost something, but he was an expert in cutting corners; and when there were no corners left he would make circles rounder. All the while Salzman's pictures had lain on the table, gathering dust. Occasionally as Leo sat studying, or enjoying a cup of tea, his eyes fell on the manila envelope, but he never opened it.

The days went by and no social life to speak of developed with a member of the opposite sex—it was difficult, given the circumstances of his situation. One morning Leo toiled up the stairs to his room and stared out the window at the city. Although the day was bright his view of it was dark. For some time he watched the people in the street below hurrying along and then turned with a heavy heart to his little room. On the table was the packet. With a sudden relentless gesture he tore it open. For a half-hour he stood by the table in a state of excitement, examining the photographs of the ladies Salzman had included. Finally, with a deep sigh he put them down. There were six, of varying degrees of attractiveness, but look at them long enough and they all became Lily Hirschorn: all past their prime, all starved behind bright smiles, not a true personality in the lot. Life, despite their frantic yoohooings, had passed them by; they were pictures in a brief case that stank of fish. After a while, however, as Leo attempted to return the photographs into the envelope, he found in it another, a snapshot of the type taken by a machine for a quarter. He gazed at it a moment and let out a cry.

---

[18] Here, wanly means "sadly" or "in a dejected way."

2 Analyze Characterization Why does Finkle reach this conclusion?

Life in the City How do the descriptions of city life here enhance the tone? 3

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Characterization

Answer: Finkle believes that he needs to fall in love with a woman before courting her as his prospective bride.

Big Idea 3

Life in the City Answer: The image of the bustling city outside his window emphasizes Finkle's sense of loneliness.

APPROACHING Point out that Malamud uses visual imagery to achieve the effect of a lonely tone. Ask: What visual images does Malamud provide? (He contrasts the bright day with Finkle's dark view. He uses the image of Finkle alone, inside, separated from the outside, busy world.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging To help students track the long story, divide them into groups. Have each group make a storyboard—pictures and notes—for one section of the story up to this page. Tell students that the storyboards can help them follow the plot, understand characters' motivations, and focus on the theme. When the groups have completed their storyboards, hang them where the class can see them.

Established Have students create outlines of the scenes so far, including character and plot information. Invite students to share their completed outlines with the class. Create a master outline on the board as a reference for students as they finish the story.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Characterization

Answer: Finkle has fallen in love with a young woman after looking at a snapshot of her. His first reaction is desire; this is followed by dread. Finkle is experiencing love for the first time, and it overpowers him. He senses that it is not without cost.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Have students explain the sequence of his thoughts in their own words, up to his decision to find the girl. (The photo of the girl moves Finkle; he feels as though he has met her before, though he has not; he feels a connection to her and desires her; he feels fear; he tries to calm himself with tea; he goes back to looking at the photo excitedly and decides to see Salzman to meet the girl.)

Big Idea 2

Life in the City

Answer: References to the subway stations and the subway ride in the Bronx set the scene in New York City.

View the Art ★

Moses Soyer (1899–1974) came to America from his native Russia in 1912, along with his two brothers. All three brothers were painters and focused on portraying people and scenes in their adopted city of New York. At least one Jewish scholar suggests that The Lover of Books may be a portrayal of Soyer's father, a Hebrew scholar.

Her face deeply moved him. Why, he could at first not say. It gave him the impression of youth—spring flowers, yet age—a sense of having been used to the bone, wasted; this came from the eyes, which were hauntingly familiar, yet absolutely strange. He had a vivid impression that he had met her before, but try as he might he could not place her although he could almost recall her name, as if he had read it in her own handwriting. No, this couldn't be; he would have remembered her. It was not, he affirmed, that she had an extraordinary beauty—no, though her face was attractive enough; it was that something about her moved him. Feature for feature, even some of the ladies of the photographs could do better; but she leaped forth to his heart—had lived, or wanted to—more than just wanted, perhaps regretted how she had lived—had somehow deeply suffered: it could be seen in the depths of those reluctant eyes, and from the way the light enclosed and shone from her, and within her, opening realms of possibility: this was her own. Her he desired. His head ached and eyes narrowed with the intensity of his gazing, then as if an obscure fog had blown up in the mind, he experienced fear of her and was aware that he had received an impression, somehow, of evil. He shuddered, saying softly, it is thus with us all. Leo brewed some tea in a small pot and sat sipping it without sugar, to calm himself. But before he had finished drinking, again with excitement he examined the face and found it good: good for Leo Finkle. Only such a one could understand him and help him seek whatever he was seeking. She might, perhaps, love him. How she had happened to be among the discards in Salzman's barrel he could never guess, but he knew he must urgently go find her.

Leo rushed downstairs, grabbed up the Bronx[19] telephone book, and searched for Salzman's home address. He was not listed, nor was his office. Neither was he in the Manhattan book. But Leo remembered having written down the address on a slip of paper after he had read Salzman's advertisement in the "personals" column of the Forward. He ran up to his room and tore through his papers, without luck. It was exasperating. Just when he needed the matchmaker he was nowhere to be found. Fortunately Leo remembered to look in his wallet. There on a card he found his name written and a Bronx address. No phone number was listed, the reason—Leo now recalled—he had originally communicated with Salzman by letter. He got on his coat, put a hat on over his skullcap and hurried to the subway station. All the way to the far end of the Bronx he sat on the edge of his seat. He was more than once tempted to take out the picture and see if the girl's face was as he remembered it, but he refrained, allowing the snapshot to remain in his inside coat pocket, content to have her so close. When the train pulled into the station he was waiting at the door and bolted out. He quickly located the street Salzman had advertised.

Visual Vocabulary
A skullcap, or yarmulke (yä′ mə kə), is a brimless cap worn by many Jewish men and boys, especially during religious services.

The building he sought was less than a block from the subway, but it was not an office building, nor even a loft, nor a store in which one could rent office space. It was a very old tenement[20] house. Leo found Salzman's name in pencil on a soiled tag under the bell and climbed three dark flights to his apartment. When he knocked, the door

---

[19] The Bronx is one of five boroughs, or divisions, that make up New York City. Manhattan is another.

[20] A tenement is an apartment building or rooming house that is built or maintained poorly and is often overcrowded.

1 Analyze Characterization Why is Finkle experiencing fear here?

Life in the City How do the descriptions here add to the development of the setting? 2

Reading Practice

Foreshadow Have students pause at the end of page 955. Ask: Why do you think Salzman is so distressed by the photograph? Explain that Malamud has given some clues that foreshadow the reason for Salzman's distress. Challenge students to reread pages 954 and 955 to identify these clues. (Similarities to Salzman in the appearance of the woman in the photograph; Finkle's sense that he has met her before) Ask students to predict the reason for Salzman's reaction to the photo.

was opened by a thin, asthmatic, gray-haired woman in felt slippers.

"Yes?" she said, expecting nothing. She listened without listening. He could have sworn he had seen her, too, before but knew it was an illusion.

"Salzman—does he live here? Pinye Salzman," he said, "the matchmaker?"

She stared at him a long minute. "Of course."

He felt embarrassed. "Is he in?"

"No." Her mouth, though left open, offered nothing more.

"The matter is urgent. Can you tell me where his office is?"

"In the air." She pointed upward.

"You mean he has no office?" Leo asked.

"In his socks."

3 He peered into the apartment. It was sunless and dingy, one large room divided by a half-open curtain, beyond which he could see a sagging metal bed. The near side of a room was crowded with rickety chairs, old bureaus, a three-legged table, racks of cooking utensils, and all the apparatus of a kitchen. But there was no sign of Salzman or his magic barrel, probably also a figment of the imagination. An odor of frying fish made Leo weak to the knees.

"Where is he?" he insisted. "I've got to see your husband."

At length she answered, "So who knows where he is? Every time he thinks a new thought he runs to a different place. Go home, he will find you."

"Tell him Leo Finkle."

She gave no sign she had heard.

He walked downstairs, depressed.

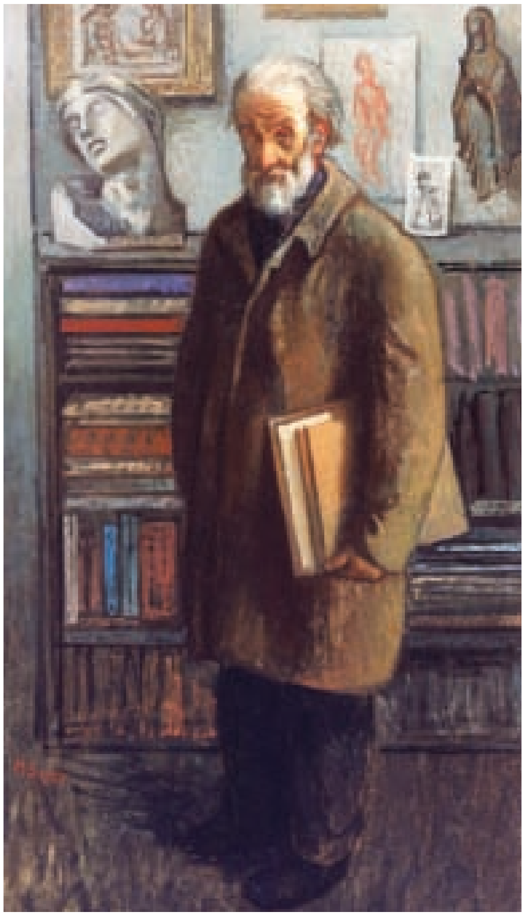
But Salzman, breathless, stood waiting at his door.

Leo was astounded and overjoyed. "How did you get here before me?"

"I rushed."

"Come inside."

4 They entered. Leo fixed tea, and a sardine sandwich for Salzman. As they were drinking he reached behind him for the packet of pictures and handed them to the marriage broker.



The Lover of Books, 1934. Moses Soyer. Oil on canvas, 42 x 23½ in. The Jewish Museum, New York. ★

Salzman put down his glass and said expectantly, "You found somebody you like?"

"Not among these."

The marriage broker turned away.

"Here is the one I want." Leo held forth the snapshot.

4 Salzman slipped on his glasses and took the picture into his trembling hand. He turned ghastly and let out a groan.

"What's the matter?" cried Leo.

"Excuse me. Was an accident this picture. She isn't for you."

Teach

Literary Element 3

Characterization Ask: What can you infer about the relationship between Salzman and his wife? (His wife has lost confidence in Salzman's ability to make a good living.)

Reading Strategy 4

Compare and Contrast Have students recall the previous descriptions of Salzman. Ask: How is Salzman different now? (In each succeeding description, Salzman seems weaker. At first, he was merely old and frail, then he was a skeleton, and now he is "ghastly.")

APPROACHING Ask: How is Finkle different now from when he first met with Salzman? (When he first met Salzman, Finkle was reluctant to deal with him. Now Finkle is eager, almost desperate to see Salzman.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain that colloquial speech includes the informal speech that people use in everyday conversation. Point out and explain the following colloquial phrases. Clarify that some phrases reflect the specific dialect of Malamud's characters, whereas others are common English colloquialisms:

gave chase: followed after forgetting himself: breaking rules of propriety because of emotion

a wild one: a person who cannot be controlled

SMALL GROUP Advanced Have pairs of students come up with some examples of modern day English colloquialisms and their meanings. Then have students share their examples and meanings with the class.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Characterization

Answer: Salzman's daughter values the material over the spiritual, in direct opposition to what Salzman believes.

Reading Strategy 2

Compare and Contrast

Have students read and contrast the descriptions of Salzman and Finkle. (Salzman has deteriorated "to the point of vanishing." Finkle has a new beard and wisdom in his eyes. He blossoms as Salzman fades.)

Reading Strategy 3

Analyze Characterization

Answer: This date takes place on a spring night, not on a late afternoon in winter. Stella, unlike Lily, is uneasy and shy. This time Finkle brings his date a bouquet of flowers.

Cultural History ☆

Prayers for the Dead The Kaddish prayer is traditionally chanted by Jews who have lost a close relative. The prayer affirms the greatness of God, even in the face of personal tragedy.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 130.

Salzman frantically shoved the manila packet into his portfolio. He thrust the snapshot into his pocket and fled down the stairs.

Leo, after momentary paralysis, gave chase and cornered the marriage broker in the vestibule.[21] The landlady made hysterical outcries but neither of them listened.

"Give me back the picture, Salzman."

"No." The pain in his eyes was terrible.

"Tell me who she is then."

"This I can't tell you. Excuse me."

He made to depart, but Leo, forgetting himself, seized the matchmaker by his tight coat and shook him frenziedly.

"Please," sighed Salzman. "Please."

Leo ashamedly let him go. "Tell me who she is," he begged. "It's very important for me to know."

"She is not for you. She is a wild one—wild, without shame. This is not a bride for a rabbi."

"What do you mean wild?"

"Like an animal. Like a dog. For her to be poor was a sin. This is why to me she is dead now."

"In God's name, what do you mean?"

"Her I can't introduce to you," Salzman cried.

"Why are you so excited?"

"Why, he asks," Salzman said, bursting into tears. "This is my baby, my Stella, she should burn in hell." Leo hurried up to bed and hid under the covers. Under the covers he thought his life through. Although he soon fell asleep he could not sleep her out of his mind. He woke, beating his breast. Though he prayed to be rid of her, his prayers went unanswered. Through days of torment he endlessly struggled not to love her; fearing success, he escaped it. He then concluded to convert her to goodness, himself to God. The idea alternately nauseated and exalted him.

He perhaps did not know that he had come to a final decision until he encountered Salzman in a Broadway cafeteria. He was sitting alone at a rear table, sucking the bony remains of a fish. The marriage broker appeared haggard, and transparent to the point of vanishing. 2

Salzman looked up at first without recognizing him. Leo had grown a pointed beard and his eyes were weighted with wisdom.

"Salzman," he said, "love has at last come to my heart."

"Who can love from a picture?" mocked the marriage broker.

"It is not impossible."

"If you can love her, then you can love anybody. Let me show you some new clients that they just sent me their photographs. One is a little doll."

"Just her I want," Leo murmured.

"Don't be a fool, doctor. Don't bother with her."

"Put me in touch with her, Salzman," Leo said humbly. "Perhaps I can be of service."

Salzman had stopped eating and Leo understood with emotion that it was now arranged.

Leaving the cafeteria, he was, however, afflicted by a tormenting suspicion that Salzman had planned it all to happen this way.

Leo was informed by letter that she would meet him on a certain corner, and she was there one spring night, waiting under a street lamp. He appeared, carrying a small bouquet of violets and rosebuds. Stella stood by the lamp post, smoking. She wore white with red shoes, which fitted his expectations, although in a troubled moment he had imagined the dress red, and only the shoes white. She waited uneasily and shyly. From afar he saw that her eyes—clearly her father's—were filled with desperate innocence. He pictured, in her, his own redemption. Violins and lit candles revolved in the sky. Leo ran forward with flowers outthrust.

Around the corner, Salzman, leaning against a wall, chanted prayers for the dead. ☆

---

[21] A vestibule (ves′ tə būl′) is an entrance hall or lobby.

1 Analyze Characterization Why does his daughter's wildness cause Salzman to reject her?

Analyze Characterization How is Finkle's date with Stella different from his previous date with Lily Hirschorn? 3

Reading Practice

Ambiguous Ending The ending of this story is ambiguous. Have students generate a list of questions they have at the conclusion of the story, and write them on the board. Such questions might include: Will Finkle's idealistic perception of Stella change once he gets to know her? Will he "redeem" her—or will she drag him down? Does Salzman chant the prayers for the dead for his daughter or for the possible loss of Finkle's spirituality? Discuss with the students how these ambiguities impact their reaction to, and understanding of, the story.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Were you surprised by the outcome of the story? Explain why or why not.
2. (a)Who are the first three women Salzman describes? (b)How does Finkle react to the description of each? (c)What does Finkle's attitude toward the women reveal about his personality?
3. (a)How does Finkle feel about Salzman at the end of the story? (b)Do you think Finkle's suspicion about Salzman at the end of the story is correct? Support your answer with evidence from the story.

Analyze and Evaluate

4. Why might Finkle have responded so strongly to the snapshot of Stella?
5. How does the setting of Salzman's apartment add to the author's characterization of the matchmaker? Explain with details from the selection.
6. How does Malamud use suspense to draw the reader into the story? Support your response.

Connect

7. Big Idea Life in the City How does the city environment shape and influence Finkle's life?
8. Connect to the Author How do you think Malamud's experiences with life's struggles contributed to his characters' view of their own lives?

Literary Element Dialect

In "The Magic Barrel," Salzman speaks in a dialect of English influenced by Yiddish grammar and syntax. For example, he says to Leo, "You don't want any more a bride?" In Standard English, this passage might read, "You don't want to get married anymore?"

1. Find three more examples of dialect in Salzman's speech in the story.
2. Notice that Salzman speaks in dialect but Finkle does not. What do these differences in speech tell you about these characters?

Review: Motivation

As you learned on page 295, motivation is the reason or cause for a character's actions. The cause may be internal (for example, a character's ambition, fear, or love) or external (for example, societal pressure or danger). Most characters are motivated by both internal and external factors.

Group Activity Meet with a small group to discuss the motivations of Leo Finkle in "The Magic Barrel." Create a chart like the one shown, and fill it in by identifying the motivation for each action listed.

LEO FINKLE

Motivation	Actions
	1. calls in Salzman
	2. rejects Salzman's three candidates
	3. agrees to meet Lily Hirschorn
	4. stops eating and attending seminars
	5. falls in love with Stella's snapshot

After You Read

Assess

1. The ending is surprising, although foreshadowing provides some clues.
2. (a) Sophie, Lily, and Ruth (b) Finkle rejects them: Sophie is a widow, Lily is too old, Ruth is lame. (c) He is shallow and selfish; he seeks perfection.
3. (a) He suspects that Salzman planned for him to meet Stella. (b) His suspicion may be correct. It seems unlikely that such a photograph would be included by mistake, and Salzman may very well want to help his daughter. Perhaps Salzman believes that being married to a rabbi will redeem her.
4. He believes that only one who has suffered and knows both good and evil can truly understand and love him.
5. The setting shows Salzman to be poor, helping to explain his frail, haggard state.
6. He establishes Finkle's need for a wife; the reader then wants to know if he will find one.
7. Finkle finds a matchmaker and meets his daughter, who has been lured by the materialism of modern city life.
8. His view of life's suffering might have contributed to Finkle's and Salzman's attitude toward marriage. Both initially see it in practical terms, but Finkle's later attraction to Stella counters this view with optimism.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 251–252.

Literary Element

1. "This I am positive"; "So what then you are interested?"; "A sliced tomato you have maybe?"
2. They suggest that Saltzman probably immigrated to the United States and retains the dialect he grew up speaking, while Finkle is a native English speaker.

Review: Motivation

1. wants a wife but has no prospects
2. has strict standards for a wife
3. listens to Salzman's revised description of Lily Hirschorn
4. realizes he is unloved and loveless
5. sees signs of deep suffering in Stella's snapshot

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. Possible answers: (1) the second paragraph in page 945; (2) the dialogue on pages 946–947; (3) the first half of the first column on page 955
2. 1) through the character's appearance; (2) through the character's words; (3) through what another character—Salzman's wife—says about the character

Vocabulary

meager

Etymology: Middle English megre means "thin" (As a poor rabbinical student, Leo lived on meager means.)

amiable

Etymology: Latin amicus means "friend" (Though we'd fought the week before and hadn't spoken since, she was amiable with me at the party.)

animated

Etymology: Latin animatus means "filled with life" (The old man was animated and did not seem to be sick at all.)

enamored

Etymology: Latin amare means "to love" (Heathcliff was enamored with Cathy, but she was married to another man.)

abjectly

Etymology: Latin abjicere means "to cast off" (The Roman mob abjectly suffered under cruel emperors.)

Academic Vocabulary

Students should infer that here, approach means "the onset of."

Reading Strategy Analyze Characterization

In "The Magic Barrel," Malamud primarily uses indirect characterization, which requires readers to interpret details and events and to reach conclusions based on the clues provided by the author.

1. Find three instances in which Malamud portrays Salzman's character.
2. Identify the method used to reveal character in each instance: for example, through the character's thoughts, words, actions, or appearance.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Origins Record information as shown for each vocabulary word from the selection. Use a dictionary for help.

meager amiable animated enamored abjectly

EXAMPLE:

Word: compatible
Definition: able to exist together in harmony
Etymology: Latin compatibilis means "together in suffering"
Sample sentence: Leo Finkle wanted to find a compatible spouse.

Academic Vocabulary

Leo Finkle feels that Salzman's approach as a marriage broker is too pushy.

Approach is an academic word. Two teachers may have a different approach to teaching. The word approach is also used to indicate an instance of drawing closer to something. Use context clues to infer the meaning of approach: Nell recognized the approach of summer by its signs, like flowers in bloom.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Speaking and Listening

Debate

Assignment Malamud ends this story without revealing Leo and Stella's fate. Divide into two teams. Conduct a debate on whether Malamud seems to imply that the couple's match will succeed or fail. Use examples from the text to support your argument.

Prepare Evidence—and how you use it—is key to a successful debate. Organize your arguments and evidence in a chart like the one below. First, list your major points and the evidence from the text that supports them. Then list your opponents' potential arguments and evidence to counter those claims.

My Position:
Arguments for my position	Evidence
Potential opposing arguments	Counter-evidence

Debate Use your chart to help you defend your points with specific examples. When your opponents present their side, listen carefully so you can challenge their arguments with counter-arguments and evidence in support of these counter-arguments. This will both weaken their position and strengthen your own.

Evaluate Write one paragraph evaluating your individual and team performance. Write another paragraph evaluating your opponents' performance. Conclude with a few statements about where you succeeded, what you learned, and how you might do things differently next time.

Speaking and Listening

Use these criteria when evaluating students' participation in the debate:

- Did the student effectively present evidence in support of his or her position?
- Did the student anticipate the opposing arguments and find evidence to refute them?
- Did the student listen carefully to the opposing arguments in the debate?

For grammar practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 129.

Progress Check

Can students analyze characterization?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 126.

Before You Read

The Rockpile

Meet James Baldwin

(1924–1987)

James Baldwin wrote about controversial topics, such as race, politics, love, and religion. In the course of his career, Baldwin produced a formidable body of work, which holds a place of honor in American literature. To achieve that eminence, he had to overcome many obstacles.

The grandson of slaves, Baldwin grew up in a large, impoverished family in Harlem during the economic hard times of the Great Depression. He once said that he wanted to be rich and famous simply so no one could evict his family again. Alhough he wrote plays, short stories, and novels, Baldwin is perhaps most highly regarded as an essayist. Among his most famous essay collections are Notes of a Native Son, Nobody Knows My Name, and The Fire Next Time. In both his fiction and his nonfiction, he examined issues of African American identity and the sources of racial bigotry in the twentieth-century U.S.

Confronting the Past Baldwin's work first became known to a wide audience when he published his novel Go Tell It on the Mountain in 1953. Baldwin had struggled with the novel for ten years, noting that, "In a sense, I wrote to redeem my father. I had to understand the forces, the experience, the life that shaped him before I could grow up myself, before I could become a writer." Baldwin's ability to accept and use the pain of the past—while not being consumed by it—became the basis for much of his work.

Changing Perspectives Baldwin's later work focused primarily on protesting racial inequality. He said, "It is a terrible, an inexorable, law that one cannot deny the humanity of another without diminishing one's own. . . ." Baldwin was also a popular speaker during the civil rights movement of the 1950s and 1960s. His uncompromising honesty and realism, ear for language, and experience as a minister combined to make him a powerful force at the podium.

> "I love America more than any other country in the world, and exactly for this reason, I insist on the right to criticize her perpetually."
>
> —James Baldwin

In 1969 Baldwin moved to France, where he lived for the majority of the rest of his life. In the U.S. Baldwin had never won a major literary prize. In France, he was honored with one of the literary world's most prestigious awards: Commander of the Legion of Honor. When Baldwin died, his body was sent back to Harlem and buried only a few blocks from the house where he was born. More than 5,000 mourners gathered to pay their respects to the man who once said, "An artist is here not to give you answers, but to ask you questions."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about James Baldwin, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers:
Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Selection Launcher

Selection Focus
Transparency 60

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 87

Or say: Think about the spoken and unspoken rules of our school. What are the consequences of breaking or "bending" these rules?

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students, pp. 213–226
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 213–226
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 213–226

Selection Skills

The Rockpile

Literary Elements
- Foil (SE pp. 960, 961, 963, 965, 966, 968)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Character Sketch (SE p. 968)
- Sequence Chart (TE p. 962)
- Double Negatives (TE p. 964)

Reading Skills
- Make Generalizations About Characters (SE pp. 960–964, 967, 968)
- Paraphrase (TE p. 966)

Vocabulary Skills
- Analogies (SE p. 968)
- Intensity Level (TE p. 960)

Listening/Speaking/ Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 966; TE p. 965)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Two brothers, John and Roy, sit on their fire escape and stare at the rockpile—a natural rock outcropping where the children of the neighborhood play. Their parents forbid the brothers to join in, but Roy, who is younger, sneaks away to the rockpile and is injured. Shortly before their father returns home from work, the reader learns that John is his stepson. Their father treats his wife and John harshly, blaming them for Roy's injury.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 132–137.

Vocabulary

Intensity Level Explain that one way of learning how to use a word is to understand its strength or intensity. For example, grapple is slightly more intense than wrestle, but it is not as strong as battle. Have students suggest and discuss words that are less strong and stronger than the vocabulary words. (e.g., linger, loiter, afflict; frightened, intimidated, threatened; absorbed, engrossed, obsessed; happy, jubilant, ecstatic)

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

What would you risk to keep your word to someone? Freewrite for a few minutes about a time when you kept a promise even though it was difficult.

Build Background

This story is set in the New York City neighborhood of Harlem. "The Rockpile" may well be set near the first home Baldwin remembered living in, at Park Avenue and 131st Street. Like John in the story, Baldwin was the oldest child in a large family. His mother married David Baldwin three years after James's birth, so, like John, young Baldwin was a stepson. Like the father in the story, David Baldwin was a Protestant minister and a stern man who did not like his children playing in the streets.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Life in the City

As you read, ask yourself, What details about the setting and characters provide information about urban life in the Depression-era United States?

Literary Element Foil

A foil is a minor character whose contrast with a main character highlights particular traits of that main character. As you read, ask yourself, How is your understanding of the main character expanded as a result of the presence of the foil?

Reading Strategy Make Generalizations About Characters

A generalization is a broad conclusion drawn from specific details. As you read, ask yourself, What can you conclude about the family members in "The Rockpile"?

Tip: Take Notes In a chart, record details and generalizations about the main characters.

Details	Generalizations
Roy gazed at the street, wishing he had wings; John was afraid of the rockpile.	Roy and John have different personalities.

Learning Objectives

For pages 959–968

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing a foil character.

Reading: Making generalizations about characters.

Writing: Writing a character sketch.

Vocabulary

grapple (grap´ əl) v. to struggle in hand-to-hand combat; to wrestle; p. 961 The man grappled with his attacker.

loiter (loi´ tər) v. to stand or linger idly or aimlessly about a place; p. 962 We thought it best not to loiter in the empty street.

intimidated (in tim´ ə dāt´ əd) adj. made timid or fearful; frightened into submission or inaction; p. 962 When the large man pushed me, I was so intimidated that I was speechless.

engrossed (en grōst´) adj. fully attentive to; completely engaged in; absorbed; p. 963 I spoke to my mother, but she was engrossed in the newspaper and did not look up.

jubilant (jo͞o´ bə lənt) adj. extremely happy; triumphantly joyful; p. 963 The people were jubilant when they heard that the war had ended.

Writing Practice

Foils Students may disagree about who is the main character in the story. Both John and Roy play important roles, and it could be said that each one is a foil for the other. Help students anticipate the contrasts between the two boys by having them make a two-column chart where they can record the ways in which each boy is a foil for the other. Model how to fill in the chart as shown.

Roy	John
attracted to the rockpile	afraid of the rockpile

★ Harlem, 1942. Jacob Lawrence. Gouache on composition board, 21¾ x 29¾ in. Private collection. The Jacob and Gwendolyn Lawrence Foundation, New York.

The Rockpile

James Baldwin

Across the street from their house, in an empty lot between two houses, stood the rockpile. It was a strange place to find a mass of natural rock jutting out of the ground; and someone, probably Aunt Florence, had once told them that the rock was there and could not be taken away because without it the subway cars underground would fly apart, killing all the people. This, touching on some natural mystery concerning the surface and the center of the earth, was far too intriguing an explanation to be challenged, and it invested the rockpile, moreover, with such mysterious importance that Roy felt it to be his right, not to say his duty, to play there.

Other boys were to be seen there each afternoon after school and all day Saturday and Sunday. They fought on the rockpile. Surefooted, dangerous, and reckless, they rushed each other and grappled on the heights, sometimes disappearing down the other side in a confusion of dust and screams and upended, flying feet. "It's a wonder they don't kill themselves," their mother said, watching sometimes from the fire escape. "You children stay away from there, you hear me?" Though she said "children," she was looking at Roy, where he sat beside John on the fire escape. "The good Lord knows," she continued, "I don't want you to come home bleeding like a hog every day the Lord sends."

1 Life in the City What does this superstition reveal about how the residents view their neighborhood?

2 Make Generalizations About Characters From this detail, what generalizations might you make about Roy?

Foil What does this detail suggest about the difference between the two brothers? 3

Vocabulary

grapple (grap´ əl) v. to struggle in hand-to-hand combat; to wrestle

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate Point out that Baldwin uses dialect, which varies among regions and cultural groups. Pair English learners with fluent English speakers to create charts like the one shown. Have them list dialect from "The Rockpile" in one column and standard English equivalents in the other.

Dialect	Standard English

Teach

Big Idea 1

Life in the City Answer: They see it as a potentially dangerous place.

Reading Strategy 2

Make Generalizations About Characters Answer: He is strong-willed, with a keen sense of adventure.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Make sure students understand the words specific, general, generalize, and generalization. Have them use these words as they discuss the characters.

Literary Element 3

Foil Answer: It is Roy who usually gets into trouble.

View the Art ★

Jacob Lawrence (1917–2000) is best known for works dealing with themes in African American history.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 4.6
DRP: 59
Lexile: 850

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Generalizations About Characters Answer: The brothers fear their father and view him as an oppressive force.

Literary Element 2

Foreshadowing Ask: What purposes does this anecdote serve in the story? (It establishes the setting of the story and also suggests that if Roy sneaks out, he may get hurt, like Richard. It is likely that John and Roy know Richard's fate, so the anecdote enhances the reader's understanding of their views.)

Cultural History ☆

Sister McCandless Many communities, including some African American communities, use the term sister to refer to any female who shares their values or culture.

Roy shifted impatiently, and continued to stare at the street, as though in this gazing he might somehow acquire wings. John said nothing. He had not really been spoken to: he was afraid of the rockpile and of the boys who played there.

Each Saturday morning John and Roy sat on the fire escape and watched the forbidden street below. Sometimes their mother sat in the room behind them, sewing, or dressing their younger sister, or nursing the baby, Paul. The sun fell across them and across the fire escape with a high, benevolent indifference; below them, men and women, and boys and girls, sinners all, loitered; sometimes one of the church-members passed and saw them and waved. Then, for the moment that they waved decorously back, they were intimidated. They watched the saint, man or woman, until he or she had disappeared from sight. The passage of one of the redeemed made them consider, however vacantly, the wickedness of the street, their own latent wickedness in sitting where they sat; and made them think of their father, who came home early on Saturdays and who would soon be turning this corner and entering the dark hall below them.

But until he came to end their freedom, they sat, watching and longing above the street. At the end of the street nearest their house was the bridge which spanned the Harlem River[1] and led to a city called the Bronx;[2] which was where Aunt Florence lived. Nevertheless, when they saw her coming, she did not come from the bridge, but from the opposite end of the street. This, weakly, to their minds, she explained by saying that she had taken the subway, not wishing to walk, and that, besides, she did not live in that section of the Bronx. Knowing that the Bronx was across the river, they did not believe this story ever, but, adopting toward her their father's attitude, assumed that she had just left some sinful place which she dared not name, as, for example, a movie palace.

In the summertime boys swam in the river, diving off the wooden dock, or wading in from the garbage-heavy bank. Once a boy, whose name was Richard, drowned in the river. His mother had not known where he was; she had even come to their house, to ask if he was there. Then, in the evening, at six o'clock, they had heard from the street a woman screaming and wailing; and they ran to the windows and looked out. Down the street came the woman, Richard's mother, screaming, her face raised to the sky and tears running down her face. A woman walked beside her, trying to make her quiet and trying to hold her up. Behind them walked a man, Richard's father, with Richard's body in his arms. There were two white policemen walking in the gutter, who did not seem to know what should be done. Richard's father and Richard were wet, and Richard's body lay across his father's arms like a cotton baby. The woman's screaming filled all the street; cars slowed down and the people in the cars stared; people opened their windows and looked out and came rushing out of doors to stand in the gutter, watching. Then the small procession disappeared within the house which stood beside the rockpile. Then, "Lord, Lord, Lord!" cried Elizabeth, their mother, and slammed the window down.

One Saturday, an hour before his father would be coming home, Roy was wounded on the rockpile and brought screaming upstairs. He and John had been sitting on the fire escape and their mother had gone into the kitchen to sip tea with Sister McCandless. By and by Roy became bored and sat beside John in restless silence; and John began drawing into his schoolbook a newspaper advertisement which featured

---

1. The Harlem River separates the Bronx and Manhattan, two boroughs of New York City.
2. The Bronx is actually one of five boroughs, or divisions, that make up New York City. It is not a separate city.

1 Make Generalizations About Characters From this detail, what generalizations might you make about how the brothers view their father?

Vocabulary

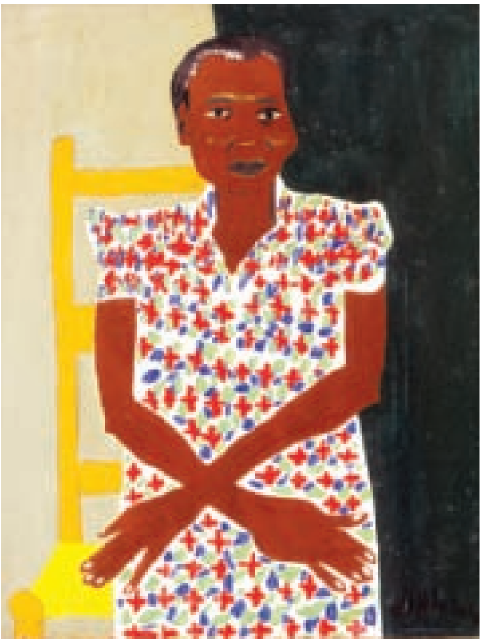
loiter (loi′ tər) v. to stand or linger idly or aimlessly about a place intimidated (in tim′ ə dāt′əd) adj. made timid or fearful; frightened into submission or inaction

Writing Practice

Sequence Explain that events in this story are told in two tracks of sequence. The first is an overarching narrative that includes stories from the past, such as the one about Richard. The second is an immediate narrative of one day in the life of Roy and John. Have students create a sequence chart based on the immediate narrative (with entries like "John and Roy sit on fire escape, looking at rockpile") but including, in parallel entries, information from the larger narrative (like "Their mother has cautioned them not to play there").



Woman in Calico, 1944. William H. Johnson. Oil on paperboard, 26½ x 20½ in. Smithsonian American Art Museum. Gift of the Harmon Foundation. ★

a new electric locomotive. Some friends of Roy passed beneath the fire escape and called him. Roy began to fidget, yelling down to them through the bars. Then a silence fell. John looked up. Roy stood looking at him.

"I'm going downstairs," he said.

"You better stay where you is, boy. You know Mama don't want you going downstairs."

"I be right back. She won't even know I'm gone, less you run and tell her."

"I ain't got to tell her. What's going to stop her from coming in here and looking out the window?"

"She's talking," Roy said. He started into the house.

"But Daddy's going to be home soon!"

"I be back before that. What you all the time got to be so scared for?" He was already in the house and he now turned, leaning on the windowsill, to swear impatiently, "I be back in five minutes."

John watched him sourly as he carefully unlocked the door and disappeared. In a moment he saw him on the sidewalk with his friends. He did not dare to go and tell his mother that Roy had left the fire escape because he had practically promised not to. He started to shout, Remember, you said five minutes! but one of Roy's friends was looking up at the fire escape. John looked down at his schoolbook: he became engrossed again in the problem of the locomotive.

When he looked up again he did not know how much time had passed, but now there was a gang fight on the rockpile. Dozens of boys fought each other in the harsh sun: clambering up the rocks and battling hand to hand, scuffed shoes sliding on the slippery rock; filling the bright air with curses and jubilant cries. They filled the air, too, with flying weapons: stones, sticks, tin cans, garbage, whatever could be picked up and thrown. John watched in a kind of absent amazement—until he remembered that Roy was still downstairs, and that he was one of the boys on the rockpile. Then he was afraid; he could not see his brother among the figures in the sun; and he stood up, leaning over the fire-escape railing. Then Roy appeared from the other side of the rocks; John saw that his shirt was torn; he was laughing. He moved until he stood at the very top of the rockpile. Then, something, an empty tin can, flew out of the air and hit him on the forehead, just above the eye. Immediately, one side of Roy's face ran with blood, he fell and rolled on his face down the rocks. Then for a moment there was no movement at all, no sound, the sun, arrested, lay on the street and the sidewalk and the arrested boys. Then someone screamed or shouted; boys engrossed (en grōst´) adj. fully attentive to; completely engaged in; absorbed jubilant (jo͞o´ bə lənt) adj. extremely happy; triumphantly joyful

Vocabulary

3 Foil What does Roy's statement to his brother suggest about the nature of their relationship?

Teach

Literary Element 3

Foil Answer: Roy knows that John disapproves of his actions, but he trusts John not to betray him.

Point out that Roy shifts responsibility for his own actions to John. Ask: How does Roy's statement make John feel? (He probably feels trapped.)

View the Art ★

William H. Johnson (1901–1970) grew up in South Carolina but later came to Harlem while studying at New York's National Academy of Design. Johnson is known for his poignant depictions of African American life.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Strategic Help students having difficulty with the dialogue. Ask volunteers to read the conversation between Roy and John on this page. Have students read each sentence as it is written, and then say the sentence in standard English. Model with John's first statement. Say: John says, "You better stay where you is . . . ." I would paraphrase this to say, "You'd better stay where you are." Have students continue with the rest of the conversation.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Life in the City Answer: There is a support network in the community; people look out for one another.

Reading Strategy 2

Make Generalizations About Characters Answer: Sister McCandless blames John for the accident because she holds him responsible for his younger brother.

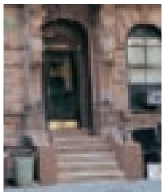
began to run away, down the street, toward the bridge. The figure on the ground, having caught its breath and felt its own blood, began to shout. John cried, "Mama! Mama!" and ran inside.

"Don't fret, don't fret," panted Sister McCandless as they rushed down the dark, narrow, swaying stairs, "don't fret. Ain't a boy been born don't get his knocks every now and again. Lord!" They hurried into the sun. A man had picked Roy up and now walked slowly toward them. One or two boys sat silent on their stoops; at either end of the street there was a group of boys watching. "He ain't hurt bad," the man said, "Wouldn't be making this kind of noise if he was hurt real bad."



Visual Vocabulary
A stoop is a structure at the entrance of a building or house, consisting of stairs and a raised platform.

Elizabeth, trembling, reached out to take Roy, but Sister McCandless, bigger, calmer, took him from the man and threw him over her shoulder as she once might have handled a sack of cotton. "God bless you," she said to the man, "God bless you, son." Roy was still screaming. Elizabeth stood behind Sister McCandless to stare at his bloody face.

"It's just a flesh wound," the man kept saying, "just broke the skin, that's all." They were moving across the sidewalk, toward the house. John, not now afraid of the staring boys, looked toward the corner to see if his father was yet in sight.

Upstairs, they hushed Roy's crying. They bathed the blood away, to find, just above the left eyebrow, the jagged, superficial scar. "Lord, have mercy," murmured Elizabeth, "another inch and it would've been his eye." And she looked with apprehension toward the clock.

"Ain't it the truth," said Sister McCandless, busy with bandages and iodine.

"When did he go downstairs?" his mother asked at last.

Sister McCandless now sat fanning herself in the easy chair, at the head of the sofa where Roy lay, bound and silent. She paused for a moment to look sharply at John. John stood near the window, holding the newspaper advertisement and the drawing he had done.

"We was sitting on the fire escape," he said. "Some boys he knew called him."

"When?"

"He said he'd be back in five minutes."

"Why didn't you tell me he was downstairs?"

He looked at his hands, clasping his notebook, and did not answer.

"Boy," said Sister McCandless, "you hear your mother a-talking to you?"

He looked at his mother. He repeated:

"He said he'd be back in five minutes."

"He said he'd be back in five minutes," said Sister McCandless with scorn, "don't look to me like that's no right answer. You's the man of the house, you supposed to look after your baby brothers and sisters—you ain't supposed to let them run off and get half-killed. But I expect," she added, rising from the chair, dropping the cardboard fan, "your Daddy'll make you tell the truth. Your Ma's way too soft with you."

He did not look at her, but at the fan where it lay in the dark red, depressed seat where she had been. The fan advertised a pomade[3] for the hair and showed a brown woman and her baby, both with glistening hair, smiling happily at each other.

"Honey," said Sister McCandless, "I got to be moving along. Maybe I drop in later tonight. I don't reckon you going to be at Tarry Service tonight?"

---

[3] Pomade is a perfumed ointment, especially one used as a hair dressing.

1 Life in the City What does the man's action convey about the community that the characters live in?

Make Generalizations About Characters From this detail, what generalizations can you make about Sister McCandless's attitude toward John? 2

Grammar Practice

SMALL GROUP

Double Negatives In this story, the characters' dialect includes the use of double negatives, as when Sister McCandless says "ain't nothing but a scratch." Explain that a clause should not include more than one negative. List common negatives, such as none, never, nothing, hardly, scarcely, and barely. Students should also recognize negative contractions. Stress that many of the double negatives in this story are formed with ain't, which is both nonstandard English and a negative. Have student pairs identify and record story sentences that contain double negatives and then rewrite the sentences in standard English.

Tarry Service was the prayer meeting held every Saturday night at church to strengthen believers and prepare the church for the coming of the Holy Ghost on Sunday.

"I don't reckon," said Elizabeth. She stood up; she and Sister McCandless kissed each other on the cheek. "But you be sure to remember me in your prayers."

"I surely will do that." She paused, with her hand on the door knob, and looked down at Roy and laughed. "Poor little man," she said, "reckon he'll be content to sit on the fire escape now."

Elizabeth laughed with her. "It sure ought to be a lesson to him. You don't reckon," she asked nervously, still smiling, "he going to keep that scar, do you?"

"Lord, no," said Sister McCandless, "ain't nothing but a scratch. I declare, Sister Grimes, you worse than a child. Another couple of weeks and you won't be able to see no scar. No, you go on about your housework, honey, and thank the Lord it weren't no worse." She opened the door; they heard the sound of feet on the stairs. "I expect that's the Reverend," said Sister McCandless, placidly, "I bet he going to raise cain."[4]

"Maybe it's Florence," Elizabeth said. "Sometimes she get here about this time." They stood in the doorway, staring, while the steps reached the landing below and began again climbing to their floor. "No," said Elizabeth then, "that ain't her walk. That's Gabriel."

"Well, I'll just go on," said Sister McCandless, "and kind of prepare his mind." She pressed Elizabeth's hand as she spoke and started into the hall, leaving the door behind her slightly ajar. Elizabeth turned slowly back into the room. Roy did not open his eyes, or move; but she knew that he was not sleeping; he wished to delay until the last possible moment any contact with his father. John put his newspaper and his notebook on the table and stood, leaning on the table, staring at her.

Funky Soho, 2002. Patti Mollica. Oil on canvas. Private collection. ★

"It wasn't my fault," he said. "I couldn't stop him from going downstairs."

"No," she said, "you ain't got nothing to worry about. You just tell your Daddy the truth."

He looked directly at her, and she turned to the window, staring into the street. What was Sister McCandless saying? Then from her bedroom she heard Delilah's thin wail and she turned, frowning, looking toward the bedroom and toward the still open door. She knew that John was watching her. Delilah continued to wail, she thought, angrily, Now that girl's getting too big for that, but she feared that Delilah would awaken Paul and she hurried into the bedroom. She tried to soothe Delilah back to sleep. Then she heard the front door open and close—too

---

[4] To raise cain is an idiom meaning "to make a great disturbance" or "to lose one's temper."

3 Foil What do these words tell you about Sister McCandless's different attitudes toward the two brothers?

Teach

Literary Element | 3

Foil Answer: Sister McCandless sympathizes with Roy and feels affection for him. She shows no affection for John and blames him for the accident.

ADVANCED Have students write a paragraph voicing their own opinion about whether John should be held responsible for Roy's actions.

View the Art ★

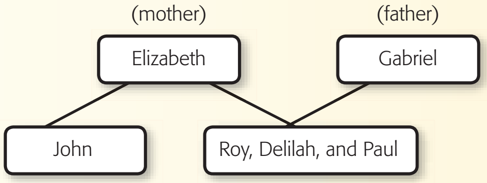
Patti Mollica says the world is "a mosaic of shapes and colors."

Ask: How is this view reflected in her painting? (Students' responses will vary but should cite specific aspects of the illustration.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging There are just a few characters in "The Rockpile," but their relationships can be confusing. Have students create a web diagram to identify characters and their relationships to John.



Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Generalizations About Characters John is perceived as an outsider because he is Gabriel's stepson, not his natural child. John is also considered tainted by "his mother's days in sin"—a reference to his illegitimate birth. Discuss John's anxiety about his father's return. Ask: How do you think Gabriel feels about John? (Possible responses: resentful; angry; unaccepting)

Literary Element 2

Foil Answer: She is very calm and controlled in the face of Gabriel's extreme anger.

APPROACHING Ask: What does Elizabeth do when Gabriel speaks harshly to her? (She ignores him and just goes on voicing her thoughts.)

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may say that the contrast between the bright colors and the pale background in the painting reflects the powerful contrasts depicted in the story.

Church on Lenox Avenue, 1939–1940. William H. Johnson. Tempera on paper, 24 x 18⅛ in. Smithsonian American Art Museum. Gift of the Harmon Foundation.

View the Art When William H. Johnson returned to New York after several years living abroad, he brought with him the influence of both modern art and Scandinavian folk art, which he melded with his African-American heritage. What connections can you find between this image and the story? ★ loud, Delilah raised her voice, with an exasperated sigh Elizabeth picked the child up. Her child and Gabriel's, her children and Gabriel's: 1 Roy, Delilah, Paul. Only John was nameless and a stranger, living, unalterable testimony to his mother's days in sin.

"What happened?" Gabriel demanded. He stood, enormous, in the center of the room, his black lunchbox dangling from his hand, staring at the sofa where Roy lay. John stood just before him, it seemed to her astonished vision just below him, beneath his fist, his heavy shoe. The child stared at the man in fascination and terror—when a girl down home she had seen rabbits stand so paralyzed before the barking dog. She hurried past Gabriel to the sofa, feeling the weight of Delilah in her arms like the weight of a shield, and stood over Roy, saying:

"Now, ain't a thing to get upset about, Gabriel. This boy sneaked downstairs while I had my back turned and got hisself hurt a little. He's alright now."

Roy, as though in confirmation, now opened his eyes and looked gravely at his father. Gabriel dropped his lunchbox with a clatter and knelt by the sofa.

"How you feel, son? Tell your Daddy what happened?"

Roy opened his mouth to speak and then, relapsing into panic, began to cry. His father held him by the shoulder.

"You don't want to cry. You's Daddy's little man. Tell your Daddy what happened."

"He went downstairs," said Elizabeth, "where he didn't have no business to be, and got to fighting with them bad boys playing on that rockpile. That's what happened and it's a mercy it weren't nothing worse."

He looked up at her. "Can't you let this boy answer me for hisself?"

Ignoring this, she went on, more gently: "He got cut on the forehead, but it ain't nothing to worry about."

"You call a doctor? How you know it ain't nothing to worry about?"

"Is you got money to be throwing away on doctors? No, I ain't called no doctor. Ain't nothing wrong with my eyes that I can't tell whether he's hurt bad or not. He got a fright more'n anything else, and you ought to pray God it teaches him a lesson."

"You got a lot to say now," he said, "but I'll have me something to say in a minute. I'll be wanting to know when all this happened, what you was doing with your eyes then." He turned back to Roy, who had lain quietly sobbing eyes wide open and body held rigid: and who now, at his father's touch, remembered the height, the sharp, sliding rock beneath his feet, the sun, the explosion of the sun, his plunge into

Foil How might Elizabeth be said to act as Gabriel's foil at this point in the story? 2

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Paraphrase Explain that paraphrasing can be useful for comprehension, especially if a text seems confusing. Paraphrasing means restating the text in one's own words. It is different from summarizing in that paraphrasing should include all parts of the text, not just main ideas and key details. Have students read the end of the story and work in pairs to paraphrase what happens at the end of the story. They should work together to agree on the paraphrase and then discuss the significance of the ending.

darkness and his salty blood; and recoiled, beginning to scream, as his father touched his forehead. “Hold still, hold still,” crooned his father, shaking, “hold still. Don’t cry. Daddy ain’t going to hurt you, he just wants to see this bandage, see what they’ve done to his little man.” But Roy continued to scream and would not be still and Gabriel dared not lift the bandage for fear of hurting him more. And he looked at Elizabeth in fury: “Can’t you put that child down and help me with this boy? John, take your baby sister from your mother—don’t look like neither of you got good sense.”

John took Delilah and sat down with her in the easy chair. His mother bent over Roy, and held him still, while his father, carefully—but still Roy screamed—lifted the bandage and stared at the wound. Roy’s sobs began to lessen. Gabriel re-adjusted the bandage. “You see,” said Elizabeth, finally, “he ain’t nowhere near dead.”

3 “It sure ain’t your fault that he ain’t dead.” He and Elizabeth considered each other for a moment in silence. “He came mightly close to losing an eye. Course, his eyes ain’t as big as your’n, so I reckon you don’t think it matters so much.” At this her face hardened; he smiled. “Lord, have mercy,” he said, “you think you ever going to learn to do right? Where was you when all this happened? Who let him go downstairs?”

“Ain’t nobody let him go downstairs, he just went. He got a head just like his father, it got to be broken before it’ll bow. I was in the kitchen.”

“Where was Johnnie?”

“He was in here?”

“Where?”

“He was on the fire escape.”

“Didn’t he know Roy was downstairs?”

“I reckon.”

“What you mean, you reckon? He ain’t got your big eyes for nothing, does he?” He looked over at John. “Boy, you see your brother go downstairs?”

“Gabriel, ain’t no sense in trying to blame Johnnie. You know right well if you have trouble making Roy behave, he ain’t going to listen to his brother. He don’t hardly listen to me.”

“How come you didn’t tell your mother Roy was downstairs?”

John said nothing, staring at the blanket which covered Delilah.

“Boy, you hear me? You want me to take a strap to you?” ☆

“No, you ain’t,” she said. “You ain’t going to take no strap to this boy, not today you ain’t. Ain’t a soul to blame for Roy’s lying up there now but you—you because you done spoiled him so that he thinks he can do just anything and get away with it. I’m here to tell you that ain’t no way to raise no child. You don’t pray to the Lord to help you do better than you been doing, you going to live to shed bitter tears that the Lord didn’t take his soul today.” And she was trembling. She moved, unseeing, toward John and took Delilah from his arms. She looked back at Gabriel, who had risen, who stood near the sofa, staring at her. And she found in his face not fury alone, which would not have surprised her; but hatred so deep as to become insupportable in its lack of personality. His eyes were struck alive, unmoving, blind with malevolence—she felt, like the pull of the earth at her feet, his longing to witness her perdition.[5] Again, as though it might be propitiation,[6] she moved the child in her arms. And at this his eyes changed, he looked at Elizabeth, the mother of his children, the helpmeet given by the Lord. Then her eyes clouded; she moved to leave the room; her foot struck the lunchbox lying on the floor.

“John,” she said, “pick up your father’s lunchbox like a good boy.”

She heard, behind her, his scrambling movement as he left the easy chair, the scrape and jangle of the lunchbox as he picked it up, bending his dark head near the toe of his father’s heavy shoe.

---

[5] Perdition (pər dish′ ən) means “the loss of one’s soul and of heavenly salvation” or “eternal damnation.”

[6] Propitiation is a pleasing act intended to soothe, pacify, or win favor.

Make Generalizations About Characters From this detail, what generalizations can you make about Gabriel’s character? 4

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Review that words’ connotations are their associated meanings. Students can use an understanding of connotations to analyze the characters and relationships in the story. Have students list the relationships between pairs of characters, such as John and Roy, Gabriel and John, and Gabriel and Elizabeth. Ask students to list some words that describe these relationships. Have students share their lists and explain the connotations of the words included.

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Make Inferences Have students reread this passage. Ask: How would you describe the relationship between Elizabeth and Gabriel? (The relationship is strained. Gabriel is close to abusive toward Elizabeth; she tries to fight back.)

APPROACHING Say: Find one example in the text of Elizabeth standing up to Gabriel. (She says, “No, you ain’t” when Gabriel threatens to take a strap to John.)

Reading Strategy 4

Make Generalizations About Characters Answer: Gabriel is a deeply troubled character who preaches love as a Christian minister but is filled with hatred.

Cultural History ☆

Corporal Punishment

People disagree about the acceptability of physical, or corporal, punishment of children. In the past, corporal punishment was widely accepted as a way to discipline children. Nowadays, most child rearing experts advise against it.

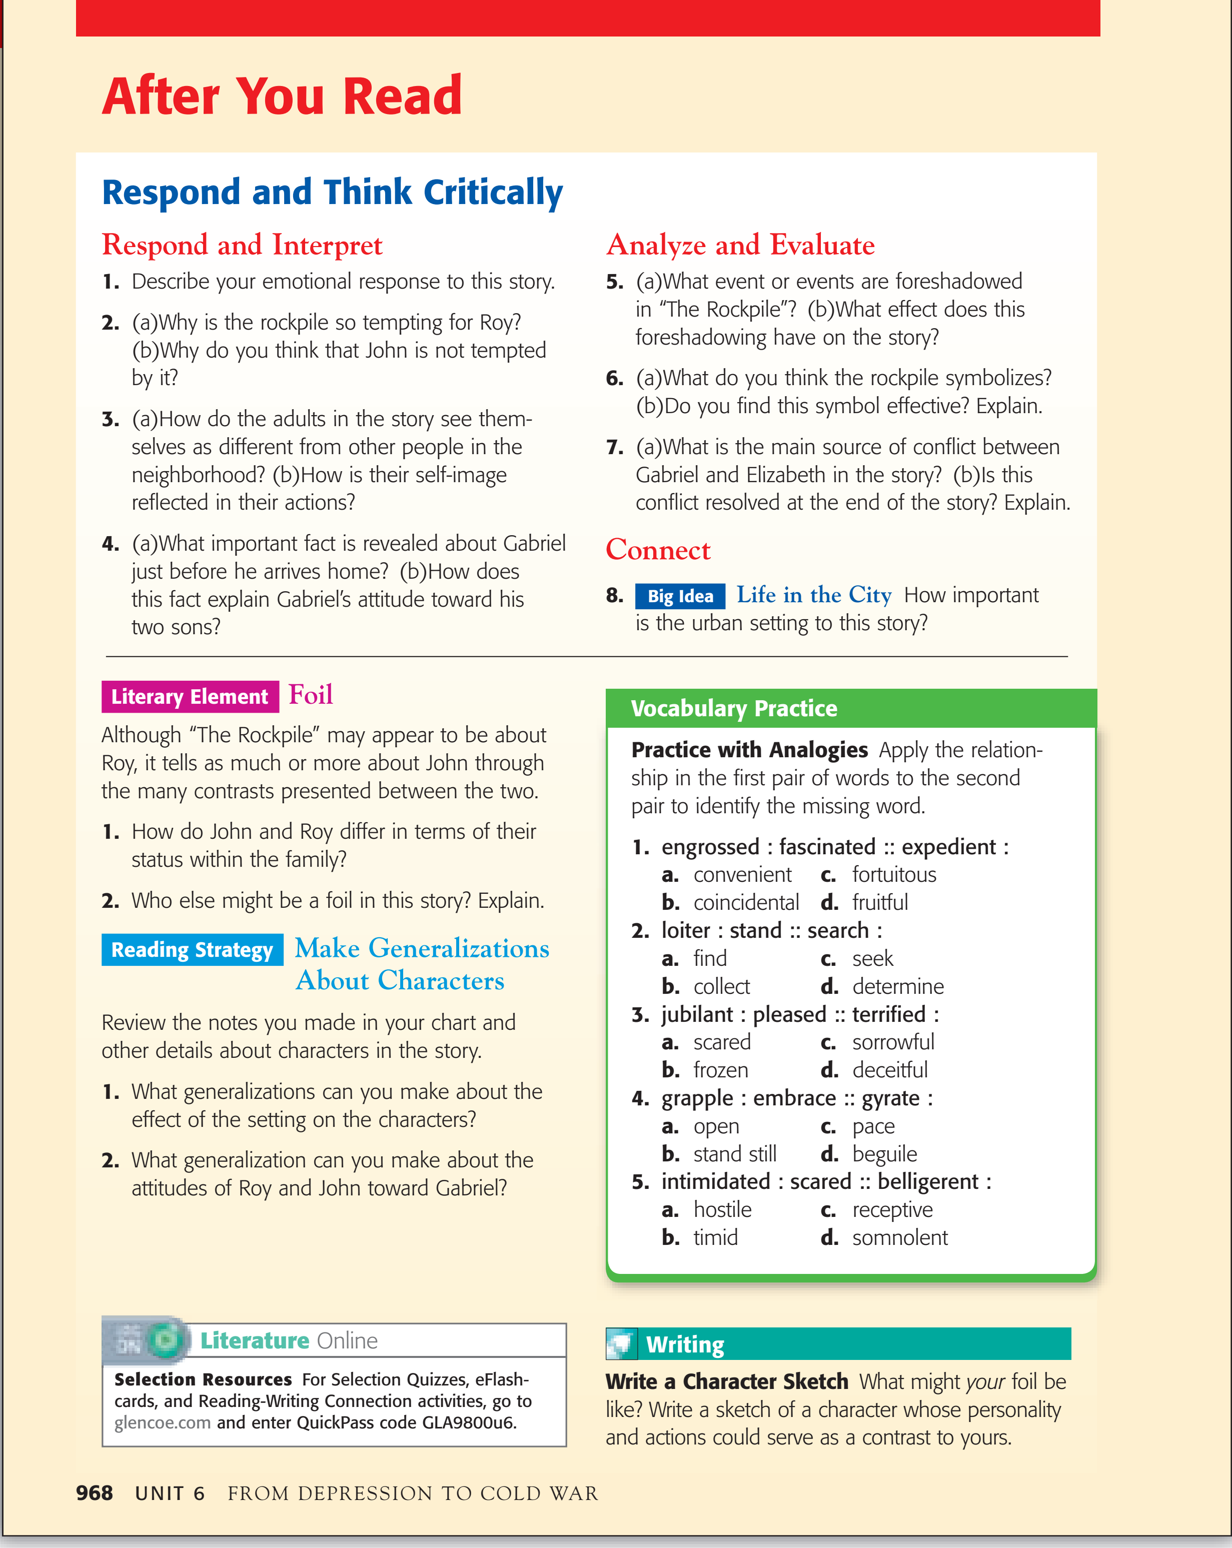
To check students’ understanding of the selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 143.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students may say the story is depressing; John's father treats him unfairly; the family tension is disturbing.
2. (a) The rockpile represents forbidden pleasures. (b) Perhaps John's spirit has been suppressed by Gabriel.
3. (a) The parents and Sister McCandless see themselves as religious and superior. (b) They keep Roy and John away from other children.
4. (a) He is Roy's father and John's stepfather. (b) He favors Roy because Roy is his natural child.
5. (a) The father's return home and his harsh actions (b) It creates suspense.
6. (a) Freedom from the stifling home (b) Yes, because there are no rules for fighting one's way to the top
7. (a) Elizabeth defends John from Gabriel's unjust attacks and herself from his anger. (b) No, the story ends in a stalemate.
8. The urban setting is fundamental because the neighborhood's dangers intensify the family's conflicts. The author paints a clear picture of the struggle to maintain human dignity in this difficult environment.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 253–254.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Describe your emotional response to this story.
2. (a)Why is the rockpile so tempting for Roy? (b)Why do you think that John is not tempted by it?
3. (a)How do the adults in the story see themselves as different from other people in the neighborhood? (b)How is their self-image reflected in their actions?
4. (a)What important fact is revealed about Gabriel just before he arrives home? (b)How does this fact explain Gabriel's attitude toward his two sons?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)What event or events are foreshadowed in "The Rockpile"? (b)What effect does this foreshadowing have on the story?
6. (a)What do you think the rockpile symbolizes? (b)Do you find this symbol effective? Explain.
7. (a)What is the main source of conflict between Gabriel and Elizabeth in the story? (b)Is this conflict resolved at the end of the story? Explain.

Connect

8. Big Idea Life in the City How important is the urban setting to this story?

Literary Element Foil

Although "The Rockpile" may appear to be about Roy, it tells as much or more about John through the many contrasts presented between the two.

1. How do John and Roy differ in terms of their status within the family?
2. Who else might be a foil in this story? Explain.

Reading Strategy Make Generalizations About Characters

Review the notes you made in your chart and other details about characters in the story.

1. What generalizations can you make about the effect of the setting on the characters?
2. What generalization can you make about the attitudes of Roy and John toward Gabriel?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Analogies Apply the relationship in the first pair of words to the second pair to identify the missing word.

1. engrossed : fascinated :: expedient :
   a. convenient c. fortuitous
   b. coincidental d. fruitful
2. loiter : stand :: search :
   a. find c. seek
   b. collect d. determine
3. jubilant : pleased :: terrified :
   a. scared c. sorrowful
   b. frozen d. deceitful
4. grapple : embrace :: gyrate :
   a. open c. pace
   b. stand still d. beguile
5. intimidated : scared :: belligerent :
   a. hostile c. receptive
   b. timid d. somnolent

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Writing

Write a Character Sketch What might your foil be like? Write a sketch of a character whose personality and actions could serve as a contrast to yours.

Literary Element

1. Gabriel favors his biological son, Roy.
2. Possible answer: Angry Gabriel is a foil to kind Elizabeth.

Progress Check

Can students recognize a foil?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 138.

Reading Strategy

1. The setting makes the adults overprotective of the children. John fears the rockpile, but Roy sees it as an escape.
2. Both brothers fear Gabriel.

Vocabulary

1. a 2. c 3. a 4. b 5. a

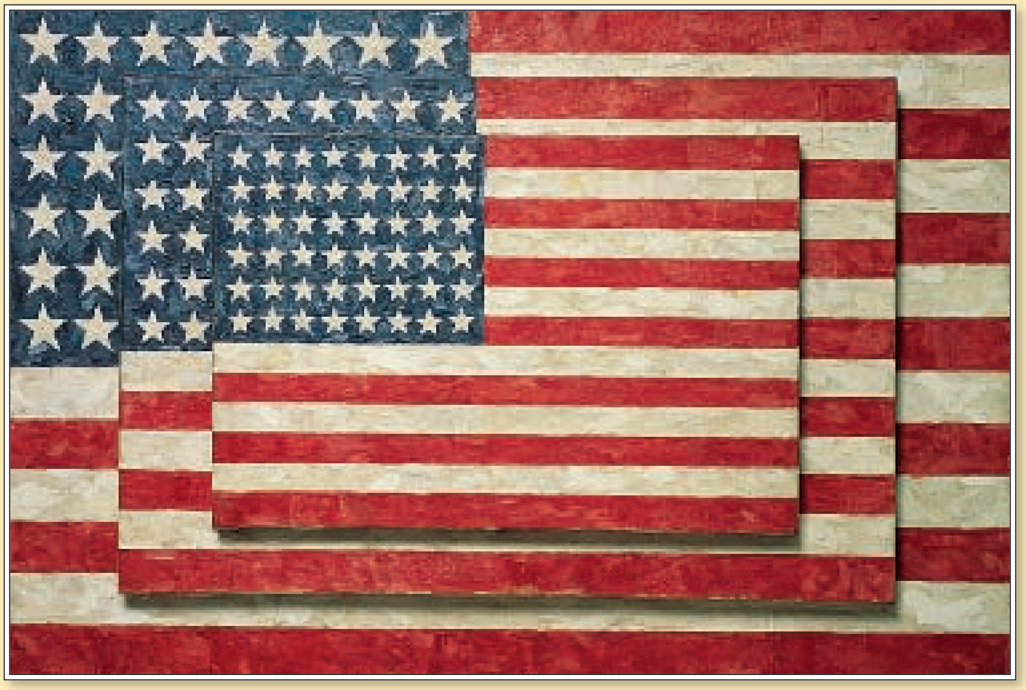
Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' writing:

- Does the character sketch describe a foil?
- Does the character sketch include details about the foil's physical and psychological traits?

PART 2

The United States and the World



Three Flags, 1958. Jasper Johns. Encaustic on canvas, 30⅞ x 45 x 5 in. Fiftieth Anniversary Gift of the Gilman Foundation, Inc., The Lauder Foundation, A. Alfred Taubman, an anonymous donor, and purchase 80.32

View the Art Johns's painting shows three American flags layered on top of one another. Why might the artist have chosen to depict the flag in this way? ★

> "We must be the great arsenal of democracy." 1
>
> —Franklin D. Roosevelt, radio broadcast, 1940

Analyze and Extend

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Explain that although the United States was not yet at war, World War II had already begun in Europe. Ask: How could the United States have been like an arsenal of democracy in World War II? (During World War II, democracies around the world were threatened by Axis advances. Roosevelt suggested that the United States could provide weapons to defend democracy.)

For additional support for English Learners, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 146.

View the Art ★

Answer: Johns may have wanted to show how the country's influence was growing.

American artist Jasper Johns (1930–) transforms normally flat or two-dimensional objects, such as flags, maps, and letters, into eye-catching artworks by painting or presenting them in original ways. Johns's goal is to make viewers see ordinary things in a new way.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain that the quote on this page comes from a radio broadcast made by President Roosevelt on December 29, 1940. At that time, the American public was reluctant to get involved in the war. Roosevelt wanted to persuade Americans that supplying weapons to Britain and its allies was necessary in order to protect democracy. Ask: What words in Roosevelt's speech appeal to people's emotions? (must, great, democracy)

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 88

Or ask: What qualities do you admire in a leader, and why do you think they are important? (Students may suggest strength of character, intelligence, bravery, and the ability to communicate and inspire.) Have students consider as they read whether Roosevelt personifies the qualities of leadership.

Political History ☆

Presidential Term Limit When George Washington refused to run for President for a third term in 1796, he set an unwritten precedent for presidents to serve only two terms. Franklin Roosevelt broke that rule when he ran for and was elected President four times. Politicians worried that others might follow Roosevelt's lead, so Congress passed the 22nd Amendment in 1947. Ratified in 1951, the amendment officially limited Presidents to serving only two terms.

Before You Read

War Message to Congress

> "Let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself."
>
> —Franklin D. Roosevelt
> First Inaugural Address

Meet Franklin Delano Roosevelt

(1882–1945)

Franklin D. Roosevelt was an intensely competitive and social person. His charismatic demeanor, rich voice, and wide smile expressed confidence and optimism and gave him the power to be very persuasive. In the dark days of the Great Depression and World War II, his buoyant leadership was one of the United States' greatest assets.

Roosevelt was a distant cousin of Theodore Roosevelt, the twenty-sixth president of the United States. He was born into a wealthy New York family and educated at Harvard University and Columbia Law School. While at Harvard, he became acquainted with Theodore Roosevelt's niece, Eleanor. Soon afterward, they married.

Political Gains and Personal Setbacks Shortly after leaving law school, Roosevelt entered politics and won a seat in the New York State Senate. He earned a reputation as a progressive reformer willing to stand up to the party bosses. In 1921, he contracted a fever and soon felt numbness in his legs. He had contracted the disease known as polio. Although there was no cure, Roosevelt refused to give up and began a vigorous exercise program to restore some of his muscle control.

While recovering from polio, Roosevelt depended on his wife to keep his name prominent in the New York Democratic Party. Eleanor Roosevelt became an effective orator, and her efforts during this time kept her husband's political career alive. By the mid-1920s, Franklin Roosevelt was again active in the Democratic Party and was elected governor of New York. While governor, he gained great popularity by cutting taxes for farmers, reducing utility rates, and aiding unemployed New Yorkers.

Roosevelt's popularity paved the way for his presidential win in 1932. Many people in the United States applauded Roosevelt's use of power to help people in economic distress. In the first three months of his presidency, Congress passed fifteen major acts to provide economic relief to the nation, later known as the First New Deal. Roosevelt's popular relief programs helped him win reelection three times. He has the remarkable legacy of being the only president to serve more than two terms. ☆

Tension in Europe Meanwhile, World War II officially began when Germany invaded Poland on September 1, 1939. After the horrors of World War I, most U.S. citizens were in favor of remaining neutral during the war. On December 7, 1941, Japanese fighter pilots made a surprise attack on Pearl Harbor. The damage was severe and crippling. Roosevelt quickly changed his mind about the war. The following day, he delivered his famous "War Message to Congress." But President Roosevelt did not live to see victory; he died from a stroke just months before the war's end.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Franklin D. Roosevelt, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Selection Skills

War Message to Congress

Literary Elements
- Author's Purpose (SE pp. 971, 973, 974)

Vocabulary Skills
- Denotation and Connotation (SE p. 974)

Reading Skills
- Distinguish Fact and Opinion (SE pp. 971, 972, 974)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Press Release (SE p. 974)
- Research Report (TE p. 973)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Speech

Have you ever had to make a difficult decision that affected other people such as friends or family? Write a journal entry about this decision and explain how you made your choice.

Build Background

Prior to the attack on Pearl Harbor, U.S. intelligence had decoded Japanese communications that made it clear that Japan was preparing to attack the United States. However, no one knew when or where the attack would occur. Japan's surprise attack on December 7, 1941, sank or damaged 21 ships of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, destroyed 188 airplanes, killed 2,403 Americans, and injured another 1,178.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The United States and the World

As you read, ask yourself, What political and human consequences did President Roosevelt have to consider before asking Congress to declare war?

Literary Element Author's Purpose

An author's purpose is his or her intent in writing a piece of literature. Authors typically write to accomplish one or more of the following purposes: to persuade, to inform, to explain, to entertain, or to describe. You can identify an author's purpose by thinking critically about the form, the tone, and the content of the first few paragraphs. As you read, ask yourself, What is Roosevelt's purpose in his "War Message to Congress"?

Reading Strategy Distinguish Fact and Opinion

A fact is a statement that can be verified or proved. An opinion is a personal judgment.

Tip: Take Notes As you read, ask yourself, Which statements in Roosevelt's speech are facts and which are opinions? Create a chart like the one below to record examples of facts and opinions you find throughout "War Message to Congress."

Detail	Fact or Opinion
"a date which will live in infamy"	opinion

Learning Objectives

For pages 970–974

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing author's purpose.

Reading: Distinguishing fact and opinion.

Writing: Writing a press release.

Vocabulary

infamy (in´ fə mē) n. a reputation as something evil or harmful; p. 972 The Ku Klux Klan gained infamy for its racism.

diplomatic (dip´ lə mat´ ik) adj. negotiating in a peaceful manner; p. 972 Tyler and I tried to be diplomatic when we disagreed.

implication (im´ plə kā´ shən) n. an effect or consequence; p. 973 Not brushing your teeth can have severe implications, such as cavities and tooth decay.

premeditated (prē med´ ə tāt´ əd) adj. thought about beforehand; p. 973 The bank robbery was premeditated, as the criminal had developed the plan weeks before.

inevitable (i nev´ ə tə bəl) adj. certain to happen; p. 973 Once the black clouds appeared overhead, we feared rain was inevitable.

Tip: Denotation and Connotation Some words with the same dictionary definition (denotation) can have different cultural definitions (connotations).

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In his speech, Roosevelt explains to the citizens of the United States that the nation has been attacked without warning by the Japanese air force. He then builds a case against Japan, citing other recent acts of aggression. Finally, he asserts his power as Commander in Chief and asks Congress to approve a declaration of war.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 147–152.

Vocabulary

Etymology Knowing the origins of a vocabulary word can help students better remember the meaning of the word. Have students use a dictionary and write down the origins of all the vocabulary words. Then have them practice using the words in sentences.

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 155.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain to students that they can better understand the author's purpose by paying attention to the diction, or the author's choice of words, when reading. For example, tell students to examine these two statements:

". . . the United States of America was suddenly and deliberately attacked by . . . the Empire of Japan."

". . . the Japanese Government has deliberately sought to deceive the United States by false statements . . . ."

Highlight the words suddenly and deliberately in the first statement and the words deliberately, deceive, and false in the second statement. Roosevelt chose those words to paint Japan in a negative light. Roosevelt is inviting Americans to feel indignation and to fight back. Words such as deceive and false portray the Japanese government as untrustworthy. As students read the speech, ask them to look for other examples of words that reveal Roosevelt's purpose in giving this speech.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Explain that, before becoming Germany's ally, Japan was conquering western-held territories in Asia to expand its empire. The United States knew of the threat Japan posed to the West. Ask: Given that Japan had been a threat, why does Roosevelt use such strong language after the attack? (An attack is different from a threat, and Roosevelt is angry. He is appealing to his listeners' emotions.)

Reading Strategy 2

Distinguish Fact and Opinion Answer: Fact: Japan planned the attack. Opinion: the Japanese intended to deceive the United States.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 154.

Political History ☆

Japanese Oil Crisis Hoping to slow Japan's progress in controlling Asian territories, the United States refused to sell oil to Japan. Japan's military needed this oil. Historians believe Japan attacked the United States to force the nation to compromise.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.9
DRP: 66
Lexile: 1280

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT
WAR MESSAGE TO CONGRESS,
December 8, 1941

1 Yesterday, December 7, 1941—a date which will live in infamy—the United States of America was suddenly and deliberately attacked by naval and air forces of the Empire of Japan.

☆ The United States was at peace with that nation and, at the solicitation of Japan, was still in conversation with its Government and its Emperor looking toward the maintenance of peace in the Pacific. Indeed, one hour after Japanese air squadrons had commenced bombing in the American Island of Oahu, the Japanese Ambassador to the United States and his colleague delivered to our Secretary of State a formal reply to a recent American message. And, while this reply stated that it seemed useless to continue the existing diplomatic negotiations, it contained no threat or hint of war or of armed attack.

It will be recorded that the distance of Hawaii from Japan makes it obvious that the attack was deliberately planned many days or even weeks ago. During the intervening time the Japanese Government has deliberately sought to deceive the United States by false statements and expressions of hope for continued peace.

The attack yesterday on the Hawaiian Islands has caused severe damage to American Distinguish Fact and Opinion Which parts of this statement are based on factual information? Which parts are formed by opinions? 2

Vocabulary

infamy (in´ fə mē) n. a reputation as something evil or harmful

Vocabulary

diplomatic (dip´ lə mat´ ik) adj. negotiating in a peaceful manner

Speaking Practice

Speech Analysis Have students analyze the speech in detail and examine the persuasive techniques Roosevelt uses. Ask them to consider Roosevelt's word choice, the appeals he makes to people's feelings of patriotism, the images he paints of Japan and of the United States, and the way he uses other rhetorical devices. Ask them to analyze how effective Roosevelt is in supporting the case for war. Have students present an oral critique of the speech to the class.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt signs the declaration of war against Japan, December 8, 1941.

naval and military forces. I regret to tell you that very many American lives have been lost. In addition American ships have been reported torpedoed on the high seas between San Francisco and Honolulu.

Yesterday the Japanese Government also launched an attack against Malaya.

Last night Japanese forces attacked Hong Kong.

Last night Japanese forces attacked Guam.

Last night Japanese forces attacked the Philippine Islands. 3

Last night the Japanese attacked Wake Island.

And this morning the Japanese attacked Midway Island.

Japan has, therefore, undertaken a surprise offensive extending throughout the Pacific area. The facts of yesterday and today speak for themselves. The people of the United States have already formed their opinions and well understand the implications to the very life and safety of our nation.

As Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy I have directed that all measures be taken for our defense.

Always will our whole nation remember the character of the onslaught against us.

No matter how long it may take us to overcome this premeditated invasion, the American people in their righteous might will win through to absolute victory. 4 I believe that I interpret the will of the Congress and of the people when I assert that we will not only defend ourselves to the uttermost but will make it very certain that this form of treachery shall never again endanger us.

Hostilities exist. There is no blinking at the fact that our people, our territory, and our interests are in grave danger.

With confidence in our armed forces—with the unbounding determination of our people—we will gain the inevitable triumph. So help us God.

I ask that the Congress declare that since the unprovoked and dastardly attack by Japan on Sunday, December 7, 1941, a state of war has existed between the United States and the Japanese Empire. ∾

The United States and the World How does Roosevelt use rhetoric to make the nation feel confident of victory? 5

Vocabulary

implication (im´ plə kā´ shən) n.	an effect or consequence
premeditated (prē med´ ə tāt´ əd) adj.	thought about beforehand inevitable (i nev´ ə tə bəl) adj.	certain to happen

Teach

Literary Element 3

Author's Purpose Say: Notice how Roosevelt uses repetitive language to describe six attacks. Ask: What is Roosevelt's purpose in mentioning these attacks? (He wants to stress the pattern of Japan's aggression.)

Vocabulary 4

Word Parts Have students use the word parts to decode what premeditated means. (The prefix pre-, the suffix -ed, and the word meditate create the meaning.)

Big Idea 5

The United States and the World Answer: His words, such as overcome, righteous, and victory, have strong connotations.

Progress Check

Can students recognize the author's purpose?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 153.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Research Report Have groups of students work together to research the chain of events that led to the United States' involvement in World War II. Tell students that the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor was the "last straw" in a series of events that led up to war. Have students investigate Japanese-American relations, Japan's expanding empire, and the advancement of Axis powers in Europe and other parts of the world. Students should analyze primary and secondary sources and write a report discussing the reasons the United States finally declared war on Japan and the other Axis powers. Have students present their research to the class.

After You Read

Assess

1. It may inspire or create anxiety.
2. (a) The countries were negotiating. (b) It might have made Congress want to declare war.
3. (a) The distance meant the attack was planned. (b) He might think they had a war plan.
4. (a) Malaya, Hong Kong, Guam, the Philippine Islands, Wake Island, Midway Island (b) To evoke fear and anger
5. (a) They want war. (b) To imply he is listening to public opinion
6. (a) He talks of an "inevitable triumph." (b) To build confidence
7. Some may feel he was accurate; others that he did not address the consequences fully.
8. Students may note that a leader still can motivate and reassure people through speeches.

Literary Element

1. To inform citizens and to persuade Congress to declare war
2. He uses it to list the territories; Japan seems ruthless and scary.

Reading Strategy

1. He gives facts about the attack; he also describes it as premeditated, deliberate, and deceptive.
2. When he assures "inevitable" victory against Japan's "dastardly" attacks, he shows bias.

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' press releases:

- Does the press release address the president's speech?
- Does the press release summarize the main arguments and include direct quotes?

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What was your reaction to Roosevelt's speech?
2. (a)Why, according to Roosevelt, was the United States unprepared for the attack on Pearl Harbor? (b)How do you think this information might have influenced Congress?
3. (a)Why does Roosevelt claim it was obvious that the attack on Pearl Harbor was planned "many days or weeks ago"? (b)How do you think this influenced the president's reaction to the attack?
4. (a)Which places does Roosevelt say Japan has attacked? (b)What effect does Roosevelt seem to want this information to have on his audience?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)What does Roosevelt mean when he says, "The people of the United States have already formed their opinions"? (b)Why does he say this?
6. (a)How does Roosevelt assure the public of a war victory? (b)Why do you think he does this?

Connect

7. Big Idea The United States and the World Did Roosevelt adequately address the political and human consequences of declaring war?
8. Connect to Today Considering the effects of the Internet, long distance telephones, and other global communication today, how powerful might this type of speech be today? Explain.

Literary Element Author's Purpose

Roosevelt makes every word count by supporting his arguments and appealing to the hearts and minds of his audience.

1. What, in your opinion, is the purpose of Roosevelt's speech?
2. How does the rhetorical device of repetition help Roosevelt influence and persuade his audience?

Reading Strategy Distinguish Fact and Opinion

Roosevelt includes both fact and opinion in his "War Message to Congress." Review the chart you created (page 971).

1. How does Roosevelt use both fact and opinion in his speech?
2. How is bias present in Roosevelt's speech?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Vocabulary Practice

Denotation and Connotation Denotation is a word's literal, dictionary meaning. Connotation is its implied, or cultural, meaning. For example, shy and bashful have similar denotations, "reserved or timid," but different connotations:

Weaker	Stronger
shy	bashful

For each vocabulary word below, find one synonym. Then explain which word has a stronger connotation. Use a dictionary if you need help.

infamy diplomatic implication premeditated inevitable

Writing

Write a Press Release Imagine that you are Roosevelt's press secretary. Write a press release about the president's speech to give to reporters covering the address to Congress. Make sure to summarize the president's arguments and include direct quotations from the speech.

Vocabulary

infamy: disgrace; Infamy has the stronger connotation. Disgrace implies a loss of reputation, while infamy implies a reputation as something evil.

diplomatic: tactful; Diplomatic has the stronger connotation. Diplomatic implies premeditated behavior, while tactful implies unplanned behavior.

implication: effect; Implication has the stronger connotation. An implication is based on behavior that can be modified, but an effect might occur naturally.

premeditated: planned; Premeditated has the stronger connotation. It has legal implications, and planned does not.

inevitable: predictable; Inevitable has the stronger connotation. Something that is predictable may still be avoided, but something inevitable cannot.

Vocabulary Workshop

Word Origins: Math and Science

Literature Connection The word squadron is related to the Latin word quadrum, meaning "square."

> "Indeed, one hour after Japanese air squadrons had commenced bombing . . . Oahu, the Japanese Ambassador to the United States and his colleague delivered to our Secretary of State a formal reply to a recent American message."
>
> —Franklin Delano Roosevelt, from "War Message to Congress"

Several math and science terms come from this root: quadrangle, quadrant, quadruped, and quadratic, for example. You have probably figured out that quadru- or quadr- means "four."

Examples You can figure out what many math and science terms mean if you know some common word parts and their definitions, such as those below.

astro- astr-	star; celestial body; outer space
hydro- hydr-	water; liquid
poly-	more than one; many; much penta-	five
-cephalus	a head
-gon	a figure having a specified kind or number of angles
-nomy	a body of knowledge about a specific field
-sphere	a celestial body, such as a planet or star

Practice Answer the following questions by combining two word parts from the list above. Consult a dictionary to check your answers. Write the answers on a piece of paper.

1. What is the word for an abnormal increase of fluid in the skull?

2. What is the word for the scientific study of heavenly bodies in outer space?

3. What is the word for a closed plane figure bounded by straight lines?

4. What is the word for water vapor in Earth's atmosphere?

5. What is the word for a five-sided polygon?

Learning Objectives

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Vocabulary: Understanding word origins.

Word Origins

Many English math and science terms come from the Latin language, as do many of the word parts at the left.

Tip

When you are asked for the meaning of a word that appears in a reading passage, knowledge of some common word parts can help you. Use your prior knowledge to help you recall similar words.

Literature Online

Vocabulary For more vocabulary practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Review with English learners the definitions of the words root word, prefix, and suffix. Work with students to list at least one word for each of the word parts listed on this page. Have students look up unfamiliar words in the dictionary. Then help them make the connection between the word part and the definition of the word. For example, an astronaut is a person who travels in space and the word part astro- can also mean outer space. Remind students that word parts can be used to figure out the meaning of unfamiliar words.

Vocabulary Workshop

Word Origins: Math and Science

Focus

Point out to students that understanding word parts in unfamiliar words is a skill that requires some practice. With wide reading and the help of a dictionary, students can learn to recognize common prefixes, suffixes, and roots and their meanings. Have students use the definitions of word parts provided here to figure out the meanings of the math and science words in the exercise below.

Teach

Word Origins Say: A dictionary can provide a word's etymology or history. In most dictionaries this information appears before the word's definition. Have students practice by finding the etymologies of the words polyglot and atmosphere.

Assess

Practice

1. hydrocephalus

2. astronomy

3. polygon

4. hydrosphere

5. pentagon

For additional vocabulary practice, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 61

Daily Language Practice Transparency 89

Or ask: What qualities do you imagine a soldier or fighter pilot must possess? (Students may suggest bravery, flexibility, and the ability to focus and follow orders.) After students read the poem and the Note from the Author, ask them if their ideas have changed.

Cultural History ☆

B-29 Planes The Boeing B-29 plane, also known as the "Superfortress," was designed to be a bomber plane with the capability of carrying more guns and bombs than the B-17 and the B-24 planes. Innovations were also made in the targeting and navigations system of the planes. The two planes—the Enola Gay and the Bockscar—that dropped atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki at the end of the World War II were modified B-29 planes.

Before You Read

The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner

Meet Randall Jarrell

(1914–1965)

Randall Jarrell's influence on other writers in the mid-twentieth century was enormous. His work as a critic, teacher, novelist, and poet helped define poetry's path during the 1950s and early 1960s.

Born in Nashville, Tennessee, Jarrell spent most of his youth in Long Beach, California. His interest in poetry began during his time at Vanderbilt University. There he studied under notable southern writers John Crowe Ransom and Robert Penn Warren, who nurtured his skills as a poet and critic. After earning BA and MA degrees from Vanderbilt, Jarrell began a career as a professor of English literature, first at Kenyon College and then at the University of Texas.

> "If I can think of it, it isn't what I want.
> I want . . . I want a ship from some > near star
> To land in the yard."
>
> —Randall Jarrell, "A Sick Child"

Military Life In 1942, when Jarrell published his first book of poems, Blood for a Stranger, the U.S. had just entered World War II. That same year, he joined the war effort by enlisting in the Army Air ☆ Forces. He served as a control tower operator and trained B-29 bomber pilots. World War II had a profound effect on Jarrell, inspiring him to write with great rancor, pity, and drama about the evils of war. Many of his greatest poems appear in Little Friend, Little Friend (1945) and Losses (1948). Both books deal with dehumanization, war, and violence. Jarrell also showed great compassion for people trapped in meaningless lives and for the victimization of women and children.

When the war ended, Jarrell taught for a year at Sarah Lawrence College. He later translated these teaching experiences into the satirical novel Pictures from an Institution. After Sarah Lawrence, Jarrell took a professorship at the University of North Carolina in Greensboro. From 1956 until 1958, he served as poetry consultant to the Library of Congress.

Critical Acclaim After the war, Jarrell produced several collections of verse and commentary. His criticism was some of the most shrewd and acerbic of its day. Jarrell could be brutal, and he often lambasted mediocre poetry. However, the fierceness of his reviews was not a display of aggression but, rather, of his love for poetry. He was a passionate advocate for verse that met his high standards. Robert Frost, William Carlos Williams, and Walt Whitman all met these standards and received revitalized acclaim from Jarrell.

In 1965, Jarrell was struck and killed by a car. It is unclear whether his death was accidental or whether Jarrell, like so many poets of his generation, chose suicide. Whatever the cause of his death, his importance is unquestionable. Jarrell's poetry captured what poet Karl Shapiro called "the common dialogue of Americans," a dialogue that modulates from weariness to terror, from hopefulness to ecstasy.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Randall Jarrell, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Selection Skills

The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner

Literary Elements
- Imagery (SE pp. 977–979)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Journal Entry (SE p. 979)
- Use Different Tones (TE p. 978)

Reading Skills
- Visualize (SE pp. 977, 979)
- Make Inferences (SE p. 978)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE p. 979)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poem

What is it like to face death? Freewrite for a few minutes about how someone might describe the process of leaving the body.

Build Background

The aircraft that Jarrell mentions in his note were long-range bombers that the U.S. Army used in bombing raids over Europe and the Pacific during World War II. Both the B-17 and B-24 had Plexiglas ball turrets that housed machine gunners. Although both were powerful aircraft, these ball turrets made them vulnerable to attack.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The United States and the World

As you read, ask yourself, How might Jarrell's "The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner" represent the human aspect of World War II?

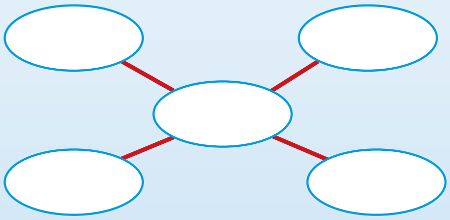
Literary Element Imagery

Imagery is the "word pictures" that writers create to evoke an emotional response. In creating imagery, writers use sensory details, or descriptions that appeal to one or more of the five senses. Imagery is often an integral part of modern and contemporary poetry. As you read, ask yourself, How does Jarrell use imagery to establish his setting and generate emotion?

Reading Strategy Visualize

To visualize is to use the imagination to picture the setting, characters, and action in a work of literature. As you read, ask yourself, What sensory details and descriptions are particularly vivid?

Tip: Take Notes In a web diagram, record powerful images and other images connected to them.



Learning Objectives

For pages 976–979

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing imagery.

Reading: Visualizing setting, characters, and action.

Writing: Writing a journal entry.

Vocabulary

turret (tur´ it) n. a small, rotating domelike structure that is mounted with guns and attached to the body of an aircraft; p. 978 In the turret the gunner began to fire.

Plexiglas (plek´ si glas´) n. a light and very durable transparent plastic; p. 978 The Plexiglas table could be easily moved.

gunner (gun´ ər) n. an airman or a soldier who operates a gun; p. 978 The gunner fired at the enemy aircraft and scored a hit.

fetus (fē´ təs) n. the unborn young of a human or other viviparous vertebrate; p. 978 The injured deer's fetus was unharmed.

Tip: Context Clues To learn a new word, look at other words in the sentence and try to infer a possible meaning. Example: We used Plexiglas in the architectural model because we needed to carry it on the long bus ride to school. Plexiglas must be something that is lightweight and inexpensive enough for a student to purchase.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

The poem's speaker is a gunner on a World War II bomber who uses vivid imagery to describe a combat mission and the aftermath of his death.

Vocabulary

Common and Proper Nouns Remind students that common nouns begin with lower-case letters and refer to a general type of person, place, or thing: principal, city, bridge. Proper nouns are capitalized and name a particular person, place, or thing: Mr. Jones, New York City, Brooklyn Bridge. Have students classify each vocabulary word as a common or proper noun. Then have them practice using the nouns in sentences.

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 160–171.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain to English learners that poets, in particular, rely on imagery to convey their thoughts because poets are usually trying to express many ideas in very few words. Rather than writing lengthy descriptions or narration, a poet might construct a vivid image that communicates a lot of information. Display the following sentences:

The leaves moved back and forth in a regular rhythm.

The dancing leaves swayed.

Ask: Which sentence creates the most vivid picture in your mind? Point out that the second sentence creates a visual image using few words.

Encourage students to make a chart using the five senses as headings for five columns. As they read the poem, have them write images that appeal to each of the senses in the chart.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Inferences Ask: Which words indicate that the speaker feels a lack of control? (fell, hunched, and loosed)

Literary Element 2

Imagery Answer: It aligns with the images of "mother's sleep" (line 1), "in its belly" (line 2), and "the fetus in the womb" (Note from the Author). They suggest the speaker is like a helpless, newborn animal.

Writer's Technique ☆

Sentence Structure

Jarrell's poem is only three sentences long. Each sentence begins with an adverbial phrase or clause, which locates the speaker in a particular place or moment. Each builds suspense, carrying the reader through the poem.

Progress Check

Can students analyze imagery?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 166.

The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner

Randall Jarrell

From my mother's sleep I fell into the State,
☆ And I hunched in its belly till my wet fur froze. 1
Six miles from earth, loosed from its dream of life,
I woke to black flak[1] and the nightmare fighters.
When I died they washed me out with a hose.

---

[1] Flak is the fire of antiaircraft guns.

2 Imagery Which other images does the image in line 2 align with to convey the overall meaning of the poem? What do these images suggest?

Vocabulary

turret (tur´ it) n. a small, rotating domelike structure that is mounted with guns and attached to the body of an aircraft

Plexiglas (plek´ si glas´; spelling corrected) n. a light and very durable transparent plastic gunner (gun´ ər) n. an airman or a soldier who operates a gun fetus (fē´ təs) n. the unborn young of a human or other viviparous vertebrate

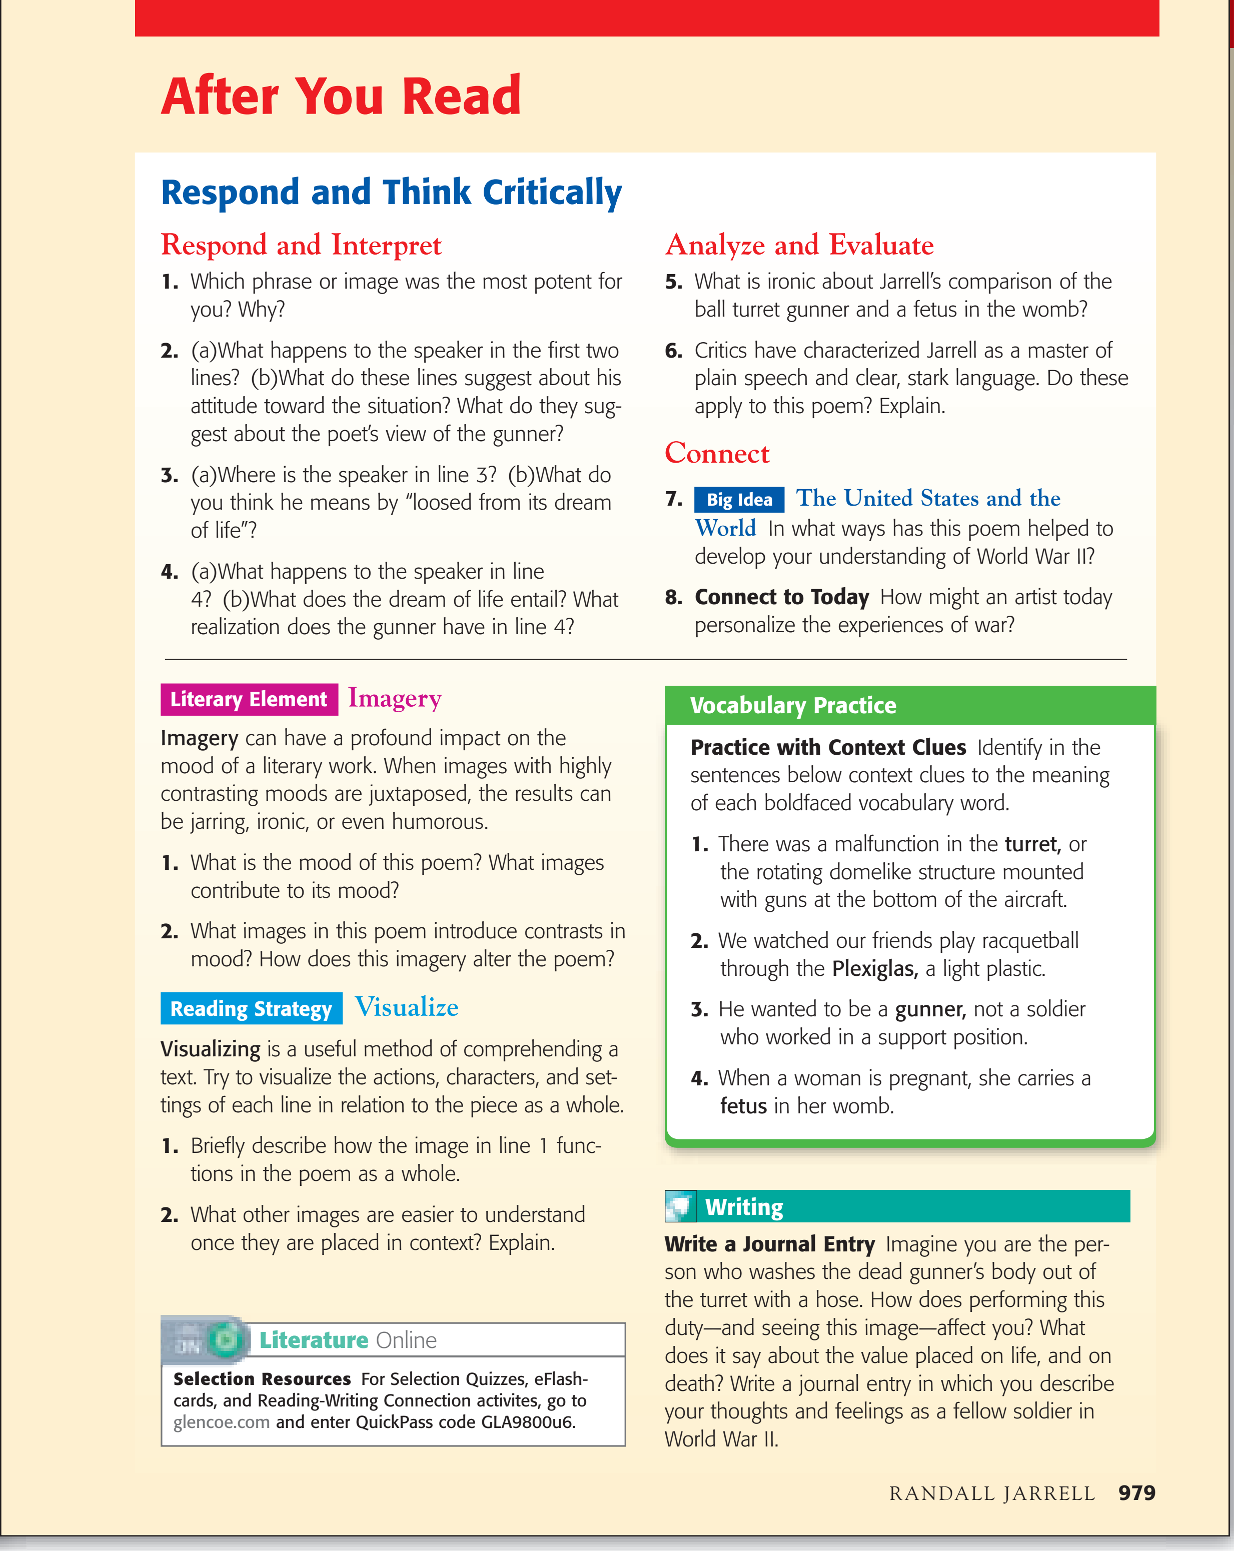
NOTE FROM THE AUTHOR:

A ball turret was a plexiglass sphere set into the belly of a B-17 or B-24, and inhabited by two .50 caliber machine guns and one man, a short small man. When this gunner tracked with his machine guns a fighter attacking his bomber from below, he revolved with the turret; hunched upside down in his little sphere, he looked like the fetus in the womb. The fighters which attacked him were armed with cannon firing explosive shells. The hose was a steam hose.

—Randall Jarrell

Writing Practice

Use Different Tones Have small groups read the poem and the author's note, focusing on the tone. Then ask students to use the information to write a letter to the gunner's family conveying the news of his death, an official report or newscast of the event, or an obituary. Before students start writing, have them discuss the different tones necessary for each type of writing. For example, a letter to the gunner's family should sound official but also convey a sense of sympathy. An official report or newscast should be factual with few embellishments. An obituary usually describes a person's life and achievements in positive terms. Students may want to brainstorm different ways to describe the gunner's death before they start writing.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which phrase or image was the most potent for you? Why?
2. (a)What happens to the speaker in the first two lines? (b)What do these lines suggest about his attitude toward the situation? What do they suggest about the poet's view of the gunner?
3. (a)Where is the speaker in line 3? (b)What do you think he means by "loosed from its dream of life"?
4. (a)What happens to the speaker in line 4? (b)What does the dream of life entail? What realization does the gunner have in line 4?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. What is ironic about Jarrell's comparison of the ball turret gunner and a fetus in the womb?
6. Critics have characterized Jarrell as a master of plain speech and clear, stark language. Do these apply to this poem? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea The United States and the World In what ways has this poem helped to develop your understanding of World War II?
8. Connect to Today How might an artist today personalize the experiences of war?

Literary Element Imagery

Imagery can have a profound impact on the mood of a literary work. When images with highly contrasting moods are juxtaposed, the results can be jarring, ironic, or even humorous.

1. What is the mood of this poem? What images contribute to its mood?
2. What images in this poem introduce contrasts in mood? How does this imagery alter the poem?

Reading Strategy Visualize

Visualizing is a useful method of comprehending a text. Try to visualize the actions, characters, and settings of each line in relation to the piece as a whole.

1. Briefly describe how the image in line 1 functions in the poem as a whole.
2. What other images are easier to understand once they are placed in context? Explain.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activites, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Identify in the sentences below context clues to the meaning of each boldfaced vocabulary word.

1. There was a malfunction in the turret, or the rotating domelike structure mounted with guns at the bottom of the aircraft.
2. We watched our friends play racquetball through the Plexiglas, a light plastic.
3. He wanted to be a gunner, not a soldier who worked in a support position.
4. When a woman is pregnant, she carries a fetus in her womb.

Writing

Write a Journal Entry Imagine you are the person who washes the dead gunner's body out of the turret with a hose. How does performing this duty—and seeing this image—affect you? What does it say about the value placed on life, and on death? Write a journal entry in which you describe your thoughts and feelings as a fellow soldier in World War II.

After You Read

Assess

1. The image of the pilot's remains being hosed out is shocking.
2. (a) He leaves home to be a soldier and becomes a ball turret gunner. (b) The poet is sensitive to the gunner's fear.
3. (a) In the plane, six miles above the ground. (b) He has lost the security and hope normally associated with life on earth.
4. (a) He is in the "nightmare" of a battle. (b) Flying in a warplane; war is dangerous.
5. A fetus suggests life; the gunner, curled up like a fetus, faces death.
6. The poem's language is stark and plain; the poem is not a narrative but makes it clear that the gunner dies.
7. The image of a sudden, violent death makes the war tangible; the poem's dark tone and stark language reveal war's horrors.
8. Through poetry, story, movie, or video on the Internet

Literary Element

1. The hunched gunner, the wet fur, the miles from earth, and the black flak add to the dark, fearful mood.
2. Contrasting images of the fetus and the dead gunner hosed out of the plane are stark and shocking.

Reading Strategy

1. It sets up the birth and sleeping motifs and suggests vulnerability.
2. The crouching animal represents how a gunner sat in the turret.

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' journal entries:

- Does the entry describe how the experience affects the writer?
- Does the entry discuss the significance of the event in terms of life and death?

Vocabulary

1. The definition is in the sentence.
2. Plexiglas is defined as "light plastic." Also, it must be durable and clear.
3. The opposite of gunner is in the sentence, so a gunner carries a gun and does not work in a support position.
4. The context of the sentence implies that a fetus is an unborn child.

Focus

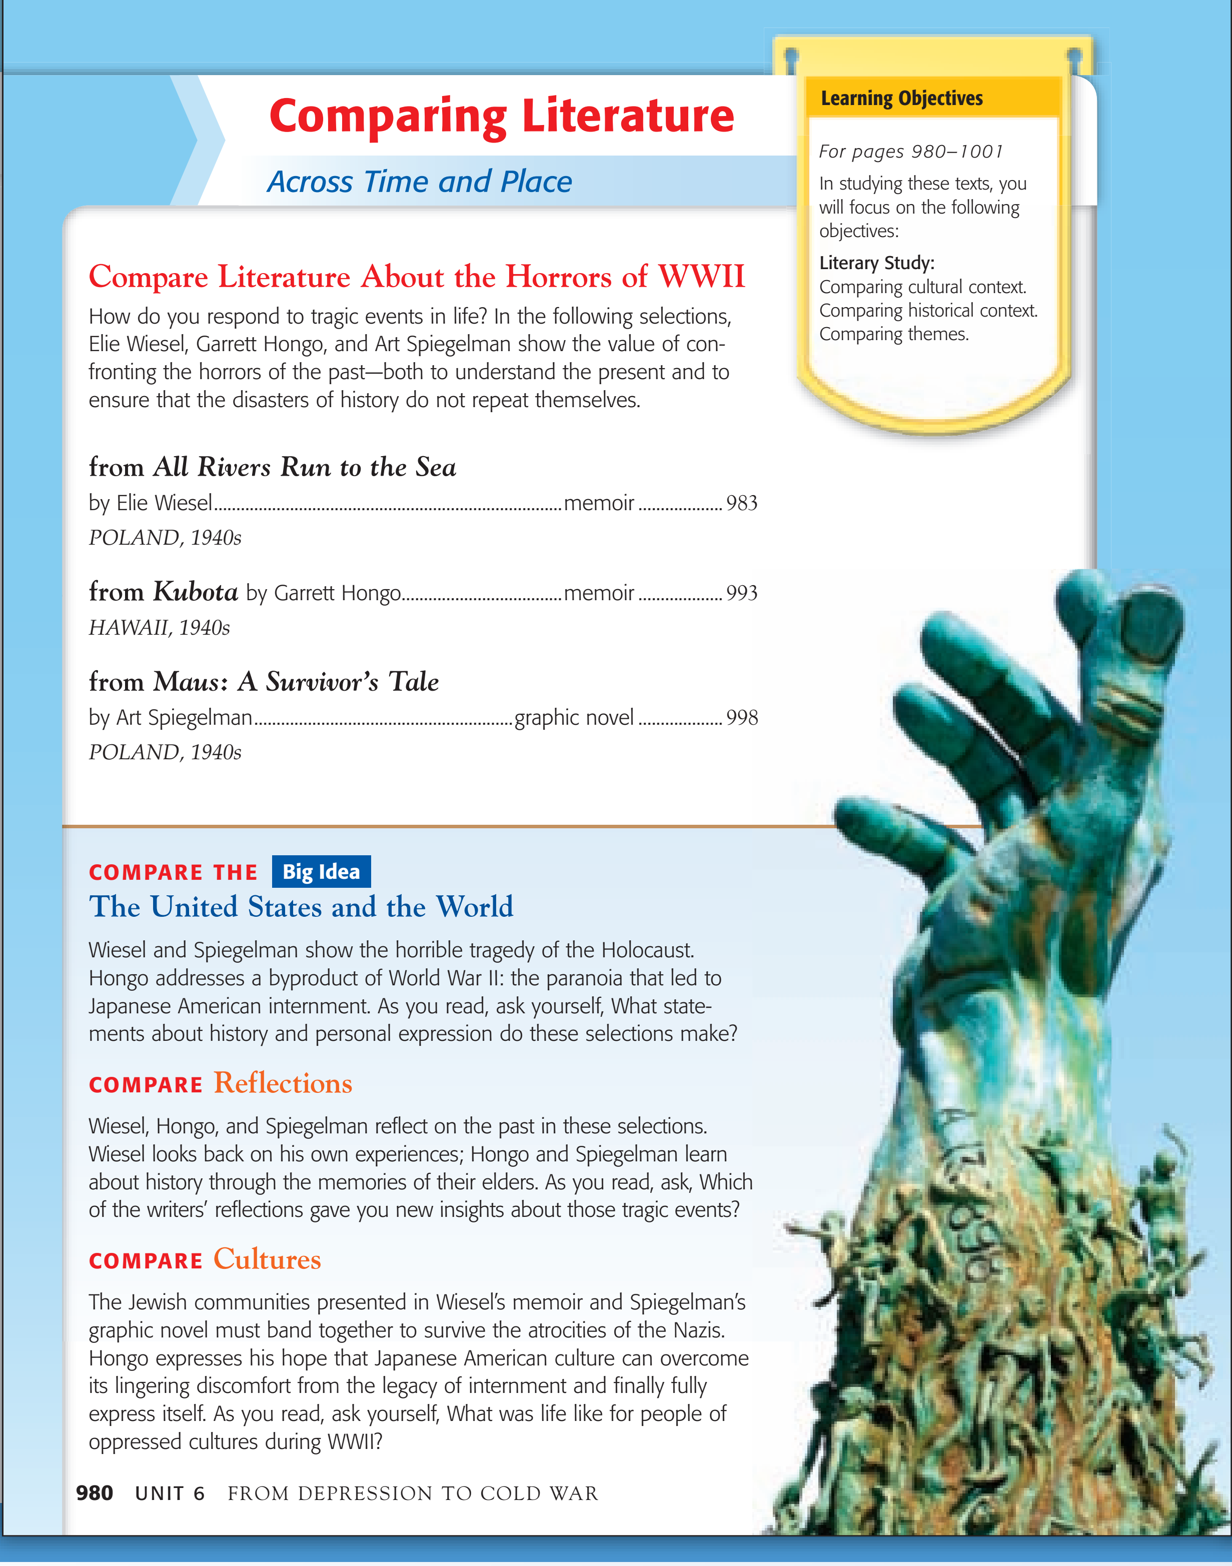
Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 90

Or ask: Why do people retell stories of personal suffering and hardship? Why do they want to remember their bad experiences? (Students may suggest that people retell such stories to help release some of the powerful emotions such experiences create. They may also tell such stories in order to help future generations avoid the same mistakes.) Have students identify feelings a storyteller might experience when giving an account of personal suffering.

Connect to the Reading Selections

Allow students to share their responses to the opening questions. Then have students discuss what they already know about the writers Elie Wiesel, Garrett Hongo, and Art Spiegelman or about the Holocaust and the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II.



Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Learning Objectives

For pages 980–1001

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study:
Comparing cultural context.
Comparing historical context.
Comparing themes.

Compare Literature About the Horrors of WWII

How do you respond to tragic events in life? In the following selections, Elie Wiesel, Garrett Hongo, and Art Spiegelman show the value of confronting the horrors of the past—both to understand the present and to ensure that the disasters of history do not repeat themselves.

from All Rivers Run to the Sea
by Elie Wiesel .... memoir 983
POLAND, 1940s

from Kubota by Garrett Hongo .... memoir 993 HAWAII, 1940s

from Maus: A Survivor's Tale
by Art Spiegelman .... graphic novel 998
POLAND, 1940s

COMPARE THE Big Idea

The United States and the World

Wiesel and Spiegelman show the horrible tragedy of the Holocaust. Hongo addresses a byproduct of World War II: the paranoia that led to Japanese American internment. As you read, ask yourself, What statements about history and personal expression do these selections make?

COMPARE Reflections

Wiesel, Hongo, and Spiegelman reflect on the past in these selections. Wiesel looks back on his own experiences; Hongo and Spiegelman learn about history through the memories of their elders. As you read, ask, Which of the writers' reflections gave you new insights about those tragic events?

COMPARE Cultures

The Jewish communities presented in Wiesel's memoir and Spiegelman's graphic novel must band together to survive the atrocities of the Nazis. Hongo expresses his hope that Japanese American culture can overcome its lingering discomfort from the legacy of internment and finally fully express itself. As you read, ask yourself, What was life like for people of oppressed cultures during WWII?

Selection Skills

Comparing Literature

Literary Elements
- Narrator (SE pp. 982–991; TE p. 1000)
- Autobiography (SE p. 991)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write an Essay (SE p. 1001)
- Describe a Character (TE p. 994)

Reading Skills
- Activate Prior Knowledge (SE pp. 982, 983, 985, 988, 992; TE p. 993)

Vocabulary Skills
- Denotation and Connotation (SE p. 982)
- Word Parts (SE p. 988)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 997)
- Enact a Scene (TE p. 998)

Before You Read

from All Rivers Run to the Sea

Meet Elie Wiesel

(born 1928)

Holocaust survivor Elie Wiesel believes that memory can be a powerful foundation for unity. This notion echoes his personal struggle with the past and illustrates his attempt to transform his struggle into a universal fight against oppression and apathy. Wiesel gave a stirring speech at the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum dedication in 1993. His words are engraved in stone at the museum entrance, encouraging future generations to recognize this duty:

> "For the dead and the living, we must bear witness."
>
> —Elie Wiesel

The Holocaust Wiesel spent his childhood in Sighet, Romania, where synagogues, day schools, and Jewish newspapers flourished in the vibrant Jewish community. Wiesel began attending kheder (religious elementary school) when he was three. He studied secular subjects, played the violin, and found a scholar with whom to study Kabbalah, a mystical interpretation of Hebrew Scriptures.

In the spring of 1944, fifteen-year-old Wiesel and his family were deported from Sighet to the death camp Auschwitz-Birkenau in Poland. Wiesel was separated from his mother and sisters—his mother and youngest sister were immediately gassed to death. Wiesel remained with his father at Auschwitz and later at Buchenwald, another camp. Tragically, his father died just months before the liberation of the camp in 1945. Wiesel survived and was later reunited with his older sisters.

Giving Voice to Memory After the liberation, Wiesel vowed to keep silent about the horrors he had witnessed. He went to France, where he continued his education. In Paris, he began work as a journalist, writing stories for the Yiddish newspaper Zion in Kamf and the Israeli newspaper Yedi'ot Akharonot. Journalism put him in contact with French writer François Mauriac. In 1954, at Mauriac's behest, Wiesel broke his silence and gave voice to his memories. He published his Yiddish memoir, Un Di Velt Hot Geshvign ("And the World Kept Silent"), in 1956. In 1958, under Mauriac's guidance, Wiesel revised the text and translated it into French under the title La Nuit. In 1960 this work was published in English as Night.

Wiesel moved to the U.S. in 1956 and became a citizen in 1963. As a result of prolific writing and lecturing, he has become one of the most visible and renowned Holocaust survivors, winning the Nobel Peace Prize in 1986. In his acceptance speech, Wiesel acknowledged the problem of oppression, but even more that of indifference: "We must always take sides. Neutrality helps the oppressor, never the victim. Silence encourages the tormentor, never the tormented. Sometimes we must interfere." By confronting and exploring his own horrific experiences, Wiesel has transformed them into understanding, dialogue, and action. 1

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Elie Wiesel, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Before You Read

Focus

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Ask a student to read Elie Wiesel's words from his Nobel acceptance speech. Ask: Do you agree or disagree with this idea? Discuss the way this philosophy might work for an individual and for a nation. Invite students to think of personal and world situations and the effects of taking sides in each.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Some of the vocabulary from the selection may be unfamiliar to students. A revolver is a handgun; the name refers to the action of the gun's cylinder which rotates. The word nocturnal comes from the Latin root that means night: the nocturnal trains in the selection describe trains that run at night. The word nauseating, which means to cause stomach distress or disgust, comes from the Greek root that means sailor. The word disconcerting is an adjective that means to make someone uneasy or confused. Wiesel writes that "people adjusted with disconcerting rapidity" to a terrible situation, meaning that he is disturbed by the speed at which people adjusted. Wiesel used the word transport as a noun in this selection, referring to the trains that carried Jews to the camps. Discuss these and other unfamiliar words with students. Then have students make up a sentence for each word. Have them read the sentences aloud to the class.

Comparing Literature

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

When the narrator was 15, his family and his neighbors were rounded up by the Nazis and deported on trains to the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camps where many of them experienced deprivation and death. Recalling the events years later, the narrator weaves together his memories and adult realizations. He tells of his lifelong search for information about those who were never seen again. He questions the power of human ideals and beauty in a world where such horrors could take place.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 173–178.

Vocabulary

Denotation and Connotation Say: Both premonition and trepidation have meanings relating to fear or dread about the future. Ask: How are the meanings of these words different? (Trepidation is a feeling a person has; a premonition is a thing or an idea.) Say: Use both words in a sentence. (Malka's premonition that the important meeting would not go as planned gave her a sense of trepidation.)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 181.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Memoir

Why do you think large-scale acts of violence and cruelty still occur in today's world? What might be some solutions? With a group, discuss these questions.

Build Background

During WWII, Nazi forces rounded up Jews in Poland and Germany and brought them by train to concentration camps such as Auschwitz-Birkenau. Most Jews did not realize what lay ahead at Auschwitz, though many suspected the worst. In the camps, Nazis performed inhumane medical experiments on prisoners and executed millions of innocent Jews. 1

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The United States and the World

After World War I, many countries isolated themselves to avoid the complex military alliances that had spurred that war. As you read, ask, How does Wiesel explore the question of why the world neglected its responsibility to stop the Nazi campaign?

Literary Element Narrator

The narrator is the person who tells a story. The narrator may be a character in the story or someone from the outside looking in. As you read, ask yourself, How does the perspective of the narrator affect your understanding of the selection?

Reading Strategy Activate Prior Knowledge

When you read, you bring prior knowledge and past experience to the task. As you read, ask yourself, What do I already know about the Holocaust?

Tip: Take Notes List prior knowledge or past experiences that help you understand each event or statement in this selection.

Prior Knowledge	Event in Selection
Many people are prejudiced toward particular cultural or ethnic groups.	Nazis treat Jews as subhuman.

Vocabulary

ineffably (in ef´ ə blē) adv. to a degree that is impossible to express; indescribably; p. 983 James was ineffably sad when he said goodbye to his family and boarded the train for Chicago.

succumb (sə kum´) v. to give in or submit to; p. 986 The marathon runner insisted that she would finish the race and not succumb to fatigue.

premonition (prē´ mə nish´ ən) n. a warning, or foreboding about the future; p. 988 Jane had a premonition that something bad would happen later that afternoon.

fetid (fe´ təd) adj. having a bad odor; p. 988 The refrigerator had not been cleaned in so long, a fetid smell wafted from it.

curt (kurt) adj. rudely brief, or short; terse; p. 989 The curt reply Mr. Jenkins gave to Lydia's question suggested he didn't want to be bothered.

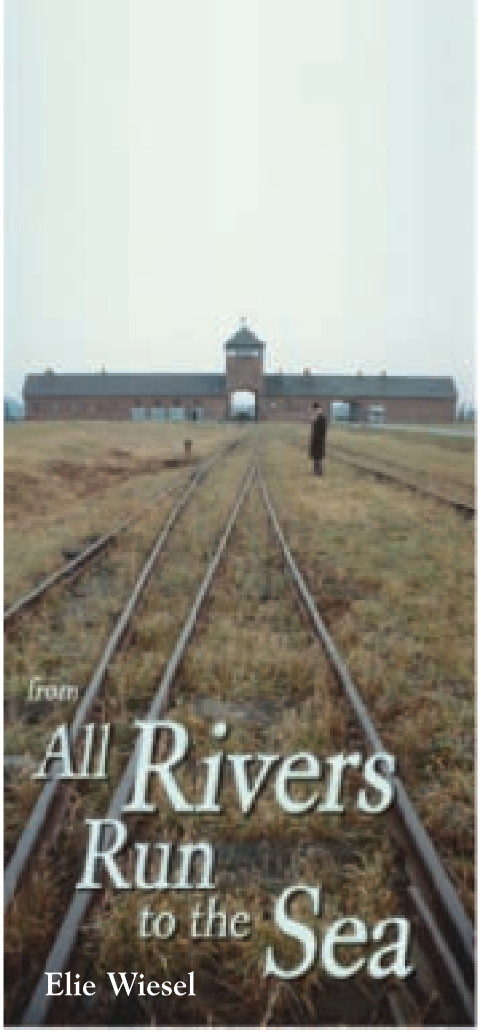
Tip: Denotation and Connotation Some words that have the same dictionary definition can have different cultural definitions. For example, smelly and fetid have similar meaning, but fetid has a stronger connotation.

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Preview This selection describes the writer's survival in the Nazi death camps and his efforts to understand and explain the great evil that he witnessed. Write these questions on the board:

- Have you ever witnessed an injustice but felt unable to stop it? Explain.
- Have you ever thought you got a "lucky break" while others around you suffered? How did this make you feel?

Say: As you read, make notes of the narrator's (the writer's) emotional and rational responses to the horrific events he witnesses.



Our turn came on Tuesday, May 16. "All Jews out!" the gendarmes[1] screamed, and we found ourselves in the street. There was another heat wave. My little sister was thirsty, and my grandmother too. They didn't complain, but I did, not openly, but it amounted to the same thing. I felt queasy, ill. I was suffering, but didn't know from what. I was ineffably sad. As in the presence of death, I didn't dare raise my voice. This was where my childhood and my adolescence, my prayers, studies, and fasting had led. These moments would remain forever etched within me. Wherever life took me, a part of me would always remain in that street, in front of my empty house, awaiting the order to depart.

I see my little sister, I see her with her rucksack, so cumbersome, so heavy. I see her and an immense tenderness sweeps over me. Never will her innocent smile fade from my soul. Never will her glance cease to sear me. I tried to help her; she protested. Never will the sound of her voice leave my heart. She was thirsty, my little sister was thirsty. Her lips were parched. Pearls of sweat formed on her clear forehead. I gave her a little water. "I can wait," she said, smiling. My little sister wanted to be brave. And I wanted to die in her place.

I seldom speak of her in my writing, for I dare not. My little sister with her sun-bathed golden hair is my secret. I never even talked to Marion[2] or to my son Elisha about her. It mortifies me to talk about her in the past tense, for she is present. Her presence is more real to me than my own. My little sister Tsiporah, my little angel scorched by a darkened sun, I cannot picture you as death's hostage. You will remain on our street, on the pavement in front of our house.

I gazed at the house—we all did—with anguish. Here we had lived a Jewish family life that was now gone forever. The laughter and laments, the peace of Shabbat, the prayer of the God of Abraham whispered by my mother and my grandmother, the festival of Sukkoth, the songs of Rosh Hashana, the Passover meals, the community gatherings, my

---

[1] Gendarmes are police officers.

[2] Marion is Wiesel's wife.

Vocabulary

ineffably (in ef´ ə blē) adv. to a degree that is impossible to express; indescribably

Activate Prior Knowledge What memories are forever etched in your mind? 2

Comparing Literature

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World

Soviet and U.S. forces first liberated concentration camps in April 1945. Ask: How do you think the soldiers felt when they saw the camps? (horrified, angry, saddened)

Reading Strategy 2

Activate Prior Knowledge

Answer: Students might mention a moment from their childhood or the first time they experienced something.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 180.

View the Photograph

The train rides were a horrific introduction to the deprivations prisoners would experience at the camps. Passengers were deprived of food and water for days, and some had to cope with extreme temperatures.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 6.1
DRP: 53
Lexile: 860

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Say: Wiesel writes "My little sister Tsiporah, my little angel scorched by a darkened sun, I cannot picture you as death's hostage." Ask: Who is my little angel? (his little sister who had golden hair) Why does Wiesel refer to his sister as death's hostage? (She is dead at the time Wiesel writes this.) Could the sun be darkened? Why do you think Wiesel referred to the sun in this way? (It may refer to the evil then and to come.) How was his little sister scorched? (His sister was thirsty standing out in the hot sun; it might refer to her death during this evil time.) Explain that the phrases my little angel scorched by a darkened sun and death's hostage are metaphors, in which one thing is compared to another to indicate similarity.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: International news can bring attention to these types of acts and show inaccurate information being communicated by the country committing the acts. Explain that these news reports were forbidden in German-occupied countries because the reports were broadcast by the Soviet Union and Great Britain. Both were Nazi Germany's enemies.

Literary Element 2

Narrator Answer: The narrator is Jewish. He is reflecting on the painful memories of his youth. His family was forced from their home during the Nazi campaign against Jews.

Cultural History ☆

Bar and Bat Mitzvahs

Bar Mitzvah means "son of the commandment." During the ceremony, a boy reads a passage from the Torah in front of the congregation. This event is the culmination of a period of religious training. Many congregations hold similar ceremonies for girls. The ceremony for a girl is called a bat mitzvah, which means "daughter of the commandment."

grandfather's visits.[3] The stories of beggars and of refugees, the forbidden broadcasts of Radio London and Radio Moscow that we listened to at night, curtains drawn and shutters closed. I picture myself sitting under an acacia tree, a book in my hands, talking to the clouds. Tsipouka is playing with a hoop. "Come and play with me," she says, but I don't feel like it. And now, as I write these words, my heart is pounding. I should have closed my book and stopped my dream, dropped everything to play with my little sister. Other images rise up: the sleigh in winter, the horse and carriage in summer; a cousin's funeral (a fortune-teller is said to have foretold her death); Bea sick with typhus:[4] she lies in a room of her own, feverish and contagious, hovering between life and death. My grandmother asks me to go with her to the synagogue. It is night. She opens the Holy Ark[5] and sobs, "Holy Torah, intercede on behalf of Batya, daughter of Sarah. She is young and can still accomplish many good deeds for your glory. Tell the Lord, blessed be His name, to let her live. She will be more useful to Him than I." She closes the Ark and backs slowly to the door. There she stops and says, "If I have any years to live, Lord, give them to her. I exchange my future for hers. Let that be my gift." When Bea takes a few steps, I glance at my grandmother. She has offered her life. What will become of her now? I picture our house and see Hilda inside, Hilda the oldest of the children, whose radiant beauty drew all the matchmakers[6] of the region.

I see the people who came through that door day and night to consult with my father—my father who now, bent under the weight of his pack, knows not to whom he might turn for advice. And my mother, always gracious and brave, afraid to look at us, afraid to see the house, afraid to burst into tears only to find she can never stop. So she looks at the sky, the pitiless sky that numbs us with an unseasonable and stifling heat. And the sun? Will it keep its secret? The night before, very late, like makeshift gravediggers, we had dug a dozen holes under the trees to bury what remained of our jewelry, precious objects, and money. I buried the gold watch I had been given as a bar mitzvah[7] present.

For years I dreamed of returning to my native town. It was an obsession. It took two decades, and that trip has now been added to my obsessions. It was night. There was a sleeping town and a sleeping house which hadn't changed: the same gate, same garden, same well. Choked with fear, as though caught in a whirlwind of hallucinations, I wondered whether it had all been a dream, whether our Jewish neighbors were still there, and my parents and my sisters too. Terror swept me away and carried me back. I waited for a window to open and for a boy who looked like the child I had been to call out to me: Hey, mister, what are you doing in my dream?

But strangers were living in my house. They had never heard my name. Inside, nothing had changed: the same furniture, the same tile stove my father had borrowed money to buy; the beds, tables, and chairs

---

[3] Shabbat refers to the "Sabbath" or holy day for Jews, which occurs each week from sunset on Friday to the following night. In the Bible, Abraham is considered a patriarch, or father figure, to the Hebrew people. Sukkoth is a Jewish harvest festival. Rosh Hashana is the Jewish new year.

[4] Typhus is a disease characterized by high fever and delirium.

[5] The Holy Ark is a cabinet in a synagogue where the scrolls of the Torah, or the first five books of the Hebrew scriptures, are stored.

[6] Matchmakers are people who set up marriages.

[7] A bar mitzvah is a celebration of a Jewish boy's thirteenth birthday, marking the beginning of his adult and religious duties. ☆

1 The United States and the World What effect do you think international news can have on acts of injustice carried out by a government?

Narrator What do you know about the narrator at this point? What type of perspective does he have? 2

Reading Practice

Monitor Comprehension Wiesel blends childhood memories and adult experiences. He poses questions about truth and meaning in the world. To help students understand this difficult material, review reading strategies, such as asking questions, restating the author's ideas, and answering questions. Have students add these strategies: rereading, varying reading rate, using a dictionary, and creating a graphic organizer. Ask them to monitor their comprehension, noting strategies that help them.

were ours, still in the same places. My feverish eyes wandered left and right, up and down. Was it possible that not a single trace of us remained? But there was one, just one. On the wall above my bed had been a photograph of my beloved master, Rebbe Israel of Wizhnitz. I remember it well: I had hung it there the day he died, the second day of the month of Sivan.[8] I can see myself standing there, a heavy hammer in my hand, driving in the nail and hanging the frame. As I write these words, I suddenly realize that my mother died eight years later on exactly the same day, along with my little sister and Grandma Nissel. I cried for the Rebbe's death as I hung his photograph above my bed. The nail was still there. A huge cross was hanging from it.

And now, as I write these words, my heart is pounding. I should have closed my book and stopped my dream, dropped everything to play with my little sister.

"We must go now," my mother said. "We must stay together."

It was Tuesday afternoon. We were still in Sighet.[9] Our convoy would not leave for several days. We had been temporarily transferred to the smaller ghetto, whose inhabitants had just been driven out.

We moved into the home of Mendel, my father's brother. My mother cooked our favorite dish, latkes, potato pancakes. This time there was no rationing; we ate all we wanted.

Mendel was my silent uncle. He had married Golda, daughter of my maternal uncle Israel. He was pious[10] and shy. They had three children. Their photograph lies before me, saved by a relative.

Sacred books were scattered on the floor. Someone must have removed them from his bag at the last minute. The table was set, and there was food on the plates. They had been taken away in the middle of a meal. This was what remained of a family.

After the war I questioned every survivor of the second transport I could find, seeking news of Uncle Mendel and his family. I thought I found the answer in 1988, when an elderly man called out to me in the lobby of a Miami Beach hotel. He was, like me, of Romanian-Hungarian origin, from a small village near Sighet, and he told me he had stayed in the smaller ghetto until its evacuation. In fact, he had been in the same camp with my uncle. "Really?" I exclaimed. "You knew my uncle?" "Knew him!" he said. "For years I've seen him, even in my sleep." And then he told me. At first Mendel and his son had been spared, like my father and me, and had been sent to a camp where conditions were relatively tolerable. But they were in different barracks and saw each other only during the day, at work. One night they could not bear to be separated. When the roll was called, the SS[11] Blockführer counted and recounted the prisoners and ordered: "Let [8] Rebbe means "Rabbi," a Jewish spiritual teacher. Sivan is the ninth month in the Jewish year.

---

[9] Sighet is a town in Romania and the birthplace of Wiesel.

[10] Pious means "seriously or devoutly religious."

[11] SS refers to the Nazi paramilitary forces.

Activate Prior Knowledge How does Wiesel's account of his family's experience add to your understanding of the Holocaust? 3

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Activate Prior Knowledge

Answer: Students might say that Wiesel's portrayal of his family shows the unpredictability of life for Jewish people during World War II. Say: Consider why a family would suddenly leave the dinner table. (Students may suggest that only an emergency or important event could make a family interrupt dinner.)

Language History

Ghetto The word ghetto is Italian for "foundry" or "iron works." The first European ghetto, or segregated Jewish community, was on the grounds of an empty foundry in Venice in the sixteenth century. From then through the nineteenth century, ghettos were set up all over Europe. By the mid-1940s, Germans used ghettos as temporary housing for Jews and others they intended to send to concentration camps.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Jewish Traditions and Holidays Ask interested students to learn more about Jewish traditions such as praying in the synagogue and the holidays of Sukkoth, Rosh Hashana, and Passover. Invite students who are knowledgeable about modern Jewish faith to talk about these traditions and discuss their importance.

Comparing Literature

Literary Element 1

Narrator Answer: He juxtaposes his own memories with other people's recollections and his adult understandings. He relies on the past and present to tell his story.

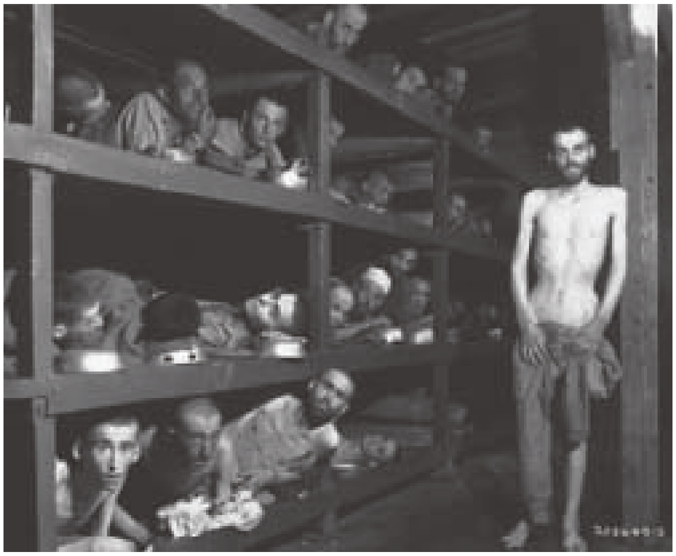
View the Photograph ★

As Allied forces advanced into Germany, the Nazis abandoned the Buchenwald concentration camp. When American forces arrived, nearly 21,000 prisoners remained there, too weak and ill to flee. U.S. reporters and photographers provided some of the first images of concentration camps to be published in the United States.



Survivors at Buchenwald concentration camp remain in their barracks after liberation by Allies on April 16, 1945. Elie Wiesel, the Nobel Prize-winning author, is on the second bunk from the bottom, sixth from the left. ★ the prisoner who does not belong in this barracks show himself." Mendel's son took a few steps forward. "Closer!" the officer shouted. My young cousin obeyed, halting when he reached the SS man. The officer slowly drew his revolver and shot my cousin in the head, point-blank. My uncle, that sweet and timid man, hurled himself onto his son's body, as if to protect him in death. The SS man stared at him for a long moment and then shot him in the head too. "Ever since then," my witness said, "I see Mendel and his son in my dreams."

And I, I think of the biblical law that, out of compassion for animals, forbids the slaughter of an ox and his calf on the same day. The Germans, however, did not shrink from killing a father and son together, without a second thought, as one would step on two insects.

Fishel and Voïcsi, my cousins from Antwerp,[12] later gave me a different version of their deaths. What is certain, though, is that the enemy annihilated my Uncle Mendel's family.

And what happened to my Aunt Zlati, my father's younger sister? I search my memories of the ghetto for her, but she is not there.

She was married to Nahman-Elye. I don't remember their two very young children, nor do I recall their presence during the weeks before the transport. Nahman-Elye, it seems, was among those the Hungarian army released from the labor battalions to be locked up in the ghetto. It seems he was deported with the first transport and later succumbed to the pressures and temptations of the camp life and became a cruel and murderous kapo.[13] It seems he was tried, sentenced to death, and executed by former deportees. My uncle in the enemy's service? A kapo? My uncle a torturer of his brothers in misfortune? I don't want to believe it.

But yes, that's the way it was.

We arrived at the station, where the cattle cars were waiting. Ever since my book Night I have pursued those nocturnal trains that crossed the devastated continent. Their

---

[12] Antwerp is a city in Belgium.

[13] Kapo refers to a prisoner who has been appointed by the enemy to police his or her own people.

Narrator How does Wiesel shape his account of the Holocaust? 1

Vocabulary

succumb (sə kum′) v. to give in or submit to

Writing Practice

Wiesel Biography After students read the selection, they may wish to learn what happened to Wiesel after World War II. Ask students to research Wiesel's adult life. Have them write a short biography that includes major events in his life, such as his winning a Nobel prize. Students should explain the impact that Wiesel's experiences during the war had on the rest of his life.

shadow haunts my writing. They symbolize solitude, distress, and the relentless march of Jewish multitudes toward agony and death. I freeze every time I hear a train whistle.

Why were those trains allowed to roll unhindered into Poland? Why were the tracks leading to Birkenau[14] never bombed? I have put these questions to American presidents and generals and to high-ranking Soviet officers. Since Moscow and Washington knew what the killers were doing in the death camps, why was nothing done at least to slow down their "production"? That not a single Allied military aircraft ever tried to destroy the rail lines converging on Auschwitz remains an outrageous enigma to me. Birkenau was "processing" ten thousand Jews a day. Stopping a single convoy for a single night—or even for just a few hours—would have prolonged so many lives. At the least it would have been a warning to the Germans: Jewish lives do matter. But the free world didn't care whether Jews lived or died, whether they were annihilated one day or the next. And so the sealed trains continued to shatter the silence of Europe's flowering landscapes.

Meanwhile, our world contracted[15] steadily. The country became a city, the city a street, the street a house, the house a room, the room a sealed cattle car, the cattle car a concrete cellar where . . .

No, let us go no further. Decency and custom forbid it. I said it earlier, when speaking of my grandfather: In Jewish tradition a man's death belongs to him alone. Let the gas chambers remain closed to prying eyes, and to the imagination. We will never know all that happened behind those doors of steel. They say the victims fought among themselves for a breath of air, for one more second of life, that they climbed on the shoulders of the weakest in the so-called Todeskampf, the final struggle among the dying. Much has been said when silence ought to have prevailed. Let the dead speak for themselves, if they so choose. If not, may they be left in peace.

It is unbelievable how fast people adapt. It hurts to admit it, but within hours of first breathing the cattle car's nauseating air, we began to feel at home. "Home" was the edge of the wooden plank I sat on as I dreamed of the Jewish exiles ☆ of antiquity and the Middle Ages. More curious than afraid, I thought of myself as their brother. Mixed into my sadness there was undeniable excitement, for we were living a historic event, a historic adventure. The main thing was that we were still together. Had we been told that this journey would last for weeks or even years, we would have replied: May God grant that it be so, for nothing is worse than the unknown, and that was our destination—the unknown. I remember clinging to the thought that nothing is unknown to God, while nothing is truly known to man.

A rumor spread through the train. The Jewish doctors and their families, until recently allowed to live outside the ghetto, had been ordered to return to the ghetto the night before the transport and to join us that morning at the station. But we had seen no sign of them. It was now said that they had gathered at one of their homes the night before and decided to kill themselves. The rumor was apparently false, for in Birkenau I ran into our family doctor, Dr. Fisch, who had helped deliver Tsipouka. But thirty years later I found that the story was true after all. I was lecturing at a large university near Boston when a member of the physics department came up to me. "You're from Sighet, aren't you?" he asked. "So am I." He introduced himself, and the name gave me a start: he was the son of a famous surgeon. In [14] Birkenau refers to Auschwitz-Birkenau, the most notorious of the Nazi concentration camps.

---

[15] Here, contracted means "shrunk, or made smaller."

2 The United States and the World How does Wiesel argue that international monitoring of human rights is necessary?

3 Narrator What qualities make Wiesel an effective storyteller of the Holocaust?

Comparing Literature

Teach

Big Idea 2

The United States and the World Answer: He infers that international monitoring can make people aware of human rights abuses and encourage people to take action against the perpetrators.

Literary Element 3

Narrator Answer: He has a deep respect for human life and Jewish tradition, and he experienced the Holocaust firsthand. He includes vivid images in his descriptions.

Cultural History ☆

Jewish Exile or Diaspora The word Diaspora refers to both the dispersion of the Jews from Palestine after the Kingdom of Judah fell to the Babylonians in 586 B.C. and to all of the Jewish communities living outside of Palestine or present-day Israel.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Discuss the meanings and connotations of the words home, normal, and neighbor found on this page and the next. Say: Wiesel places quotation marks around these words. For example, he refers to the edge of a wooden plank in a bad-smelling cattle car as "home." Ask: What is he trying to convey? (that the meanings of these words have completely changed under these terrible circumstances)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging To help students comprehend the author's story, have partners create a cluster diagram with Elie Wiesel's name in the center. As they read, students should write in circles around the center the events that Wiesel recounts and his feelings about each.

Teach

Vocabulary 1

Word Parts Help students decode the meaning of premonitions. The prefix pre- means “before;” the root moni comes from the Latin monere, which means “to warn”; and the suffix -tion, means “state or action.” The word means “warnings or forebodings.”

Reading Strategy 2

Activate Prior Knowledge

Answer: Students might say that Wiesel’s experience matches their expectations because people often look for a close-knit support group, such as a family, in times of crisis.

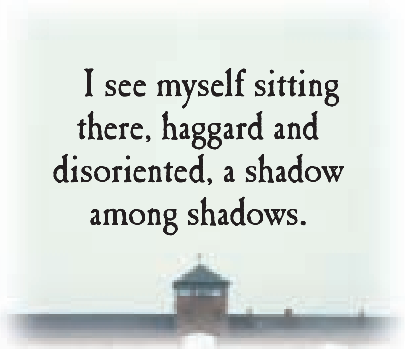
Sighet we had evolved in different circles, but we had been brought to Auschwitz in the same convoy. We had a long talk about our town, and at one point I asked him about the rumor. He confirmed it. The doctors had indeed agreed on a collective suicide pact. “But why? Since at the time we didn’t know where they were taking us.” It turned out that his father did know. He had operated on a German officer who told him everything. Afterward he had summoned his colleagues to discuss what to do. The majority voted not to board the trains, deciding they might as well die at home. Some of the suicides did not succeed. They were carried to the cattle cars on stretchers.

I see myself sitting there, haggard and disoriented, a shadow among shadows.



My new friend the physics professor died one night in June 1991. A suicide, rumor had it. I was struck by the date. I realized that he too had died on the second day of the month of Sivan, exactly forty-seven years after his missed appointment with death in Birkenau.

Life in the cattle cars was the death of my adolescence. How quickly I aged. As a child I loved the unexpected: a visitor from afar, an unforeseen event, a marriage, a storm, even a disaster. Anything was preferable to routine. Now it was just the opposite. Anything was preferable to change. We clung to the present, we dreaded the future.

Hunger, thirst, and heat, the fetid stench, the hysterical howling of a woman gone mad—we were ready to endure it all, to suffer it all. So much so that a “normal,” structured social life soon took shape in the car. Families stayed together, sharing whatever came their way: hard-boiled eggs, dried cakes, or fruit, respecting strict rules about drinking water, allowing each member a turn near the barred openings or at the waste pail shielded by blankets. People adjusted with disconcerting rapidity. Morning and evening we said our prayers together. I had brought some precious books along in my pack: a commentary by Rabbi Haim David Azoulai (the Hida), the K’dushat Levi of the Berdichever Rebbe. I opened them and tried hard to concentrate. A phrase of the Zohar, a major work of the Kabala,[16] haunted me: When the people of Israel set out into exile, God went with them. And now? I wondered. How far would God follow us now?

On the last day, when the train stopped near the Auschwitz station, our premonitions resurfaced. A few “neighbors” 1 devoured more than their rations, as though sensing that their days were numbered. My mother kept entreating us: Stay together at all costs. Someone, I can’t remember who, asked, “What if we can’t? What if they separate us?” My mother’s answer: “Then we’ll meet again at home as soon as the war is over.”

Certain images of the days and nights spent on that train invade my dreams even now: anticipation of danger, fear of the dark; the screams of poor Mrs. Schechter, who, in her delirium, saw flames in the distance; the [16] The Kabala, also spelled “Kabbalah,” is a book of mystical teachings based on the Jewish faith.

---

Activate Prior Knowledge What do you know about the way people tend to react in a crisis? How does Wiesel’s experience compare and contrast with your expectations? 2

Vocabulary

fetid (fe´ təd) adj. having a bad odor

Vocabulary

premonition (prē´ mə nish´ ən) n. a warning, or foreboding about the future

Listening and Speaking Practice

Compare and Contrast Wiesel writes that “Life in the cattle cars was the death of my adolescence.” He compares life before this event to life on the cars and beyond. To initiate a discussion, ask: What changes for the author on the cattle cars? (love of the unexpected turns to dread of the future; the adolescent rapidly ages; suffering becomes normal; life on the car becomes structured) When the car comes to a stop, Wiesel thinks that “Fate would at last reveal a truth reserved exclusively for us, a primordial truth, an ultimate postulate that would annihilate or overshadow all received ideas.” Have students discuss the “truth” that Wiesel discovers. (the horror of Auschwitz, the unthinkable acts of evil being committed) Ask: How does Wiesel respond initially to this truth? (He thinks he must be having a nightmare.)

3 efforts to make her stop; the terror in her little boy's eyes. I recall every hour, every second. How could I forget? They were the last hours I spent with my family: the murmured prayers of my grandmother, whose eyes saw beyond this world; my mother's gestures, which had never been more tender; the troubled face of my little sister, who refused to show her fear. Yes, my memory gathered it all in, retained it all.

There was sudden trepidation that gripped us when, toward midnight, the train lurched forward again after stopping for several hours. I can still hear the whistle. Elsewhere I have told of what happened next—or rather, I have tried to tell it. But it feels like yesterday. It feels like now. Through the cracks in the boards I see barbed wire stretching to infinity. A thought occurs to me: The Kabala is right, infinity exists.

I see myself sitting there, haggard and disoriented, a shadow among shadows. I hear my little sister's fitful breathing. I try to conjure up my mother's features, and my father's. I need someone to reassure me. My heart thunders in deafening beats. Then there is silence, heavy and complete. Something was about to happen, we could feel it. Fate would at last reveal a truth reserved exclusively for us, a primordial truth, an ultimate postulate[17] that would annihilate or overshadow all received ideas. There was a burst of noise and the night was shattered into a thousand pieces. I felt myself shaken, pulled to my feet, pushed toward the door, toward strange shouting beings and barking dogs, a swelling throng that would cover the earth.

4 In Night I tell of the wrath of the "veterans." They swore at us. "What the hell are you Schweinehunde[18] doing here?" I was puzzled. Did they think we had come to this hell voluntarily, out of curiosity? Only years later did I understand. Two of their former companions, Rudolf Vrba and Alfred Wetzler, had managed to escape from Birkenau in 1944 to warn ☆ Hungarian Jews of what was awaiting them. That's why they were so enraged. They thought we should have known. Some of them even hit us. 4

Where were we going? It mattered little, for it was the same everywhere. All roads led to the enemy; it was he who would throw open the invisible black door that awaited us. "Stay together," my mother said. For another minute we did, clinging to one another's arms. Nothing in the world could separate us. The entire German army could not take my little sister from me. Then a curt order was issued—men on one side, women on the other—and that was that. A single order, and we were separated. I stared intently, trying desperately not to lose sight of my mother, my little sister with her hair of gold and sun, my grandmother, my older sisters. I see them always, for I am still looking for them, trying to embrace them one last time. We were taken away before I could tell my mother goodbye, before I could kiss her hand and beg her forgiveness for the wrongs I must have done her, before I could squeeze Tsipouka, my little sister, to my heart. What remains of that night like no other is an irremediable[19] sense of loss, of parting. My mother and my little sister left, and I never said goodbye. It all remains unreal. It's only a dream, I told myself as I walked, hanging on my father's arm. It's a nightmare that they have torn me from those I love, that they are beating people to death, that Birkenau exists and that it harbors a gigantic altar where demons of fire devour our people. It's in God's nightmare that human beings are hurling living Jewish children into the flames.

I reread what I have just written, and my hand trembles. I who barely weep am in tears. I

---

[17] A postulate is a truth, or basic principle.

[18] Schweinehunde, meaning "pig dogs," is a German word expressing a stereotypical insult.

[19] Irremediable means "impossible to correct."

Vocabulary

curt (kurt) adj. rudely brief, or short; terse

Comparing Literature

Teach

Literary Element 3

Narrator The narrator describes in great detail the agony and despair he witnessed many years before. Ask: Is it likely that someone can remember exactly what happened years before? (Yes. Traumatic events tend to imprint themselves strongly in the memory.)

Literary Element 4

Irony Ask: What is ironic about the response of "veterans" to the new arrivals? (They are angry and frustrated; they had hoped the newcomers would have been warned.)

Political History ☆

Requests to Bomb Auschwitz

Rudolf Vrba and Alfred Wetzler reported on the atrocities at Auschwitz. U.S. officials did not receive the complete report—with its requests to bomb Auschwitz—until six months after other Allied intelligence officials. They did not take action because, critics suggest, they were unwilling to divert equipment.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Beginning Students may struggle with the vocabulary and syntax on this page and the next as the author describes his feelings and attempts to understand such evil. Have partners or small groups work together to read the second half of this page and all of the next page, summarize each paragraph, and discuss difficult concepts, images, or words. Have students use a dictionary to find the meaning of words as needed.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Respond Some learners may respond deeply to experiences Wiesel describes but may not share their feelings aloud in class. Have students write their thoughts in a journal or create poems or drawings that reflect their responses to the selection.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: He wants the world to acknowledge its mistakes and honor those who died in the Holocaust by preventing further tragedies.

ADVANCED The Nazis' treatment of the Jews was not a major factor behind the United States' entrance into the war. Say: In 1979, Elie Wiesel criticized the former Allied powers, saying, "The world knew and kept silent." Ask: Why did Wiesel remind the former Allies of their inaction? (He wants them to realize that their inaction may have allowed the killing of millions of people.)

Political History ☆

Auschwitz-Birkenau

Auschwitz consisted of a prison camp, a slave labor camp, and an extermination or death camp. Wiesel and his father were sent to Buna-Morowitz, the slave labor camp. Birkenau, or Auschwitz II, was the extermination camp. Nearly 1.5 million people were killed at Auschwitz-Birkenau, more than at any other Nazi camp.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 184–185.

see the flames again, and the children, and yet again I tell myself that it is not enough to weep.

It took me a long time to convince myself I was not somehow mistaken. I have checked with others who arrived that same night, consulted documents of the Sonderkommandos,[20] and yes, a thousand times yes: Unable to "handle" such a large number of Hungarian Jews in the crematoria, the killers were not content merely to incinerate children's dead bodies. In their barbarous madness they cast living Jewish children into specially tended furnaces.

And if I bear within me a nameless grief and disillusionment, a bottomless despair, it is because that night I saw good and thoughtful Jewish children, bearers of mute words and dreams, walking into darkness before being consumed by the flames. I see them now, and I still curse the killers, their accomplices, the indifferent spectators who knew and kept silent, and Creation itself, Creation and those who perverted and distorted it. I feel like screaming, howling like a madman so that that world, the world of the murderers, might know it will never be forgiven.

To this day I am shaken when I see a child, for behind him I glimpse other children. Starving, terrified, drained, they march without a backward glance toward truth and death—which are perhaps the same. Uncomplaining, unprotesting, asking no one's pity, it is as if they have had enough of living on a planet so cruel, so vile and so filled with hate that their very innocence has brought their death. Do not deny it, I forbid you to deny it. Know, then, that the world that let the killers annihilate a million and a half Jewish children bears its guilt within itself.

That night someone within me, my other self, told me it was impossible that these atrocities could be committed in the middle of the twentieth century while the world stayed silent. This was not the Middle Ages. My very last resistance broken, I let myself be pulled, pushed, and kicked, like a deaf and mute sleepwalker. I could see everything, grasp it and register it, but only later would I try to put in order all the sensations and all the memories. How stunned I was, for example, to discover another time outside time, a universe parallel to this one, a creation within Creation, with its own laws, customs, structures, and language. In this universe some men existed only to kill and others only to die. And the system functioned with exemplary efficiency: tormentors tormented and crushed their prey, torturers tortured human beings whom they met for the first time, slaughterers slaughtered their victims without so much as a glance, flames rose to heaven and nothing ever jammed the mechanism. It was as if it all unfolded according to a plan decreed from the beginning of time.

And what of human ideals, or of the beauty of innocence or the weight of justice? And what of God in all that?

I didn't understand, though I wanted to. Ask any survivor and you will hear the same thing: above all, we tried to understand. Why all these deaths? What was the point of this death factory? How to account for the demented mind that devised this black hole of history called Birkenau? ☆

Perhaps there was nothing to understand.

---

[20] Sonderkommandos refers to "special commandos," a group of Jewish prisoners whose job was to maintain and clean the crematoria, or gas chambers.

1 The United States and the World What do you think is Wiesel's purpose in spreading the blame for the atrocities of the Holocaust?

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Drawing Conclusions This narrator's central question is "As a survivor, how can I understand the horror of the Holocaust?" Ask students to discuss the narrator's attempts to understand his experiences. Have small groups consider these questions:

- What does the narrator/writer finally understand?
- How does his quest for understanding affect him?

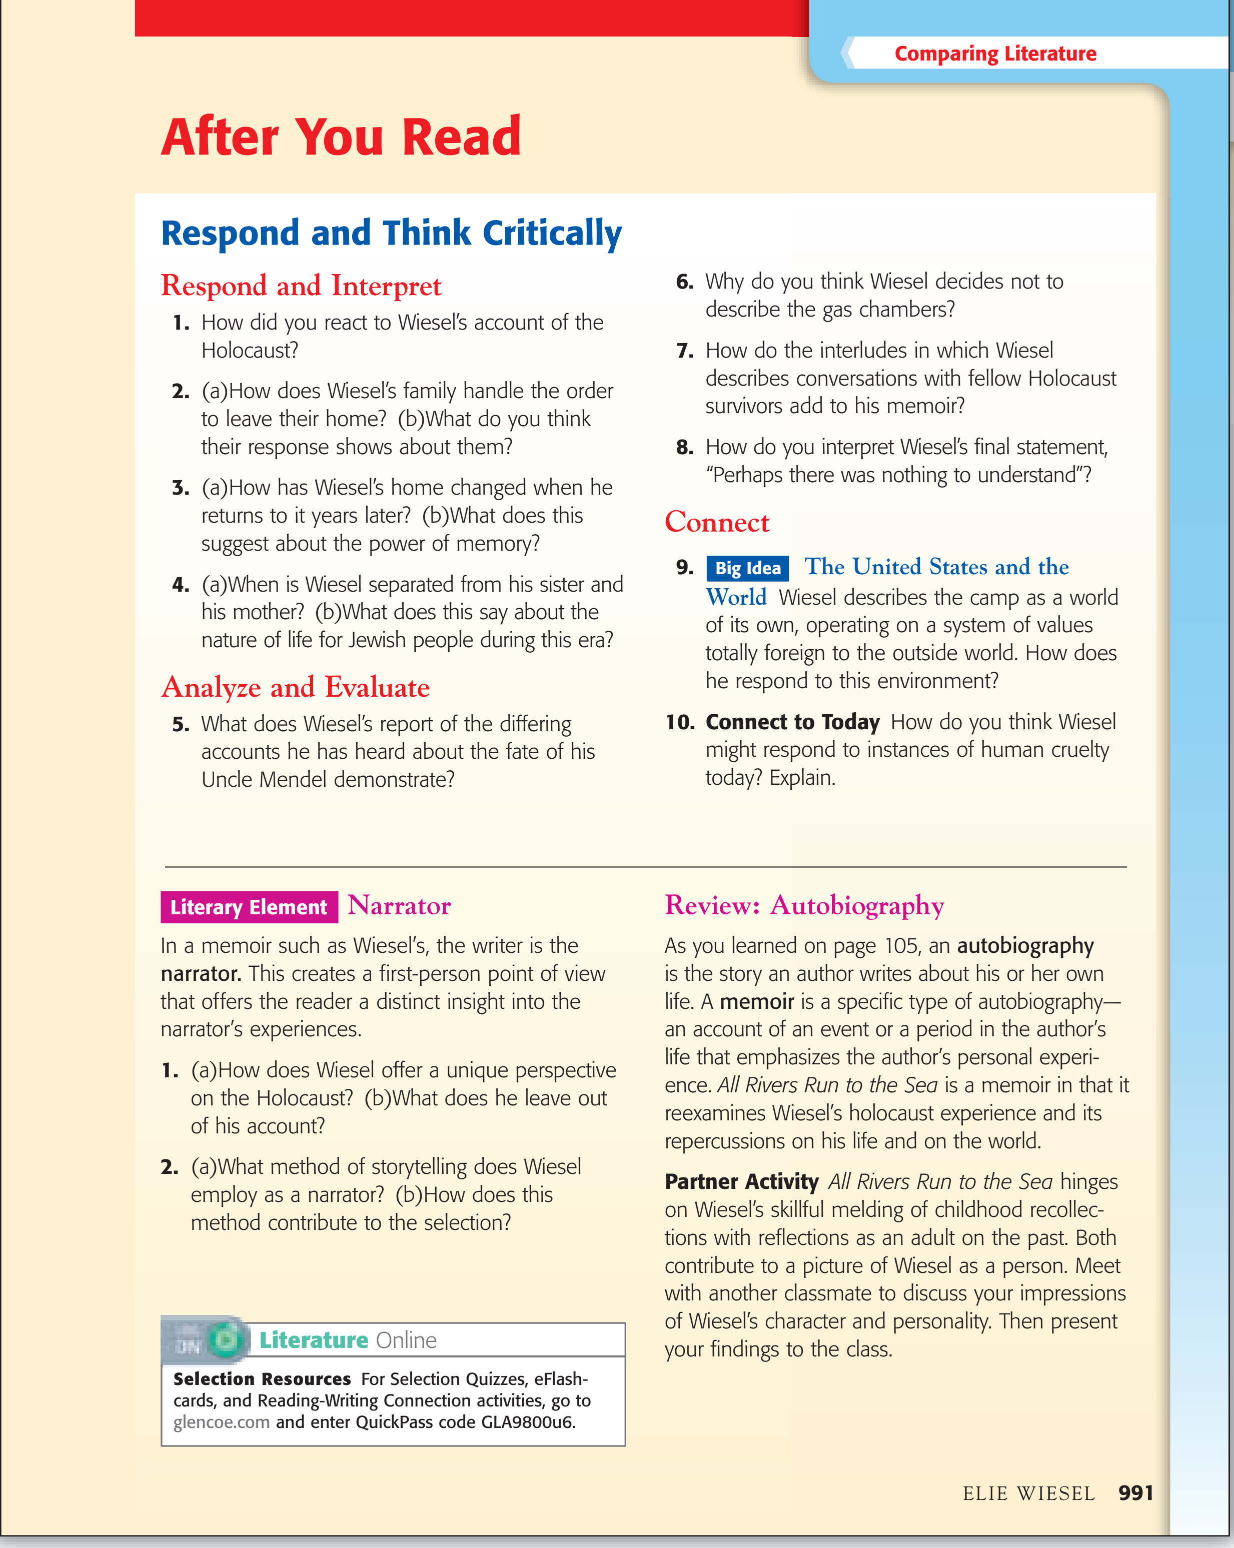
Have groups share their conclusions with the class, supporting their ideas with evidence from the selection.

After You Read

Assess

1. How could world leaders let this happen?
2. (a) They bury their valuables and vow to stay together. (b) They try to be brave.
3. (a) Building and furniture are the same, none of his family lives there, a cross hangs where there was once a rabbi's picture (b) Memories of a home can remain strong long after a person has left it.
4. (a) When troops separate men and women at the camp (b) Under Nazi rule, they had no control over their lives.
5. It is hard to find the truth in a time of war; memories torment the survivors.
6. He will "Let the dead speak for themselves"; "decency and custom forbid" him from describing the chambers. He focuses on survivors rather than on the death of millions.
7. They show the lingering of the Holocaust memories in the minds of survivors.
8. He thinks some human actions may be beyond explanation.
9. He writes, "I didn't understand, though I wanted to."
10. Wiesel would probably respond in a similar way to modern atrocities, placing special blame on those who allow such horrors to continue.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 259–260.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. How did you react to Wiesel's account of the Holocaust?
2. (a)How does Wiesel's family handle the order to leave their home? (b)What do you think their response shows about them?
3. (a)How has Wiesel's home changed when he returns to it years later? (b)What does this suggest about the power of memory?
4. (a)When is Wiesel separated from his sister and his mother? (b)What does this say about the nature of life for Jewish people during this era?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. What does Wiesel's report of the differing accounts he has heard about the fate of his Uncle Mendel demonstrate?
6. Why do you think Wiesel decides not to describe the gas chambers?
7. How do the interludes in which Wiesel describes conversations with fellow Holocaust survivors add to his memoir?
8. How do you interpret Wiesel's final statement, "Perhaps there was nothing to understand"?

Connect

9. Big Idea The United States and the World Wiesel describes the camp as a world of its own, operating on a system of values totally foreign to the outside world. How does he respond to this environment?
10. Connect to Today How do you think Wiesel might respond to instances of human cruelty today? Explain.

Literary Element Narrator

In a memoir such as Wiesel's, the writer is the narrator. This creates a first-person point of view that offers the reader a distinct insight into the narrator's experiences.

1. (a)How does Wiesel offer a unique perspective on the Holocaust? (b)What does he leave out of his account?
2. (a)What method of storytelling does Wiesel employ as a narrator? (b)How does this method contribute to the selection?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Review: Autobiography

As you learned on page 105, an autobiography is the story an author writes about his or her own life. A memoir is a specific type of autobiography—an account of an event or a period in the author's life that emphasizes the author's personal experience. All Rivers Run to the Sea is a memoir in that it reexamines Wiesel's holocaust experience and its repercussions on his life and on the world.

Partner Activity All Rivers Run to the Sea hinges on Wiesel's skillful melding of childhood recollections with reflections as an adult on the past. Both contribute to a picture of Wiesel as a person. Meet with another classmate to discuss your impressions of Wiesel's character and personality. Then present your findings to the class.

Literary Element

1. (a) He is an eyewitness who lives with memories of the Holocaust. (b) Some details, such as how people died in the gas chambers
2. (a) Remembered anecdotes (b) They humanize the tragedy and connect historical events with real people.

Progress Check

Can students analyze the narrative point of view?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 179.

Comparing Literature

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. Students may cite the table with food left on it and the youngest sister's innocent face.
2. Some may say it is easier to connect with the writer; they know what he thinks and feels. Others may say his experiences are too removed from their own.

Vocabulary

1. unutterably
2. succumb
3. fetid
4. premonition
5. curt

To create custom assessments online, go to Progress Reporter Online Assessment.

To create custom assessments using software, use ExamView Assessment Suite.

Reading Strategy Activate Prior Knowledge

You derive meaning from literature by activating prior knowledge, or combining what you already know with the information provided in the text.

1. Cite two examples of details in the text that you were instantly able to connect with given your prior knowledge or experience.
2. Memoirs are narrated in the first-person and may include personal details from the writer's life. Do you think that this makes it easier or more difficult for the reader to connect? Explain.

Vocabulary Practice

Denotation and Connotation
Denotation is a word's literal, or dictionary, meaning. Connotation is its implied, or cultural, meaning. Deserted and desolate have a similar denotation, but different connotations:

Weaker	Stronger
deserted	desolate

In each pair of words below choose the one that has a stronger connotation.

1. ineffably	unutterably
2. succumb	submit
3. fetid	smelly
4. premonition	warning
5. curt	terse

Academic Vocabulary

Elie Wiesel constantly faces challenges in his recovery from the Holocaust.

Recovery is an academic word. It is also used in economics and in reference to overcoming a problem. Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of recovery in the following sentence: *After a depression, the economy undergoes an upturn, or recovery.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Connect to Social Studies

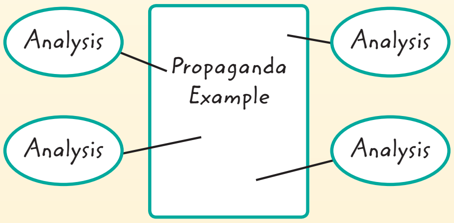
Present an Oral Report

Assignment Adolf Hitler and the Third Reich used propaganda to gather popular support for their brutal campaign against the Jews. Present an oral report on Nazi propaganda. Focus on the persuasive techniques used and evaluate their effectiveness. Then find examples of contemporary propaganda and compare and contrast the techniques employed with those the Nazis used.

Investigate To research this subject, draw on several sources, such as histories of Nazi Germany and histories of propaganda. Make sure you understand various propaganda techniques, such as the use of logical fallacies like arguments ad hominem, the bandwagon effect, glittering generalities, and red herring arguments. Use these terms to organize your report. For example, show how the Nazis used the bandwagon effect in political rallies designed to convince Germans of Hitler's strength as a leader. Then compare the techniques the Nazis used with techniques used in propaganda today.

Create Find examples of Nazi anti-Jewish propaganda to use in your presentation. These examples could be print (including visuals such as cartoons and posters), audio, or video material. Make sure you effectively incorporate these visual aids, analyzing them rather than merely displaying them. Be sure to cite all sources correctly.



Report During your oral report, discuss the different interpretations and analyses of Nazi propaganda you encountered in your research. Synthesize these interpretations and present your own conclusions.

Academic Vocabulary

Possible answer: Here, recovery means "a period of economic growth after a depression."

Connect to Social Studies

Use these criteria when evaluating students' oral reports:

- Did the student clearly identify various persuasive techniques?
- Did the student effectively use visual aids?
- Did the student synthesize interpretations of Nazi propaganda from various sources?

Build Background

Garrett Hongo's memoir Kubota addresses the Japanese military attack on Pearl Harbor in Hawaii that prompted the United States to enter World War II. Although Hongo was not alive during this attack, his family was deeply affected by it. During the war, more than 120,000 Japanese Americans were forced to live in internment camps set up by the U.S. government. Decades later the government apologized for this injustice and paid reparations.

from Kubota

Garrett Hongo

1

It was a Monday night, the day after Pearl Harbor, and there was a rattling knock at the front door. Two FBI agents presented themselves, showed identification, and took my grandfather in for questioning in Honolulu. He didn't return home for days. No one knew what had happened or what was wrong. But there was a roundup going on of all those in the Japanese-American community suspected of sympathizing with the enemy and worse.

My grandfather was suspected of espionage,[1] of communicating with offshore Japanese submarines launched from the attack fleet days before the war began. Torpedo planes and escort fighters, decorated with the insignia of the Rising Sun, had taken an approach route from northwest of Oahu directly across Kahuku Point and on toward Pearl. They had strafed[2] an auxiliary air station near the fishing grounds my grandfather loved and destroyed a small gun battery there, killing three men. Kubota[3] was known to have sponsored and harbored Japanese nationals in his own home. He had a radio. He had wholesale access to firearms. Circumstances and an undertone of racial resentment had combined with wartime hysteria in the aftermath of the tragic naval battle to cast suspicion on the loyalties of my grandfather and all other Japanese Americans. The FBI reached out and pulled hundreds of them in for questioning in dragnets cast throughout the West Coast and Hawaii.

My grandfather was lucky; he'd somehow been let go after only a few days. Others were not as fortunate. Hundreds, from small communities in Washington, California, Oregon, and Hawaii, were rounded up and, after what appeared to be routine questioning, shipped off under Justice Department orders to holding centers in Leuppe on the Navaho reservation in Arizona, in Fort Missoula in Montana, and on Sand Island in Honolulu Harbor. There were other special camps on Maui in Ha'iku and on Hawaii—the Big Island—in my own home village of Volcano.

Many of these men—it was exclusively the Japanese-American men suspected of ties to Japan who were initially rounded up—did not see their families again for more than four

---

[1] Espionage means spying.

[2] Strafed means "attacked with machine guns from low-flying aircraft."

[3] Kubota (ko͞o bō′ tä)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Established Invite approaching level students to predict the author's purpose for writing and what will happen in the selection. By making and then verifying and revising their predictions as they read, students can be actively involved in their reading. Ask students to consider their predictions in small groups after they have read two or three pages. Which predictions can they verify from the text? What is Hongo's purpose for telling this story about his grandfather? Have groups write new predictions and then verify or revise them as they read on.

Comparing Literature

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

When Kubota tells his grandson, Garrett Hongo, about the internment of Japanese Americans after Pearl Harbor, Hongo is shocked. He is determined to become a voice for Japanese Americans; he refuses to let the events after Pearl Harbor be forgotten.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Activate Prior Knowledge

Say: During World War II, anti-Japanese sentiment caused the U.S. government to pass the War Relocation Authority. This legalized the forcible relocation of people of Japanese ancestry on the West Coast to ten isolated camps around the country. Ask: Why do you think this happened? (Pearl Harbor in Hawaii was bombed by the Japanese and the closest U.S. coast was the West Coast. Also, many people of Japanese ancestry lived on the West Coast.)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 9.0
DRP: 63
Lexile: 1180

Teach

Literary Element 1

Memoir Elicit from students the similarities and differences between a memoir and an autobiography. Both are types of narrative nonfiction written by a person about him- or herself. However, a memoir typically focuses on a period of time in a person's life while an autobiography presents a person's life story.

Reading Strategy 2

Draw Conclusions Ask: Why does Kubota finally tell Hongo the story? (He thinks his grandson is old enough to hear it; perhaps he needs to tell Hongo for peace of mind.)

Political History ☆

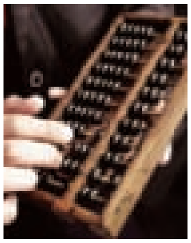
Japanese American Soldiers

During the war, the U.S. government formed several segregated all-Japanese units, made up of thousands of volunteers from Hawaii and the mainland, anxious to prove their loyalty to the United States. While a few of these soldiers served in the Pacific, most were sent to Europe to fight. The 442nd Regimental Combat Team and the 100th Infantry Battalion fought in seven major European campaigns and received more decorations and awards than any similar-sized unit serving for the same amount of time in U.S. military history.

years. Under a suspension of due process[4] that was only after the fact ruled as warranted by military necessity, they were, if only temporarily, "disappeared" in Justice Department prison camps scattered in particularly desolate areas of the United States designated as militarily "safe." These were grim forerunners of the assembly centers and concentration camps for ☆ the 120,000 Japanese-American evacuees that were to come later.

I am Kubota's eldest grandchild, and I remember him as a lonely, habitually silent old man who lived with us in our home near Los Angeles for most of my childhood and adolescence. It was the fifties, and my parents had emigrated from Hawaii to the mainland in the hope of a better life away from the old sugar plantation. After some success, they had sent back for my grandparents and taken them in. And it was my grandparents who did the work of the household while my mother and father worked their salaried city jobs. My grandmother cooked and sewed, washed our clothes, and knitted in the front room under the light of a huge lamp with a bright three-way bulb. Kubota raised a flower garden, read up on soils and grasses in gardening books, and planted a zoysia lawn in front and a dichondra[5] one in back. He planted a small patch near the rear block wall with green onions, eggplant, white Japanese radishes, and cucumber. While he hoed and spaded the loamless, clayey earth of Los Angeles, he sang particularly plangent[6] songs in Japanese about plum blossoms and bamboo groves.

Once, in the mid-sixties, after a dinner during which, as always, he had been silent while he worked away at a meal of fish and rice spiced with dabs of Chinese mustard and catsup thinned with soy sauce, Kubota took his own dishes to the kitchen sink and washed them up. He took a clean jelly jar out of the cupboard—the glass was thick and its shape squatty like an old-fashioned. He reached around to the hutch below where he kept his bourbon. He made himself a drink and retired to the living room where I was expected to join him for "talk story," the Hawaiian idiom for chewing the fat.



Visual Vocabulary
On an abacus the positions of beads stand for numbers.

I was a teenager and, though I was bored listening to stories I'd heard often enough before 1 at holiday dinners, I was dutiful. I took my spot on the couch next to Kubota and heard him out. Usually, he'd tell me about his schooling in Japan where he learned judo along with mathematics and literature. He'd learned the soroban there—the abacus, which was the original pocket calculator of the Far East—and that, along with his strong, judo-trained back, got him his first job in Hawaii. This was the moral. "Study ha-ahd," he'd say with pidgin[7] emphasis. "Learn read good. Learn speak da kine good English." The message is the familiar one taught to any children of immigrants: succeed through education. And imitation. But this time, Kubota reached down into his past and told me a different story. I was thirteen by then, and I suppose he thought me ready for it. 2 He told me about Pearl Harbor, how the planes flew in wing after wing of formations over his old house in La'ie in Hawaii, and how, the next [4] Due process is the administration of the law according to prescribed procedures.

---

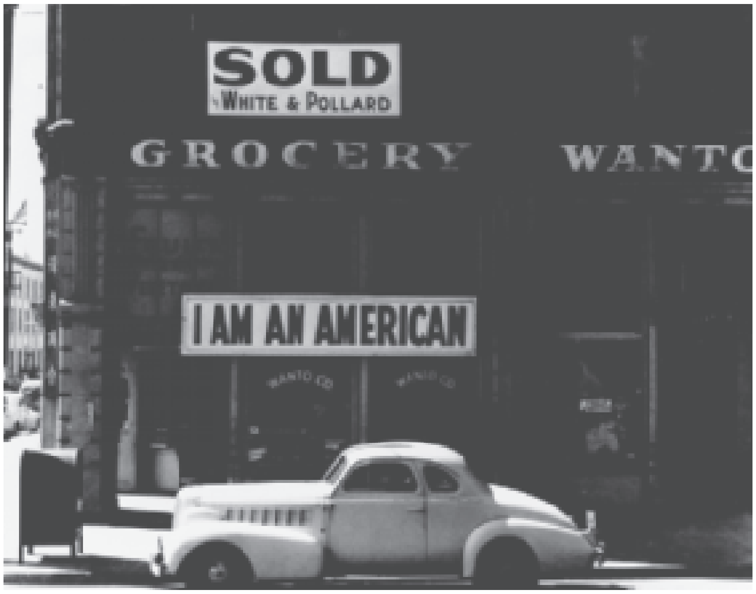
[5] Zoysia (zoi′ zhə) is a type of grass. Dichondra (dī kän′ drə) is a type of herb used for lawns.

[6] Plangent (plan′ jənt) can mean either "mournful" or "loud and echoing."

[7] Pidgin (pij′ ən) is a hybrid language that is a mixture of two or more languages and that has a simplified vocabulary and grammatical structure.

Writing Practice

Describe a Character With his writing, Hongo paints a vivid picture of his grandfather, showing Kubota's character through dialogue and action. Ask students to find words and phrases that convey Kubota's personality. Using these as a springboard, tell each student to write a description of someone in his or her community. First have them list things the person says and does that reveal personal traits. Encourage students to write in the form of related anecdotes, as Hongo does in the selection.



Japanese-American U.S. citizens forced to sell their store because of the internment proclaim their patriotism. ★ day, after Roosevelt[8] had made his famous 2 "Day of Infamy" speech about the treachery of the Japanese, the FBI agents had come to his door and taken him in, hauled him off to Honolulu for questioning, and held him without charge for several days. I thought he was lying. I thought he was making up a kind of horror story to shock me and give his moral that much more starch. But it was true. I asked around. I brought it up during history class in junior high school, and my teacher, after silencing me and stepping me off to the back 3 of the room, told me that it was indeed so. I asked my mother and she said it was true. I asked my schoolmates, who laughed and ridiculed me for being so ignorant. We lived in a Japanese-American community, and the parents of most of my classmates were the nisei[9] who had been interned[10] as teenagers all through the war. But there was a strange silence around all of this. There was a hush, as if one were invoking the ill powers of the dead 3 when one brought it up. No one cared to speak about the evacuation and relocation for very long. It wasn't in our history books, though we were studying World War II at the time. It wasn't in the family albums of the people I knew and whom I'd visit staying over weekends with friends. And it wasn't anything that the family talked about or allowed me to keep bringing up either. I was given the facts, told sternly and pointedly that "it was war" and that "nothing could be done." "Shikatta ga nai"[11] is the phrase in Japanese, a kind of resolute and determinist pronouncement on how to deal with inexplicable tragedy. I was to know it but not to dwell on it. Japanese Americans were busy trying to forget it ever happened and were having a hard enough

---

[8] President Franklin D. Roosevelt (1882–1945) addressed Congress the day after the bombing of Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, saying it was "a date which will live in infamy."

[9] The Japanese word nisei (nē′ sā) refers to children of Japanese immigrants; that is, the first generation of Japanese Americans born in the United States.

[10] Interned means "confined or restricted to a particular place, especially during war."

[11] "Shikatta ga nai" is pronounced (shē kä′ tä gä nī).

Comparing Literature

Teach

Big Idea 3

The United States and the World Read aloud the bracketed text. Point out that Hongo never lived in an internment camp. Ask: Why might facts about the relocation have been omitted from history textbooks? (No one wanted to discuss the shameful time in U.S. history when citizens were relocated to camps without due process.)

View the Photograph ★

Ask: What feeling or tone does the photograph convey? (The feeling is the sadness and outrage that many Japanese Americans felt.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Hongo replicates the sound of his grandfather's speech in this selection. Help students translate Kubota's words. For example, "ha-ahd" on page 994 is the word hard.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Ask visual learners to create sketches that show how Hongo learned about Japanese internment camps. Ask students to draw important scenes in the selection and write captions that describe them. Display their illustrations in a logical order.

Teach

Literary Element | 1

Tone Remind students that a writer's tone expresses an attitude toward the subject. Connotation and description can express tone. Ask: What does Hongo's tone reveal about his feelings for his grandfather? (His tone is respectful but questioning and uncertain. His grandfather was persistent. He admires this persistence but does not understand his grandfather's urgency.)

Reading Strategy | 2

Draw Conclusions Ask: What story does Kubota want Hongo to tell? (stories of the internment experiences of Japanese Americans during World War II.) Ask: How does Kubota stand apart from others in his community? (Others want to bury this history; Kubota wants to tell the story so past mistakes will not be repeated.)

---

time building their new lives after "camp." It was as if we had no history for four years and the relocation was something unspeakable.

1 But Kubota would not let it go. In session after session, for months it seemed, he pounded away at his story. He wanted to tell me the names of the FBI agents. He went over their questions and his responses again and again. He'd tell me how one would try to act friendly toward him, offering him cigarettes while the other, who hounded him with accusations and threats, left the interrogation room. Good cop, bad cop, I thought to myself, already superficially streetwise from stories black classmates told of the Watts[12] riots and from my having watched too many episodes of Dragnet and The Mod Squad.[13] But Kubota was not interested in my experiences. I was not made yet, and he was determined that his stories be part of my making. He spoke quietly at first, mildly, but once into his narrative and after his drink was down, his voice would rise and quaver with resentment and he'd make his accusations. He gave his testimony to me and I held it at first cautiously in my conscience like it was an heirloom too delicate to expose to strangers and anyone outside of the world Kubota made with his words. "I give you story now," he once said, "and you learn speak good, eh?" It was my job, as the disciple of his preaching I had then become, Ananda to his Buddha,[14] to reassure him with a promise. "You learn speak good like the Dillingham," he'd say another time, referring to the wealthy scion of the grower family who had once run, unsuccessfully, for one of Hawaii's first senatorial seats. Or he'd then invoke a magical name, the name of one of his heroes, a man he thought particularly exemplary and righteous. "Learn speak dah good Ing-rish like Mistah Inouye," Kubota shouted. "He lick dah Dillingham even in debate. I saw on terrebision myself." He was remembering the debates before the first senatorial election just before Hawaii was admitted to the Union as its fiftieth state. "You tell story," Kubota would end. And I had my injunction.[15] 2

The town we settled in after the move from Hawaii is called Gardena, the independently incorporated city south of Los Angeles and north of San Pedro harbor. At its northern limit, it borders on Watts and Compton, black towns. To the southwest are Torrance and Redondo Beach, white towns. To the rest of L.A., Gardena is primarily famous for having legalized five-card draw poker after the war. On Vermont Boulevard, its eastern border, there is a dingy little Vegas-like strip of card clubs with huge parking lots and flickering neon signs that spell out "The Rainbow" and "The Horseshoe" in timed sequences of vari-colored lights. The town is only secondarily famous as the largest community of Japanese Americans in the United States outside of Honolulu, Hawaii. When I was in high school there, it seemed to me that every sansei[16] kid I knew wanted to be a doctor, an engineer, or a pharmacist. Our fathers were gardeners or electricians or nurserymen or ran small businesses catering to other Japanese Americans. Our mothers worked in civil service for the city or as cashiers for Thrifty Drug. What the kids wanted was a good job, good pay, a fine home, and no troubles. No one wanted to mess with the law—from either side—and no one wanted to mess with language or art. They all talked about getting into the right clubs so that they could go to the right schools. There was a certain kind of sameness, an intensely enforced system of conformity. Style was all. Boys wore moccasin-sewn shoes from Flagg [12] Watts, a section of Los Angeles, was the site of severe racial violence in 1965.

---

[13] Dragnet and The Mod Squad were popular television police shows.

[14] Buddha (563?–483? B.C.) was the title given to Siddhartha Gautama (si där' tə gou' tə mə), the founder of Buddhism. Ananda (ä nän' dä) was his cousin and "Beloved Disciple."

[15] An injunction is a command or an order.

[16] The sansei (sän' sā') are the children of the nisei.

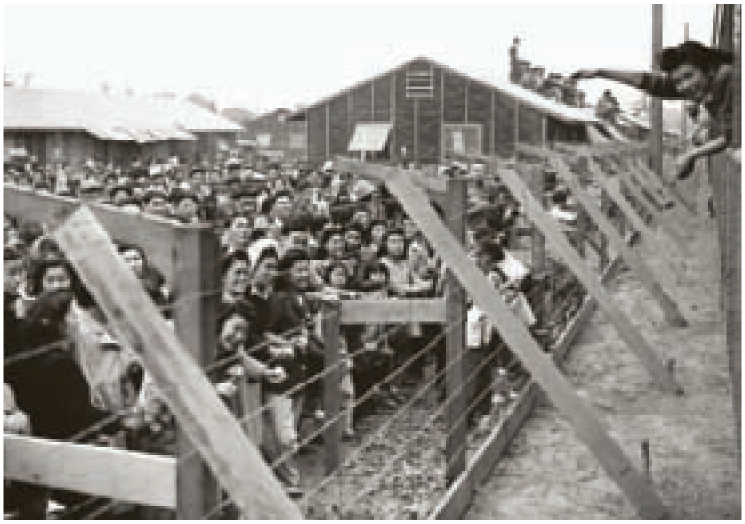
Research Practice

Japanese American Internment In 1988 the United States government officially apologized and compensated each surviving Japanese American who had been interned during World War II. Have students research the internment, including such topics as life in the camps, life after they returned home, and the details and effects of the compensation and apology. Ask students to share their findings in a group discussion.



Japanese Americans interned at Santa Anita.

View the Photograph Almost 50 years after being forced into internment camps, Japanese Americans received an official apology from Congress and the president—along with $20,000. What does this photograph tell you about life in the camps? What kind of compensation do you think the victims deserved? ★

Brothers, black A-1 slacks, and Kensington shirts with high collars. Girls wore their hair up in stiff bouffants solidified in hairspray and knew all the latest dances from the slauson to the funky chicken. We did well in chemistry and in math, no one who was Japanese but me spoke in English class or in history unless called upon, and no one talked about World War II. The day after Robert Kennedy was assassinated, after winning the California Democratic primary, we worked on calculus and elected class coordinators for the prom, featuring the 5th Dimension.[17] We avoided grief. We avoided government. We avoided strong feelings and dangers of any kind. Once punished, we tried to maintain a concerted emotional and social discipline and would not willingly seek to fall out of the narrow margin of protective favor again.

3 But when I was thirteen, in junior high, I'd not understood why it was so difficult for my classmates, those who were themselves Japanese American, to talk about the relocation. They had cringed, too, when I tried to bring it up during our discussions of World War II. I was Hawaiian-born. They were mainland-born. Their parents had been in camp, had been the ones to suffer the complicated experience of having to distance themselves from their own history and all things Japanese in order to make their way back and into the American social and economic mainstream. It was out of this sense of shame and a fear of stigma I was only beginning to understand that the nisei had silenced themselves. And, for their children, among whom I grew up, they wanted no heritage, no culture, no contact with a defiled history. I recall the silence very well. The Japanese-American children around me were burdened in a way I was not. Their injunction was silence. Mine was to speak. 3

Quickwrite

Is Kubota right to urge his grandson to discuss what happened to Japanese Americans during World War II? Why do you think some people seem to disagree with this stance? Write a short response in which you explain your position. Support your argument with details from the selection and historical information.

---

[17] The 5th Dimension was a popular music group in the late 1960s.

Teach

Big Idea 3

The United States and the World Ask: Why do you think the members of Hongo's generation reacted to the history of internment as they did? (Students may say that they did not want to feel the stigma of their parents' shame.)

View the Art ★

Answer: The camps are crowded, and the accommodations are spare. The barbed wire fences add indignity to the scene. Students opinions about compensation will vary.

Explain to students that Santa Anita was a racetrack for horses and that it was transformed into an internment camp during the war.

Quickwrite

Most students will agree that Kubota should discuss the internment with Hongo. Students should address the desire of many Japanese Americans to ignore what happened.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Tell partners to reread difficult passages together, substituting familiar synonyms for unfamiliar words such as "concerted" (united) or "stigma" (mark of disgrace). Have them discuss the meaning of the sentence or passage with the synonym.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Internment and the United States Government Have students research one of the following cases or acts, using at least two reputable sources: Hirabayashi v. United States of America, Korematsu v. United States of America, or the Japanese American Evacuation Claims Act. Have students write a report that provides information about the case or act, including its impact. Then have them report their results to the class.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In the excerpt, the author's father tells the story of how all of the Jews in his Polish hometown reported to the local stadium to be "selected" by the Nazis. Only young, able people got their passports stamped and were allowed to return home. The author's grandfather is selected but climbs to the other side to be with his daughter and grandchildren who were not. In the end, one in every three people is detained in the selection process.

Cultural History

Graphic Novels A graphic novel is a collection of comics presented in book form. It includes book-length narratives, short story anthologies, and collections of previously published series. The story lines are typically serious and complex. Although introduced some years before, the phrase graphic novel was popularized shortly after it appeared in 1978 on the cover of the paperback edition of Will Eisner's A Contract With God. Eisner's book contained four short stories told in comics format.

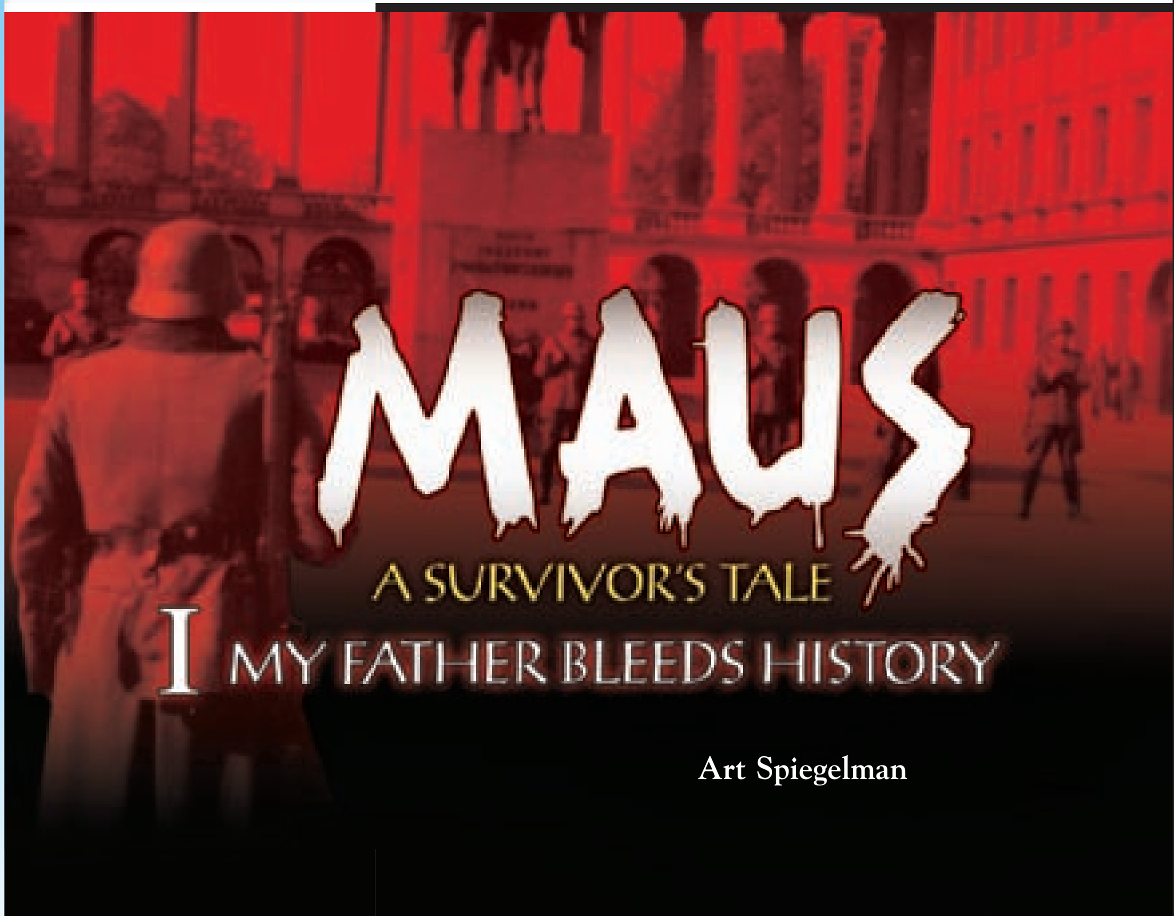
Build Background

Art Spiegelman learned to read by reading comics and, in turn, has taught a generation of readers that the comic book, or graphic novel, format can be as powerful as any other form of literature. During the 1970s, Spiegelman began to create comics based on his father's (Vladek's) memories of the Nazi occupation of Poland. Between 1980 and 1986, these efforts grew into Maus: A Survivor's Tale, a full-length graphic novel. He published a sequel, Maus II, in 1991.

Throughout the books, Spiegelman represents the Jews as mice and the Nazis as cats. Other groups are represented by different animals.

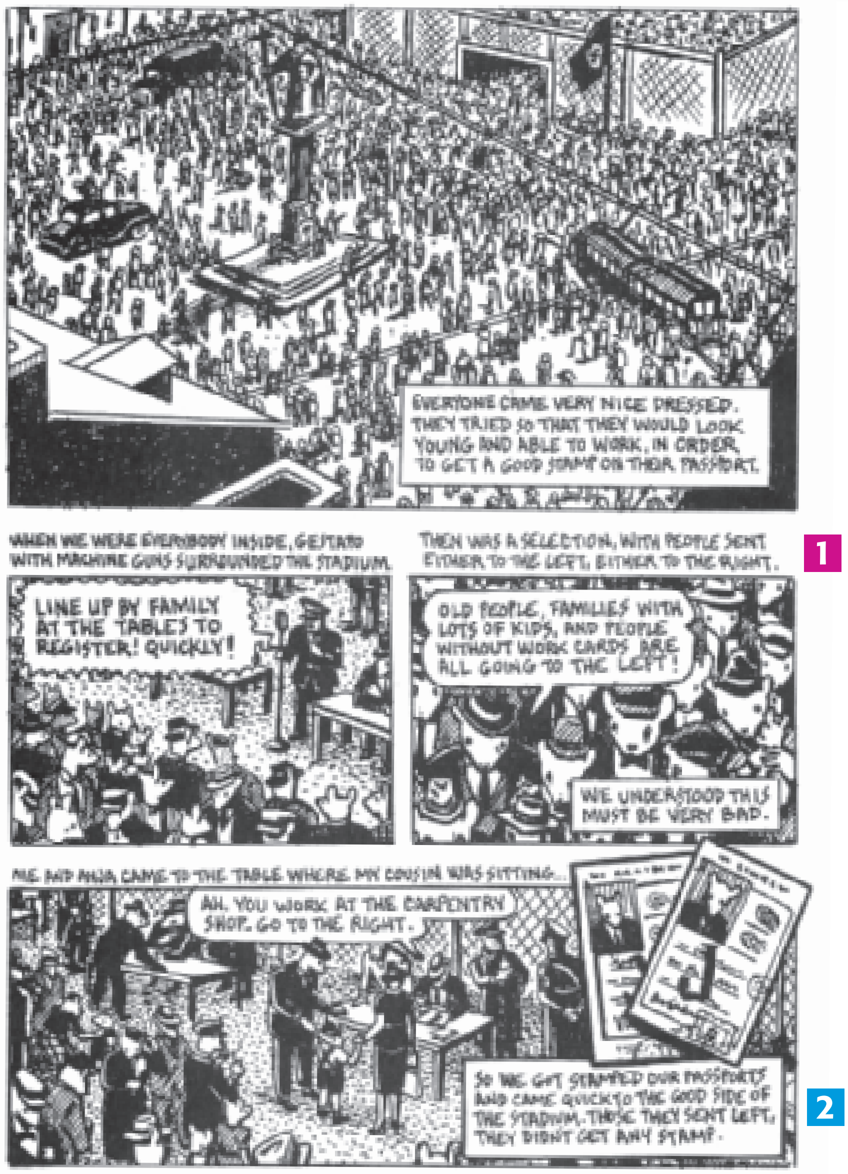
In 1992 Spiegelman was awarded a Pulitzer Prize for Maus, the first time a graphic-novel artist had received this award.

There are several unfamiliar terms and people mentioned in the excerpt that follows. The German word gemeinde refers to a Jewish committee within the community. Richieu is the first son of Vladek and Anja, Spiegelman's parents. Richieu was sent to live with relatives during the war, but he did not survive the Holocaust. Lolek and Lonia are cousins of the Spiegelmans. Tosha and Wolfe are Anja's older sister and her husband.



Speaking and Listening Practice

Enact a Scene Have groups of five or six students choose a few selection frames to dramatize. Students should choose roles—including the author's father and a director. Ask students to convert the text into a script. Allow groups time to rehearse. During rehearsal, students should decide where they will stand, if they will use props, and whether they will memorize lines or use notecards. Directors should guide readings and the actions in the scenes. Each group should perform for the class. After the performances, discuss the challenges of turning printed words and images into a live performance.



EVERYONE CAME VERY NICE DRESSED. THEY TRIED SO THAT THEY WOULD LOOK YOUNG AND ABLE TO WORK, IN ORDER TO GET A GOOD STAMP ON THEIR PASSPORT.
WHEN WE WERE EVERYBODY INSIDE, GESTAPO WITH MACHINE GUNS SURROUNDED THE STADIUM.
LINE UP BY FAMILY AT THE TABLES TO REGISTER! QUICKLY!
THEN WAS A SELECTION, WITH PEOPLE SENT EITHER TO THE LEFT, EITHER TO THE RIGHT.
OLD PEOPLE, FAMILIES WITH LOTS OF KIDS, AND PEOPLE WITHOUT WORK CARDS ARE ALL GOING TO THE LEFT!
WE UNDERSTOOD THIS MUST BE VERY BAD.
ME AND ANJA CAME TO THE TABLE WHERE MY COUSIN WAS SITTING...
AH, YOU WORK AT THE CARPENTRY SHOP. GO TO THE RIGHT.
SO WE GOT STAMPED OUR PASSPORTS AND CAME QUICKLY TO THE GOOD SIDE OF THE STADIUM. THOSE THEY SENT LEFT, THEY DIDN'T GET ANY STAMP.

1

2

Comparing Literature

Teach

Literary Element 1

Voice and Tone Ask: How would you characterize the author's father based on his speech? (English is probably his second language; the father is probably a serious and thoughtful man.)

Reading Strategy 2

Connect Across Texts Spiegelman's Maus and Wiesel's All Rivers Run to the Sea both deal with memories of the Holocaust. Ask: How are the two authors' works similar and different? (Spiegelman matches a narrative with visual images. Wiesel uses only words to conjure images in readers' minds. Both record the comments of others and express strong emotion.) Have students identify an idea or image that moved them from each selection. Have students explain their choices.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Review how to read a graphic novel. Explain that the text above each panel or in rectangular boxes is the voice of Spiegelman's father. The speech balloons contain the words of the people in the narrative.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Discuss the elements of a graphic novel. Ask students to name graphic novels they have read and to explain the form's appeal to them. After they have read this selection, ask: What information do the graphics provide that the dialogue does not? (They add important details to the story: the barbed wire and the crowding are realistic; the facial expressions and body language convey worry, fear, and sadness.)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Narrator The final frame shows the narrator in the present. Ask: What is the effect on the reader of seeing the narrator in the present day? (It reminds the reader that he survived his ordeal and is telling his story to the writer; it emphasizes the narrator's grief about his father's being taken away.)

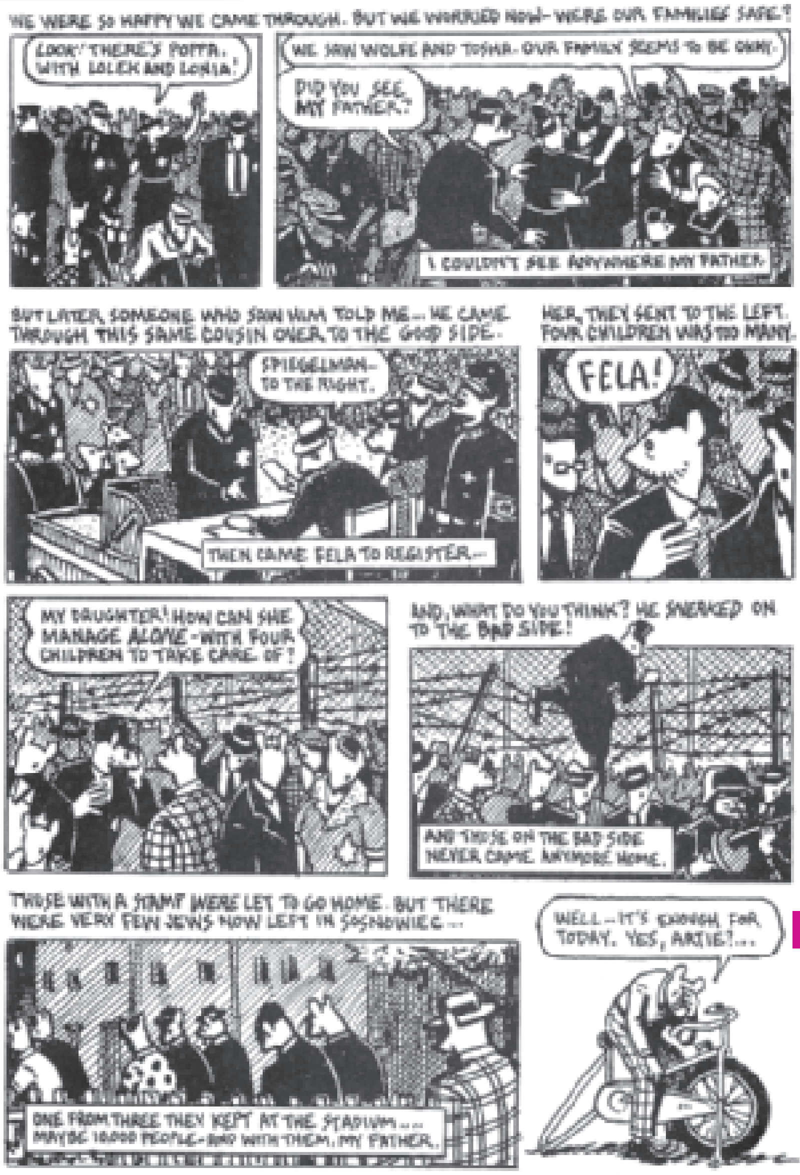
ADVANCED Convert the information presented in the final frame to one or two paragraphs of text.

Discussion Starter

Students should discuss how the dialogue balloons, the narration, and the pictures work together.

Political History ☆

Jewish Resistance Jewish groups led small rebellions, but there was no centralized effort to resist the Nazis. Scholars believe that two major factors hindered an organized Jewish resistance: small Jewish populations were surrounded by larger ethnic groups who often harbored anti-Semitic sentiments, and Jews did not have access to large numbers of weapons.



WE WERE SO HAPPY WE CAME THROUGH. BUT WE WORRIED NOW– WERE OUR FAMILIES SAFE?
LOOK! THERE'S POPPA, WITH LOLEK AND LONIA!
WE SAW WOLFE AND TOSHA. OUR FAMILY SEEMS TO BE OKAY.
DID YOU SEE MY FATHER?
I COULDN'T SEE ANYWHERE MY FATHER.
BUT LATER, SOMEONE WHO SAW HIM TOLD ME... HE CAME THROUGH THIS SAME COUSIN OVER TO THE GOOD SIDE.
SPIEGELMAN– TO THE RIGHT.
THEN CAME FELA TO REGISTER– HER, THEY SENT TO THE LEFT. FOUR CHILDREN WAS TOO MANY.
FELA!
MY DAUGHTER! HOW CAN SHE MANAGE ALONE – WITH FOUR CHILDREN TO TAKE CARE OF?
AND, WHAT DO YOU THINK? HE SNEAKED ON TO THE BAD SIDE!
AND THOSE ON THE BAD SIDE NEVER CAME ANYMORE HOME.
THOSE WITH A STAMP WERE LET TO GO HOME. BUT THERE WERE VERY FEW JEWS NOW LEFT IN SOSNOWIEC...
ONE FROM THREE THEY KEPT AT THE STADIUM... MAYBE 10,000 PEOPLE– AND WITH THEM, MY FATHER.
WELL– IT'S ENOUGH FOR TODAY. YES, ARTIE?...

1

☆

Discussion Starter

Graphic novels combine words and pictures. In the work of some comic artists, graphic elements dominate; in the work of others, words have greater importance. Look over these panels from Maus to determine the balance between words and pictures in Art Spiegelman's work. With a group of classmates, discuss how the imagery and words work together and how one panel transitions into the next.

Assessment Practice

Essay Questions Remind students that in an essay response evaluators look for a thesis supported by evidence from a text or from experience, originality of thought, and good writing. Say: When answering an essay question, find an interesting thesis to argue and support. Ask: What part of writing a response to an essay question is most challenging? (Students may cite thinking of a thesis that states something other than an obvious point or finding enough evidence to support or elaborate on their ideas.)

Wrap-Up: Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

- from All Rivers Run to the Sea by Elie Wiesel
- from Kubota by Garrett Hongo
- from Maus: A Survivor's Tale by Art Spiegelman

COMPARE THE Big Idea The United States and the World

Group Activity With a group of classmates, discuss the following questions.

1. How do Wiesel and Spiegelman address the need to tell the truth about the establishment of concentration camps by the Nazis in the 1930s and 1940s?
2. What does Kubota hope to accomplish by asking Hongo to tell his story about Japanese American internment?
3. Evaluate the statements about history and personal expression made in these selections. Which of them did you find most powerful? Explain.

COMPARE Reflections

Writing Activity The stories in these works explore the lives of people who have survived particularly difficult experiences. Review the three selections. Then write a brief essay, evaluating how these selections explore the significance of personal experience. Support your ideas with details from the selections, including quotations that capture the writer's reflections on the experience described.

Children liberated from a Nazi concentration camp show the numbers tattooed on their arms.

COMPARE Cultures

Visual Display The horrors of World War II had a great impact on various cultures in different ways. From the selections you have read, create a three-panel collage of images—one for each selection—that illustrates the experiences of these cultures during the war.

LOG ON Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Wrap-Up: Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Assess

Compare the Big Idea

1. Each author addresses the need to tell the truth by writing about painful truths, telling the story in his own way, without hiding the horrors of the story.
2. Kubota hopes the same mistakes do not happen again. He may wish to show that the shame belongs to the government, not to the Japanese Americans.
3. Students should select quotations from the texts to support their opinions.

Compare Reflections

Evaluate students' writing based on the following criteria:

- Does the essay cite evidence from the selections, including the writers' personal experiences?
- Does the student show the significance of each reflection?
- Does the essay have a clear beginning, middle, and end?

Compare Cultures

Have students research World War II art before they begin their display. They might look at the art created by Holocaust survivors for inspiration.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Because the selections in the Comparing Literature section deal with difficult events in history, students may benefit from taking time to reflect on the significance of the stories they have read. Have students write a brief journal entry or draw a picture to represent their thoughts after reading the stories. Rather than having students share their thoughts and reactions in a formal discussion, cover a wall with large pieces of paper or clear a large section of chalk board space to transform it into a "graffiti wall." Instruct students not to talk during the exercise. Each student should write on the "wall" any words, phrases, or images from their journal entries that represent what they have learned from reading and discussing the historical stories by Wiesel, Hongo, and Spiegelman. If possible leave the "graffiti wall" up for the rest of Unit Six Part 2 and invite students to add to it after each selection.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 62

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 91

Or ask: How does war affect ordinary people? How do people view those who are their enemies during wartime? Have students consider the answers to these questions as they read.

Before You Read

from Hiroshima

Meet John Hersey
(1914–1993)

John Hersey bore witness to some of the pivotal events of the twentieth century. Hersey was born in China to missionary parents, but he spent most of his life writing about the United States' military influence in other countries.

After Hersey's father died from an illness he contracted in China, the family settled in New York. Hersey attended Yale University, where he studied English literature and began his professional career working for the Yale Daily News. His first job after college was as private secretary to the Nobel Prize-winning writer Sinclair Lewis.

> "Journalism allows its readers to witness history; fiction gives its readers an opportunity to live it."
>
> —John Hersey

On the War Front Between 1937 and 1946, Hersey worked for Time and Life magazines as a foreign correspondent in the Pacific. To write his first book, Men on Bataan, he combined his own experience with other sources, including letters, speeches, and memos written by the soldiers stationed in the Pacific. One aspect of the book that captured the attention of critics was Hersey's ability to combine fictional techniques—such as characterization, description, and foreshadowing—with factual reporting. His later experiences in Italy were reshaped into his first novel, A Bell for Adano, for which Hersey was awarded the 1945 Pulitzer Prize for fiction.

Hiroshima The nuclear age began in 1945 when U.S. forces dropped atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in Japan. Much was written about the event at the time, but most articles were recitations of facts and statistics. Hersey wanted to alert the public to the nightmarish aftermath of the bombing and its human and moral consequences.

Hersey interviewed people in Japan and wrote about the devastation he witnessed in Hiroshima. Months later, the New Yorker devoted all of its editorial space to Hersey's piece. It created unprecedented interest in the publishing world. The book's publication not only established Hersey's literary reputation but also originated a new type of literary journalism that went beyond mere reporting of events to capture the human toll of a wartime incident. Hiroshima prompted years of discussion about nuclear weapons and their moral implications.

Truth as Fiction Hersey believed that fiction better allowed him to depict reality. "It makes truth plausible," he wrote. Hersey continued to write about important issues of his times: war, education, racism, and politics. Hersey was such an important literary figure that his death in 1993 was front-page news. New York Times writer Richard Severo described him "not only as a first-rate reporter but also as a storyteller who nurtured the idea that writers had to pursue a moral goal."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about John Hersey, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Selection Skills

from Hiroshima

Literary Elements
- Point of View (SE pp. 1003–1015)
- Author's Purpose (SE p. 1015)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Expository Essay (SE p. 1016)
- Editorial (TE p. 1010)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Origins (SE p. 1015)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 1015)

Reading Skills
- Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs (SE pp. 1003–1015)
- Text Structure (TE p. 1006)
- Fact and Opinion (TE p. 1008)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (TE pp. 1008, 1010, 1013)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

In a war situation, do you think that the ends justify the means? Discuss this question with a small group.

Build Background

In 1945, the United States and Japan were adversaries in World War II. As the war dragged on, casualties mounted on both sides. The Japanese had been warned that they would face "utter destruction" if they did not surrender, but many officials predicted that the island nation would continue to fight. On August 6, a B-29 aircraft named the Enola Gay dropped the first atomic bomb ever used in wartime.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The United States and the World

As you read, ask yourself, Why did the world come to see nuclear warfare as something to be avoided at all costs?

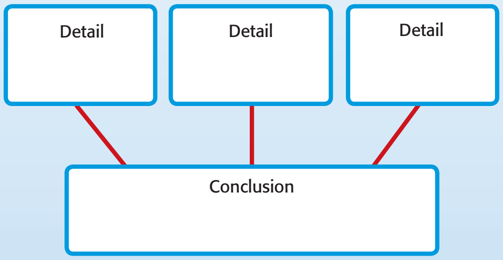
Literary Element Point of View

Point of view is the perspective from which the narrator tells the story. In third-person point of view, the narrator is not a character but describes the action and the characters from outside the story. As you read, ask yourself, How does point of view affect your understanding of the narrative?

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs

When you draw conclusions, you use a number of clues to make a general statement about something. By looking at the details that an author includes and omits, you can draw some conclusions about that author's beliefs. As you read, ask yourself, What details help you guess at Hersey's beliefs about war?

Tip: Chart Clues Use a graphic organizer to record details.



Learning Objectives

For pages 1002–1015

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing point of view.

Reading: Drawing conclusions about author's beliefs.

Vocabulary

evacuate (i vak´ ū āt´) v. to vacate or leave a place; p. 1004 Citizens were told to evacuate the city if they heard a siren.

volition (vō lish´ ən) n. act of choosing or deciding; p. 1005 They were in the right place by accident rather than volition.

debris (də brē´) n. large number of fragments or broken pieces; p. 1009 The explosion filled the streets with debris.

xenophobic (zen´ ə fō´ bik) adj. having an extreme fear of foreigners or strangers; p. 1010 The people were xenophobic and trusted no newcomers.

terminus (tur´ mə nəs) n. one end of a travel route or the station placed there; p. 1012 The train reached its terminus and the passengers disembarked.

Tip: Word Origins Word origins, also called etymologies, are the history and development of words. For example, the word xenophobic comes from two Greek words meaning "strange" and "fear."

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Reporter John Hersey gives a nonfiction account of the effects of the atomic bomb on the Japanese city of Hiroshima. He uses literary techniques to combine the stories of six ordinary people—a clerk, two doctors, a single mother, a priest, and a pastor. Hersey describes the circumstances and physical location of each person before, during, and immediately after the bomb's blast.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 186–191.

Vocabulary

Questions and Answers

Have students work in pairs to create questions and answers using each vocabulary word. Start them off by giving them sample questions such as "Under what circumstances might people have to evacuate?"

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 194.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Students may not know where Hiroshima is. Have students locate Japan on a world map, and then locate the cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki on a map of Japan. Point out that the country of Japan is made up of different islands. Hiroshima is located on the southwestern part of Honshu, the biggest island in Japan. Nagasaki is farther south on the western coast of the island of Kyushu. Hiroshima was picked as a target for the bomb because army supply depots, factories producing military supplies, and one of the army headquarters were located there.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World World War II ended in a particularly violent way, when U.S. forces dropped atomic bombs on two Japanese cities. Ask: As you read the first paragraph, what feelings or ideas do you have? (Students may say dread, because the reader knows the people Hersey introduces will suffer after the bombing.)

Writer's Technique ☆

Nonfiction Novel Critics consider Hersey's Hiroshima to be one of the first nonfiction novels, or works of reporting that use literary techniques without imposing the author's viewpoint. Other nonfiction novels include Truman Capote's In Cold Blood and Norman Mailer's The Armies of the Night.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

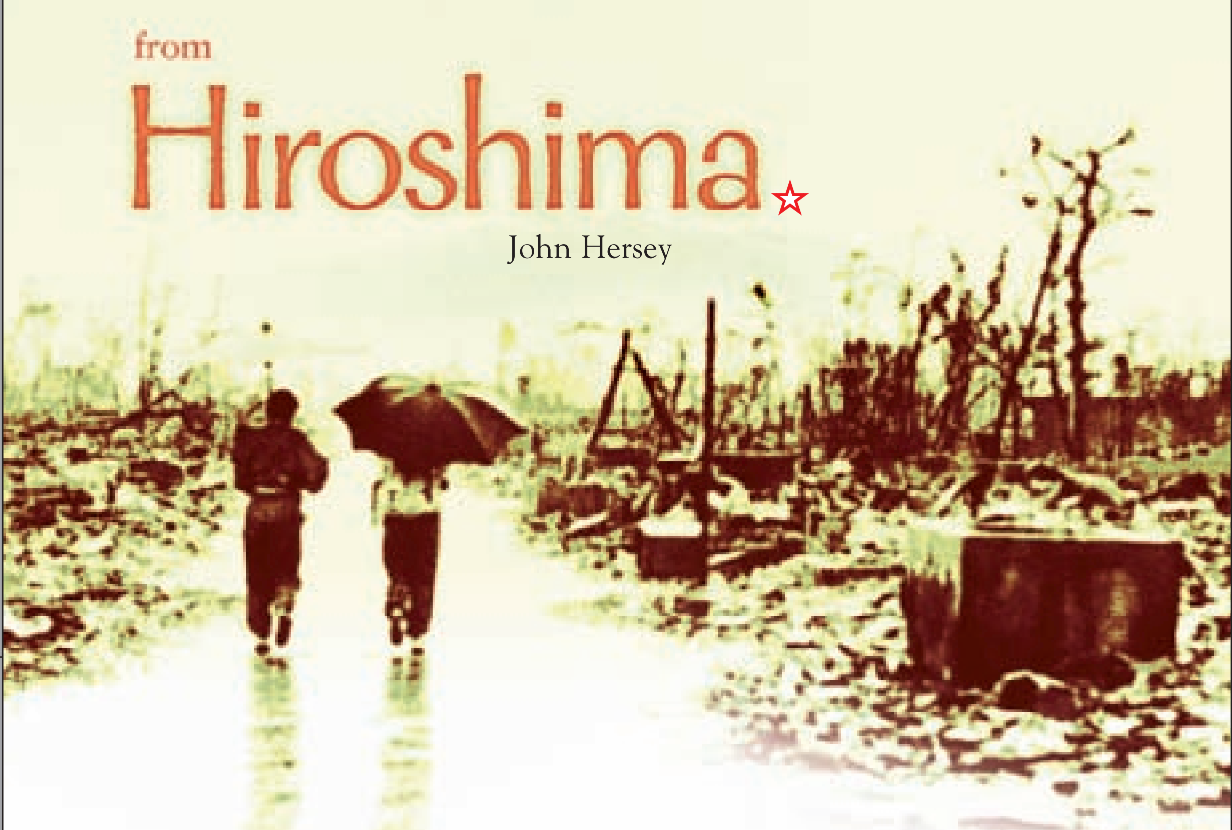
Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 9.9
DRP: 64
Lexile: 1260

from

Hiroshima ☆

John Hersey



At exactly fifteen minutes past eight in the morning, on August 6, 1945, Japanese time, at the moment when the atomic bomb flashed above Hiroshima, Miss Toshiko Sasaki, a clerk in the personnel department of the East Asia Tin Works, had just sat down at her place in the plant office and was turning her head to speak to the girl at the next desk. At that same moment, Dr. Masakazu Fujii was settling down cross-legged to read the Osaka Asahi on the porch of his private hospital, overhanging one of the seven deltaic[1] rivers which divide Hiroshima; Mrs. Hatsuyo Nakamura, a tailor's widow, stood by the window of her kitchen, watching a neighbor tearing down his house because it lay in the path of an air-raid-defense fire lane; Father Wilhelm Kleinsorge, a German priest of the Society of Jesus, reclined in his underwear on a cot on the top floor of his order's three-story mission house, reading a Jesuit magazine, Stimmen der Zeit; Dr. Terufumi Sasaki, a young member of the surgical staff of the city's large, modern Red Cross Hospital, walked along one of the hospital corridors with a blood specimen for a Wassermann test[2] in his hand; and the Reverend Mr. Kiyoshi Tanimoto, pastor of the Hiroshima Methodist Church, paused at the door of a rich man's house in Koi, the city's western suburb, and prepared to unload a handcart full of things he had evacuated from

---

[1] Deltaic refers to a delta that forms at the mouth of a river. The city of Hiroshima straddles six channels and several islets that make up the delta at the mouth of the Ota River.

[2] A Wasserman test is a blood test once widely used to diagnose syphilis.

Vocabulary

evacuate (i vak′ ū āt′) v. to vacate or leave a place

Study Skills Practice

Graphic Organizer Instead of telling each person's story individually, Hersey weaves the stories of six people into one long narrative. To help students keep track of the six people in the story, have them create a chart with six columns. Tell them to write the name of one person at the top of each column. Have students note these basic facts about each person as they read: the person's occupation, who they were with when the bomb dropped, their location before the bomb was dropped, what they were doing as the bomb dropped, their reaction to the bomb, and what they did immediately after the bomb dropped. Students may also wish to note other interesting facts about each person as they read.

1 town in fear of the massive B-29 raid which everyone expected Hiroshima to suffer. A hundred thousand people were killed by the atomic bomb, and these six were among the survivors. They still wonder why they lived when so many others died. Each of them counts many small items of chance or volition—a step taken in time, a decision to go indoors, catching one streetcar instead of the next—that spared him. And now each knows that in the act of survival he lived a dozen lives and saw more death than he ever thought he would see. At the time, none of them knew anything.

The Reverend Mr. Tanimoto got up at five o'clock that morning. He was alone in the parsonage, because for some time his wife had been commuting with their year-old baby to spend nights with a friend in Ushida, a suburb to the north. Of all the important cities of Japan, only two, Kyoto and Hiroshima, had not been visited in strength if B-san, or Mr. B, as the Japanese, with a mixture of respect and unhappy familiarity, called the B-29; and Mr. Tanimoto, like all his neighbors and friends, was almost sick with anxiety. He had heard uncomfortably detailed accounts of mass raids on Kure, Iwakuni, Tokuyama, and other nearby towns; he was sure Hiroshima's turn would come soon. He had slept badly the night before, because there had been several air-raid warnings. Hiroshima had been getting such warnings almost every night for weeks, for at that time the B-29s were using Lake Biwa, northeast of Hiroshima, as a rendezvous point, and no matter what city the Americans planned to hit, the Superfortresses streamed in over the coast near Hiroshima. The frequency of the warnings and the continued abstinence of Mr. B with respect to Hiroshima had made its citizens jittery; a rumor was going around that the Americans were saving something special for the city.

Mr. Tanimoto is a small man, quick to talk, laugh, and cry. He wears his black hair parted in the middle and rather long; the prominence of the frontal bones just above his eyebrows and the smallness of his moustache, mouth, and chin give him a strange, old-young look, boyish and yet wise, weak and yet fiery. He moves nervously and fast, but with a restraint which suggests that he is a cautious, thoughtful man. He showed, indeed, just those qualities in the uneasy days before the bomb fell. Besides having his wife spend the nights in Ushida, Mr. Tanimoto had been carrying all the portable things from his church, in the close-packed residential district called Nagaragawa, to a house that belonged to a rayon manufacturer in Koi, two miles from the center of town. The rayon man, a Mr. Matsui, had opened his then unoccupied estate to a large number of his friends and acquaintances, so that they might evacuate whatever they wished to a safe distance from the probable target area. Mr. Tanimoto had had no difficulty in moving chairs, hymnals, Bibles, altar gear, and church records by pushcart himself, but the organ console and an upright piano required some aid. A friend of his named Matsuo had, the day before, helped him get the piano out to Koi; in return, he had promised this day to assist Mr. Matsuo in hauling out a daughter's belongings. That is why he had risen so early.

Mr. Tanimoto cooked his own breakfast. He felt awfully tired. The effort of moving the piano the day before, a sleepless night, weeks of worry and unbalanced diet, the cares of his parish—all combined to make him feel hardly adequate to the new day's work. There was

---

2 Point of View Based on your reading of the first paragraph, what kind of point of view does Hersey use?

Vocabulary

volition (vō lish′ ən) n. act of choosing or deciding

The United States and the World Why are the people of Hiroshima so worried about the Americans? 3

Teach

Literary Element 2

Point of View Answer: He uses a third-person objective point of view; the narrator reports what the characters do, see, and hear.

For additional literary element practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 192.

Big Idea 3

The United States and the World Answer: The United States had bombed other Japanese cities but had not yet attacked Hiroshima.

APPROACHING Point out to approaching level students that the names "B-san" and "Mr. B" both refer to the B-29 planes.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Because the selection is not written in chronological order, students should look for words that reveal time and for transition words that signal time order. Have students read the first twelve lines of the story. Ask them to identify words and phrases that provide clues to the time of day or to a sequence of events. ("At exactly fifteen minutes past eight in the morning, on August 6, 1945," "at the moment when the atomic bomb flashed," "At that same moment.")

Have students keep track of time and time sequence clues as they read the story. Students can use these clues to create a timeline that keeps track of all the individuals and tells where they are and what they are doing before, during, and after the bomb.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Point of View Tell students that the author uses the third-person objective point of view most of the time, but occasionally uses the third-person omniscient point of view to describe the characters' thoughts and feelings and to describe details that the characters do not know. Ask: What details suggest that Hersey shifts from a third-person objective point of view to a third-person omniscient point of view in this section? (Details about the size, shape, number of people, and types of industry in the city reveal an omniscient point of view.)

Literary Element 2

Answer: The author shows that Tanimoto does not hate Americans, even though his country is at war with the United States.

Reading Strategy 3

Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs Answer: The words showy, notorious, and tyrannies suggest Hersey's disdain. Say: Because the writer uses an objective point of view, readers must draw their own conclusions about his sympathies.

---

another thing, too: Mr. Tanimoto had studied theology at Emory College, in Atlanta, Georgia; he had graduated in 1940; he spoke excellent English; he dressed in American clothes; he had corresponded with many American friends right up to the time the war began; and among a people obsessed with a fear of being spied upon—perhaps almost obsessed himself—he found himself growing increasingly uneasy. The police had questioned him several times, and just a few days before, he had heard that an influential acquaintance, a Mr. Tanaka, a retired officer of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha steamship line, an anti-Christian, a man famous in Hiroshima for his showy philanthropies[3] and notorious for his personal tyrannies, had been telling people that Tanimoto should not be trusted. In compensation, to show himself publicly a good Japanese, Mr. Tanimoto had taken on the chairmanship of his local tonarigumi, or Neighborhood Association, and to his other duties and concerns this position had added the business of organizing air-raid defense for about twenty families.

Before six o'clock that morning, Mr. Tanimoto started for Mr. Matsuo's house. There he found that their burden was to be a tansu, a large Japanese cabinet, full of clothing and household goods. The two men set out. The morning was perfectly clear and so warm that the day promised to be uncomfortable. A few minutes after they started, the air-raid siren went off—a minute-long blast that warned of approaching planes but indicated to the people of Hiroshima only a slight degree of danger, since it sounded every morning at this time, when an American weather plane came over. The two men pulled and pushed the handcart through the city streets. Hiroshima was a fan-shaped city, lying mostly on the six islands formed by the seven estuarial rivers that branch out from the Ota River; its main commercial and residential districts, covering about four square miles in the center of the city, contained three-quarters of its population, which had been reduced by several evacuation programs from a wartime peak of 380,000 to about 245,000. Factories and other residential districts, or suburbs, lay compactly around the edges of the city. To the south were the docks, an airport, and the island-studded Inland Sea.[4] A rim of mountains runs around the other three sides of the delta. Mr. Tanimoto and Mr. Matsuo took their way through the shopping center, already full of people, and across two of the rivers to the sloping streets of Koi, and up them to the outskirts and foothills. As they started up a valley away from the tight-ranked houses, the all-clear sounded. (The Japanese radar operators, detecting only three planes, supposed that they comprised a reconnaissance.) Pushing the handcart up to the rayon man's house was tiring, and the men, after they had maneuvered their load into the driveway and to the front steps, paused to rest awhile. They stood with a wing of the house between them and the city. Like most homes in this part of Japan, the house consisted of a wooden frame and wooden walls supporting a heavy tile roof. Its front hall, packed with rolls of bedding and clothing, looked like a cool cave full of fat cushions. Opposite the house, to the right of the front door, there was a large, finicky rock garden. There was no sound of planes. The Comparisons of Hiroshima Before and After Atomic Bomb. Hiroshima on April 13 and August 11, 1945.

---

[3] Philanthropies are good works designed to benefit people.

[4] The Inland Sea lies between the Japanese islands of Kyushu, Shikoku, and Honshu, where Hiroshima is located.

2 Point of View How does the point of view affect your understanding of Mr. Tanimoto?

3 Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs Which words and phrases show the author's disdain for certain personality traits?

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW

Text Structure Review these nonfiction text structures: comparison/contrast, examples, problem/solution, chronological order, and order of importance. Say: Hersey combines six narratives, which forces readers to compare and contrast each person's experiences.

Have students map the selection structure, using outlines or graphic organizers.

Ask: How does this structure influence your understanding of Hersey's perspective? (Hersey does not think one person's experience is more important than another's.)

morning was still; the place was cool and pleasant.

Then a tremendous flash of light cut across the sky. Mr. Tanimoto has a distinct recollection that it traveled from east to west, from the city toward the hills. It seemed a sheet of sun. Both he and Mr. Matsuo reacted in terror—and both had time to react (for they were 3,500 yards, or two miles, from the center of the explosion). Mr. Matsuo dashed up the front steps into the house and dived among the bedrolls and buried himself there. Mr. Tanimoto took four or five steps and threw himself between two big rocks in the garden. He bellied up very hard against one of them. As his face was against the stone, he did not see what happened. He felt a sudden pressure, and then splinters and pieces of board and fragments of tile fell on him. He heard no roar. (Almost no one in Hiroshima recalls hearing any noise of the bomb. But a fisherman in his sampan[5] on the Inland Sea near Tsuzu, the man with whom Mr. Tanimoto's mother-in-law and sister-in-law were living, saw the flash and heard a tremendous explosion; he was nearly twenty miles from Hiroshima, but the thunder was greater than when the B-29s hit Iwakuni, only five miles away.)

When he dared, Mr. Tanimoto raised his head and saw that the rayon man's house had collapsed. He thought a bomb had fallen directly on it. Such clouds of dust had risen that there was a sort of twilight around. In panic, not thinking for the moment of Mr. Matsuo under the ruins, he dashed out into the street. He noticed as he ran that the concrete wall of the estate had fallen over—toward the house rather than away from it. In the street, the first thing he saw was a squad of soldiers who had been burrowing into the hillside opposite, making one of the thousands of dugouts in which the ☆ Japanese apparently intended to resist invasion, hill by hill, life for life; the soldiers were coming out of the hole, where they should have been safe, and blood was running from their heads, chests, and backs. They were silent and dazed.

Under what seemed to be a local dust cloud, the day grew darker and darker.

At nearly midnight, the night before the bomb was dropped, an announcer on the city's radio station said that about two hundred B-29s were approaching southern Honshu and advised the population of Hiroshima to evacuate to their designated "safe areas." Mrs. Hatsuyo Nakamura, the tailor's widow, who lived in the section called Noboricho and who had long had a habit of doing as she was told, got her three children—a ten-year-old boy, Toshio, an eight-year-old girl, Yaeko, and a five-year-old girl, Myeko—out of bed and dressed them and walked with them to the military area known as the East Parade Ground, on the northeast edge of the city. There she unrolled some mats and the children lay down on them. They slept until about two, when they were awakened by the roar of the planes going over Hiroshima.

As soon as the planes had passed, Mrs. Nakamura started back with her children. They reached home a little after two-thirty and she immediately turned on the radio, which, to her distress, was just then broadcasting a fresh warning. When she looked at the children and saw how tired they were, and when she thought of the number of trips they had made in past weeks, all to no purpose, to the East Parade Ground, she decided that in spite of the instructions on the radio, she simply could not face starting out all over again. She put the children in their bedrolls on the floor, lay down herself at three o'clock, and fell asleep at once, so soundly that when the planes passed over later, she did not waken to their sound.

4 The siren jarred her awake at about seven. She arose, dressed quickly, and hurried to the house of Mr. Nakamoto, the head of her Neighborhood Association, and asked him what she should do. He said that she should remain at home unless an urgent warning—a series of intermittent blasts of the siren—was sounded. She returned home, lit the stove in the kitchen, set some rice to cook, and sat down to read that morning's Hiroshima

---

[5] A sampan is a small boat.

Teach

Reading Strategy 4

Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs Explain that readers can draw conclusions about the author's beliefs based on the people whose experiences he relates and on the way he describes them. For the paragraph that begins at the bottom of the page, ask: How does the author portray Mrs. Nakamura? (She is a devoted mother and obedient citizen.) Ask: What conclusions can you draw about Hersey's beliefs based on his portrayal? (He believes it was wrong to drop the bomb because a good person such as Mrs. Nakamura does not deserve to suffer.)

Political History ☆

The Decision to Bomb Japanese soldiers had shown fierce resistance to Allied attacks on the Japanese-occupied islands of Iwo Jima and Okinawa. Many refused to surrender and instead fought to the death, resulting in heavy casualties on both sides. President Truman was concerned that resistance to an invasion of Japan itself would be even more ferocious and would cost thousands more American lives. This was a key factor in his decision to use atomic weapons against Japan.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Beginning Have English Learners work with partners. Have partners select a long paragraph to read aloud. As one partner reads the first half of the passage, the other partner should identify names, words, and sentences that are troublesome. Then partners should switch roles for the second half of the paragraph. Have students work together to consult a dictionary when they need help with pronunciations.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: The details show how quickly the blast traveled. In the time it took to make one step, the blast traveled three-quarters of a mile.

View the Photograph ★

Photographers provided images of Hiroshima immediately after the bombing. Ask: How does this photograph support Hersey's message? (It shows the devastation caused by the bomb.) Ask: What words would you choose to describe the images in the photograph? (chaos, heat, desperation, fear)

People hurry past a fire burning in the wake of an atomic explosion. Hiroshima, Japan. August 1945. ★

Chugoku. To her relief, the all-clear sounded at eight o'clock. She heard the children stirring, so she went and gave each of them a handful of peanuts and told them to stay on their bedrolls, because they were tired from the night's walk. She had hoped that they would go back to sleep, but the man in the house directly to the south began to make a terrible hullabaloo of hammering, wedging, ripping, and splitting. The prefectural government,[6] convinced, as everyone in Hiroshima was, that the city would be attacked soon, had begun to press with threats and warnings for the completion of wide fire lanes, which, it was hoped, might act in conjunction with the rivers to localize any fires started by an incendiary[7] raid; and the neighbor was reluctantly sacrificing his home to the city's safety. Just the day before, the prefecture had ordered all able-bodied girls from the secondary schools to spend a few days helping to clear these lanes, and they started work soon after the all-clear sounded.

Mrs. Nakamura went back to the kitchen, looked at the rice, and began watching the man next door. At first, she was annoyed with him for making so much noise, but then she was moved almost to tears by pity. Her emotion was specifically directed toward her neighbor, tearing down his home, board by board, at a time when there was so much unavoidable destruction, but undoubtedly she also felt a generalized, community pity, to say nothing of self-pity. She had not had an easy time. Her husband, Isawa, had gone into the Army just after Myeko was born, and she had heard nothing from or of him for a long time, until, on March 5, 1942, she received a seven-word telegram: "Isawa died an honorable death at Singapore." She learned later that he had died on February 15th, the day Singapore fell, and that he had been a corporal. Isawa had been a not particularly prosperous tailor, and his only capital was a Sankoku sewing machine. After his death, when his allotments stopped coming, Mrs. Nakamura got out the machine and began to take in piecework herself, and since then had supported the children, but poorly, by sewing.

As Mrs. Nakamura stood watching her neighbor, everything flashed whiter than any white she had ever seen. She did not notice what happened to the man next door; the reflex of a mother set her in motion toward her children. She had taken a single step (the house was 1,350 yards, or three-quarters of a mile, from the center of the explosion) when something picked her up and she seemed to fly into the next room over the raised sleeping platform, pursued by parts of her house.

Timbers fell around her as she landed, and a shower of tiles pummeled her; everything

The United States and the World How do these details show the power of the bomb? 1

---

[6] Prefectural refers to the forty-seven geopolitical divisions within Japan known as prefectures, which are governed by governors and assemblies similar to state and local government in the United States.

[7] Here incendiary means "designed to deliberately start fires."

Reading Practice

Fact and Opinion Explain that nonfiction writing includes both facts and opinions. Remind students that a fact is information that can be verified and an opinion is a personal judgment that cannot be proved. Also explain that opinions are sometimes presented in ways that make them appear to be facts. Assign short sections of the selection. Ask students to identify details and decide if each is a fact or an opinion. Have students use encyclopedias, reference books, and other reliable sources to verify any facts. Have students explain which are facts and which are opinions in their section and tell what sources they used to check the facts.

became dark, for she was buried. The debris did not cover her deeply. She rose up and freed herself. She heard a child cry, "Mother, help me!," and saw her youngest—Myeko, the five-year-old—buried up to her breast and unable to move. As Mrs. Nakamura started frantically to claw her way toward the baby, she could see or hear nothing of her other children.

In the days right before the bombing, Dr. Masakazu Fujii, being prosperous, hedonistic, and at the time not too busy, had been allowing himself the luxury of sleeping until nine or nine-thirty, but fortunately he had to get up only the morning the bomb was dropped to see a house guest off on a train. He rose at six, and half an hour later walked with his friend to the station, not far away, across two of the rivers. He was back home by seven, just as the siren sounded its sustained warning. He ate breakfast and then, because the morning was already hot, undressed down to his underwear and went out on the porch to read the paper. This porch—in fact, the whole building—was curiously constructed. Dr. Fujii was the proprietor of a peculiarly Japanese institution: a private, single-doctor hospital. This building, perched beside and over the water of the Kyo River, and next to the bridge of the same name, contained thirty rooms for thirty patients and their kinfolk—for, according to Japanese custom, when a person falls sick and goes to a hospital, one or more members of his family go and live there with him, to cook for him, bathe, massage, and read to him, and to offer incessant familial sympathy, without which a Japanese patient would be miserable indeed. Dr. Fujii had no beds—only straw mats—for his patients. He did, however, have all sorts of modern equipment: an X-ray machine, diathermy apparatus, and a fine tiled laboratory. The structure rested two-thirds on the land, one-third on piles over the tidal waters of the Kyo. This overhang, the part of the building where Dr. Fujii lived, was queer-looking, but it was cool in summer and from the porch, which faced away from the center of the city, the prospect of the river, with pleasure boats drifting up and down it, was always refreshing. Dr. Fujii had occasionally had anxious moments when the Ota and its mouth branches rose to flood, but the piling[8] was apparently firm enough and the house had always held.

Dr. Fujii had been relatively idle for about a month because in July, as the number of untouched cities in Japan dwindled and as Hiroshima seemed more and more inevitably a target, he began turning patients away, on the ground that in case of a fire raid he would not be able to evacuate them. Now he had only two patients left—a woman from Yano, injured in the shoulder, and a young man of twenty-five recovering from burns he had suffered when the steel factory near Hiroshima in which he worked had been hit. Dr. Fujii had six nurses to tend his patients. His wife and children were safe; his wife and one son were living outside Osaka, and another son and two daughters were in the country on Kyushu. A niece was living with him, and a maid and a manservant. He had little to do and did not mind, for he had saved some money. At fifty, he was healthy, convivial, and calm, and he was pleased to pass the evenings drinking whiskey with friends, always sensibly and for the sake of conversation. Before the war, he had affected brands imported from Scotland and America; now he was perfectly satisfied with the best Japanese brand, Suntory. 3

Dr. Fujii sat down cross-legged in his underwear on the spotless matting of the porch, put on his glasses, and started reading the Osaka

2 Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs Hersey includes many details about Japanese life and culture. Why do you think it is important to the author to include this information?

Vocabulary

debris (də brē´) n. large number of fragments or broken pieces

---

[8] Piles are long, columnar timbers or poles that have one end anchored in the ground and are grouped into pilings to hold up buildings or other structures.

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs Answer: It is important to Hersey to familiarize his readers with Japanese life and culture so that they can identify more closely with the people whose stories he presents. As a reporter, Hersey carefully chooses details to paint a picture for readers who might know little or nothing about life in Japan. When Hersey first published his account of the bombing in 1946, the United States had been at war with Japan just a year earlier and knew it primarily as an enemy.

Literary Element 3

Suspense Hersey's narrative technique of going back in time and taking each character up to the point of the bomb's explosion helps build suspense. Each time Hersey goes back in time, readers will ask themselves, "What will happen to this character?" Ask: Why does Hersey try to build suspense in this nonfiction account? (This keeps readers interested. They want to know how each person survives.) Ask: How would the selection have affected readers differently if it had been a straightforward account of the devastation of the bomb? (It might not have been as vivid or suspenseful. Readers might feel less connected to the characters and events.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Approaching level students may better understand the characters' experiences if they act out the characters' actions. Ask small groups to choose a character and to reenact his or her reaction to the bomb's explosion. Students should choose one student to read the passage aloud while the other students pantomime the actions being described. Have the reader and actors practice and critique each other's performances. If there is time, have students switch roles between reader and actor so that each student gets the chance to pantomime.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: Even hospitals were destroyed, so people would have no medical resources.

Vocabulary 2

Greek Word Roots The word xenophobic is a word that incorporates two Greek roots. The root xeno means "stranger or foreign." The root phobic means "fear." Ask: Can you think of other words that use at least one of these roots? (Students may suggest claustrophobic—fear of enclosed spaces.)

View the Photograph ★

When the atomic bomb hit Hiroshima, the heat of the blast destroyed an area of 4.4 square miles. An estimated 70,000 to 80,000 people were killed instantly, and 70,000 more were injured. Ask: Given the extent of the devastation, what does the photograph suggest to you about the Japanese people? (They are resilient and determined to go on with life.)

Asahi. He liked to read the Osaka news because his wife was there. He saw the flash. To him—faced away from the center and looking at his paper—it seemed a brilliant yellow. Startled, he began to rise to his feet. In that moment (he was 1,500 yards from the center), the hospital leaned behind his rising and, with a terrible ripping noise, toppled into the river. The doctor, still in the act of getting to his feet, was thrown forward and around and over; he was buffeted and gripped; he lost track of everything, because things were so speeded up; he felt the water.

Dr. Fujii hardly had time to think that he was dying before he realized that he was alive, squeezed tightly by two long timbers in a V across his chest, like a morsel suspended between two huge chopsticks—held upright, so that he could not move, with his head miraculously above water and his torso and legs in it. The remains of his hospital were all around him in a mad assortment of splintered lumber and materials for the relief of pain. His left shoulder hurt terribly. His glasses were gone.

Father Wilhelm Kleinsorge, of the Society of Jesus, was, on the morning of the explosion, in rather frail condition. The Japanese wartime diet had not sustained him, and he felt the strain of being a foreigner in an increasingly xenophobic Japan; even a German, since the defeat of the Fatherland,[9] was unpopular. Father Kleinsorge had, at thirty-eight, the look of a boy growing too fast—thin in the face, with a prominent Adam's apple, a hollow chest, dangling hands, big feet. He walked clumsily, leaning forward a little. He was tired 2

1 The United States and the World What do these details show about the horrors of nuclear war?

---

[9] Fatherland refers to Germany, which had surrendered to Allied forces a few months before the attack on Hiroshima.

Vocabulary

xenophobic (zen´ ə fō´ bik) adj. having an extreme fear of foreigners or strangers

Rain falls on buildings reduced to rubble by an atomic bomb blast a few months after the U.S. attack that led to the end of World War II. October 1945. ★

Writing Practice

Editorial Have students write a brief editorial about the use of nuclear weapons during World War II. They should use specific details from the selection and their own research. Ask students to imagine it is 1946—the year after the war ended. They should support or condemn the use of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima. Their purpose is to persuade readers to share their opinion. Encourage students to appeal to both reason and emotion in their writing.

all the time. To make matters worse, he had suffered for two days, along with Father Cieslik, a fellow-priest, from a rather painful and urgent diarrhea, which they blamed on the beans and black ration bread they were obliged to eat. Two other priests then living in the mission compound, which was in the Noboricho section—Father Superior LaSalle and Father Schiffer—had happily escaped this affliction.

Father Kleinsorge woke up about six the morning the bomb was dropped, and half an hour later—he was a bit tardy because of his sickness—he began to read Mass in the mission chapel, a small Japanese-style wooden building which was without pews, since its worshipers knelt on the usual Japanese matted floor, facing an altar graced with splendid silks, brass, silver, and heavy embroideries. This morning, a Monday, the only worshipers were Mr. Takemoto, a theological student living in the mission house; Mr. Fukai, the secretary of the diocese;[10] Mrs. Murata, the mission's devoutly Christian housekeeper; and his fellow-priests. After Mass, while Father Kleinsorge was reading the Prayers of Thanksgiving, the siren sounded. He stopped the service and the missionaries retired across the compound to the bigger building. There, in his room on the ground floor, to the right of the front door, Father Kleinsorge changed into a military uniform which he had acquired when he was teaching at the Rokko Middle School in Kobe and which he wore during air-raid alerts.

After an alarm, Father Kleinsorge always went out and scanned the sky, and in this instance, when he stepped outside, he was glad to see only the single weather plane that flew over Hiroshima each day about this time. Satisfied that nothing would happen, he went in and breakfasted with the other Fathers on substitute coffee and ration bread, which, under the circumstances, was especially repugnant to him. The Fathers sat and talked awhile, until, at eight, they heard the all-clear. They went then to various parts of the building. Father Schiffer retired to his room to do some writing. Father Cieslik sat in his room in a straight chair with a pillow over his stomach to ease his pain, and read. Father Superior LaSalle stood at the window of his room, thinking. Father Kleinsorge went up to a room on the third floor, took off all his clothes except his underwear, and stretched out on his right side on a cot and began reading his Stimmen der Zeit.

After the terrible flash—which, Father Kleinsorge later realized, reminded him of something he had read as a boy about a large meteor colliding with the earth—he had time (since he was 1,400 yards from the center) for one thought: A bomb has fallen directly on us. Then, for a few seconds or minutes, he went out of his mind.

Father Kleinsorge never knew how he got out of the house. The next things he was conscious of were that he was wandering around in the mission's vegetable garden in his underwear, bleeding slightly from small cuts along his left flank; that all the building round about had fallen down except the Jesuits' mission house, which had long before been braced and double-braced by a priest named Gropper, who was terrified of earthquakes; that the day had turned dark; and that Murata-san, the housekeeper, was nearby, crying over and over, "Shu Jesusu, awaremi tamai! Our Lord Jesus, have pity on us!"

On the train on the way into Hiroshima from the country, where he lived with his mother, Dr. Terufumi Sasaki, the Red Cross Hospital surgeon, thought over an unpleasant nightmare he had had the night before. His mother's home was in Mukai-hara, thirty miles from the city, and it took him two hours by train and tram to reach the hospital. He had slept uneasily all night and had wakened an hour earlier than usual, and, feeling sluggish and slightly feverish, had debated whether to go to the hospital at all; his sense of duty finally forced him to go, and he had started out on an earlier train than he took

Point of View How would this passage read differently if it was in the first-person point of view? 3

---

[10] A diocese is a district within the Roman Catholic church.

Teach

Literary Element 3

Point of View Answer: Some students may empathize with Father Kleinsorge more, while others may say that it would make no difference.

Ask: Why do you think Hersey did not use the first-person point of view? (He is a reporter and reporters typically write from a third-person point of view in order to maintain objectivity.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English language learners might have problems understanding Hersey's complicated sentences. Review with students that an independent clause contains a subject and a verb. It can stand alone as a sentence. A compound sentence joins two independent clauses with a coordinating conjunction: The flash was bright, and the people ran. Have students find more examples of compound sentences in the text. Tell students to examine the conjunction in each compound sentence and explain how the conjunction adds to the meaning of the sentence.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs Answer: Japanese culture valued facing a terrifying situation with courage.

Big Idea 2

The United States and the World Answer: The doctor was not able to conceive of a bomb with the power to destroy much of a large city.

APPROACHING Ask: How do you think other nations' perceptions of the United States changed after the bombing? (Other nations probably became fearful of the power unleashed by the United States.)

Reading Strategy 3

Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs Answer: Hersey suggests that the bombing and its aftermath are so horrific that the doctor's ordinary fears and conflicts are diminished in comparison.

APPROACHING Ask: Why would details like this one be important to Hersey and to his readers? (The details convey the magnitude of suffering in Hiroshima; it tells readers the great price paid by the Japanese for a sudden end to the war.)

most mornings. The dream had particularly frightened him because it was so closely associated, on the surface at least, with a disturbing actuality. He was only twenty-five years old and had just completed his training at the Eastern Medical University, in Tsingtao, China. He was something of an idealist and was much distressed by the inadequacy of medical facilities in the country town where his mother lived. Quite on his own, and without a permit, he had begun visiting a few sick people out there in the evenings, after his eight hours at the hospital and four hours' commuting. He had recently learned that the penalty for practicing without a permit was severe; a fellow-doctor whom he had asked about it had given him a serious scolding. Nevertheless, he had continued to practice. In his dream, he had been at the bedside of a country patient when the police and the doctor he had consulted burst into the room, seized him, dragged him outside, and beat him up cruelly. On the train, he just about decided to give up the work in Mukai-hara, since he felt it would be impossible to get a permit, because the authorities would hold that it would conflict with his duties at the Red Cross Hospital.

At the terminus, he caught a streetcar at once. (He later calculated that if he had taken his customary train that morning, and if he had had to wait a few minutes for the streetcar, as often happened, he would have been close to the center at the time of the explosion and would surely have perished.) He arrived at the hospital at seven-forty and reported to the chief surgeon. A few minutes later, he went to a room on the first floor and drew blood from the arm of a man in order to perform a Wassermann test. The laboratory containing the incubators for the test was on the third floor. With the blood specimen in his left hand, walking in a kind of distraction he had felt all morning, probably because of the dream and his restless night, he started along the main corridor on his way toward the stairs. He was one step beyond an open window when the light of the bomb was reflected, like a gigantic photographic flash, in the corridor. He ducked down on one knee and said to himself, as only a Japanese would, "Sasaki, gambare! Be brave!" Just then (the building was 1,650 yards from the center), the blast ripped through the hospital. The glasses he was wearing flew off his face; the bottle of blood crashed against one wall; his Japanese slippers zipped out from under his feet—but otherwise, thanks to where he stood, he was untouched.

Dr. Sasaki shouted the name of the chief surgeon and rushed around to the man's office and found him terribly cut by glass. The hospital was in horrible confusion: Heavy partitions and ceilings had fallen on patients, beds had overturned, windows had blown in and cut people, blood was spattered on the walls and floors, instruments were everywhere, many of the patients were running about screaming, many more lay dead. (A colleague working in the laboratory to which Dr. Sasaki had been walking was dead; Dr. Sasaki's patient, whom he had just left and who a few moments before had been dreadfully afraid of syphilis, was also dead.) Dr. Sasaki found himself the only doctor in the hospital who was unhurt.

Dr. Sasaki, who believed that the enemy had hit only the building he was in, got bandages and began to bind the wounds of those inside the hospital; while outside, all over Hiroshima, maimed and dying citizens turned their unsteady steps toward the Red Cross Hospital to begin an invasion that was to make Dr. Sasaki forget his private nightmare for a long, long time.

Vocabulary

terminus (tur´ mə nəs) n. one end of a travel route or the station placed there

Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs Based on this detail, what aspect of Japanese culture made an impression on Hersey? 1

The United States and the World How does this excerpt show that people were unprepared for the true extent of atomic warfare? 2

Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs How does this sentence help you understand how Hersey feels about the bombing? 3

Reading Practice

Scan Hersey's Hiroshima first appeared in print as a journalist's report in The New Yorker magazine. Review the reading strategy of scanning—a quick search of text for a particular piece of information. Note that one can easily scan paragraphs in a newspaper article to find specific facts. Ask: Would it be as easy to scan this selection? Have students scan one page of the selection for proper names, numbers, dates, or quotations. Then ask students to recall orally what they learned.

Miss Toshiko Sasaki, the East Asia Tin Works clerk, who is not related to Dr. Sasaki, got up at three o'clock in the morning on the day the bomb fell. There was extra housework to do. Her eleven-month-old brother, Akio, had come down the day before with a serious stomach upset; her mother had taken him to the Tamura Pediatric Hospital and was staying there with him. Miss Sasaki, who was about twenty, had to cook breakfast for her father, a brother, a sister, and herself, and—since the hospital, because of the war, was unable to provide food—to prepare a whole day's meals for her mother and the baby, in time for her father, who worked in a factory making rubber earplugs for artillery crews, to take the food by on his way to the plant. When she had finished and had cleaned and put away the cooking things, it was nearly seven. The family lived in Koi, and she had a forty-five-minute trip to the tin works, in the section of town called Kannon-machi. She was in charge of the personnel records in the factory. She left Koi at seven, and as soon as she reached the plant, she went with some of the other girls from the personnel department to the factory auditorium. A prominent local Navy man, a former employee, had committed suicide the day before by throwing himself under a train—a death considered honorable enough to warrant a memorial service, which was to be held at the tin works at ten o'clock that morning. In the large hall, Miss Sasaki and the others made suitable preparations for the meeting. This work took about twenty minutes.

Miss Sasaki went back to her office and sat down at her desk. She was quite far from the windows, which were off to her left, and behind her were a couple of tall bookcases containing all the books of the factory library, which the personnel department had organized. She settled herself at her desk, put some things in a drawer, and shifted papers. She thought that before she began to make entries in her lists of new employees, discharges, and departures for the Army, she would chat for a moment with the girl at her right. Just as she turned her head away from the windows, the room was filled with a blinding light. She was paralyzed by fear, fixed still in her chair for a long moment (the plant was 1,600 yards from the center).

Everything fell, and Miss Sasaki lost consciousness. The ceiling dropped suddenly and the wooden floor above collapsed in splinters and the people up there came down and the roof above them gave way; but principally and first of all, the bookcases right behind her swooped forward and the contents threw her down, with her left leg horribly twisted and breaking underneath her. There, in the tin factory, in the first moment of the atomic age, a human being was crushed by books. ❧

Atomic bomb damage to Nagasaki, Japan. ★

The United States and the World What does this suggest about Hersey's attitude toward the atomic age? 4

Teach

Big Idea 4

The United States and the World Answer: Despite our great knowledge (symbolized by the books), which allowed us to develop a powerful atomic bomb, human beings are in danger of making themselves extinct.

View the Photograph ★

Until July 1945, no one in the world had seen an atomic mushroom cloud. The first atomic bomb explosion in the New Mexico desert yielded a mushroom-shaped cloud that was 40,000 feet high. The impact of that bomb nearly equaled that of 20,000 tons of TNT explosive. The heat from the bomb melted the desert sands in a 2,400-foot diameter. A month later, atomic bombs were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The mushroom cloud has become a symbol of nuclear weaponry.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 197–198.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Write a Screenplay Review with advanced students that a screenplay has elements of a stage play but also includes notes on how a scene would be filmed. Invite students to develop a screenplay that focuses on one episode in Hersey's story. Have them use dialogue and stage directions to develop characters and events. Ask volunteers to present staged readings of their scenes, and discuss the challenges of creating a scripted scene from prose.

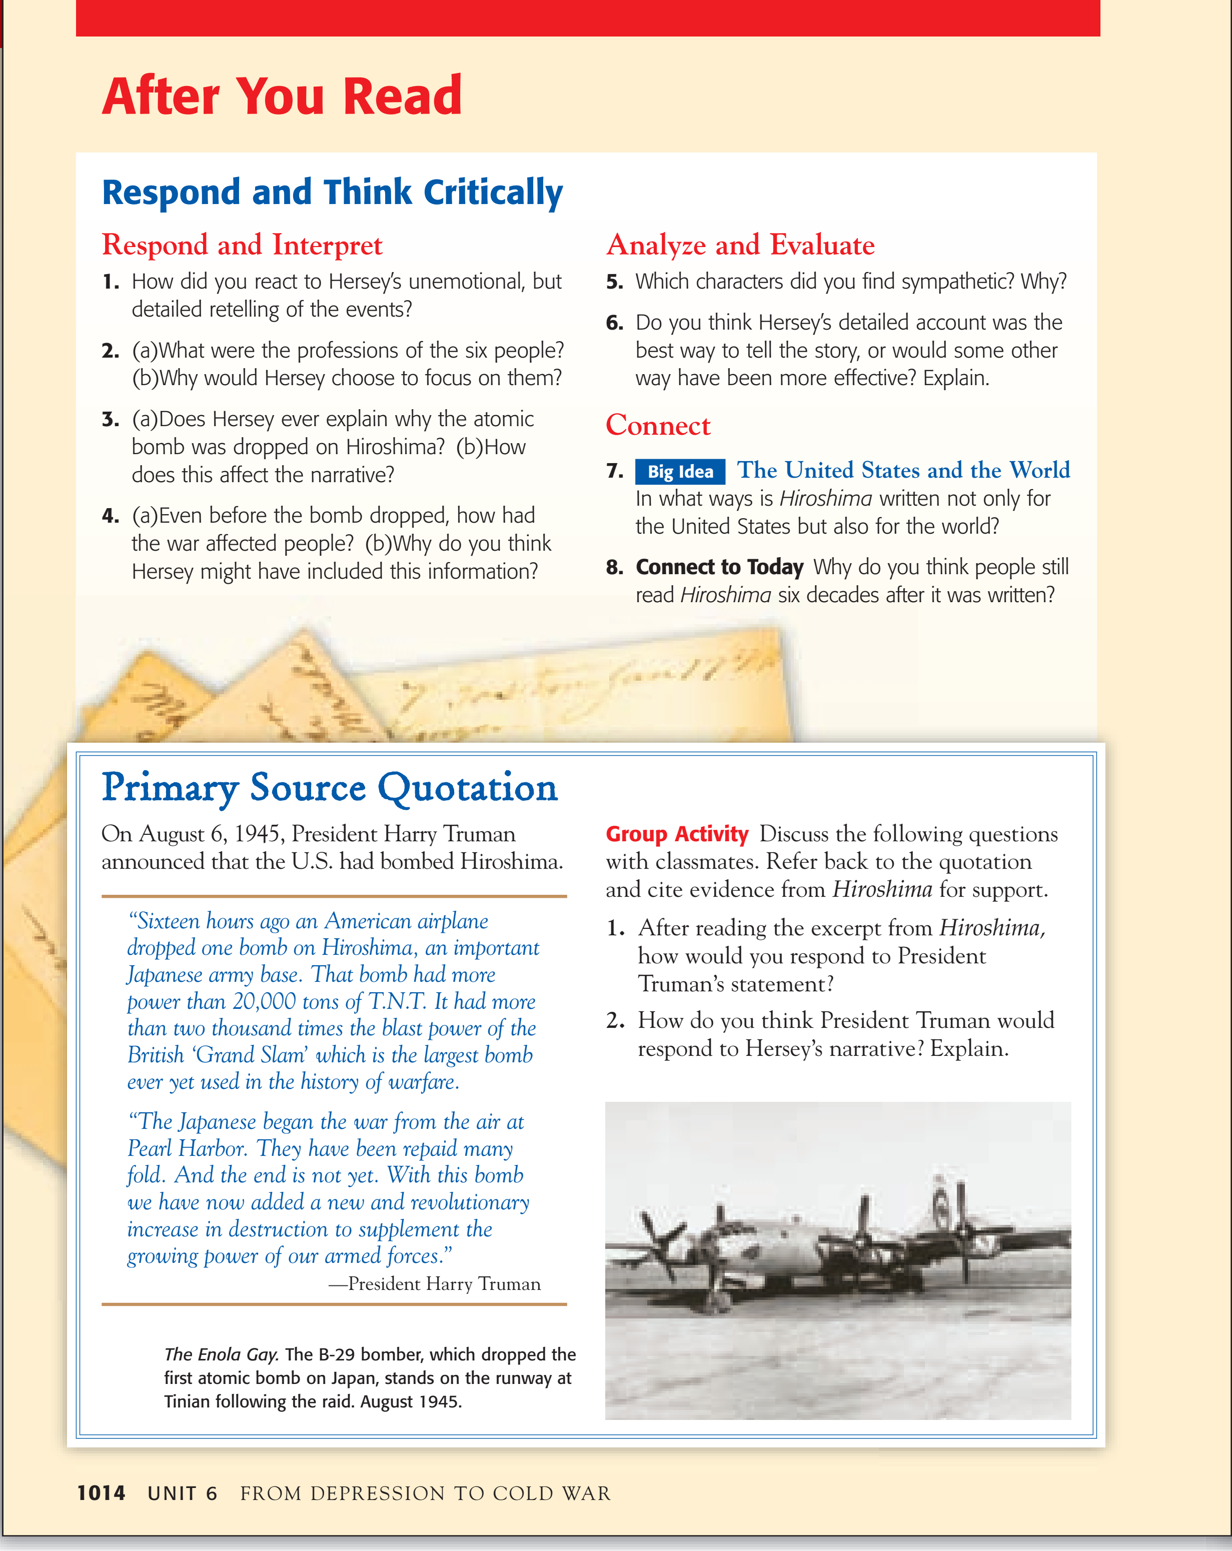
After You Read

Assess

1. (a) Some may be surprised by Hersey's objectivity and lack of emotion. Others may appreciate learning the facts.

2. (a) Clerk, seamstress, two doctors, and two religious leaders (b) They are a cross-section of society members who were in Hiroshima at the time of the bombing.
3. (a) Not in this excerpt
(b) Readers focus on the individuals' stories, not on the war or politics.
4. (a) It forced people to leave their homes, undergo air raids, lose sleep, and feel anxious. (b) So that readers—particularly in the United States—could see how the war also affected the Japanese
5. Students may choose Mrs. Nakamura because she is already a widow.
6. Students should give reasons for their responses. For example, students confused by the constant shifting back and forward in time may find a straightforward narrative more effective.
7. The issue of nuclear warfare and warfare in general affects people worldwide.
8. The ongoing controversy about the use of the atomic bomb, modern concerns about nuclear warfare, literary merit

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 261–262.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. How did you react to Hersey's unemotional, but detailed retelling of the events?
2. (a)What were the professions of the six people? (b)Why would Hersey choose to focus on them?
3. (a)Does Hersey ever explain why the atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima? (b)How does this affect the narrative?
4. (a)Even before the bomb dropped, how had the war affected people? (b)Why do you think Hersey might have included this information?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. Which characters did you find sympathetic? Why?
6. Do you think Hersey's detailed account was the best way to tell the story, or would some other way have been more effective? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea The United States and the World In what ways is Hiroshima written not only for the United States but also for the world?
8. Connect to Today Why do you think people still read Hiroshima six decades after it was written?

Primary Source Quotation

On August 6, 1945, President Harry Truman announced that the U.S. had bombed Hiroshima.

> "Sixteen hours ago an American airplane dropped one bomb on Hiroshima, an important Japanese army base. That bomb had more power than 20,000 tons of T.N.T. It had more than two thousand times the blast power of the British 'Grand Slam' which is the largest bomb ever yet used in the history of warfare.
>
> "The Japanese began the war from the air at Pearl Harbor. They have been repaid many fold. And the end is not yet. With this bomb we have now added a new and revolutionary increase in destruction to supplement the growing power of our armed forces."
>
> —President Harry Truman

The Enola Gay. The B-29 bomber, which dropped the first atomic bomb on Japan, stands on the runway at Tinian following the raid. August 1945.

Group Activity Discuss the following questions with classmates. Refer back to the quotation and cite evidence from Hiroshima for support.

1. After reading the excerpt from Hiroshima, how would you respond to President Truman's statement?
2. How do you think President Truman would respond to Hersey's narrative? Explain.

Primary Source Quotation

1. Some students may feel Truman disregards the civilian lives lost as a result of the bombing and seems to applaud the arrival of nuclear warfare.
2. Truman might say the bombing was necessary to save U.S. lives, even at the expense of Japanese lives. Truman's remark "And the end is not yet" may indicate he did not know if the Japanese would surrender, or he may be hinting that additional nuclear attacks may be forthcoming.

Literary Element Point of View

The excerpt from Hiroshima is written with a third-person objective point of view, which reports on how people respond to a disastrous event. The use of pronouns such as he, she, and they also indicate third-person point of view.

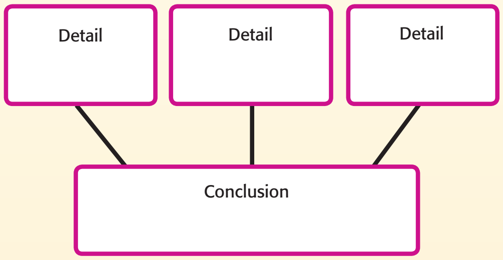
While stories told in first-person point of view are limited to only one perspective, narratives told in third-person objective point of view can reveal many perspectives on one topic. Much nonfiction journalistic writing, like Hiroshima, is told in third-person objective point of view in order to give a more complete account of events.

1. Why do you think Hersey uses the third-person objective point of view to narrate Hiroshima?
2. Are there points where Hersey veers from a completely objective point of view? Explain.

Review: Author's Purpose

Author's purpose is an author's intent in writing a piece of literature. Authors often write to persuade, to inform, to explain, to describe, or to entertain.

Partner Activity Meet with another classmate and identify Hersey's purpose in writing Hiroshima. Find at least three details that support your response. Afterward, compare your conclusions with those of your classmates.



Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs

ACT Skills Practice

1. From the evidence in this selection, how do you think Hersey felt about the citizens of Hiroshima?

   A. He was a detached observer and had no feelings about them.

   B. He saw them as individuals and condemned their suffering.

   C. He saw them as the enemy and felt their punishment was justified.

   D. He was sympathetic but thought that they exaggerated the situation.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Origins The etymology, or origin and history, of a word can help you better understand its meaning. Create a word map like the one below for each vocabulary word. Use a dictionary for help.

evacuate volition debris xenophobic terminus

Definition: to take part or share with others participate
Etymology: Latin participes means "partaker"
Sample sentence: Only a select group of scientists was chosen to participate in atomic experiments.

Academic Vocabulary

Mrs. Nakamura had the bare minimum of time before the bomb's impact reached her.

Minimum is an academic word. In casual conversation, a teacher might say you need to meet the minimum requirements to pass. Write a paragraph answering this question: What do you think the minimum requirements for earning a high school diploma should be? For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

After You Read

Assess

Literary Element

1. He shows how the bomb affected different people. He presents events objectively, to allow readers to draw their own conclusions.
2. Yes; he condemns the bombing when he describes the extent of the devastation and suffering.

Review: Author's Purpose

His purpose is to inform readers about the devastating effects of nuclear warfare. Students may point to the many details about the aftermath of the bombing. His purpose may also be to describe. He includes many descriptive details about the city and its inhabitants.

Progress Check

Can students draw conclusions about author's beliefs?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 193.

Vocabulary

evacuate (Middle English evacuatus means "to empty out") The survivors of Hiroshima had to evacuate the city because of lingering radiation.

volition (Latin volo means "to be willing") She had to exercise volition when she was accepted to three schools.

debris (Old French debrisier means "to break down") I dropped a glass on the floor and cleaned up the debris with a dustpan.

xenophobic (Greek zenos means "stranger" and Greek phobos means "fear") My grandparents in Europe are xenophobic and will not come to visit us.

terminus (Latin terminus means "boundary") The train was delayed at the terminus because one passenger did not have the proper ticket.

Academic Vocabulary

I think that the minimum requirement for a high school diploma should be a passing grade in the following classes: English composition, American literature, British literature, algebra, algebra II, trigonometry, geometry, chemistry, biology, physics or astronomy, U.S. history, world history, and elective arts courses.

After You Read

Assess

Respond Through Writing

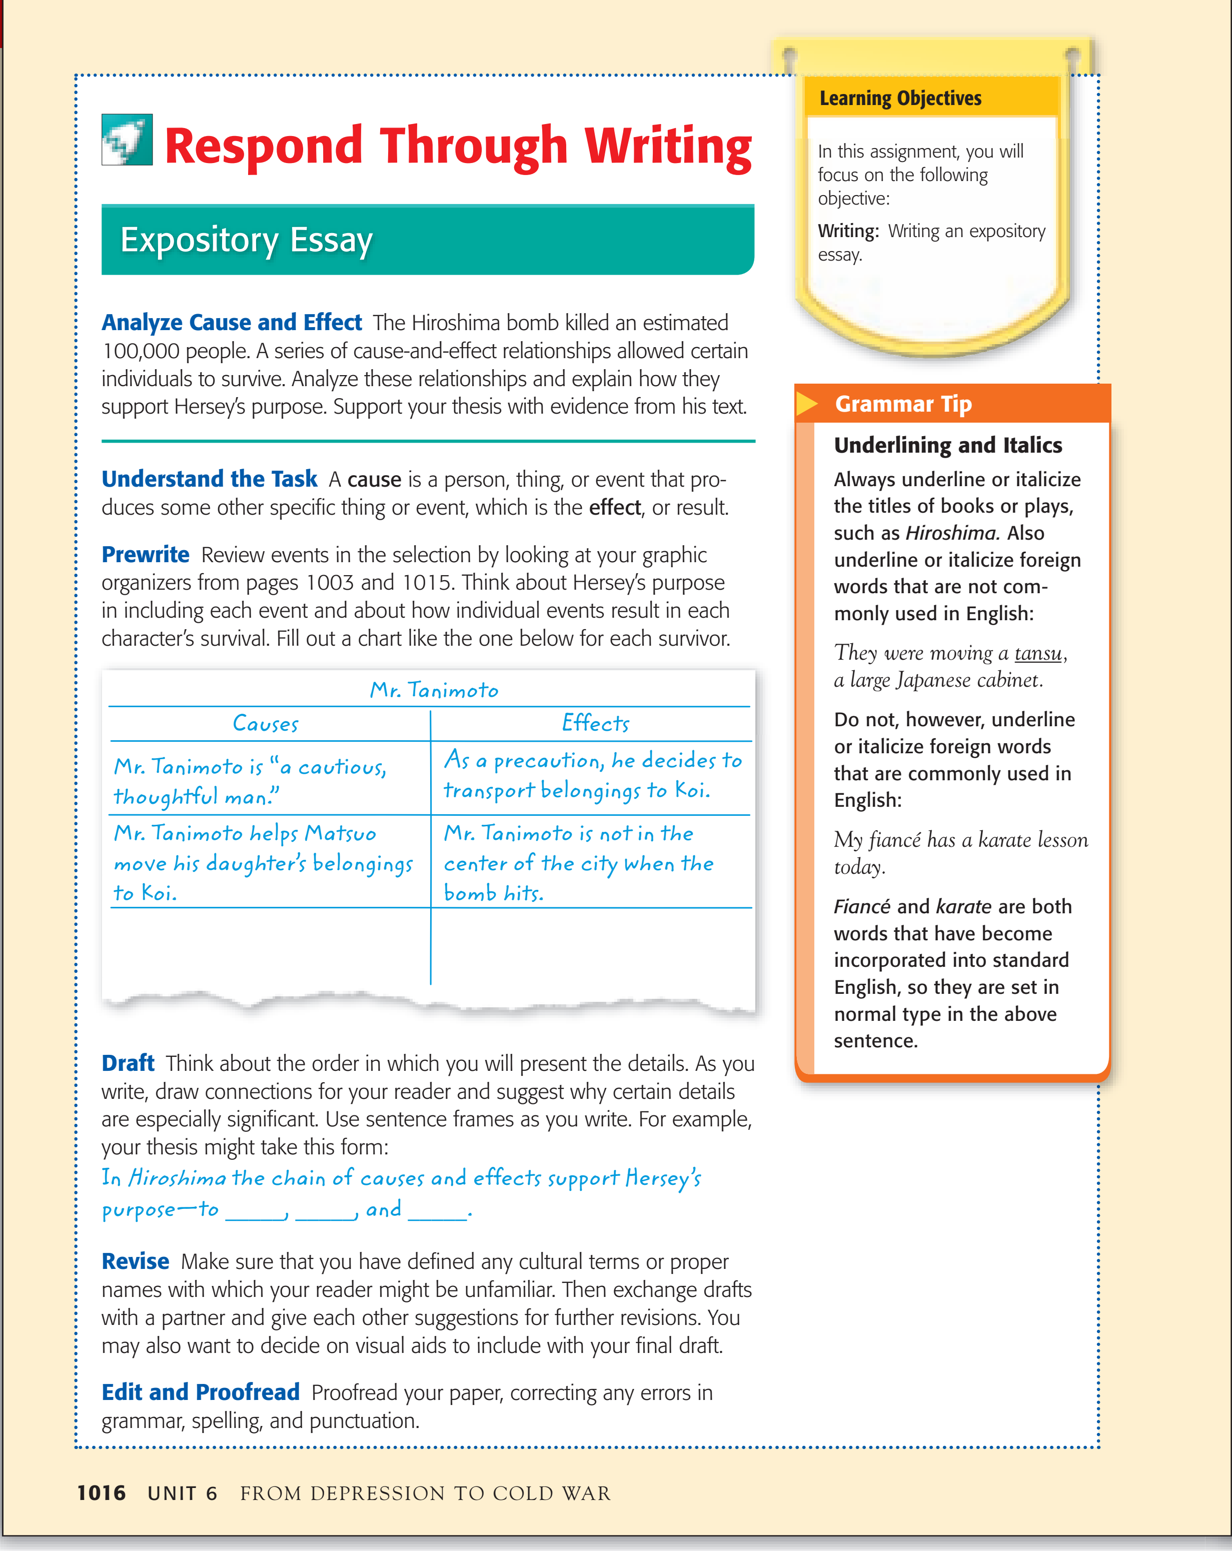
Use these criteria when evaluating students' writing:

- Does the student support the thesis with textual evidence?
- Does the student establish clear connections between causes and effects?
- Does the student apply appropriate strategies to evaluate and revise the draft?

Scoring Guide

Assess students' performance in the following categories using the scoring guide below:

- Addresses all parts of the writing task.
- Provides a meaningful thesis; maintains focus and organization.
- Supports the thesis with details and examples.
- Provides a variety of sentence types; uses precise, descriptive language.
- Follows English language conventions.
- Makes a logical, convincing argument.



Respond Through Writing

Expository Essay

Analyze Cause and Effect The Hiroshima bomb killed an estimated 100,000 people. A series of cause-and-effect relationships allowed certain individuals to survive. Analyze these relationships and explain how they support Hersey's purpose. Support your thesis with evidence from his text.

Understand the Task A cause is a person, thing, or event that produces some other specific thing or event, which is the effect, or result.

Prewrite Review events in the selection by looking at your graphic organizers from pages 1003 and 1015. Think about Hersey's purpose in including each event and about how individual events result in each character's survival. Fill out a chart like the one below for each survivor.

Mr. Tanimoto

Causes	Effects
Mr. Tanimoto is "a cautious, thoughtful man."	As a precaution, he decides to transport belongings to Koi.
Mr. Tanimoto helps Matsuo move his daughter's belongings to Koi.	Mr. Tanimoto is not in the center of the city when the bomb hits.

Draft Think about the order in which you will present the details. As you write, draw connections for your reader and suggest why certain details are especially significant. Use sentence frames as you write. For example, your thesis might take this form:

In Hiroshima the chain of causes and effects support Hersey's purpose—to _____, _____, and _____.

Revise Make sure that you have defined any cultural terms or proper names with which your reader might be unfamiliar. Then exchange drafts with a partner and give each other suggestions for further revisions. You may also want to decide on visual aids to include with your final draft.

Edit and Proofread Proofread your paper, correcting any errors in grammar, spelling, and punctuation.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objective:

Writing: Writing an expository essay.

Grammar Tip

Underlining and Italics

Always underline or italicize the titles of books or plays, such as Hiroshima. Also underline or italicize foreign words that are not commonly used in English:

They were moving a tansu, a large Japanese cabinet.

Do not, however, underline or italicize foreign words that are commonly used in English:

My fiancé has a karate lesson today.

Fiancé and karate are both words that have become incorporated into standard English, so they are set in normal type in the above sentence.

1016 UNIT 6 FROM DEPRESSION TO COLD WAR

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Task addressed	fully	mostly	partially	barely
Thesis	meaningful	provided	partial	weak
Support	thoughtful	provided	limited	weak
Language	varied, descriptive	varied, often descriptive	predictable, imprecise	repetitive, limited
Convention errors	few or none	several	many	serious
Arguments are	convincing	mostly convincing	partially convincing	not convincing

Before You Read

The Portrait

Meet Tomás Rivera

(1935–1984)

The life of Tomás Rivera, the "Dean of Mexican American Literature," is a true rags-to-riches story. From modest beginnings, Rivera became a successful writer and educator—an inspiration to many. He was born in Crystal City, Texas, the son of two agricultural workers. After graduating from high school, Rivera, like his parents, began working as a migrant worker. Until he reached his early twenties, Rivera traveled with other migrant workers, picking fruit and vegetables across the United States from Texas to the Midwest.

Despite all his traveling, Rivera managed to earn a formal education by attending different schools. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees in English education from Southwest Texas State University. After a stint teaching in public schools and at Southwest Texas Junior College in Uvalde, he attended the University of Oklahoma, where he earned a master's degree in Spanish literature, and, in 1969, a doctorate in Romance languages and literature.

In 1971 Rivera published his only novel, y no se lo trago la tierra, also known as And the Earth Did Not Devour Him. Originally written in Spanish, the book was published in both Spanish and English. It is an unconventional novel, made up of twenty-seven interrelated stories and sketches that describe, often grimly, the indomitable spirit of migrant farm workers. The novel was not meant to support any particular political point of view, but instead to reflect a world and experiences that Rivera knew well. Y no se lo trago la tierra won the prestigious Quinto Sol Award in 1971. The success of Rivera's novel inspired other Mexican Americans to add their voices to the literature of the United States.

> "He searched for stories about his people and finally gave their words sound, wrote the books he didn't have, we didn't have . . ."
>
> —Pat Mora

Besides providing inspiration, Rivera also helped people in direct ways, serving on the boards of numerous Mexican American organizations. He also had a distinguished academic career, eventually becoming chancellor of the University of California at Riverside. He was one of the founders of the National Council of Chicanos in Higher Education. Both President Jimmy Carter and President Ronald Reagan appointed Rivera to commissions on higher education.

Rivera was working on a new book when he died in Fontana, California. After his death, the University of Texas at Austin inaugurated the Tomás Rivera Professorship in Spanish Language and Literature. It is a fitting tribute to a generous man who sought, according to one source, to develop "hospitable and fertile space for Hispanic Americans in America's institutions."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Tomás Rivera, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 63

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 92

Or display several portraits—include portraits of famous people, family portraits, and official portraits of government officials. Explain that portraits are often, but not always, primarily of the face and are presented in a formal style. Ask: What do these portraits suggest about the people they portray? (They suggest that the person is important in some way. They show people at their best.) Have students consider as they read what the soldier's portrait means to his family.

Selection Skills

The Portrait

Literary Elements
- Idiom (SE pp. 1018–1022; TE p. 1020)
- Plot (SE p. 1023)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Report (SE p. 1023)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE pp. 1018, 1023)

Reading Skills
- Respond to Plot and Characters (SE pp. 1018, 1019, 1021,1023)
- Make Critical Judgments (TE p. 1018)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (TE p. 1020)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

The narrator recalls an episode from his youth in which Don Mateo, one of his father's friends, is visited by a traveling salesman who promises to enhance and frame a picture of Don Mateo's son, who was killed in the Korean War. Despite the high price, Don Mateo and his wife give the salesman their only photograph of their son. The portrait never arrives, and someone finds the photograph, discarded and ruined. Don Mateo finds the salesman and forces the salesman to make a portrait of his son.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 199–204.

Vocabulary

Use Context Clues Display this sentence:

I refused to exchange my old book for a new copy, because I knew the salesman was trying to swindle me out of my valuable first edition. Ask: Which words in the sentence serve as context clues to the meaning of swindle? (refused to exchange, valuable)

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

What are some precious items you and your family own—things you would not want to lose? Write a journal entry about one of these items and explain what makes it so valued.

Build Background

This story takes place in the 1950s during the Korean War. At that time, traveling salespeople were a familiar sight in cities and towns, selling everything from encyclopedias to vacuum cleaners. In this story, the salespeople have timed their visits to coincide with the return of newly paid migrant workers.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The United States and the World

"The Portrait" is set during the time of the Korean War. As you read, ask yourself, how does the war affect the main character?

Literary Element Idiom

An idiom is a saying, or group of words, that takes on special meaning, usually one different from its literal meaning. For example, "over the hill" can mean "old." Phrases such as "catch his eye," "turn the tables," and "keep tabs on" are other examples. As you read, ask yourself, What does each idiom mean? (Note that this selection is a translation and the idioms have different meanings in the original Spanish.)

Reading Strategy Respond to Plot and Characters

A static character remains basically the same throughout the story. A dynamic character, on the other hand, grows and changes during the story. As you read, ask yourself, Is the main character, Don Mateo, static or dynamic?

Tip: Use a Response Chart To better understand Don Mateo, write down quotations from him and your responses.

Quotation	My Response
"But you take good care of that picture for us because it's the only one we have of our son grown up." p. 1020	Don Mateo is concerned about the only photo he has of his grown son, yet he wants to "fix up" the photo to better preserve it. He trusts the salesman.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1017–1023

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing idioms.

Reading: Responding to plot and characters.

Writing: Writing a report.

Vocabulary

installment (in stôl′ mənt) n. one part of a payment that has been divided; p. 1019 The bedroom set was expensive so we paid for it in monthly installments.

swindle (swin′ dəl) v. to cheat someone out of money or property; p. 1021 At the carnival a vendor swindled me out of twenty dollars, selling me jewels worth only a few cents.

Tip: Context Clues To identify a word's meaning, look at the other words in the sentence for clues. Example: I paid for my sister's stereo in six installments; I hope she appreciates how long it took to pay the bill. The word installments refers to paying for something over time instead of in a single payment.

Reading Practice

Make Critical Judgments Sometimes readers judge literature informally by using personal criteria, such as how the story makes them feel. Other times readers use more formal criteria, such as evaluating the use of literary elements, to judge literature. This critical judgment helps readers examine literature and its components more deeply.

Have student groups plan to develop a critical judgment about "The Portrait." Ask students to choose the literary criteria they will use, such as how successfully the elements of character, setting, theme, dialogue, and imagery are developed. Students should assess the work in their groups after they have read it. Invite them to discuss their conclusions with the class.

The Portrait

Tomás Rivera

As soon as the people returned from up north the portrait salesmen began arriving from San Antonio. They would come to rake in. They knew that the workers had money and that was why, as Dad used to say, they would flock in. They carried suitcases packed with samples and always wore white shirts and ties; that way they looked more important and the people believed everything they would tell them and invite them into their homes without giving it much thought. I think that down deep they even longed for their children to one day be like them. In any event, they would arrive and make their way down the dusty streets, going house to house carrying suitcases full of samples.

I remember once I was at the house of one of my father's friends when one of these salesmen arrived. I also remember that that particular one seemed a little frightened and timid. Don Mateo asked him to come in because he wanted to do business.

"Good afternoon, traveler. I would like to tell you about something new that we're offering this year."

"Well, let's see, let's see . . ."

"Well, sir, see, you give us a picture, any picture you may have, and we will not only enlarge it for you but we'll also set it in a wooden frame like this one and we'll shape the image a little, like this—three dimensional, as they say."

"And what for?"

"So that it will look real. That way . . . look, let me show you . . . see? Doesn't he look real, like he's alive?"

"Man, he sure does. Look, vieja.[1] This looks great. Well, you know, we wanted to send some pictures to be enlarged . . . but now, this must cost a lot, right?"

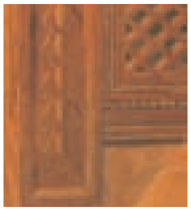
"No, I'll tell you, it costs about the same. Of course, it takes more time."

"Well, tell me, how much?"

"For as little as thirty dollars we'll deliver it to you done with inlays just like this, one this size."

"Boy, that's expensive! Didn't you say it didn't cost a lot more? Do you take installments?"

"Well, I'll tell you, we have a new manager and he wants everything



Visual Vocabulary
Inlays are pieces of material such as wood or ivory, set or embedded into the surface of something else to form a design.

Idiom What does the phrase "rake in" mean?

Respond to Plot and Characters Why might the salesman feel frightened or timid?

---

1. Here, the Spanish word vieja (vē ā′ hä′) is used as a term of endearment; literally, it means "old" or "old woman."

Vocabulary

installment (in stôl′ mənt) n. one part of a payment that has been divided

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World After World War II, Mexican Americans from California and Texas often went north as migrant workers. Ask: How do you know that the characters in the story are migrant workers? (The narrator says they have returned from the north and have money.)

Literary Element 2

Idiom Answer: The phrase means "to make a lot of money."

Reading Strategy 3

Respond to Plot and Characters Answer: The salesman might be new to selling this product, or he might feel uncomfortable asking people for money.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 206.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 4.5
DRP: 47
Lexile: 760

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Have fluent Spanish speakers identify the Spanish words in the selection. For each, have them compare their own sense of the denotation and connotation with the explanations in the footnotes. Ask students to suggest comparable English words for the Spanish terms.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Biography Read the following quotation by author Pat Mora describing Rivera's contributions to literature: "He searched for stories about his people and finally gave their words sound, wrote the books he didn't have, we didn't have . . . ." Have small groups of students research Rivera's life and work. Ask students to focus their research under these headings: Youth and Education, Family, Life as Migrant Laborer, Life as Author. As students complete their research, ask them to think about the meaning of Mora's comment. Have students write a brief interpretation of Mora's statement based on what they learned about Rivera.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: She wants her son back; she wants to bring him back to life.

Literary Element 2

Idiom Answer: The idiom means "be patient" or "have faith."

View the Photograph ★

Photographer, writer, and teacher Robert C. Buitrón (1953–) includes this portrait in his photographs of modern Hispanic American life. Ask: Why do you think the man in the portrait would have interested the photographer? (He has a weathered face that shows his life experiences.)

in cash. It's very fine work. We'll make it look like real. Shaped like that, with inlays . . . take a look. What do you think? Some fine work, wouldn't you say? We can have it all finished for you in a month. You just tell us what color you want the clothes to be and we'll come by with it all finished one day when you least expect, framed and all. Yes, sir, a month at the longest. But like I say, this man, who's the new manager, he wants the full payment in cash. He's very demanding, even with us."

"Yes, but it's much too expensive."

"Well, yes. But the thing is, this is very fine work. You can't say you've ever seen portraits done like this, with wood inlays."

"No, well, that's true. What do you think, vieja?"

"Well, I like it a lot. Why don't we order one? And if it turns out good . . . my Chuy . . . may he rest in peace. It's the only picture we have of him. We took it right before he left for Korea. Poor m'ijo,[2] we never saw him again. See . . . this is his picture. Do you think you can make it like that, make it look like he's alive?"

"Sure, we can. You know, we've done a lot of them in soldier's uniforms and shaped it, like you see in this sample, with inlays. Why, it's more than just a portrait. Sure. You just tell me what size you want and whether you want a round or square frame. What do you say? How should I write it down?"

"What do you say, vieja, should we have it done like this one?"

"Well, I've already told you what I think. I would like to have m'ijo's picture fixed up like that and in color."

"All right, go ahead and write it down. But you take good care of that picture for us because it's the only one we have of our son grown up. He was going to send us one all dressed up in uniform with the American and Mexican flags crossed over his head, but he no sooner got there when a letter arrived telling us that he was lost in action. So you take good care of it."

Adolfo, Zapote de Peraita, Guanajuato, Mexico, from the series Family and Photography, A Portrait of a Family in Two Cultures, 1979. Robert C. Buitrón. Silver gelatin print, 20 x 16 in. Collection of the artist.

"Don't you worry. We're responsible people. And we understand the sacrifices that you people make. Don't worry. And you just wait and see, when we bring it, you'll see how pretty it's gonna look. What do you say, should we make the uniform navy blue?"

"But he's not wearing a uniform in that picture."

"No, but that's just a matter of fixing it up with some wood fiber overlays. Look at these. This one, he didn't have a uniform on but we put one on him. So what do you say? Should we make it navy blue?"

---

[2] In Spanish, m'ijo (mē′ hō) is the colloquial form of mi hijo, meaning "my son."

The United States and the World What does "vieja" really want more than the portrait?

Idiom What does "you just wait and see" mean here?

Reading Practice

Idioms Display these sentences that contain idioms from the story:

Don Mateo wanted to find the so and so who had cheated him.

He continued, "Well, you see, the man came by the market one day."

"There's the portrait of Chuy. Like they say, one and the same."

Have students identify the idiom in each sentence and explain its meaning. ("the so and so": a person who has acted badly in some way; "you see": this is what I mean or let me explain; "Like they say": People generally make this comment; "one and the same": we are so similar we appear to be the same person. To help students understand the role of idioms in literature, ask: Idioms help create what type of tone in a written work? (a more informal tone) How do idioms contribute to characterization? (Idioms make a character's speech sound more realistic. Idioms may place a character in a particular place or time.)

"All right."

"Don't you worry about the picture."

And that was how they spent the entire day, going house to house, street by street, their suitcases stuffed with pictures. As it turned out, a whole lot of people had ordered enlargements of that kind.

"They should be delivering those portraits soon, don't you think?"

"I think so, it's delicate work and takes more time. That's some fine work those people do. Did you see how real those pictures looked?"

"Yeah, sure. They do some fine work. You can't deny that. But it's already been over a month since they passed by here."

"Yes, but from here they went on through all the towns picking up pictures . . . all the way to San Antonio for sure. So it'll probably take a little longer."

"That's true, that's true."

And two more weeks had passed by the time they made the discovery. Some very heavy rains had come and some children, who were playing in one of the tunnels leading to the dump, found a sack full of pictures, all worm-eaten and soaking wet. The only reason that they could tell that these were pictures was because there were a lot of them and most of them the same size and with faces that could just barely be made out. Everybody caught on right away. Don Mateo was so angry that he took off to San Antonio to find the so and so who had swindled them.

"Well, you know, I stayed at Esteban's house. And every day I went with him to the market to sell produce. I helped him with everything. I had faith that I would run into that son of a gun some day soon. Then, after I'd been there for a few days, I started going out to the different barrios[3] and I found out a lot that way. It wasn't so much the money that upset me. It was my poor vieja, crying and all because we'd lost the only picture we had of Chuy. We found it in the sack with all the other pictures but it was already ruined, you know."

"I see, but tell me, how did you find him?"

"Well, you see, to make a long story short, he came by the stand at the market one day. He stood right in front of us and bought some vegetables. It was like he was trying to remember who I was. Of course, I recognized him right off. Because when you're angry enough, you don't forget a face. I just grabbed him right then and there. Poor guy couldn't even talk. He was all scared. And I told him that I wanted that portrait of my son and that I wanted it three dimensional and that he'd best get it for me or I'd let him have it. And I went with him to where he lived. And I put him to work right then and there. The poor guy didn't know where to begin. He had to do it all from memory."

"And how did he do it?"

"I don't know. I suppose if you're scared enough, you're capable of doing anything. Three days later he brought me the portrait all finished, just like you see it there on that table by the Virgin. Now tell me, how do you like the way my boy looks?"

"Well, to be honest, I don't remember too well how Chuy looked. But he was beginning to look more and more like you, isn't that so?"

"Yes, I would say so. That's what everybody tells me now. That Chuy's a chip off the old block and that he was already looking like me. There's the portrait. Like they say, one and the same."

---

[3] Barrios (bär′ ē ōs) are neighborhoods.

Respond to Plot and Characters How much time has passed since the salesman visited Don Mateo?

Vocabulary

swindle (swin′ dəl) v. to cheat someone out of money or property

Idiom What does Don Mateo mean when he says "to make a long story short"?

Respond to Plot and Characters How likely is it that the salesman will be able to create a realistic portrait of Don Mateo's son?

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Respond to Plot and Characters Answer: More than a month has passed.

Ask: What might you infer from the question? (The pictures are overdue; something may be wrong.)

Literary Element 4

Idiom Answer: It means "to skip to the important part of the story."

Reading Strategy 5

Respond to Plot and Characters Answer: It is unlikely that the salesman can remember Chuy's features distinctly enough to portray him accurately. He probably just tried to imagine what Don Mateo would have looked like when he was younger.

APPROACHING Have students choose the sentence that provides a clue about how the salesman recreated Chuy's appearance.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Advanced English learners may benefit from working in small groups to prepare for participation in a class discussion. Ask students to summarize the story orally to their group and to articulate at least one observation about the characters, setting, and plot. These informal oral exchanges will provide practice for discussing the story with the whole class. Invite students to write down their ideas so they can share them later in the large group discussion.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Less proficient readers may miss the story's humor. Have students listen to a recording, or invite a volunteer to read the story aloud while others read along silently. Have students identify words and sentences written in a humorous way.

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) To have a portrait made from it (b) It may be a way to keep their son's memory alive.
2. (a) They are discarded and ruined. (b) He is furious; the salesman treated him, his wife, their memory of their son, and the photograph disrespectfully.
3. (a) He forces the salesman to create a portrait of his son. (b) The salesman may be frightened of assault or legal action; he may feel remorse for cheating.
4. (a) Proud and triumphant (b) He is naive and does not realize the portrait is of him.
5. (a) Their sincerity and innocence (b) It shows the characters' need to hold onto their dignity and their families.
6. (a) He recounts an incident from his childhood. He shows sympathy and respect for the characters. (b) He is an effective storyteller; as a child he is a silent observer who notices important details.
7. Don Mateo and his wife suffered the loss of their son in the Korean War. They are also victims.
8. Students might mention scams that involve the elderly or other vulnerable populations.

Progress Check

Can students analyze an idiom?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 205.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What do Don Mateo and "vieja" finally decide to do with the photograph of their son? (b)What deeper meaning might this offer have for them?
2. (a)What happens to the photographs the salesman collects? (b)How would you explain Don Mateo's strong feelings and his decisive action?
3. (a)What happens when Don Mateo finds the salesman? (b)Why do you think the salesman follows Don Mateo's orders?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)How does Don Mateo feel about what he finally receives from the salesman? (b)What does this reaction tell you about Don Mateo?
5. (a)What does the dialogue reveal about Don Mateo and "vieja"? (b)How effective is the dialogue in conveying the message of this story?
6. (a)How would you describe the role and perspective of the narrator throughout this story? (b)In your opinion, how effective is this kind of narrator in telling the story?

Connect

7. Big Idea The United States and the World Is Don Mateo a casualty of the Korean War even though he never fought on the battlefield? Support your answer.
8. Connect to Today Do you know any situations in which vulnerable people are taken advantage of today? Explain.

Literary Element Idiom

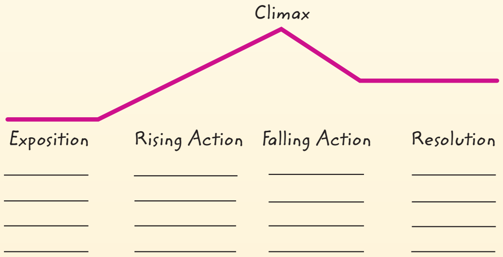
Idioms add realism to dialogue and enhance characterization. Idioms may be difficult for non-native speakers to understand because their meanings differ from the meanings of the individual words that constitute them. Examining the context may provide clues to the meaning.

1. Don Mateo tells the salesman that he will "let him have it" if he doesn't get the portrait. What does this saying mean? Why might Don Mateo say it that way?
2. At the end of the story, Don Mateo describes Chuy as "a chip off the old block." What does that mean? What does it suggest about the portrait?

Review: Plot

Plot is the sequence of events in a drama or a narrative work of fiction. The plot begins with exposition, which introduces the story's characters, setting, and situation. The rising action adds complications to the conflicts, or problems, leading to the climax, or point of highest emotional pitch. The falling action is the logical result of the climax, and the resolution, or d′enouement (dā′ no͞o män′), presents the final outcome.

Partner Activity Meet with another classmate to discuss the plot of "The Portrait." Then create a diagram like the one below and list the events that make up the stages of the plot.



Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Literary Element

1. It means "to attack someone verbally or physically." He wants to threaten the salesman without saying specifically what he will do to him.
2. It refers to the likeness of a child to a parent, usually of a son to his father. Chuy's portrait actually looks like Don Mateo.

Review: Plot

Exposition: The narrator gives background about the characters.

Rising Action: He buys the portrait.

Climax: The photographs are found.

Falling Action: He forces the salesman to create a portrait of Chuy.

Resolution: He loves the portrait; he does not know it is of him, not Chuy.

Reading Strategy Respond to Plot and Characters

A writer can make direct statements about a character, or reveal the person's character indirectly through words and actions and through what other characters think and say about that person. Review your response chart and answer the following.

1. What steps did Don Mateo take to obtain the portrait he had ordered?
2. What character traits did Don Mateo reveal as he searched for the man who had cheated him?
3. Do you think that Don Mateo goes through a significant change because of the events in this story? Why or why not?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Identify the context clues in the following sentences that help you determine the meaning of each boldfaced vocabulary word.

1. He bought the car on an installment plan and will pay three hundred dollars a month for a year.
2. I felt swindled once I realized that the necklace was worth far less than what I paid for it.

Academic Vocabulary

The salesman did not trust that Don Mateo and "vieja" would pay their fee in installments.

Fee is an academic word. In a more casual conversation, the word often carries a negative connotation. Someone might say that he was charged an extra fee for not paying his bill on time.

To further explore the meaning of this word, complete this sentence: In order to allow ______ to attend the school carnival, the school board established a low fee for the event.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Connect to Art

Write a Report

Assignment The portraits created during a specific historical period reveal a great deal about the artistic and social values of that time. Write a short report on the style and purpose of portraits in a particular period. Include visual examples.

Investigate Choose a manageable time span. For example, research portraits from the Civil War era, rather than the entire nineteenth century. Use a chart like the one below to organize your research. Identify the typical medium of the portraits (such as oil painting or photograph). Identify typical subjects (such as family groups). Identify characteristics of the style. Finally, indicate the purpose of the portraits. Were they intended to display the subject's wealth? Were they keepsakes?

Create Find images on the Internet or in books or magazines. Use word-processing software to create an interesting layout.

Time Period	Civil War, 1861–1865
Typical medium	black-and-white photos
Characteristics of subjects	• soldiers • often very young
Characteristics of style	• formal, sometimes in staged situations • dressed in uniforms • often posed with weapons
Purpose	mementos for loved ones

Report Your report should focus on a main idea, provide supporting details, and include a variety of sources and quotations with proper citations. Be sure to include necessary historical and cultural background information and to incorporate enough examples to document your thesis adequately.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. He traveled to San Antonio, found the salesman, and forced him to make the portrait.
2. Patience, persistence, love for his son, sympathy for his wife, and a sense of fair play
3. Most may say he changes when he finds and threatens the salesman, whom he had treated with deference. He takes strong action to get the portrait.

Vocabulary

1. The month-to-month payment outlined in the sentence explains that installment is a payment that has been divided.
2. Because the speaker paid much more for the necklace than it was worth, it can be inferred that swindled means being cheated out of money or property.

Academic Vocabulary

Possible answer: In order to allow all students to attend the school carnival, the school board established a low fee for the event.

Connect to Art

Use these criteria when evaluating students' reports:

- Did the student use effective research strategies and cite sources correctly?
- Did the student use available technologies to improve research and delivery?
- Did the student use effective and interesting language as well as clear organizational structure?

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 263–264.

For grammar practice, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 208.

Literary History

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 93

Or show students images of life in the United States during the 1950s. Ask: Why might young people in the 1950s have felt rebellious? (They wanted to be different from their parents, who were part of World War II and a post-war society that valued conforming.) As they read, ask students to consider why the Beats were cultural rebels.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Poetry Poetry has often been favored by young rebels. Ask: Why is poetry an ideal form for expressing new ideas and personal views of the world? (Poetry's imagery and deep feeling allow people to express ideas and views that are personal, untraditional, or complex.)

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 211–212.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1024–1025

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Reading:
Analyzing cultural context.
Analyzing literary periods.
Evaluating historical influences.

Literary History

Cultural Rebels: Writers of the Beat Generation

IN THE LATE 1940s, writers Jack Kerouac and John Clellon Holmes were searching for a way to capture the essence of their generation. They saw a nation slowly emerging from years of war and economic depression, years during which it seemed that most people held similar opinions and led predictable, responsible lives. For Kerouac and Holmes, postwar society was epitomized by anonymous dress, as in the uniform suits of office workers, and by conventional taste. But they saw young people rejecting conformity and turning to creativity. In pursuit of unique identities, the young looked for more artistic and less money-driven lives. Kerouac and Holmes decided that this trend was encapsulated by one word: Beat.

> "How to even begin to get it all down and without modified restraints and all hung-up on like literary inhibitions and grammatical fears . . ."
>
> —Jack Kerouac, from On the Road

Legendary Beat writers stand outside Lawrence Ferlinghetti's City Lights bookstore in San Francisco in 1956. Pictured left to right: Bob Donlin, Neal Cassady, Allen Ginsberg, Robert LaVinge, Lawrence Ferlinghetti. Photograph by Allen Ginsberg.

Beat had many connotations, ranging from the sordid to the sublime. Kerouac first heard the term from the street hustler Herbert Huncke, who used it as slang for "tired and beaten down." Kerouac saw in Beat a suggestion of beatitude, saintly or otherworldly beauty and happiness. Poet Allen Ginsberg said, "The point of Beat is that you get beat down to a certain nakedness where you actually are able to see the world in a visionary way."

The core group of Beat Generation writers—Kerouac, Ginsberg, and William S. Burroughs—met in New York City in the areas around Columbia University and in Greenwich Village. The movement soon attracted attention throughout the country, establishing hubs in both New York City and San Francisco. Other leading writers of the new movement were Gary Snyder, Gregory Corso, Lawrence Ferlinghetti (founder of the innovative City Lights Press and bookstore in San Francisco), Diane Di Prima, and Anne Waldman. Rejecting the prevailing dictates of style and topic, these writers were unabashed experimenters who addressed issues previously considered taboo. Their fearlessness appealed to a newly arising community of bohemians, people who pursued artistic or literary interests and lived nonconformist lives.

Research Practice

Focus on a Question Point out Jack Kerouac's quotation on page 1024. Ask students how the Beats expressed themselves without conforming to literary conventions. Have students select a Beat artist and research his or her life and writing style. Ask: Did this artist write novels, poems, or short stories? What kind of language did this writer use? Have students write a descriptive report to share with the class. Challenge the class to use the information in the reports to make a generalization about the Beat Generation.

Howl

1 A central work in the Beat Movement is Allen Ginsberg's book-length poem Howl (1956), which created a stir with critics, the public, and even law enforcement. (For selling the book, Lawrence Ferlinghetti was briefly held under arrest.) In a free verse style strongly influenced by Walt Whitman, Howl catalogs the wonders and horrors of U.S. society in dizzying abundance:

> "I saw the best minds of my generation destroyed by > madness, starving hysterical naked, . . .
> angelheaded hipsters burning for the ancient heavenly > connection to the starry dynamo in the machinery > of night . . ."

Wild Form

For many, the word Beat is synonymous with Jack Kerouac's novel On the Road. Kerouac published his novel in 1957, after years of rejections from publishers. While traveling and living in a variety of places, Kerouac wrote multiple drafts. He revised his drafts into their final form in one three-week sprint, during which he typed nearly nonstop on a continuous, 120-foot-long scroll of paper he fed through his typewriter.

The long, rhythmic, bebop-jazz inflected sentences of On the Road capture a series of road trips Kerouac took with his friend and Beat Generation icon Neal Cassady (called Dean Moriarty in the novel). On the Road expresses Kerouac's openness to the nation's desolate places as well as its exciting cities and to its humble people as well as its mighty. For readers who were exhausted by societal complacence and stodginess, Kerouac's adventures were revolutionary.

Like novelist Thomas Wolfe, Kerouac insisted on pushing boundaries. If he wished to write long, breathless sentences that owed more to vernacular and to the jazz spirit than they did to Establishment polish, he did.

*City Lights Bookstore,*1969. Sal Veder. Black and white photograph.

from On the Road

> "[T]he only people for me are the mad ones, the ones who are mad to live, mad to talk, mad to be saved, desirous of everything at the same time, the ones who never yawn or say a commonplace thing, but burn, burn, burn like fabulous yellow roman candles exploding like spiders across the stars and in the middle you see the blue centerlight pop and everybody goes 'Awww!'"

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about the Beat Generation, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Respond and Think Critically

1. Why were the members of the Beat Generation considered cultural rebels?
2. What significance did Allen Ginsberg's poetry have for his early readers?
3. What methods did Jack Kerouac employ in his writing?

Teach

Big Idea

The United States and the World During the 1950s, the United States was involved in a Cold War with the Soviet Union. Many people feared the Soviets would start a nuclear war. Ask: Do you think the Cold War had a big effect on the Beats? Explain. (The Beats were mainly concerned with the creativity of the individual; it is unlikely that their work would have been deeply affected by international relations.)

Assess

1. They rejected a 1950s culture that valued conformity after World War II; they tried new lifestyles and new forms of artistic expression.
2. It inspired writers, such as Diane di Prima, and expressed frustration with post-war society.
3. He wrote many drafts, in continuous sessions, relying on notes he took during his travels.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Society's tolerance of cultural rebels varies from one generation to another. One of the features of Beat writers that sets them apart from mainstream art is their word choices and juxtapositions of language. Discuss with students why nontraditional language in literature might not be accepted by mainstream society. Have students read the quotations from Kerouac and Ginsberg and identify words and phrases that might set these writers apart from traditional artists of their time.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers:
Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Selection Launcher

Selection Focus
Transparency 64

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 94

Or challenge students to create a list of rights and laws for a new society. Ask them to decide which laws and freedoms are most important and explain their choices. Consider whether any rules or rights should be excluded. Suggest they think about rules for bringing accused wrongdoers to justice. Then tell them that the Puritans who are characters in this play faced the same issues.

Before You Read

The Crucible, Act One

Meet Arthur Miller

(1915–2005)

As a young boy, Arthur Miller sat in the Shubert Theater on Lennox Avenue in New York City, completely entranced. Years later, in his autobiography, Miller remarked, "And so I learned that there were two kinds of reality, but that of the stage was far more real."

Fame in a Dark Time Miller began writing plays in college. In 1947, at thirty-two, All My Sons, a dramatic work about a manufacturer of defective war supplies, received the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award and was released as a film in 1948. The following year, Death of a Salesman, a tragedy about the failure of the American dream, won a Pulitzer Prize and established Miller as one of the greatest playwrights in the United States.

> "One of the strongest urges in the writer's heart . . . is to reveal what has been hidden and denied."
>
> —Arthur Miller

By his late thirties, Miller was embroiled in a dark chapter of U.S. history as a result of his fame and outspoken opinions. Fear of Communism—the "Red Scare"—had taken hold of U.S. citizens, and Congress created the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) to investigate an alleged Communist conspiracy. Among the main targets of the investigation were people in the entertainment industry. The HUAC demanded not only that individuals "confess" to earlier involvement in leftist organizations but that they name others who had held similar views. People who refused to cooperate were often blacklisted or denied employment. The ruthless tactics used by vigilantes such as Senator Joseph McCarthy reminded Miller of the witch trials in seventeenth-century colonial America.

McCarthyism and Witch Hunts Oppressed by the disturbing direction in which his country was moving, Miller immersed himself in the study of the Salem witch trials of 1692, which he described as "one of the strangest and most awful chapters in human history." From this research emerged The Crucible, which was first staged on Broadway in 1953. Its relevance to the political situation during the McCarthy era was clear, and the phrase "McCarthy witch hunts" became an enduring symbol of the perversion of power in U.S. history. Viewing the playwright as a potentially subversive figure, the U.S. State Department refused to renew Miller's passport. When Miller was called to testify before HUAC, he refused to implicate his friends and colleagues. He was charged with contempt, fined, and sentenced to jail. His sentence, however, was overturned on appeal in 1958, and he never served a jail term.

A tireless writer, Miller saw his last play produced just a year before his death at 89. On almost any given day, it is said, a theater somewhere in the world is producing The Crucible.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Arthur Miller, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Selection Skills

The Crucible, Act One

Literary Elements
- Dialogue (SE pp. 1027–1050)
- Setting (TE p. 1030)
- Irony (TE pp. 1040, 1043)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Dialogue (SE p. 1050)
- Summarize (TE p. 1034)

Reading Skills
- Draw Conclusions About Characters (SE pp. 1027–1050)
- Recognize Logical Fallacies (TE p. 1032)
- Irony (TE p. 1044)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Parts (SE p. 1050)
- Latin Roots (TE p. 1042)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Viewing Art (SE pp. 1028,1039, 1046, 1049)
- Relate Art to Text (TE p. 1036)
- Readers' Theater (TE p. 1046)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Play

How would you react to a rumor that you were behaving improperly? Write a journal entry describing this reaction.

Build Background

The Crucible takes place in 1692 in Salem, a small town in the Massachusetts Bay Colony. Under the rigid authority of Puritan Reverend Samuel Parris, relations among villagers became bitter. In the winter of 1691–1692, several teenage girls began behaving strangely. Many suspected the girls were victims of witchcraft.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The United States and the World

The "Cold War" caused many U.S. citizens to fear Communist subversion within their country. As you read, ask, What is Miller trying to say about paranoia and suspicion?

Literary Element Dialogue

Dialogue is the conversation between characters in a literary work. In a play—which consists almost entirely of dialogue—the author must develop plot, theme, and characterization by means of direct speech. As you read, ask yourself, How does Miller express his ideas through dialogue?

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions About Characters

How do you learn what someone is like? In literature, as in life, you observe what that person says and does.

Tip: Take Notes Use web diagrams like the one below to record observations and draw conclusions about characters in the play.

ABIGAIL WILLIAMS--ACT ONE goes into trance and shouts out names of witches tells wild stories about Tituba bullies and threatens her friends
Conclusion
had an affair with John Proctor
hates Elizabeth Proctor pretends to be obedient to her uncle

Learning Objectives

For pages 1026–1050

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing dialogue.

Reading: Drawing conclusions about characters.

Writing: Writing a dialogue.

Vocabulary

compromise (kom´ prə mīz´) v. to endanger the reputation or interests of; to expose to suspicion; p. 1031 Doing business with a known criminal will certainly compromise the company's good name.

contention (kən ten´ shən) n. a verbal argument or struggle; quarreling; p. 1032 Contention broke out at the meeting over the length of the school day.

subservient (səb sur´ vē ənt) adj. useful in an inferior capacity; submissive; p. 1034 Jenna resented her subservient role in the family.

pretense (prē´ tens) n. a false show or appearance, especially for the purpose of deceiving; falseness; p. 1037 Whenever I drop by, he makes a pretense of being hard at work.

evade (i vād´) v. to escape or avoid, as by cleverness; p. 1045 The fugitive tried to evade capture.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary, Act One

The Reverend Parris saw girls dancing in the forest at night. Now, two of them have fallen into trances. When questioned, Abigail Williams denies practicing witchcraft, but after talking with the other girls, her story changes. She admits to "conjuring," but blames Tituba, Parris's slave, who in turn accuses others. In reality, Abigail had an affair with John Proctor and wants his wife dead. Two conflicting sides emerge in the community, represented by the Putnams, who hope to prove witchcraft, and by Proctor and Rebecca Nurse, who are skeptical about accusations of witchcraft.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 213–218.

Vocabulary

Connotation A word's connotation is its emotional association or overtone. Connotations can be positive or negative. The word compromise has a negative connotation when used to refer to the irresponsible act of endangering someone's reputation or safety. Ask: Which other words on this list have predominantly negative connotations? (contention, subservient, pretense)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Remind students that a dialect is a form of English that is spoken by members of a group or by people from a particular geographical region. Many characters in the play speak in a dialect resembling that used by American colonists. Explain departures from modern usage, including double negatives and lack of subject and verb agreement. Ask students to restate the following passages in standard English.

1. ". . . he cannot discover no medicine for it in his books" (he cannot discover any medicine for it in his books)
2. "It were a grand sneeze" (It was a grand sneeze)

Tell students to be alert for other such usages in the play.

Teach

Big Idea

The United States and the World Remind students that Miller was motivated to write this play by political activities in the United States. Say: As you read, compare the types of evidence used in the Salem witch trials with those used in the hunt for Communists in the 1950s.

APPROACHING Ask students to identify examples of statements revealing that people who were accused were often presumed to be guilty without any concrete proof.

View the Photograph ★

Included in the selection are a number of stills from the 1996 movie adaptation of The Crucible, directed by Nicholas Hytner. Arthur Miller himself adapted the screenplay from his play. The cast includes Daniel Day-Lewis as John Proctor, Winona Ryder as Abigail, Paul Scofield as Danforth, Joan Allen as Elizabeth Proctor, and Bruce Davison as the Reverend Parris. Miller and Allen received Oscar nominations. The film is rated PG-13; consider previewing it to see if you feel it is appropriate for your students.

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students pp. 227–254
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 227–254
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 227-254

The Crucible

Arthur Miller

Research Practice

Build Background Many students may not be familiar with Senator Joseph McCarthy or the House Un-American Activities Committee. Have students choose from the following research topics: McCarthy's speech in Wheeling, West Virginia, in 1950; the Army McCarthy Hearings of 1954; the Alger Hiss case; and the Hollywood Ten. Have students prepare and deliver a brief presention of their topics to the class.

CHARACTERS

(in order of appearance)

REVEREND PARRIS
BETTY PARRIS
TITUBA
ABIGAIL WILLIAMS
SUSANNA WALCOTT
MRS. ANN PUTNAM
THOMAS PUTNAM
MERCY LEWIS
MARY WARREN
JOHN PROCTOR
REBECCA NURSE
GILES COREY
REVEREND JOHN HALE
ELIZABETH PROCTOR
FRANCIS NURSE
EZEKIEL CHEEVER
MARSHAL HERRICK
JUDGE HATHORNE
DEPUTY GOVERNOR DANFORTH
SARAH GOOD
HOPKINS

Act One

(An Overture)

[A small upper bedroom in the home of REVEREND SAMUEL PARRIS*, Salem, Massachusetts, in the spring of the year 1692.*

There is a narrow window at the left. Through its leaded panes the morning sunlight streams. A candle still burns near the bed, which is at the right. A chest, a chair, and a small table are the other furnishings. At the back a door opens on the landing of the stairway to the ground floor. The room gives off an air of clean spareness. The roof rafters are exposed, and the wood colors are raw and unmellowed.

1 As the curtain rises, REVEREND PARRIS is discovered kneeling beside the bed, evidently in prayer. His daughter, BETTY PARRIS*, aged ten, is lying on the bed, inert.*

REVEREND PARRIS is praying now, and, though we cannot hear his words, a sense of his confusion hangs about him. He mumbles, then seems about to weep; then he weeps, then prays again; but his daughter does not stir on the bed. ☆

The door opens, and his Negro slave enters. TITUBA[1] is in her forties. PARRIS brought her with him from Barbados,[2] where he spent some years as a merchant before entering the ministry. She enters as one does who can no longer bear to be barred from the sight of her beloved, but she is also very frightened because her slave sense has warned her that, as always, trouble in this house eventually lands on her back.]

TITUBA. [Already taking a step backward.] My Betty be hearty soon?

PARRIS. Out of here!

TITUBA. [Backing to the door.] My Betty not goin' die . . .

PARRIS. [Scrambling to his feet in a fury.] Out of my sight! [She is gone.] Out of my—[He is overcome with sobs. He clamps his teeth against them and closes the door and leans against it, exhausted.] Oh, my God! God help me! [Quaking with fear, mumbling to himself through his sobs, he goes to the bed and gently takes BETTY'S hand.] Betty. Child. Dear child. Will you wake, will you open up your eyes! Betty, little one . . .

[He is bending to kneel again when his niece, ABIGAIL WILLIAMS*, seventeen, enters—a strikingly beautiful girl, an orphan, with an endless capacity for dissembling.*[3] Now she is all worry and apprehension and propriety.]

ABIGAIL. Uncle? [He looks to her.] Susanna Walcott's here from Doctor Griggs.

PARRIS. Oh? Let her come, let her come.

---

1. Tituba (ti to͞o′ bə)
2. Barbados (bär bā′ dōz) is an island in the Caribbean that was, at the time of the play, an English colony.
3. Dissembling means "concealing one's true motives."

Dialogue Tituba's way of speaking helps us understand something that Miller has already mentioned about her in the stage directions. What is it? 2

Draw Conclusions About Characters What does this phrase tell us about Abigail? 3

Teach

Literary Element 1

Atmosphere Have students describe the atmosphere that is set from the first page of this play. (Students may say fear, superstition, mystery.) Ask: What can you predict about this play from the atmosphere? (Students may say it will be dramatic, emotional, or scary.)

Literary Element 2

Dialogue Answer: Tituba is a slave from Barbados. She speaks in a Caribbean dialect.

Reading Strategy 3

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: Abigail deceives others. Readers should question her reliability and search for a hidden motive in her words.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 220.

Cultural History ☆

Slavery in Massachusetts

Some students may be surprised to learn that there were slaves in colonial Massachusetts. In fact, the first African slaves arrived at Boston in 1638. Distinguished legal historian A. Leon Higginbotham Jr. once observed, "Merchants from Massachusetts, the most vigorous slave traders in the world, made enormous profits from the slave trade."

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Point out that stage directions contain important information. Have students read the directions that describe Samuel Parris and Tituba. Ask: What do you learn from the stage directions about the internal conflicts of Reverend Parris and Tituba? (Parris is afraid because he does not understand what is wrong with his daughter. Tituba fears that she will be blamed for the problem.) What mood do the stage directions and dialogue create in the opening scene? (They produce a tense, urgent mood.)

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: A viewer in the 1950s would have understood witchcraft and Communism to be interchangeable.

Reading Strategy 2

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: Students may suggest that Parris is defensive, self-absorbed, or paranoid. Ask: What do we learn about Parris's motives? (Students may answer that, although he is worried for Betty, his real concern is for his own position.)

APPROACHING Point out Samuel Parris's emphasis on the presence of "factions," or feuding groups, in Salem generally and in his congregation in particular. Ask: Why is Parris so worried about these "factions"? (He thinks they may conspire to oust him from his ministry.)

ABIGAIL. [Leaning out the door to call to SUSANNA, who is down the hall a few steps.] Come in, Susanna.

[SUSANNA WALCOTT, a little younger than ABIGAIL, a nervous, hurried girl, enters.]

PARRIS. [Eagerly.] What does the doctor say, child?

SUSANNA. [Craning around PARRIS to get a look at BETTY.] He bid me come and tell you, reverend sir, that he cannot discover no medicine for it in his books.

PARRIS. Then he must search on.

SUSANNA. Aye, sir, he have been searchin' his books since he left you, sir. But he bid me tell you, that you might look to unnatural things for the cause of it.

PARRIS. [His eyes going wide.] No—no. There be no unnatural cause here. Tell him I have sent for Reverend Hale of Beverly, and Mr. Hale will surely confirm that. Let him look to medicine and put out all thought of unnatural causes here. There be none.

SUSANNA. Aye, sir. He bid me tell you. [She turns to go.]

ABIGAIL. Speak nothin' of it in the village, Susanna.

PARRIS. Go directly home and speak nothing of unnatural causes.

SUSANNA. Aye, sir. I pray for her. [She goes out.]

ABIGAIL. Uncle, the rumor of witchcraft is all about; I think you'd best go down and deny it yourself. The parlor's packed with people, sir. I'll sit with her.

PARRIS. [Pressed, turns on her.] And what shall I say to them? That my daughter and my niece I discovered dancing like heathen in the forest?

ABIGAIL. Uncle, we did dance; let you tell them I confessed it—and I'll be whipped if I must be. But they're speakin' of witchcraft. Betty's not witched.

PARRIS. Abigail, I cannot go before the congregation when I know you have not opened[4] with me. What did you do with her in the forest?

ABIGAIL. We did dance, uncle, and when you leaped out of the bush so suddenly, Betty was frightened and then she fainted. And there's the whole of it.

PARRIS. Child. Sit you down.

ABIGAIL. [Quavering, as she sits.] I would never hurt Betty. I love her dearly.

PARRIS. Now look you, child, your punishment will come in its time. But if you trafficked[5] with spirits in the forest I must know it now, for surely my enemies will, and they will ruin me with it.

ABIGAIL. But we never conjured[6] spirits.

PARRIS. Then why can she not move herself since midnight? This child is desperate! [ABIGAIL lowers her eyes.] It must come out—my enemies will bring it out. Let me know what you done there. Abigail, do you understand that I have many enemies?

ABIGAIL. I have heard of it, uncle.

PARRIS. There is a faction[7] that is sworn to drive me from my pulpit. Do you understand that?

ABIGAIL. I think so, sir.

PARRIS. Now then, in the midst of such disruption, my own household is discovered to be the very center of some obscene practice. Abominations[8] are done in the forest—

ABIGAIL. It were sport,[9] uncle!

PARRIS. [Pointing at BETTY.] You call this sport? [She lowers her eyes. He pleads.] Abigail, if you

1 The United States and the World What word might a U.S. citizen, watching this play in the 1950s, have substituted for "witchcraft?"

Draw Conclusions About Characters What can we learn about Reverend Parris from this remark? 2

---

[4] Here, have not opened means "have not been completely honest."

[5] Trafficked means "dealt or did business."

[6] Here, conjured means "summoned by using magic words or spells."

[7] A faction is a small segment of people who disagree with the larger group on an issue or set of issues.

[8] Abominations are vile or shameful acts.

[9] Here, sport means "innocent recreation."

Reading Practice

Setting Remind students that setting can serve multiple functions. Ask: What functions does the forest setting serve? (It is a logical plot device; these girls would sneak out at night to the forest. The wild, dark forest, considered the heathen abode of evil spirits, creates a perfect atmosphere for the beginning of the trouble. The forest represents all that makes this community vulnerable to physical and spiritual attack.)

know something that may help the doctor, for God's sake tell it to me. [She is silent.] I saw Tituba waving her arms over the fire when I came on you. Why was she doing that? And I heard a screeching and gibberish coming from her mouth. She were swaying like a dumb beast over that fire!

ABIGAIL. She always sings her Barbados songs, and we dance.

PARRIS. I cannot blink[10] what I saw, Abigail, for my enemies will not blink it. I saw a dress lying on the grass.

ABIGAIL. [Innocently.] A dress?

PARRIS. [It is very hard to say.] Aye, a dress. And I thought I saw—someone naked running through the trees!

ABIGAIL. [In terror.] No one was naked! You mistake yourself, uncle!

PARRIS. [With anger.] I saw it! [He moves from her. Then, resolved.] Now tell me true, Abigail. And I pray you feel the weight of truth upon you, for now my ministry's at stake, my ministry and perhaps your cousin's life. Whatever abomination you have done, give me all of it now, for I dare not be taken unaware when I go before them down there.

ABIGAIL. There is nothin' more. I swear it, uncle.

PARRIS. [Studies her, then nods, half convinced.] Abigail, I have fought here three long years to ☆ bend these stiff-necked people to me, and now, just now when some good respect is rising for me in the parish, you compromise my very character. I have given you a home, child, I have put clothes upon your back—now give me upright answer. Your name in the town—it is entirely white, is it not?

ABIGAIL. [With an edge of resentment.] Why, I am sure it is, sir. There be no blush about my name.

PARRIS. [To the point.] Abigail, is there any other cause than you have told me, for your being discharged from Goody[11] Proctor's service? I have heard it said, and I tell you as I heard it, that she comes so rarely to the church this year for she will not sit so close to something soiled. What signified that remark?

ABIGAIL. She hates me, uncle, she must, for I would not be her slave. It's a bitter woman, a lying, cold, sniveling woman, and I will not work for such a woman!

PARRIS. She may be. And yet it has troubled me that you are now seven month out of their house, and in all this time no other family has ever called for your service.

ABIGAIL. They want slaves, not such as I. Let them send to Barbados for that. I will not black my face for any of them! [With ill-concealed resentment at him.] Do you begrudge my bed, uncle?

PARRIS. No—no.

ABIGAIL. [In a temper.] My name is good in the village! I will not have it said my name is soiled! Goody Proctor is a gossiping liar!

[Enter MRS. ANN PUTNAM. She is a twisted soul of forty-five, a death-ridden woman, haunted by dreams.]

PARRIS. [As soon as the door begins to open.] No—no, I cannot have anyone. [He sees her, and a certain deference[12] springs into him, although his worry remains.] Why, Goody Putnam, come in.

MRS. PUTNAM. [Full of breath, shiny-eyed.] It is a marvel. It is surely a stroke of hell upon you.

PARRIS. No, Goody Putnam, it is—

MRS. PUTNAM. [Glancing at BETTY.] How high did she fly, how high?

PARRIS. No, no, she never flew—

---

[10] Here, blink means "to deliberately overlook or ignore."

[11] Goody is short for Goodwife, a term of polite address for a married woman.

[12] Deference is courteous respect or regard.

3 Dialogue Why might Miller have inserted a dash between "saw" and "someone naked?"

Vocabulary

compromise (kom′ prə mīz′) v. to endanger the reputation or interests of; to expose to suspicion

The United States and the World Why do you think that Abigail is so concerned about her good name? 4

Teach

Literary Element 3

Dialogue Answer: Students should understand that the dash represents hesitation. Parris is possibly embarrassed to be revealing what he saw.

Big Idea 4

The United States and the World Answer: Students may say that Abigail is afraid of being accused of witchcraft, which is a pervasive motif in the play.

Cultural History ☆

The Clergy Samuel Parris's references to his ministry and his relationships with his "stiff-necked" parishioners reflect the fact that Puritan clergymen in colonial Massachusetts were chosen by their congregations, who set the clergymen's salaries and specified other privileges and allowances. Have students look for other references to the ways in which clergy could be pressured by their parishioners.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Advanced Remind students that plays are meant to be seen and heard. Ask groups of two or three students to read passages from the play aloud. Have students note how their comprehension improves as they read aloud and hear the dialogue.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Analysis Have students analyze ways in which Miller steadily builds momentum and suspense in Act One. For example, the conflict between Samuel Parris and Abigail is interrupted by the entrance of Ann Putnam, whose words intensify the mood.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Inferences Providence is defined as "a blessing." Ask: Why would Putnam and Parris consider it providence to find witchcraft in their village? (Students may say that now Parris and the Putnams have something to blame for their misfortunes.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Be sure students understand that "out" here means "out in the open" or "no longer hidden or secret."

Reading Strategy 2

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: Some students may suggest that hard-handed is meant literally, referring to honest manual labor. Others will understand that the phrase describes Putnam's familiarity with wielding power and having his way.

Literary History ☆

Thomas Putnam Miller wrote a commentary on this play, in which he describes Putnam as a vindictive man who played a critical role in accusing witches. Some historians have concluded that the real Thomas Putnam used accusations of witchcraft as a way to gain land from people who were executed.

MRS. PUTNAM. [Very pleased with it.] Why, it's sure she did. Mr. Collins saw her goin' over Ingersoll's barn, and come down light as bird, he says!

PARRIS. Now, look you, Goody Putnam, she never—[Enter THOMAS PUTNAM, a well-to-do, hard-handed landowner, near fifty.] Oh, good morning, Mr. Putnam.

1 PUTNAM. It is a providence[13] the thing is out now! It is a providence. [He goes directly to the bed.]

PARRIS. What's out, sir, what's—?

[MRS. PUTNAM goes to the bed.]

PUTNAM. [Looking down at BETTY.] Why, her eyes is closed! Look you, Ann.

MRS. PUTNAM. Why, that's strange. [To PARRIS.] Ours is open.

PARRIS. [Shocked.] Your Ruth is sick?

MRS. PUTNAM. [With vicious certainty.] I'd not call it sick; the Devil's touch is heavier than sick. It's death, y'know, it's death drivin' into them, forked and hoofed.

PARRIS. Oh, pray not! Why, how does Ruth ail?

MRS. PUTNAM. She ails as she must—she never waked this morning, but her eyes open and she walks, and hears naught,[14] sees naught, and cannot eat. Her soul is taken, surely.

[PARRIS is struck.]

PUTNAM. [As though for further details.] They say you've sent for Reverend Hale of Beverly?

PARRIS. [With dwindling conviction[15] now.] A precaution only. He has much experience in all demonic arts, and I—

MRS. PUTNAM. He has indeed; and found a witch in Beverly last year, and let you remember that.

PARRIS. Now, Goody Ann, they only thought that were a witch, and I am certain there be no element of witchcraft here.

PUTNAM. No witchcraft! Now look you, Mr. Parris—

PARRIS. Thomas, Thomas, I pray you, leap not to witchcraft. I know that you—you least of all, Thomas, would ever wish so disastrous a charge laid upon me. We cannot leap to witchcraft. They will howl me out of Salem for such corruption in my house.

PUTNAM. [At the moment, he is intent upon getting PARRIS, for whom he has only contempt, to move toward the abyss.] Mr. Parris, I have taken your part in all contention here, and I would continue; but I cannot if you hold back in this. There are hurtful, vengeful spirits layin' hands on these children. ☆

PARRIS. But, Thomas, you cannot—

PUTNAM. Ann! Tell Mr. Parris what you have done.

MRS. PUTNAM. Reverend Parris, I have laid seven babies unbaptized in the earth. Believe me, sir, you never saw more hearty babies born. And yet, each would wither in my arms the very night of their birth. I have spoke nothin', but my heart has clamored intimations.[16] And now, this year, my Ruth, my only—I see her turning strange. A secret child she has become this year, and shrivels like a sucking mouth were pullin' on her life too. And so I thought to send her to your Tituba—

PARRIS. To Tituba! What may Tituba—?

MRS. PUTNAM. Tituba knows how to speak to the dead, Mr. Parris.

PARRIS. Goody Ann, it is a formidable sin to conjure up the dead!

MRS. PUTNAM. I take it on my soul, but who else may surely tell us what person murdered my babies?

---

[13] Here, providence means "a blessing" or "an act of divine care."

[14] Naught means "nothing."

[15] Here, conviction means "certainty."

[16] A heart that has clamored intimations has nagged its owner with suggestions (of possible witchcraft).

2 Draw Conclusions About Characters Do you think that "hard-handed" is meant as a compliment? Explain your answer.

Vocabulary

contention (kən ten´ shən) n. verbal argument or struggle; quarreling

Reading Practice

Recognize Logical Fallacies Point out Mrs. Putnam's reasoning: Ruth cannot speak because she was close to the spirits; Ruth had to be close to the spirits or she could speak. This is sometimes called circular reasoning. As they read, encourage students to look for other examples of fallacies. Suggest that they look for the following types: confusing fact and opinion, faulty assumptions, bias, mistaking cause and effect, and guilt by association.

PARRIS. [Horrified.] Woman!

MRS. PUTNAM. They were murdered, Mr. Parris! And mark this proof! Mark it! Last night my Ruth were ever so close to their little spirits; I know it, sir. For how else is she struck dumb now except some power of darkness would stop her mouth? It is a marvelous sign, Mr. Parris!

PUTNAM. Don't you understand it, sir? There is a murdering witch among us, bound to keep herself in the dark. [PARRIS turns to BETTY, a frantic terror rising in him.] Let your enemies make of it what they will, you cannot blink it more.

PARRIS. [To ABIGAIL.] Then you were conjuring spirits last night.

ABIGAIL. [Whispering.] Not I, sir—Tituba and Ruth.

PARRIS. [Turns now, with new fear, and goes to BETTY, looks down at her, and then, gazing off.] Oh, Abigail, what proper payment for my charity! Now I am undone.

PUTNAM. You are not undone! Let you take hold here. Wait for no one to charge you—declare it yourself. You have discovered witchcraft—

PARRIS. In my house? In my house, Thomas? They will topple me with this! They will make of it a—

[Enter MERCY LEWIS, the PUTNAMS' servant, a fat, sly, merciless girl of eighteen.]

MERCY. Your pardons. I only thought to see how Betty is.

PUTNAM. Why aren't you home? Who's with Ruth?

MERCY. Her grandma come. She's improved a little, I think—she give a powerful sneeze before.

MRS. PUTNAM. Ah, there's a sign of life!

MERCY. I'd fear no more, Goody Putnam. It were a grand sneeze; another like it will shake her wits together, I'm sure. [She goes to the bed to look.]

PARRIS. Will you leave me now, Thomas? I would pray a while alone.

ABIGAIL. Uncle, you've prayed since midnight. Why do you not go down and—

PARRIS. No—no. [To PUTNAM.] I have no answer for that crowd. I'll wait till Mr. Hale arrives. [To get MRS. PUTNAM to leave.] If you will, Goody Ann . . .

PUTNAM. Now look you, sir. Let you strike out against the Devil, and the village will bless you for it! Come down, speak to them—pray with them. They're thirsting for your word, Mister! Surely you'll pray with them.

PARRIS. [Swayed.] I'll lead them in a psalm, but let you say nothing of witchcraft yet. I will not discuss it. The cause is yet unknown. I have had enough contention since I came; I want no more.

MRS. PUTNAM. Mercy, you go home to Ruth, d'y'hear?

MERCY. Aye, mum.

[MRS. PUTNAM goes out.]

PARRIS. [To ABIGAIL.] If she starts for the window, cry for me at once.

ABIGAIL. I will, uncle.

PARRIS. [To PUTNAM.] There is a terrible power in her arms today. [He goes out with PUTNAM.]

ABIGAIL. [With hushed trepidation.][17] How is Ruth sick?

MERCY. It's weirdish, I know not—she seems to walk like a dead one since last night.

ABIGAIL. [Turns at once and goes to BETTY, and now, with fear in her voice.] Betty? [BETTY doesn't move. She shakes her.] Now stop this! Betty! Sit up now!

[BETTY doesn't stir. MERCY comes over.]

3 The United States and the World In making this statement, what chain of events is Mr. Putnam initiating?

4 Draw Conclusions About Characters What sort of a friend do you think Abigail would make? Explain.

---

[17] Trepidation means "fear" or "anxiety."

Teach

Big Idea 3

The United States and the World Answer: Putnam is initiating a witch hunt.

Reading Strategy 4

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: Students should see that Abigail's readiness to blame her companions would make her an untrustworthy friend.

Cultural History ☆

Superstition Ruth Putnam may have had a physical illness such as a cold or allergies. However, superstition also held that sneezing might indicate that a possessed person was expelling demons through the nose. This may be the origin of the practice of saying "God bless you" when a person sneezes. It also may be why Mercy suggests that sneezing may restore Ruth's senses.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Point out to students that dialogue has many purposes in drama. For example, it can reveal character, show conflict, move the plot forward, or hint at theme. Suggest that students create three-column charts with the headings Character, Conflict, and Theme to use as they read. Have students copy under each heading phrases or sentences that are vital to understanding the play. They may also add the speaker and the page on which the words are found. Then have students meet in small groups, share their quotations, and make observations about characters, conflicts, and theme. Have students continue their charts in subsequent acts.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: In his stage directions, Miller describes Mercy as being "merciless," which is confirmed in her suggestion that she should be allowed to beat Betty.

Reading Strategy 2

Predict Ask students to predict why Abigail might want John Proctor's wife dead. (Students may say Abigail wants revenge because Elizabeth Proctor fired her, she wants to stop Elizabeth from spreading rumors, and Abigail has romantic feelings for John.)

Literary Element 3

Dialogue Answer: By alternating between charm and anger, the actress could show the two sides of Abigail's nature.

Reading Strategy 4

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: These remarks reveal that Abigail's often volatile and aberrant behavior could be due to the psychological trauma of having witnessed the brutal murder of her parents.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Help students understand Abigail's phrase "pointy reckoning that will shudder you."

MERCY. Have you tried beatin' her? I gave Ruth a good one and it waked her for a minute. Here, let me have her.

ABIGAIL. [Holding MERCY back.] No, he'll be comin' up. Listen, now; if they be questioning us, tell them we danced—I told him as much already.

MERCY. Aye. And what more?

ABIGAIL. He knows Tituba conjured Ruth's sisters to come out of the grave.

MERCY. And what more?

ABIGAIL. He saw you naked.

MERCY. [Clapping her hands together with a frightened laugh.] Oh, Jesus!

[Enter MARY WARREN, breathless. She is seventeen, a subservient, naive, lonely girl.]

MARY WARREN. What'll we do? The village is out! I just come from the farm; the whole country's talkin' witchcraft! They'll be callin' us witches, Abby!

MERCY. [Pointing and looking at MARY WARREN.] She means to tell, I know it.

MARY WARREN. Abby, we've got to tell. Witchery's a hangin' error, a hangin' like they done in Boston two year ago! We must tell the truth, Abby! You'll only be whipped for dancin', and the other things!

ABIGAIL. Oh, we'll be whipped!

MARY WARREN. I never done none of it, Abby. I only looked!

MERCY. [Moving menacingly toward MARY.] Oh, you're a great one for lookin', aren't you, Mary Warren? What a grand peeping courage you have!

[BETTY, on the bed, whimpers. ABIGAIL turns to her at once.]

ABIGAIL. Betty? [She goes to BETTY.] Now, Betty, dear, wake up now. It's Abigail. [She sits BETTY up and furiously shakes her.] I'll beat you, Betty! [BETTY whimpers.] My, you seem improving. I talked to your papa and I told him everything. So there's nothing to—

BETTY. [Darts off the bed, frightened of ABIGAIL, and flattens herself against the wall.] I want my mama!

ABIGAIL. [With alarm, as she cautiously approaches BETTY.] What ails you, Betty? Your mama's dead and buried.

BETTY. I'll fly to Mama. Let me fly! [She raises her arms as though to fly, and streaks for the window, gets one leg out.]

ABIGAIL. [Pulling her away from the window.] I told him everything; he knows now, he knows everything we—

BETTY. You drank blood, Abby! You didn't tell him that!

ABIGAIL. Betty, you never say that again! You will never—

BETTY. You did, you did! You drank a charm to kill John Proctor's wife! You drank a charm to kill Goody Proctor! 2

ABIGAIL. [Smashes her across the face.] Shut it! Now shut it!

BETTY. [Collapsing on the bed.] Mama, Mama! [She dissolves into sobs.]

ABIGAIL. Now look you. All of you. We danced. And Tituba conjured Ruth Putnam's dead sisters. And that is all. And mark this. Let either of you breathe a word, or the edge of a word, about the other things, and I will come to you in the black of some terrible night and I will bring a pointy reckoning that will shudder you. And you know I can do it; I saw Indians smash my dear parents' heads on the pillow next to mine, and I have seen some reddish work[18] done at night, and I can make you wish you had never seen the sun

1 Draw Conclusions About Characters How does this remark illustrate the irony in Miller's stage directions when Mercy first enters?

Vocabulary

subservient (səb sur′ vē ənt) adj. useful, in an inferior capacity, to promote an end; submissive

---

[18] Reddish work means "bloody deeds."

3 Dialogue How might the actress playing Abigail make these lines particularly effective?

4 Draw Conclusions About Characters What new insight into Abigail's character do these remarks offer?

Writing Practice

Summarize To monitor comprehension, have students pause every few pages and write a brief summary of what has occurred. As a model, use the following summary of this page: Mercy, Mary Warren, Abigail, and Betty, while alone in Betty's room, discuss what occurred in the woods the night they were caught dancing. Betty awakens and accuses Abigail of drinking a charm to kill Goody Proctor. Abigail, who emerges as the leader of the girls, orders them to keep quiet.

go down! [She goes to BETTY and roughly sits her up.] Now, you—sit up and stop this!

[But BETTY collapses in her hands and lies inert on the bed.]

MARY WARREN. [With hysterical fright.] What's got her? [ABIGAIL stares in fright at BETTY.] Abby, she's going to die! It's a sin to conjure, and we—

ABIGAIL. [Starting for MARY.] I say shut it, Mary Warren!

[Enter JOHN PROCTOR. On seeing him, MARY WARREN leaps in fright.]

MARY WARREN. Oh! I'm just going home, Mr. Proctor.

PROCTOR. Be you foolish, Mary Warren? Be you deaf? I forbid you leave the house, did I not? Why shall I pay you? I am looking for you more often than my cows!

MARY WARREN. I only come to see the great doings in the world.

PROCTOR. I'll show you a great doin' on your arse one of these days. Now get you home; my wife is waitin' with your work! [Trying to retain a shred of dignity, she goes slowly out.]

MERCY LEWIS. [Both afraid of him and strangely titillated.][19] I'd best be off. I have my Ruth to watch. Good morning, Mr. Proctor.

[MERCY sidles out. Since PROCTOR*'s entrance,* ABIGAIL has stood as though on tiptoe, absorbing his presence, wide-eyed. He glances at her, then goes to BETTY on the bed.]

ABIGAIL. Gah! I'd almost forgot how strong you are, John Proctor!

PROCTOR. [Looking at ABIGAIL now, the faintest suggestion of a knowing smile on his face.] What's this mischief here?

ABIGAIL. [With a nervous laugh.] Oh, she's only gone silly somehow.

PROCTOR. The road past my house is a pilgrimage to Salem all morning. The town's mumbling witchcraft.

ABIGAIL. Oh, posh! [Winningly she comes a little closer, with a confidential, wicked air.] We were dancin' in the woods last night, and my uncle leaped in on us. She took fright, is all.

PROCTOR. [His smile widening.] Ah, you're wicked yet, aren't y'! [A trill of expectant laughter escapes her, and she dares come closer, feverishly looking into his eyes.] You'll be clapped in the stocks[20] before you're twenty.

[He takes a step to go, and she springs into his path.]

ABIGAIL. Give me a word, John. A soft word. [Her concentrated desire destroys his smile.]

PROCTOR. No, no, Abby. That's done with.

ABIGAIL. [Tauntingly.][21] You come five mile to see a silly girl fly? I know you better.

PROCTOR. [Setting her firmly out of his path.] I come to see what mischief your uncle's brewin' now. [With final emphasis.] Put it out of mind, Abby.

ABIGAIL. [Grasping his hand before he can release her.] John—I am waitin' for you every night.

PROCTOR. Abby, I never give you hope to wait for me.

ABIGAIL. [Now beginning to anger—she can't believe it.] I have something better than hope, I think!

PROCTOR. Abby, you'll put it out of mind. I'll not be comin' for you more.

ABIGAIL. You're surely sportin' with me.

PROCTOR. You know me better.

ABIGAIL. I know how you clutched my back behind your house and sweated like a stallion

---

[19] To be titillated is to be pleasantly excited or stimulated.

[20] The word stocks refers to a heavy wooden frame with holes for confining the ankles and wrists of someone found guilty of a crime.

[21] Tauntingly means "in a scornful or mocking way."

5 Dialogue What do the other girls call Proctor? How does Abigail's use of his first name help define their relationship?

The United States and the World What does this menacing statement foreshadow? 6

Teach

Literary Element 5

Dialogue Answer: The others say Mr. Proctor; Abigail calls him John, suggesting an intimacy that is borne out in their flirtatious exchange.

APPROACHING Point out to students that Miller purposefully uses names to imply relationship. Ask: How do we use names in real life? (Students may say they do not refer to teachers by first name, showing a more formal relationship.)

Big Idea 6

The United States and the World Answer: The entire community is frightened and looking for a scapegoat. This statement foreshadows the likelihood of a witch hunt.

Cultural History ☆

King Philip's War Abigail, aged 17 in 1692, would have been an infant at the time of King Philip's War (1675–1676), a major series of bloody conflicts between the English colonists and the Native Americans of the New England region.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

AAVE The dialect that some of the characters speak includes language patterns such as an absence of agreement with the irregular verbs do and be, which is similar to a language pattern used by speakers of African American vernacular English (AAVE). To clarify the distinctions between the Puritan dialect, AAVE, and modern Standard Academic English, display the following lines of dialogue from this page and the previous page:

1. . . . like they done in Boston . . .

2. I never done none of it.

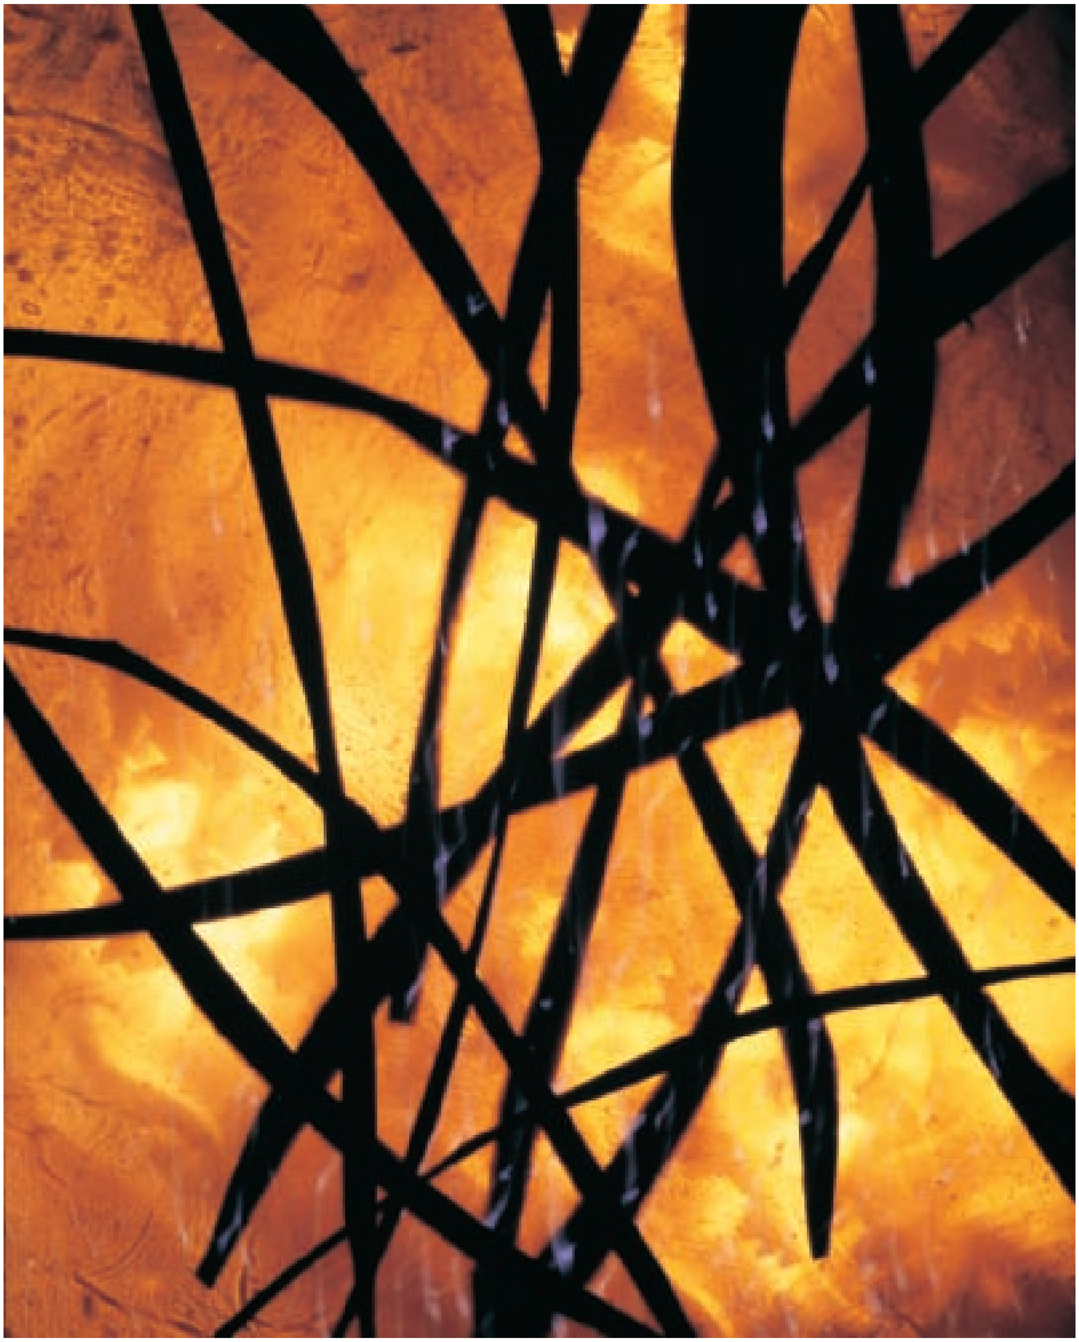
3. Be you foolish? Be you deaf?

Ask students to explain the nonstandard elements in these passages and to revise the passages into Standard Academic English. (1. as they did in Boston . . .; 2. I have never done any of it; I never did any of it; 3. Are you foolish? Are you deaf?)

Teach

Political History ☆

Conflicts in Salem In his commentary on the play, Miller describes Rebecca and Francis Nurse as people highly respected for their moral character, good judgment, and success. He notes that, before the arrival of Parris, the Nurses and their friends had blocked the appointment of a minister supported by the Putnams. Political differences also were leading to conflicts between the Nurses' friends and the town authorities allied with the Putnams.



Viewing Practice

Relate Art to Text Have students look at the picture while they consider what they have read so far. Ask: How does the picture affect your impression of what has happened up to this point in the play? (Students may say it reflects the ominous feeling of the play.) Ask: What do you think will happen next? How do you think the picture foreshadows the rest of the play? (Students may say there will be a witch hunt. They may think the picture foreshadows the violence ahead.)

whenever I come near! Or did I dream that? It's she put me out, you cannot pretend it were you. I saw your face when she put me out, and you loved me then and you do now!

PROCTOR. Abby, that's a wild thing to say—

ABIGAIL. A wild thing may say wild things. But not so wild, I think. I have seen you since she put me out; I have seen you nights.

PROCTOR. I have hardly stepped off my farm this sevenmonth.

ABIGAIL. I have a sense for heat, John, and yours has drawn me to my window, and I have seen you looking up, burning in your loneliness. Do you tell me you've never looked up at my window?

PROCTOR. I may have looked up.

ABIGAIL. [Now softening.] And you must. You are no wintry man. I know you, John. I know you. [She is weeping.] I cannot sleep for dreamin'; I cannot dream but I wake and walk about the house as though I'd find you comin' through some door. [She clutches him desperately.]

PROCTOR. [Gently pressing her from him, with great sympathy but firmly.] Child—

ABIGAIL. [With a flash of anger.] How do you call me child!

PROCTOR. Abby, I may think of you softly from time to time. But I will cut off my hand before I'll ever reach for you again. Wipe it out of mind. We never touched, Abby.

ABIGAIL. Aye, but we did.

PROCTOR. Aye, but we did not.

ABIGAIL. [With a bitter anger.] Oh, I marvel how such a strong man may let such a sickly wife be—

PROCTOR. [Angered—at himself as well.] You'll speak nothin' of Elizabeth!

ABIGAIL. She is blackening my name in the village! She is telling lies about me! She is a cold, sniveling woman, and you bend to her! Let her turn you like a—

PROCTOR. [Shaking her.] Do you look for whippin'?

[A psalm is heard being sung below.]

ABIGAIL. [In tears.] I look for John Proctor that took me from my sleep and put knowledge in my heart! I never knew what pretense Salem was, I never knew the lying lessons I was taught by all these Christian women and their covenanted[22] men! And now you bid me tear the light out of my eyes? I will not, I cannot! You loved me, John Proctor, and whatever sin it is, you love me yet! [He turns abruptly to go out. She rushes to him.] John, pity me, pity me!

[The words "going up to Jesus" are heard in the psalm, and BETTY claps her ears suddenly and whines loudly.]

ABIGAIL. Betty? [She hurries to BETTY, who is now sitting up and screaming. PROCTOR goes to BETTY as ABIGAIL is trying to pull her hands down, calling "Betty!"]

PROCTOR. [Growing unnerved.] What's she doing? Girl, what ails you? Stop that wailing!

[The singing has stopped in the midst of this, and now PARRIS rushes in.]

PARRIS. What happened? What are you doing to her? Betty! [He rushes to the bed, crying, "Betty, Betty!" MRS. PUTNAM enters, feverish with curiosity, and with her THOMAS PUTNAM and MERCY LEWIS. PARRIS, at the bed, keeps lightly slapping BETTY'S face, while she moans and tries to get up.]

ABIGAIL. She heard you singin' and suddenly she's up and screamin'.

MRS. PUTNAM. The psalm! The psalm! She cannot bear to hear the Lord's name!

---

[22] A covenant is an agreement or promise. Among the Puritans, a covenanted person had made a commitment to the church and had signed an agreement testifying to his or her faith.

1 Draw Conclusions About Characters In your opinion, does Proctor show strength or weakness in this denial?

Dialogue In your opinion, is Abigail sincere in this speech? Explain. 2

Vocabulary

pretense (prē′ tens) n. a false show or appearance, especially for the purpose of deceiving; falseness

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: Students may suggest that Proctor regrets his mistake and takes a strong stand to preserve his marriage.

Literary Element 2

Dialogue Answer: Many students will recognize the sincere passion in this speech. A girl such as Abigail would normally conceal her emotions and her vulnerability.

ADVANCED Direct students' attention to the offstage singing of an Old Testament psalm occurring behind the dialogue. Ask: How does the singing of the psalm deepen the scene's dramatic effect? (It creates irony between the secular character of the dialogue and the religious nature of the psalm.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Unfamiliar words may be less intimidating if students substitute synonyms. Encourage students to use a dictionary or thesaurus to find synonyms for the following words: wintry (joyless, depressed), unnerved (weakened, discouraged), and wailing (howling, moaning).

Intermediate Have a student read aloud Proctor's speech beginning "Abby I may think of you . . . ." Be sure that students understand that when he says, "We never touched," he does not mean this literally. Ask students to explain what he really means. (He is trying to tell her on a deep level that they never really connected, and he wants her to believe and act this way.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: The Putnams seem determined to prove that witchcraft is the cause of the girls' strange behavior. Rebecca believes there is a natural explanation to be found in the psychology of teenage girls.

Reading Strategy 2

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: Proctor listens and defers to Rebecca because he respects her experience and rational outlook. Proctor is also skeptical about witchcraft.

PARRIS. No, God forbid. Mercy, run to the doctor! Tell him what's happened here! [MERCY LEWIS rushes out.]

MRS. PUTNAM. Mark it for a sign, mark it!

[REBECCA NURSE, seventy-two, enters. She is white-haired, leaning upon her walking-stick.]

PUTNAM. [Pointing at the whimpering BETTY.] That is a notorious sign of witchcraft afoot, Goody Nurse, a prodigious[23] sign!

MRS. PUTNAM. My mother told me that! When they cannot bear to hear the name of—

PARRIS. [Trembling.] Rebecca, Rebecca, go to her, we're lost. She suddenly cannot bear to hear the Lord's—[GILES COREY, eighty-three, enters. He is knotted with muscle, canny,[24] inquisitive, and still powerful.]

REBECCA. There is hard sickness here, Giles Corey, so please to keep the quiet.

GILES. I've not said a word. No one here can testify I've said a word. Is she going to fly again? I hear she flies.

PUTNAM. Man, be quiet now!

[Everything is quiet. REBECCA walks across the room to the bed. Gentleness exudes[25] from her. BETTY is quietly whimpering, eyes shut. REBECCA simply stands over the child, who gradually quiets.]

MRS. PUTNAM. [Astonished.] What have you done?

[REBECCA, in thought, now leaves the bedside and sits.]

PARRIS. [Wondrous and relieved.] What do you make of it, Rebecca?

PUTNAM. [Eagerly.] Goody Nurse, will you go to my Ruth and see if you can wake her?

REBECCA. [Sitting.] I think she'll wake in time. Pray calm yourselves. I have eleven children, and I am twenty-six times a grandma, and I have seen them all through their silly seasons, and when it come on them they will run the Devil bowlegged keeping up with their mischief. I think she'll wake when she tires of it. A child's spirit is like a child, you can never catch it by running after it; you must stand still, and, for love, it will soon itself come back.

PROCTOR. Aye, that's the truth of it, Rebecca.

MRS. PUTNAM. This is no silly season, Rebecca. My Ruth is bewildered, Rebecca; she cannot eat.

REBECCA. Perhaps she is not hungered yet. [To PARRIS.] I hope you are not decided to go in search of loose spirits, Mr. Parris. I've heard promise of that outside.

PARRIS. A wide opinion's running in the parish that the Devil may be among us, and I would satisfy them that they are wrong.

PROCTOR. Then let you come out and call them wrong. Did you consult the wardens[26] before you called this minister to look for devils?

PARRIS. He is not coming to look for devils!

PROCTOR. Then what's he coming for?

PUTNAM. There be children dyin' in the village, Mister!

PROCTOR. I seen none dyin'. This society will not be a bag to swing around your head, Mr. Putnam. [To PARRIS.] Did you call a meeting before you—?

PUTNAM. I am sick of meetings; cannot the man turn his head without he have a meeting?

PROCTOR. He may turn his head, but not to Hell!

REBECCA. Pray, John, be calm. [Pause. He defers to her.] Mr. Parris, I think you'd best send Reverend Hale back as soon as he come. This will set us all to arguin' again in the society, and we thought to have peace this year. I think we ought rely on the doctor now, and good prayer.

---

[23] Prodigious means "amazing."

[24] Canny means "sharp, clever, and careful in one's dealings with others."

[25] Exudes means "gives forth."

[26] The church wardens were members who managed the congregation's business affairs.

Draw Conclusions About Characters How do the Putnams and Rebecca disagree on the subject of witchcraft? 1

Draw Conclusions About Characters Why does Proctor listen to Rebecca with respect? 2

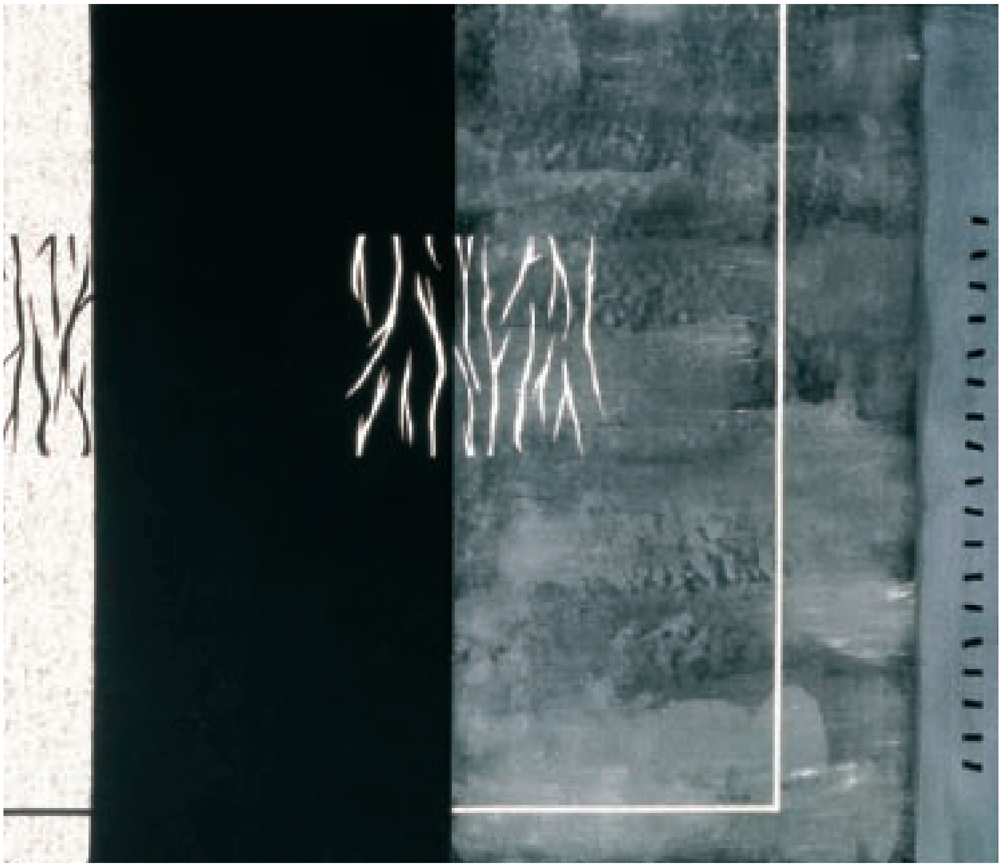
Writing Practice

Original Scene Consider having students write an original scene describing Abigail's dismissal from the Proctor farm seven months earlier. Suggest they include a conversation between John and Elizabeth prior to the confrontation between Abigail and Elizabeth. Remind students that the dialogue up to this point in Act One offers many hints and clues for the content of such a scene.

Have students use the correct format for dramatic dialogue, with the name of the speaker followed by a colon and then the speaker's words. Stage directions should be placed in brackets. When scenes are completed, students may work in groups to present them to the class.



Window View—Scapeology #3, 1995. Nanette Carter. Oil on canvas, 40³⁄₄ x 45¹⁄₂ in.

View the Art Nanette Carter often uses striking lines and contrasting panels in her work. What contrasts and divisions do you see in this painting? How might they reflect the contrasts and divisions among the people gathered in Betty's room? ★

MRS. PUTNAM. Rebecca, the doctor's baffled!

REBECCA. If so he is, then let us go to God for the cause of it. There is prodigious danger in the seeking of loose spirits. I fear it, I fear it. Let us rather blame ourselves and—

PUTNAM. How may we blame ourselves? I am one of nine sons; the Putnam seed have peopled this province. And yet I have but one child left of eight—and now she shrivels!

REBECCA. I cannot fathom that.

MRS. PUTNAM. [With a growing edge of sarcasm.] But I must! You think it God's work you should never lose a child, nor grandchild either, and I bury all but one? There are wheels within wheels in this village, and fires within fires![27]

3 The United States and the World What danger might Rebecca be referring to? Why is it safer to "blame ourselves"?

---

[27] The expression wheels within . . . fires! means "things are not so simple or innocent as they seem."

Teach

Big Idea 3

The United States and the World Answer: Rebecca understands that the Puritan obsession with witches may result in false accusations and unjust executions. It is more logical to blame human nature than to seek supernatural explanations.

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may note the contrast of light and dark and broken lines. They may suggest that these contrasts are seen in the philosophies of the characters in Betty's room.

Nanette Carter is an African American artist whose surrealistic paintings reflect strong emotions about the human experience.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Established In order to draw conclusions about characters, some students may benefit from a graphic organizer different from the one on the Before You Read page. Have students work in small groups to create a four-column chart with columns labeled Words, Actions, Motives, Conclusions. Have them focus on a single character and list details and information about the character in the first three columns. Then have them discuss what the details tell about the character and write their conclusions in the fourth column.

You may have different groups work on different characters and then report their conclusions to the class.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Irony Ask: What is the irony in Parris's speech about children? (Parris sees no reason to instruct children, yet it was the young girls who were trying to commune with the devil. In an effort to conceal their behavior, they set in motion events that will wreak havoc on Salem.)

Reading Strategy 2

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: We learn that Reverend Parris dwells on sin and damnation. He rarely mentions God in his sermons.

Cultural History ☆

Reverend Parris The real Reverend Parris, in fact, did not graduate from Harvard. A poor student, he quit school before earning a degree. He inherited a small plantation in Barbados. When it failed, he moved to New England, where he began another unsuccessful business. After these failures, he became a minister in Salem. From the start, he quarreled over his salary.

PUTNAM. [To PARRIS.] When Reverend Hale comes, you will proceed to look for signs of witchcraft here.

PROCTOR. [To PUTNAM.] You cannot command Mr. Parris. We vote by name in this society, not by acreage.

PUTNAM. I never heard you worried so on this society, Mr. Proctor. I do not think I saw you at Sabbath meeting since snow flew.

PROCTOR. I have trouble enough without I come five mile to hear him preach only hellfire and bloody damnation. Take it to heart, Mr. Parris. There are many others who stay away from church these days because you hardly ever mention God any more.

PARRIS. [Now aroused.] Why, that's a drastic charge!

REBECCA. It's somewhat true; there are many that quail[28] to bring their children—

1 PARRIS. I do not preach for children, Rebecca. It is not the children who are unmindful of their obligations toward this ministry.

REBECCA. Are there really those unmindful?

PARRIS. I should say the better half of Salem village—

PUTNAM. And more than that!

PARRIS. Where is my wood? My contract provides I be supplied with all my firewood. I am waiting since November for a stick, and even in November I had to show my frostbitten hands like some London beggar!

GILES. You are allowed six pound a year to buy your wood, Mr. Parris.

PARRIS. I regard that six pound as part of my salary. I am paid little enough without I spend six pound on firewood.

PROCTOR. Sixty, plus six for firewood—

PARRIS. The salary is sixty-six pound, Mr. Proctor! I am not some preaching farmer with a book under my arm; I am a graduate of Harvard College. ☆

GILES. Aye, and well instructed in arithmetic!

PARRIS. Mr. Corey, you will look far for a man of my kind at sixty pound a year! I am not used to this poverty; I left a thrifty business in the Barbados to serve the Lord. I do not fathom it, why am I persecuted here? I cannot offer one proposition but there be a howling riot of argument. I have often wondered if the Devil be in it somewhere; I cannot understand you people otherwise.

PROCTOR. Mr. Parris, you are the first minister ever did demand the deed to this house—

PARRIS. Man! Don't a minister deserve a house to live in?

PROCTOR. To live in, yes. But to ask ownership is like you shall own the meeting house itself; the last meeting I were at you spoke so long on deeds and mortgages I thought it were an auction.

PARRIS. I want a mark of confidence, is all! I am your third preacher in seven years. I do not wish to be put out like the cat whenever some majority feels the whim. You people seem not to comprehend that a minister is the Lord's man in the parish; a minister is not to be so lightly crossed and contradicted—

PUTNAM. Aye!

PARRIS. There is either obedience or the church will burn like Hell is burning!

PROCTOR. Can you speak one minute without we land in Hell again? I am sick of Hell!

PARRIS. It is not for you to say what is good for you to hear!

PROCTOR. I may speak my heart, I think!

PARRIS. [In a fury.] What, are we Quakers?[29] We are not Quakers here yet, Mr. Proctor. And you may tell that to your followers!

PROCTOR. My followers!

2 Draw Conclusions About Characters What do we learn about Reverend Parris's priorities as a minister from Proctor's accusation?

---

[28] To quail is to hesitate, to lose heart, or to retreat in fear.

[29] Quakers is the familiar name for members of the Society of Friends. They have no definite creed and are guided by their doctrine of "inner light."

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Active and Passive Voice Writers usually prefer the active voice because it is more forceful. The passive voice emphasizes the recipient of an action. Have students review the characters' arguments and note that they usually speak in the active voice. Ask students to write short speeches in which Proctor and Corey reply to Putnam's threats, using the active voice. Then have them rewrite the replies in the passive voice. Compare the two versions. Evaluate the persuasiveness of each version.

PARRIS. [Now he's out with it.] There is a party in this church. I am not blind; there is a faction and a party.

PROCTOR. Against you?

PUTNAM. Against him and all authority!

PROCTOR. Why, then I must find it and join it.

[There is shock among the others.]

REBECCA. He does not mean that.

PUTNAM. He confessed it now!

PROCTOR. I mean it solemnly, Rebecca; I like not the smell of this "authority."

REBECCA. No, you cannot break charity[30] with your minister. You are another kind, John. Clasp his hand, make your peace.

PROCTOR. I have a crop to sow and lumber to drag home. [He goes angrily to the door and turns to COREY with a smile.] What say you, Giles, let's find the party. He says there's a party.

GILES. I've changed my opinion of this man, John. Mr. Parris, I beg your pardon. I never thought you had so much iron in you.

PARRIS. [Surprised.] Why, thank you, Giles!

GILES. It suggests to the mind what the trouble be among us all these years. [To all.] Think on it. Wherefore is everybody suing everybody else? Think on it now, it's a deep thing, and dark as a pit. I have been six time in court this year—

PROCTOR. [Familiarly, with warmth, although he knows he is approaching the edge of GILES' tolerance with this.] Is it the Devil's fault that a man cannot say you good morning without you clap him for defamation?[31] You're old, Giles, and you're not hearin' so well as you did.

GILES. [He cannot be crossed.] John Proctor, I have only last month collected four pound damages for you publicly sayin' I burned the roof off your house, and I—

PROCTOR. [Laughing.] I never said no such thing, but I've paid you for it, so I hope I can call you deaf without charge. Now come along, Giles, and help me drag my lumber home.

PUTNAM. A moment, Mr. Proctor. What lumber is that you're draggin', if I may ask you?

PROCTOR. My lumber. From out my forest by the riverside.

PUTNAM. Why, we are surely gone wild this year. What anarchy[32] is this? That tract is in my bounds, it's in my bounds, Mr. Proctor.

PROCTOR. In your bounds! [Indicating REBECCA.] I bought that tract from Goody Nurse's husband five months ago.

PUTNAM. He had no right to sell it. It stands clear in my grandfather's will that all the land between the river and—

PROCTOR. Your grandfather had a habit of willing land that never belonged to him, if I may say it plain.

GILES. That's God's truth; he nearly willed away my north pasture but he knew I'd break his fingers before he'd set his name to it. Let's get your lumber home, John. I feel a sudden will to work coming on.

PUTNAM. You load one oak of mine and you'll fight to drag it home!

GILES. Aye, and we'll win too, Putnam—this fool and I. Come on! [He turns to PROCTOR and starts out.]

PUTNAM. I'll have my men on you, Corey! I'll clap a writ[33] on you!

---

[30] For the Puritans, charity was Christian love, including mercy, forgiveness, kindness, and trust.

[31] An attack on one's good name or reputation is an act of defamation (def′ ə mā′ shən).

[32] Anarchy is lawless confusion and political disorder due to the absence of governmental authority. Here, Putnam uses the word to mean "lawlessness."

[33] A writ is a judge's order.

3 Dialogue How does Miller use dialogue on this page to advance the plot?

4 The United States and the World What "authority" might a U.S. audience in 1953 have thought of on hearing this line?

5 Dialogue How does Miller engage the audience's sympathy for Proctor in this line of dialogue?

Teach

Literary Element 3

Dialogue Answer: From the dialogue on this page, the reader learns of bitter animosities and factions within the community, which may motivate some people to make accusations of witchcraft.

Big Idea 4

The United States and the World Answer: Most audiences would have connected this authority with Senator McCarthy or the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Literary Element 5

Dialogue Answer: While Parris and the Putnams are intensely serious, Proctor is able to find humor in this situation, even when angered.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Research The post-World War II fear of Communism created the climate that allowed politicians like Senator McCarthy to launch their investigations. Have students use Internet or library resources to locate newspaper and magazine accounts of one of the anti-Communist inquiries after World War II. Students might research a prominent figure who was blacklisted. Students should consider more than one perspective and examine the reliability of sources. Ask students to explain why different sources portray the same event in different lights.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Predict Remind students that the appearance of a new character may indicate a shift in focus. Ask them to predict what the arrival of Hale means. (Students should recognize from the previous references to Hale that he is considered an expert on witchcraft. His arrival signals a shift from arguments over practical matters to the subject of witchcraft.)

Writer's Technique ☆

Emphasis on Key Ideas The concept of authority—religious, political, and moral—is a key idea in the play. Notice that Hale's description of his books "weighted with authority" provides an ironic echo of the verbal dispute between Proctor and Putnam on these pages regarding church authority.

The Crucible, 1996.

1 [Enter REVEREND JOHN HALE of Beverly. He appears loaded down with half a dozen heavy books.]

HALE. Pray you, someone take these!

PARRIS. [Delighted.] Mr. Hale! Oh! it's good to see you again! [Taking some books.] My, they're heavy!

HALE. [Setting down his books.] They must be;
☆ they are weighted with authority.

PARRIS. [A little scared.] Well, you do come prepared!

HALE. We shall need hard study if it comes to tracking down the Old Boy.[34] [Noticing REBECCA.] You cannot be Rebecca Nurse?

REBECCA. I am, sir. Do you know me?

HALE. It's strange how I knew you, but I suppose you look as such a good soul should. We have all heard of your great charities in Beverly.

PARRIS. Do you know this gentleman? Mr. Thomas Putnam. And his good wife Ann.

HALE. Putnam! I had not expected such distinguished company, sir.

PUTNAM. [Pleased.] It does not seem to help us today, Mr. Hale. We look to you to come to our house and save our child.

HALE. Your child ails too?

---

[34] Old Boy is another name for Satan.

Vocabulary Practice

Latin Roots Many English words are formed by adding prefixes and/or suffixes to Latin roots. Note that the words conjure and instruct are formed in this way. The Latin root jure means "to swear." Conjure literally means "to swear together." The Latin root struct means "to build." Instruct literally means "to build in (another)."

Knowing the meanings of the following words may help students discuss this play:

- abjure: to renounce upon oath
- perjure: to lie under oath
- obstruct: to hinder or block

MRS. PUTNAM. Her soul, her soul seems flown away. She sleeps and yet she walks . . .

PUTNAM. She cannot eat.

HALE. Cannot eat! [Thinks on it. Then, to PROCTOR and GILES COREY.] Do you men have afflicted children?

PARRIS. No, no, these are farmers. John Proctor—

GILES COREY. He don't believe in witches.

PROCTOR. [To HALE.] I never spoke on witches one way or the other. Will you come, Giles?

GILES. No—no, John, I think not. I have some few queer questions of my own to ask this fellow.

PROCTOR. I've heard you to be a sensible man, Mr. Hale. I hope you'll leave some of it in Salem.

[PROCTOR goes. HALE stands embarrassed for an instant.]

PARRIS. [Quickly.] Will you look at my daughter, sir? [Leads HALE to the bed.] She has tried to leap out the window; we discovered her this morning on the highroad, waving her arms as though she'd fly.

HALE. [Narrowing his eyes.] Tries to fly.

PUTNAM. She cannot bear to hear the Lord's name, Mr. Hale; that's a sure sign of witchcraft afloat.

2 HALE. [Holding up his hands.] No, no. Now let me instruct you. We cannot look to superstition in this. The Devil is precise; the marks of his presence are definite as stone, and I must tell you all that I shall not proceed unless you are prepared to believe me if I should find no bruise of hell upon her.

PARRIS. It is agreed, sir—it is agreed—we will abide by your judgment.

HALE. Good then. [He goes to the bed, looks down at BETTY. To PARRIS.] Now, sir, what were your first warning of this strangeness?

PARRIS. Why, sir—I discovered her—[Indicating ABIGAIL.]—and my niece and ten or twelve of the other girls, dancing in the forest last night.

HALE. [Surprised.] You permit dancing?

PARRIS. No, no, it were secret—

MRS. PUTNAM. [Unable to wait.] Mr. Parris's slave has knowledge of conjurin', sir.

PARRIS. [To MRS. PUTNAM.] We cannot be sure of that, Goody Ann—

MRS. PUTNAM. [Frightened, very softly.] I know it, sir. I sent my child—she should learn from Tituba who murdered her sisters.

REBECCA. [Horrified.] Goody Ann! You sent a child to conjure up the dead?

MRS. PUTNAM. Let God blame me, not you, not you, Rebecca! I'll not have you judging me any more! [To HALE.] Is it a natural work to lose seven children before they live a day?

PARRIS. Sssh!

[REBECCA, with great pain, turns her face away. There is a pause.]

HALE. Seven dead in childbirth.

MRS. PUTNAM. [Softly.] Aye. [Her voice breaks; she looks up at him. Silence. HALE is impressed. PARRIS looks to him. He goes to his books, opens one, turns pages, then reads. All wait, avidly.][35]

PARRIS. [Hushed.] What book is that?

MRS. PUTNAM. What's there, sir?

5 HALE. [With a tasty love of intellectual pursuit.] Here is all the invisible world, caught, defined, and calculated. In these books the Devil stands stripped of all his brute disguises. Here are all your familiar spirits—your incubi and succubi;[36] your witches that go by land, by air, and by sea; your wizards of the night and of the day. Have no fear now—we shall find him out if he has come among us, and I mean to crush him utterly if he has shown his face! [He starts for the bed.]

REBECCA. Will it hurt the child, sir?

3 Draw Conclusions About Characters What do we learn about Proctor's character from this remark?

4 The United States and the World How might Miller's 1950s audiences have connected Reverend Hale's use of the word superstition to contemporary events?

---

[35] Avidly means "with intense interest."

[36] Incubi (ing′ kyə bī′) and succubi (suk′ yə bī′) are evil spirits or demons.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate English learners may have trouble following the dialogue, which is both dense and oddly constructed in these sections. Hale's long speeches may also cause difficulty. Ask students to work with a partner to orally paraphrase the dialogue and Hale's speeches.

Teach

Literary Element 2

Irony Discuss with students the irony in Hale's remarks. (Hale says he cannot rely on superstition in matters such as witchcraft. But to modern audiences, his belief in witchcraft may also be considered a superstition.)

APPROACHING Ask: What are adjectives that could reasonably describe Hale's character? (orderly, sensible, confident, courteous, scholarly, temperate)

Reading Strategy 3

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: Proctor is cautious. He does not wish to be drawn into an argument that could harm him. He may be uncomfortable challenging the authority of Hale.

Big Idea 4

The United States and the World Answer: Miller's audiences might have believed that the threat of a Communist conspiracy within the United States, like witchcraft, was a mere superstition.

Reading Strategy 5

Compare and Contrast Characters For the passage that starts at the bottom of the page, ask students to compare and contrast Rebecca's character with those of Parris and Hale. They may use a three-column chart to record their findings. (Rebecca's concern is for the child. Parris thinks of himself. Hale, though well-intentioned, is egotistical. He has no doubts about his actions and abilities. Rebecca is skeptical about both.)

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: Giles is suspicious of his wife's reading because he believes that people can get evil or sinful ideas from certain books. Similarly, Senator McCarthy was suspicious of American intellectuals, whom he suspected of being influenced by subversive ideas. Both of these suspicions threaten freedom of thought and belief.

Reading Strategy 2

Predict Have students pause after Hale asks his first question of Abigail. Invite them to predict how Abigail will respond to his questioning. (Students may say that Abigail will continue to lie or blame others so she doesn't get in trouble.)

HALE. I cannot tell. If she is truly in the Devil's grip we may have to rip and tear to get her free.

REBECCA. I think I'll go, then. I am too old for this. [She rises.]

PARRIS. [Striving for conviction.] Why, Rebecca, we may open up the boil of all our troubles today!

REBECCA. Let us hope for that. I go to God for you, sir.

PARRIS. [With trepidation—and resentment.] I hope you do not mean we go to Satan here! [Slight pause.]

REBECCA. I wish I knew. [She goes out; they feel resentful of her note of moral superiority.]

PUTNAM. [Abruptly.] Come, Mr. Hale, let's get on. Sit you here.

GILES. Mr. Hale, I have always wanted to ask a learned man—what signifies the readin' of strange books?

HALE. What books?

GILES. I cannot tell; she hides them.

HALE. Who does this?

GILES. Martha, my wife. I have waked at night many a time and found her in a corner, readin' of a book. Now what do you make of that?

HALE. Why, that's not necessarily—

GILES. It discomfits[37] me! Last night—mark this—I tried and tried and could not say my prayers. And then she close her book and walks out of the house, and suddenly—mark this—I could pray again!

HALE. Ah! The stoppage of prayer—that is strange. I'll speak further on that with you.

GILES. I'm not sayin' she's touched the Devil, now, but I'd admire to know what books she reads and why she hides them. She'll not answer me, y' see.

HALE. Aye, we'll discuss it. [To all.] Now mark me, if the Devil is in her you will witness some frightful wonders in this room, so please to keep your wits about you. Mr. Putnam, stand close in case she flies. Now, Betty, dear, will you sit up? [PUTNAM comes in closer, ready-handed. HALE sits BETTY up, but she hangs limp in his hands.] Hmmm. [He observes her carefully. The others watch breathlessly.] Can you hear me? I am John Hale, minister of Beverly. I have come to help you, dear. Do you remember my two little girls in Beverly? [She does not stir in his hands.]

PARRIS. [In fright.] How can it be the Devil? Why would he choose my house to strike? We have all manner of licentious[38] people in the village!

HALE. What victory would the Devil have to win a soul already bad? It is the best the Devil wants, and who is better than the minister?

GILES. That's deep, Mr. Parris, deep, deep!

PARRIS. [With resolution now.] Betty! Answer Mr. Hale! Betty!

HALE. Does someone afflict you, child? It need not be a woman, mind you, or a man. Perhaps some bird invisible to others comes to you—perhaps a pig, a mouse, or any beast at all. Is there some figure bids you fly? [The child remains limp in his hands. In silence he lays her back on the pillow. Now, holding out his hands toward her, he intones.] In nomine Domini Sabaoth sui filiique ite ad infernos.[39] [She does not stir. He turns to ABIGAIL, his eyes narrowing.] Abigail, what sort of dancing were you doing with her in the forest?

ABIGAIL. Why—common dancing is all.

PARRIS. I think I ought to say that I—I saw a kettle in the grass where they were dancing.

ABIGAIL. That were only soup.

HALE. What sort of soup were in this kettle, Abigail?

---

[37] Discomfits means "confuses and frustrates."

[38] Licentious people disregard commonly accepted standards of right and wrong or good and evil.

[39] [In nomine . . . infernos.] "In the name of the God of the Heavenly Hosts and of His Son, go to hell." Hale is performing an exorcism, a ritual intended to drive out evil spirits.

1 The United States and the World What is Giles suspicious of? How are his suspicions similar to those of Senator McCarthy during the 1950s?

Reading Practice

Irony Remind students that irony is the contrast or discrepancy between expectation and reality. Ask: What is ironic in the exchange between Parris and Hale on this page? (Parris asks why the devil would choose his house when there are so many less worthy people in Salem. He does not recognize his own character failings. Hale's question assumes that the minister must be the best person in the village.)

ABIGAIL. Why, it were beans—and lentils, I think, and—

HALE. Mr. Parris, you did not notice, did you, any living thing in the kettle? A mouse, perhaps, a spider, a frog—?

PARRIS. [Fearfully.] I—do believe there were some movement—in the soup.

ABIGAIL. That jumped in, we never put it in!

HALE. [Quickly.] What jumped in?

ABIGAIL. Why, a very little frog jumped—

PARRIS. A frog, Abby!

2 HALE. [Grasping ABIGAIL.] Abigail, it may be your cousin is dying. Did you call the Devil last night?

ABIGAIL. I never called him! Tituba, Tituba . . .

PARRIS. [Blanched.] She called the Devil?

HALE. I should like to speak with Tituba.

PARRIS. Goody Ann, will you bring her up? [MRS. PUTNAM exits.]

HALE. How did she call him?

ABIGAIL. I know not—she spoke Barbados.

HALE. Did you feel any strangeness when she called him? A sudden cold wind, perhaps? A trembling below the ground?

ABIGAIL. I didn't see no Devil! [Shaking BETTY.] Betty, wake up. Betty! Betty!

HALE. You cannot evade me, Abigail. Did your cousin drink any of the brew in that kettle?

ABIGAIL. She never drank it!

HALE. Did you drink it?

ABIGAIL. No, sir!

HALE. Did Tituba ask you to drink it?

ABIGAIL. She tried, but I refused.

HALE. Why are you concealing? Have you sold yourself to Lucifer?

ABIGAIL. I never sold myself! I'm a good girl! I'm a proper girl!

[MRS. PUTNAM enters with TITUBA, and instantly ABIGAIL points at TITUBA.]

ABIGAIL. She made me do it! She made Betty do it!

TITUBA. [Shocked and angry.] Abby!

ABIGAIL. She makes me drink blood!

PARRIS. Blood!!

MRS. PUTNAM. My baby's blood?

☆ TITUBA. No, no, chicken blood. I give she chicken blood!

HALE. Woman, have you enlisted these children for the Devil?

TITUBA. No, no, sir, I don't truck[40] with no Devil!

HALE. Why can she not wake? Are you silencing this child?

TITUBA. I love me Betty!

HALE. You have sent your spirit out upon this child, have you not? Are you gathering souls for the Devil?

ABIGAIL. She sends her spirit on me in church; she makes me laugh at prayer!

PARRIS. She have often laughed at prayer!

ABIGAIL. She comes to me every night to go and drink blood!

TITUBA. You beg me to conjure! She beg me make charm—

ABIGAIL. Don't lie! [To HALE.] She comes to me while I sleep; she's always making me dream corruptions!

---

[40] Truck is another way of saying "to have dealings."

3 Draw Conclusions About Characters What aspect of her character does Abigail confirm with these remarks?

Vocabulary

evade (i vād′) v. to escape or avoid, as by cleverness

Dialogue How does Miller's use of dialogue ensure that Tituba is so quickly on the defensive? 4

Dialogue What is Tituba accusing Abigail of in this dialogue? Do you think she will be believed? Explain. 5

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: Students should recognize Abigail's instant tendency to blame others.

Writer's Technique ☆

Line Length Point out to students how the length of the characters' dialogue affects pace. The shorter responses speed up the dialogue and add a sense of urgency.

Literary Element 4

Dialogue Answer: As soon as Tituba enters, she is subjected to a series of intimidating accusations from four different people.

Literary Element 5

Dialogue Answer: Tituba is accusing Abigail of asking her to devise a charm. Tituba will probably not be believed. Although Abigail has shown herself to be a habitual liar, her word will prevail over that of Tituba, who is a slave.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Have students work together to create cause and effect chains that trace the development of Act One from Parris's first questions to Abigail through the accusations of witchcraft at the end of the act. To help students identify causes and effects, tell them to ask first "What happened?" to determine the effect; next, ask "Why did it happen?" to determine the cause. Demonstrate with this example: Ask: What has happened at the beginning of this act? (Betty has fallen into a trance.) (effect) Why did this happen? (She was frightened while dancing in the forest with Tituba and other girls.) (cause)

Students should continue in this manner, listing each cause and drawing an arrow pointing to its effect.

Teach

View the Art ★

Answer: Like the events of the night in the forest, what is actually revealed is at once intense and difficult to see clearly or interpret accurately.

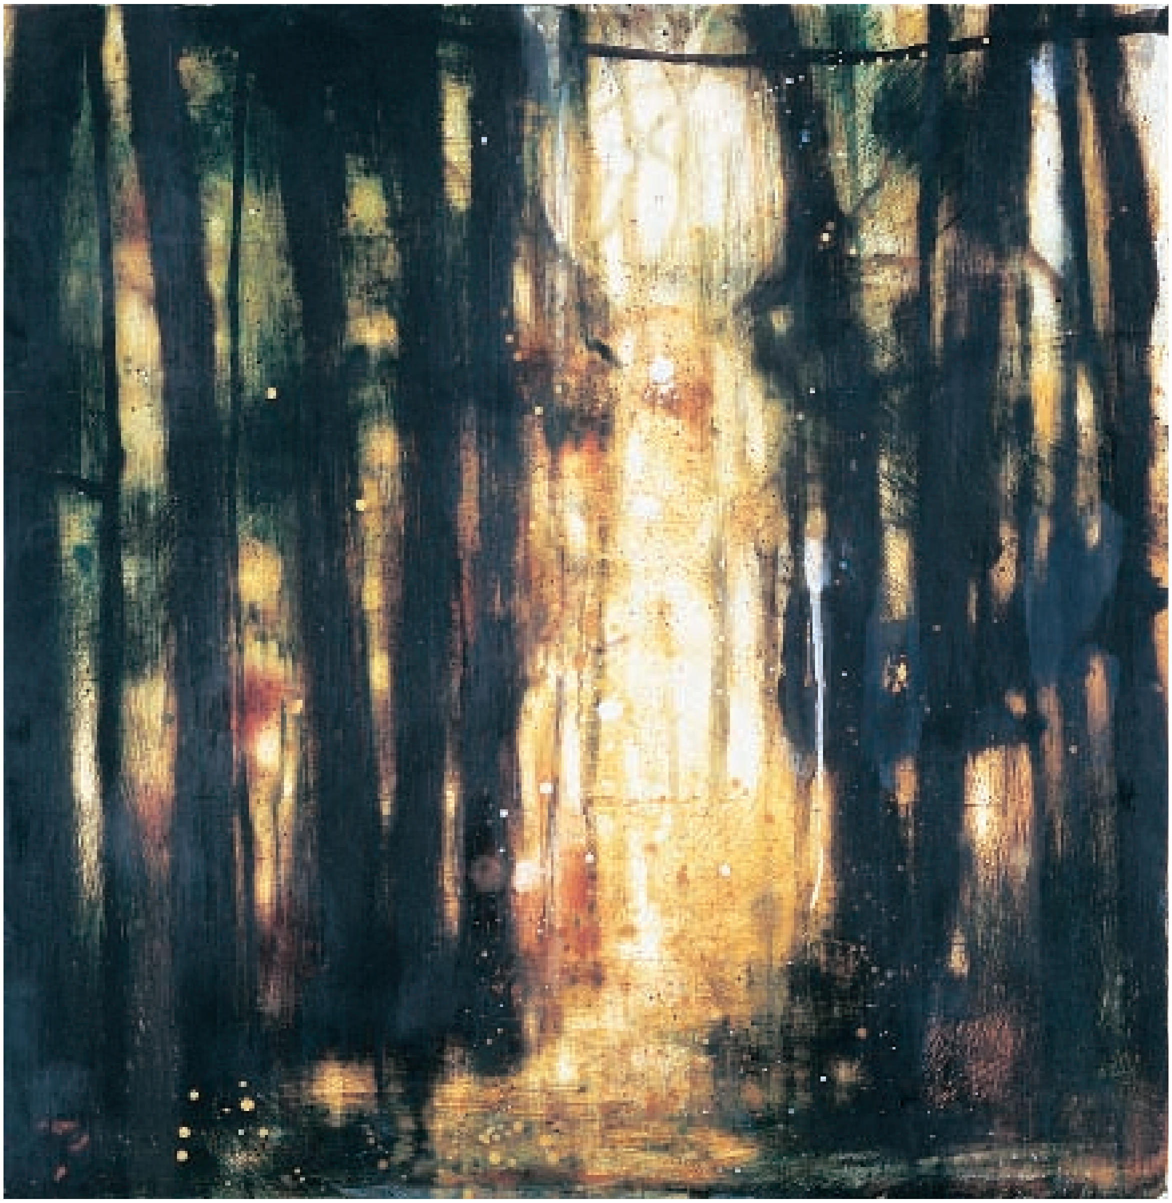
Katherine Bowling (1955–), a National Endowment of the Arts grant recipient, takes her inspiration from landscapes. As with Omen, her landscapes are devoid of people yet full of mood.

Cultural History ☆

Barbados Explain that the references in Act One to Barbados, Tituba's native island in the Caribbean, are intended to evoke a mysterious, exotic atmosphere. Discovered and named by the Portuguese, Barbados was colonized in the early 1600s by the British, who introduced a sugar economy that thrived in the tropical climate.



Omen, 1993. Katherine Bowling. Oil and spackle on wood, 24 x 24 in. The SBC Collection of Twentieth Century American Art. Courtesy SBC Communications.

View the Art Best known for her landscapes, Katherine Bowling bases many of her paintings on photographs taken in upstate New York. What connections might you make between this painting and the description of the night the girls went to the forest? ★

Speaking and Listening Practice

Readers' Theater Readers' Theater combines oral reading and dramatic presentation. Readers assume the role of characters from the story and perform passages in character using only their voices. Assign roles to student volunteers, and have them research dialect and pronunciation by watching film versions and listening to audio productions of the scene. Have students read the scene dramatically.

TITUBA. Why you say that, Abby?

ABIGAIL. Sometimes I wake and find myself standing in the open doorway and not a stitch on my body! I always hear her laughing in my sleep. I hear her singing her Barbados songs and tempting me with—

TITUBA. Mister Reverend, I never—

HALE. [Resolved now.] Tituba, I want you to wake this child.

TITUBA. I have no power on this child, sir.

HALE. You most certainly do, and you will free her from it now! When did you compact with[41] the Devil?

TITUBA. I don't compact with no Devil!

PARRIS. You will confess yourself or I will take you out and whip you to your death, Tituba!

PUTNAM. This woman must be hanged! She must be taken and hanged!

TITUBA. [Terrified, falls to her knees.] No, no, don't hang Tituba! I tell him I don't desire to work for him, sir.

PARRIS. The Devil?

HALE. Then you saw him! [TITUBA weeps.] Now Tituba, I know that when we bind ourselves to Hell it is very hard to break with it. We are going to help you tear yourself free—

TITUBA. [Frightened by the coming process.] Mister Reverend, I do believe somebody else be witchin' these children.

HALE. Who?

TITUBA. I don't know, sir, but the Devil got him numerous witches.

HALE. Does he! [It is a clue.] Tituba, look into my eyes. Come, look into me. [She raises her eyes to his fearfully.] You would be a good Christian woman, would you not, Tituba?

TITUBA. Aye, sir, a good Christian woman.

HALE. And you love these little children?

TITUBA. Oh, yes, sir, I don't desire to hurt little children.

HALE. And you love God, Tituba?

TITUBA. I love God with all my bein'.

HALE. Now, in God's holy name—

TITUBA. Bless Him. Bless Him. [She is rocking on her knees, sobbing in terror.] ☆

HALE. And to His glory—

TITUBA. Eternal glory. Bless Him—bless God . . .

HALE. Open yourself, Tituba—open yourself and let God's holy light shine on you.

TITUBA. Oh, bless the Lord.

HALE. When the Devil comes to you does he ever come—with another person? [She stares up into his face.] Perhaps another person in the village? Someone you know.

PARRIS. Who came with him?

PUTNAM. Sarah Good? Did you ever see Sarah Good with him? Or Osburn?

PARRIS. Was it man or woman came with him?

TITUBA. Man or woman. Was—was woman.

PARRIS. What woman? A woman, you said. What woman?

TITUBA. It was black dark, and I—

PARRIS. You could see him, why could you not see her?

TITUBA. Well, they was always talking; they was always runnin' round and carryin' on—

PARRIS. You mean out of Salem? Salem witches?

TITUBA. I believe so, yes, sir.

---

[41] To compact with is to make an agreement or contract with.

1 The United States and the World How is the assumption that Tituba is guilty similar to assumptions made during the McCarthy "witch hunts"?

Draw Conclusions About Characters What does Putnam's eagerness to name specific people reveal about his character? 2

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: In both cases, fear induces people to suspend their powers of reasoning and to believe the unsupported allegations of unreliable witnesses.

Reading Strategy 2

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: Students might conclude from Putnam's speed at naming specific people that he is a vindictive person who seizes this chance to persecute his enemies.

Writer's Technique ☆

Pacing in Drama Miller skillfully uses sound effects, graduated pacing, and rhetorical devices such as repetition to quicken the tempo of the action and to bring the act to a suspenseful climax. The effect is similar to a crescendo in symphonic music or opera.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Work with students to clarify idioms and metaphors in the dialogue as Act One nears a climax. Point out the following expressions from this page and the next and ask students to use their knowledge of English to explain the meanings.

- "confess yourself" (admit to doing something wrong)
- "bind ourselves to Hell" (turn toward the Devil and his practices)
- "break with it" (turn away from it)
- "carryin' on" (wild behavior)
- "God's instrument" (a person used to carry out something for God)
- "cleanse our village" (remove the problem from the village)
- "turn your back on him" (turn away from the Devil and his practices)
- "the Devil is . . . preying on her" (making a victim of her)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions About Characters Say: In this speech, Hale seems confident he can quickly clear up the witchcraft problem in Salem. Ask: What does this indicate about Hale's sense of judgment? (He may be too quick to draw conclusions; he may not consider all of the facts before making up his mind.)

Big Idea 2

The United States and the World Answer: Like Hale, the HUAC bribed witnesses to implicate suspects by promising immunity and the protection of those in authority.

Reading Strategy 3

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: Some students may say that Tituba is telling her inquisitors what she thinks they want to hear in order to protect herself. Others may say that she is seeking revenge on white slave owners.

Reading Strategy 4

Draw Conclusions About Characters Answer: Students may say Abigail confesses because she calculates that she will avoid the charge of witchcraft by implicating others and asking for forgiveness.

[Now HALE takes her hand. She is surprised.]

HALE. Tituba. You must have no fear to tell us who they are, do you understand? We will protect you. The Devil can never overcome a minister. You know that, do you not?

TITUBA. [Kisses HALE*'s hand.*] Aye, sir, I do.

HALE. You have confessed yourself to witchcraft, and that speaks a wish to come to Heaven's side. And we will bless you, Tituba.

TITUBA. [Deeply relieved.] Oh, God bless you, Mr. Hale!

1 HALE. [With rising exaltation.][42] You are God's instrument put in our hands to discover the Devil's agents among us. You are selected, Tituba, you are chosen to help us cleanse our village. So speak utterly, Tituba, turn your back on him and face God—face God, Tituba, and God will protect you.

TITUBA. [Joining with him.] Oh, God, protect Tituba!

HALE. [Kindly.] Who came to you with the Devil? Two? Three? Four? How many?

[TITUBA pants, and begins rocking back and forth again, staring ahead.]

TITUBA. There was four. There was four.

PARRIS. [Pressing in on her.] Who? Who? Their names, their names!

TITUBA. [Suddenly bursting out.] Oh, how many times he bid me kill you, Mr. Parris!

PARRIS. Kill me!

TITUBA. [In a fury.] He say Mr. Parris must be kill! Mr. Parris no goodly man, Mr. Parris mean man and no gentle man, and he bid me rise out of my bed and cut your throat! [They gasp.] But I tell him, "No! I don't hate that man. I don't want kill that man." But he say, "You work for me, Tituba, and I make you free! I give you pretty dress to wear, and put you way high up in the air, and you gone fly back to Barbados!" And I say, "You lie, Devil, you lie!" And then he come one stormy night to me, and he say, "Look! I have white people belong to me." And I look—and there was Goody Good.

PARRIS. Sarah Good!

TITUBA. [Rocking and weeping.] Aye, sir, and Goody Osburn.

MRS. PUTNAM. I knew it! Goody Osburn were midwife[43] to me three times. I begged you, Thomas, did I not? I begged him not to call Osburn because I feared her. My babies always shriveled in her hands!

HALE. Take courage, you must give us all their names. How can you bear to see this child suffering? Look at her, Tituba. [He is indicating BETTY on the bed.] Look at her God-given innocence; her soul is so tender; we must protect her, Tituba; the Devil is out and preying on her like a beast upon the flesh of the pure lamb. God will bless you for your help.

[ABIGAIL rises, staring as though inspired, and cries out.]

ABIGAIL. I want to open myself! [They turn to her, startled. She is enraptured,[44] as though in a pearly light.] I want the light of God, I want the sweet love of Jesus! I danced for the Devil; I saw him; I wrote in his book; I go back to Jesus; I kiss His hand. I saw Sarah Good with the Devil! I saw Goody Osburn with the Devil! I saw Bridget Bishop with the Devil!

[As she is speaking, BETTY is rising from the bed, a fever in her eyes, and picks up the chant.]

BETTY. [Staring too.] I saw George Jacobs with the Devil! I saw Goody Howe with the Devil!

---

[42] Here, exaltation means "great enthusiasm" or "joyful ecstasy."

[43] A midwife is a woman who assists other women in childbirth.

[44] Enraptured means "filled with intense joy or delight."

2 The United States and the World How is this tactic similar to that used by the House Un-American Activities Committee?

3 Draw Conclusions About Characters What is going on in Tituba's mind that she would make up information like this?

4 Draw Conclusions About Characters Why do you think that Abigail makes this confession?

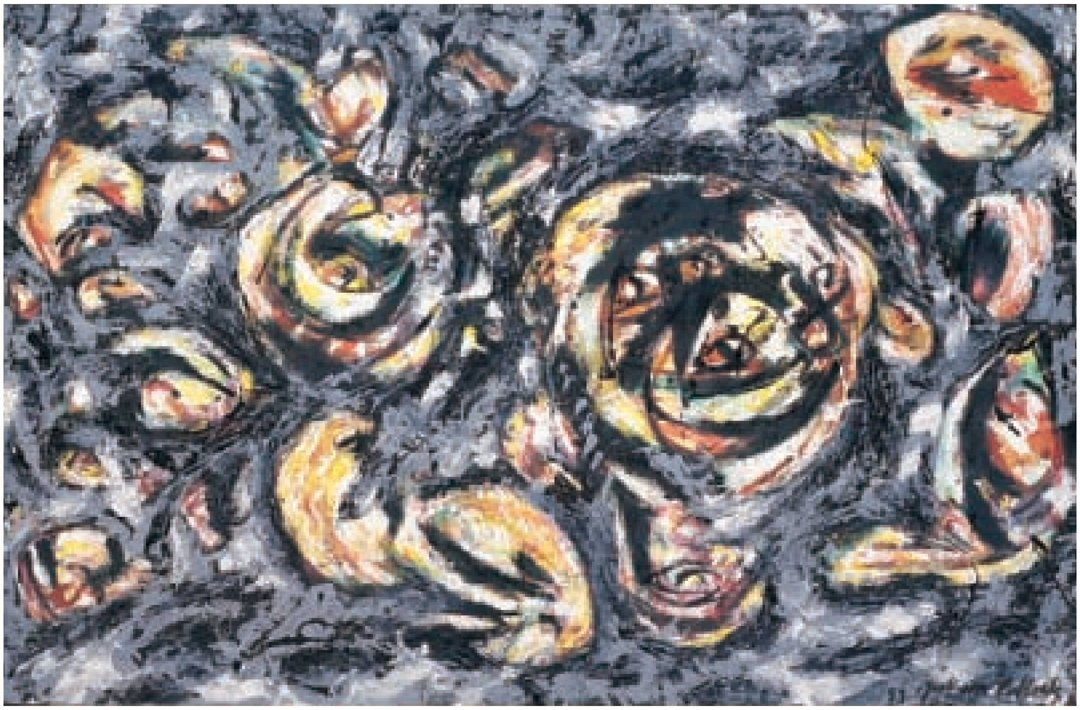
Writing Practice

Analyze Conflict Remind students that external conflict, or a struggle between a character and his or her environment, is a central element of plot. Note that although the people of Salem face an external conflict, characters may perceive the problem in different ways. Have students design a graphic organizer, such as a web, with the defining problem in the middle. Then have them write a sentence stating the problem from the perspectives of John Proctor, Abigail Williams, Reverend Parris, and Rebecca Nurse. Discuss how each character might solve the problem.



Ocean Greyness, 1953. Jackson Pollock. Oil on canvas, 4 ft. 9¾ in. x 7 ft. 6⅛ in. Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, NY.

View the Art "When you are painting out of your unconscious," Jackson Pollock is quoted as saying, "figures are bound to emerge." Look at the interplay of images and colors in this painting. What characters or events in Act One might they represent? Explain. ★

PARRIS. She speaks! [He rushes to embrace BETTY.] She speaks!

HALE. Glory to God! It is broken, they are free!

BETTY. [Calling out hysterically and with great relief.] I saw Martha Bellows with the Devil!

ABIGAIL. I saw Goody Sibber with the Devil! [It is rising to a great glee.]

PUTNAM. The marshal, I'll call the marshal!

[PARRIS is shouting a prayer of thanksgiving.]

BETTY. I saw Alice Barrow with the Devil!

[The curtain begins to fall.]

HALE. [As PUTNAM goes out.] Let the marshal bring irons!

ABIGAIL. I saw Goody Hawkins with the Devil!

BETTY. I saw Goody Bibber with the Devil!

ABIGAIL. I saw Goody Booth with the Devil!

[On their ecstatic cries.]

THE CURTAIN FALLS

Dialogue How do these concluding lines make an effective ending to Act One of the play? 5

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Remind students that dialogue in a play reveals character and conflict in addition to moving the plot forward. Ask students to summarize what the dialogue has revealed about the following characters:

- Abigail Williams
- Reverend Parris
- John Proctor

Then ask students to review this act and explain what they have learned about each character from the gestures and reactions revealed through the stage directions.

Teach

Literary Element 5

Dialogue Answer: The naming of witches is the final crescendo to an act that has been intensifying. The shrieked accusations are unleashed upon Salem, whose residents are fixed on a witch hunt.

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may say that the black suggests evil—events in the forest and the deceit of Abigail. Red is associated with fury—the emotion of villagers. Gray is a calmer color—the normal life of the village.

American artist Jackson Pollock (1912–1956) developed a unique style of action painting. He poured, dripped, or splashed paint all over his canvas. Pollock believed these techniques conveyed an artist's hidden thoughts and emotions.

To check students' understanding of the act, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 224–225.

Progress Check

Can students analyze dialogue?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 219.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) Betty's recovery (b) He fears an accusation of witchcraft.
3. (a) She says Mrs. Proctor is a cold, lying woman, and Abigail refused to be her slave. (b) Mrs. Proctor might have suspected an affair between Abigail and John.
4. (a) She denies it. She later says the devil tempted her and names others in his service. (b) To avoid the charge of witchcraft, a capital offense in Salem
5. (a) Terror, suspense, or tension (b) He reveals fears, suspicion, and hostility through dialogue.
6. (a) Both girls apparently fall into trances and call out names. Abigail's rapture is likely feigned. Betty may be ill. (b) Students should support their opinions.
7. A dangerous, largely unseen enemy and fearful people ready to take reckless action
8. Miller might have seen some of his contemporaries confessing too quickly and might have wanted to portray this kind of eagerness in his play.

Literary Element

1. Parris, Hale; Abigail, Tituba
2. Why two children are ill; if the girls practiced witchcraft

Reading Strategy

1. She lies about her reputation, why she left her job, and her activities in the forest.
2. She calms Betty and defuses an argument between Proctor and Parris.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which characters or situations in Act One do you find it easiest to identify with? Explain.
2. (a)What is Reverend Parris praying for at the beginning of Act One? (b)What else might explain why he is praying so desperately?
3. (a)What reasons does Abigail give Parris for her discharge as the Proctors' servant? (b)What might be another reason?
4. (a)How does Tituba first respond to Hale's accusation of witchcraft? How does she change her response? (b)Why might Tituba, as well as Abigail and Betty, make accusations at the end of Act One?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)How would you classify the atmosphere, or mood, of Act One? (b)What techniques does Miller use to create this mood?
6. Act One ends with Betty and Abigail as the center of interest. (a)How is their behavior similar and different? (b)Is it believable? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea The United States and the World Arthur Miller connected the Salem witch hunts of 1692 and the Communist "witch hunts" of the 1950s. Under what circumstances might a similar situation arise in the United States today?
8. Connect to the Author How might Miller's experiences with the Communist trials have affected his portrayal of girls who confess so easily?

Literary Element Dialogue

Much dialogue in The Crucible centers on questions and answers bandied between characters.

1. Who does the main questioning in Act One? Who are the subjects of the questioning?
2. What do the characters hope to determine by asking their questions?

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions About Characters

Below are phrases used in Miller's stage directions. Give an example of each character's behavior that matches the description.

1. Abigail: an endless capacity for dissembling
2. Rebecca Nurse: Gentleness exudes from her.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Parts For each boldfaced vocabulary word in the left column, identify the related word with a shared root in the right column. Write each word and underline the part they have in common. Then explain how the words are related. Use a dictionary for help.

1. compromise
2. contention
3. subservient
4. pretense

serve promise contend pretend

Writing

Write a Dialogue Tituba, Abigail, and Betty admit they were in the woods together. Using the details they provide, imagine what Miller might have written about that scene. Then write dialogue for this imaginary scene. Keep in mind the way Miller uses dialogue to develop plot, theme, and characterization. Use your character analysis charts as needed.

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' dialogue:

- Does the dialogue address the scene in the woods?
- Does the dialogue develop plot, theme, and characterization in Miller's style?

Vocabulary

1. compromise, promise: Both words refer to an agreement or settlement.
2. contention, contender: Both words refer to struggle or assertion.
3. subservient, serve: Both words refer to usefulness.
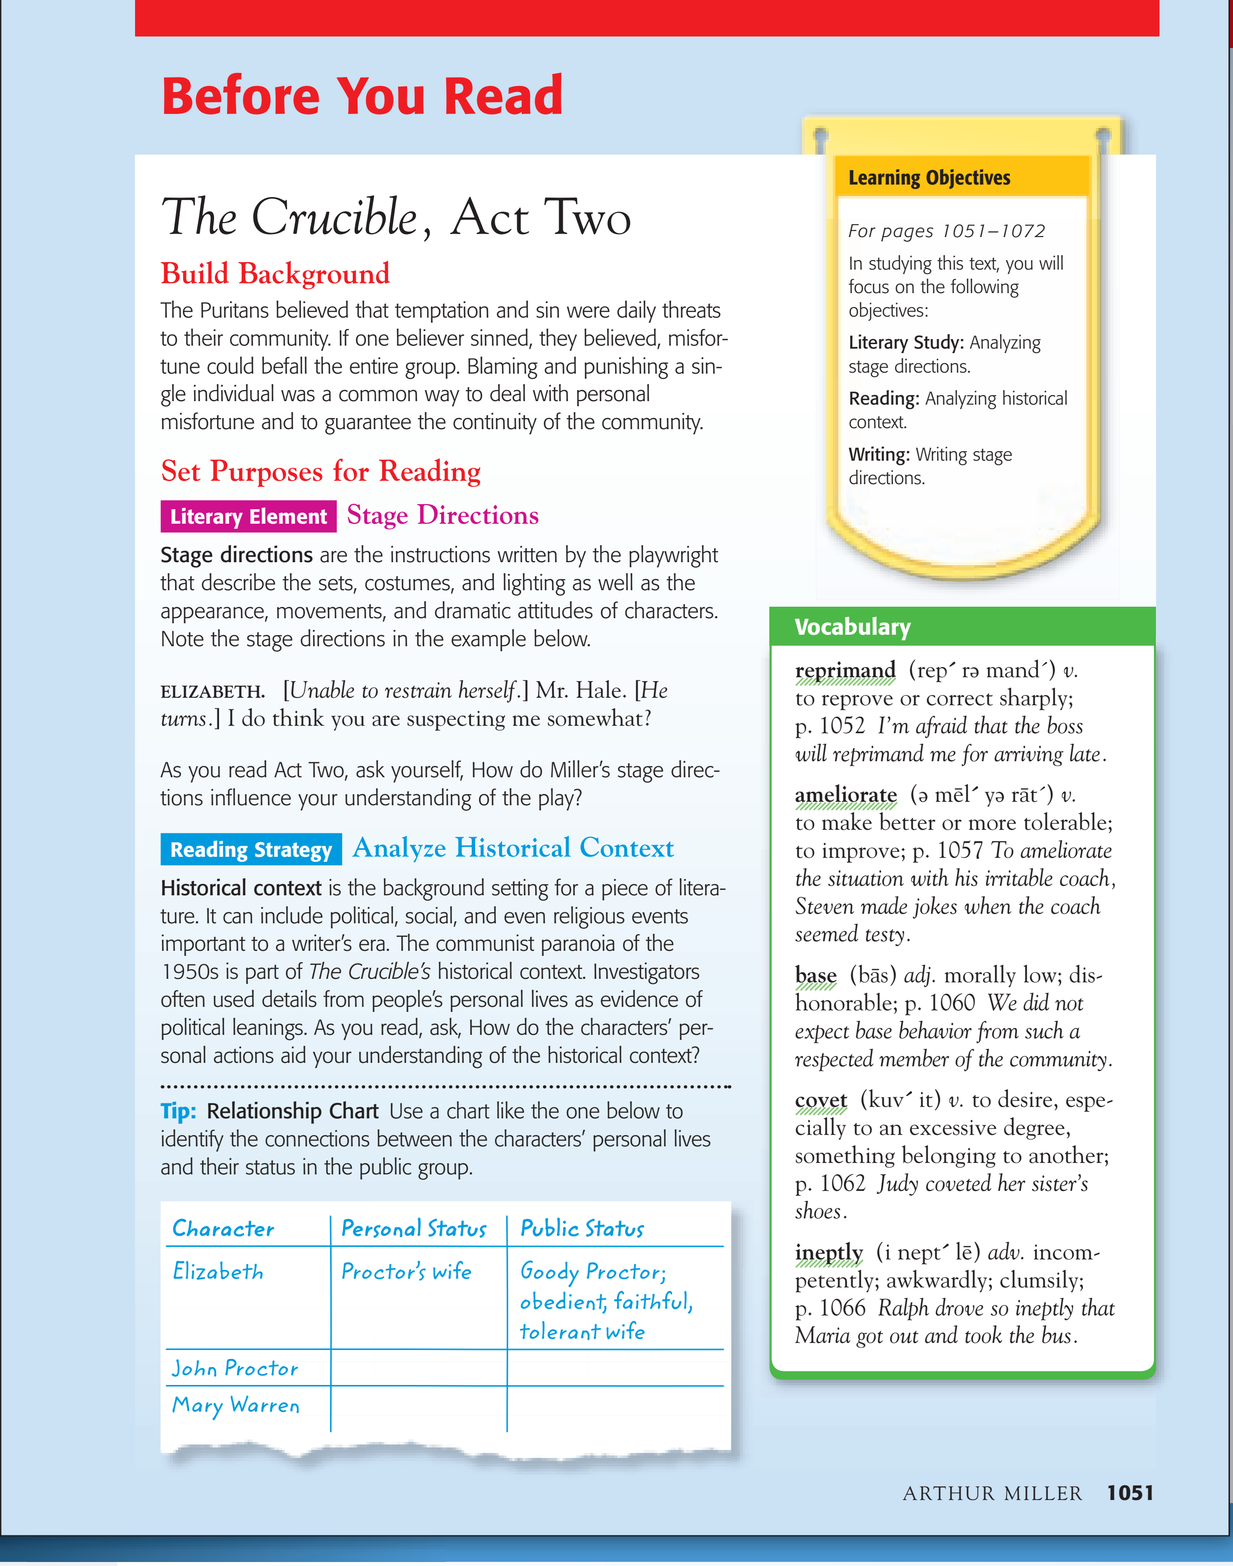
4. pretense, pretender: Both words refer to deception.



Before You Read

The Crucible, Act Two

Build Background

The Puritans believed that temptation and sin were daily threats to their community. If one believer sinned, they believed, misfortune could befall the entire group. Blaming and punishing a single individual was a common way to deal with personal misfortune and to guarantee the continuity of the community.

Set Purposes for Reading

Literary Element Stage Directions

Stage directions are the instructions written by the playwright that describe the sets, costumes, and lighting as well as the appearance, movements, and dramatic attitudes of characters. Note the stage directions in the example below.

ELIZABETH. [Unable to restrain herself.] Mr. Hale. [He turns.] I do think you are suspecting me somewhat?

As you read Act Two, ask yourself, How do Miller's stage directions influence your understanding of the play?

Reading Strategy Analyze Historical Context

Historical context is the background setting for a piece of literature. It can include political, social, and even religious events important to a writer's era. The communist paranoia of the 1950s is part of The Crucible's historical context. Investigators often used details from people's personal lives as evidence of political leanings. As you read, ask, How do the characters' personal actions aid your understanding of the historical context?

Tip: Relationship Chart Use a chart like the one below to identify the connections between the characters' personal lives and their status in the public group.

Character	Personal Status	Public Status
Elizabeth	Proctor's wife	Goody Proctor; obedient, faithful, tolerant wife
John Proctor
Mary Warren

Learning Objectives

For pages 1051–1072

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing stage directions.

Reading: Analyzing historical context.

Writing: Writing stage directions.

Vocabulary

reprimand (rep´ rə mand´) v. to reprove or correct sharply; p. 1052 I'm afraid that the boss will reprimand me for arriving late.

ameliorate (ə mēl´ yə rāt´) v. to make better or more tolerable; to improve; p. 1057 To ameliorate the situation with his irritable coach, Steven made jokes when the coach seemed testy.

base (bās) adj. morally low; dishonorable; p. 1060 We did not expect base behavior from such a respected member of the community.

covet (kuv´ it) v. to desire, especially to an excessive degree, something belonging to another; p. 1062 Judy coveted her sister's shoes.

ineptly (i nept´ lē) adv. incompetently; awkwardly; clumsily; p. 1066 Ralph drove so ineptly that Maria got out and took the bus.

ARTHUR MILLER 1051

Before You Read

Focus

Summary, Act Two

Eight days have passed. A Salem court is convicting people of witchcraft with the aid of testimony from the "afflicted" girls. Relations between the Proctors are strained, and John wavers when Elizabeth asks him to expose Abigail as a fraud. Mary Warren says Abigail has mentioned Elizabeth's name in court. Reverend Hale comes to question the Proctors. Giles Corey and Francis Nurse reveal that their wives have been arrested. Court officials arrest Elizabeth despite John's violent objections. John vows to expose the pretense.

Vocabulary

Multiple Meanings Ask students for familiar meanings of the word base. (The part on which something rests; a center or headquarters; a main ingredient in something, as in paint with an oil base) Point out that the vocabulary word is an adjective. Ask: What different connotation does the adjective base have from the more common meanings of base? (It has a negative connotation)

Selection Skills

The Crucible, Act Two

Literary Elements
- Stage Directions (SE pp. 1051–1072)
- Foreshadowing (TE p. 1061)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Historical Context (SE pp. 1051–1072)

Vocabulary Skills
- Analogies (SE p. 1072)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Viewing Art (SE pp. 1053, 1064, 1067, 1068)
- Mock Newscast (TE p. 1060)
- Debate (TE p. 1062)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write Stage Directions (SE p. 1072)
- Definition (TE p. 1064)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Stage Directions Answer: John does not want Elizabeth to know he has added salt to her stew. His behavior might imply dissatisfaction.

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Historical Context
Answer: She is sympathetic to the rabbit, demonstrating the kindness and empathy of a dutiful wife and mother.

Writer's Technique ☆

Double Entendre Explain that words can mean two things at the same time. Ask: What two meanings might Miller intend when Proctor says, "It's winter in here yet?" (Literally, there are no signs of spring. Figuratively, the relationship between John and Elizabeth is still cool.)

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 226–238.

Act Two

[The common room of PROCTOR'S house, eight days later.

At the right is a door opening on the fields outside. A fireplace is at the left, and behind it a stairway leading upstairs. It is the low, dark, and rather long living room of the time. As the curtain rises, the room is empty. From above, ELIZABETH is heard softly singing to the children. Presently the door opens and JOHN PROCTOR enters, carrying his gun. He glances about the room as he comes toward the fireplace, then halts for an instant as he hears her singing. He continues on to the fireplace, leans the gun against the wall as he swings a pot out of the fire and smells it. Then he lifts out the ladle and tastes. He is not quite pleased. He reaches to a cupboard, takes a pinch of salt, and drops it into the pot. As he is tasting again, her footsteps are heard on the stair. He swings the pot into the fireplace and goes to a basin and washes his hands and face. ELIZABETH enters.]

ELIZABETH. What keeps you so late? It's almost dark.

PROCTOR. I were planting far out to the forest edge.

ELIZABETH. Oh, you're done then.

PROCTOR. Aye, the farm is seeded. The boys asleep?

ELIZABETH. They will be soon. [And she goes to the fireplace, proceeds to ladle up stew in a dish.]

PROCTOR. Pray now for a fair summer.

ELIZABETH. Aye.

PROCTOR. Are you well today?

ELIZABETH. I am. [She brings the plate to the table, and, indicating the food.] It is a rabbit.

PROCTOR. [Going to the table.] Oh, is it! In Jonathan's trap?

ELIZABETH. No, she walked into the house this afternoon; I found her sittin' in the corner like she come to visit.

PROCTOR. Oh, that's a good sign walkin' in.

ELIZABETH. Pray God. It hurt my heart to strip her, poor rabbit. [She sits and watches him taste it.]

PROCTOR. It's well seasoned.

ELIZABETH. [Blushing with pleasure.] I took great care. She's tender?

PROCTOR. Aye. [He eats. She watches him.] I think we'll see green fields soon. It's warm as blood beneath the clods.

ELIZABETH. That's well.

[PROCTOR eats, then looks up.]

PROCTOR. If the crop is good I'll buy George Jacob's heifer. How would that please you?

ELIZABETH. Aye, it would.

PROCTOR. [With a grin.] I mean to please you, Elizabeth.

ELIZABETH. [It is hard to say.] I know it, John.

[He gets up, goes to her, kisses her. She receives it. With a certain disappointment, he returns to the table.]

PROCTOR. [As gently as he can.] Cider?

ELIZABETH. [With a sense of reprimanding herself for having forgot.] Aye! [She gets up and goes and pours a glass for him. He now arches his back.]

PROCTOR. This farm's a continent when you go foot by foot droppin' seeds in it.

ELIZABETH. [Coming with the cider.] It must be.

PROCTOR. [Drinks a long draught, then, putting the glass down.] You ought to bring some flowers in the house.

ELIZABETH. Oh! I forgot! I will tomorrow.

---

1 Stage Directions What does John's behavior suggest about his relationship with Elizabeth?

Analyze Historical Context What typical trait of a 1950s housewife does Elizabeth demonstrate here? Explain. 2

Vocabulary

reprimand (rep´ rə mand´) v. to reprove or correct sharply

Research Practice

SMALL GROUP

Theocracy Remind students that the residents of Salem were part of a theocracy, or church state, founded when the Pilgrims landed in Massachusetts about 70 years before the events in this play occurred. Suggest that they learn more about the early history of Massachusetts. Have students form small groups and use library and Internet resources to research the Pilgrims' beliefs and governing styles. Have group members collaborate on a written summary of their findings.

PROCTOR. It's winter in here yet. On Sunday let you come with me, and we'll walk the farm together; I never see such a load of flowers on the earth. [With good feeling he goes and looks up at the sky through the open doorway.] Lilacs have a purple smell. Lilac is the smell of nightfall, I think. Massachusetts is a beauty in the spring!

ELIZABETH. Aye, it is.

[There is a pause. She is watching him from the table as he stands there absorbing the night. It is as though she would speak but cannot. Instead, now, she takes up his plate and glass and fork and goes with them to the basin. Her back is turned to him. He turns to her and watches her. A sense of their separation rises.]

Painting, 1948. Willem de Kooning. Enamel and oil on canvas, $42\frac{5}{8}$ x $56\frac{1}{8}$ in. Willem de Kooning Revocable Trust/Artists Rights Society (ARS), NY/The Museum of Modern Art, NY.

View the Art "Even abstract shapes must have a likeness," Willem de Kooning is quoted as saying. In this painting, some people see letters of the alphabet; others see human body parts. What shapes or figures do you see? How does people's ability to interpret the same object or event differently relate to The Crucible?

PROCTOR. I think you're sad again. Are you?

ELIZABETH. [She doesn't want friction, and yet she must.] You come so late I thought you'd gone to Salem this afternoon.

PROCTOR. Why? I have no business in Salem.

ELIZABETH. You did speak of going, earlier this week.

PROCTOR. [He knows what she means.] I thought better of it since.

ELIZABETH. Mary Warren's there today.

3 PROCTOR. Why'd you let her? You heard me forbid her go to Salem any more!

ELIZABETH. I couldn't stop her.

PROCTOR. [Holding back a full condemnation of her.] It is a fault, it is a fault, Elizabeth—you're the mistress here, not Mary Warren.

ELIZABETH. She frightened all my strength away.

PROCTOR. How may that mouse frighten you, Elizabeth? You— 3

ELIZABETH. It is a mouse no more. I forbid her go, and she raises up her chin like the daughter of a prince and says to me, "I must go to Salem, Goody Proctor; I am an official of the court!"

PROCTOR. Court! What court?

ELIZABETH. Aye, it is a proper court they have now. They've sent four judges out of Boston, she says, weighty magistrates[1] of the General Court, and at the head sits the Deputy Governor of the Province.

PROCTOR. [Astonished.] Why, she's mad.

4 Stage Directions What does Elizabeth mean? How would this stage direction influence the way the actor playing Proctor said his lines?

---

[1] Weighty means "important." Magistrates are judges.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate This act opens to a scene of a "low, dark, and rather long living room." Point out that the "living room" means "living area," and it includes the cooking area (the fireplace) and the eating area. Students may not be familiar with this type of early American housing. Display pictures, if possible, or describe it. Then ask students what atmosphere the description of this setting creates.

Advanced Have students create timelines of events to help them follow the story. Act One is set in the Parris house, and Act Two in the Proctor house, but both acts refer to events that happened earlier or are taking place elsewhere at the same time.

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Draw Conclusions

Ask: Why do you think John knows nothing of Mary or the court? (Students may say that he has been in the fields all day, staying there late perhaps to avoid his home situation as long as possible.)

Literary Element 4

Stage Directions

Answer: Elizabeth hints at the relationship between John and Abigail. The actor playing Proctor would probably speak cautiously and defensively.

View the Art

Answer: Students' perceptions of the painting may differ. The idea of different interpretations relates to the play in that different characters perceive the testimony, witchcraft accusations, and other events differently—often based on their knowledge, beliefs, and motives.

Willem de Kooning (1904–1997) was one of America's leading abstract expressionist artists. Like Jackson Pollock, de Kooning used the technique of action painting to express his subconscious emotions during the painting process.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Teach

Political History ☆

New England Colonies The Massachusetts Bay Colony was founded by the Puritans. At first this colony governed all British settlements in New England. By 1692, differences in politics, religion, and economics had led to the formation of three more New England colonies—New Hampshire, Connecticut, and Rhode Island.

The Crucible on Stage in New York City, NY.

Speaking Practice

Exclamation Points Remind students that exclamation points are used to show strong feelings and to indicate a forceful command. Point out that as Proctor becomes more upset, the number of exclamation points increases. Have students review the dialogue on this spread and use sticky notes to identify Proctor's exclamatory statements. Tell them to notice whether or not a stage direction indicates how he is to say the line. Then have students read the exclamations aloud first as if the lines were written as statements with periods, and then as exclamations with strong feelings.

ELIZABETH. I would to God she were. There be fourteen people in the jail now, she says. [PROCTOR simply looks at her, unable to grasp it.] And they'll be tried, and the court have power to hang them too, she says.

PROCTOR. [Scoffing, but without conviction.] Ah, they'd never hang—

ELIZABETH. The Deputy Governor promise hangin' if they'll not confess, John. The town's gone wild, I think. She speak of Abigail, and I thought she were a saint, to hear her. Abigail brings the other girls into the court, and where she walks the crowd will part like the sea for Israel. And folks are brought before them, and if they scream and howl and fall to the floor—the person's clapped in the jail for bewitchin' them.

PROCTOR. [Wide-eyed.] Oh, it is a black mischief.

ELIZABETH. I think you must go to Salem, John. [He turns to her.] I think so. You must tell them it is a fraud.

PROCTOR. [Thinking beyond this.] Aye, it is, it is surely.

ELIZABETH. Let you go to Ezekiel Cheever—he knows you well. And tell him what she said to you last week in her uncle's house. She said it had naught to do with witchcraft, did she not?

PROCTOR. [In thought.] Aye, she did, she did. [Now, a pause.]

ELIZABETH. [Quietly, fearing to anger him by prodding.] God forbid you keep that from the court, John. I think they must be told.

PROCTOR. [Quietly, struggling with his thought.] Aye, they must, they must. It is a wonder they do believe her.

ELIZABETH. I would go to Salem now, John—let you go tonight.

PROCTOR. I'll think on it.

ELIZABETH. [With her courage now.] You cannot keep it, John.

PROCTOR. [Angering.] I know I cannot keep it. I say I will think on it!

ELIZABETH. [Hurt, and very coldly.] Good, then, let you think on it. [She stands and starts to walk out of the room.]

PROCTOR. I am only wondering how I may prove what she told me, Elizabeth. If the girl's a saint now, I think it is not easy to prove she's fraud, and the town gone so silly. She told it to me in a room alone—I have no proof for it.

ELIZABETH. You were alone with her?

PROCTOR. [Stubbornly.] For a moment alone, aye.

ELIZABETH. Why, then, it is not as you told me.

PROCTOR. [His anger rising.] For a moment, I say. The others come in soon after.

ELIZABETH. [Quietly—she has suddenly lost all faith in him.] Do as you wish, then. [She starts to turn.]

PROCTOR. Woman. [She turns to him.] I'll not have your suspicion any more.

ELIZABETH. [A little loftily.] I have no—

PROCTOR. I'll not have it!

ELIZABETH. Then let you not earn it.

PROCTOR. [With a violent undertone.] You doubt me yet?

ELIZABETH. [With a smile, to keep her dignity.] John, if it were not Abigail that you must go to hurt, would you falter now? I think not.

PROCTOR. Now look you—

ELIZABETH. I see what I see, John.

PROCTOR. [With solemn warning.] You will not judge me more, Elizabeth. I have good reason to think before I charge fraud on Abigail, and I will think on it. Let you look to your own improvement before you go to judge your husband any more. I have forgot Abigail, and—

ELIZABETH. And I.

---

1 The United States and the World What is wrong with this form of justice? What might Miller's audience have thought on hearing these lines?

2 Analyze Historical Content What personal issue does Proctor consider here that affects his decision to speak publicly?

3 Stage Directions What aspect of Elizabeth's character is stressed in this stage direction?

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: The accused persons are considered guilty without having an opportunity to defend themselves or to have the accusers questioned. Miller's audience would likely have thought of how the naming of suspected Communist sympathizers during the McCarthy hearings was enough to taint their lives.

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Historical Context Answer: He thinks of his affair with Abigail and fears that speaking against the girls will reveal his secret.

Literary Element 3

Stage Directions Answer: Elizabeth, although subservient to her husband, is determined to preserve her dignity.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP Established Have pairs or small groups use the character graphic organizers that they began at the play's beginning to develop and discuss details of the characters' personal and public status. Have them add Abigail Williams to their charts. Even though she does not appear in this act, readers learn more about her public status.

SMALL GROUP Emerging Guide students in examining the relationship between John and Elizabeth Proctor. Ask: How do John and Elizabeth treat each other in this scene? What motivates them to behave as they do? What does their behavior suggest about their characters? Have students work in small groups to discuss and answer these questions. Tell students to consider not only the dialogue but also the stage directions when answering the questions.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Stage Directions Answer: Miller's description of Mary Warren in the two previous stage directions makes it clear that she appears ill and strangely distant, as though coming out of a trance. These directions help us understand why her words and appearance confuse and intrigue Proctor.

Big Idea 2

The United States and the World Answer: Most students will say that Miller wanted his audience to be shocked that the number imprisoned has almost tripled. This increase suggests that the witch hunt is gathering force and speed, like an avalanche.

PROCTOR. Spare me! You forget nothin' and forgive nothin'. Learn charity, woman. I have gone tiptoe in this house all seven month since she is gone. I have not moved from there to there without I think to please you, and still an everlasting funeral marches round your heart. I cannot speak but I am doubted, every moment judged for lies, as though I come into a court when I come into this house!

ELIZABETH. John, you are not open with me. You saw her with a crowd, you said. Now you—

PROCTOR. I'll plead my honesty no more, Elizabeth.

ELIZABETH. [Now she would justify herself.] John, I am only—

PROCTOR. No more! I should have roared you down when first you told me your suspicion. But I wilted, and, like a Christian, I confessed. Confessed! Some dream I had must have mistaken you for God that day. But you're not, you're not, and let you remember it! Let you look sometimes for the goodness in me, and judge me not.

ELIZABETH. I do not judge you. The magistrate sits in your heart that judges you. I never thought you but a good man, John—[With a smile.]—only somewhat bewildered.

PROCTOR. [Laughing bitterly.] Oh, Elizabeth, your justice would freeze beer! [He turns suddenly toward a sound outside. He starts for the door as MARY WARREN enters. As soon as he sees her, he goes directly to her and grabs her by her cloak, furious.] How do you go to Salem when I forbid it? Do you mock me? [Shaking her.] I'll whip you if you dare leave this house again!

[Strangely, she doesn't resist him, but hangs limply by his grip.]

MARY WARREN. I am sick, I am sick, Mr. Proctor. Pray, pray, hurt me not. [Her strangeness throws him off, and her evident pallor[2] and weakness. He frees her.] My insides are all shuddery; I am in the proceedings all day, sir.

PROCTOR. [With draining anger—his curiosity is draining it.] And what of these proceedings here? When will you proceed to keep this house, as you are paid nine pound a year to do—and my wife not wholly well?

[As though to compensate, MARY WARREN goes to ELIZABETH with a small rag doll.]

MARY WARREN. I made a gift for you today, Goody Proctor. I had to sit long hours in a chair, and passed the time with sewing.

ELIZABETH. [Perplexed, looking at the doll.] Why, thank you, it's a fair poppet.

MARY WARREN. [With a trembling, decayed voice.] We must all love each other now, Goody Proctor.

ELIZABETH. [Amazed at her strangeness.] Aye, indeed we must.

MARY WARREN. [Glancing at the room.] I'll get up early in the morning and clean the house. I must sleep now. [She turns and starts off.]

PROCTOR. Mary. [She halts.] Is it true? There be fourteen women arrested?

MARY WARREN. No, sir. There be thirty-nine now—[She suddenly breaks off and sobs and sits down, exhausted.]

ELIZABETH. Why, she's weepin'! What ails you, child?

MARY WARREN. Goody Osburn—will hang!

[There is a shocked pause, while she sobs.]

PROCTOR. Hang! [He calls into her face.] Hang, y'say?

MARY WARREN. [Through her weeping.] Aye.

PROCTOR. The Deputy Governor will permit it?

Stage Directions How do the two previous stage directions help explain the sudden change in Proctor's attitude? 1

The United States and the World How do you think that Miller wants his audience to respond to what is happening in Salem? 2

---

[2] Pallor refers to a pale complexion.

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Identify Logical Fallacies Explain that the syllogism is the basic tool of logic, and write this example on the board: The people living in Salem were Puritans. (major premise) John Proctor is a person living in Salem. (minor premise) Therefore, John Proctor is a Puritan. (conclusion) Point out the distinction between valid (logically correct) and true (factual). This example is valid and true. However, sometimes a syllogism is valid but not true. Write this example on the board: All people who do not know the commandments are witches. (major premise) Goody Good does not know the commandments. (minor premise) Therefore, Goody Good is a witch. (conclusion) Although this syllogism is valid—its conclusion follows logically from its premises—it is not true, because the major premise is false.

3 MARY WARREN. He sentenced her. He must. [To ameliorate it.] But not Sarah Good. For Sarah Good confessed, y'see.

PROCTOR. Confessed! To what?

MARY WARREN. That she—[In horror at the memory.]—she sometimes made a compact with Lucifer, and wrote her name in his black book—with her blood—and bound herself to torment Christians till God's thrown down—and we all must worship Hell forevermore.

[Pause.]

PROCTOR. But—surely you know what a jabberer she is. Did you tell them that?

MARY WARREN. Mr. Proctor, in open court she near to choked us all to death.

PROCTOR. How, choked you?

MARY WARREN. She sent her spirit out.

ELIZABETH. Oh, Mary, Mary, surely you—

MARY WARREN. [With an indignant[3] edge.] She tried to kill me many times, Goody Proctor!

ELIZABETH. Why, I never heard you mention that before.

MARY WARREN. I never knew it before. I never knew anything before. When she come into the court I say to myself, I must not accuse this woman, for she sleep in ditches, and so very old and poor. But then—then she sit there, denying and denying, and I feel a misty coldness climbin' up my back, and the skin on my skull begin to creep, and I feel a clamp around my neck and I cannot breathe air; and then—[Entranced.]—I hear a voice, a screamin' voice, and it were my voice—and all at once I remembered everything she done to me!

PROCTOR. Why? What did she do to you?

MARY WARREN. [Like one awakened to a marvelous secret insight.] So many time, Mr. Proctor, she come to this very door, beggin' bread and a cup of cider—and mark this: whenever I turned her away empty, she mumbled.

ELIZABETH. Mumbled! She may mumble if she's hungry.

MARY WARREN. But what does she mumble? You must remember, Goody Proctor. Last month—a Monday, I think—she walked away, and I thought my guts would burst for two days after. Do you remember it?

ELIZABETH. Why—I do, I think, but—

MARY WARREN. And so I told that to Judge Hathorne, and he asks her so. "Sarah Good," says he, "what curse do you mumble that this girl must fall sick after turning you away?" And then she replies—[Mimicking an old crone.][4] —"Why, your excellence, no curse at all. I only say my commandments; I hope I may say my commandments," says she!

ELIZABETH. And that's an upright answer.

MARY WARREN. Aye, but then Judge Hathorne say, "Recite for us your commandments!"—[Leaning avidly toward them.]—and of all the ten she could not say a single one. She never knew no commandments, and they had her in a flat lie!

PROCTOR. And so condemned her?

MARY WARREN. [Now a little strained, seeing his stubborn doubt.] Why, they must when she condemned herself.

PROCTOR. But the proof, the proof!

MARY WARREN. [With greater impatience with him.] I told you the proof. It's hard proof, hard as rock, the judges said.

PROCTOR. [Pauses an instant, then.] You will not go to court again, Mary Warren.

---

[3] Indignant means "expressing righteous anger."

[4] A crone is a withered old woman.

Vocabulary

ameliorate (ə mēl´ yə rāt´) v. to make better or more tolerable; to improve

Teach

Vocabulary 3

Antonyms Point out to students that ameliorate and its opposite exacerbate ("to make worse") are popular vocabulary words on standardized tests. Ask students to find a passage on this spread in which one character says something that exacerbates the situation. (When Elizabeth says, "And I" and "John, I am only—," she makes John angrier. When Mary Warren says, "Why, they must when she condemned herself," she makes John angrier.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Point out to students that although they may be unfamiliar with the word pallor, they probably know the word pale. Remind them that thinking about related forms of words can help them identify unfamiliar words and reinforce meaning. Write on the board:

Noun: pallor

Adjectives: pallid, pale

Verb: to pale

Explain that these words are related.
Ask: If pale means lacking in color, what do you think to pale means?
(To become pale)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Historical Context Answer: The 1950s were a conservative time in the United States. Young people generally respected and deferred to their elders. Her actions could have been seen as a threat to the stability of society.

Big Idea 2

The United States and the World Answer: In the Salem trials, innocent people were induced to confess, thereby saving themselves by implicating others. During the McCarthy hearings, suspects were promised immunity from prosecution in return for naming their co-conspirators.

Literary Element 3

Stage Directions Answer: Proctor is so incensed by Mary's remark that he is on the verge of beating her. She then stuns him into immobility.

MARY WARREN. I must tell you, sir, I will be gone every day now. I am amazed you do not see what weighty work we do.

PROCTOR. What work you do! It's strange work for a Christian girl to hang old women!

MARY WARREN. But, Mr. Proctor, they will not hang them if they confess. Sarah Good will only sit in jail some time—[Recalling.]—and here's a wonder for you; think on this. Goody Good is pregnant!

ELIZABETH. Pregnant! Are they mad? The woman's near to sixty!

MARY WARREN. They had Doctor Griggs examine her, and she's full to the brim. And smokin' a pipe all these years, and no husband either! But she's safe, thank God, for they'll not hurt the innocent child. But be that not a marvel? You must see it, sir, it's God's work we do. So I'll be gone every day for some time. I'm—I am an official of the court, they say, and I—[She has been edging toward offstage.]

PROCTOR. I'll official you! [He strides to the mantel, takes down the whip hanging there.]

MARY WARREN. [Terrified, but coming erect, striving for her authority.] I'll not stand whipping any more!

ELIZABETH. [Hurriedly, as PROCTOR approaches.] Mary, promise now you'll stay at home—

MARY WARREN. [Backing from him, but keeping her erect posture, striving, striving for her way.] The Devil's loose in Salem, Mr. Proctor; we must discover where he's hiding!

PROCTOR. I'll whip the Devil out of you! [With whip raised he reaches out for her, and she streaks away and yells.]

MARY WARREN. [Pointing at ELIZABETH.] I saved her life today!

[Silence. His whip comes down.]

ELIZABETH. [Softly.] I am accused?

MARY WARREN. [Quaking.] Somewhat mentioned. But I said I never see no sign you ever sent your spirit out to hurt no one, and seeing I do live so closely with you, they dismissed it.

ELIZABETH. Who accused me?

MARY WARREN. I am bound by law, I cannot tell it. [To PROCTOR.] I only hope you'll not be so sarcastical no more. Four judges and the King's deputy sat to dinner with us but an hour ago. I—I would have you speak civilly to me, from this out.

PROCTOR. [In horror, muttering in disgust at her.] Go to bed.

MARY WARREN. [With a stamp of her foot.] I'll not be ordered to bed no more, Mr. Proctor! I am eighteen and a woman, however single!

PROCTOR. Do you wish to sit up? Then sit up.

MARY WARREN. I wish to go to bed!

PROCTOR. [In anger.] Good night, then!

MARY WARREN. Good night. [Dissatisfied, uncertain of herself, she goes out. Wide-eyed, both, PROCTOR and ELIZABETH stand staring.]

ELIZABETH. [Quietly.] Oh, the noose, the noose is up!

PROCTOR. There'll be no noose.

ELIZABETH. She wants me dead. I knew all week it would come to this!

PROCTOR. [Without conviction.] They dismissed it. You heard her say—

ELIZABETH. And what of tomorrow? She will cry me out until they take me!

PROCTOR. Sit you down.

ELIZABETH. She wants me dead, John, you know it!

PROCTOR. I say sit down! [She sits, trembling. He speaks quietly, trying to keep his wits.] Now we must be wise, Elizabeth.

---

1 Analyze Historical Content Why might the young girl's growing sense of her own power over her elders have been seen as inappropriate during Miller's time? Explain.

2 The United States and the World How did this distorted logic subvert justice in the Salem witch trials and in the McCarthy hearings?

Stage Directions What does this stage direction indicate? 3

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Monitor Comprehension Have students take some time to review the major conflicts so far. Ask: What creates conflict between John and Elizabeth in Act Two? (Students may say John creates conflict with his adultery and his unwillingness to tell the authorities about Abigail. Elizabeth fears that Abigail will accuse her of witchcraft.)

The Crucible, 1996.

ELIZABETH. [With sarcasm, and a sense of being lost.] Oh, indeed, indeed!

PROCTOR. Fear nothing. I'll find Ezekiel Cheever. I'll tell him she said it were all sport.

ELIZABETH. John, with so many in the jail, more than Cheever's help is needed now, I think. Would you favor me with this? Go to Abigail.

PROCTOR. [His soul hardening as he senses . . .] What have I to say to Abigail?

ELIZABETH. [Delicately.] John—grant me this. You have a faulty understanding of young girls. There is a promise made in any bed—

PROCTOR. [Striving against his anger.] What promise!

ELIZABETH. Spoke or silent, a promise is surely made. And she may dote on[5] it now—I am sure she does—and thinks to kill me, then to take my place.

[PROCTOR'S anger is rising; he cannot speak.]

ELIZABETH. It is her dearest hope, John, I know it. There be a thousand names; why does she call mine? There be a certain danger in calling such a name—I am no Goody Good that sleeps in ditches, nor Osburn, drunk and half-witted. She'd dare not call out such a farmer's wife but there be monstrous profit in it. She thinks to take my place, John.

PROCTOR. She cannot think it! [He knows it is true.]

ELIZABETH. ["Reasonably."] John, have you ever shown her somewhat of contempt? She cannot pass you in the church but you will blush— 4

PROCTOR. I may blush for my sin.

The United States and the World Many U.S. citizens opposed to Senator McCarthy accused him of promoting his own career in hunting for Communists. What is similar about the situation described here? 5

---

[5] To dote on is to show extreme affection for or to pay excessive attention to.

Teach

Reading Strategy 4

Make Inferences Ask: Who is the she that Elizabeth is referring to at the bottom of the second column? (Abigail)

Big Idea 5

The United States and the World Answer: Abigail believes she can become John's wife by convicting Elizabeth of witchcraft. Ask: How are Mr. Putnam's and the Reverend Parris's situations also similar? (Like McCarthy, Parris is interested in furthering his career. Putnam is also interested in personal gain—he wants more land.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Established Have pairs of students read the dialogue between Proctor and Elizabeth aloud, beginning with Elizabeth's line, "Oh, the noose" and stopping at Proctor's line, "I may blush for my sin." Then have them discuss the following questions with their partners:

- What do you learn about the relationship between John and Elizabeth?
- What do you learn about their growing anxiety and frustration as a result of Mary's news?
- What general statement can you make about the use and abuse of power based on what is going on in the town?

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Ask: What might explain Proctor's reaction? (Some may say Abigail entrapped him and he has a right to be angry. Others will side with Elizabeth, noting that John is responsible for his actions.)

Literary Element 2

Stage Directions Answer: The rifle symbolizes John's anger at what he perceives as Elizabeth's refusal to understand him or to forgive him.

APPROACHING To guide students, suggest that the rifle is a symbol. Then ask what it might symbolize.

Literary Element 3

Stage Directions Answer: "From the air" suggests a supernatural agent. It also indicates that events are moving with such swiftness that the innocent are caught unaware.

ELIZABETH. I think she sees another meaning in that blush.

PROCTOR. And what see you? What see you, Elizabeth?

ELIZABETH. ["Conceding."] I think you be somewhat ashamed, for I am there, and she so close.

PROCTOR. When will you know me, woman? Were I stone I would have cracked for shame this seven month!

ELIZABETH. Then go and tell her she's a whore. Whatever promise she may sense—break it, John, break it.

PROCTOR. [Between his teeth.] Good, then. I'll go. [He starts for his rifle.]

ELIZABETH. [Trembling, fearfully.] Oh, how unwillingly!

PROCTOR. [Turning on her, rifle in hand.] I will curse her hotter than the oldest cinder in hell. But pray, begrudge me not my anger!

ELIZABETH. Your anger! I only ask you—

PROCTOR. Woman, am I so base? Do you truly think me base?

ELIZABETH. I never called you base.

PROCTOR. Then how do you charge me with such a promise? The promise that a stallion gives a mare I gave that girl!

1 ELIZABETH. Then why do you anger with me when I bid you break it?

PROCTOR. Because it speaks deceit, and I am honest! But I'll plead no more! I see now your spirit twists around the single error of my life, and I will never tear it free!

ELIZABETH. [Crying out.] You'll tear it free—when you come to know that I will be your only wife, or no wife at all! She has an arrow in you yet, John Proctor, and you know it well!

2 Stage Directions Why might Miller refer to the rifle in this stage direction?

Vocabulary

base (bās) adj. morally low; dishonorable

[Quite suddenly, as though from the air, a figure appears in the doorway. They start slightly. It is MR. HALE. He is different now—drawn a little, and there is a quality of deference, even of guilt, about his manner now.]

HALE. Good evening.

PROCTOR. [Still in his shock.] Why, Mr. Hale! Good evening to you, sir. Come in, come in.

HALE. [To ELIZABETH.] I hope I do not startle you.

ELIZABETH. No, no, it's only that I heard no horse—

HALE. You are Goodwife Proctor.

PROCTOR. Aye; Elizabeth.

HALE. [Nods, then.] I hope you're not off to bed yet.

PROCTOR. [Setting down his gun.] No, no. [HALE comes further into the room. And PROCTOR, to explain his nervousness.] We are not used to visitors after dark, but you're welcome here. Will you sit you down, sir?

HALE. I will. [He sits.] Let you sit, Goodwife Proctor.

[She does, never letting him out of her sight. There is a pause as HALE looks about the room.]

PROCTOR. [To break the silence.] Will you drink cider, Mr. Hale?

HALE. No, it rebels my stomach; I have some further traveling yet tonight. Sit you down, sir. [PROCTOR sits.] I will not keep you long, but I have some business with you.

PROCTOR. Business of the court?

HALE. No—no, I come of my own, without the court's authority. Hear me. [He wets his lips.] I know not if you are aware, but your wife's name is—mentioned in the court.

PROCTOR. We know it, sir. Our Mary Warren told us. We are entirely amazed.

HALE. I am a stranger here, as you know. And in my ignorance I find it hard to draw a clear

Stage Directions How does this stage direction help to develop plot and atmosphere? 3

Speaking Practice

SMALL GROUP

Mock Newscast Challenge students to present a mock newscast about the events in the play. Organize students into groups. Explain that their newscasts should include desk anchors, reporters, and at least one "on the spot" interview with someone at the courthouse. Students should cover the events taking place in Salem, the opinions of the local citizens, and other information relevant to a Salem audience. Have groups present their newscasts to the class using audio and visual effects to enhance the presentation..

The Crucible, 1996.

opinion of them that come accused before the court. And so this afternoon, and now tonight, I go from house to house—I come now from Rebecca Nurse's house and—

ELIZABETH. [Shocked.] Rebecca's charged!

4 HALE. God forbid such a one be charged. She is, however—mentioned somewhat.

ELIZABETH. [With an attempt at a laugh.] You will never believe, I hope, that Rebecca trafficked with the Devil.

HALE. Woman, it is possible.

PROCTOR. [Taken aback.] Surely you cannot think so.

HALE. This is a strange time, Mister. No man may longer doubt the powers of the dark are gathered in monstrous attack upon this village. There is too much evidence now to deny it. You will agree, sir?

PROCTOR. [Evading.] I—have no knowledge in that line. But it's hard to think so pious[6] a woman be secretly a Devil's bitch after seventy year of such good prayer.

HALE. Aye. But the Devil is a wily[7] one, you cannot deny it. However, she is far from accused, and I know she will not be. [Pause.] I thought, sir, to put some questions as to the Christian character of this house, if you'll permit me.

PROCTOR. [Coldly, resentful.] Why, we—have no fear of questions, sir.

HALE. Good, then. [He makes himself more comfortable.] In the book of record that Mr. Parris keeps, I note that you are rarely in the church on Sabbath Day.

PROCTOR. No, sir, you are mistaken.

HALE. Twenty-six time in seventeen month, sir. I must call that rare. Will you tell me why you are so absent?

PROCTOR. Mr. Hale, I never knew I must account to that man for I come to church or stay at home. My wife were sick this winter.

HALE. So I am told. But you, Mister, why could you not come alone?

---

[6] Pious means "having a sincere reverence for God."

[7] Wily means "crafty" or "sly and full of tricks."

The United States and the World Why do you think that Reverend Hale has come to believe that witchcraft is responsible for the girls' strange behavior? How does this kind of unsubstantiated belief relate to the McCarthy era? 5

Teach

Literary Element 4

Foreshadowing Explain to students that the author uses foreshadowing. Ask: How does Miller foreshadow that Rebecca Nurse will be accused of witchcraft in Act One? (In Act One, Mrs. Putnam jealously attacks Rebecca at the mention of Rebecca's numerous children and grandchildren and hints that it is unnatural that Rebecca has so many while she has so few.)

Big Idea 5

The United States and the World Answer: Students may suggest that the emotional appeal of the investigation is difficult to resist. Mass hysteria has taken hold of Salem. Similarly, the anti-Communist hysteria of the 1950s led many people to suspend their reasonable doubts about the existence of a conspiracy.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Research on Civil Liberties Have students do research on the Alien and Sedition Acts of 1798. Explain that these acts generated controversy involving freedom of speech, and parts of these acts still apply to issues today. Have students research multiple points of view and summarize their findings. Then have them share their results with the class and explain how the information they discovered might relate to The Crucible.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Historical Context Answer: Hale's argument that Parris is holy because he has been ordained is faulty logic. Because Parris was ordained by another man (not by God) and desires gold candlesticks, Proctor does not believe that Parris is a holy man.

Big Idea 2

The United States and the World Answer: Proctor is challenged to prove that he is not on the side of Satan by reciting the commandments. HUAC witnesses had to establish that they were not "un-American." This presumption that one is guilty until proven innocent undermines the Anglo-American judicial tradition in which the burden of proof rests with those who make an accusation, not with those who deny it.

Cultural History ☆

Puritan Beliefs Proctor accuses Parris of beliefs and practices that are unacceptable to the Puritans when he says Parris wants gold candlesticks and cathedrals. In forming their religion, Puritans attempted to eliminate certain Roman Catholic practices from the Anglican church. Gold candlesticks and ornate cathedrals, to Proctor, might represent the parts of Catholicism that Puritans were trying to leave behind.

PROCTOR. I surely did come when I could, and when I could not I prayed in this house.

HALE. Mr. Proctor, your house is not a church; your theology[8] must tell you that.

PROCTOR. It does, sir, it does; and it tells me that a minister may pray to God without he have golden candlesticks upon the altar.

HALE. What golden candlesticks?

PROCTOR. Since we built the church there were pewter[9] candlesticks upon the altar; Francis Nurse made them, y'know, and a sweeter hand never touched the metal. But Parris came, and for twenty week he preach nothin' but golden candlesticks until he had them. ☆ I labor the earth from dawn of day to blink of night, and I tell you true, when I look to heaven and see my money glaring at his elbows—it hurt my prayer, sir, it hurt my prayer. I think, sometimes, the man dreams cathedrals, not clapboard meetin' houses.

HALE. [Thinks, then.] And yet, Mister, a Christian on Sabbath Day must be in church. [Pause.] Tell me—you have three children?

PROCTOR. Aye. Boys.

HALE. How comes it that only two are baptized?

PROCTOR. [Starts to speak, then stops, then, as though unable to restrain this.] I like it not that Mr. Parris should lay his hand upon my baby. I see no light of God in that man. I'll not conceal it.

HALE. I must say it, Mr. Proctor; that is not for you to decide. The man's ordained, therefore the light of God is in him.

PROCTOR. [Flushed with resentment but trying to smile.] What's your suspicion, Mr. Hale?

HALE. No, no, I have no—

PROCTOR. I nailed the roof upon the church, I hung the door—

HALE. Oh, did you! That's a good sign, then.

PROCTOR. It may be I have been too quick to bring the man to book, but you cannot think we ever desired the destruction of religion. I think that's in your mind, is it not?

HALE. [Not altogether giving way.] I—have—there is a softness in your record, sir, a softness.

ELIZABETH. I think, maybe, we have been too hard with Mr. Parris. I think so. But sure we never loved the Devil here.

HALE. [Nods, deliberating this. Then, with the voice of one administering a secret test.] Do you know your Commandments, Elizabeth?

ELIZABETH. [Without hesitation, even eagerly.] I surely do. There be no mark of blame upon my life, Mr. Hale. I am a covenanted Christian woman.

HALE. And you, Mister?

PROCTOR. [A trifle unsteadily.] I—am sure I do, sir.

HALE. [Glances at her open face, then at JOHN, then.] Let you repeat them, if you will.

PROCTOR. The Commandments.

HALE. Aye.

PROCTOR. [Looking off, beginning to sweat.] Thou shalt not kill.

HALE. Aye.

PROCTOR. [Counting on his fingers.] Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's goods, nor make unto thee any graven image.[10] Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord in vain; thou shalt have no other gods before me. [With some hesitation.] Thou shalt remember the Sabbath Day and keep it holy. [Pause. Then.] Thou shalt honor

---

[8] Here, Hale uses the term theology to refer to Proctor's own religious beliefs.

[9] Pewter is an alloy, or a substance composed of two or more metals or of a metal and a nonmetal. Tin is the main metal in pewter, and it is often mixed with lead.

[10] Here, a graven image is an idol.

1 Analyze Historical Context How does Miller question the acceptance of authority in these lines?

The United States and the World The Crucible was first produced while the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) was quizzing people about their Communist sympathies. What connection do you see between that investigation and Mr. Hale's line of questioning? 2

Vocabulary

covet (kuv´ it) v. to desire, especially to an excessive degree, something belonging to another

Listening and Reading Practice

Debate Have students consider the larger philosophical issues at stake in the play. Discuss with students whether they side with Proctor and individual conscience or with Hale and authority. Divide students into teams. Assign each team a position to argue: pro-individual conscience or pro-authority. Have students do research to support their team's position. Encourage students to use historical and current topics to justify their position. Then have each side present its arguments and counterarguments.

thy father and mother. Thou shalt not bear false witness. [He is stuck. He counts back on his fingers, knowing one is missing.] Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image.

HALE. You have said that twice, sir.

PROCTOR. [Lost.] Aye. [He is flailing for it.]

ELIZABETH. [Delicately.] Adultery, John.

PROCTOR. [As though a secret arrow had pained his heart.] Aye. [Trying to grin it away—to HALE.] You see, sir, between the two of us we do know them all. [HALE only looks at PROCTOR, deep in his attempt to define this man. PROCTOR grows more uneasy.] I think it be a small fault.

HALE. Theology, sir, is a fortress; no crack in a fortress may be accounted small. [He rises; he seems worried now. He paces a little, in deep thought.]

PROCTOR. There be no love for Satan in this house, Mister.

HALE. I pray it, I pray it dearly. [He looks to both of them, an attempt at a smile on his face, but his misgivings are clear.] Well, then—I'll bid you good night.

ELIZABETH. [Unable to restrain herself.] Mr. Hale. [He turns.] I do think you are suspecting me somewhat? Are you not?

HALE. [Obviously disturbed—and evasive.] Goody Proctor, I do not judge you. My duty is to add what I may to the godly wisdom of the court. I pray you both good health and good fortune. [To JOHN.] Good night, sir. [He starts out.]

ELIZABETH. [With a note of desperation.] I think you must tell him, John.

HALE. What's that?

ELIZABETH. [Restraining a call.] Will you tell him?

[Slight pause. HALE looks questioningly at JOHN.]

PROCTOR. [With difficulty.] I—I have no witness and cannot prove it, except my word be taken. But I know the children's sickness had naught to do with witchcraft.

HALE. [Stopped, struck.] Naught to do—?

PROCTOR. Mr. Parris discovered them sportin' in the woods. They were startled and took sick.

[Pause.]

HALE. Who told you this?

PROCTOR. [Hesitates, then.] Abigail Williams.

HALE. Abigail!

PROCTOR. Aye.

HALE. [His eyes wide.] Abigail Williams told you it had naught to do with witchcraft!

PROCTOR. She told me the day you came, sir.

HALE. [Suspiciously.] Why—why did you keep this?

PROCTOR. I never knew until tonight that the world is gone daft[11] with this nonsense.

HALE. Nonsense! Mister, I have myself examined Tituba, Sarah Good, and numerous others that have confessed to dealing with the Devil. They have confessed it.

PROCTOR. And why not, if they must hang for denyin' it? There are them that will swear to anything before they'll hang; have you never thought of that?

HALE. I have. I—I have indeed. [It is his own suspicion, but he resists it. He glances at ELIZABETH, then at JOHN.] And you—would you testify to this in court?

PROCTOR. I—had not reckoned with goin' into court. But if I must I will. ☆

HALE. Do you falter here?

PROCTOR. I falter nothing, but I may wonder if my story will be credited in such a court. I do wonder on it, when such a steady-minded minister as you will suspicion such a woman that never lied, and cannot, and the world knows she cannot! I may falter somewhat, Mister; I am no fool.

---

[11] Daft means "without sense or reason," "crazy," or "silly."

3 Stage Directions What is the significance of this stage direction?

Stage Directions Why do you think that Miller included a pause here? 4

The United States and the World What does Proctor mean by "such a court," and why would he hesitate to tell the truth? 5

Teach

Literary Element 3

Stage Directions

Answer: Adultery is the commandment that Proctor has broken. He may have blocked it from his mind because of its painful association, which for him is an awareness of his sin.

Literary Element 4

Stage Directions

Answer: The suggestion that Abigail may be lying comes as a complete shock to Hale. His awareness of this possibility takes hold during a dramatic silence.

Big Idea 5

The United States and the World

Answer: Proctor realizes that reason and justice have deserted the proceedings in Salem. He fears that the truth may only incriminate him. The parallel with the McCarthy hearings would have been obvious to Miller's audiences in the 1950s.

Writer's Technique ☆

Dialogue Proctor's words reveal how difficult it is for him to make the accusation. Typically, he speaks in a blunt, straightforward manner. Here, he fumbles before saying that Abigail is lying.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain that an idol, or "graven image," is an object of worship. Clarify that "to idolize" is to be devoted to or to worship an idol. Ask students for examples of what or whom they or others idolize. Then have students explain "nor make unto thee any graven image."

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Reading scenes aloud will reinforce the impact of stage directions. Have pairs of students take turns reading assigned passages, first ignoring stage directions and then following them. Have students discuss the difference.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Historical Context Answer: Elizabeth looks for goodness in her own heart and therefore creates her own standards of behavior and faith. This gesture can be seen as a rebellion against male (religious) authority.

View the Art ★

Answer: The heads represent two individuals who, like Proctor and Hale, appear very different from each other. The mouth and facial expression indicate that the one listening (left) is not pleased with what the other is saying. Shahn's quote relates to this scene in the play because Arthur Miller is expressing something about the culture and beliefs of his time—e.g., McCarthyism and the fear of Communism—through literature.

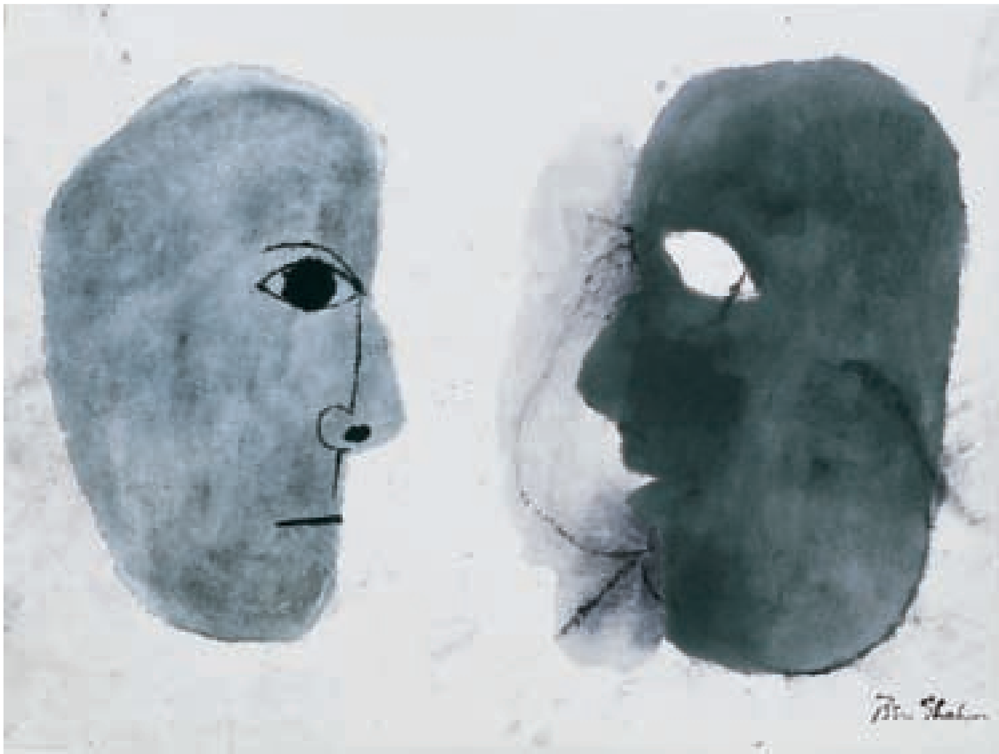
Ben Shahn (1898–1969) immigrated to the United States at the age of eight. Many of his works reflect his perceptions of the social injustices of his time.



Confrontation, 1964. Ben Shahn. Watercolor on rice paper mounted on artist's board, 24 x 32 in. ©Estate of Ben Shahn/Licensed by VAGA, NY/The Lane Collection. Courtesy Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, MA.

View the Art Ben Shahn believed that "if we are to have values, a spiritual life, a culture, these things must find their imagery and interpretation through the arts." How might this idea, and this painting, relate to the confrontation between John Proctor and Mr. Hale? ★

HALE. [Quietly—it has impressed him.] Proctor, let you open with me now, for I have a rumor that troubles me. It's said you hold no belief that there may even be witches in the world. Is that true, sir?

PROCTOR. [He knows this is critical, and is striving against his disgust with HALE and with himself for even answering.] I know not what I have said, I may have said it. I have wondered if there be witches in the world—although I cannot believe they come among us now.

HALE. Then you do not believe—

PROCTOR. I have no knowledge of it; the Bible speaks of witches, and I will not deny them.

HALE. And you, woman?

ELIZABETH. I—I cannot believe it.

HALE. [Shocked.] You cannot!

PROCTOR. Elizabeth, you bewilder him!

ELIZABETH. [To HALE.] I cannot think the Devil may own a woman's soul, Mr. Hale, when she keeps an upright way, as I have. I am a good woman, I know it; and if you believe I may do only good work in the world, and yet be secretly bound to Satan, then I must tell you, sir, I do not believe it.

HALE. But, woman, you do believe there are witches in—

ELIZABETH. If you think that I am one, then I say there are none.

Analyze Historical Content How might Elizabeth's words be seen as an early feminist statement? Explain. 1

Writing Practice

Extended Definition Tell students that the events that occurred in Salem at this time have been described as mass hysteria. Have students locate an appropriate definition of hysteria. Suggest that they start by listing the unfolding events that created or contributed to the hysteria in Salem. Then have students write an extended definition of the term hysteria, developing the term and explaining how the events in the play fit the definition of hysteria.

HALE. You surely do not fly against the Gospel, the Gospel—

PROCTOR. She believe in the Gospel, every word!

ELIZABETH. Question Abigail Williams about the Gospel, not myself!

[HALE stares at her.]

PROCTOR. She do not mean to doubt the Gospel, sir, you cannot think it. This be a Christian house, sir, a Christian house.

HALE. God keep you both; let the third child be quickly baptized, and go you without fail each Sunday in to Sabbath prayer; and keep a solemn, quiet way among you. I think—

[GILES COREY appears in doorway.]

GILES. John!

PROCTOR. Giles! What's the matter?

GILES. They take my wife.

[FRANCIS NURSE enters.]

GILES. And his Rebecca!

PROCTOR. [To FRANCIS.] Rebecca's in the jail!

FRANCIS. Aye, Cheever come and take her in his wagon. We've only now come from the jail, and they'll not even let us in to see them.

ELIZABETH. They've surely gone wild now, Mr. Hale!

FRANCIS. [Going to HALE.] Reverend Hale! Can you not speak to the Deputy Governor? I'm sure he mistakes these people—

HALE. Pray calm yourself, Mr. Nurse.

FRANCIS. My wife is the very brick and mortar of the church, Mr. Hale—[Indicating GILES.]—and Martha Corey, there cannot be a woman closer yet to God than Martha.

HALE. How is Rebecca charged, Mr. Nurse?

FRANCIS. [With a mocking, half-hearted laugh.] For murder, she's charged! [Mockingly quoting the warrant.] "For the marvelous and supernatural murder of Goody Putnam's babies." What am I to do, Mr. Hale?

HALE. [Turns from FRANCIS, deeply troubled, then.] Believe me, Mr. Nurse, if Rebecca Nurse be tainted,[12] then nothing's left to stop the whole green world from burning. Let you rest upon the justice of the court; the court will send her home, I know it.

FRANCIS. You cannot mean she will be tried in court!

HALE. [Pleading.] Nurse, though our hearts break, we cannot flinch; these are new times, sir. There is a misty plot afoot so subtle we should be criminal to cling to old respects and ancient friendships. I have seen too many frightful proofs in court—the Devil is alive in Salem, and we dare not quail to follow wherever the accusing finger points!

PROCTOR. [Angered.] How may such a woman murder children?

HALE. [In great pain.] Man, remember, until an hour before the Devil fell, God thought him beautiful in Heaven.[13]

GILES. I never said my wife were a witch, Mr. Hale; I only said she were reading books!

HALE. Mr. Corey, exactly what complaint were made on your wife?

GILES. That bloody mongrel Walcott charge her. Y'see, he buy a pig of my wife four or five year ago, and the pig died soon after. So he come dancin' in for his money back. So my Martha, she says to him, "Walcott, if you haven't the wit to feed a pig properly, you'll not live to own many," she says. Now he goes to court and claims that from that day to this he cannot keep a pig alive for more than four weeks because my Martha bewitch them with her books!

---

[12] Something tainted is spoiled, inferior, or corrupted.

[13] [before the Devil fell . . . Heaven] According to the Bible, the devil was heaven's highest angel before he was driven out because of his excessive pride.

2 Analyze Historical Content What do Francis's sarcastic words say about legal charges during Miller's time? Explain.

Stage Directions How do these words in the stage direction affect Hale's speech? 3

The United States and the World How is Hale's attitude here similar to that of Senator McCarthy in the 1950s? 4

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Historical Context Answer: Rebecca is accused of killing Goody Putnam's children, yet the charges refer to "marvelous and supernatural" forces. Francis's mockery of the charges echo the ridiculous nature of the charges during Miller's own time.

Literary Element 3

Stage Directions Answer: Hale's words are confident, but powerful doubts have arisen in his mind. He is trying to convince himself as well as Francis that the court will exonerate Francis's wife.

Big Idea 4

The United States and the World Answer: Hale, like Senator McCarthy, suggests that people may have to betray their principles and their friends in the interests of purging the community of what they perceive to be evil. In both cases, personal loyalty is construed as a crime.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain that the term "brick and mortar" on this page is an example of figurative language. Tell students that sturdy structures are built with bricks; mortar is the cement mixture that holds bricks in place. Ask: What does Francis Nurse mean when he says that his wife is the "very brick and mortar of the church"? (She represents the sturdy material of which Salem's religious community is built, and her virtues hold the community together.)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Stage Directions Answer: Students who recall that Cheever had taken Rebecca Nurse away should anticipate that he has come to arrest Elizabeth.

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Historical Context Answer: Cheever and other townspeople are letting their authority “go to their heads.” They do not maintain a calm balance in their legal authority, but instead allow themselves to be caught up in the excitement of power for its own sake.

Big Idea 3

The United States and the World Answer: Students should understand that Miller has no respect for irrational authority. He is alluding here, not only to the McCarthy “witch hunters,” but also to the Nazi war criminals, many of whom used the same excuse at the Nuremburg trials.

[Enter EZEKIEL CHEEVER. A shocked silence.]

CHEEVER. Good evening to you, Proctor.

PROCTOR. Why, Mr. Cheever. Good evening.

CHEEVER. Good evening, all. Good evening, Mr. Hale.

PROCTOR. I hope you come not on business of the court.

CHEEVER. I do, Proctor, aye. I am clerk of the court now, y’know.

[Enter MARSHAL HERRICK, a man in his early thirties, who is somewhat shamefaced at the moment.]

GILES. It’s a pity, Ezekiel, that an honest tailor might have gone to Heaven must burn in Hell. You’ll burn for this, do you know it?

CHEEVER. You know yourself I must do as I’m told. You surely know that, Giles. And I’d as lief[14] you’d not be sending me to Hell. I like not the sound of it, I tell you; I like not the sound of it. [He fears PROCTOR, but starts to reach inside his coat.] Now believe me, Proctor, how heavy be the law, all its tonnage I do carry on my back tonight. [He takes out a warrant.] I have a warrant for your wife.

PROCTOR. [To HALE.] You said she were not charged!

HALE. I know nothin’ of it. [To CHEEVER.] When were she charged?

CHEEVER. I am given sixteen warrant tonight, sir, and she is one.

PROCTOR. Who charged her?

CHEEVER. Why, Abigail Williams charge her.

PROCTOR. On what proof, what proof?

CHEEVER. [Looking about the room.] Mr. Proctor, I have little time. The court bid me search your house, but I like not to search a house. So will you hand me any poppets that your wife may keep here?

PROCTOR. Poppets?

ELIZABETH. I never kept no poppets, not since I were a girl.

CHEEVER. [Embarrassed, glancing toward the mantel where sits MARY WARREN’S poppet.] I spy a poppet, Goody Proctor.

ELIZABETH. Oh! [Going for it.] Why, this is Mary’s.

CHEEVER. [Shyly.] Would you please to give it to me?

ELIZABETH. [Handing it to him, asks HALE.] Has the court discovered a text in poppets now?

CHEEVER. [Carefully holding the poppet.] Do you keep any others in this house?

PROCTOR. No, nor this one either till tonight. What signifies a poppet?

CHEEVER. Why, a poppet—[He gingerly turns the poppet over.]—a poppet may signify—Now, woman, will you please to come with me?

PROCTOR. She will not! [To ELIZABETH.] Fetch Mary here.

CHEEVER. [Ineptly reaching toward ELIZABETH.] No, no, I am forbid to leave her from my sight.

PROCTOR. [Pushing his arm away.] You’ll leave her out of sight and out of mind, Mister. Fetch Mary, Elizabeth. [ELIZABETH goes upstairs.]

HALE. What signifies a poppet, Mr. Cheever?

CHEEVER. [Turning the poppet over in his hands.] Why, they say it may signify that she—[He has lifted the poppet’s skirt, and his eyes widen in astonished fear.] Why, this, this—

PROCTOR. [Reaching for the poppet.] What’s there?

---

[14] As lief (lēv) means “prefer that.”

1 Stage Directions Why is there a “shocked silence” when Ezekiel enters?

2 Analyze Historical Content How might a sudden gain in power or authority affect a common person? Explain.

3 The United States and the World Cheever excuses himself by explaining that he is only carrying out orders. What other historical events is Miller reminding his audience of here? Explain.

Vocabulary

ineptly (i nept´ lē) adv. incompetently; awkwardly; clumsily

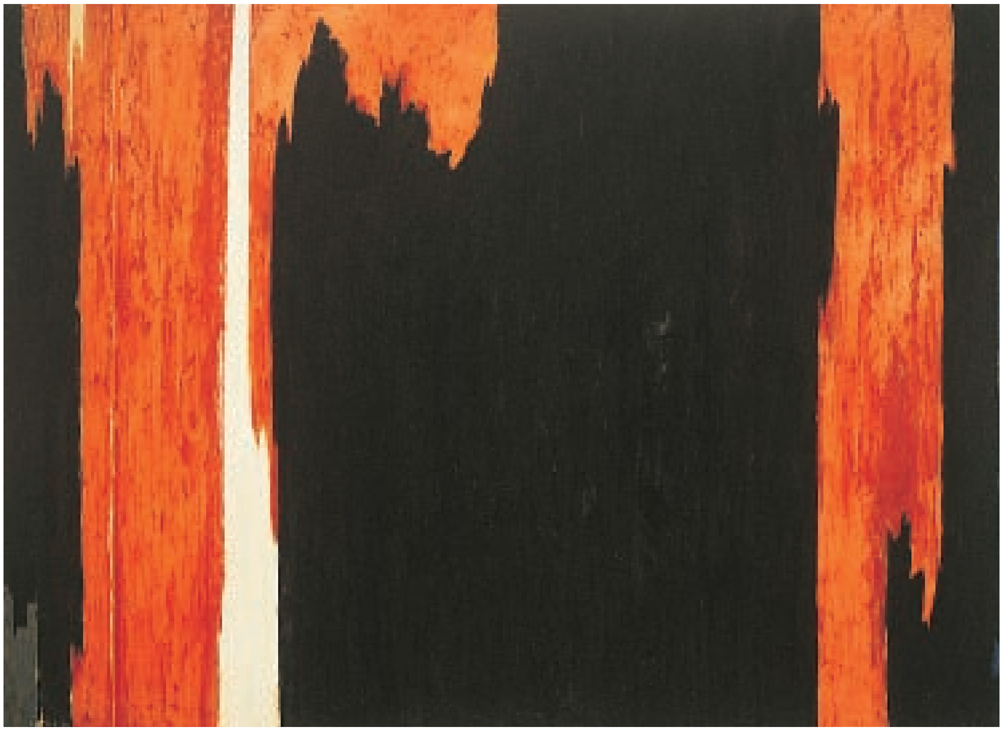
Research Practice

Salem Witch Trials Students may not be familiar with the 1692 Salem witch trials during which 19 convicted “witches” were hanged, and many others were imprisoned. Suggest they learn more about the events and people surrounding the actual Salem trials. Have students use library and Internet resources to research the accusations as well as the underlying reasons for these accusations from more than one source. Have students collaborate on presenting a summary of their findings to the class..



1954, 1954. Clyfford Still. Oil on canvas, 9 ft. 5½ in. x 13 ft. Albright-Knox Art Gallery, Buffalo, NY. Gift of Seymour H. Knox.

View the Art Fearing he might influence the viewer's experience, Clyfford Still identified many of his paintings only by the year created—if at all. In your opinion, does this painting express the mood of Salem's community in Act Two? Support your answer with details from the text and the painting. ★

CHEEVER. Why—[He draws out a long needle from the poppet.]—it is a needle! Herrick, Herrick, it is a needle!

[HERRICK comes toward him.]

PROCTOR. [Angrily, bewildered.] And what signifies a needle!

CHEEVER. [His hands shaking.] Why, this go hard with her, Proctor, this—I had my doubts, Proctor, I had my doubts, but here's calamity. [To HALE, showing the needle.] You see it, sir, it is a needle!

HALE. Why? What meanin' has it?

CHEEVER. [Wide-eyed, trembling.] The girl, the Williams girl, Abigail Williams, sir. She sat to dinner in Reverend Parris's house tonight, and without word nor warnin' she falls to the floor. Like a struck beast, he says, and screamed a scream that a bull would weep to hear. And he goes to save her, and, stuck two inches in the flesh of her belly, he draw a needle out. And demandin' of her how she come to be so stabbed, she—[To PROCTOR now.]—testify it were your wife's familiar spirit pushed it in. ☆

PROCTOR. Why, she done it herself! [To HALE.] I hope you're not takin' this for proof, Mister!

[HALE, struck by the proof, is silent.]

CHEEVER. 'Tis hard proof! [To HALE.] I find here a poppet Goody Proctor keeps. I have found it,

Stage Directions What does this stage direction suggest about Hale? 4

Teach

Literary Element 4

Stage Directions Answer: Hale is gullible and unwilling to question the credibility of the "innocent" young girls. He accepts Abigail's dubious "proof" without question.

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may suggest that the use of the color orange, together with the powerful jagged lines, represents the anger and passion in the people of Salem. The predominant black in the center of the painting might suggest the dark and foreboding atmosphere at the core of the community.

Clyfford Still (1904–1980) experimented with a number of painting styles before he became a pioneer of abstract expressionism. This painting reflects a period when Still applied thick paints to create powerful, jagged forms. Later in his career, his paintings became softer and less aggressive.

Cultural History ☆

Spirit Dolls The use of "spirit dolls" and needles to implement curses or injuries on others is a practice found in folk religions, perhaps with origins in Haitian voodoo. Point out that Cheever's reference to "your wife's familiar spirit" alludes to the belief that witches could control external agents, or "familiars," to cause harm or injury to others.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Be sure students understand the sequence of events surrounding the "poppet." Mary Warren made it at the court, inserted a needle into it, and then brought it home to present to Elizabeth Proctor as a "gift." Now it is revealed that Abigail was stabbed in her belly by a needle and is charging Elizabeth with attacking her. Ask: Why is it significant that Abigail sat next to Mary as Mary made the poppet? (Abigail probably wanted to entrap Elizabeth by means of the poppet and the needle.)

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: She will be asked to prove that she did not stick the needle into Abigail or that she is not a witch. The burden of proof should rest with Abigail, not Elizabeth.

Literary Element 2

Dialogue Ask students to identify differences between Hale's exchange with Mary and Proctor's exchange with her. (Proctor asks open-ended questions that allow spontaneous, unguided response. Hale asks leading questions that suggest the answers he wants to hear.)

View the Art ★

Answer: The curved lines suggest continuous and powerful circular movement, not unlike a strong wind. The absence of any warm colors reveals a coldness and severity that can be compared to Proctor's words.

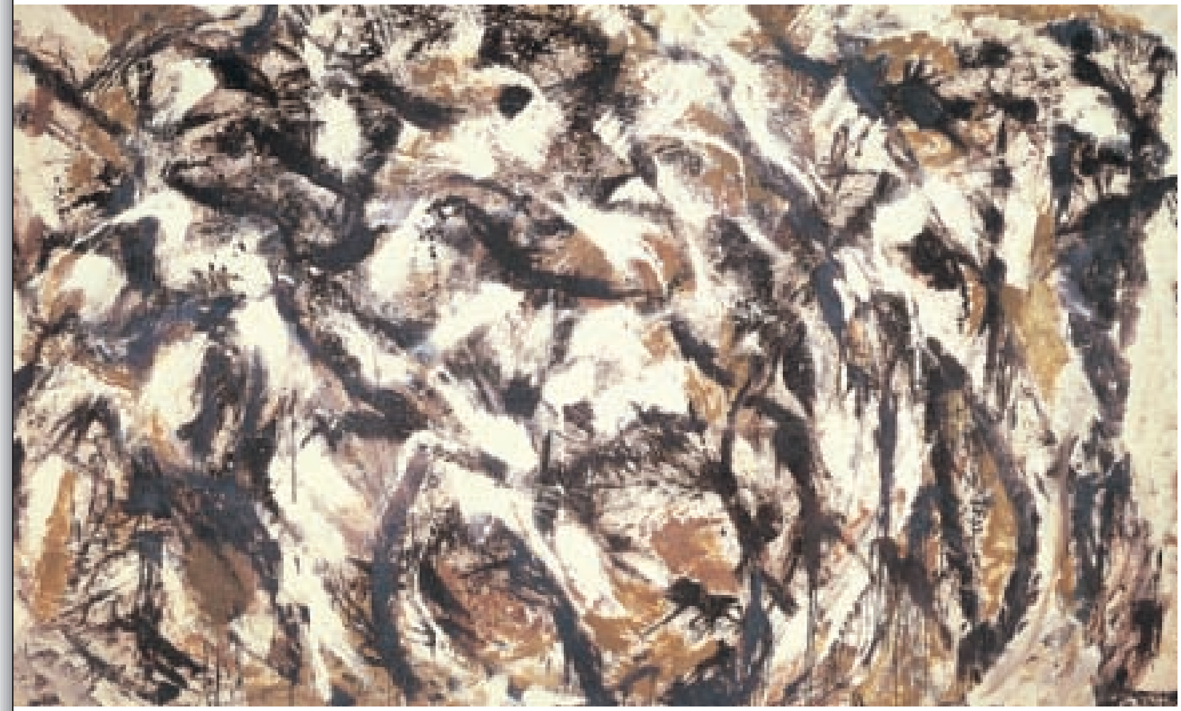
Lee Krasner (1911–1984), like her husband Jackson Pollock, was a member of the abstract expressionist movement. However, critics did not appreciate her talents until after Pollock's death in 1956. Her work has grown in popularity over the years and today her paintings are considered excellent examples of abstract art.



Polar Stampede, 1960. Lee Krasner. Oil on cotton duck, $93\frac{5}{8}$ x $159\frac{3}{4}$ in. Courtesy of The Robert Miller Gallery, NY/©2000 Pollock-Krasner Foundation/Artists Rights Society (ARS), NY.

View the Art Polar Stampede is part of Lee Krasner's Night Journeys series, an insomniac's expression of grief and anger painted after her husband's death. In what ways might this work echo John Proctor's words, "And the wind, God's icy wind, will blow!"? ★

sir. And in the belly of the poppet a needle's stuck. I tell you true, Proctor, I never warranted to see such proof of Hell, and I bid you obstruct me not, for I—

[Enter ELIZABETH with MARY WARREN. PROCTOR, seeing MARY WARREN, draws her by the arm to HALE.]

PROCTOR. Here now! Mary, how did this poppet come into my house?

MARY WARREN. [Frightened for herself, her voice very small.] What poppet's that, sir?

PROCTOR. [Impatiently, pointing at the doll in CHEEVER'S hand.] This poppet, this poppet.

MARY WARREN. [Evasively, looking at it.] Why, I—I think it is mine.

PROCTOR. It is your poppet, is it not?

MARY WARREN. [Not understanding the direction of this.] It—is, sir.

PROCTOR. And how did it come into this house?

MARY WARREN. [Glancing about at the avid faces.] Why—I made it in the court, sir, and—give it to Goody Proctor tonight.

PROCTOR. [To HALE.] Now, sir—do you have it? 2

HALE. Mary Warren, a needle have been found inside this poppet.

MARY WARREN. [Bewildered.] Why, I meant no harm by it, sir.

1 The United States and the World Making the accused person prove a negative statement to establish innocence is typical of a miscarriage of justice. What is Elizabeth going to be asked to prove here?

Assessment Practice

Multiple Choice Have students answer the questions. Then review why each is correct or incorrect.

1. Which is an opinion? (D)
   - A. Abigail accused Elizabeth's spirit of stabbing her with a pin.
   - B. Parris found a needle in Abigail.
   - C. Cheever found a poppet stuck with a needle at the Proctors' home.
   - D. Abigail put the needle in the poppet.

2. Which best characterizes Mary? (B)
   - A. stubborn
   - B. weak
   - C. hysterical
   - D. upright

PROCTOR. [Quickly.] You stuck that needle in yourself?

MARY WARREN. I—I believe I did, sir, I—

PROCTOR. [To HALE.] What say you now?

2 HALE. [Watching MARY WARREN closely.] Child, you are certain this be your natural memory? May it be, perhaps, that someone conjures you even now to say this?

MARY WARREN. Conjures me? Why, no, sir, I am entirely myself, I think. Let you ask Susanna Walcott—she saw me sewin' it in court. [Or better still.] Ask Abby, Abby sat beside me when I made it.

PROCTOR. [To HALE, of CHEEVER.] Bid him begone. Your mind is surely settled now. Bid him out, Mr. Hale.

ELIZABETH. What signifies a needle?

HALE. Mary—you charge a cold and cruel murder on Abigail.

MARY WARREN. Murder! I charge no—

HALE. Abigail were stabbed tonight; a needle were found stuck into her belly—

ELIZABETH. And she charges me?

HALE. Aye.

ELIZABETH. [Her breath knocked out.] Why—! The girl is murder! She must be ripped out of the world!

CHEEVER. [Pointing at ELIZABETH.] You've heard that, sir! Ripped out of the world! Herrick, you heard it!

PROCTOR. [Suddenly snatching the warrant out of CHEEVER'S hands.] Out with you.

CHEEVER. Proctor, you dare not touch the warrant.

PROCTOR. [Ripping the warrant.] Out with you!

CHEEVER. You've ripped the Deputy Governor's warrant, man!

PROCTOR. Damn the Deputy Governor! Out of my house!

HALE. Now, Proctor, Proctor!

PROCTOR. Get y'gone with them! You are a broken minister.

HALE. Proctor, if she is innocent, the court—

PROCTOR. If she is innocent! Why do you never wonder if Parris be innocent, or Abigail? Is the accuser always holy now? Were they born this morning as clean as God's fingers? I'll tell you what's walking Salem—vengeance is walking Salem. We are what we always were in Salem, but now the little crazy children are jangling the keys of the kingdom, and common vengeance writes the law! This warrant's vengeance! I'll not give my wife to vengeance!

ELIZABETH. I'll go, John—

PROCTOR. You will not go!

HERRICK. I have nine men outside. You cannot keep her. The law binds me, John, I cannot budge.

PROCTOR. [To HALE, ready to break him.] Will you see her taken?

HALE. Proctor, the court is just—

PROCTOR. Pontius Pilate! God will not let you wash your hands of this![15]

ELIZABETH. John—I think I must go with them. [He cannot bear to look at her.] Mary, there is bread enough for the morning; you will bake, in the afternoon. Help Mr. Proctor as you were his daughter—you owe me that, and much more. [She is fighting her weeping. To PROCTOR.] When the children wake, speak nothing of witchcraft—it will frighten them. [She cannot go on.]

PROCTOR. I will bring you home. I will bring you soon.

ELIZABETH. Oh, John, bring me soon!

---

[15] [Pontius Pilate . . . this!] According to the Christian Bible, the Roman official Pontius Pilate consented to the crucifixion of Jesus despite the lack of formal charges or evidence. Pilate then washed his hands and declared himself innocent of shedding Jesus' blood.

3 Stage Directions What does this stage direction mean?

Analyze Historical Content How does Miller use these lines to comment on the status of the 1950s Communist trails? 4

Teach

Literary Element 3

Stage Directions Answer: Abigail's outrageous accusation strikes Elizabeth like a blow to the stomach. She is temporarily rendered speechless.

Reading Strategy 4

Analyze Historical Context Answer: Proctor draws attention to the inequity of always believing the accuser. Miller highlights the 1950s failure to uphold the "innocent until proven guilty" concept.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Students may have noticed examples of figurative expressions in John Proctor's dialogue earlier in this act—for example, when he says to Elizabeth, "an everlasting funeral marches round your heart" and "Oh, Elizabeth, your charity would freeze beer."

Have students identify and explain examples of his figurative language on this page. (simile: "as clean as God's fingers"; metaphor: "these little crazy children are jangling the keys to the kingdom"; personification: "vengeance is walking Salem")

Teach

Literary Element 1

Stage Directions Answer: Although Elizabeth displays courage in denying her fear, the stage directions indicate that she fears she will never return to her home.

Literary Element 2

Stage Directions Answer: Hale suggests that a wrathful God is punishing Salem for some "abomination" that has occurred there. Proctor fears that his illicit affair with Abigail may be the "cause" that Hale is looking for.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Ask students to clarify the meaning of reached in this context: "affected by."

PROCTOR. I will fall like an ocean on that court! Fear nothing, Elizabeth.

ELIZABETH. [With great fear.] I will fear nothing. [She looks about the room, as though to fix it in her mind.] Tell the children I have gone to visit someone sick.

[She walks out the door, HERRICK and CHEEVER behind her. For a moment, PROCTOR watches from the doorway. The clank of chain is heard.]

PROCTOR. Herrick! Herrick, don't chain her! [He rushes out the door. From outside.] Damn you, man, you will not chain her! Off with them! I'll not have it! I will not have her chained!

[There are other men's voices against his. HALE, in a fever of guilt and uncertainty, turns from the door to avoid the sight; MARY WARREN bursts into tears and sits weeping. GILES COREY calls to HALE.]

GILES. And yet silent, minister? It is fraud, you know it is fraud! What keeps you, man?

[PROCTOR is half braced, half pushed into the room by two deputies and HERRICK.]

PROCTOR. I'll pay you, Herrick, I will surely pay you!

HERRICK. [Panting.] In God's name, John, I cannot help myself. I must chain them all. Now let you keep inside this house till I am gone! [He goes out with his deputies.]

[PROCTOR stands there, gulping air. Horses and a wagon creaking are heard.]

HALE. [In great uncertainty.] Mr. Proctor—

PROCTOR. Out of my sight!

HALE. Charity, Proctor, charity. What I have heard in her favor, I will not fear to testify in court. God help me, I cannot judge her guilty or innocent—I know not. Only this consider: the world goes mad, and it profit nothing you should lay the cause to the vengeance of a little girl.

PROCTOR. You are a coward! Though you be ordained in God's own tears, you are a coward now!

HALE. Proctor, I cannot think God be provoked so grandly by such a petty cause. The jails are packed—our greatest judges sit in Salem now—and hangin's promised. Man, we must look to cause proportionate. Were there murder done, perhaps, and never brought to light? Abomination? Some secret blasphemy[16] that stinks to Heaven? Think on cause, man, and let you help me to discover it. For there's your way, believe it, there is your only way, when such confusion strikes upon the world. [He goes to GILES and FRANCIS.] Let you counsel among yourselves; think on your village and what may have drawn from heaven such thundering wrath upon you all. I shall pray God open up our eyes.

[HALE goes out.]

FRANCIS. [Struck by HALE'S mood.] I never heard no murder done in Salem.

PROCTOR. [He has been reached by HALE'S words.] Leave me, Francis, leave me.

GILES. [Shaken.] John—tell me, are we lost?

PROCTOR. Go home now, Giles. We'll speak on it tomorrow.

GILES. Let you think on it. We'll come early, eh?

PROCTOR. Aye. Go now, Giles.

GILES. Good night, then.

[GILES COREY goes out. After a moment.]

MARY WARREN. [In a fearful squeak of a voice.] Mr. Proctor, very likely they'll let her come home once they're given proper evidence.

PROCTOR. You're coming to the court with me, Mary. You will tell it in the court.

MARY WARREN. I cannot charge murder on Abigail.

PROCTOR. [Moving menacingly toward her.] You will tell the court how that poppet come here and who stuck the needle in.

---

[16] Blasphemy is an act or expression showing contempt for God or anything sacred.

1 Stage Directions How do the stage directions contradict Elizabeth's statement?

2 Stage Directions Why is Proctor "reached" by Hale's words?

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Capitalization Review these rules:

Capitalize

- the first word of a sentence
- the first word of a direct quotation (The man said, "Hello.")
- a title attached to a name (Reverend Parris)
- parents names' used as names (Where is Dad, where is my dad)
- names of organizations or government bodies (Supreme Court, she went to court)

Tell students to write a review of Act Two, capitalizing correctly. Have partners exchange papers and proofread.

Man's Heart,
John Ritter.

MARY WARREN. She'll kill me for sayin' that! [PROCTOR continues toward her.] Abby'll charge lechery[17] on you, Mr. Proctor!

PROCTOR. [Halting.] She's told you!

MARY WARREN. I have known it, sir. She'll ruin you with it, I know she will.

3 PROCTOR. [Hesitating, and with deep hatred of himself.] Good. Then her saintliness is done with. [MARY backs from him.] We will slide together into our pit; you will tell the court what you know.

MARY WARREN. [In terror.] I cannot, they'll turn on me—

[PROCTOR strides and catches her, and she is repeating, "I cannot, I cannot!"]

PROCTOR. My wife will never die for me! I will bring your guts into your mouth but that goodness will not die for me!

MARY WARREN. [Struggling to escape him.] I cannot do it, I cannot!

4 PROCTOR. [Grasping her by the throat as though he would strangle her.] Make your peace with it! Now Hell and Heaven grapple on our backs, and all our old pretense is ripped away—make your peace! [He throws her to the floor, where she sobs, "I cannot, I cannot . . ." And now, half to himself, staring, and turning to the open door.] Peace. It is a providence, and no great change; we are only what we always were, but naked now. [He walks as though toward a great horror, facing the open sky.] Aye, naked! And the wind, God's icy wind, will blow!

[And she is over and over again sobbing, "I cannot, I cannot, I cannot . . ."]

THE CURTAIN FALLS

3 Analyze Historical Content How do these words link Proctor's private and public guilt? Explain.

---

[17] Lechery means "excessive indulgence of sexual desire." In Salem, this was sinful and, therefore, illegal.

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Analyze Historical Context

Answer: He has finally rejected the court's authority and accepts a higher morality and judgment. He knows his soul will suffer because of his infidelity, and he no longer cares about his standing in the community.

Reading Strategy 4

Draw Conclusions About Characters Discuss with students Proctor's comments at the end of Act Two. Ask: How might Proctor defend his violent behavior towards Mary? (He believes his wife's life is in danger.)

Ask: Why might this be a weak defense? (He didn't speak up about Abigail, so he has no right to take it out on Mary.)

Ask: What does Proctor mean when he says, "We are only what we always were, but naked now"? (People are either virtuous or they are not, but often they hide their true natures. Proctor intends to strip away all the pretense in Salem and reveal the naked truth about matters.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate Have small groups of students review Act Two, summarizing the events and clarifying what has happened with each character. Encourage group members to tell what they have learned about each character. Have group members help each other clarify anything that remains unclear at this point.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Have students make a character web for Reverend Hale at the end of each act, noting changes in his attitude and behavior. They can use their notes to draw conclusions about his character.

To check students' understanding of the act, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 237–238.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) His adultery would be revealed. (b) His moral superiority is a façade.
3. (a) The girls' accusations (b) Mary Warren, Hale, and Cheever think this evidence is valid; John and Elizabeth, Giles Corey, and Francis Nurse do not. (c) Those easily led or with something to gain, accept; those who remain rational do not.
4. (a) Looking into accusations against Elizabeth (b) Uncertain; believes Proctors are innocent, but the court is doing God's work
5. (a) Abigail and her friends are manipulating public and court opinion for revenge. (b) Students should support their opinions.
6. (a) Church attendance and if they know the Commandments (b) Irrelevant and narrow-minded
7. (a) John knows his opinions may get his family in trouble. Elizabeth bravely tells the truth. (b) John because he is cautious; Elizabeth because she is honest
8. (a) Fear negatively affects behavior. (b) Students should give examples of how fear affects decisions today.

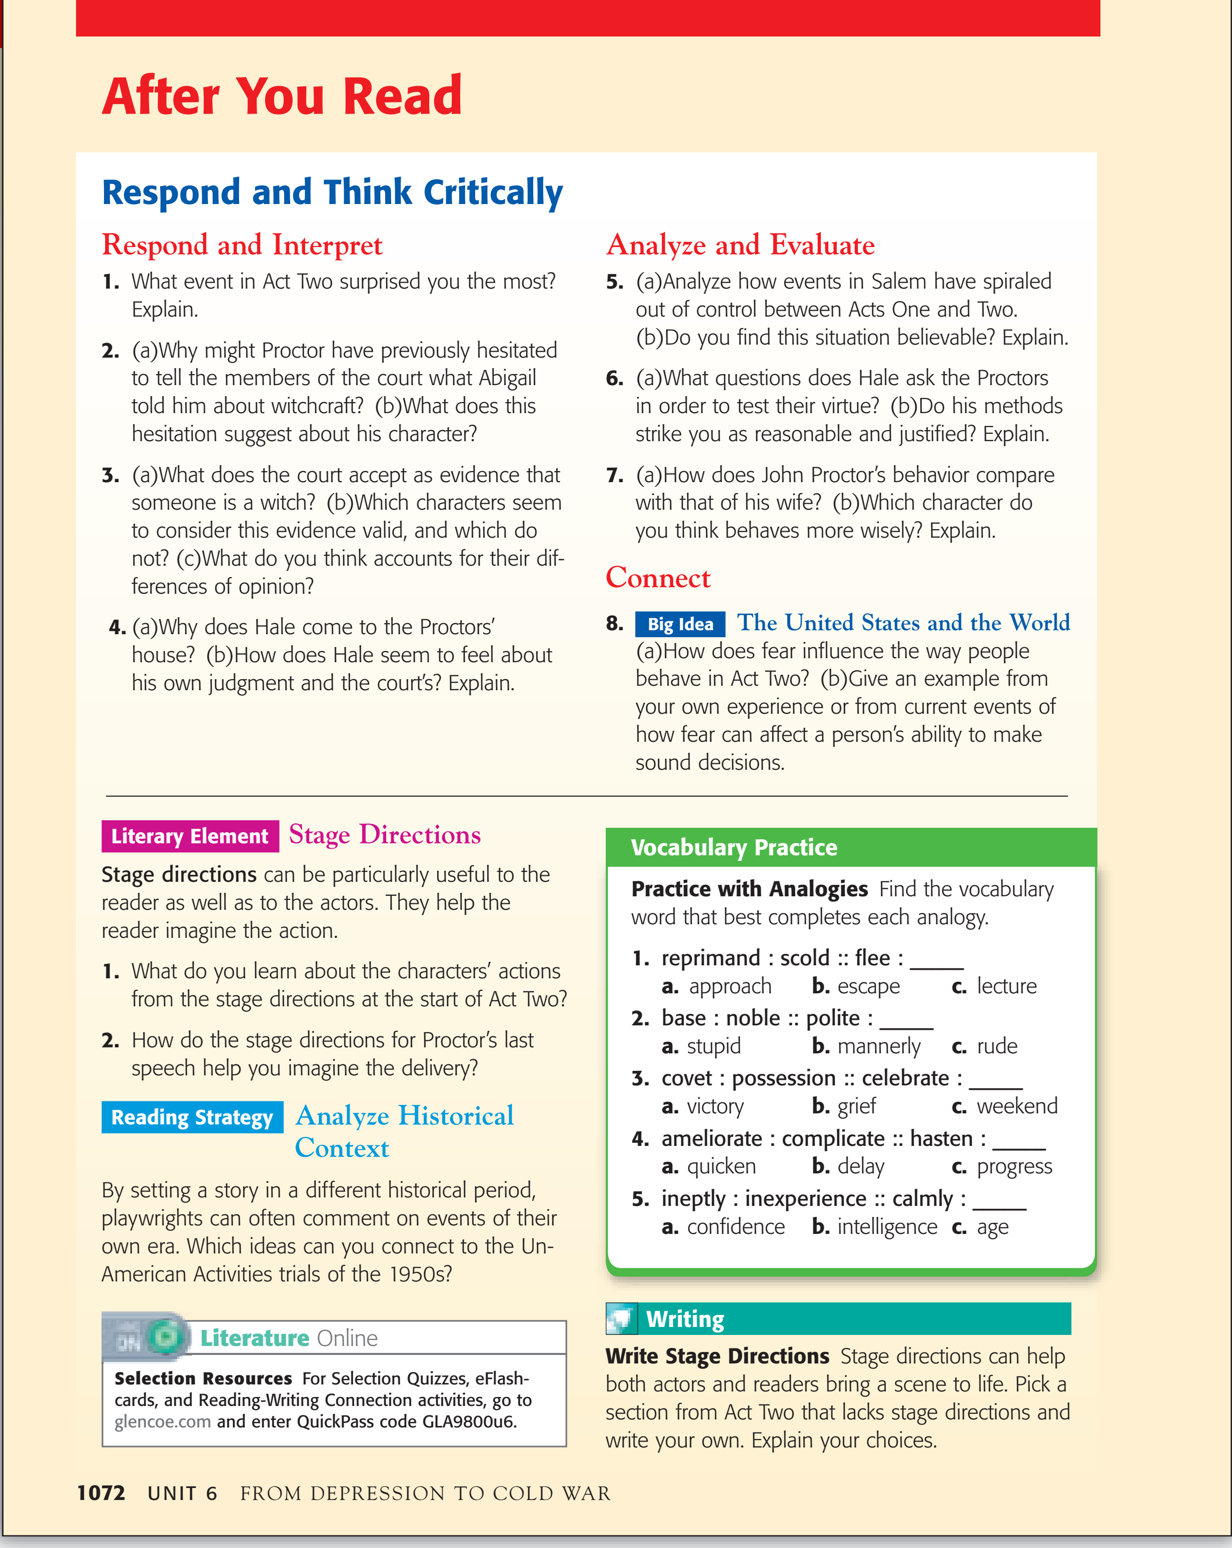
Literary Element

1. John's actions betray diffidence toward Elizabeth.
2. They show violent feelings.

Progress Check

Can students analyze stage directions?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 232.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What event in Act Two surprised you the most? Explain.
2. (a)Why might Proctor have previously hesitated to tell the members of the court what Abigail told him about witchcraft? (b)What does this hesitation suggest about his character?
3. (a)What does the court accept as evidence that someone is a witch? (b)Which characters seem to consider this evidence valid, and which do not? (c)What do you think accounts for their differences of opinion?
4. (a)Why does Hale come to the Proctors' house? (b)How does Hale seem to feel about his own judgment and the court's? Explain.

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)Analyze how events in Salem have spiraled out of control between Acts One and Two. (b)Do you find this situation believable? Explain.
6. (a)What questions does Hale ask the Proctors in order to test their virtue? (b)Do his methods strike you as reasonable and justified? Explain.
7. (a)How does John Proctor's behavior compare with that of his wife? (b)Which character do you think behaves more wisely? Explain.

Connect

8. Big Idea The United States and the World (a)How does fear influence the way people behave in Act Two? (b)Give an example from your own experience or from current events of how fear can affect a person's ability to make sound decisions.

Literary Element Stage Directions

Stage directions can be particularly useful to the reader as well as to the actors. They help the reader imagine the action.

1. What do you learn about the characters' actions from the stage directions at the start of Act Two?
2. How do the stage directions for Proctor's last speech help you imagine the delivery?

Reading Strategy Analyze Historical Context

By setting a story in a different historical period, playwrights can often comment on events of their own era. Which ideas can you connect to the Un-American Activities trials of the 1950s?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Analogies Find the vocabulary word that best completes each analogy.

1. reprimand : scold :: flee : _____
   a. approach b. escape c. lecture
2. base : noble :: polite : _____
   a. stupid b. mannerly c. rude
3. covet : possession :: celebrate : _____
   a. victory b. grief c. weekend
4. ameliorate : complicate :: hasten : _____
   a. quicken b. delay c. progress
5. ineptly : inexperience :: calmly : _____
   a. confidence b. intelligence c. age

Writing

Write Stage Directions Stage directions can help both actors and readers bring a scene to life. Pick a section from Act Two that lacks stage directions and write your own. Explain your choices.

1072 UNIT 6 FROM DEPRESSION TO COLD WAR

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' stage directions:

- Are the stage directions written for a section of the act that does not include stage directions?
- Do the stage directions maintain Miller's characterization?

Reading Strategy

Characters (like Hale) who have gained sudden power might be similar to Communist investigators, and those who have been accused (like Elizabeth) might be similar to those who were on trial in the 1950s.

Vocabulary

1. b 2. c 3. a 4. b 5. a

Before You Read

The Crucible, Act Three

Build Background

The Crucible deals with the tragic combination of mass hysteria and social and political repression. "I can almost tell what the political situation in a country is when the play is suddenly a hit there," Miller wrote, "—it is either a warning of tyranny on the way or a reminder of tyranny just past."

Set Purposes for Reading

Literary Element Plot

Plot refers to the sequence of events in a short story, novel, or drama. Most plots develop around a conflict, or struggle between opposing forces. An external conflict is a struggle between a character and an outside force, such as another character, society, nature, or fate. An internal conflict takes place within a character who struggles with opposing feelings.

The plot begins with exposition, or introduction to characters, setting, and situation. The rising action adds complications to the conflict, leading to the climax, or point of highest emotional pitch. Falling action is the logical result of the climax, and the denouement, or resolution, presents the final outcome.

As you read, ask yourself, How does Miller intensify the conflicts he introduced in the previous two acts?

Reading Strategy Evaluate Argument

Argument depends on logic, reasoning, and evidence. The authorities and individual characters in The Crucible often cite reasons for acting and thinking as they do. It is up to the reader to form an opinion about—or evaluate—these arguments.

Tip: Take Notes As you read, use a chart similar to the one below to record faulty logic, questionable arguments, or flawed evidence. Write your evaluations in the right-hand column.

Example	Evaluation
p. 1075 Giles thinks his wife is arrested for reading books.	Probably true. Puritans were suspicious of all reading material except the Bible.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1073–1095

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing plot.

Reading: Evaluating argument.

Writing: Writing a summary.

Vocabulary

vile (vīl) adj. evil; foul; repulsive; degrading; p. 1077 A vile crime must be punished.

immaculate (i mak′ yə lit) adj. unblemished; flawless; pure; p. 1083 Our tenants left the house in immaculate condition.

perjury (pər′ jə rē) n. the act of swearing under oath to the truth of something that one knows to be untrue; p. 1084 The witness committed perjury during the trial.

contemplation (kon′ təm plā′ shən) n. the act of thinking about something long and seriously; p. 1086 Our cabin in the woods is great for contemplation.

unperturbed (un pər turbd′) adj. undisturbed; calm; p. 1092 Unperturbed by his seemingly stressful day, John slept soundly.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary, Act Three

Proctor, Nurse, and Corey try to win their wives' release. Mary Warren tells Judge Danforth the accusations are false. Realizing that Danforth is being swayed, Abigail accuses Mary. Proctor reveals his affair with Abigail. Elizabeth Proctor lies to protect John. Mary accuses Proctor of bewitching her. Proctor denounces Danforth and the court and is arrested for witchcraft.

Vocabulary

Prefixes Remind students that knowing the meaning of prefixes can help them unlock the meaning of words. Ask: Which words in this vocabulary list include a prefix that means "not"? (*im*maculate, *un*perturbed) Point out that in addition to the prefixes im- and un-, there are other prefixes that mean "not," such as non- and ir-. Ask: What are some examples of words that use these "not" prefixes? (nonprofit, irregular)

Selection Skills

The Crucible, Act Three

Literary Elements
- Plot (SE pp. 1073–1095)

Reading Skills
- Evaluate Argument (SE pp. 1073–1095)
- Make Inferences About Characters (TE p. 1078)
- Dramatic Irony (TE p. 1080)
- Irony (TE p. 1088)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE p. 1095)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Summary (SE p. 1095)
- Inverted Sentences (TE p. 1082)
- Diary (TE p. 1092)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE pp. 1081, 1089)
- Dramatic Reading (TE p. 1084)

Teach

Reading Strategy

Make Inferences Ask: What was Martha Corey accused of in Act Two? (Walcott accused her of bewitching him so that he cannot keep a pig alive for more than four weeks [p. 1065].) Ask: What can you infer from the change in the charge? (The charges are now much more serious, a sign that the hysteria is growing and the court is threatening the citizens of Salem.)

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Argument
Answer: The argument "If you don't know what a witch is, then how do you know you're not one?" is an example of faulty logic because it is impossible to prove a negative.

Literary Element 2

Plot Answer: He is in conflict with the anti-witchcraft zealots who have seized his wife.

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 239–251.

Act Three

[The vestry room of the Salem meeting house, now serving as the anteroom[1] of the General Court.
As the curtain rises, the room is empty, but for sunlight pouring through two high windows in the back wall. The room is solemn, even forbidding. Heavy beams jut out, boards of random widths make up the walls. At the right are two doors leading into the meeting house proper, where the court is being held. At the left another door leads outside. There is a plain bench at the left, and another at the right. In the center a rather long meeting table, with stools and a considerable armchair snugged up to it.
Through the partitioning wall at the right we hear a prosecutor's voice, JUDGE HATHORNE*'s, asking a question; then a woman's voice,* MARTHA COREY*'s, replying.]*

HATHORNE'S VOICE. Now, Martha Corey, there is abundant evidence in our hands to show that you have given yourself to the reading of fortunes. Do you deny it?

MARTHA COREY'S VOICE. I am innocent to a witch. I know not what a witch is.

HATHORNE'S VOICE. How do you know, then, that you are not a witch?

MARTHA COREY'S VOICE. If I were, I would know it.

HATHORNE'S VOICE. Why do you hurt these children?

MARTHA COREY'S VOICE. I do not hurt them. I scorn it!

GILES' VOICE. [Roaring.] I have evidence for the court!

[Voices of townspeople rise in excitement.]

DANFORTH'S VOICE. You will keep your seat!

GILES' VOICE. Thomas Putnam is reaching out for land!

DANFORTH'S VOICE. Remove that man, Marshal!

GILES' VOICE. You're hearing lies, lies!

[A roaring goes up from the people.]

HATHORNE'S VOICE. Arrest him, excellency!

GILES' VOICE. I have evidence. Why will you not hear my evidence?

[The door opens and GILES is half carried into the vestry room by HERRICK.]

GILES. Hands off, damn you, let me go!

HERRICK. Giles, Giles!

GILES. Out of my way, Herrick! I bring evidence—

HERRICK. You cannot go in there, Giles; it's a court!

[Enter HALE from the court.]

HALE. Pray be calm a moment.

GILES. You, Mr. Hale, go in there and demand I speak.

HALE. A moment, sir, a moment.

GILES. They'll be hangin' my wife!

[JUDGE HATHORNE enters. He is in his sixties, a bitter, remorseless Salem judge.]

HATHORNE. How do you dare come roarin' into this court! Are you gone daft, Corey?

GILES. You're not a Boston judge yet, Hathorne. You'll not call me daft!

[Enter DEPUTY GOVERNOR DANFORTH and, behind him, EZEKIEL CHEEVER and PARRIS*. On his appearance, silence falls.* DANFORTH is a grave man in his sixties, of some humor and sophistication that does not, however, interfere with an exact loyalty to his position and his cause. He comes down to GILES*, who awaits his wrath.*]

---

[1] The meeting house was both a community hall and the house of worship. Its vestry was an anteroom, or small outer room, that served as a waiting area and entrance to the main room.

1 Evaluate Argument How is this question typical of the prosecution's faulty logic throughout the play?

Plot Giles is in physical conflict here with Herrick. What is the larger conflict in which he is involved? 2

Speaking Practice

SMALL GROUP

Dialogue Point out the dash during Giles's comment in the right column and then during Parris's comment at the top of page 1075. Ask: What effect do the dashes create in this dialogue? (The interruptions help convey the characters' growing agitation and anger with one another. They suggest an atmosphere of chaos and confusion.) To have students experience the precise timing actors must use when they interrupt, have them work in small groups to rehearse and perform a few pages from the beginning of this act. Encourage them to pay particular attention to Miller's use of dashes to control the pacing of the dialogue.

DANFORTH. [Looking directly at GILES.] Who is this man?

PARRIS. Giles Corey, sir, and a more contentious—

GILES. [To PARRIS.] I am asked the question, and I am old enough to answer it! [To DANFORTH, who impresses him and to whom he smiles through his strain.] My name is Corey, sir, Giles Corey. I have six hundred acres, and timber in addition. It is my wife you be condemning now. [He indicates the courtroom.]

DANFORTH. And how do you imagine to help her cause with such contemptuous riot? Now be gone. Your old age alone keeps you out of jail for this.

GILES. [Beginning to plead.] They be tellin' lies about my wife, sir, I—DANFORTH. Do you take it upon yourself to determine what this court shall believe and what it shall set aside?

GILES. Your Excellency, we mean no disrespect for—DANFORTH. Disrespect indeed! It is disruption, Mister. This is the highest court of the supreme government of this province, do you know it?

GILES. [Beginning to weep.] Your Excellency, I only said she were readin' books, sir, and they come and take her out of my house for—

DANFORTH. [Mystified.] Books! What books?

GILES. [Through helpless sobs.] It is my third wife, sir; I never had no wife that be so taken with books, and I thought to find the cause of it, d'y'see, but it were no witch I blamed her for. 3 [He is openly weeping.] I have broke charity with the woman, I have broke charity with her. [He covers his face, ashamed. DANFORTH is respectfully silent.]

HALE. Excellency, he claims hard evidence for his wife's defense. I think that in all justice you must—

DANFORTH. Then let him submit his evidence in proper affidavit.[2] You are certainly aware of our procedure here, Mr. Hale. [To HERRICK.] Clear this room.

HERRICK. Come now, Giles. [He gently pushes COREY out.]

FRANCIS. We are desperate, sir; we come here three days now and cannot be heard.

DANFORTH. Who is this man?

FRANCIS. Francis Nurse, Your Excellency.

HALE. His wife's Rebecca that were condemned this morning.

DANFORTH. Indeed! I am amazed to find you in such uproar. I have only good report of your character, Mr. Nurse.

HATHORNE. I think they must both be arrested in contempt, sir.

DANFORTH. [To FRANCIS.] Let you write your plea, and in due time I will—

FRANCIS. Excellency, we have proof for your eyes; God forbid you shut them to it. The girls, sir, the girls are frauds.

DANFORTH. What's that?

FRANCIS. We have proof of it, sir. They are all deceiving you.

[DANFORTH is shocked, but studying FRANCIS.]

HATHORNE. This is contempt, sir, contempt!

DANFORTH. Peace, Judge Hathorne. Do you know who I am, Mr. Nurse?

FRANCIS. I surely do, sir, and I think you must be a wise judge to be what you are.

DANFORTH. And do you know that near to four hundred are in the jails from Marblehead to Lynn, and upon my signature?

FRANCIS. I—

DANFORTH. And seventy-two condemned to hang by that signature?

---

[2] An affidavit is a written declaration sworn to be true, usually before a judge.

4 The United States and the World What connection might Miller's audiences have made between this statement and the McCarthy hearings?

Evaluate Argument How would you evaluate this claim by Hathorne? 5

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Interpret Ask: What does "broke charity" mean? (In this context, it means "betrayed" or "not respected a bond.")

Big Idea 4

The United States and the World Answer: Audiences knew Senator McCarthy's hearings had also been authorized by the U.S. government. Audiences could infer that official approval did not make the Salem witch trials fair.

Reading Strategy 5

Evaluate Argument
Answer: Hathorne is quick to condemn Francis Nurse's claim of evidence without seeing it, but he accepts without question the girls' hysterical "evidence."

ENGLISH LEARNERS Make sure English learners understand what contempt means in the legal context. Have them look up the word in a dictionary and read the definitions. Ask: What does "contempt of court" or "being in contempt" mean? (showing disrespect for the authority of a judge) Explain that a person can be arrested and jailed for being in contempt.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English learners may be confused by the expression "broke charity." Explain that it is an old-fashioned expression based on a definition of charity that is not often used today. Ask: What does charity usually mean? (money or help given to someone in need) Tell students that for the Puritans, charity was a religious concept that meant "the love of God for humanity" and "the love of one's fellow human beings." Thus "to break charity" with someone is to break the loving bond between you and that person. Students should see that Giles's betrayal was unintentional.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Argument
Answer: Proctor has regained his self-control. He realizes that he must act gently toward Mary because he needs her help in presenting his evidence to the court.

Literary Element 2

Plot Answer: Parris and Hale were allied in their investigation of witchcraft. Now Hale is increasingly skeptical and cautious, while Parris still supports the trials.

The Crucible, 1996.

FRANCIS. Excellency, I never thought to say it to such a weighty judge, but you are deceived.

[Enter GILES COREY from left. All turn to see as he beckons in MARY WARREN with PROCTOR. MARY is keeping her eyes to the ground; PROCTOR has her elbow as though she were near collapse.]

PARRIS. [On seeing her, in shock.] Mary Warren! [He goes directly to bend close to her face.] What are you about here?

PROCTOR. [Pressing PARRIS away from her with a gentle but firm motion of protectiveness.] She would speak with the Deputy Governor.

DANFORTH. [Shocked by this, turns to HERRICK.] Did you not tell me Mary Warren were sick in bed?

HERRICK. She were, Your Honor. When I go to fetch her to the court last week, she said she were sick.

GILES. She has been strivin' with her soul all week, Your Honor; she comes now to tell the truth of this to you.

DANFORTH. Who is this?

PROCTOR. John Proctor, sir. Elizabeth Proctor is my wife.

PARRIS. Beware this man, Your Excellency, this man is mischief.

HALE. [Excitedly.] I think you must hear the girl, sir, she—

DANFORTH. [Who has become very interested in MARY WARREN and only raises a hand toward

---

1 Evaluate Argument The last time we saw Proctor he was violently attacking Mary. Do you think his change in attitude is inconsistent?

Plot How does this open disagreement between Parris and Hale represent a new conflict in the play? 2

Research Practice

Evaluate Evidence On this page, the judge is deciding which evidence he will admit. Ask students to compare the judge's decision making here with the operation of a court in the United States today. Have them research the types of evidence that are admissible in a U.S. court of law. They should use their research to write compare-and-contrast paragraphs describing authoritative evidence in the Salem witch trials and acceptable evidence in today's courts.

HALE.] Peace. What would you tell us, Mary Warren?

[PROCTOR looks at her, but she cannot speak.]

PROCTOR. She never saw no spirits, sir.

DANFORTH. [With great alarm and surprise, to MARY.] Never saw no spirits!

GILES. [Eagerly.] Never.

PROCTOR. [Reaching into his jacket.] She has signed a deposition,[3] sir—

3 DANFORTH. [Instantly.] No, no, I accept no depositions. [He is rapidly calculating this; he turns from her to PROCTOR.] Tell me, Mr. Proctor, have you given out this story in the village?

PROCTOR. We have not.

PARRIS. They've come to overthrow the court, sir! This man is—

DANFORTH. I pray you, Mr. Parris. Do you know, Mr. Proctor, that the entire contention of the state in these trials is that the voice of Heaven is speaking through the children?

PROCTOR. I know that, sir.

DANFORTH. [Thinks, staring at PROCTOR, then turns to MARY WARREN.] And you, Mary Warren, how came you to cry out people for sending their spirits against you?

MARY WARREN. It were pretense, sir.

DANFORTH. I cannot hear you.

PROCTOR. It were pretense, she says.

DANFORTH. Ah? And the other girls? Susanna Walcott, and—the others? They are also pretending?

MARY WARREN. Aye, sir.

DANFORTH. [Wide-eyed.] Indeed. [Pause. He is baffled by this. He turns to study PROCTOR'S face.]

PARRIS. [In a sweat.] Excellency, you surely cannot think to let so vile a lie be spread in open court!

DANFORTH. Indeed not, but it strike hard upon me that she will dare come here with such a tale. Now, Mr. Proctor, before I decide whether I shall hear you or not, it is my duty to tell you this. We burn a hot fire here; it melts down all concealment.

PROCTOR. I know that, sir.

DANFORTH. Let me continue. I understand well, a husband's tenderness may drive him to extravagance in defense of a wife. Are you certain in your conscience, Mister, that your evidence is the truth?

PROCTOR. It is. And you will surely know it.

DANFORTH. And you thought to declare this revelation in the open court before the public?

PROCTOR. I thought I would, aye—with your permission.

DANFORTH. [His eyes narrowing.] Now, sir, what is your purpose in so doing?

PROCTOR. Why, I—I would free my wife, sir.

DANFORTH. There lurks nowhere in your heart, nor hidden in your spirit, any desire to undermine this court?

PROCTOR. [With the faintest faltering.] Why, no, sir.

CHEEVER. [Clears his throat, awakening.] I—Your Excellency.

DANFORTH. Mr. Cheever.

CHEEVER. I think it be my duty, sir—[Kindly, to PROCTOR.] You'll not deny it, John. [To DANFORTH.] When we come to take his wife, he damned the court and ripped your warrant. 5

PARRIS. Now you have it!

DANFORTH. He did that, Mr. Hale?

HALE. [Takes a breath.] Aye, he did.

---

[3] A deposition is a sworn, written statement given by a witness out of court and intended to be used as testimony in court.

4 The United States and the World How might this idea relate to the McCarthy "witch hunts" of the 1950s?

Evaluate Argument What assumption are Danforth and Parris both making? How would you assess it? 6

Vocabulary

vile (vīl) adj. evil; foul; repulsive; degrading

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Help students understand the importance of Danforth's statement "We burn a hot fire here; it melts down all concealment." Explain that the statement relates thematically to the play's title. A crucible is a container used for melting down metals. It is made out of a material that can withstand intense heat, and it is used to separate valuable metals from less-valuable ones. Another definition of crucible is "a severe test." Ask: How are the trials a crucible? (The trials subject the accused to the intense heat of accusations. Like a crucible, the trials might also reveal people's true nature.)

Teach

Literary Element 3

Characterization Say: Look at the phrase "is rapidly calculating this." Ask: How do Danforth's next words reinforce his calculating nature? (His words suggest that if the residents have not yet heard Mary's deposition he may be able to prevent them from hearing it altogether.)

Big Idea 4

The United States and the World Answer: A common phrase during the Cold War was "Godless Communism." Like Danforth, Senator McCarthy believed that the government had God on its side.

Reading Strategy 5

Reread Ask students to review the end of Act Two to find what Cheever overlooks as he reports Proctor's earlier behavior. (Cheever provoked Proctor into tearing the warrant and damning Danforth.)

Reading Strategy 6

Evaluate Argument

Answer: They assume Mary Warren is lying. This is another example of bias on the part of the investigators.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Argument Answer: In blindly accepting the girls' bizarre evidence of demonic activity, Danforth has, in fact, passed judgment on those accused of witchcraft.

APPROACHING Ask: What does Danforth's use of the word marvels suggest? (It suggests that Danforth believes that he has seen evidence of supernatural witchcraft rather than mere "pretense," or pretending.)

Literary Element 2

Plot Answer: Proctor has been on the defensive throughout the play. Tension mounts with each accusation, intensifying the conflict between Proctor and the witch hunters.

APPROACHING Draw a simple plot diagram on the board (see p. 1022 for a sample diagram). Ask: What occurs during the rising action? (Complications develop, and the conflict intensifies until it reaches a climax.)

PROCTOR. It were a temper, sir. I knew not what I did.

DANFORTH. [Studying him.] Mr. Proctor.

PROCTOR. Aye, sir.

DANFORTH. [Straight into his eyes.] Have you ever seen the Devil?

PROCTOR. No, sir.

DANFORTH. You are in all respects a Gospel Christian?

PROCTOR. I am, sir.

PARRIS. Such a Christian that will not come to church but once in a month!

DANFORTH. [Restrained—he is curious.] Not come to church?

PROCTOR. I—I have no love for Mr. Parris. It is no secret. But God I surely love.

CHEEVER. He plow on Sunday, sir.

DANFORTH. Plow on Sunday!

CHEEVER. [Apologetically.] I think it be evidence, John. I am an official of the court, I cannot keep it.

PROCTOR. I—I have once or twice plowed on Sunday. I have three children, sir, and until last year my land give little.

GILES. You'll find other Christians that do plow on Sunday if the truth be known.

HALE. Your Honor, I cannot think you may judge the man on such evidence.

DANFORTH. I judge nothing. [Pause. He keeps watching PROCTOR, who tries to meet his gaze.] I tell you straight, Mister—I have seen marvels in this court. I have seen people choked before my eyes by spirits; I have seen them stuck by pins and slashed by daggers. I have until this moment not the slightest reason to suspect that the children may be deceiving me. Do you understand my meaning?

PROCTOR. Excellency, does it not strike upon you that so many of these women have lived so long with such upright reputation, and—

PARRIS. Do you read the Gospel, Mr. Proctor?

PROCTOR. I read the Gospel.

PARRIS. I think not, or you should surely know that Cain were an upright man, and yet he did kill Abel.[4]

PROCTOR. Aye, God tells us that. [To DANFORTH.] But who tells us Rebecca Nurse murdered seven babies by sending out her spirit on them? It is the children only, and this one will swear she lied to you.

[DANFORTH considers, then beckons HATHORNE to him. HATHORNE leans in, and he speaks in his ear. HATHORNE nods.]

HATHORNE. Aye, she's the one.

DANFORTH. Mr. Proctor, this morning, your wife send me a claim in which she states that she is pregnant now.

PROCTOR. My wife pregnant!

DANFORTH. There be no sign of it—we have examined her body.

PROCTOR. But if she say she is pregnant, then she must be! That woman will never lie, Mr. Danforth.

DANFORTH. She will not?

PROCTOR. Never, sir, never.

DANFORTH. We have thought it too convenient to be credited. However, if I should tell you now that I will let her be kept another month; and if she begin to show her natural signs, you shall have her living yet another year until she is delivered—what say you to that? [JOHN PROCTOR is struck silent.] Come now. You say your only purpose is to save your wife. Good, then, she is saved at least this year, and a year is long. What say [4] According to the Bible, Adam and Eve's son Cain kills his brother Abel, becoming the first murderer.

---

1 Evaluate Argument How does the rest of Danforth's speech contradict this statement?

Plot How has the questioning of Proctor contributed to the rising action of the plot? 2

Reading Practice

Make Inferences About Characters Discuss Danforth's response to the news that Elizabeth is pregnant. Remind students that in Act Two we learned that a pregnant woman would not be put to death because "they'll not hurt the innocent child." Ask: What deal does Danforth offer Proctor? (If Proctor drops his charge that the accusers are lying, Danforth will wait a month before executing Elizabeth to see if her pregnancy starts to show. Then, if she is truly pregnant, she will be safe for another year until the baby is born.) What does Danforth assume about Proctor's character and motivation, or "purpose"? (Danforth assumes that Proctor will be willing to abandon his friends to save his wife for a year. He assumes that Proctor's motivation is simply to save his wife, not to uphold the truth or save the lives of others.) What can you infer about Danforth's character based on the deal he offers Proctor? (Danforth is manipulative and uninterested in the truth.)

you, sir? It is done now. [In conflict, PROCTOR glances at FRANCIS and GILES.] Will you drop this charge?

PROCTOR. I—I think I cannot.

DANFORTH. [Now an almost imperceptible hardness in his voice.] Then your purpose is somewhat larger.

PARRIS. He's come to overthrow this court, Your Honor!

PROCTOR. These are my friends. Their wives are also accused—

DANFORTH. [With a sudden briskness of manner.] I judge you not, sir. I am ready to hear your evidence.

PROCTOR. I come not to hurt the court; I only—

DANFORTH. [Cutting him off.] Marshal, go into the court and bid Judge Stoughton and Judge Sewall declare recess for one hour. And let them go to the tavern, if they will. All witnesses and prisoners are to be kept in the building.

HERRICK. Aye, sir. [Very deferentially.] If I may say it, sir, I know this man all my life. It is a good man, sir.

DANFORTH. [It is the reflection on himself he resents.] I am sure of it, Marshal. [HERRICK nods, then goes out.] Now, what deposition do you have for us, Mr. Proctor? And I beg you be clear, open as the sky, and honest.

PROCTOR. [As he takes out several papers.] I am no lawyer, so I'll—

DANFORTH. The pure in heart need no lawyers. Proceed as you will.

PROCTOR. [Handing DANFORTH a paper.] Will you read this first, sir? It's a sort of testament.[5] The people signing it declare their good opinion of Rebecca, and my wife, and Martha Corey. [DANFORTH looks down at the paper.]

PARRIS. [To enlist DANFORTH*'s sarcasm.*] Their good opinion! [But DANFORTH goes on reading, and PROCTOR is heartened.]

PROCTOR. These are all landholding farmers, members of the church. [Delicately, trying to point out a paragraph.] If you'll notice, sir—they've known the women many years and never saw no sign they had dealings with the Devil.

[PARRIS nervously moves over and reads over DANFORTH*'s shoulder.*]

DANFORTH. [Glancing down a long list.] How many names are here?

FRANCIS. Ninety-one, Your Excellency.

PARRIS. [Sweating.] These people should be summoned. [DANFORTH looks up at him questioningly.] For questioning.

FRANCIS. [Trembling with anger.] Mr. Danforth, I gave them all my word no harm would come to them for signing this.

PARRIS. This is a clear attack upon the court!

HALE. [To PARRIS, trying to contain himself.] Is every defense an attack upon the court? Can no one—?

PARRIS. All innocent and Christian people are happy for the courts in Salem! These people are gloomy for it. [To DANFORTH directly.] And I think you will want to know, from each and every one of them, what discontents them with you!

HATHORNE. I think they ought to be examined, sir.

DANFORTH. It is not necessarily an attack, I think. Yet—

FRANCIS. These are all covenanted Christians, sir.

DANFORTH. Then I am sure they may have nothing to fear. [Hands CHEEVER the paper.] Mr. Cheever, have warrants drawn for all of these—arrest for examination. [To PROCTOR.] Now,

---

[5] Here, the testament is a statement of beliefs or opinions offered as evidence of the truth.

3 Plot What conflict is referred to in this stage direction?

4 Evaluate Argument What rings false about Danforth's remark?

5 Evaluate Argument How is Parris twisting the argument in order to win Danforth to his side?

6 The United States and the World What connection do you see between Danforth's tactics and the tactics of Senator McCarthy?

Teach

Literary Element 3

Plot Answer: Proctor is briefly tempted to abandon Francis and Giles to buy his wife one more year of life.

Reading Strategy 4

Evaluate Argument
Answer: Danforth implies that God will protect the pure of heart, yet the pure of heart are the people in prison.

Reading Strategy 5

Evaluate Argument
Answer: Parris is suggesting that those who signed the deposition are attacking the court and, by extension, Danforth.

Big Idea 6

The United States and the World Answer: Those who tried to defend the people whom McCarthy accused were themselves accused.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate English learners may be unfamiliar with some of the vocabulary and idioms used in the stage directions on this spread. Have student pairs look up these words and phrases in a dictionary and then record the definitions: beckons, struck silent, imperceptible, briskness, deferentially, reflection on himself, enlist, sarcasm, heartened, glancing.

Advanced If necessary, have students look up the words and phrases in the Intermediate activity. Then have volunteers act out some of the dialogue and actions these stage directions describe. Begin by modeling beckons in the first stage direction on the previous page. Then ask: How should Proctor act when he is "struck silent"? How would Danforth sound if he has "an almost imperceptible hardness in his voice"? How might Herrick say his lines "very deferentially"? What tone of voice could Proctor use to sound "heartened"?

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Argument

Answer: Danforth is using an either/or fallacy. The truth often lies somewhere between two opposites.

APPROACHING Explain that a logical fallacy is an error in logic. Brainstorm other examples of the either/or fallacy (claiming that someone is either all good or all evil).

Reading Strategy 2

Evaluate Argument

Answer: Danforth demands that Giles prove his accusation against Putnam. When someone is accused of witchcraft, however, the judge demands proof of innocence from the accused rather than proof of guilt from the accuser.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Make sure students understand that in the legal system, a person accused of a crime is "innocent until proven guilty." Discuss why this concept is a crucial legal protection.

Mister, what other information do you have for us? [FRANCIS is still standing, horrified.] You may sit, Mr. Nurse.

FRANCIS. I have brought trouble on these people; I have—

DANFORTH. No, old man, you have not hurt these people if they are of good conscience. But you must understand, sir, that a person is either with this court or he must be counted against it, there be no road between. This is a sharp time, now, a precise time—we live no longer in the dusky afternoon when evil mixed itself with good and befuddled the world. Now, by God's grace, the shining sun is up, and them that fear not light will surely praise it. I hope you will be one of those. [MARY WARREN suddenly sobs.] She's not hearty, I see.

PROCTOR. No, she's not, sir. [To MARY, bending to her, holding her hand, quietly.] Now remember what the angel Raphael said to the boy Tobias. Remember it.

MARY WARREN. [Hardly audible.] Aye.

PROCTOR. "Do that which is good, and no harm shall come to thee."

MARY WARREN. Aye.

DANFORTH. Come, man, we wait you.

[MARSHAL HERRICK returns, and takes his post at the door.]

GILES. John, my deposition, give him mine.

PROCTOR. Aye. [He hands DANFORTH another paper.] This is Mr. Corey's deposition.

DANFORTH. Oh? [He looks down at it. Now HATHORNE comes behind him and reads with him.]

HATHORNE. [Suspiciously.] What lawyer drew this, Corey?

GILES. You know I never hired a lawyer in my life, Hathorne.

DANFORTH. [Finishing the reading.] It is very well phrased. My compliments. Mr. Parris, if Mr. Putnam is in the court, will you bring him in? [HATHORNE takes the deposition, and walks to the window with it. PARRIS goes into the court.] You have no legal training, Mr. Corey?

GILES. [Very pleased.] I have the best, sir—I am thirty-three time in court in my life. And always plaintiff, too.

DANFORTH. Oh, then you're much put-upon.

GILES. I am never put-upon; I know my rights, sir, and I will have them. You know, your father tried a case of mine—might be thirty-five year ago, I think.

DANFORTH. Indeed.

GILES. He never spoke to you of it?

DANFORTH. No, I cannot recall it.

GILES. That's strange, he give me nine pound damages. He were a fair judge, your father. Y'see, I had a white mare that time, and this fellow come to borrow the mare—[Enter PARRIS with THOMAS PUTNAM. When he sees PUTNAM, GILES' ease goes; he is hard.] Aye, there he is.

DANFORTH. Mr. Putnam, I have here an accusation by Mr. Corey against you. He states that you coldly prompted your daughter to cry witchery upon George Jacobs that is now in jail.

PUTNAM. It is a lie.

DANFORTH. [Turning to GILES.] Mr. Putnam states your charge is a lie. What say you to that?

GILES. [Furious, his fists clenched.] A fart on Thomas Putnam, that is what I say to that!

DANFORTH. What proof do you submit for your charge, sir?

GILES. My proof is there! [Pointing to the paper.] If Jacobs hangs for a witch he forfeit up his property—that's law! And there is none but Putnam with the coin to buy so great a piece. This man is killing his neighbors for their land!

DANFORTH. But proof, sir, proof.

GILES. [Pointing at his deposition.] The proof is there! I have it from an honest man who heard Putnam say it! The day his daughter cried out

---

1 Evaluate Argument What logical fallacy is Danforth guilty of here?

Evaluate Argument How is Danforth guilty of using a double standard in this demand? 2

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW

Dramatic Irony In the midst of this serious confrontation between Proctor and Danforth, Miller introduces a bit of comic relief as Giles Corey brags about his knowledge of the law and his past experiences in court. Ask: What is Miller's purpose in including this dialogue between Giles and Danforth? (This comic dialogue reveals Giles to be a silly, harmless character who is clearly innocent of any wrongdoing. However, the relief is only temporary: Danforth's response to Giles becomes that much more horrible because the audience has been temporarily lulled into thinking that no one could possibly take action against a person like Giles.) Tell students that dramatic irony occurs when the audience or reader realizes something that a character does not. Ask: What does the audience realize that Giles does not? (The audience realizes that Giles's supposed knowledge of the law will not protect him against Danforth.)

Window View—Scapeology #9, 1995. Nanette Carter. Oil on canvas, 41 x 40 in. Sande Webster Gallery, Philadelphia, PA.

View the Art Nanette Carter is often referred to as a "visual storyteller." What elements of storytelling do you see in this painting? In what ways might it mirror the events and feelings evident so far in Act Three? Explain. ★ on Jacobs, he said she'd given him a fair gift of land.

HATHORNE. And the name of this man?

GILES. [Taken aback.] What name?

HATHORNE. The man that give you this information.

GILES. [Hesitates, then.] Why, I—I cannot give you his name.

HATHORNE. And why not?

Teach

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may notice the enclosed boxes in the center of the painting and the movement of lines within those boxes. These images might reflect the trapped feeling of those convicted of witchcraft in Salem.

Point out that this painting is by the same artist represented on page 1039. Some of Carter's Scapeology paintings were part of an African American women's art show titled Bearing Witness, organized by Spelman College in the late 1990s.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English learners will need help with some of the words on these pages. Have students look up these words in a dictionary and record the definitions: befuddled, audible, forfeit, conspiracy, anonymity, prodigious, uncorrupted. Then discuss the following phrases, explaining that some of them are old-fashioned:

put-upon: "taken advantage of" (usually spelled without the hyphen) clap me: "put in jail" (old-fashioned) in confidence: "with the expectation of being kept secret" blink it: "close one's eyes to something; ignore" take counsel with yourself: "consider what you should do; literally, give yourself advice" (take counsel with another person means "discuss; give or receive advice")

SMALL GROUP

Advanced Go over the phrases in the Intermediate activity. Then have students work in pairs to come up with original sentences for each phrase.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: During the HUAC hearings, Miller admired those who, like Miller and Giles, responded, "I will give you no name."

Reading Strategy 2

Evaluate Argument
Answer: Danforth concludes that fear of the court is equivalent to guilt. Students should see that people have legitimate reasons to be terrified of the proceedings.

Language History ☆

Terrible Today, the word terrible has a negative connotation. In earlier times, the term suggested a benign power that caused terror and dread. To call Hale's learning or education terrible compliments him. Danforth, however, is probably being sarcastic.

GILES. [Hesitates, then bursts out.] You know well why not! He'll lay in jail if I give his name!

HATHORNE. This is contempt of the court, Mr. Danforth!

DANFORTH. [To avoid that.] You will surely tell us the name.

GILES. I will not give you no name. I mentioned my wife's name once and I'll burn in hell long enough for that. I stand mute.

DANFORTH. In that case, I have no choice but to arrest you for contempt of this court, do you know that?

GILES. This is a hearing; you cannot clap me for contempt of a hearing.

DANFORTH. Oh, it is a proper lawyer! Do you wish me to declare the court in full session here? Or will you give me good reply?

GILES. [Faltering.] I cannot give you no name, sir, I cannot.

DANFORTH. You are a foolish old man. Mr. Cheever, begin the record. The court is now in session. I ask you, Mr. Corey—

PROCTOR. [Breaking in.] Your Honor—he has the story in confidence, sir, and he—

PARRIS. The Devil lives on such confidences! [To DANFORTH.] Without confidences there could be no conspiracy, Your Honor!

HATHORNE. I think it must be broken, sir.

DANFORTH. [To GILES.] Old man, if your informant tells the truth let him come here openly like a decent man. But if he hide in anonymity I must know why. Now sir, the government and central church demand of you the name of him who reported Mr. Thomas Putnam a common murderer.

HALE. Excellency—

DANFORTH. Mr. Hale.

HALE. We cannot blink it more. There is a prodigious fear of this court in the country—

DANFORTH. Then there is a prodigious guilt in the country. Are you afraid to be questioned here?

HALE. I may only fear the Lord, sir, but there is fear in the country nevertheless.

DANFORTH. [Angered now.] Reproach[6] me not with the fear in the country; there is fear in the country because there is a moving plot to topple Christ in the country!

HALE. But it does not follow that everyone accused is part of it.

DANFORTH. No uncorrupted man may fear this court, Mr. Hale! None! [To GILES.] You are under arrest in contempt of this court. Now sit you down and take counsel with yourself, or you will be set in the jail until you decide to answer all questions.

[GILES COREY makes a rush for PUTNAM. PROCTOR lunges and holds him.]

PROCTOR. No, Giles!

GILES. [Over PROCTOR*'s shoulder at* PUTNAM.] I'll cut your throat, Putnam, I'll kill you yet!

PROCTOR. [Forcing him into a chair.] Peace, Giles, peace. [Releasing him.] We'll prove ourselves. Now we will. [He starts to turn to DANFORTH.]

GILES. Say nothin' more, John. [Pointing at DANFORTH.] He's only playin' you! He means to hang us all!

[MARY WARREN bursts into sobs.]

DANFORTH. This is a court of law, Mister. I'll have no effrontery[7] here!

PROCTOR. Forgive him, sir, for his old age. Peace, Giles, we'll prove it all now. [He lifts up MARY*'s chin.*] You cannot weep, Mary. Remember the angel, what he say to the boy. Hold to it, now; there is your rock. [MARY quiets. He takes out a paper, and turns to DANFORTH.] This is Mary Warren's deposition. I—I would ask you, remember, sir, while you read it, that until two week ago she were no different than the other children are

---

[6] To reproach is to blame or to express disapproval of.

[7] Effrontery is boldness and disrespect.

1 The United States and the World What resemblance can you see here between Giles Corey and Arthur Miller?

Evaluate Argument What has Danforth just concluded from Hale's comment? What fallacy do you detect in his reasoning? 2

Grammar Practice

Inverted Sentences In his dialogue, Miller tries to recreate the sound of seventeenth-century spoken English. For example, his characters often use inverted sentences: sentences that reverse normal English word order. The usual word order in a sentence is subject-verb-complement: "We ate pizza," not "Pizza ate we" or "Ate we pizza." Point out this example of inversion: ". . . this argument let lawyers present to you," on page 1083. Ask: How would you reword this sentence using normal word order? (". . . let lawyers present this argument to you.) Miller uses other forms of old-fashioned language. Have students say these examples aloud using contemporary English syntax:

- "Remember the angel, what he say to the boy." ("Remember what the angel said to the boy.")
- ". . . until two week ago she were no different than the other children are today." (". . . until two weeks ago she was no different than the other children are today.")

today. [He is speaking reasonably, restraining all his fears, his anger, his anxiety.] You saw her scream, she howled, she swore familiar spirits choked her; she even testified that Satan, in the form of women now in jail, tried to win her soul away, and then when she refused—

DANFORTH. We know all this.

PROCTOR. Aye, sir. She swears now that she never saw Satan; nor any spirit, vague or clear, that Satan may have sent to hurt her. And she declares her friends are lying now.

[PROCTOR starts to hand DANFORTH the deposition, and HALE comes up to DANFORTH in a trembling state.]

HALE. Excellency, a moment. I think this goes to the heart of the matter.

DANFORTH. [With deep misgivings.] It surely does.

HALE. I cannot say he is an honest man; I know him little. But in all justice, sir, a claim so weighty cannot be argued by a farmer. In God's name, sir, stop here; send him home and let him come again with a lawyer—

DANFORTH. [Patiently.] Now look you, Mr. Hale—

HALE. Excellency, I have signed seventy-two death warrants; I am a minister of the Lord, and I dare not take a life without there be a proof so immaculate no slightest qualm[8] of conscience may doubt it.

DANFORTH. Mr. Hale, you surely do not doubt my justice.

HALE. I have this morning signed away the soul of Rebecca Nurse, Your Honor. I'll not conceal it, my hand shakes yet as with a wound! I pray you, sir, this argument let lawyers present to you.

DANFORTH. Mr. Hale, believe me; for a man of such terrible learning you are most bewildered—I hope you will forgive me. I have been thirty-two year at the bar, sir, and I should be confounded were I called upon to defend these people. Let you consider, now—[To PROCTOR and the others.] And I bid you all do likewise. In an ordinary crime, how does one defend the accused? One calls up witnesses to prove his innocence. But witchcraft is ipso facto,[9] on its face and by its nature, an invisible crime, is it not? Therefore, who may possibly be witness to it? The witch and the victim. None other. Now we cannot hope the witch will accuse herself; granted? Therefore, we must rely upon her victims—and they do testify, the children certainly do testify. As for the witches, none will deny that we are most eager for all their confessions. Therefore, what is left for a lawyer to bring out? I think I have made my point. Have I not?

HALE. But this child claims the girls are not truthful, and if they are not—

DANFORTH. That is precisely what I am about to consider, sir. What more may you ask of me? Unless you doubt my probity?[10]

HALE. [Defeated.] I surely do not, sir. Let you consider it, then.

DANFORTH. And let you put your heart to rest. Her deposition, Mr. Proctor.

[PROCTOR hands it to him. HATHORNE rises, goes beside DANFORTH, and starts reading. PARRIS comes to his other side. DANFORTH looks at JOHN PROCTOR, then proceeds to read. HALE gets up, finds position near the judge, reads too. PROCTOR glances at GILES. FRANCIS prays silently, hands pressed together. CHEEVER waits placidly, the sublime official, dutiful. MARY WARREN sobs once. JOHN PROCTOR touches her head reassuringly. Presently DANFORTH lifts his eyes, stands up, takes out a kerchief and blows his nose. The others stand aside as he moves in thought toward the window.]

---

[8] Qualm (kwäm) means "doubt."

[9] The Latin legal term ipso facto means, literally, "by that very fact" or "by the fact itself."

[10] Probity involves moral excellence, integrity, and honesty.

3 Plot How is the rising action gradually propelling Proctor toward the center of attention and the climax of the act?

4 Plot How has the development of Hale's character contributed to the conflict in the play?

Vocabulary

immaculate (i mak´ yə lit) adj. unblemished; flawless; pure

Evaluate Argument What hope does the logic of this argument give to people accused of witchcraft? Explain. 5

Teach

Literary Element 3

Plot Answer: People are being prosecuted based on the girls' accusations, and Proctor is the only person who is questioning the girls' reliability.

Literary Element 4

Plot Answer: As hysteria grows, Hale becomes disturbed by the injustice of the court. He insists that the court should consider reasonable doubt. Danforth believes that an accused person is guilty until proven innocent.

Reading Strategy 5

Evaluate Argument

Answer: It gives no hope. If there are no witnesses and a witch never admits the truth, the court must rely on the testimony of the accuser.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Strategic Help students see how Danforth traps Mary in a no-win situation. Have students read the dialogue between Mary and Danforth in the first column of page 1084. Ask: What does Danforth mean when he says that Mary "committed perjury in any case"? (He means that either she was lying in court when she originally claimed that people had sent their spirits against her or she is lying now when she claims that her accusations and behavior—and those of the other girls—were "pretense." Either way, she has committed perjury, lying under oath.) Make sure students understand that Danforth will not let Mary come clean; by telling the truth, she will in fact be punished for lying. Ask students to brainstorm other examples of no-win situations.

Benchmark Have students answer the question in the Strategic activity. Then ask: What is Danforth's motivation for trapping Mary in this no-win situation? (He is hoping that she will withdraw her accusations out of fear of going to jail.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Inferences Say: Here the term contempt appears again, but used in a different way. Ask: Which of Parris's statements or actions do you think Danforth finds contemptible? (Parris interrupts and tries to curry Danforth's favor in an obvious attempt to protect his own interests.)

Literary Element 2

Plot Answer: Danforth intimidates Mary. The audience knows she is weak and is Proctor's only hope.

Literary Element 3

Plot Answer: The longer the audience must wait for Abigail, the leader of the conspiracy, the greater the tension.

Reading Strategy 4

Evaluate Argument
Answer: Danforth is less harsh with them; he promises an easy sentence if they confess to lying. He has said Mary will hang if she is in league with Satan.

PARRIS. [Hardly able to contain his anger and fear.] I should like to question—

1 DANFORTH. [His first real outburst, in which his contempt for PARRIS is clear.] Mr. Parris, I bid you be silent! [He stands in silence, looking out the window. Now, having established that he will set the gait.][11] Mr. Cheever, will you go into the court and bring the children here? [CHEEVER gets up and goes out upstage. DANFORTH now turns to MARY.] Mary Warren, how came you to this turnabout? Has Mr. Proctor threatened you for this deposition?

MARY WARREN. No, sir.

DANFORTH. Has he ever threatened you?

MARY WARREN. [Weaker.] No, sir.

DANFORTH. [Sensing a weakening.] Has he threatened you?

MARY WARREN. No, sir.

DANFORTH. Then you tell me that you sat in my court, callously lying, when you knew that people would hang by your evidence? [She does not answer.] Answer me!

MARY WARREN. [Almost inaudibly.] I did, sir.

DANFORTH. How were you instructed in your life? Do you not know that God damns all liars? [She cannot speak.] Or is it now that you lie?

MARY WARREN. No, sir—I am with God now.

DANFORTH. You are with God now.

MARY WARREN. Aye, sir.

DANFORTH. [Containing himself.] I will tell you this—you are either lying now, or you were lying in the court, and in either case you have committed perjury and you will go to jail for it. You cannot lightly say you lied, Mary. Do you know that?

MARY WARREN. I cannot lie no more. I am with God, I am with God.

[But she breaks into sobs at the thought of it, and the right door opens, and enter SUSANNA WALCOTT, MERCY LEWIS, BETTY PARRIS, and finally ABIGAIL. CHEEVER comes to DANFORTH.]

CHEEVER. Ruth Putnam's not in the court, sir, nor the other children.

DANFORTH. These will be sufficient. Sit you down, children. [Silently they sit.] Your friend, Mary Warren, has given us a deposition. In which she swears that she never saw familiar spirits, apparitions, nor any manifest of the Devil.[12] She claims as well that none of you have seen these things either. [Slight pause.] Now, children, this is a court of law. The law, based upon the Bible, and the Bible, writ by Almighty God, forbid the practice of witchcraft, and describe death as the penalty thereof. But likewise, children, the law and Bible damn all bearers of false witness. [Slight pause.] Now then. It does not escape me that this deposition may be devised to blind us; it may well be that Mary Warren has been conquered by Satan, who sends her here to distract our sacred purpose. If so, her neck will break for it. But if she speak true, I bid you now drop your guile and confess your pretense, for a quick confession will go easier with you. [Pause.] Abigail Williams, rise. [ABIGAIL slowly rises.] Is there any truth in this?

ABIGAIL. No, sir.

DANFORTH. [Thinks, glances at MARY, then back to ABIGAIL.] Children, a very augur bit[13] will now be turned into your souls until your honesty is proved. Will either of you change your positions now, or do you force me to hard questioning?

---

[11] To set the gait is an expression that means "to determine how a matter will proceed."

[12] Familiar spirits are supernatural beings (not ghosts) believed to serve demons or humans; apparitions are ghosts of dead people; and a manifest of the Devil is a form in which the devil reveals himself.

[13] Here, augur bit refers to an auger, a tool for boring holes.

2 Plot How does Danforth's aggressive questioning of Mary contribute to the rising action?

Vocabulary

perjury (pər′ jə rē) n. the act of swearing under oath to the truth of something that one knows to be untrue

3 Plot How does Abigail's delayed entry contribute to the tension in this scene?

4 Evaluate Argument Compare Danforth's treatment of Mary to his treatment of the other girls. How is this another example of Danforth's double standard in administering justice?

Listening and Speaking Practice

Dramatic Reading Have students rehearse and present a dramatic reading of the scene that begins with Danforth's question to Mary on page 1084 and ends with Abigail's line "Oh, Heavenly Father, take away this shadow" on page 1088. Before students begin rehearsing, discuss these guidelines for a dramatic reading:

- Listen for cues for your lines.
- Vary your pitch, tone, and pacing to express meaning and emotion.
- Use facial expressions and gestures to reinforce vocal interpretations.
- Use stress and pauses to build suspense and convey a sense of danger or urgency.
- Practice pronouncing unfamiliar words and enunciating clearly.

The Crucible, 1996.

ABIGAIL. I have naught to change, sir. She lies.

DANFORTH. [To MARY.] You would still go on with this?

MARY WARREN. [Faintly.] Aye, sir.

DANFORTH. [Turning to ABIGAIL.] A poppet were discovered in Mr. Proctor's house, stabbed by a needle. Mary Warren claims that you sat beside her in the court when she made it, and that you saw her make it and witnessed how she herself stuck her needle into it for safe-keeping. What say you to that?

ABIGAIL. [With a slight note of indignation.] It is a lie, sir.

DANFORTH. [After a slight pause.] While you worked for Mr. Proctor, did you see poppets in that house?

ABIGAIL. Goody Proctor always kept poppets.

PROCTOR. Your Honor, my wife never kept no poppets. Mary Warren confesses it was her poppet.

CHEEVER. Your Excellency.

DANFORTH. Mr. Cheever.

CHEEVER. When I spoke with Goody Proctor in that house, she said she never kept no poppets. But she said she did keep poppets when she were a girl.

PROCTOR. She has not been a girl these fifteen years, Your Honor.

HATHORNE. But a poppet will keep fifteen years, will it not?

PROCTOR. It will keep if it is kept, but Mary Warren swears she never saw no poppets in my house, nor anyone else.

Teach

Cultural History ☆

Death by Hanging When Danforth says, "Her neck will break for it," he means Mary will be executed by hanging. From colonial days until the late nineteenth century, hanging was the chief method for executing convicted criminals in this country. Public hangings were common.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Mass Hysteria Have advanced students consider this question about the real Salem witch hunt. Ask: What caused the girls in Salem to behave the way they did? Have them work in small groups to research the topic of mass hysteria, also known as mass sociogenic illness (MSI) or epidemic hysteria. Have students do library and Internet research on these questions:

- How do psychiatrists define this disorder? What are its symptoms?
- What is considered the appropriate treatment or response to the condition?
- Other than the Salem witch hunt, what episodes in history or contemporary life might be examples of mass hysteria?
- Does Miller present the Salem witch hunt as an episode of mass hysteria, or of something else?

Have students present their findings to the class, using visual aids and encouraging follow-up questions and discussion.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: Witches supposedly acted invisibly; communism was said to be a "hidden menace."

Literary Element 2

Plot Answer: Proctor says that Abigail has an ulterior motive for accusing Elizabeth of witchcraft. It appears that he is planning to reveal what that motive is.

Literary Element 3

Stage Directions Here is a good example of how Miller uses stage directions to do more than simply describe a character's actions or gestures. Ask: What else does this stage direction do? (It describes Danforth's emotions and summarizes what is happening in the plot.

APPROACHING Students may be confused by the word it in this stage direction. Ask: What is growing into a nightmare? (the whole situation; Mary's testimony about what happened in the woods)

PARRIS. Why could there not have been poppets hid where no one ever saw them?

PROCTOR. [Furious.] There might also be a dragon with five legs in my house, but no one has ever seen it.

PARRIS. We are here, Your Honor, precisely to discover what no one has ever seen.

PROCTOR. Mr. Danforth, what profit this girl to turn herself about? What may Mary Warren gain but hard questioning and worse?

DANFORTH. You are charging Abigail Williams with a marvelous cool plot to murder, do you understand that?

PROCTOR. I do, sir. I believe she means to murder.

DANFORTH. [Pointing at ABIGAIL, incredulously.][14] This child would murder your wife?

PROCTOR. It is not a child. Now hear me, sir. In the sight of the congregation she were twice this year put out of this meetin' house for laughter during prayer.

DANFORTH. [Shocked, turning to ABIGAIL.] What's this? Laughter during—!

PARRIS. Excellency, she were under Tituba's power at that time, but she is solemn now.

GILES. Aye, now she is solemn and goes to hang people!

DANFORTH. Quiet, man.

HATHORNE. Surely it have no bearing on the question, sir. He charges contemplation of murder.

DANFORTH. Aye. [He studies ABIGAIL for a moment, then.] Continue, Mr. Proctor.

PROCTOR. Mary. Now tell the Governor how you danced in the woods.

PARRIS. [Instantly.] Excellency, since I come to Salem this man is blackening my name. He—

DANFORTH. In a moment, sir. [To MARY WARREN, sternly, and surprised.] What is this dancing?

MARY WARREN. I—[She glances at ABIGAIL, who is staring down at her remorselessly. Then, appealing to PROCTOR.] Mr. Proctor—

PROCTOR. [Taking it right up.] Abigail leads the girls to the woods, Your Honor, and they have danced there naked—

PARRIS. Your Honor, this—

PROCTOR. [At once.] Mr. Parris discovered them himself in the dead of night! There's the "child" she is!

DANFORTH. [It is growing into a nightmare, and he turns, astonished, to PARRIS.] Mr. Parris— 3

PARRIS. I can only say, sir, that I never found any of them naked, and this man is—

DANFORTH. But you discovered them dancing in the woods? [Eyes on PARRIS, he points at ABIGAIL.] Abigail?

HALE. Excellency, when I first arrived from Beverly, Mr. Parris told me that.

DANFORTH. Do you deny it, Mr. Parris?

PARRIS. I do not, sir, but I never saw any of them naked.

DANFORTH. But she have danced?

PARRIS. [Unwillingly.] Aye, sir.

[DANFORTH, as though with new eyes, looks at ABIGAIL.]

HATHORNE. Excellency, will you permit me? [He points at MARY WARREN.]

DANFORTH. [With great worry.] Pray, proceed.

HATHORNE. You say you never saw no spirits, Mary, were never threatened or afflicted by any manifest of the Devil or the Devil's agents.

---

[14] Incredulously means "in a disbelieving manner."

1 The United States and the World Opponents of Senator McCarthy's investigations used to refer sarcastically to finding "Reds under the beds." What connection does this phrase have to Parris's observation?

2 Plot What new development has occurred in the plot that brings the rising action nearer to the climax?

Vocabulary

contemplation (kon′ təm plā′ shən) n. the act of thinking about something long and seriously

Plot At this point in the proceedings, in which direction does Danforth appear to be leaning? 4

Writing Practice

Analyze Character Remind students that a character's motivation is the reason or reasons for his or her actions. Ask: How does Proctor interpret Abigail's reasons for accusing Elizabeth of witchcraft? (Abigail wants Elizabeth to be executed so that she can take her place as Proctor's wife.) Do you agree with Proctor's interpretation? Why or why not? (Most students will agree, recognizing that even if Abigail's desire to replace Elizabeth has become unrealistic, she is still motivated by jealousy and vengeance. She may now realize that she will never marry Proctor, yet she may still be trying to punish him and Elizabeth.) Remind students that in Act One, Miller describes Abigail as having "an endless capacity for dissembling." Ask students to write a paragraph in response to this question: What is Abigail's motivation for claiming that a "wind, a cold wind, has come"? (Abigail wants Danforth to stop believing Mary's accusations against her, so she tries to get him to believe that Mary is using witchcraft to hurt her.)

MARY WARREN. [Very faintly.] No, sir.

HATHORNE. [With a gleam of victory.] And yet, when people accused of witchery confronted you in court, you would faint, saying their spirits came out of their bodies and choked you—

MARY WARREN. That were pretense, sir.

DANFORTH. I cannot hear you.

MARY WARREN. Pretense, sir.

PARRIS. But you did turn cold, did you not? I myself picked you up many times, and your skin were icy. Mr. Danforth, you—

DANFORTH. I saw that many times.

PROCTOR. She only pretended to faint, Your Excellency. They're all marvelous pretenders.

HATHORNE. Then can she pretend to faint now?

PROCTOR. Now?

PARRIS. Why not? Now there are no spirits attacking her, for none in this room is accused of witchcraft. So let her turn herself cold now, let her pretend she is attacked now, let her faint. [He turns to MARY WARREN.] Faint!

MARY WARREN. Faint?

PARRIS. Aye, faint. Prove to us how you pretended in the court so many times.

MARY WARREN. [Looking to PROCTOR.] I—cannot faint now, sir.

PROCTOR. [Alarmed, quietly.] Can you not pretend it?

MARY WARREN. I—[She looks about as though searching for the passion to faint.] I—have no sense of it now, I—

DANFORTH. Why? What is lacking now?

MARY WARREN. I—cannot tell, sir, I—

DANFORTH. Might it be that here we have no afflicting spirit loose, but in the court there were some?

MARY WARREN. I never saw no spirits.

PARRIS. Then see no spirits now, and prove to us that you can faint by your own will, as you claim.

MARY WARREN. [Stares, searching for the emotion of it, and then shakes her head.] I—cannot do it.

PARRIS. Then you will confess, will you not? It were attacking spirits made you faint!

MARY WARREN. No, sir, I—

PARRIS. Your Excellency, this is a trick to blind the court!

MARY WARREN. It's not a trick! [She stands.] I—I used to faint because I—I thought I saw spirits.

DANFORTH. Thought you saw them!

MARY WARREN. But I did not, Your Honor.

HATHORNE. How could you think you saw them unless you saw them?

MARY WARREN. I—I cannot tell how, but I did. I—I heard the other girls screaming, and you, Your Honor, you seemed to believe them, and I—It were only sport in the beginning, sir, but then the whole world cried spirits, spirits, and I—I promise you, Mr. Danforth, I only thought I saw them but I did not.

[DANFORTH peers at her.]

PARRIS. [Smiling, but nervous because DANFORTH seems to be struck by MARY WARREN*'s story*.] Surely Your Excellency is not taken by this simple lie.

DANFORTH. [Turning worriedly to ABIGAIL.] Abigail. I bid you now search your heart and tell me this—and beware of it, child, to God every soul is precious and His vengeance is terrible on them that take life without cause. Is it possible, child, that the spirits you have seen are illusion only, some deception that may cross your mind when—

ABIGAIL. Why, this—this—is a base question, sir.

DANFORTH. Child, I would have you consider it—

ABIGAIL. I have been hurt, Mr. Danforth; I have seen my blood runnin' out! I have been near to murdered every day because I done my duty pointing out the Devil's people—and this is my 5 Evaluate Argument Do you think that Parris's scheme for testing Mary's claim that she pretended to faint is a fair test? Explain.

---

Plot How is Danforth instrumental in maintaining the tension during this scene? 6

Teach

Literary Element 4

Plot Answer: Danforth is shocked by the claim that Abigail is pure and innocent. He is beginning to lean in Proctor's direction.

Reading Strategy 5

Evaluate Argument
Answer: The test is flawed because the circumstances are different. In the courtroom, Mary was under the influence of Abigail and the other girls. Here she is psychologically removed from the girls' self-induced hysteria.

Literary Element 6

Plot Answer: Danforth wavers between believing Abigail and believing Mary. Not knowing which side he will choose creates tension.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning English learners will need help with some of the vocabulary on pages 1086 and 1087. Have students look up these words in a dictionary and record the definitions: solemn, blackening, sternly, remorselessly, afflicted, manifest, gleam, pretense. Make sure students understand that Satan is another name for the Devil, and the two names are used interchangeably.

Advanced Beginning at the bottom of the first column on page 1086, Danforth expresses shock that Abigail laughed during prayers and danced in the woods. Remind students of the strictness under which the Puritans lived. English learners may be unfamiliar with the connotations that the words Puritan and puritanical have acquired. Have students look up the words in a dictionary and note all the definitions listed. Ask: What would it mean if you described someone today as "puritanical"? (The person is strict about morals and religion.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Argument

Answer: Some may think that Abigail is desperate. Others may say that she can manipulate Danforth and make him defensive. Her ploy works.

Literary Element 2

Plot Answer: Proctor will be forced to present evidence to support his accusation that Abigail is a "whore." By doing so, he will have to confess his own sin of adultery, which will in turn open him up to the possibility of severe punishment.)

reward? To be mistrusted, denied, questioned like a—

DANFORTH. [Weakening.] Child, I do not mistrust you—

ABIGAIL. [In an open threat.] Let you beware, Mr. Danforth. Think you to be so mighty that the power of Hell may not turn your wits? Beware of it! There is—[Suddenly, from an accusatory attitude, her face turns, looking into the air above—it is truly frightened.]

DANFORTH. [Apprehensively.] What is it, child?

ABIGAIL. [Looking about in the air, clasping her arms about her as though cold.] I—I know not. A wind, a cold wind, has come. [Her eyes fall on MARY WARREN.]

MARY WARREN. [Terrified, pleading.] Abby!

MERCY LEWIS. [Shivering.] Your Honor, I freeze!

PROCTOR. They're pretending!

HATHORNE. [Touching ABIGAIL's hand.] She is cold, Your Honor, touch her!

MERCY LEWIS. [Through chattering teeth.] Mary, do you send this shadow on me?

MARY WARREN. Lord, save me!

SUSANNA WALCOTT. I freeze, I freeze!

ABIGAIL. [Shivering visibly.] It is a wind, a wind!

MARY WARREN. Abby, don't do that!

DANFORTH. [Himself engaged and entered by ABIGAIL.] Mary Warren, do you witch her? I say to you, do you send your spirit out?

[With a hysterical cry MARY WARREN starts to run. PROCTOR catches her.]

MARY WARREN. [Almost collapsing.] Let me go, Mr. Proctor, I cannot, I cannot—

ABIGAIL. [Crying to Heaven.] Oh, Heavenly Father, take away this shadow!

[Without warning or hesitation, PROCTOR leaps at ABIGAIL and, grabbing her by the hair, pulls her to her feet. She screams in pain. DANFORTH, astonished, cries, "What are you about?" and HATHORNE and PARRIS call, "Take your hands off her!" and out of it all comes PROCTOR's roaring voice.]

PROCTOR. How do you call Heaven! Whore![15] Whore!

[HERRICK breaks PROCTOR from her.]

HERRICK. John!

DANFORTH. Man! Man, what do you—

PROCTOR. [Breathless and in agony.] It is a whore!

DANFORTH. [Dumfounded.][16] You charge—?

ABIGAIL. Mr. Danforth, he is lying!

PROCTOR. Mark her! Now she'll suck a scream to stab me with, but—

DANFORTH. You will prove this! This will not pass!

PROCTOR. [Trembling, his life collapsing about him.] I have known her, sir. I have known her.

DANFORTH. You—you are a lecher?

FRANCIS. [Horrified.] John, you cannot say such a—

PROCTOR. Oh, Francis, I wish you had some evil in you that you might know me! [To DANFORTH.] A man will not cast away his good name. You surely know that.

DANFORTH. [Dumfounded.] In—in what time? In what place?

PROCTOR. [His voice about to break, and his shame great.] In the proper place—where my beasts are bedded. On the last night of my joy, some eight months past. She used to serve me in my house, sir. [He has to clamp his jaw to keep from weeping.] A man may think God sleeps, but God sees everything, I know it now. I beg you, sir, I beg you—see her what she is. My wife, my dear good wife, took this girl soon after, sir, and [15] Here, whore refers to a "loose" woman, not that she has taken money for sexual services.

---

[16] Dumfounded means "speechless."

1 Evaluate Argument Is it wise for Abigail to confront the chief judge in this manner? Is her ploy successful? Explain.

Plot How is this moment crucial to the development of the plot? 2

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Irony Remind students that situational irony occurs when something happens that is the opposite of what we expect to happen (for example, if the worst player on the soccer team kicks the winning goal). Ask: Why is it ironic that when Danforth questions Elizabeth, she lies about why she dismissed Abigail as her servant? (Elizabeth is a woman who, according to her husband, "cannot lie." Yet now she does the opposite of what we might expect: she lies to protect her husband. Ironically, her action has the opposite effect: it puts him in grave danger.) Continue the discussion of irony by reminding students that dramatic irony occurs when the audience or reader realizes something that a character does not. Ask: What dramatic irony occurs in this scene? (The audience realizes something that Elizabeth does not: that Proctor wants her to tell the truth and that lying will harm rather than protect him.)

Sympathizer, 1956. Elaine de Kooning. Oil on canvas, 40¼ x 31 in. Estate of Elaine de Kooning.

View the Art Along with abstract works, Elaine de Kooning also painted portraits of celebrities, such as President John F. Kennedy. What are your reactions to this painting? How do they compare with the reactions you have to Mary Warren in Act Three? Explain. ★

Teach

View the Art ★

Answer: Some students may react to the painting with confusion about what it depicts and how its subject relates to the title. Others may feel that the painting's intense red and black colors and frenzied brushwork evoke a feeling of anger. These reactions may be similar to students' feelings about Mary Warren.

Elaine de Kooning (1920–1989) was an American painter who, during the 1940s and 1950s, was associated with the art movement known as Abstract Expressionism. The title of this painting, Sympathizer, is a reference to a term often used during the McCarthy hearings. A "Communist sympathizer" was someone who was not an official member of the Communist Party but was accused of being sympathetic to its ideas or values.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Help English learners understand the idioms Proctor uses in his confession. Explain that an idiom is an expression whose meaning is different from the literal meaning of the words that make it up. For example, when Proctor says that Elizabeth "put [Abigail] on the highroad," he does not mean that she physically placed Abigail on a high road. He means that his wife made Abigail leave the house—that is, she fired her. Help students figure out what Proctor means when he says that Abigail "thinks to dance with me on my wife's grave." Ask: Why would a person dance on someone's grave? (because he or she is happy the other person died) What does Proctor mean when he uses this expression? (Abigail thinks that she and Proctor will rejoice over Elizabeth's death because it will allow them to get married.) Have students work in pairs to figure out what Proctor means when he tells Danforth: "I set myself entirely in your hands." ("I put myself under your control or judgment.")

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Argument

Answer: Proctor puts himself at the mercy of the court. He hopes to convince Danforth that Abigail's accusations against Elizabeth are motivated by a wish to supplant Elizabeth as Proctor's wife.

Reading Strategy 2

Evaluate Argument

Answer: Abigail's defense is to act offended. Some will suggest that her theatrical skills can get her out of any predicament. Others may argue that eventually she will have to respond to Proctor's accusation.

APPROACHING Ask students to consider how Abigail's strategy relates to this maxim: "The best defense is a strong offense."

Literary Element 3

Plot Answer: Proctor is counting on Elizabeth's honesty to confirm his accusations against Abigail. It never occurs to Proctor that Elizabeth will lie out of love in order to save her husband's reputation.

put her out on the highroad. And being what she is, a lump of vanity, sir—[He is being overcome.] Excellency, forgive me, forgive me. [Angrily against himself, he turns away from the Governor for a moment. Then, as though to cry out is his only means of speech left.] She thinks to dance with me on my wife's grave! And well she might, for I thought of her softly. God help me, I lusted, and there is a promise in such sweat. But it is a whore's vengeance, and you must see it; I set myself entirely in your hands. I know you must see it now.

DANFORTH. [Blanched,[17] in horror, turning to ABIGAIL.] You deny every scrap and tittle of this?

ABIGAIL. If I must answer that, I will leave and I will not come back again!

[DANFORTH seems unsteady.]

PROCTOR. I have made a bell of my honor! I have rung the doom of my good name—you will believe me, Mr. Danforth! My wife is innocent, except she knew a whore when she saw one!

ABIGAIL. [Stepping up to DANFORTH.] What look do you give me? [DANFORTH cannot speak.] I'll not have such looks! [She turns and starts for the door.]

DANFORTH. You will remain where you are! [HERRICK steps into her path. She comes up short, fire in her eyes.] Mr. Parris, go into the court and bring Goodwife Proctor out.

PARRIS. [Objecting.] Your Honor, this is all a—

DANFORTH. [Sharply to PARRIS.] Bring her out! And tell her not one word of what's been spoken here. And let you knock before you enter. [PARRIS goes out.] Now we shall touch the bottom of this swamp. [To PROCTOR.] Your wife, you say, is an honest woman.

PROCTOR. In her life, sir, she have never lied. There are them that cannot sing, and them that cannot weep—my wife cannot lie. I have paid much to learn it, sir.

DANFORTH. And when she put this girl out of your house, she put her out for a harlot?

PROCTOR. Aye, sir.

DANFORTH. And knew her for a harlot?

PROCTOR. Aye, sir, she knew her for a harlot.

DANFORTH. Good then. [To ABIGAIL.] And if she tell me, child, it were for harlotry, may God spread His mercy on you! [There is a knock. He calls to the door.] Hold! [To ABIGAIL.] Turn your back. Turn your back. [To PROCTOR.] Do likewise. [Both turn their backs—ABIGAIL with indignant slowness.] Now let neither of you turn to face Goody Proctor. No one in this room is to speak one word, or raise a gesture aye or nay. [He turns toward the door, calls.] Enter! [The door opens. ELIZABETH enters with PARRIS. PARRIS leaves her. She stands alone, her eyes looking for PROCTOR.] Mr. Cheever, report this testimony in all exactness. Are you ready?

CHEEVER. Ready, sir.

DANFORTH. Come here, woman. [ELIZABETH comes to him, glancing at PROCTOR*'s back.*] Look at me only, not at your husband. In my eyes only.

ELIZABETH. [Faintly.] Good, sir.

DANFORTH. We are given to understand that at one time you dismissed your servant, Abigail Williams.

ELIZABETH. That is true, sir.

DANFORTH. For what cause did you dismiss her? [Slight pause. Then ELIZABETH tries to glance at PROCTOR.] You will look in my eyes only and not at your husband. The answer is in your memory and you need no help to give it to me. Why did you dismiss Abigail Williams?

ELIZABETH. [Not knowing what to say, sensing a situation, wetting her lips to stall for time.] She—dissatisfied me. [Pause.] And my husband.

---

[17] Here, blanched means "drained of color."

1 Evaluate Argument What does Proctor hope to accomplish in this conclusion to his confession?

2 Evaluate Argument How does Abigail choose to defend herself against Proctor's accusations? How effective do you think her method will be?

Plot How might Proctor's comment foreshadow the ironic reversal that occurs later in this scene? 3

Reading Practice

Rising Action Remind students that the rising action is the part of the plot when complications develop and the conflict intensifies. The rising action leads to the climax, the moment of greatest emotional intensity in the plot, when the conflict is at its peak. Make sure students understand that the rising action is a series of events, not one single event. Then point out that according to some literary critics, the climax of The Crucible occurs in Act Four. Ask: Which event on this spread represents one of the most important complications in the rising action—an event that intensifies the conflict the most? (The most important complication on this spread is when Elizabeth lies to protect her husband, not realizing that her lie will seal his doom.) Have students consider, as they read Act Four, whether this or any other event in Act Three could instead represent the play's climax.

DANFORTH. In what way dissatisfied you?

ELIZABETH. She were—[She glances at PROCTOR for a cue.]

DANFORTH. Woman, look at me! [ELIZABETH does.] Were she slovenly?[18] Lazy? What disturbance did she cause?

ELIZABETH. Your Honor, I—in that time I were sick. And I—My husband is a good and righteous man. He is never drunk as some are, nor wastin' his time at the shovelboard,[19] but always at his work. But in my sickness—you see, sir, I were a long time sick after my last baby, and I thought I saw my husband somewhat turning from me. And this girl—[She turns to ABIGAIL.]

DANFORTH. Look at me.

ELIZABETH. Aye, sir. Abigail Williams—[She breaks off.]

DANFORTH. What of Abigail Williams?

ELIZABETH. I came to think he fancied her. And so one night I lost my wits, I think, and put her out on the highroad.

DANFORTH. Your husband—did he indeed turn from you?

ELIZABETH. [In agony.] My husband—is a goodly man, sir.

DANFORTH. Then he did not turn from you.

ELIZABETH. [Starting to glance at PROCTOR.] He—

DANFORTH. [Reaches out and holds her face, then.] Look at me! To your own knowledge, has John Proctor ever committed the crime of lechery? [In a crisis of indecision she cannot speak.] Answer my question! Is your husband a lecher!

ELIZABETH. [Faintly.] No, sir.

DANFORTH. Remove her, Marshal.

PROCTOR. Elizabeth, tell the truth!

DANFORTH. She has spoken. Remove her!

PROCTOR. [Crying out.] Elizabeth, I have confessed it!

ELIZABETH. Oh, God! [The door closes behind her.]

PROCTOR. She only thought to save my name!

HALE. Excellency, it is a natural lie to tell; I beg you, stop now before another is condemned! I may shut my conscience to it no more—private vengeance is working through this testimony! From the beginning this man has struck me true. By my oath to Heaven, I believe him now, and I pray you call back his wife before we—

DANFORTH. She spoke nothing of lechery, and this man has lied!

HALE. I believe him! [Pointing at ABIGAIL.] This girl has always struck me false! She has—

[ABIGAIL, with a weird, wild, chilling cry, screams up to the ceiling.] 5

ABIGAIL. You will not! Begone! Begone, I say!

DANFORTH. What is it, child? [But ABIGAIL, pointing with fear, is now raising up her frightened eyes, her awed face, toward the ceiling—the girls are doing the same—and now HATHORNE, HALE, PUTNAM, CHEEVER, HERRICK, and DANFORTH do the same.] What's there? [He lowers his eyes from the ceiling, and now he is frightened; there is real tension in his voice.] Child! [She is transfixed—with all the girls, she is whimpering open-mouthed, agape at the ceiling.] Girls! Why do you—?

MERCY LEWIS. [Pointing.] It's on the beam! Behind the rafter!

DANFORTH. [Looking up.] Where!

ABIGAIL. Why—? [She gulps.] Why do you come, yellow bird?

PROCTOR. Where's a bird? I see no bird!

ABIGAIL. [To the ceiling.] My face? My face?

PROCTOR. Mr. Hale—

DANFORTH. Be quiet!!

PROCTOR. [To HALE.] Do you see a bird?

---

[18] To be slovenly is to be untidy or careless, especially in appearance.

[19] Shovelboard is a tabletop version of shuffleboard.

4 Plot How do these two words alter the direction of the plot?

Evaluate Argument Danforth and Hale draw different conclusions from the preceding scene. Which one has come closer to the truth? Explain. 6

Teach

Literary Element 4

Plot Answer: In lying to save her husband's reputation, Elizabeth has unintentionally branded him a liar and put his life in danger.

Literary Element 5

Plot Ask: What do you think is the motivation for Abigail's outburst, which interrupts Hale's speech? (Hale might expose her as a fraud. She deflects attention from the accusations against her by creating an uproar.)

APPROACHING Ask: Why would Abigail want to cause a disturbance at this point? (to prevent Hale from continuing to accuse her of being "false")

Reading Strategy 6

Evaluate Argument

Answer: Danforth has logic on his side but is ignorant of human nature. Hale understands that Elizabeth has lied out of love. Hale also understands that innocent people are being condemned by Abigail's private vengeance.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Students may be confused about why Hale has changed his mind about Abigail. Remind students of the difference between a dynamic and a static character: A dynamic character is someone who develops and changes—who learns something as a result of what happens during the literary work. In contrast, a static character is someone who does not change. Next, remind students that in Act Two, when Elizabeth is arrested, Proctor tells Hale that "vengeance is walking Salem." Ask: What does Hale mean when he tells Danforth that he can no longer shut his conscience to the fact that "private vengeance" is at work? (He means that he now understands what Proctor has insisted all along—that the witch hunt is motivated by personal revenge, not the search for truth or justice.) Discuss with students whether they find Hale's change in attitude believable. Encourage students to support their opinion with evidence from the play, as well as from their own experiences or observations about human nature.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Argument

Answer: Abigail is trying to discredit Mary by making Danforth believe that Mary is using witchcraft to attack her. She is successful; Danforth is "horrified" and orders Mary to draw back her "spirit."

Big Idea 2

The United States and the World

Answer: This stage direction shows that Danforth not only believes that Abigail's vision is real but also that Mary caused it. Like many witnesses at the McCarthy hearings, Mary realizes that no one in power will believe her and decides to save herself by betraying others.

Reading Strategy 3

Make Predictions

Ask: How do you think Mary will react to Danforth's relentless prodding? (She will confess what he wants to hear, but claim that she is "afflicted" by another's witchcraft.)

DANFORTH. Be quiet!

ABIGAIL. [To the ceiling, in a genuine conversation with the "bird," as though trying to talk it out of attacking her.] But God made my face; you cannot want to tear my face. Envy is a deadly sin, Mary.

MARY WARREN. [On her feet with a spring, and horrified, pleading.] Abby!

ABIGAIL. [Unperturbed, continuing to the "bird."*] Oh, Mary, this is a black art to change your shape. No, I cannot, I cannot stop my mouth; it's God's work I do.

MARY WARREN. Abby, I'm here!

PROCTOR. [Frantically.] They're pretending, Mr. Danforth!

ABIGAIL. [Now she takes a backward step, as though in fear the bird will swoop down momentarily.] Oh, please, Mary! Don't come down.

SUSANNA WALCOTT. Her claws, she's stretching her claws!

PROCTOR. Lies, lies.

ABIGAIL. [Backing further, eyes still fixed above.] Mary, please don't hurt me!

MARY WARREN. [To DANFORTH.] I'm not hurting her!

DANFORTH. [To MARY WARREN.] Why does she see this vision?

MARY WARREN. She sees nothin'!

ABIGAIL. [Now staring full front as though hypnotized, and mimicking the exact tone of MARY WARREN*'s cry.*] She sees nothin'!

MARY WARREN. [Pleading.] Abby, you mustn't!

ABIGAIL AND ALL THE GIRLS. [All transfixed.] Abby, you mustn't!

MARY WARREN. [To all the girls.] I'm here, I'm here!

GIRLS. I'm here, I'm here!

DANFORTH. [Horrified.] Mary Warren! Draw back your spirit out of them!

MARY WARREN. Mr. Danforth!

GIRLS. [Cutting her off.] Mr. Danforth!

DANFORTH. Have you compacted with the Devil? Have you?

MARY WARREN. Never, never!

GIRLS. Never, never!

DANFORTH. [Growing hysterical.] Why can they only repeat you?

PROCTOR. Give me a whip—I'll stop it!

MARY WARREN. They're sporting. They—!

GIRLS. They're sporting!

MARY WARREN. [Turning on them all hysterically and stamping her feet.] Abby, stop it!

GIRLS. [Stamping their feet.] Abby, stop it!

MARY WARREN. Stop it!

GIRLS. Stop it!

MARY WARREN. [Screaming it out at the top of her lungs, and raising her fists.] Stop it!!

GIRLS. [Raising their fists.] Stop it!!

[MARY WARREN, utterly confounded, and becoming overwhelmed by ABIGAIL's—and the girls'—utter conviction, starts to whimper, hands half raised, powerless, and all the girls begin whimpering exactly as she does.] 3

DANFORTH. A little while ago you were afflicted. Now it seems you afflict others; where did you find this power?

MARY WARREN. [Staring at ABIGAIL.] I—have no power.

GIRLS. I have no power.

PROCTOR. They're gulling[20] you, Mister!

1 Evaluate Argument What is Abigail trying to accomplish in this scene? Is she successful? Explain.

2 The United States and the World How does this stage direction help to explain why Mary betrays Proctor and why many witnesses at the McCarthy hearings betrayed their friends and colleagues?

Vocabulary

unperturbed (un pər turbd´) adj. undisturbed; calm

---

[20] Gulling means "deceiving."

Writing Practice

Diary Entry Mary Warren plays a critical role in the last few pages of Act Three. After students finish reading this act, have them draft a diary entry that Mary might have been written the night after her appearance in court. Before students begin writing, suggest that they consider these questions:

- Where does Mary sleep that night, now that she has denounced Proctor?
- How does she describe what happened in court that day?
- Is she still under Abigail's influence, or has she "snapped out of it"?
- Does she feel remorse for her actions, or does she truly believe that Proctor is in league with the Devil?

Encourage students to come up with a point of view and writing style that fit Mary's character, situation, and setting.

Challenge them to use this diary entry to explore ambiguities in the play.

DANFORTH. Why did you turn about this past two weeks? You have seen the Devil, have you not?

HALE. [Indicating ABIGAIL and the girls.] You cannot believe them!

MARY WARREN. I—

PROCTOR. [Sensing her weakening.] Mary, God damns all liars!

DANFORTH. [Pounding it into her.] You have seen the Devil, you have made compact with Lucifer, have you not?

PROCTOR. God damns liars, Mary!

[MARY utters something unintelligible, staring at ABIGAIL, who keeps watching the "bird" above.]

DANFORTH. I cannot hear you. What do you say? [MARY utters again unintelligibly.] You will confess yourself or you will hang! [He turns her roughly to face him.] Do you know who I am? I say you will hang if you do not open with me!

PROCTOR. Mary, remember the angel Raphael—do that which is good and—

ABIGAIL. [Pointing upward.] The wings! Her wings are spreading! Mary, please, don't, don't—!

HALE. I see nothing, Your Honor!

DANFORTH. Do you confess this power! [He is an inch from her face.] Speak!

ABIGAIL. She's going to come down! She's walking the beam!

DANFORTH. Will you speak!

MARY WARREN. [Staring in horror.] I cannot!

GIRLS. I cannot!

PARRIS. Cast the Devil out! Look him in the face! Trample him! We'll save you, Mary, only stand fast against him and—

4 The United States and the World What connection would Miller's 1950s audiences have made between Danforth's questions and the McCarthy hearings?

5 Plot How does Arthur Miller create tension in this scene?

Caged Man in Flames. John Ritter.

ABIGAIL. [Looking up.] Look out! She's coming down!

[She and all the girls run to one wall, shielding their eyes. And now, as though cornered, they let out a gigantic scream, and MARY, as though infected, opens her mouth and screams with them. Gradually ABIGAIL and the girls leave off, until only MARY is left there, staring up at the "bird," screaming madly. All watch her, horrified by this evident fit. PROCTOR strides to her.]

PROCTOR. Mary, tell the Governor what they—[He has hardly got a word out, when, seeing him coming for her, she rushes out of his reach, screaming in horror.]

MARY WARREN. Don't touch me—don't touch me! [At which the girls halt at the door.]

Teach

Big Idea 4

The United States and the World Answer: Audiences would be aware that McCarthy and his followers equated communism with evil. They would have mentally substituted Communists for Devil and Lucifer in Danforth's question.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Ask: What other name for the Devil has been used in the play? (Satan)

Literary Element 5

Plot Answer: He emphasizes the pressure on Mary—from Danforth, Proctor, Hale, and Abigail. This emphasis prepares us for her breakdown.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Say: Danforth's statement is both a question and a command. When a sentence can end with two types of punctuation marks, the stronger mark can be used by itself. Ask: How would the effect of Danforth's line be different if Miller had ended it with a question mark? (He would seem less forceful and bullying toward Mary.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Students may be confused about what is going on in the yellow bird scene that continues on this spread. Help students understand that Abigail is trying to convince Danforth that Mary has used witchcraft to turn herself into a bird. Direct students' attention to Abigail's statement: "Oh, Mary, this is black art to change your shape." Explain that black art is another name for black magic, and that both terms refer to witchcraft. Everyone in the courtroom would have understood that shape changing is considered an important attribute of witchcraft. Ask: Why does Abigail want Danforth to believe that Mary has turned herself into a yellow bird? (Abigail wants Danforth to believe that Mary is using witchcraft against her.)

Benchmark Ask: Why does Abigail want Danforth to believe that Mary is using witchcraft? (to discredit Mary's claim that she never saw spirits and was simply pretending)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Plot Answer: Proctor's sole witness has abandoned him. He has no one left to substantiate his claims.

Big Idea 2

The United States and the World Answer: He sees those in league with the Devil everywhere; he believes the accusers.

Reading Strategy 3

Interpret Ask: What is Proctor's state of mind when he says "God is dead!"? (Some may say he has gone mad, as the stage directions note that he is "wild." Others may say he has lost faith in God for allowing this evil to occur.)

Big Idea 4

The United States and the World Answer: In driving the scholarly and respected Hale away, the witch hunters have lost a key ally.

Progress Check

Can students analyze plot?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 245.

To check students' understanding of the act, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 250–251.

PROCTOR. [Astonished.] Mary!

MARY WARREN. [Pointing at PROCTOR.] You're the Devil's man!

[He is stopped in his tracks.]

PARRIS. Praise God!

GIRLS. Praise God!

PROCTOR. [Numbed.] Mary, how—?

MARY WARREN. I'll not hang with you! I love God, I love God.

DANFORTH. [To MARY.] He bid you do the Devil's work?

MARY WARREN. [Hysterically, indicating PROCTOR.] He come at me by night and every day to sign, to sign, to—

DANFORTH. Sign what?

PARRIS. The Devil's book? He come with a book?

MARY WARREN. [Hysterically, pointing at PROCTOR, fearful of him.] My name, he want my name. "I'll murder you," he says, "if my wife hangs! We must go and overthrow the court," he says!

[DANFORTH*'s hand jerks toward* PROCTOR, shock and horror in his face.]

PROCTOR. [Turning, appealing to HALE.] Mr. Hale!

MARY WARREN. [Her sobs beginning.] He wake me every night, his eyes were like coals and his fingers claw my neck, and I sign, I sign . . .

HALE. Excellency, this child's gone wild!

PROCTOR. [As DANFORTH*'s wide eyes pour on him.*] Mary, Mary!

MARY WARREN. [Screaming at him.] No, I love God; I go your way no more. I love God, I bless God. [Sobbing, she rushes to ABIGAIL.] Abby, Abby, I'll never hurt you more! [They all watch, as ABIGAIL, out of her infinite charity, reaches out and draws the sobbing MARY to her, and then looks up to DANFORTH.]

1

DANFORTH. [To PROCTOR.] What are you? [PROCTOR is beyond speech in his anger.] You are combined with anti-Christ, are you not? I have seen your power; you will not deny it! What say you, Mister?

HALE. Excellency—

DANFORTH. I will have nothing from you, Mr. Hale! [To PROCTOR.] Will you confess yourself befouled with Hell, or do you keep that black allegiance yet? What say you?

PROCTOR. [His mind wild, breathless.] I say—I say—God is dead!

PARRIS. Hear it, hear it!

PROCTOR. [Laughs insanely, then.] A fire, a fire 3 burning! I hear the boot of Lucifer, I see his filthy face! And it is my face, and yours, Danforth! For them that quail to bring men out of ignorance, as I have quailed, and as you quail now when you know in all your black hearts that this be fraud—God damns our kind especially, and we will burn, we will burn together!

DANFORTH. Marshal! Take him and Corey with him to the jail!

HALE. [Starting across to the door.] I denounce[21] these proceedings!

PROCTOR. You are pulling Heaven down and raising up a whore!

HALE. I denounce these proceedings, I quit this court! [He slams the door to the outside behind him.]

DANFORTH. [Calling to him in a fury.] Mr. Hale! Mr. Hale!

THE CURTAIN FALLS

---

2 Plot How might this be a turning point in the plot?

[21] Here, denounce means "to publicly pronounce something to be evil."

The United States and the World Senator McCarthy and his followers were convinced that undercover Communists were everywhere. How does Danforth's comment reveal a similar state of mind?

The United States and the World Senator McCarthy's power began to decline when he launched an investigation into the United States Army. How is this a similar situation? 4

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW

Irony Have students discuss the irony achieved by Parris and the girls saying and repeating the words "Praise God!" in the left column. Mary remains truthful until Abigail and the other girls begin mimicking her. They create the illusion that her evil spirit has possessed them. Here, the girls repeat Parris, not Mary. Parris's unstated meaning is "Praise God that we have broken her." Evil is now speaking through Parris. The girls, in that same spirit of evil, echo his words.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)How and why does Giles Corey interrupt the court proceedings? (b)What does the response of the judges to him and Francis Nurse suggest about the way the trials are being conducted?
2. (a)Why does Proctor bring Mary Warren to court? (b)How does Mary Warren's confession threaten Danforth, Parris, and Hathorne?
3. (a)What does Abigail do when Hale gives his opinion of her? (b)What can you infer about the general emotional state surrounding these accusations and condemnations?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)How do Hale's attitudes toward Elizabeth's lie and Abigail's deception differ? (b)Do you agree with his distinction?
5. (a)How does Abigail succeed in controlling the investigation? (b)Might Proctor have prevailed over Abigail? Support your opinion.
6. Shortly before Proctor is arrested, he says, ". . . God is dead!" What do you think that Proctor means by this remark?

Connect

7. Big Idea The United States and the World Does Miller successfully compare the HUAC hearings with the Salem witch trials? Explain.
8. Connect to Today In this Act, Miller highlights the weaknesses of the court system. Do you think that if witnesses today questioned legal proceedings like Proctor does that they would be accused of questioning the validity of the entire court system? Explain.

Literary Element Plot

The plot events build to a point of greatest emotional intensity, interest, or suspense called the climax. Usually the climax is a turning point after which the resolution of a conflict becomes clear.

1. What do you see as the climax of Act Three?
2. Which conflicts are now on the way to being resolved?

Reading Strategy Evaluate Argument

Evaluate the following examples of reasoning in Act Three. Support your evaluations.

1. Hathorne argues that a person may be a witch without knowing it.
2. Elizabeth Proctor reasons that it is better to protect her husband than to tell the truth.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Identify the context clues in the following sentences that help you determine the meaning of each boldfaced vocabulary word.

1. My car is in immaculate condition. Yours, on the other hand, is old and rusty.
2. He lied while under oath, thus committing perjury.
3. I didn't want to make a rash decision, so I passed days in contemplation.
4. Old Mr. Alvarez is unperturbed by the noise because he is completely deaf.

Writing

Write a Summary Write a summary of Act Three, making sure to identify key events and the climax. Remember that the purpose of a summary is to highlight key points. For help, see page 253.

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) He shouts that Putnam accuses people to gain their land. (b) The accused have no opportunity for self-defense.
2. (a) To swear everyone was pretending (b) They will lose respect if seen to have wrongly condemned people.
3. (a) She pretends to see an evil spirit. (b) Fear rules; people are irrational.
4. (a) Elizabeth's lie is natural; Abigail's lies are self-serving and harmful. (b) Most will agree.
5. (a) She is defiant and intimidating. (b) Students may feel she is too strong-willed for him to prevail even if Mary is firm and Elizabeth does not lie.
6. He is expressing utter frustration and believes that evil is triumphing over good.
7. Yes. Both ruined people with weak evidence and guilt by association, used testimonies, and caused unjust suffering.
8. Students will probably acknowledge the relative stability and flexibility of our court system.

Literary Element

1. John's admission of adultery, Elizabeth's lie, Mary's accusation of John, or Danforth's order to imprison John
2. Proctor's and Hale's conflicts with their conscience; Proctor's fight with authority

Reading Strategy

1. One cannot be guilty of a deliberate crime and not know it.
2. Elizabeth acts out of love for her husband.

Vocabulary

1. Immaculate: "clean to the point of being spotless"; its opposite, "old and rusty," is given in the sentence.
2. The definition of perjury, or lying under oath, is given in the sentence.
3. Contemplation is the opposite of "Rash decision" so it must mean "a slow and serious thought process."
4. Because a completely deaf person is not affected by a noise, unperturbed must mean "undisturbed."

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' summaries:

- Does the summary identify key events and the climax of Act Three?
- Is the summary concise?

Before You Read

Focus

Summary, Act Four

John Proctor, Rebecca Nurse, and others are to be hanged. Parris asks Judge Danforth to postpone the hangings. Abigail has vanished with all of Parris's money; Parris fears public opinion. John tells Elizabeth that he is thinking about confessing and asks if she can forgive him. When John reluctantly signs a confession, Danforth insists that it be nailed to the church door. John destroys it and goes to his death, realizing he has some goodness.

Vocabulary

Prefixes Ask: What does the prefix re- mean? (again; back) Say: Sometimes the meaning of the prefix re- in a word is obvious, as in retell ("tell again"). In other words, its meaning is less apparent. Explain that in the word reprieve, the prefix re- means "back": to "take back" a judicial sentence. In the word retaliation, re- also means "back": the act of "paying back" in kind.

Before You Read

The Crucible, Act Four

Learning Objectives

For pages 1096–1114

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing tragedy.

Reading: Analyzing theme.

Build Background

Eventually Massachusetts authorities realized the danger of accepting the "spectral evidence" of dreams or visions and put an end to the trials. To ensure that such a slaughter of the innocents could never happen again, the courts decreed that witchcraft was no longer punishable by death.

Literary Element Tragedy

A tragedy is a play in which a main character suffers a downfall. That character, the tragic hero, is typically a person of exalted status who possesses admirable qualities. The downfall may result from outside forces or from a weakness within the character, which is known as a tragic flaw. As you read Act Four of The Crucible, ask yourself, Do any of the characters fulfill the requirements of a tragic hero?

Reading Strategy Analyze Theme

Theme is the central message of a work of literature, often expressed as a general statement about life. Some works have a stated theme, which is expressed directly. More works have an implied theme, which is revealed gradually through events, dialogue, or description. Themes often comment on topics, which are general concepts. As you read, ask yourself, What topics are addressed by Miller, and what is the overall theme of this play?

Tip: Identify Topic and Theme Create concept webs like the one below to identify possible topics and themes of Act Four of The Crucible.

Topic: Sanity/Insanity
Possible Theme: People can be driven insane by insane situations.

Vocabulary

conciliatory (kən sil´ ē ə tôr´ ē) adj. trying to gain the good will of another by friendly acts; p. 1102 The boys who broke the window mowed our lawn as a conciliatory gesture.

reprieve (ri prēv´) n. official postponement of the carrying out of a sentence; p. 1102 A last-minute reprieve from the governor saved him from hanging.

retaliation (ri tal´ ē ā´ shən) n. the act of repaying an injury or a wrong by committing the same, or a similar, act; p. 1102 In retaliation for the bombing, the rebels shot down a helicopter.

adamant (ad´ ə mənt) adj. completely firm and unyielding; p. 1102 Mom is adamant about my observing a midnight curfew.

indictment (in dīt´ mənt) n. a formal legal accusation, charging the commission or omission of an act, which is punishable by law; p. 1105 The indictment led to her trial and conviction.

Selection Skills

The Crucible, Act Four

Literary Elements
- Tragedy (SE pp. 1096–1115)
- Conflict (SE p. 1114)
- Irony (TE p. 1098, 1110)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Theme (SE pp. 1096–1114)
- Interpret (TE p. 1102)
- Evaluate Theme (TE pp. 1112)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Origin (TE p. 1098)

Listening/Speaking/ Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE pp. 1101, 1103)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Editorial (SE p. 1115)

Act Four

[A cell in Salem jail, that fall.

At the back is a high barred window; near it, a great, heavy door. Along the walls are two benches. The place is in darkness but for the moonlight seeping through the bars. It appears empty. Presently footsteps are heard coming down a corridor beyond the wall, keys rattle, and the door swings open. MARSHAL HERRICK enters with a lantern.

1 He is nearly drunk, and heavy-footed. He goes to a bench and nudges a bundle of rags lying on it.]

HERRICK. Sarah, wake up! Sarah Good! [He then crosses to the other bench.]

SARAH GOOD. [Rising in her rags.] Oh, Majesty! Comin', comin'! Tituba, he's here, His Majesty's come!

HERRICK. Go to the north cell; this place is wanted now. [He hangs his lantern on the wall. TITUBA sits up.]

TITUBA. That don't look to me like His Majesty; look to me like the marshal.

HERRICK. [Taking out a flask.] Get along with you now, clear this place. [He drinks, and SARAH GOOD comes and peers up into his face.]

SARAH GOOD. Oh, is it you, Marshal! I thought sure you be the devil comin' for us. Could I have a sip of cider for me goin'-away?

HERRICK. [Handing her the flask.] And where are you off to, Sarah?

TITUBA. [As SARAH drinks.] We goin' to Barbados, soon the Devil gits here with the feathers and the wings.

HERRICK. Oh? A happy voyage to you.

SARAH GOOD. A pair of bluebirds wingin' southerly, the two of us! Oh, it be a grand transformation, Marshal! [She raises the flask to drink again.]

HERRICK. [Taking the flask from her lips.] You'd best give me that or you'll never rise off the ground. Come along now.

TITUBA. I'll speak to him for you, if you desire to come along, Marshal.

HERRICK. I'd not refuse it, Tituba; it's the proper morning to fly into Hell.

TITUBA. Oh, it be no Hell in Barbados. Devil, him be pleasureman in Barbados, him be singin' and dancin' in Barbados. It's you folks—you riles him up 'round here; it be too cold 'round here for that Old Boy. He freeze his soul in Massachusetts, but in Barbados he just as sweet and—[A bellowing cow is heard, and TITUBA leaps up and calls to the window.] Aye, sir! That's him, Sarah!

SARAH GOOD. I'm here, Majesty! [They hurriedly pick up their rags as HOPKINS, a guard, enters.]

HOPKINS. The Deputy Governor's arrived.

HERRICK. [Grabbing TITUBA.] Come along, come along.

TITUBA. [Resisting him.] No, he comin' for me. I goin' home!

HERRICK. [Pulling her to the door.] That's not Satan, just a poor old cow with a hatful of milk. Come along now, out with you!

TITUBA. [Calling to the window.] Take me home, Devil! Take me home!

SARAH GOOD. [Following the shouting TITUBA out.] Tell him I'm goin', Tituba! Now you tell him Sarah Good is goin' too!

[In the corridor outside TITUBA calls on—"Take me home, Devil; Devil take me home!" and HOPKINS' voice orders her to move on. HERRICK returns and begins to push old rags and straw into a corner. Hearing footsteps, he turns, and enter DANFORTH and JUDGE HATHORNE. They are in greatcoats and wear hats against the bitter cold. They are followed in by CHEEVER, who carries a dispatch case and a flat wooden box containing his writing materials.]

HERRICK. Good morning, Excellency.

DANFORTH. Where is Mr. Parris?

2 Analyze Theme What do these lines imply about Herrick's morality?

The United States and the World What sort of position might a person like Cheever have held during the HUAC hearings in the 1950s? 3

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Infer Ask: Why is Herrick nearly drunk? (He may be drinking because of guilt over his role in the trials or simply because he cannot bear to face the injustice that is occurring.)

APPROACHING Have students review Herrick's words and actions in Act Three. Ask: In Act Three, what was Herrick's attitude toward the prisoners and their husbands? (He seemed sympathetic toward them and uneasy about doing his job as marshal.)

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Theme Answer: Even though he is an agent of the court, he abuses alcohol and mistreats his prisoners. His behavior is immoral, and he is compared to the devil.

Big Idea 3

The United States and the World Answer: He might have been a staff member for the committee chairman.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Students may be confused by the meaning of Tituba and Sarah Good's conversation about leaving with the devil. Help students interpret the motivation behind their behavior in this scene through a class discussion. Ask the following questions:

- Tituba and Sarah might be pretending to be witches. Why might they do this? (They may want to make their earlier confessions more believable so they will not be killed.)
- Tituba and Sarah might really believe they are witches. Why might they do this? (They have been brainwashed into thinking they are witches who work for the devil.)
- Tituba and Sarah might be mocking the trials, the accusers, and the accusations against them. Why might they do this? (They are both outsiders. Tituba is not a Puritan and Sarah Good does not act like one.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Theme Answer: He has rejected the rigid expectations of the law and is trying to work indirectly to save people's lives. His actions show that it is possible to forgive those who have technically broken the law.

Reading Strategy 2

Reread Ask: Why does Danforth say that Hale has "no authority to enter" the jail cell? (Because Hale denounced the hearings at the end of Act Three (p. 1094), Danforth believes that the minister has forfeited his right to have anything to do with the prisoners.)

Literary Element 3

Irony Ask: What is ironic about Danforth's comment on the setting? (There is not only a physical stench but also a moral one—the figurative smell of injustice and moral decay. The dramatic irony is that Danforth does not understand that he has contributed to this moral stench, but the audience does.)

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 252–264.

National Theater Production of The Crucible by Arthur Miller. National Theater, London.

HERRICK. I'll fetch him. [He starts for the door.]

DANFORTH. Marshal. [HERRICK stops.] When did Reverend Hale arrive?

HERRICK. It were toward midnight, I think.

DANFORTH. [Suspiciously.] What is he about here?

HERRICK. He goes among them that will hang, sir. And he prays with them. He sits with Goody Nurse now. And Mr. Parris with him.

1 Analyze Theme What do Hale's actions tell us about the topic of forgiveness?

DANFORTH. Indeed. That man have no authority to enter here, Marshal. Why have you let him in? 2

HERRICK. Why, Mr. Parris command me, sir. I cannot deny him.

DANFORTH. Are you drunk, Marshal?

HERRICK. No, sir; it is a bitter night, and I have no fire here.

DANFORTH. [Containing his anger.] Fetch Mr. Parris.

HERRICK. Aye, sir.

DANFORTH. There is a prodigious stench in this place. 3

Vocabulary Practice

Word Origins The word prodigious, at the top of page 1099, is defined as (1) wonderful (2) of great power, size (3) portentous, or ominous. Ask: Which of these meanings works for prodigious in its context here? (none) Explain that in the 1600s, according to the Oxford English Dictionary (OED), prodigious meant "unnatural, abnormal, amazing, monstrous, enormous." Ask: Which of these works in context? (unnatural; monstrous) The OED offers something a smaller dictionary does not–usages that go back hundreds of years.

HERRICK. I have only now cleared the people out for you.

DANFORTH. Beware hard drink, Marshal.

HERRICK. Aye, sir. [He waits an instant for further orders. But DANFORTH, in dissatisfaction, turns his back on him, and HERRICK goes out. There is a pause. DANFORTH stands in thought.]

HATHORNE. Let you question Hale, Excellency; I should not be surprised he have been preaching in Andover lately.

DANFORTH. We'll come to that; speak nothing of Andover. Parris prays with him. That's strange. [He blows on his hands, moves toward the window, and looks out.]

HATHORNE. Excellency, I wonder if it be wise to let Mr. Parris so continuously with the prisoners. [DANFORTH turns to him, interested.] I think, sometimes, the man has a mad look these days.

DANFORTH. Mad?

HATHORNE. I met him yesterday coming out of his house, and I bid him good morning—and he wept and went his way. I think it is not well the village sees him so unsteady.

DANFORTH. Perhaps he have some sorrow.

CHEEVER. [Stamping his feet against the cold.] I think it be the cows, sir.

DANFORTH. Cows?

CHEEVER. There be so many cows wanderin' the highroads, now their masters are in the jails, and much disagreement who they will belong to now. I know Mr. Parris be arguin' with farmers all yesterday—there is great contention, sir, about the cows. Contention make him weep, sir; it were always a man that weep for contention. [He turns, as do HATHORNE and DANFORTH, hearing someone coming up the corridor. DANFORTH raises his head as PARRIS enters. He is gaunt, frightened, and sweating in his greatcoat.]

PARRIS. [To DANFORTH, instantly.] Oh, good morning, sir, thank you for coming, I beg your pardon wakin' you so early. Good morning, Judge Hathorne.

DANFORTH. Reverend Hale have no right to enter this—

PARRIS. Excellency, a moment. [He hurries back and shuts the door.]

HATHORNE. Do you leave him alone with the prisoners?

DANFORTH. What's his business here?

PARRIS. [Prayerfully holding up his hands.] Excellency, hear me. It is a providence. Reverend Hale has returned to bring Rebecca Nurse to God.

DANFORTH. [Surprised.] He bids her confess?

PARRIS. [Sitting.] Hear me. Rebecca have not given me a word this three month since she came. Now she sits with him, and her sister and Martha Corey and two or three others, and he pleads with them, confess their crimes and save their lives.

DANFORTH. Why—this is indeed a providence. And they soften, they soften?

PARRIS. Not yet, not yet. But I thought to summon you, sir, that we might think on whether it be not wise, to—[He dares not say it.] I had thought to put a question, sir, and I hope you will not—

DANFORTH. Mr. Parris, be plain, what troubles you?

PARRIS. There is news, sir, that the court—the court must reckon with. My niece, sir, my niece—I believe she has vanished.

DANFORTH. Vanished!

PARRIS. I had thought to advise you of it earlier in the week, but—

DANFORTH. Why? How long is she gone?

PARRIS. This be the third night. You see, sir, she told me she would stay a night with Mercy Lewis. And next day, when she does not return, I send to Mr. Lewis to inquire. Mercy told him she would sleep in my house for a night.

4 Tragedy What is it about Reverend Parris's actions and character that make him an unlikely tragic hero?

Analyze Theme If a possible topic in these lines is salvation, what is a possible theme? Explain. 5

Teach

Literary Element 4

Tragedy Answer: Although Parris might be considered a character of exalted status, one of the characteristics of a tragic hero, he does not possess the other key characteristic: admirable qualities that are marred by one tragic flaw. He is in fact selfish and cowardly.

Reading Strategy 5

Analyze Theme Answer: A possible theme is that salvation is open to those who were previously condemned.

Cultural History ☆

Andover and Witches A man from nearby Andover asked the "afflicted" Salem girls to identify the cause of his wife's illness. The girls accused more than 50 people–over 40 from Andover–of witchcraft. After one of the accused demanded that his accusers be arrested for defamation of character and that he be awarded a thousand pounds (British currency) in damages, accusations of witchcraft in Andover abated.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate English learners will come across some common words that are used in ways students may not have encountered before. Present these examples from this spread: "it is a bitter night;" "the man has a mad look;" "they soften."

Have students work with a partner to complete a three-column chart. In the first column, have them list the words bitter, mad, and soft. In the second column, have them provide each word's familiar meaning, using a dictionary if necessary. In the third column, have them use context clues to guess at the word's unfamiliar meaning as it is used in the example from the play.

Advanced Have students complete the Intermediate activity. Then have them come up with an original sentence for each word, using its meaning in the context of the play.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Theme Answer: This is the first time that the accused people's crimes have included anything other than witchcraft. Parris's insistence that the courts have gone too far in arresting Rebecca Nurse shows that the letter of the law has overtaken the spirit of the law.

Literary Element 2

Characterization Ask: Whom is Parris concerned about here? (He says his concern is for Danforth, but as has been evident from the start, he is concerned only about himself.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Make sure students understand that wake means "awaken." Ask: What does vengeance mean? (revenge) What exactly is Parris warning Danforth will happen if Rebecca is hanged? (It will awaken in the people of Salem a desire for revenge against Danforth and the other witch hunters. In other words, there will be a riot.)

DANFORTH. They are both gone?!

PARRIS. [In fear of him.] They are, sir.

DANFORTH. [Alarmed.] I will send a party for them. Where may they be?

PARRIS. Excellency, I think they be aboard a ship. [DANFORTH stands agape.] My daughter tells me how she heard them speaking of ships last week, and tonight I discover my—my strongbox is broke into. [He presses his fingers against his eyes to keep back tears.]

HATHORNE. [Astonished.] She have robbed you?

PARRIS. Thirty-one pound is gone. I am penniless. [He covers his face and sobs.]

DANFORTH. Mr. Parris, you are a brainless man! [He walks in thought, deeply worried.]

PARRIS. Excellency, it profit nothing you should blame me. I cannot think they would run off except they fear to keep in Salem any more. [He is pleading.] Mark it, sir, Abigail had close knowledge of the town, and since the news of Andover has broken here—

DANFORTH. Andover is remedied. The court returns there on Friday, and will resume examinations.

PARRIS. I am sure of it, sir. But the rumor here speaks rebellion in Andover, and it—

DANFORTH. There is no rebellion in Andover!

PARRIS. I tell you what is said here, sir. Andover have thrown out the court, they say, and will have no part of witchcraft. There be a faction here, feeding on that news, and I tell you true, sir, I fear there will be riot here.

HATHORNE. Riot! Why at every execution I have seen naught but high satisfaction in the town.

PARRIS. Judge Hathorne—it were another sort that hanged till now. Rebecca Nurse is no Bridget that lived three year with Bishop before she married him. John Proctor is not Isaac Ward that drank his family to ruin. [To DANFORTH.] I would to God it were not so, Excellency, but these people have great weight yet in the town. Let Rebecca stand upon the gibbet[1] and send up some righteous prayer, and I fear she'll wake a vengeance on you. 2

HATHORNE. Excellency, she is condemned a witch. The court have—

DANFORTH. [In deep concern, raising a hand to HATHORNE.] Pray you. [To PARRIS.] How do you propose, then?

PARRIS. Excellency, I would postpone these hangin's for a time.

DANFORTH. There will be no postponement.

PARRIS. Now Mr. Hale's returned, there is hope, I think—for if he bring even one of these to God, that confession surely damns the others in the public eye, and none may doubt more that they are all linked to Hell. This way, unconfessed and claiming innocence, doubts are multiplied, many honest people will weep for them, and our good purpose is lost in their tears.

DANFORTH. [After thinking a moment, then going to CHEEVER.] Give me the list.

[CHEEVER opens the dispatch case, searches.]

PARRIS. It cannot be forgot, sir, that when I summoned the congregation for John Proctor's excommunication[2] there were hardly thirty people come to hear it. That speak a discontent, I think, and—

DANFORTH. [Studying the list.] There will be no postponement.

PARRIS. Excellency—

DANFORTH. Now, sir—which of these in your opinion may be brought to God? I will myself strive with him till dawn. [He hands the list to PARRIS, who merely glances at it.]

PARRIS. There is not sufficient time till dawn.

DANFORTH. I shall do my utmost. Which of them do you have hope for?

PARRIS. [Not even glancing at the list now, and in a quavering voice, quietly.] Excellency—a dagger— [He chokes up.]

1 Analyze Theme How do these lines mark a change in the play's focus on the crime of witchcraft to other crimes or claims of innocence?

---

[1] The gibbet (jib′ it) is the gallows.

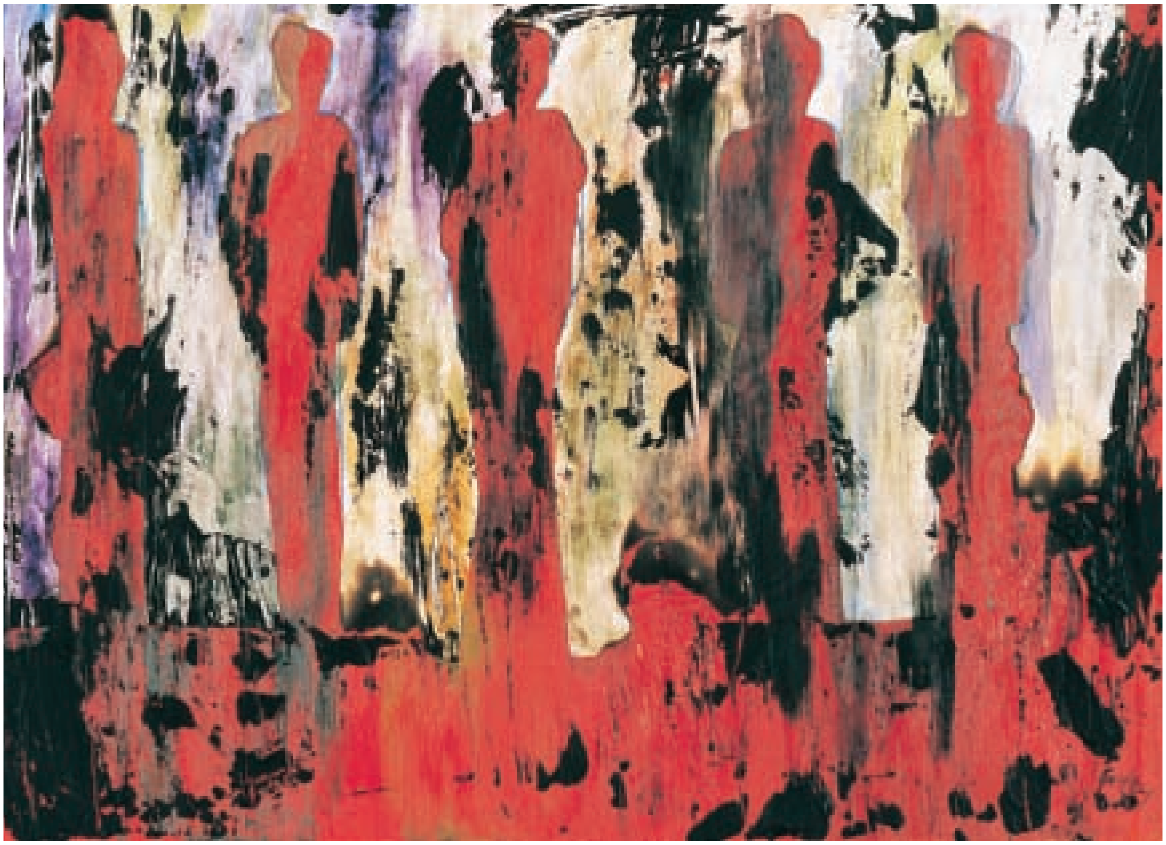
[2] Excommunication is the act, by church authorities, of expelling a person from membership in a church.

Reading Practice

Compare and Contrast Characters Have students compare and contrast the characters of Parris and Danforth. Ask: Which character is more morally despicable? Why? (Some students may argue that Parris is more despicable than Danforth because he is completely motivated by petty self-interest, whereas Danforth truly believes that his actions are morally justified. Other students may argue that Danforth is more despicable than Parris because he is willing to proceed with the executions despite his "deep concern" about both the implications and consequences of Abigail's disappearance. Danforth's moral self-righteousness will ultimately cause more suffering than Parris's amoral selfishness.) Have students present their opinions in the form of an extemporaneous debate, with one team delivering the anti-Parris argument and the other side delivering the anti-Danforth argument.



Through the Fire, 1992. Gayle Ray. Acrylic on canvas. Private collection.

View the Art In this painting, the figures not only seem to be walking through the fire, but to be part of it. How might this painting illustrate the struggles of the characters in The Crucible? ★

DANFORTH. What do you say?

3 PARRIS. Tonight, when I open my door to leave my house—a dagger clattered to the ground. [Silence. DANFORTH absorbs this. Now PARRIS cries out.] You cannot hang this sort. There is danger for me. I dare not step outside at night!

[REVEREND HALE enters. They look at him for an instant in silence. He is steeped in sorrow, exhausted, and more direct than he ever was.]

DANFORTH. Accept my congratulations, Reverend Hale; we are gladdened to see you returned to your good work.

HALE. [Coming to DANFORTH now.] You must pardon them. They will not budge.

[HERRICK enters, waits.]

DANFORTH. [Conciliatory.] You misunderstand, sir; I cannot pardon these when twelve are already hanged for the same crime. It is not just.

4 The United States and the World An ideologue is an official who systematically follows a particular set of beliefs. How were both Senator McCarthy and Judge Danforth ideologues?

Vocabulary

conciliatory (kən sil´ ē ə tôr´ ē) adj. trying to gain the good will of another by friendly acts

Teach

Literary Element 3

Symbolism Ask: What does the dagger symbolize? What message does it convey? (The dagger symbolizes violence and sends a threatening message to Parris, suggesting that his life will be in danger if the executions of respectable people like Rebecca Nurse take place.)

Big Idea 4

The United States and the World Answer: Both were determined that the investigation continue in spite of opposition. An ideologue cannot admit doubt and must persevere in a cause for the sake of consistency, even when bad results begin to outweigh the good.

View the Art ★

Answer: The characters in the play struggle both physically and emotionally. Their torment can be compared to walking through fire. The painting suggests figures in torment. The red and yellow express intense feeling and convey the ideas of fire and violence. Fire itself is, of course, the element associated with a crucible.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Remind students that some of the grammar and syntax in the play is archaic and would be considered incorrect today. For example, sometimes the subject and verb do not agree in number, as in "She have robbed you?" Ask: How would you reword this sentence using correct subject/verb agreement? ("She has robbed you?") Point out that sometimes Miller's characters use the singular where we would use the plural, leave out a word we would use, or use a different word. Have students rephrase these examples of archaic language, using contemporary English grammar and syntax: "Thirty-one pound is gone." (Thirty-one pounds are gone.) ". . . it profit nothing you should blame me." (it profits nothing that you should blame me.) ". . . they fear to keep in Salem any more." (they fear to stay in Salem any more) "How do you propose, then?" ("What do you propose, then?") "That speak a discontent . . . " (That speaks of a discontent . . .)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Tragedy Answer: Danforth exhibits inflexibility as well as a fear of losing face. He is saying that more people must die to justify the executions that have already taken place. He cannot pardon because he cannot admit self-doubt or show weakness.

Reading Strategy 2

Interpret Ask: How is Hale being sarcastic? (Hale believes that lying is a sin, yet he is counseling the accused to save their lives by lying. Hale is being sarcastic about doing the "Devil's work," because he realizes the irony of his situation. As a Christian minister, he should not be advising people to commit a sin.)

APPROACHING Ask: Why is Hale advising the accused to sin? (He is trying to save innocent lives. Under the circumstances, he feels that his advice is moral and that the sin is justified.)

Literary History ☆

Joshua In the Old Testament, God made the sun stand still, extending daylight so that the Israelites, under Joshua's leadership, could win a battle.

PARRIS. [With failing heart.] Rebecca will not confess?

HALE. The sun will rise in a few minutes. Excellency, I must have more time.

DANFORTH. Now hear me, and beguile yourselves no more. I will not receive a single plea for pardon or postponement. Them that will not confess will hang. Twelve are already executed; the names of these seven are given out, and the village expects to see them die this morning. Postponement now speaks a floundering on my part; reprieve or pardon must cast doubt upon the guilt of them that died till now. While I speak God's law, I will not crack its voice with whimpering. If retaliation is your fear, know this—I should hang ten thousand that dared to rise against the law, and an ocean of salt tears could not melt the resolution of the statutes. Now draw yourselves up like men and help me, as you are bound by Heaven to do. Have you spoken with them all, Mr. Hale?

HALE. All but Proctor. He is in the dungeon.

DANFORTH. [To HERRICK.] What's Proctor's way now?

HERRICK. He sits like some great bird; you'd not know he lived except he will take food from time to time.

DANFORTH. [After thinking a moment.] His wife—his wife must be well on with child now.

HERRICK. She is, sir.

DANFORTH. What think you, Mr. Parris? You have closer knowledge of this man; might her presence soften him?

PARRIS. It is possible, sir. He have not laid eyes on her these three months. I should summon her.

1 Tragedy What character flaw does Danforth exhibit here?

Vocabulary

reprieve (ri prēv´) n.	official postponement of the carrying out of a sentence
retaliation (ri tal´ ē ā´ shən) n.	the act of repaying an injury or wrong by committing the same, or a similar, act

DANFORTH. [To HERRICK.] Is he yet adamant? Has he struck at you again?

HERRICK. He cannot, sir, he is chained to the wall now.

DANFORTH. [After thinking on it.] Fetch Goody Proctor to me. Then let you bring him up.

HERRICK. Aye, sir. [HERRICK goes. There is silence.]

HALE. Excellency, if you postpone a week and publish to the town that you are striving for their confessions, that speak mercy on your part, not faltering.

DANFORTH. Mr. Hale, as God have not empowered me like Joshua to stop this sun from rising, so I cannot withhold from them the perfection of their punishment. ☆

HALE. [Harder now.] If you think God wills you to raise rebellion, Mr. Danforth, you are mistaken!

DANFORTH. [Instantly.] You have heard rebellion spoken in the town?

HALE. Excellency, there are orphans wandering from house to house; abandoned cattle bellow on the highroads, the stink of rotting crops hangs everywhere, and no man knows when the harlots' cry will end his life—and you wonder yet if rebellion's spoke? Better you should marvel how they do not burn your province!

DANFORTH. Mr. Hale, have you preached in Andover this month?

HALE. Thank God they have no need of me in Andover.

DANFORTH. You baffle me, sir. Why have you returned here?

HALE. Why, it is all simple. I come to do the Devil's work. I come to counsel Christians they should belie themselves. [His sarcasm collapses.] There is blood on my head! Can you not see the blood on my head!! 2

PARRIS. Hush! [For he has heard footsteps. They all face the door. HERRICK enters with ELIZABETH. Her wrists are linked by heavy chain, which HERRICK now

Vocabulary

adamant (ad´ ə mənt) adj.	completely firm and unyielding

Reading Practice

Irony Discuss the dramatic irony in Danforth's statement that it would not be "just" to pardon some prisoners when others have already hanged for the same crime. Ask: What does the audience understand that Danforth does not? (They understand the faulty logic of his argument. If the first hangings were unjust, then hanging more prisoners for the same supposed crime will also be unjust and will not justify the first hangings.) Ask: What situational irony do you see in Danforth's thinking? (His rigid consistency is achieving the opposite of what he intends: he is thwarting justice, not upholding it.)

The Last Judgement, 1955. Abraham Rattner. Watercolor on paper, 40 x 29½ in. The Lane Collection. Courtesy Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

View the Art After the horrors of World War II, Abraham Rattner delved into themes related to religion and his Jewish heritage, often referencing the Holocaust and nuclear war. In what ways might this painting and its title reflect the events in Act Four? ★

Teach

View the Art ★

Answer: The painting's title reflects the horror and finality of the death sentence that has been passed on the play's innocent victims—as well as the final judgment that awaits their murderers. The painting's dark, jagged, swirling imagery conveys a sense of violent chaos that also reflects the tragic events in Act Four.

After serving in World War I, American artist Abraham Rattner (1895–1978) lived in Paris for 20 years and was influenced by the modern art movements of Cubism, Surrealism, Futurism, and Expressionism. Rattner returned to the United States in 1939, as tensions in Europe escalated. He has been described as a "painter of the tragic."

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Help students understand Hale's motivation for doing the "Devil's work," that is, trying to get the accused to confess. Ask: What does Hale mean when he says, "There is blood on my head"? (He means that he feels at least partly responsible for the bloodshed that has occurred, because he participated in the witch hunt during its early stages and then was powerless to stop it when he realized the injustice that was taking place.) Say: Parris also wants the accused to confess. Ask: How is Parris's motivation different from Hale's? (Parris wants the accused to confess because he is afraid of what will happen to him if they are executed—namely, his life will be in danger because people will hold him responsible. Hale, on the other hand, is motivated by a desire to atone for the guilt he feels over his own part in the injustice. He is also motivated by a selfless, moral desire to save the lives of innocent people.)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Simile Ask a volunteer to read aloud Hale's speech to Elizabeth at the bottom of the first column on this page. Ask: What simile does Hale use to characterize his behavior and attitude when he first arrived in Salem? (He compares himself to a bridegroom who arrived in Salem bearing gifts for his beloved bride, the people of Salem. His gifts were his religious beliefs.) What happened when he bestowed his "gifts" on his "bride"? (She died.)

Literary Element 2

Tragedy Answer: Hale says that dying for the sake of pride may be a greater sin than lying to save one's life. Hale, aware of his pride, advises Elizabeth according to his experience.

APPROACHING Say: Sometimes pride is considered a good thing. Ask: What are some examples of "good" pride? (pride in your school, community, country, or racial or ethnic heritage) What kind of pride is usually considered a weakness? (vanity, self-righteousness, snobbishness) removes. Her clothes are dirty; her face is pale and gaunt. HERRICK goes out.]

DANFORTH. [Very politely.] Goody Proctor. [She is silent.] I hope you are hearty?

ELIZABETH. [As a warning reminder.] I am yet six month before my time.

DANFORTH. Pray be at your ease, we come not for your life. We—[Uncertain how to plead, for he is not accustomed to it.] Mr. Hale, will you speak with the woman?

HALE. Goody Proctor, your husband is marked to hang this morning.

[Pause.]

ELIZABETH. [Quietly.] I have heard it.

HALE. You know, do you not, that I have no connection with the court? [She seems to doubt it.] I come of my own, Goody Proctor. I would save your husband's life, for if he is taken I count myself his murderer. Do you understand me?

ELIZABETH. What do you want of me?

HALE. Goody Proctor, I have gone this three month like our Lord into the wilderness. I have sought a Christian way, for damnation's doubled on a minister who counsels men to lie.

HATHORNE. It is no lie, you cannot speak of lies.

HALE. It is a lie! They are innocent!

DANFORTH. I'll hear no more of that!

1 HALE. [Continuing to ELIZABETH.] Let you not mistake your duty as I mistook my own. I came into this village like a bridegroom to his beloved, bearing gifts of high religion; the very crowns of holy law I brought, and what I touched with my bright confidence, it died; and where I turned the eye of my great faith, blood flowed up. Beware, Goody Proctor—cleave[3] to no faith when faith brings blood. It is mistaken law that leads you to sacrifice. Life, woman, life is God's most precious gift; no principle, however glorious, may justify the taking of it. I beg you, woman, prevail upon[4] your husband to confess. Let him give his lie. Quail not before God's judgment in this, for it may well be God damns a liar less than he that throws his life away for pride. Will you plead with him? I cannot think he will listen to another. 1

ELIZABETH. [Quietly.] I think that be the Devil's argument.

HALE. [With a climactic desperation.] Woman, before the laws of God we are as swine! We cannot read His will!

ELIZABETH. I cannot dispute with you, sir; I lack learning for it.

DANFORTH. [Going to her.] Goody Proctor, you are not summoned here for disputation. Be there no wifely tenderness within you? He will die with the sunrise. Your husband. Do you understand it? [She only looks at him.] What say you? Will you contend with him? [She is silent.] Are you stone? I tell you true, woman, had I no other proof of your unnatural life, your dry eyes now would be sufficient evidence that you delivered up your soul to Hell! A very ape would weep at such calamity! Have the devil dried up any tear of pity in you? [She is silent.] Take her out. It profit nothing she should speak to him!

ELIZABETH. [Quietly.] Let me speak with him, Excellency.

PARRIS. [With hope.] You'll strive with him? [She hesitates.]

DANFORTH. Will you plead for his confession or will you not?

ELIZABETH. I promise nothing. Let me speak with him.

[A sound—the sibilance[5] of dragging feet on stone. They turn. A pause. HERRICK enters with JOHN PROCTOR. His wrists are chained. He is another man, bearded, filthy, his eyes misty as though webs had overgrown them. He halts inside the Tragedy How does Hale justify his advising Elizabeth to persuade Proctor to lie? What character flaw does he warn her against? 2

Analyze Theme How does this description of Proctor develop the theme of insane situations causing healthy people to go insane themselves? 3

---

[3] Here, cleave means "to stick tight," or "to remain attached."

[4] To prevail upon means "to persuade."

[5] A sibilance is a hissing sound.

Reading Practice

Evaluate an Argument

Refer students to Hale's speech to Elizabeth that starts at the bottom of the first column. Ask: How would you summarize his argument? (Hale's argument is that people should be wary of any religious faith—or any principle—that leads to the taking of life. No belief is worth dying for because life is God's most precious gift. Therefore, it is better to lie in order to live than to tell the truth and throw your life away.) What do you think of Hale's argument? (Students may agree with Hale that no principle justifies the taking of life. However, they may disagree with his related assertion that no principle is worth dying for. Students may argue that there are many principles worth dying to protect, such as freedom, justice, equality, and honor. They may also argue that by lying, the prisoners might save their own lives but cause others to die by lending credibility to the witch hunt.)

doorway, his eye caught by the sight of ELIZABETH. The emotion flowing between them prevents anyone from speaking for an instant. Now HALE, visibly affected, goes to DANFORTH and speaks quietly.]

HALE. Pray, leave them, Excellency.

DANFORTH. [Pressing HALE impatiently aside.] Mr. Proctor, you have been notified, have you not? [PROCTOR is silent, staring at ELIZABETH.] I see light in the sky, Mister; let you counsel with your wife, and may God help you turn your back on Hell. [PROCTOR is silent, staring at ELIZABETH.]

HALE. [Quietly.] Excellency, let—

[DANFORTH brushes past HALE and walks out. HALE follows. CHEEVER stands and follows, HATHORNE behind. HERRICK goes. PARRIS, from a safe distance, offers.]

PARRIS. If you desire a cup of cider, Mr. Proctor, I am sure I—[PROCTOR turns an icy stare at him, and he breaks off. PARRIS raises his palms toward PROCTOR.] God lead you now. [PARRIS goes out.]

[Alone. PROCTOR walks to her, halts. It is as though they stood in a spinning world. It is beyond sorrow, above it. He reaches out his hand as though toward an embodiment[6] not quite real, and as he touches her, a strange soft sound, half laughter, half amazement, comes from his throat. He pats her hand. She covers his hand with hers. And then, weak, he sits. Then she sits, facing him.]

PROCTOR. The child?

ELIZABETH. It grows.

PROCTOR. There is no word of the boys?

ELIZABETH. They're well. Rebecca's Samuel keeps them.

PROCTOR. You have not seen them?

ELIZABETH. I have not. [She catches a weakening in herself and downs it.]

PROCTOR. You are a—marvel, Elizabeth.

ELIZABETH. You—have been tortured?

PROCTOR. Aye. [Pause. She will not let herself be drowned in the sea that threatens her.] They come for my life now.

ELIZABETH. I know it.

[Pause.]

PROCTOR. None—have yet confessed?

ELIZABETH. There be many confessed.

PROCTOR. Who are they?

ELIZABETH. There be a hundred or more, they say. Goody Ballard is one; Isaiah Goodkind is one. There be many.

PROCTOR. Rebecca?

ELIZABETH. Not Rebecca. She is one foot in Heaven now; naught may hurt her more.

PROCTOR. And Giles?

ELIZABETH. You have not heard of it?

PROCTOR. I hear nothin', where I am kept.

ELIZABETH. Giles is dead.

[He looks at her incredulously.]

PROCTOR. When were he hanged?

ELIZABETH. [Quietly, factually.] He were not hanged. He would not answer aye or nay to his indictment; for if he denied the charge they'd hang him surely, and auction out his property. So he stand mute, and died Christian under the law. And so his sons will have his farm. It is the law, for he could not be condemned a wizard without he answer the indictment, aye or nay.

PROCTOR. Then how does he die?

ELIZABETH. [Gently.] They press him, John.

PROCTOR. Press?

ELIZABETH. Great stones they lay upon his chest until he plead aye or nay. [With a tender smile for [6] Embodiment, here, suggests a vision or a spirit rather than a solid form.

---

4 Tragedy John and Elizabeth Proctor are ragged and dirty prisoners. How does Arthur Miller manage to elevate them to heroic stature?

Vocabulary

indictment (in dīt´ mənt) n. a formal legal accusation, charging the commission or omission of an act, which is punishable by law

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Analyze Theme Answer: His physical appearance and attitude have changed as a direct result of his imprisonment. He seems to have taken on the supernatural characteristics of someone who has seen the devil.

Literary Element 4

Tragedy Answer: The stage directions and dialogue suggest that with nothing left to lose and their love renewed, they act heroically, soaring above the moral chaos of the Salem trials.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate English learners may be confused by several words on this spread that have multiple meanings or are used in an old-fashioned or figurative way. Say: When Danforth asks Elizabeth, "Are you stone?" he is not asking whether she is literally made of stone. He is using stone to mean "hard, unfeeling, or cold," like a stone. Then present these examples:

- "Goody Proctor, your husband is marked to hang this morning."
- "You'll strive with him?"
- "So he stand mute…"

Have students work with a partner to complete a three-column chart. In the first column, have them list the words marked, strive, and stand. In the second column, have them provide each word's familiar meaning, using a dictionary if necessary. In the third column, have them use context clues to guess at the word's unfamiliar, old-fashioned, or figurative meaning as it is used in the example from the play.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The United States and the World Answer: Miller refused to reveal names to the HUAC, and Corey refused to answer to his indictment.

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Theme Answer: A possible theme is that through marriage two people can find morality, stability, and reassurance.

Literary Element 3

Tragedy Answer: Elizabeth urges John to forgive himself for having committed adultery and his character flaw of infidelity. She is urging him to forgive himself for moral weakness.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Explain that flaw refers to a character flaw: a weakness within the character. Have students find synonyms for flaw in a dictionary.

Literary Element 4

Tragedy Answer: Elizabeth feels that her coldness and inability to express her love contributed to John’s infidelity.

the old man.] They say he give them but two words. “More weight,” he says. And died.

PROCTOR. [Numbed—a thread to weave into his agony.] “More weight.”

ELIZABETH. Aye. It were a fearsome man, Giles Corey.

[Pause.]

PROCTOR. [With great force of will, but not quite looking at her.] I have been thinking I would confess to them, Elizabeth. [She shows nothing.] What say you? If I give them that?

ELIZABETH. I cannot judge you, John.

[Pause.]

PROCTOR. [Simply—a pure question.] What would you have me do?

ELIZABETH. As you will, I would have it. [Slight pause.] I want you living, John. That’s sure.

PROCTOR. [Pauses, then with a flailing of hope.] Giles’ wife? Have she confessed?

ELIZABETH. She will not.

[Pause.]

PROCTOR. It is a pretense, Elizabeth.

ELIZABETH. What is?

PROCTOR. I cannot mount the gibbet like a saint. It is a fraud. I am not that man. [She is silent.] My honesty is broke, Elizabeth; I am no good man. Nothing’s spoiled by giving them this lie that were not rotten long before.

ELIZABETH. And yet you’ve not confessed till now. That speak goodness in you.

PROCTOR. Spite only keeps me silent. It is hard to give a lie to dogs. [Pause, for the first time he turns directly to her.] I would have your forgiveness, Elizabeth.

ELIZABETH. It is not for me to give, John, I am—

PROCTOR. I’d have you see some honesty in it. Let them that never lied die now to keep their souls. It is pretense for me, a vanity that will not blind God nor keep my children out of the wind. [Pause.] What say you?

ELIZABETH. [Upon a heaving sob that always threatens.] John, it come to naught that I should forgive you, if you’ll not forgive yourself. [Now he turns away a little, in great agony.] It is not my soul, John, it is yours. [He stands, as though in physical pain, slowly rising to his feet with a great immortal longing to find his answer. It is difficult to say, and she is on the verge of tears.] Only be sure of this, for I know it now: Whatever you will do, it is a good man does it. [He turns his doubting, searching gaze upon her.] I have read my heart this three month, John. [Pause.] I have sins of my own to count. It needs a cold wife to prompt lechery.

PROCTOR. [In great pain.] Enough, enough—

ELIZABETH. [Now pouring out her heart.] Better you should know me!

PROCTOR. I will not hear it! I know you!

ELIZABETH. You take my sins upon you, John—

PROCTOR. [In agony.] No, I take my own, my own!

ELIZABETH. John, I counted myself so plain, so poorly made, no honest love could come to me! Suspicion kissed you when I did; I never knew how I should say my love. It were a cold house I kept! [In fright, she swerves, as HATHORNE enters.]

HATHORNE. What say you, Proctor? The sun is soon up.

[PROCTOR, his chest heaving, stares, turns to ELIZABETH. She comes to him as though to plead, her voice quaking.]

1 The United States and the World How might Miller be making a favorable comparison between himself and Giles Corey?

2 Analyze Theme If Proctor’s question highlights the topic of family or marriage, what might a possible theme be? Explain.

Tragedy For what flaw does Elizabeth urge Proctor to forgive himself? 3

Tragedy What flaw does Elizabeth see in herself? 4

Reading Practice

Conflict Remind students that there are two kinds of conflict in literature, external and internal, and that a literary work often includes both kinds. Also point out that a single character can experience both an external and an internal conflict. After students have read this spread, have them discuss this question: What is Proctor’s internal conflict? (On the one hand, he wants “his life” and might even be willing to lie to save it, mainly because he feels that it would be “pretense” and “fraud” for him to die like a “saint.” In other words, he is struggling with his feelings of guilt and shame and does not believe that it would be morally honest for him to act like a righteous martyr. On the other hand, he does not want to give his accusers what they want and believes that a false confession is morally “evil.” On a broader level, Proctor is struggling with two different notions of what it means to be honest.)

The Crucible, 1996.

ELIZABETH. Do what you will. But let none be your judge. There be no higher judge under Heaven than Proctor is! Forgive me, forgive me, John—I never knew such goodness in the world! [She covers her face, weeping.]

[PROCTOR turns from her to HATHORNE; he is off the earth, his voice hollow.]

PROCTOR. I want my life.

HATHORNE. [Electrified, surprised.] You'll confess yourself?

PROCTOR. I will have my life.

HATHORNE. [With a mystical tone.] God be praised! It is a providence! [He rushes out the door, and his voice is heard calling down the corridor.] He will confess! Proctor will confess!

PROCTOR. [With a cry, as he strides to the door.] Why do you cry it? [In great pain he turns back to her.] It is evil, is it not? It is evil.

ELIZABETH. [In terror, weeping.] I cannot judge you, John, I cannot!

PROCTOR. Then who will judge me? [Suddenly clasping his hands.] God in Heaven, what is John

Teach

View the Photograph ★

This movie still provides a clue to readers about how the play will end. So far, the action in Act Four has taken place in the Salem jail. The picture shows prisoners outside. Ask: Who is the character in the middle? How can you tell? (The character is probably Proctor. His appearance matches the description of his condition on page 1105.) What is happening? (Proctor and others are chained to a wagon that is taking them to the gallows for execution.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Students may be confused by Proctor's insistence that it would be "fraud," "pretense," and "vanity" for him to "mount the gibbet like a saint." Make sure students understand the meaning of the words gibbet (gallows; wooden structure used for hanging people), fraud (someone who is not what he or she pretends to be), pretense (a false appearance; deceptive action), and vanity (excessive pride). Then ask: What does Proctor mean when he says, "I am not that man?" (Because of his sin of infidelity, he is not an honest, morally upright man—the kind of man who is entitled to hold his head high as he goes to his death, the kind of man who is entitled to die to uphold a principle.)

Established After students have discussed the question in the Strategic activity, ask: What does Proctor mean when he says "Nothing's spoiled by giving them this lie that were not rotten long before"? (Falsely confessing will not destroy his integrity, because he has already destroyed it by committing adultery.)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Tragedy Answer: Proctor is unsuccessfully trying to convince himself that his decision is right, but conflict is rising in the form of fury. This fury foreshadows that he will not be able to follow through on this lie—that he will not be able to make a false confession.

APPROACHING Review the definition of foreshadowing. Ask: If Proctor is feeling "fury," what might he decide to do? (He might be so angry that he decides to change his mind about giving a false confession.)

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Theme Answer: Danforth insists that Proctor confess publicly in order to show the rest of the community that the court has supreme authority. The court's power is justified in the name of the stability of the town.

Proctor, what is John Proctor? [He moves as an animal, and a fury is riding in him, a tantalized[7] search.] I think it is honest, I think so; I am no saint. [As though she had denied this he calls angrily at her.] Let Rebecca go like a saint; for me it is fraud!

[Voices are heard in the hall, speaking together in suppressed excitement.]

ELIZABETH. I am not your judge, I cannot be. [As though giving him release.] Do as you will, do as you will!

PROCTOR. Would you give them such a lie? Say it. Would you ever give them this? [She cannot answer.] You would not; if tongs of fire were singeing you you would not! It is evil. Good, then—it is evil, and I do it!

[HATHORNE enters with DANFORTH, and, with them, CHEEVER, PARRIS, and HALE. It is a businesslike, rapid entrance, as though the ice had been broken.]

DANFORTH. [With great relief and gratitude.] Praise to God, man, praise to God; you shall be blessed in Heaven for this. [CHEEVER has hurried to the bench with pen, ink, and paper. PROCTOR watches him.] Now then, let us have it. Are you ready, Mr. Cheever?

PROCTOR. [With a cold, cold horror at their efficiency.] Why must it be written?

DANFORTH. Why, for the good instruction of the village, Mister; this we shall post upon the church door! [To PARRIS, urgently.] Where is the marshal?

PARRIS. [Runs to the door and calls down the corridor.] Marshal! Hurry!

DANFORTH. Now, then, Mister, will you speak slowly, and directly to the point, for Mr. Cheever's sake. [He is on record now, and is really dictating to CHEEVER, who writes.] Mr. Proctor, have you seen the Devil in your life? [PROCTOR'S jaws lock.] Come, man, there is light in the sky; the town waits at the scaffold; I would give out this news. Did you see the Devil?

PROCTOR. I did.

PARRIS. Praise God!

DANFORTH. And when he come to you, what were his demand? [PROCTOR is silent. DANFORTH helps.] Did he bid you to do his work upon the earth?

PROCTOR. He did.

DANFORTH. And you bound yourself to his service? [DANFORTH turns, as REBECCA NURSE enters, with HERRICK helping to support her. She is barely able to walk.] Come in, come in, woman!

REBECCA. [Brightening as she sees PROCTOR.] Ah, John! You are well, then, eh?

[PROCTOR turns his face to the wall.]

DANFORTH. Courage, man, courage—let her witness your good example that she may come to God herself. Now hear it, Goody Nurse! Say on, Mr. Proctor. Did you bind yourself to the Devil's service?

REBECCA. [Astonished.] Why, John!

PROCTOR. [Through his teeth, his face turned from REBECCA.] I did.

DANFORTH. Now, woman, you surely see it profit nothin' to keep this conspiracy any further. Will you confess yourself with him?

REBECCA. Oh, John—God send his mercy on you!

DANFORTH. I say, will you confess yourself, Goody Nurse?

REBECCA. Why, it is a lie, it is a lie; how may I damn myself? I cannot, I cannot.

DANFORTH. Mr. Proctor. When the Devil came to you did you see Rebecca Nurse in his company? [PROCTOR is silent.] Come, man, take courage—did you ever see her with the Devil?

PROCTOR. [Almost inaudibly.] No.

[DANFORTH, now sensing trouble, glances at JOHN and goes to the table, and picks up a sheet—the list of condemned.]

---

[7] Here, tantalized means "tormented."

1 Tragedy What is the cause of the "fury . . . riding" in Proctor? What might this strong feeling foreshadow?

2 Analyze Theme How do these lines support the idea that public confession is necessary for the health of the community?

Reading Practice

Motif Direct students' attention to Proctor's "tongs of fire" speech to Elizabeth in the left column. Ask: How does the metaphor "tongs of fire" relate thematically to the play's "crucible" motif? (Both the "crucible" motif and the "tongs of fire" metaphor are images of heat that convey the idea of a severe test of moral character. Miller compares the witch trials to a crucible, a container in which the play's characters are subjected to an intense heat that separates what is morally valuable (both people and character traits) from what is worthless. This crucible separates the honest people from the frauds, the courageous from the cowardly, the righteous from the selfish or evil. Proctor is saying that Elizabeth is so honest, courageous, and righteous—so morally valuable—that she would withstand the severest test of character—the intense heat of "tongs of fire.")

The Crucible, 1996.

DANFORTH. Did you ever see her sister, Mary Easty, with the Devil?

PROCTOR. No, I did not.

DANFORTH. [His eyes narrow on PROCTOR.] Did you ever see Martha Corey with the Devil?

PROCTOR. I did not.

DANFORTH. [Realizing, slowly putting the sheet down.] Did you ever see anyone with the Devil?

PROCTOR. I did not.

DANFORTH. Proctor, you mistake me. I am not empowered to trade your life for a lie. You have most certainly seen some person with the Devil. [PROCTOR is silent.] Mr. Proctor, a score of people have already testified they saw this woman with the Devil.

PROCTOR. Then it is proved. Why must I say it?

DANFORTH. Why "must" you say it! Why, you should rejoice to say it if your soul is truly purged[8] of any love for Hell!

PROCTOR. They think to go like saints. I like not to spoil their names.

DANFORTH. [Inquiring, incredulous.] Mr. Proctor, do you think they go like saints?

---

[8] To be purged is to be cleansed of whatever is unclean or undesirable.

The United States and the World Many of the names given during the HUAC hearings had been revealed previously. Why might the investigators of witches in Salem and the investigators of Communists in Washington have wanted to hear the names repeated at the hearings? 3

Teach

Big Idea 3

The United States and the World Answer: Students may suggest that forcing witnesses to divulge names in public humiliates the witnesses, destroys the reputations of the accused, and validates the investigation process.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Strategic Have students read this scene aloud, beginning on page 1108 (with the entrance of Hathorne, Danforth, Cheever, Parris, and Hale) and reading through to the end of the play. Assign parts, have students rehearse, and then hold a class performance. Give students the option of memorizing their lines or performing while reading from the text. Encourage them to pay close attention to stage directions and punctuation to help them read fluently and expressively, and to use appropriate gestures and movements. Make sure students understand all the vocabulary in the stage directions before they begin rehearsing: for example, incredulous, evading, gratitude, inaudibly, heaving, and boundless.

At the end of the performance, ask students to explain how performing the scene enhanced their understanding of the characters' emotions and conflicts.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Irony Ask: How is Danforth's statement about Proctor's soul ironic? (When Danforth says that Proctor's soul is the issue, he means that Proctor needs to save his soul by confessing to witchcraft. The audience, however, realizes that Proctor's soul is indeed the issue, but for a different reason. To save his soul, he needs to do the opposite of what Danforth wants: he needs to find the courage to resist making a false confession.)

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Theme Answer: Proctor refuses to condemn others. He will take responsibility for his crimes, but will not be a pawn of the uncontrolled court.

Big Idea 3

The United States and the World Answer: People named as witches or as Communists were officially disgraced. Although those labeled Communists were not put to death, some who suffered blacklisting were not able to find any employer who would hire them, and their lives were destroyed.

PROCTOR. [Evading.] This woman never thought she done the Devil's work.

1 DANFORTH. Look you, sir. I think you mistake your duty here. It matters nothing what she thought—she is convicted of the unnatural murder of children, and you for sending your spirit out upon Mary Warren. Your soul alone is the issue here, Mister, and you will prove its whiteness or you cannot live in a Christian country. Will you tell me now what persons conspired with you in the Devil's company? [PROCTOR is silent.] To your knowledge was Rebecca Nurse ever—

PROCTOR. I speak my own sins; I cannot judge another. [Crying out, with hatred.] I have no tongue for it.

HALE. [Quickly to DANFORTH.] Excellency, it is enough he confess himself. Let him sign it, let him sign it.

PARRIS. [Feverishly.] It is a great service, sir. It is a weighty name; it will strike the village that Proctor confess. I beg you, let him sign it. The sun is up, Excellency!

DANFORTH. [Considers; then with dissatisfaction.] Come, then, sign your testimony. [To CHEEVER.] Give it to him. [CHEEVER goes to PROCTOR, the confession and a pen in hand. PROCTOR does not look at it.] Come, man, sign it.

PROCTOR. [After glancing at the confession.] You have all witnessed it—it is enough.

DANFORTH. You will not sign it?

PROCTOR. You have all witnessed it; what more is needed?

DANFORTH. Do you sport with me? You will sign your name or it is no confession, Mister! [His breast heaving with agonized breathing, PROCTOR now lays the paper down and signs his name.]

PARRIS. Praise be to the Lord!

[PROCTOR has just finished signing when DANFORTH reaches for the paper. But PROCTOR snatches it up, and now a wild terror is rising in him, and a boundless anger.]

DANFORTH. [Perplexed, but politely extending his hand.] If you please, sir.

PROCTOR. No.

DANFORTH. [As though PROCTOR did not understand.] Mr. Proctor, I must have—

PROCTOR. No, no. I have signed it. You have seen me. It is done! You have no need for this.

PARRIS. Proctor, the village must have proof that—

PROCTOR. Damn the village! I confess to God, and God has seen my name on this! It is enough!

DANFORTH. No, sir, it is—

PROCTOR. You came to save my soul, did you not? Here! I have confessed myself; it is enough!

DANFORTH. You have not con—

PROCTOR. I have confessed myself! Is there no good penitence[9] but it be public? God does not need my name nailed upon the church! God sees my name; God knows how black my sins are! It is enough!

DANFORTH. Mr. Proctor—

PROCTOR. You will not use me! I am no Sarah Good or Tituba, I am John Proctor! You will not use me! It is no part of salvation that you should use me!

DANFORTH. I do not wish to—

PROCTOR. I have three children—how may I teach them to walk like men in the world, and I sold my friends?

DANFORTH. You have not sold your friends—

PROCTOR. Beguile me not! I blacken all of them when this is nailed to the church the very day they hang for silence!

2 Analyze Theme How do these lines help explain the theme that each person is responsible for his or her own morality?

---

[9] Penitence is humble sorrow for one's wrongdoing.

The United States and the World People named as Communists before HUAC were often placed on a "black list" and denied the opportunity of making a living. How does this blacklisting compare to the situation Proctor describes? 3

Reading Practice

Climax After students finish reading Act Four, remind them that the climax is the moment in the plot when the rising action reverses direction and becomes the falling action. Say: In a tragedy, the climax is often considered not simply the moment of greatest emotional intensity in the plot but more specifically the decisive moment that causes the protagonist's downfall. It is the action or decision that determines how the conflict will be resolved. Ask: Which events in Act Three did you identify as the most important complications in the rising action? (when Elizabeth lies to protect her husband and when Mary betrays Proctor) Which action in Act Four is also a decisive moment? (when Proctor tears up his confession) Which of these events or actions represents the climax of the play? Why? (Students may say it is when Proctor tears up the letter since this action ultimately seals his fate. It is also the only event within his control.)

Four People Behind Bars. Todd Davidson.

Teach

Cultural History ☆

Church Door There is a long Christian tradition of using the church door as a place to post news. Most famously, in 1517 Martin Luther nailed his 95 Theses of Contention on the door of the Roman Catholic church in Wittenburg, Germany, an act that is considered the beginning of the Protestant Reformation.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Drama and Film Criticism The drama critic Walter Kerr wrote that Miller had "not only the professional crusader's zeal for humanity, but the imaginative writer's feel for it . . . how it looks in its foolish as well as its noble attitudes." After students have finished Act Four, have them discuss examples of foolish and noble attitudes in the play. Ask: Do you agree with Kerr's assessment of Miller's "zeal" and "feel" for humanity? Why or why not? Have students do library or Internet research to find reviews of The Crucible, including reviews of the original 1953 Broadway production, the 2002 Broadway revival, and the 1996 film version of the play. Have students watch the movie (previewed by teacher if necessary) and write a film review, keeping in mind the models of drama and film criticism that they have just read. Encourage students to include a statement like Kerr's that captures what they consider to be the essence of Miller's play or his attitude toward humanity.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Tragedy Answer: Portraying Proctor this way adds a human dimension to his courage. He is afraid and sad, but he acts in spite of this. He knows that he is condemning himself to death, but he has decided not to compromise his principles.

ADVANCED Ask: How would the effect be different if Proctor was described as "weeping," but not "in fury"? (He would seem less of a tragic hero, because he would seem weaker and less noble.)

Literary Element 2

Tragedy Answer: Elizabeth accepts her husband's decision. She understands that his action is the only way he can satisfy his own conscience and uphold his innate goodness and nobility.

ADVANCED Ask: How do you interpret Elizabeth's statement, "He have his goodness now"? (Proctor was not truly "good" until he took this action, or his action finally allows him to stop doubting his own goodness.)

To check students' understanding of the act, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 263–264.

DANFORTH. Mr. Proctor, I must have good and legal proof that you—

PROCTOR. You are the high court, your word is good enough! Tell them I confessed myself; say Proctor broke his knees and wept like a woman; say what you will, but my name cannot—

DANFORTH. [With suspicion.] It is the same, is it not? If I report it or you sign to it?

PROCTOR. [He knows it is insane.] No, it is not the same! What others say and what I sign to is not the same!

DANFORTH. Why? Do you mean to deny this confession when you are free?

PROCTOR. I mean to deny nothing!

DANFORTH. Then explain to me, Mr. Proctor, why you will not let—

PROCTOR. [With a cry of his whole soul.] Because it is my name! Because I cannot have another in my life! Because I lie and sign myself to lies! Because I am not worth the dust on the feet of them that hang! How may I live without my name? I have given you my soul; leave me my name!

DANFORTH. [Pointing at the confession in PROCTOR*'s hand.*] Is that document a lie? If it is a lie I will not accept it! What say you? I will not deal in lies, Mister! [PROCTOR is motionless.] You will give me your honest confession in my hand, or I cannot keep you from the rope. [PROCTOR does not reply.] Which way do you go, Mister?

[His breast heaving, his eyes staring, PROCTOR tears the paper and crumples it, and he is weeping in fury, but erect.]

DANFORTH. Marshal!

PARRIS. [Hysterically, as though the tearing paper were his life.] Proctor, Proctor!

HALE. Man, you will hang! You cannot!

PROCTOR. [His eyes full of tears.] I can. And there's your first marvel, that I can. You have made your magic now, for now I do think I see some shred of goodness in John Proctor. Not enough to weave a banner with, but white enough to keep it from such dogs. [ELIZABETH*, in a burst of terror, rushes to him and weeps against his hand.*] Give them no tear! Tears pleasure them! Show honor now, show a stony heart and sink them with it! [He has lifted her, and kisses her now with great passion.]

REBECCA. Let you fear nothing! Another judgment waits us all!

DANFORTH. Hang them high over the town! Who weeps for these, weeps for corruption!

[He sweeps out past them. HERRICK starts to lead REBECCA*, who almost collapses, but* PROCTOR catches her, and she glances up at him apologetically.]

REBECCA. I've had no breakfast.

HERRICK. Come, man.

[HERRICK escorts them out, HATHORNE and CHEEVER behind them. ELIZABETH stands staring at the empty doorway.]

PARRIS. [In deadly fear, to ELIZABETH.] Go to him, Goody Proctor! There is yet time!

[From outside a drumroll strikes the air. PARRIS is startled. ELIZABETH jerks about toward the window.]

PARRIS. Go to him! [He rushes out the door, as though to hold back his fate.] Proctor! Proctor!

[Again, a short burst of drums.]

HALE. Woman, plead with him! [He starts to rush out the door, and then goes back to her.] Woman! It is pride, it is vanity. [She avoids his eyes, and moves to the window. He drops to his knees.] Be his helper!—What profit him to bleed? Shall the dust praise him? Shall the worms declare his truth? Go to him, take his shame away!

ELIZABETH. [Supporting herself against collapse, grips the bars of the window, and with a cry.] He have his goodness now. God forbid I take it from him!

[The final drumroll crashes, then heightens violently. HALE weeps in frantic prayer, and the new sun is pouring in upon her face, and the drums rattle like bones in the morning air.]

THE CURTAIN FALLS

1 Tragedy Why would Miller portray Proctor as "weeping . . . but erect?"

Tragedy Why doesn't Elizabeth save her husband, as Parris and Hale urge? 2

Reading Practice

Evaluate Theme Have students evaluate Proctor's decision to tear up his confession. Ask: Does Proctor win a victory by refusing to compromise his principles? Explain. (Most students will agree that he does because there are some principles worth dying for.) What does this action reveal about the play's theme? In other words, what central message does Miller want the audience or reader to infer from Proctor's action? (Students might interpret Miller's theme to be that standing by your principles, no matter what the cost, is the right thing to do—or more specifically, that people must resist the abuse of authority, no matter what the cost.) Do you agree with this message? Why or why not? (Students should support their opinions with reasons.) How would the theme be different if Miller had not connected the historical context of the play to events during his own time period? (The theme would not seem as universal and relevant to contemporary life.)

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What were your thoughts at the end of the play? (b)Do you have any unanswered questions? Explain.
2. (a)What news does Parris convey to Danforth about Abigail? (b)What is Danforth's reaction? Why might he react this way?
3. (a)What has Hale been trying to do with the condemned prisoners? (b)What do his words reveal about his values?
4. (a)What might Proctor's ultimate decision mean for him? For Salem? (b)What might Elizabeth mean when she says that John has "his goodness now"?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)Analyze the mood of the Salem residents at the beginning of Act Four. (b)Given events during the three months since the end of Act Three, is this mood is to be expected? Explain.
6. (a)Contrast Danforth and Hathorne. (b)Which do you consider more dangerous? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea The United States and the World How does Miller want to compare the Salem witch trials and the HUAC hearings?
8. Connect to Today Do you think Miller's play is relevant today? Explain.

Daily Life & Culture

Life in Puritan New England

To protect citizens from Satan, the Puritans banned amusements that might tempt young people to idleness. These included playing cards, shuffleboard, and dice, dancing around a maypole, attending plays, and even beachcombing.

Because a virtuous society depended upon everyone behaving according to God's law, Puritans were encouraged to report on each other for sinning. Missing church services or sleeping during the sermon, quarreling with one's husband or wife, swearing, or even playing certain musical instruments were punishable activities. In Puritan New England, privacy was a place where Satan lurked, and pleasure was considered a temptation. No Puritan could have conceived the phrase "the pursuit of happiness." Rather, the Puritan ideal was the pursuit of godliness.

1. Some aspects of Puritan society described above may seem strange and unattractive to modern readers. What advantages might there be to living in such a close-knit culture?
2. How does the information given here help explain the behavior of some of the characters in The Crucible? Give specific examples.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' thoughts will vary.
2. (a) Abigail and Mercy have stolen money and vanished. (b) He is worried that people may doubt Abigail's accusations, thus casting doubt on his judgments.
3. (a) Hale wants prisoners to confess so that their lives will be spared. (b) He values human life over honesty.
4. (a) His ultimate decision means that he has integrity. His execution may inspire a rebellion. (b) He values truth more than his life; he realizes that he has integrity.
5. (a) The mood is fearful and resigned. (b) It is a consequence of the investigations, which are supported by the authorities and appear without end.
6. (a) Hathorne is devoid of compassion. Danforth occasionally shows sympathy. (b) Fear of disorder, and executing people despite Hale's reasoning, makes Danforth more dangerous.
7. Both the trials and the hearings created fear; in both situations those who accused were presumed innocent while those accused were guilty; in both situations people's lives were ruined or taken.
8. Students should support their responses with a logical explanation.

Daily Life & Culture

1. Puritan society must have been relatively free of crime. Watching neighbors can yield safety benefits.
2. Examples: Hale hears that the Proctors do not attend church regularly. Cheever says that Proctor plows on Sundays.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 271–272.

After You Read

Literary Element

1. Proctor is the tragic hero. He has the courage to admit faults and a conscience that leads to challenging authority in the interests of truth and justice.
2. Proctor's passion makes him adulterous and leads him to his destruction. Proctor refuses to admit his sin until it is too late to prevent tragedy.

Progress Check

Can students analyze tragedy?

If No → See Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, p. 258.

Review: Conflict

Possible Answers:

John Proctor:
External—arguments with Reverend Parris; Internal—guilt about adultery

Elizabeth Proctor:
External—arguments with John; Internal—struggle to forgive John

Reading Strategy

Examples will vary. Students should note that dialogue, stage direction, and characterization are used in different ways to portray Miller's theme.

Literary Element Tragedy

In common usage, the word hero applies to almost anyone who acts bravely. In a literary tragedy, however, the term tragic hero has a specific meaning. It refers to the main character in a drama who suffers downfall and death because of a tragic flaw in his or her character. According to the Greek philosopher Aristotle, the tragic hero's fate is intended to inspire pity and terror. Tragic heroes may behave badly, but audiences are meant to respond sympathetically to them because of their noble and admirable qualities.

1. Who is the tragic hero of The Crucible? What noble or admirable qualities does this hero possess?
2. What is the tragic flaw that causes the hero's downfall and death?

Review: Conflict

Conflict is the struggle between opposing forces in a story or drama. External conflict exists when a character struggles against some outside force, such as nature, society, or another character. An internal conflict is a struggle between two opposing thoughts or desires within the mind of a character.

Partner Activity Meet with a classmate and create a three-column chart similar to the one below. In the left column, list the names of the principal characters. In the other two columns describe the external and internal conflicts in which these characters are involved.

Character	External Conflict	Internal Conflict
Reverend Hale	Pleads with prisoners to confess	considers himself guilty of sending innocent people to their deaths

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Reading Strategy Analyze Theme

One of the purposes of literature is to allow a writer to use artistic techniques to share his or her opinions on a subject. The Crucible is a play that uses the conventions of drama to comment on the political environment of the mid-twentieth century. Identify one example of each of the dramatic techniques below and explain how Miller uses it to reveal his theme.

1. Dialogue
2. Stage Direction
3. Characterization

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Usage Respond to these statements to help you explore the meanings of vocabulary words from the selection.

1. Explain how you would treat a friend if you were committing a conciliatory act.
2. Identify something for which your teacher might give you a reprieve.
3. Describe a retaliation a country might take if it were attacked by another country.
4. Name an event that you have been adamant about attending, and tell why.
5. Identify why a criminal might fear an indictment.

Academic Vocabulary

The relationship between Proctor and Abigail is complex; she feels his testimony will ruin her reputation, and because he will be hanged, she can no longer be his wife.

Complex is an academic word. In more casual conversation, someone might say that counteracting global climate change is a complex issue. To further explore the meaning of this word, answer this question: What is a complex issue that American teens face today? Explain.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Vocabulary

1. I would give my friend a gift or do a favor for him.
2. A teacher might give me a reprieve so that I could turn in a paper a day late.
3. A country might counterattack their aggressor in retaliation.
4. I was adamant about attending The Simpsons Movie because The Simpsons is my favorite television show.
5. A criminal might fear an indictment because it would mean he or she would be legally accused of a crime.

Academic Vocabulary

Possible Answer: Becoming acquainted with politics is a complex issue for teens because it requires an understanding of both domestic and foreign policy in order to be prepared to vote at eighteen.

Respond Through Writing

Editorial

Offer a Solution Think of a contemporary real-world situation that resembles the circumstances and conflicts of The Crucible. Present your own solution to the current problem in an editorial.

Understand the Task An editorial is an article that expresses the personal ideas and opinions of the writer. A primary source is an original document such as a letter, a newspaper, a magazine article, an interview, or a historical document from a specific time period. A secondary source is a secondhand account written by a writer without firsthand experience of an event or a cultural period. Historical essays, biographies, and critics' reviews are examples of secondary sources.

Prewrite Generate a list of contemporary topics on which you could write. Choose a topic you feel strongly about and develop a logical solution to it. Conduct research to find both primary and secondary sources that will help convince your readers that the solution you present is viable.

Draft Develop a logical strategy to help you make a strong argument. Open by presenting the problem, follow by stating your solution, and finish by refuting counterarguments. Be sure that you have supporting evidence for every point you make, and that you cite sources when appropriate. Appeal both to the reader's logic and emotions. Use rhetorical devices to make your proposal persuasive.

Revise Exchange papers with a partner. Evaluate one another's editorials based on the following checklist:

- Does the editorial offer a solution that appeals to the reader's reason and emotion?
- Are the arguments logical and well-supported?
- Does the editorial anticipate counterarguments and refute them?

Edit and Proofread Proofread your essay, correcting any errors in spelling, grammar, and punctuation. Use the Grammar Tip in the side column to help you use comparative and superlative adjectives correctly.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objectives:

Writing: Writing an editorial.

Grammar: Using comparative and superlative forms of adjectives.

Grammar Tip

Comparative and Superlative Adjectives

The comparative form of an adjective shows two things being compared. For example:

Elizabeth Proctor is bolder than her husband.

The superlative form of an adjective shows three or more things being compared.

Reverend Hale is the worst of all of the persecutors.

In general, for one-syllable adjectives add -er to form the comparative and -est to form the superlative. Spelling changes may occur when adding these endings. For example:

- hot, hotter, hottest
- cheery, cheerier, cheeriest

With multisyllabic adjectives, it may sound more natural to use more and most instead of -er and -est.

Tituba is the most ostracized of the women in The Crucible.

After You Read

Assess

Respond Through Writing

Students' editorials should present logical arguments that are supported by evidence from primary and secondary sources. Students should use persuasive techniques such as emotional and logical appeals. They should also anticipate and refute readers' counterarguments.

Scoring Guide

Assess students' performance in the following categories using the scoring guide below:

- Addresses all parts of the writing task.
- Provides a meaningful thesis; maintains focus and organization.
- Supports the thesis with details and examples.
- Provides a variety of sentence types; uses precise, descriptive language.
- Follows English language conventions.
- Makes a logical, convincing argument.

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Task addressed	fully	mostly	partially	barely
Thesis	meaningful	provided	partial	weak
Support	thoughtful	provided	limited	weak
Language	varied, descriptive	varied, often descriptive	predictable, imprecise	repetitive, limited
Convention errors	few or none	several	many	serious
Arguments are	convincing	mostly convincing	partially convincing	not convincing

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 95

Or describe a play you have seen, or ask students to share their experiences when viewing a theatrical performance. Ask: How would you compare a live performance with reading the script of a play?

Teach

Literary Element

Genre Using the ideas from the Bellringer activity, have students generate a list of the features of drama. (Lists should include cast of characters, stage directions, speech-directed plot, scenery, and so forth.)

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 6 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 265–266.

Literary History

Learning Objectives

For pages 1116–1117

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Reading:
Analyzing cultural context.
Analyzing literary periods.
Evaluating historical influences.

Modern American Drama

Though poetry and fiction were well established as American literary genres by the middle of the nineteenth century, this was not the case with drama. Up until the early decades of the twentieth century, drama made little impact on American literature as a whole. Then, with Eugene O'Neill, American drama suddenly came of age.

O'Neill's Influence

A major event was the 1916 performance of Eugene O'Neill's Bound East for Cardiff by the Provincetown Players, a "little theater" company that produced original works by unknown talents. The first American dramatist to achieve an international reputation, O'Neill thrilled audiences and impressed critics as he explored the tragic relationship between fate and character and depicted the complex depths of the human mind.

A Streetcar Named Desire, 1947.

O'Neill's plays, including Strange Interlude (1928), The Iceman Cometh (1946), and Long Day's Journey into Night (1939–1941), reflect his New England background, his Irish American heritage, his reading of the Scandinavian playwrights Henrik Ibsen and August Strindberg, and his fascination with the theories and discoveries of modern psychology. Like the Modernists, he too blazed new trails, experimenting with form, style, and symbolism. His innovations intrigued audiences and greatly influenced subsequent playwrights.

> "On the stage it is always now; the personages are standing on that razor edge, between the past and the future, which is the essential character of conscious being."
>
> —Thornton Wilder

American drama flourished between the two world wars. Elmer Rice wrote a realistic portrait of tenement life called Street Scene (1929); Clifford Odets explored serious social problems in Awake and Sing (1935) and Waiting for Lefty (1935); and Lillian Hellman created a successful drama of social criticism in The Little Foxes (1939), a play about a predatory southern family. Thornton Wilder's Our Town (1938), a surrealistic play about everyday life in a New England town, enjoyed astonishing success.

Postwar Playwrights

Tennessee Williams and Arthur Miller dominated the American theater in the decade after World War II. Williams was noted for his lyrical dialogue and wrote plays that explored some of the darker aspects of human psychology.

Listening and Speaking Practice

SMALL GROUP

On Stage Have small groups of students work together to give a dramatic reading of part of Act Four of The Crucible (for example, the scene between Proctor and his wife, pages 1105–1108; or Danforth questioning Proctor, pages 1108–1112). Have groups practice saying the lines to each other, and then ask groups to volunteer to do their reading in front of the class. Have students write a paragraph about each group's performance, comparing their experience of hearing the scene read aloud with their own silent reading. Ask students to include at least one similarity and one difference between the two experiences.

Death of a Salesman, 2000.

Recent History

In the 1960s and 1970s, Edward Albee experimented with a variety of styles, including the theater of the absurd and the theater of cruelty. The theater of cruelty, which strives to produce a visceral reaction in the audience, influenced the scathing dialogue in Albee's acclaimed Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? (1962).

When it opened in 1959, A Raisin in the Sun by Lorraine Hansberry was the first drama by an African American woman to be produced on Broadway. Hansberry's realistic portrayal of black characters and her fearless depiction of social injustice marked a new era in African American drama. Beginning in 1982, August Wilson chronicled African American experience in a series of ten plays, each set in a different decade of the twentieth century. In Fences (1985), the second play in the series, the main character is a former baseball player, a victim of discrimination who was denied access to the major leagues. Wilson's play has already emerged as a classic.

Some of the most significant plays of the recent past are the work of women writers. These plays include Crimes of the Heart (1979) by Beth Henley and 'night, Mother (1983) by Marsha Norman. In The Heidi Chronicles (1989), Wendy Wasserstein explores the challenges faced by educated women competing in a male-dominated culture.

Musical Theater

The musical remains one of America's distinct contributions to the theater. During World War II, the watershed musical Oklahoma! (1943), by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II, brought the form to new heights, integrating music, story, and dance to develop plot and character.

The musical reached its peak after World War II in other works by Rodgers and Hammerstein and in those by Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe, Leonard Bernstein, and Stephen Sondheim. Later decades saw musicals break new ground. In 1968, Hair introduced rock music to theater audiences. A Chorus Line (1975) and Chicago (1976) brought dance-centered musicals to the fore. In 2001, Mel Brooks's musical comedy The Producers won a record twelve Tony Awards and once again made American musical theater popular with theatergoers.

Drama flourished during the twentieth century and continues to do so. Some of the most gifted writers—O'Neill, Williams, Miller, Albee, and Wilson—created masterpieces for the stage. With a rich legacy of outstanding works, American drama is primed to reflect and respond to life in a new century.

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about modern American drama, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Respond and Think Critically

1. Which two Scandinavian playwrights strongly influenced Eugene O'Neill?
2. How did Eugene O'Neill revolutionize American drama?
3. What innovations has Edward Albee made in the theater?
4. In what way did Oklahoma! differ from previous musicals?

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain to students that they may find subheads helpful when they are answering questions about a selection. By isolating the part of the text where they might find the answer to a question, they can save time. For example, if students do not immediately know the answer to question 2, they can reread the section under the subhead that reads "O'Neill's Influence." Scanning the text under the subhead "Recent History," will reveal that Edward Albee is mentioned in the first line of text. This will help students answer question 3.

Teach

Big Idea

The United States and the World As theater became an important form of American literature, its audience, of course, grew. Some observers of American theater complain, however, that productions have become so expensive that only those with high incomes can afford to attend first-rate performances. Ask: How can people across the nation and throughout the world experience live theater? (If students do not mention reduced-price tickets to theater in major cities [e.g. Broadway shows, off-Broadway shows, off-off-Broadway shows], regional theater, and community and college productions, make them aware of these options.)

Assess

1. Henrick Ibsen and August Strindberg
2. O'Neill explored human psychology and experimented with form and style.
3. To criticize society, Albee has experimented with the theater of the absurd and the theater of cruelty.
4. It displayed a new level of artistic unity between the narrative and musical elements of the performance.

Writing Workshop

Creative Nonfiction

Focus

Bellringer

Say: Because we all come from different backgrounds and have had different experiences, everyone's story is unique. People who write stories about their own lives create autobiographical narratives.

Ask students to bring in one or more photographs of people or places that are important in their lives. Have them tell brief stories about their photos, and allow others to ask questions about the stories.

Summary

In this workshop, students will write and present creative nonfiction essays. Students will follow the stages of the writing process, including prewriting, drafting, revising, and editing. In addition, two mini-lessons, on avoiding stilted language and on correcting verb tense, are provided.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1118–1125

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Writing: Writing creative nonfiction using the writing process.

Writing Process

At any stage of a writing process, you may think of new ideas. Feel free to return to earlier stages as you write.

- Prewrite
- Draft
- Revise
- Focus Lesson: Avoid Stilted Language
- Edit and Proofread
- Focus Lesson: Verb Tense
- Present

Writing Workshop

Creative Nonfiction

Literature Connection In much of his writing, Elie Wiesel reveals his personal experiences during World War II.

> "I see myself sitting there, haggard and disoriented, a shadow among shadows. . . . My heart thunders in deafening beats. Then there is silence, heavy and complete. Something was about to happen, we could feel it. Fate would at last reveal a truth reserved exclusively for us, a primordial truth, an ultimate postulate that would annihilate or overshadow all received ideas."

This type of writing is generally referred to as autobiographical narrative, a type of creative nonfiction in which a writer tells a sequence of past events from his or her life and reveals the personal significance of the experience. Study the checklist below to learn the goals and strategies for writing successful creative nonfiction.

Checklist: Features of Creative Nonfiction Essays

Goals	Strategies
To recreate an experience	☑ Create an engaging plot ☑ Use literary devices such as flashback, foreshadowing, imagery, and allusion
To create believable characters	☑ Use dialogue and internal monologue as methods of characterization ☑ Use actions, including gestures and movements, as methods of characterization
To entertain the audience	☑ Use sensory description ☑ Use figurative language

Workshop Resources

Print Materials

- Unit 6 Teaching Resources pp. 268–270
- Writing Kit
- Success in Writing: Research and Reports

Technology

- Literature Online: Writing Resources and Grammar Resources, www.glencoe.com
- Online Essay Grader, www.glencoe.com
- Student Presentation Builder on StudentWorks Plus CD-ROM
- Media Workshop DVD
- Online Student Edition

Assignment: Write Creative Nonfiction

Write a creative nonfiction essay of about 1,500 words to describe a personal or other experience and to show how the experience was meaningful. As you work, keep your audience and purpose in mind.

Audience: peers and classmates

Purpose: to relate a personal experience and to communicate its significance

Real-World Connection

Many college applications require a creative nonfiction essay in which you reveal a significant experience from your life and tell how it affected you. Employers often ask similar questions of potential employees. Universities and employers alike want to see how you respond to life changes and how you learn from such experiences.

Analyze a Professional Model

In this excerpt from her autobiography, Pulitzer Prize-winning author Eudora Welty explores her discovery of the moon during childhood and how the experience became meaningful to her as a writer. As you read the following passage, note Welty's use of concrete details, sensory images, and interior monologue, all of which help her communicate a vivid, significant experience from her own life. As you read, pay attention to the comments in the margin. They point out features to include in your own creative nonfiction.

From One Writer's Beginnings by Eudora Welty

Learning stamps you with its moments. Childhood's learning is made up of moments. It isn't steady. It's a pulse.

In a children's art class, we sat in a ring on kindergarten chairs and drew three daffodils that had just been picked out of the yard; and while I was drawing, my sharpened yellow pencil and the cup of the yellow daffodil gave off whiffs just alike. That the pencil doing the drawing should give off the same smell as the flower it drew seemed part of the art lesson—as shouldn't it be? Children, like animals, use all their senses to discover the world. Then artists come along and discover it the same way, all over again. Here and there, it's the same world. Or now and then we'll hear from an artist who's never lost it.

In my sensory education I include my physical awareness of the word. Of a certain word, that is; the connection it has with what it stands for. At around age six, perhaps, I was standing by myself in our front yard waiting for supper, just at that hour in a late summer

Audience

Use figurative language to create interest.

Characterization

Show characters through their thoughts and actions.

Writing Workshop

Creative Nonfiction

Teach

Big Idea

Return to Regionalism Remind students that many of the writers in this unit describe an incident drawn from their own backgrounds, bringing in details that give the reader a sense of the region where the writer grew up. Have students skim the unit selections as a reminder of the many styles of personal narrative they have read. Say: Skim the selections by Wright, Wiesel, Hongo, Spiegelman, and Rivera in order to remind yourself of some styles of personal narrative.

Writing Skills

Personal Journal Give students time to keep a journal before beginning their creative nonfiction essays. Making a list of important life events and recording impressions will give students material to select from as they write their narratives.

Literary History ☆

Eudora Welty One of the Regionalist writers of the mid-20th century, Welty was born in Jackson, Mississippi. She wrote short stories and novels focused on small-town life in the Deep South. The humor in her works is especially evident in her use of local dialect and colloquialisms.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate In their journals and autobiographical narratives, English learners may want to include some words in their native language, along with the translation of the words. The sound of their language may help them convey the setting and mood of their story. Suggest a style for including non-English words. For example, the translation could be in parentheses following the non-English word; in a footnote; at the end of the story; or in context. For example, "I loved my tia Stella. Tia means 'aunt,' but to me, it was part of her name, Tiastella."

Teach

Writing Skills

Use Precise Language Students may have difficulty understanding precise language. Help them move from general terms to more specific ones. Write the headings "General," "More Specific," and "Very Specific" on the board. Write the word large under the first heading. Have students suggest more specific terms, such as huge, gigantic, and monstrous.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Check to make sure that English learners understand the concept of moving from general to specific. Explain that more specific words narrow down features so that a reader can get a clearer picture. Have students suggest examples.

day when the sun is already below the horizon and the risen full moon in the visible sky stops being chalky and begins to take on light. There comes the moment, and I saw it then, when the moon goes from flat to round. For the first time it met my eyes as a globe. The word "moon" came into my mouth as though fed to me out of a silver spoon. Held in my mouth the moon became a word. It had the roundness of a Concord grape Grandpa took off his vine and gave me to suck out of its skin and swallow whole, in Ohio.

This love did not prevent me from living for years in foolish error about the moon. The new moon just appearing in the west was the rising moon to me. The new should be rising. And in early childhood the sun and moon, those opposite reigning powers, I just as easily assumed rose in east and west respectively in their opposite sides of the sky, and like partners in a reel they advanced, sun from the east, moon from the west, crossed over (when I wasn't looking) and went down on the other side. My father couldn't have known I believed that when, bending behind me and guiding my shoulder, he positioned me at our telescope in the front yard and, with careful adjustment of the focus, brought the moon close to me.

Though I'd been taught at our diningroom table about the solar system and knew the earth revolved around the sun, and our moon around us, I never found out the moon didn't come up in the west until I was a writer and Herschel Brickell, the literary critic, told me after I misplaced it in a story. He said valuable words to me about my new profession: "Always be sure you get your moon in the right part of the sky."

Literary Devices
Use imagery and other literary devices.

Characterization
Describe the specific actions, movements, and gestures of characters.

Plot
Narrate a sequence of events in a logical, effective order.

Dialogue
Create believable characters by means of dialogue.

LOG ON Literature Online

Writing and Research For prewriting, drafting, and revising tools, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Reading-Writing Connection Think about the writing techniques that you just encountered and try them out in the creative nonfiction you write.

Writing Practice

Character Sketch Authors use both direct and indirect characterization to convey the personalities of people in their stories. Direct characterization is a narrator's direct comments about a character. Indirect characterization conveys personalities through:

- what the characters say
- what the characters do
- what the characters think
- what others say about the characters

Suggest that students include a character sketch in their narrative, using direct and indirect methods of characterization.

Prewrite

Make a Writing Schedule Rough out a plan for completing each step of your writing process in plenty of time to meet your final deadline.

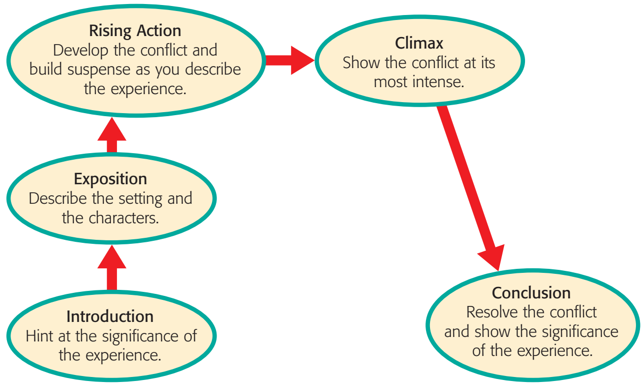
Decide on an Experience Think about events that others might find interesting and that you remember well enough to explain in detail.

Gather Details As you gather details, keep in mind your audience and purpose to help you decide which details to include.

- Recall the Experience Clearly remember the important details and the order of events. Visualize details by replaying the experience in your mind and discussing it with people who were involved. Photos, newspaper clippings, and journal entries might help jog your memory.
- Connect to Your Audience Think about what context or background information your audience will need to participate in the experience and feel its full impact.
- Be Specific and Concrete Describe the details in concrete, precise language. Consider what sensory images, dialogue, and personal feelings will create greatest interest; you will want to further elaborate, or "flesh out," those details for your audience.

Make a Plan Telling the events in chronological order is often the most clear and logical way to narrate an experience. Organize the narrative around the climax, and feel free to narrate some events in flashback or flash-forward to add background information or suspense.

Talk About Your Ideas Meet with a partner to help develop your writing voice. Take turns telling each other the most vivid details of your experience. Jot down notes and refer to them as you develop your essay.



Rising Action
Develop the conflict and build suspense as you describe the experience.
Climax
Show the conflict at its most intense.
Exposition
Describe the setting and the characters.
Introduction
Hint at the significance of the experience.
Conclusion
Resolve the conflict and show the significance of the experience.

Build Suspense with a Flashback or Foreshadowing

If telling the events of your experience in purely chronological order diminishes the suspense, add a flashback. A flashback is an interruption in the narrative to show an event that happened earlier. A flashback gives readers information that may help explain the main events of the narrative. Foreshadowing—a hint of what is to come—can also enliven your narrative.

Avoid Plagiarism

Do not download papers from the Internet or take ideas from them. Consequences for such behavior can range from a failing grade to suspension from a sports team—or from school.

Teach

Writing Skills

Plan to Write Have students create charts with the headings "Topic," "Audience," "Purpose," "Setting," "Point of View," "Characters," and "Plot." Have them use the charts to jot down ideas. It may be helpful for students to form groups, present their topics in the groups, and then take notes as other group members ask questions or make suggestions. Students may take turns doing this until the charts are completed.

Writing Process

Prewrite Remind students that the more familiar they are with their topic, the easier it will be to write. As they prepare to write their drafts, encourage them to collect as much information as possible and write it down. Ask: What would be a good way to gather information for your narrative? (Talking to someone else who was there; including relevant written sources, such as letters or journals.) Have students use note cards to organize information.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Supported Explain to students that the scope of their narrative may change as they plan and draft their story. When students work in pairs or small groups to talk about their ideas, tell listeners to warn storytellers if they sense that the story is losing momentum, wandering, losing focus, or too long for the assigned number of pages. One way to keep the story on track is to have the listener stop the storyteller and ask, "Would you remind me of the significance of this event for you?" This helps the storyteller get back to the main idea.

Teach

Writing Process

Draft Remind students that drafting is the stage for ideas, not perfection. They should concentrate on the details their sensory images bring to mind, not on whether these are important to the narrative or are grammatically precise.

Writing Skills

Literary Device: Foreshadowing

Answer: By telling the reader how he or she thought older generations were supposed to act, the writer hints that the experience will change this view. The experience might have to do with an adult letting him down.

Characterization

Answer: The presents suggest that Jim is more focused on the things he likes than he is on the grandmother or her situation.

Writing Frames

As you read the workshop model, think about the writer's use of the following frames:

- I had always expected that ______.
- Years later, ______.
- ______, I finally got it.

Consider using frames like these in your own creative nonfiction essay.

Draft

Go with the Flow When you begin your draft, do not get stuck trying to find the perfect word or detail. You will have time to do this when you revise your draft later. Instead, focus on relating the events in order. Try to build suspense and lead the reader to the climax before the conclusion of the narrative. Occasionally step back from your draft to assess your narrative and its overall direction. Remember that following an unexpected direction may lead to new insights about the experience.

Analyze a Workshop Model

Here is a final draft of a creative nonfiction essay. Read the narrative and answer the questions in the margin. Use the answers to these questions to guide you as you write your own creative nonfiction.

Literary Device: Foreshadowing

How does the writer hint at the significance of the experience? What might the experience be about?

Antique Jim

I had always expected that older generations had their problems mostly worked out. They were there to help the rest of us, to clean up children with scraped knees and bee stings, and to comfort worrying parents. They were supposed to know who they were. They weren't supposed to change.

Jim had always been there, tall and lank and cheerfully idle, dropping in at my grandmother's ranch house. I have never been quite sure where Jim came from, or how he ended up stuck with our family. He had been dating my grandmother for decades, ever since my grandfather died in the 1970s.

When we went to my grandmother's house on Saturdays, Jim would always show up just before dinner. He would let himself into the screened-in porch with a loud "Hullo!" for whoever was around to hear. Like Christopher and me, Jim always forgot and let the porch door slam. With him, however, my grandmother only sighed and pretended not to notice.

"Well, hullo, Mary!" Jim would say as he entered the kitchen, his blue eyes sparkling behind octagonal bifocals.

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Sensory Details Say: In an autobiographical narrative, vivid details allow readers to feel, hear, taste, smell, and see the images. Have students choose the more vivid of the following descriptions:

- The harsh, bitter wind snapped at our backs as we trudged through the mounds of snow.
- It was cold, and there was a lot of snow.

Have pairs of students discuss vague or unclear descriptions in their narratives and help each other develop more descriptive details. Then have them rewrite their narratives, including more sensory details.

Instead of flowers, Jim brought my grandmother antiques gathered from Saint Vincent de Paul thrift shops, estate sales, and vintage stores. This particular time it was a crafty wooden structure that turned out to be a cuckoo clock. When Jim unveiled it, I could tell that my grandmother had no idea what to do with the thing.

"Picked her up at Saint Vinny's this afternoon," Jim said, dusting off the face and gently pulling the bird from behind its wooden door to show my brother and me. Later, when Jim left, my grandmother always shook her head at these extravagances. I knew what she was thinking: our family needed groceries and haircuts, not one-of-a-kind German clocks.

"Well, maybe we should eat now, before this gets cold," she urged quietly. Christopher and I sat in our seats while Jim pried deeper into the mangled gears of the clock.

"All the way from the Black Forest!" Jim cried, shaking his head at the wooden marvel. "All the original parts." Finally, seeing us waiting, Jim said, "Well, hey now. C'mon kids, up to the table now. Looks like we're about ready to eat."

Years later, I should not have been surprised, but I was. I was helping my grandmother prepare Thanksgiving dinner. She told me the news nonchalantly. "Remember Jim?" She was whipping the mashed potatoes in steady, measured strokes. "Well, we don't see each other much anymore," she said calmly.

I was shocked. My grandmother brought stability to everyone else's life, and here she was, taking it away from her own. At her age, things weren't supposed to change anymore.

I did see Jim again, later, at—where else?—Saint Vinny's. Watching him sift through a brassy pile of pocket watches, I finally got it. Jim was funny and kind and one of the most interesting people I had ever met, but he wasn't like my grandmother. In the fifteen years I'd known him, Jim had resisted change, re-playing his favorite parts over and over. My grandmother, on the other hand, had a bustling family that counted on her to change—to keep up—in good times and bad. While Jim rummaged leisurely through strangers' family histories, my grandmother was busy creating her own.

Narration / Description

Characterization
How does describing Jim's presents help reveal his personality?

Plot
What is the writer describing in this scene? How does this scene contribute to the plot?

Dialogue
Why might dialogue be more effective as a means of characterization than description here?

Sequence of Events/Plot
How are the events of the narrative ordered? Why is this effective?

Sensory Details
How do the sensory details showing movements enhance the characterization?

Significance
How well does the writer create the ending or resolution?

Teach

Writing Skills

Effective Description
Answer: The writer is describing characters' movements and gestures, revealing their personalities and setting up tension between the grandmother and Jim.

Dialogue
Answer: It shows Jim's personality and feelings.

Sequence of Events/Plot
Answer: Events are ordered chronologically. This is effective because the story moves from memories to an understanding of the past.

Sensory Details
Answer: The grandmother's measured stirring of the potatoes matches her calm, matter-of-fact tone.

Significance
Answer: The writer creates an effective ending by moving from the specific to the general, relating the experience to a more abstract, personal idea. The writer now counts on his grandmother to change, rather than expecting her not to change.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate Choosing precise words can be difficult for English learners. Clarifying their ideas in their original language can help English learners search for the most precise English words. Have students list the descriptive words they want to use to make their writing vivid. Some students may want to list words and expressions in their original languages next to the English equivalents. Have small groups of same-language students work together to brainstorm precise sensory language.

Teach

Writing Process

Revise Remind students that sentence variety makes for interesting writing. Review the four basic types of sentences: simple, compound, complex, and compound/complex. Have students choose several sentences from their narratives and rewrite each as a different type. Then have them compare the versions to see if the revisions are improvements.

Writing Skills

Avoid Stilted Language Caution students against cluttering their writing by using long words where simple ones will do. Put the following pairs of words on the board: many/numerous, ease/facilitate, remainder/rest, first/initial, attempt/try. Ask: Which word in each pair is more effective because it is simpler?

Traits of Strong Writing

Include these traits of strong writing to express your ideas effectively.

Ideas
Organization
Voice
Word Choice
Sentence Fluency
Conventions
Presentation

For more information on the Traits of Strong Writing, see pages R30–R32 of the Writing Handbook.

Word Choice

Find this academic vocabulary word in the student model:

generations (je nə rā´ shənz) n. 1. groups of people born at about the same time or constituting the same step in the line of descent from a common ancestor; 2. the average spans of time between the birth of parents and the birth of their offspring. I had always expected that older generations had their problems mostly worked out. Using academic vocabulary may help strengthen your writing. Try to use one or two academic vocabulary words in your autobiographical narrative. See the complete list on pages R89–R91.

LOG ON Literature Online

Writing and Research For editing and publishing tools, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Revise

Peer Review After you complete your draft, read it aloud to your partner. Then have your partner discuss which parts were most vivid and interesting and which parts seemed vague or general. Partners should note places to add interior monologue, sensory details, and figurative language to add background or suspense. Use the checklist below.

Checklist

☑ Do you create an engaging plot?
☑ Do you use literary devices such as flashback, foreshadowing, imagery, or allusion?
☑ Do you use dialogue and/or internal monologue, gestures, and movements to show your characters?
☑ Do you use sensory details and figurative language?

Focus Lesson

Avoid Stilted Language

When you are writing creative nonfiction, use natural, unaffected language. Readers respond to writing that they can connect with, and they will be turned off by pretentious or unnecessarily complicated language. As you revise, replace stilted language with precise words and clear, vivid expressions. Consult a thesaurus or dictionary for help.

Draft:

During my formative years, Jim promenaded languidly through life as though the golden age would repeat itself without resistance. My grandmother, however, resigned herself to the duties of the family matriarch, following the ebb and flow of the lives of her progeny.

Revision:

In the fifteen years I'd known him,[1] Jim had resisted change,[2] replaying his favorite parts over and over. My grandmother, on the other hand, had a bustling family that counted on her to change—to keep up—in good times and bad.[3]

1: Precise details 2: Clear expression 3: Natural, unpretentious language

Writing Practice

Use Transitions A clear organizational pattern, such as cause-and-effect order, chronological order, or compare-and-contrast order, helps readers see how ideas relate to one another. Transitional words show relationships between ideas and paragraphs. Review transitions that show links in time (after, next, while), space (behind, below, around), degree (first, most important, mainly), cause and effect (because, as a result, therefore), and comparison and contrast (likewise, on the contrary, however). Have students review their writing and circle the transitional devices they have used.

Edit and Proofread

Get It Right Proofread for errors in grammar, usage, and spelling.

Focus Lesson

Verb Tense

As you edit your narrative, check that your verb tenses are formed correctly and that any shifts in tense are accurate and consistent.

Problem: The verb ending is missing or incorrect.

He work on the clock while my grandmother set the table.

Solution: Add -ed to a regular verb to form the past tense.

He worked on the clock while my grandmother set the table.

Problem: There is an unnecessary shift in tense.

We sat in our seats while Jim pries deeper into the clock.

Solution: When two or more events occur at the same time, use the same verb tense to describe each event.

We sat in our seats while Jim pried deeper into the clock.

Problem: The lack of shift in verb tense does not show that the events occurred at different times.

He dated my grandmother ever since my grandfather died.

Solution: Shift from the past tense to the past perfect tense to show that the grandmother's actions began and ended before Jim's action began.

He had been dating my grandmother ever since my grandfather died.

Present

Check Your Appearance After proofreading, look over your draft. Make sure your paper is double-spaced with appropriate margins.

Take Another Look

Put your paper away for a few days before rereading it. Unnatural voice, stilted language, and mistakes in verb tense are often easier to spot after you get a fresh perspective.

Peer Review Tips

A classmate may ask you to read his or her creative nonfiction essay. Take your time and jot down notes as you read so you can give constructive feedback. Use the following questions to get started:

- What tone do you hear? Which words help to create it? How well does it match the audience and purpose?
- Has the writer used rhetorical devices and made other fresh, interesting choices in word choice and sentence structure?

Word-Processing Tips

Use the spelling and grammar check, but check the checker! Consider the context and the choices before accepting or rejecting recommendations.

Writer's Portfolio

Place a clean copy of your creative nonfiction essay in your portfolio to review later.

Teach

Writing Process

Edit and Proofread Remind students to look for one type of error at a time when they begin the editing and proofreading step. For example, the first reading could be to check that their narrative makes sense and their ideas are clear and coherent. A second reading could focus on errors in grammar and usage. A third and final reading could focus on spelling, punctuation, and other mechanical errors.

Writing Skills

Track Changes Many word processors have a tracking feature that allows students to compare a revised version with a preceding draft. The comparison document may highlight changes in various ways. For example, new text may appear on the screen in different-colored type or underlined.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate In peer revision and editing sessions, students may feel awkward if their level of English comprehension prevents their full participation. Assist them with planning, writing, and revising.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Supported Encourage students to publish their autobiographical narratives in a computer presentation or classroom book. Students may add photographs or artwork to their pieces. Use a publishing program to assist students in formatting their writing.

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop

Photo Essay

Focus

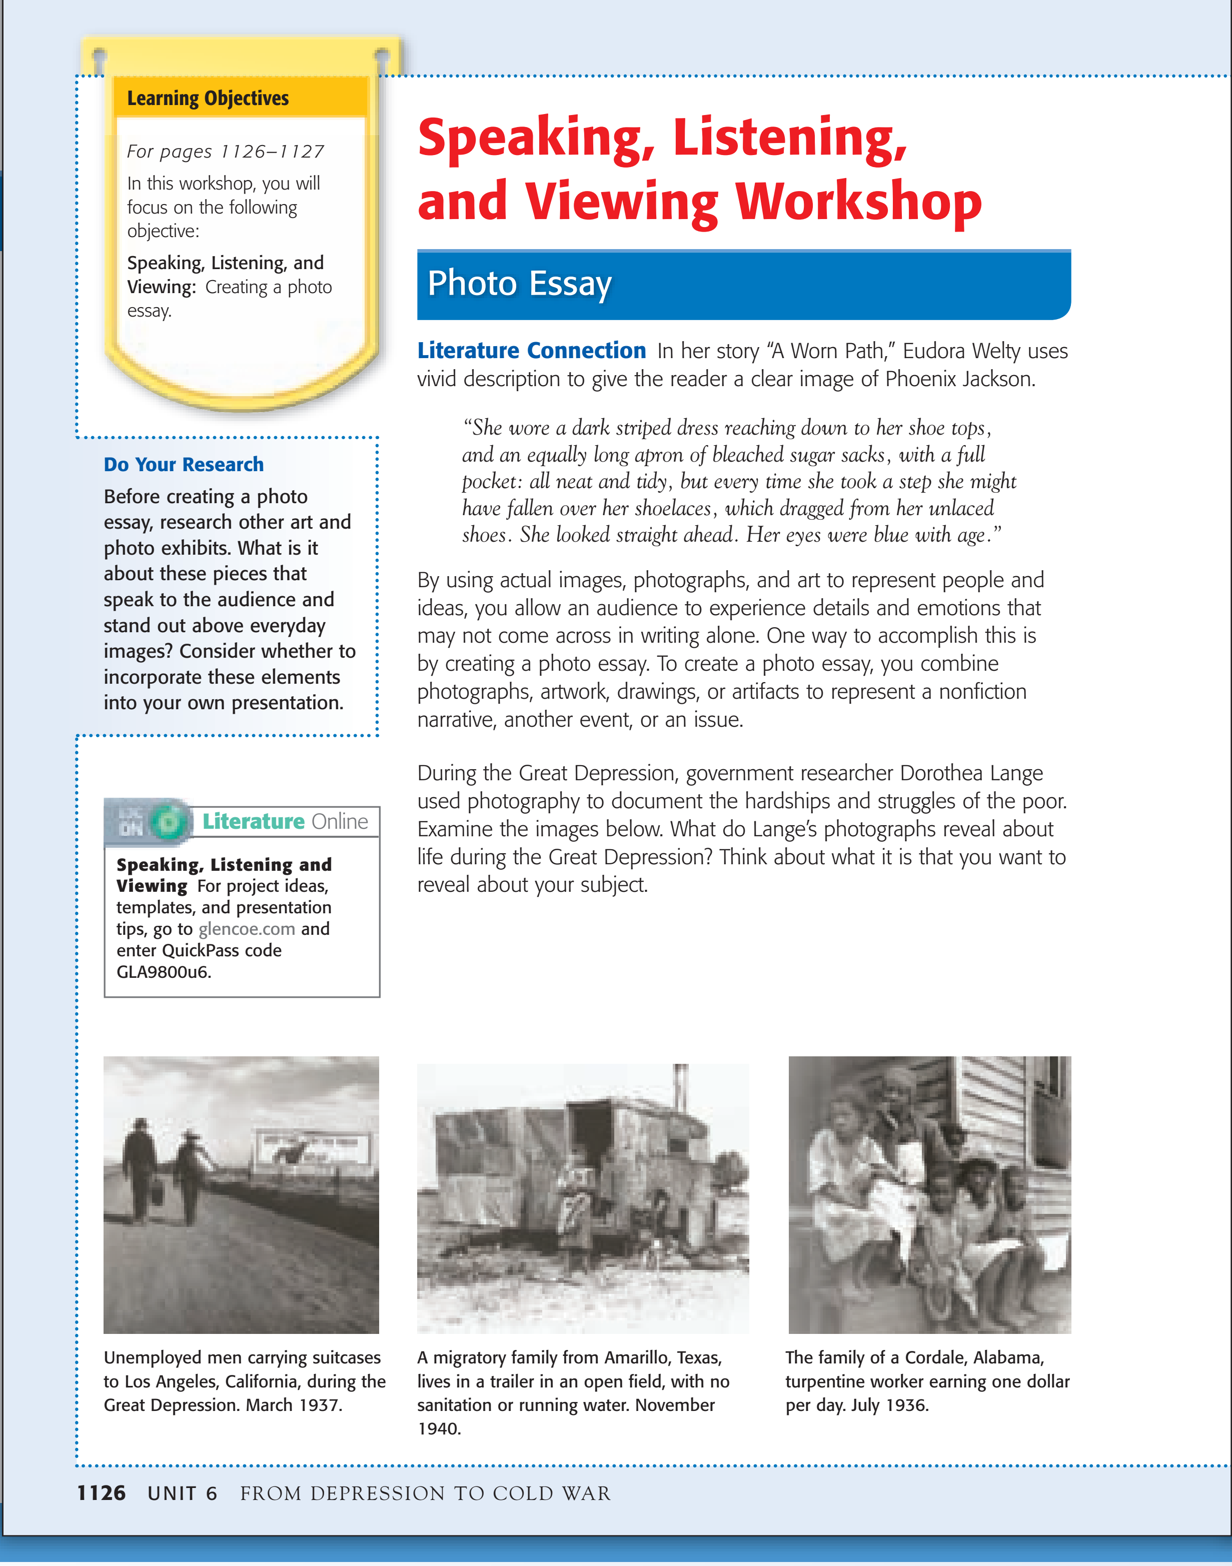
Summary

In this workshop, students will learn techniques for planning, rehearsing, and delivering an art or photo essay presentation.

Teach

Speaking Skills

Plan the Essay After deciding on general topics for their photo or art essays, students should decide on the purpose of their essays—to inform, to persuade, or to demonstrate. Once they make this decision, they can think about their specific subjects. Because students will have a limited amount of time in which to make their presentations, they should be sure their subjects are not so broad that the presentations would exceed the allotted time.



Learning Objectives

For pages 1126–1127

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing: Creating a photo essay.

Do Your Research

Before creating a photo essay, research other art and photo exhibits. What is it about these pieces that speak to the audience and stand out above everyday images? Consider whether to incorporate these elements into your own presentation.

Literature Online

Speaking, Listening and Viewing For project ideas, templates, and presentation tips, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop

Photo Essay

Literature Connection In her story "A Worn Path," Eudora Welty uses vivid description to give the reader a clear image of Phoenix Jackson.

> "She wore a dark striped dress reaching down to her shoe tops, and an equally long apron of bleached sugar sacks, with a full pocket: all neat and tidy, but every time she took a step she might have fallen over her shoelaces, which dragged from her unlaced shoes. She looked straight ahead. Her eyes were blue with age."

By using actual images, photographs, and art to represent people and ideas, you allow an audience to experience details and emotions that may not come across in writing alone. One way to accomplish this is by creating a photo essay. To create a photo essay, you combine photographs, artwork, drawings, or artifacts to represent a nonfiction narrative, another event, or an issue.

During the Great Depression, government researcher Dorothea Lange used photography to document the hardships and struggles of the poor. Examine the images below. What do Lange's photographs reveal about life during the Great Depression? Think about what it is that you want to reveal about your subject.

Unemployed men carrying suitcases to Los Angeles, California, during the Great Depression. March 1937.

A migratory family from Amarillo, Texas, lives in a trailer in an open field, with no sanitation or running water. November 1940.

The family of a Cordale, Alabama, turpentine worker earning one dollar per day. July 1936.

1126 UNIT 6 FROM DEPRESSION TO COLD WAR

Viewing Practice

Analyze Images Have students watch either a national or a local newscast. As they watch, students should keep track of the images used during the broadcast and categorize them. Students should determine their own categories for the images such as positive and negative, or emotional and informative. After students have reviewed their notes and categories, have them write a paragraph explaining how the images impact the news stories and the overall effectiveness of the broadcast. Have them draw conclusions from their observations about the purpose and the audience of the program.

Assignment Plan and deliver a photo essay.

Plan Your Presentation

Just like written essays, your photo essay needs to have a main idea. Ask yourself what central idea or message you would like to convey.

- Research the topic well. You should be prepared to answer any questions the audience may have about your topic.
- Allow enough time to prepare. Think about how many pieces you want to have, as well as what images would best suit your purpose.
- Take photos using a digital or video camera, draw images, download and print images, and/or photocopy images.
- Decide how you will showcase your work. Will you use an easel, poster board, or a slide or video presentation?

Develop Your Presentation

Develop your presentation by considering how you will add words and other effects when you deliver your essay to your audience.

- Plan to introduce the work; decide how you will direct the audience's attention from image to image; and plan a closing statement.
- Consider adding labels or captions to works to help viewers understand what each represents. Make all labels neat, clear, and uniform.
- Be sure each work carries a correct citation that accurately and fully credits the source.
- Consider display issues for work in print, such as how to mount the photos or images, such as on large black squares, at right angles, and at equal distances. Similarly, consider display and design issues for computer slides, such as borders and color or other effects.
- If you wish, add music or other sound effects.

Evaluate

Keep these guidelines in mind as you prepare your own photo essay. Then use them to evaluate the photo essays that others present.

- Match the display to the audience and the space. Images must be large enough to be seen easily by the entire audience.
- Be sure the title or introduction is a clear overview or engaging introduction, and that the presentation concludes effectively.
- Sequence the images logically, using chronological order for a narrative and a logical order, such as cause-and-effect, for an issue.
- Allow the audience enough time to view and react to each piece of your visual essay before moving on to the next image.

Speaking Frames

Consider using the following frames in your photo essay:

- The title/main idea of my photo essay is _____.
- This image, called/which I call _____, shows _____.
- Notice how the _____ in this image shows/emphasizes/suggests _____.

Presentation Tips

Use the following checklist to evaluate your photo essay.

- Did you convey one central meaning through your essay that the audience understood?
- What were your most interesting images, and what made them effective for your audience?

Teach

Speaking Skills

Gather Information Review possible sources of information:

- interviews with people who have relevant information or who can give firsthand accounts
- students' own knowledge of their subjects, supported with details
- the library and Web sites with well-documented information.

Responding Review some points on responding to questions:

- Encourage a questioner by saying, "That is a good question." Repeat the question to ensure that everyone has heard it
- Avoid slang and informal language in responses to questions.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning/Early Intermediate Help students organize information by having them list the most important points they want to cover. Students may use a simple numbered list to record the information they want to discuss first, and so on. Students may want to move beyond a list and create an outline of their main points, which can help them organize their presentations.

Intermediate Explain that there are many ways to record and organize information. Display examples of these note-taking strategies: a two- or three-column chart, a flow chart, a Venn diagram. Ask: How can these note-taking methods be used to analyze information? (columns: list statistics; flow chart: show cause and effect; Venn diagram: compare and contrast.) Have students try different methods, including taking notes on note cards.

Independent
Reading

Focus

Summary

The purpose of Independent Reading is to encourage students to read novels from and about the time period that they have learned about in this unit.

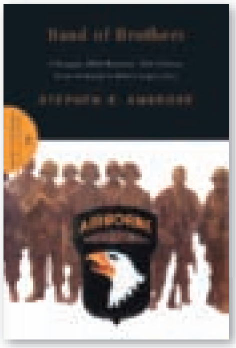
Teach

Literary History ☆

Rachel Carson Known for her flawless writing style, Carson (1907–1964) wrote Silent Spring in 1962, arousing intense controversy over the widespread use of insecticides and their effect on wildlife and humans.

Independent Reading

LITERATURE FROM THE 1930s through the 1960s is as varied as the period that produced it. The Great Depression and World War II had lasting impacts on the works of writers and artists. Well into the twenty-first century, authors are still finding rich materials from the time period. Historian Stephen Ambrose interviewed men from the 101st Airborne to record their stories of war, friendship, and heroism. Rachel Carson was a marine biologist and writer whose second book, The Sea Around Us, sold more than a million copies. Perhaps her most famous work, Silent Spring (1962) is credited with signaling the beginning of the environmental movement in the United States. Cormac McCarthy captures the grand scale of the American west in the 1940s through his Border trilogy which begins with All the Pretty Horses, followed by The Crossing, and Cities of the Plain. Whether writing about war, nature, or the west, these authors capture the American spirit of the time.



Band of Brothers: E Company, 506th Regiment, 101st Airborne from Normandy to Hitler's Eagle's Nest

Stephen Ambrose

The men of Easy Company faced the most treacherous assignments during World War II, from parachuting onto Utah Beach on D-Day to capturing Hitler's Eagle's Nest near V.E. Day. Ambrose tells the true stories of the adventures and tragedies like he is writing a novel. His work was produced as an HBO miniseries in 2002.

The Sea Around Us

Rachel Carson (1951) ☆

Sometimes called a biography of the sea, this fascinating book opens with "The Gray Beginnings," a chapter that tells how the seas began. Subsequent chapters cover the formation of islands, plant and animal life, tides, wind, waves, and historic voyages. The book won the 1952 National Book Award and the John Burroughs Medal, named for the naturalist John Burroughs. It was translated into more than thirty languages and was a best seller. More than fifty years after its initial publication, it is still in print.

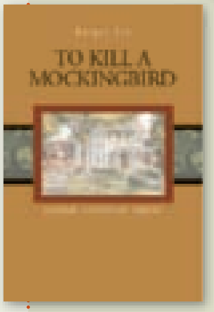
Writing Practice

SMALL GROUP

Respond to Experience

Say: The literature of this period was a response to the writers' experiences during those times. The works raised the nation's awareness of very important issues. Have small groups list and discuss some issues currently in the news. Students should consider one issue about which they have strong feelings, and write a synopsis of a book that they think should or could be written on the subject. Remind them that Harper Lee, author of To Kill A Mockingbird, responded in the form of a novel, whereas Rachel Carson responded with nonfiction. Allow students to choose which genre they will use in their response.

GLENCOE LITERATURE LIBRARY



To Kill a Mockingbird

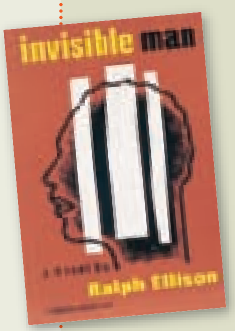
Harper Lee

A precocious, observant young girl and her brother watch as their father defends an African American man on trial in the South.

Night

Elie Wiesel

This autobiographical story traces events from 1941 to 1945, during which time Wiesel and his family are taken from their village to a Nazi concentration camp. Wiesel survives to be liberated by Allied troops and to offer this account of terror, guilt, and faith.



Invisible Man

Ralph Ellison

As he journeys from an African American college in the South to a bewildering, chaotic life as a political speaker in Harlem, the nameless narrator grapples with the question of what it means to be a human being and a person of color in the United States.

CRITICS' CORNER

"A modern-day Western full of horses and gunplay and romance, it transcends the bounds of its genre with rambunctious, high-spirited, bottomless inventiveness. All the Pretty Horses is a true American Original."

—Newsweek (back cover)

"A book of remarkable beauty and strength, the work of a master in perfect command of his medium. . . . Like classic literary journeys before it—from Jason and the Argonauts chasing the golden fleece to Huck and Jim floating down the Mississippi—this is a trip that covers much more than just geography. It covers the distance from childhood to adulthood and from innocence to experience."

—Washington Post Book World (from Random House site)

All the Pretty Horses

Cormac McCarthy

This first installment in a trilogy is set in 1949. Sixteen-year-old John Grady Cole leaves his Texas home with his friend, Lacey Rawlins, and sets off on an adventure toward the Mexican border.

Write an Advice Column

Read a book listed on this page. Identify a conflict faced by a character. Write a letter in the voice of the character to an advice columnist and write a response advising a specific course of action.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Discuss with students how they go about choosing books to read. Ask: What do you look for when you are evaluating whether or not you want to read a particular book? (Answers will vary.) Explain to students that the comments on the covers of books are sometimes quoted from a published review of a book, or may be comments that the author or publisher asked someone to make about the book. Explain to students that reading the first page of a book can help them decide whether they want to read a book. Help students identify the time period and subject of books they are considering.

Teach

Big Idea

Return to Regionalism

Have students define the word diversity and briefly discuss why diverse accurately describes American life and the American population. Ask: How do the books described here exemplify the diversity of American literature? (Possible answer: Their settings, points of view, and themes are very different.)

Advice Column

Evaluate students' advice columns by considering the following:

- clearly stated conflict
- effective use of character's voice
- attention to grammar and spelling conventions

Glencoe Literature Library

Glencoe Literature Library offers an extensive collection of hardcover books that help you encourage your students to read independently. Choose among the more than 120 full-length literary works—novels, novellas, plays, and nonfiction. Each book includes related readings from a broad range of genres. Go to www.glencoe.com for more information.

Assessment

Focus

Bellringer

Remind students of techniques they use to prepare for tests. Explain that tests are used to gauge how effectively material has been taught and how well they have learned the material. Ask: What are some of the skills and practices you use to prepare for a test? What are some important questions to ask before a test?

Teach

Assessment Tell students that this Assessment will provide reinforcement in general test-taking strategies and will test the skills covered in this unit. Students will read nonfiction selections and answer context, comprehension, and inference questions. Then they will answer paragraph-improvement questions and respond to a short narrative-essay question.

To create custom assessments online, go to Progress Reporter Online Assessment.

To create custom assessments using software, use ExamView Assessment Suite.

Assessment

English Language Arts

Reading: Nonfiction

Carefully read the following passage written by an observer of the "Dust Bowl" in the mid-1930s. Use context clues to help define any words with which you are unfamiliar. Pay attention to the author's main idea and use of rhetorical devices. Then answer the questions on page 1131–1132.

from Dust Changes America by Margaret Bourke-White

Vitamin K they call it—the dust which sifts under the door sills, and stings in the eyes, and seasons every spoonful of food. The dust storms have distinct personalities, rising in formation like rolling clouds, creeping up silently like formless fog, approaching violently like a tornado. Where has it come from? It provides topics of endless speculation. Red, it is the topsoil from Oklahoma; brown, it is the fertile earth of western Kansas; the good grazing land of Texas and New Mexico sweeps by as a murky yellow haze. Or, tracing it locally, "My uncle will be along pretty soon," they say; "I just saw his farm go by."

The town dwellers stack their linen in trunks, stuff wet cloths along the window sills, estimate the tons of sand in the darkened air above them, paste cloth masks on their faces with adhesive tape, and try to joke about Vitamin K. But on the farms and ranches there is an attitude of despair.

By coincidence I was in the same parts of the country where last year I photographed the drought. As short a time as eight months ago there was an attitude of false optimism. "Things will get better," the farmers would say. "We're not as hard hit as other states. The government will help out. This can't go on." But this year there is an atmosphere of utter hopelessness. Nothing to do. No use digging out your chicken coops and pigpens after the last "duster" because the next one will be coming along soon. No use trying to keep the house clean. No use fighting off that foreclosure any longer. No use even hoping to give your cattle anything to chew on when their food crops have literally blown out of the ground. . . .

The storm comes in a terrifying way. Yellow clouds roll. The wind blows such a gale that it is all my helper can do to hold my camera to the ground. The sand whips into my lens. I repeatedly wipe it away trying to snatch an exposure before it becomes completely coated again. The light becomes yellower, the wind colder. Soon there is no photographic light, and we hurry for shelter to the nearest farmhouse. Three men and a woman are seated around a dust-caked lamp, on their faces grotesque masks of wet cloth. The children have been put to bed with towels tucked over their heads. My host greets us: "It takes grit to live in this country." They are telling stories: A bachelor harnessed the sandblast which ripped through the keyhole by holding his pots and pans in it until they were spick and span. A pilot flying over Amarillo got caught in a sand storm. His motor clogged; he took to his parachute. It took him six hours to shovel his way back to earth. And when a man from the next county was struck by a drop of water, he fainted, and it took two buckets of sand to revive him. . . .

And this same dust that coats the lungs and threatens death to cattle and men alike, that ruins the stock of the storekeeper lying unsold on his shelves, that creeps into the gear shifts of automobiles, that sifts through the refrigerator into the butter, that makes housekeeping, and gradually life itself,

Reading Practice

Active Reading Encourage students to experiment with active reading strategies for nonfiction as they read the Margaret Bourke-White selection. Before they read the excerpt, have students prepare a blank notebook page for note taking. First, have them read the title of the excerpt and write "How did dust change America?" at the top of the page. As they read the excerpt, have students list details that answer the question. Explain to students that by looking for answers as they read, they will increase their reading comprehension.

unbearable, this swirling drifting dust is changing the agricultural map of the United States. It piles ever higher on the floors and beds of a steadily increasing number of deserted farmhouses. A half-buried plowshare, a wheat binder ruffled over with sand, the skeleton of a horse near a dirt-filled water hole are stark evidence of the meager life, the wasted savings, the years of toil that the farmer is leaving behind him.

1. What literary or rhetorical device does Bourke-White use in the sentence Where has it come from? in line 3?
   - A. parallelism
   - B. connotative language
   - C. metaphor
   - D. rhetorical question

2. What literary or rhetorical device is most evident in the sentence beginning the second paragraph?
   - F. parallelism
   - G. connotative language
   - H. metaphor
   - J. rhetorical question

3. Why was Bourke-White in this part of the country?
   - A. by coincidence
   - B. to photograph the poor
   - C. to photograph dust storms
   - D. to photograph the drought

4. From the context, what does the word atmosphere in line 13 mean?
   - F. the physical environment
   - G. the mood of the environment
   - H. an exotic or romantic quality
   - J. the gaseous elements of an environment

5. Which of the following is an example of connotative language from the sentence beginning Three men and a woman in line 21?
   - A. seated
   - B. grotesque
   - C. wet
   - D. lamp

6. Why have the children been put to bed with towels over their heads?
   - F. to block out the noise of the storm
   - G. to prevent them from hearing the adult conversation
   - H. to make them more comfortable
   - J. to prevent them from breathing in the dust

7. Of what literary device is the word grit in the sentence It takes grit to live in this country in line 23 an example?
   - A. metaphor
   - B. symbol
   - C. simile
   - D. motif

8. Why do the farmers tell humorous stories about the dust storms?
   - F. because they are insensitive
   - G. because they want to distract the children
   - H. because they want to lighten the mood
   - J. because they want to relate the local news

9. What literary or rhetorical device is most evident in the sentence that begins the last paragraph?
   - A. parallelism
   - B. connotative language
   - C. metaphor
   - D. rhetorical question

Literature Online

Assessment For additional test practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u6.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain that a rhetorical question is used to make a point. Have students work in pairs to rephrase rhetorical questions—for example, "Is there no one who can rescue us?"—as statements. (There is no one who can rescue us.)

Assess

Reading

1. D is the correct answer because the sentence is a rhetorical question asked to pique the reader's curiosity. DOK 2
2. F is the correct answer because the sentence includes a series of parallel verbs that make up the predicate. DOK 2
3. A is the correct answer because Bourke-White says, "By coincidence, I was in the same parts of the country where last year I photographed the drought." DOK 1
4. G is the correct answer because in this context atmosphere means "a prevailing emotional effect." DOK 1
5. B is the correct answer because the word grotesque has an extreme negative connotation. DOK 2
6. J is the correct answer because the reader can infer that the parents are protecting their children from the harmful effects of inhaling dust. DOK 1
7. A is the correct answer because the literal meaning of grit is "an abrasive particle," such as sand, but metaphorically it means "bravery," or "firmness of mind and spirit." DOK 2
8. H is the correct answer because the reader can infer that the farmers are using humor to defend themselves against despair. DOK 4
9. A is the correct answer because the sentence includes a series of adjective clauses that describe the way the dust creeps into everything. DOK 2

Assess

10. J is the correct answer because the passage chronicles one of the worst human and environmental tragedies in U.S. history. DOK 2

11. C is the correct answer because Bourke-White's purpose is to describe the environment and the human suffering during the Dust Bowl of the 1930s. DOK 4

12. G is the correct answer because the memo states that there will be "a meeting expressly for subcommittee heads on Wednesday, February 22." DOK 1

13. D is the correct answer because the memo states that subcommittee heads "are encouraged to attend" because "we will be discussing financing for the upcoming term." DOK 1

14. H is the correct answer because the memo states that chairpersons who cannot attend should "let me know as soon as possible." DOK 2

10. What is the main idea of this passage?
    - F. The farmers do not understand the seriousness of the situation.
    - G. Nobody knows what causes dust storms.
    - H. The farmers are optimistic that the storms will end soon.
    - J. This region has become an agricultural and human disaster.

11. Which of the following best describes the author's purpose in this passage?
    - A. to entertain
    - B. to persuade
    - C. to describe
    - D. to analyze

Informational Reading Carefully read the passage and answer the questions that follow it. Be sure to pay close attention to details and to any instructions that are provided.

Memo
To: Committee Chairpersons
From: Lisa Hopkins, Dean of Student Activities
Date: February 8, 2006
Re: Committee Chairperson Meeting

We need to schedule the quarterly meeting on facility distribution for all of the school's committee chairpersons. In light of this, I suggest that we hold our meeting in the school library at 3:00 on Thursday, February 16. If you are unable to make this date, for whatever reason, please let me know as soon as possible.

Subcommittee heads are not required to attend this meeting. However, because we will be discussing financing for the upcoming term, these representatives are encouraged to attend. There will also be a meeting expressly for subcommittee heads on Wednesday, February 22.

12. From the information presented in this memo, when will subcommittee heads be required to attend a meeting?
    - F. Thursday, February 16
    - G. Wednesday, February 22
    - H. Monday, February 20
    - J. Monday, February 13

13. For what reason should subcommittee heads attend the meeting on Thursday, February 16?
    - A. to discuss facility distribution
    - B. to meet in the school library
    - C. to confer with committee chairpersons
    - D. to discuss finances

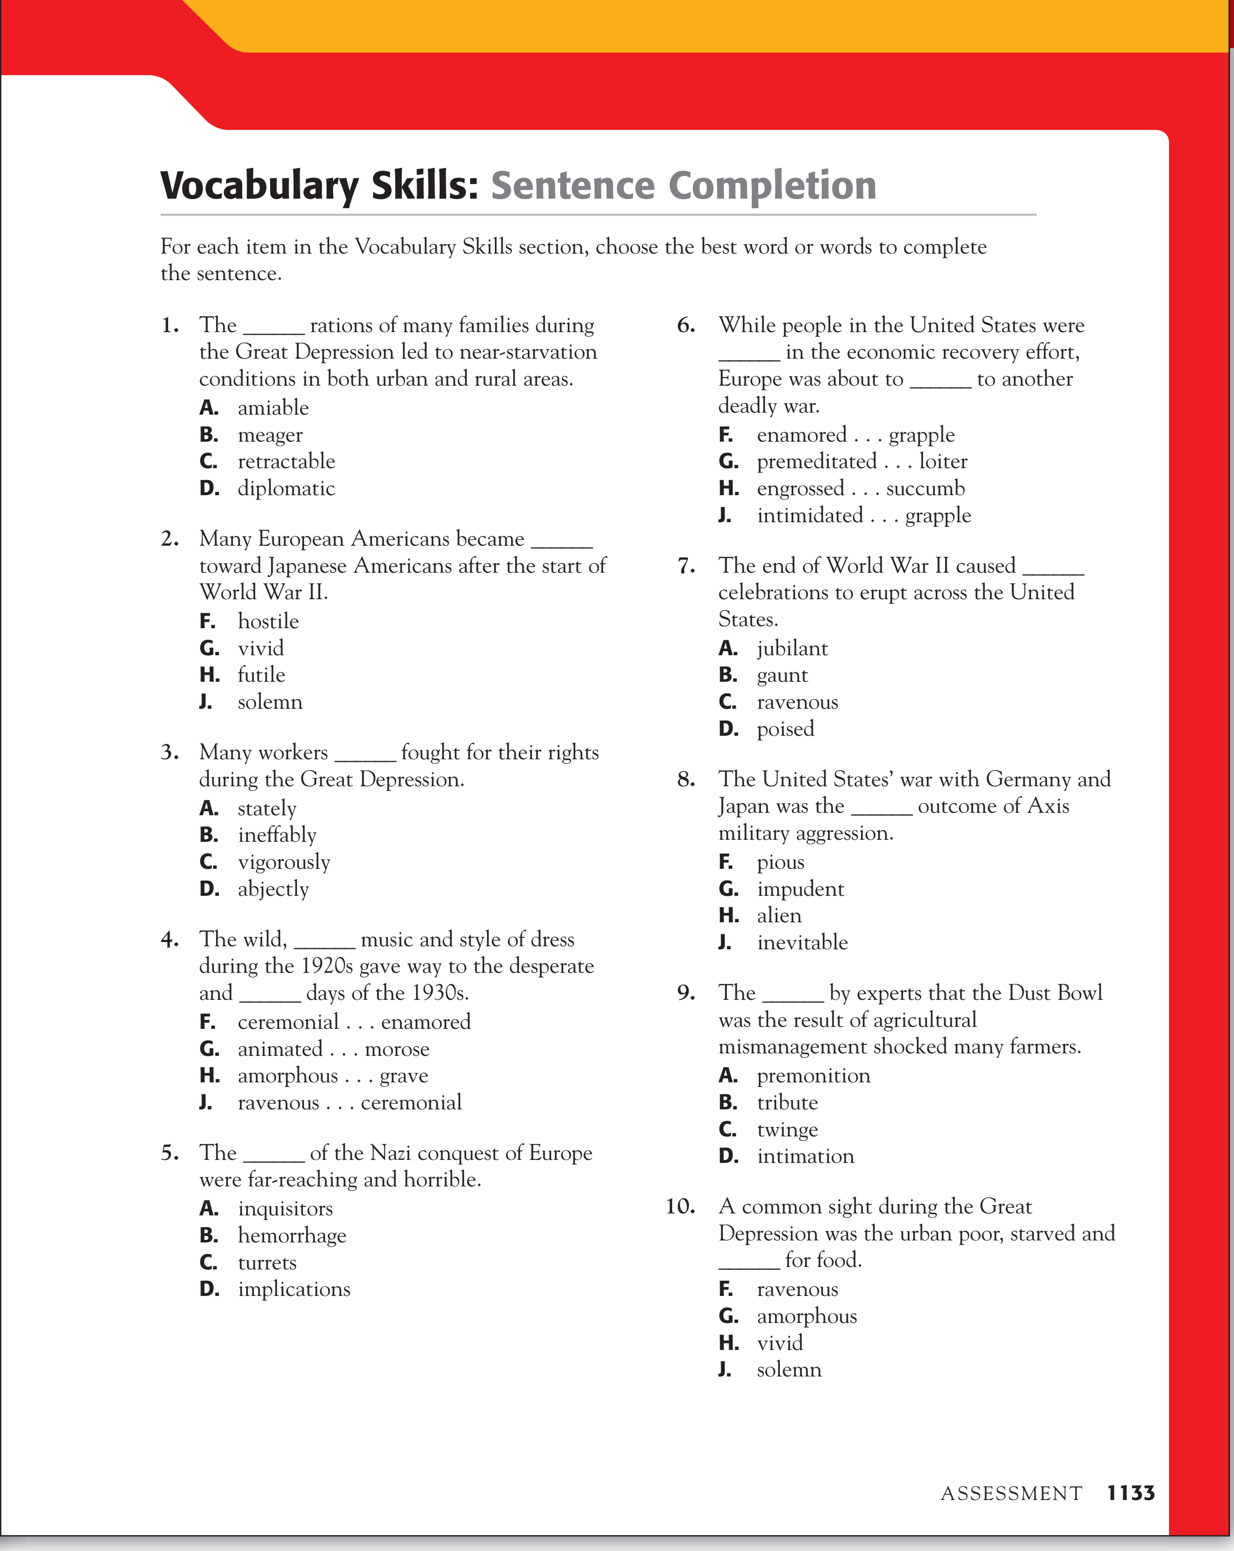
14. What should committee chairpersons do if they are unable to attend?
    - F. attend the meeting being held for subcommittee heads on February 22
    - G. individually meet with the subcommittee heads
    - H. contact Lisa Hopkins as soon as possible
    - J. meet with the other committee chairpersons

Reading Practice

Scan Point out that this memo contains dates, facts, and directions. Remind students that scanning is looking quickly over a text to find certain information. Suggest that students scan the questions about the memo and then scan the memo to find the answers as quickly as they can. As students read, they might take brief notes to aid their comprehension.



Vocabulary Skills: Sentence Completion

For each item in the Vocabulary Skills section, choose the best word or words to complete the sentence.

1. The _____ rations of many families during the Great Depression led to near-starvation conditions in both urban and rural areas.
   - A. amiable
   - B. meager
   - C. retractable
   - D. diplomatic

2. Many European Americans became _____ toward Japanese Americans after the start of World War II.
   - F. hostile
   - G. vivid
   - H. futile
   - J. solemn

3. Many workers _____ fought for their rights during the Great Depression.
   - A. stately
   - B. ineffably
   - C. vigorously
   - D. abjectly

4. The wild, _____ music and style of dress during the 1920s gave way to the desperate and _____ days of the 1930s.
   - F. ceremonial . . . enamored
   - G. animated . . . morose
   - H. amorphous . . . grave
   - J. ravenous . . . ceremonial

5. The _____ of the Nazi conquest of Europe were far-reaching and horrible.
   - A. inquisitors
   - B. hemorrhage
   - C. turrets
   - D. implications

6. While people in the United States were _____ in the economic recovery effort, Europe was about to _____ to another deadly war.
   - F. enamored . . . grapple
   - G. premeditated . . . loiter
   - H. engrossed . . . succumb
   - J. intimidated . . . grapple

7. The end of World War II caused _____ celebrations to erupt across the United States.
   - A. jubilant
   - B. gaunt
   - C. ravenous
   - D. poised

8. The United States' war with Germany and Japan was the _____ outcome of Axis military aggression.
   - F. pious
   - G. impudent
   - H. alien
   - J. inevitable

9. The _____ by experts that the Dust Bowl was the result of agricultural mismanagement shocked many farmers.
   - A. premonition
   - B. tribute
   - C. twinge
   - D. intimation

10. A common sight during the Great Depression was the urban poor, starved and _____ for food.
    - F. ravenous
    - G. amorphous
    - H. vivid
    - J. solemn

ASSESSMENT 1133

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Remind students to use guessing strategies if they do not know which answer choice is the right one. For example, even if they know that two choices are incorrect, they can use that information to eliminate them from consideration. That will give them a better chance of correctly guessing the answer. Consider using some of the questions on this page to demonstrate the strategy.

Assess

Vocabulary

1. B is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context. DOK 1

2. F is the correct answer because options G and H make no sense in this context, and J is historically inaccurate. DOK 1

3. C is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context. DOK 1

4. G is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context. DOK 2

5. D is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context. DOK 1

6. H is the correct answer because it is the only option that fits idiomatically in this context. DOK 2

7. A is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context. DOK 1

8. J is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context. DOK 1

9. D is the correct answer because options B and C make no sense in this context and A does not agree with the past-tense verb was. DOK 1

10. F is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context. DOK 1

Assessment

Grammar and Writing Skills

Teach

Context Clues Remind students to use context clues if they encounter vocabulary that is difficult to understand, such as the words lathe and fascism. Suggest to students that questions can help in determining word meanings. Ask: What would be a good question to ask about the word lathe? (Possible answer: What did Grandpa Will use the lathe for?) Point out that the context indicates that a lathe is used to carve wood.

Assess

1 C is the correct answer because the present-tense verb is needed to match the present-tense verbs in the preceding and following sentences. DOK 1

2 G is the correct answer because it is the only option that corrects the dangling modifier and completes the comparison implicit in the original sentence. DOK 1

Grammar and Writing Skills: Paragraph Improvement

In the following excerpt from a student draft of an essay, you will find underlined phrases and sentences. The number that precedes each underlined phrase corresponds to a numbered question on the next page. Each question will prompt you to replace the underlined phrase or sentence. If you think the original should not be changed, choose "NO CHANGE."

The bracketed numbers refer to the questions about a specific paragraph or to the essay as a whole.

My grandfather was an infantryman during World War II. He often tells me stories about his experiences overseas—describing the people that he met and the things that he did and saw. Grandpa Will is amazing for other things too. (1) He was one of the best woodworkers in East Texas. The sculptures and vessels that he carves on his lathe are beautiful. Grandpa Will's life, art, and the stories that he tells have had a great influence on me.

(2) Joining at the age of sixteen, the army was a vastly different experience. It was five days after Pearl Harbor had been bombed. (3) Will, like the rest of the country, was in an uproar over the attack. He decided that he had to do something. (4) After saying goodbye to his parents, his friends, and relatives Will signed up and was shipped off to boot camp.

Will saw a lot of combat during the war. He fought in some of the bloodiest battles in Europe, including the Battle of the Bulge. He also lost a lot of friends in the fighting and saw some terrible tragedies. (5) Grandpa Will believes that the war against fascism was worth it, but whenever he talks about it he always said: "War hurts a lot of people."

(6) When he returned from Europe, Will started working for a paper mill. He worked there until he retired, just ten years ago. [7] He started by taking some classes at the local community college, and then he joined a woodworkers' organization. After a couple of years, Grandpa Will started producing some really amazing pieces. (8) Yet, Grandpa Will has won several prizes for his work, and some of his sculptures are even on display at a small Houston art gallery. (9) Striking angles and textured colors, Grandpa Will makes sculptures that always grab the eye. [10]

1. A. NO CHANGE
   B. In East Texas, he was one of the best woodworkers.
   C. He is one of the best woodworkers in East Texas.
   D. Of the best woodworkers, he was one.

2. F. NO CHANGE
   G. Joining at the age of sixteen, Will found the army to be vastly different from any experience he had had before.
   H. The army was a vastly different experience for Will.
   J. Will joined at the age of sixteen.

Grammar Practice

Misplaced Modifiers One common sentence error is the misplaced modifier, a word or phrase that is placed so that it seems to modify a word other than the one it is intended to modify. Write the following pair of sentences on the board and ask students to choose the one that contains a misplaced modifier:

- A man rafted the Mississippi River in my neighborhood.
- A man in my neighborhood rafted the Mississippi River.

(The first sentence misplaces the modifier "in my neighborhood" so that it modifies the river rather than the man.)

3. A. NO CHANGE
B. The rest of the country was in an uproar over the attack.
C. Will, like the rest of the country, is in an uproar over the attack.
D. Like the rest of the country, Will is in an uproar over the attack.

4. F. NO CHANGE
G. After saying goodbye to his parents, friends, and relatives, Will signed up and was shipped off to boot camp.
H. After saying goodbye to his parents his friends and relatives Will signed up and was shipped off to boot camp.
J. After saying goodbye to his parents and relatives Will signed up and was shipped off to boot camp.

5. A. NO CHANGE
B. Grandpa Will believes that the war against fascism was worth it.
C. Whenever Grandpa Will talks about it he always said: "War hurts a lot of people."
D. Grandpa Will believes that the war against fascism was worth it, but whenever he talks about it, he always says: "War hurts a lot of people."

6. F. NO CHANGE
G. When he returned from Europe, he worked for a paper mill.
H. When he returned from Europe Will started working for a paper mill.
J. Returning from Europe, a paper mill company gave him a job.

7. Which of the following sentences, if inserted at this point, would provide the most effective transition in this paragraph?
A. Grandpa Will actually never liked his job at the mill.
B. The war had changed Grandpa Will's whole attitude about people, work, and school.
C. Since then, Grandpa Will has been honing his skills as a craftsman.
D. However, Grandpa Will wanted to keep working at the mill.

8. F. NO CHANGE
G. However,
H. In fact,
J. Although,

9. A. NO CHANGE
B. Grandpa Will makes sculptures that always grab the eye.
C. Striking angles and textured colors Grandpa Will makes sculptures that always grab the eye.
D. Grandpa Will makes sculptures with striking angles and textured colors that always grab the eye.

10. Which of the following should the writer include when writing a concluding paragraph?
F. information not included in previous paragraphs
G. a summary of the key points
H. the introduction of opposing viewpoints
J. further descriptions of the grandfather's war experiences

Essay

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt claimed that he firmly believed that "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself—nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance." Describe an example from your own life in which you witnessed Roosevelt's principle in action. As you write, keep in mind that your essay will be checked for ideas, organization, voice, word choice, sentence fluency, conventions, and presentation.

Assess

3. A is the correct answer because the sentence contains no errors. DOK 1

4. G is the correct answer because it is the only option that restores parallelism to the three objects of the preposition to and sets off the introductory adverbial clause with a comma. DOK 1

5. D is the correct answer because the verb must be in the present tense to be consistent with talks. DOK 1

6. F is the correct answer because the sentence contains no errors. DOK 1

7. C is the correct answer because it makes a smooth transition between the information about Will's professional career and his woodworking. DOK 4

8. H is the correct answer because the relationship between the ideas in this sentence and the previous one is one of emphasis, not contrast. DOK 1

9. D is the correct answer because the misplaced participial phrase "striking angles and textured colors" is repositioned to modify sculptures, not Grandpa Will. DOK 1

10. G is the correct answer because a conclusion to this essay should summarize the varied accomplishments of Grandpa Will. DOK 4

Writing

Make sure students know how much time they have for the writing task and approximately how long the essay should be. Explain to students that Roosevelt's principle could be seen in an action—or a failure to act—that is a result of fear taking over; or, it could be seen in action when fear is faced and overcome.

Essay

Evaluate essays for:

- clearly stated main ideas supported by good reasons and details
- effective voice, word choice, and sentence variety
- effective presentation with attention to grammar and spelling conventions

DOK 3

Skills Scope and Sequence

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 1: An Era of Protest

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Unit Introduction pp. 1136-1150	Allusion TE p. 1145 Rhythm TE p. 1147 Style TE p. 1148
Informational Text TIME: The Torchbearer, by Rita Dove 8.2/61/1060 pp. 1152-1154
Memoir from Stride Toward Freedom, by Martin Luther King Jr. 11.2/67/1040 pp. 1155-1160	Structure SE p. 1156
Speech Choice: A Tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., by Alice Walker 7.3/60/1170 pp. 1161-1165	Anecdote SE p. 1162
Vocabulary Workshop p. 1166
Interview from Working: Roberto Acuna, Farm Worker, by Studs Terkel 4.8/52/720 pp. 1167-1178	Oral History SE p. 1168 Structure (review) SE p. 1177
Grammar Workshop p. 1179
Comparing Literature Ambush (short story), by Tim O'Brien 5.8/53/940 The Gift in Wartime (poem), by Tran Mong Tu from Stay Alive, My Son (memoir), by Pin Yathay with John Man 6.5/49/650 Camouflaging the Chimera (poem), by Yusef Komunyakaa pp. 1180-1191	Mood SE p. 1182 Exposition TE p. 1188 Theme TE p. 1189
Poems The Asians Dying, Separation, and When You Go Away, by W. S. Merwin pp. 1192-1197	Figurative Language SE p. 1193 Free Verse (review) SE p. 1196
Artistic Perspective Proposal for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, by Maya Lin 13/66/1310 pp. 1198-1201
Song A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall, by Bob Dylan pp. 1202-1207	Rhythm SE p. 1203 Mood (review) SE p. 1206
Poem Courage, by Anne Sexton pp. 1208-1212	Verse Paragraph SE p. 1209

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Analyze Graphic Information SE p. 1139 Monitor Comprehension TE p. 1143 Analyze Cause and Effect SE p. 1145 Activate Prior Knowledge TE p. 1146 Interpret SE p. 1147 Analyze Imagery TE p. 1148 Evaluate SE p. 1149		Write a Persuasive Essay TE p. 1144	Compare Media Accounts TE p. 1150
Analyze Text Structure SE p. 1152 Identify Topic Sentences TE p. 1152
Paraphrase SE p. 1156 Analyze Arguments TE p. 1158	Word Usage SE p. 1160	Write a Summary SE p. 1160
Activate Prior Knowledge SE p. 1162	Analogies SE p. 1165	Write a Tribute TE p. 1162 Past Perfect Tense TE p. 1164 Write a Speech SE p. 1165
	Loaded Words SE p. 1166 Persuasive Language TE p. 1166
Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships SE p. 1168 Question TE p. 1170	Context Clues SE p. 1178 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 1178	Write an Interview TE p. 1168	Interview SE p. 1178
		Run-on Sentences SE p. 1179
Compare Themes and Cultures SE p. 1180 Analyze Concrete Details SE p. 1182 Analyze Images TE p. 1186 Make Predictions TE p. 1188 Identify Concrete Details TE p. 1190	Word Origins SE p. 1185	Write a Journal Entry SE p. 1185 Write an Essay SE p. 1191	Discussion SE p. 1189
Clarify Meaning SE p. 1193 Make Critical Judgments TE p. 1194	Analogies SE p. 1197 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 1197		Literature Group SE p. 1197
Analyze Political Assumptions SE p. 1198		Write a Reflective Essay TE p. 1200
Analyze Rhetorical Devices SE p. 1203 Make Inferences TE p. 1205	Academic Vocabulary SE p. 1207	Simple and Compound Sentences TE p. 1204	Oral Interpretation SE p. 1207
Examine Connotation and Denotation SE p. 1209 Make Predictions TE p. 1210	Synonyms SE p. 1212	Write a Letter SE p. 1212

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 2: Nature and Technology

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Poems The Fish and Filling Station, by Elizabeth Bishop pp. 1214-1221	Tone SE p. 1215 Setting (review) SE p. 1220
Poem Root Cellar, by Theodore Roethke pp. 1222-1225	Simile SE p. 1223
Poems Sleep in the Mojave Desert and Crossing the Water, by Sylvia Plath pp. 1226-1231	Mood SE p. 1227 Figurative Language (review) SE p. 1230
Poem The War Against the Trees, by Stanley Kunitz pp. 1232-1235	Personification SE p. 1233
Scientific Perspective from Silent Spring, by Rachel Carson 7.4/62/1150 pp. 1236-1238
Short Story SQ, by Ursula K. Le Guin 8.3/58/1120 pp. 1239-1252	Satire SE p. 1240 Irony TE p. 1248
Short Story Snow, by Julia Alvarez 5.2/56/980 pp. 1253-1256	Indirect Characterization SE p. 1254
Poems Cottonmouth Country and Daisies, by Louise Glück pp. 1257-1262	Free Verse SE p. 1258 Personification TE p. 1259

PART 3: Extending and Remaking Traditions

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Memoir from The Woman Warrior, by Maxine Hong Kingston 4.4/51/800 pp. 1264-1273	Exposition SE p. 1265 Tone TE p. 1270 Dialogue (review) SE p. 1272
Short Story Everything Stuck to Him, by Raymond Carver 3.3/46/460 pp. 1274-1281	Frame Story SE p. 1275 Style (review) SE p. 1280
Poem El Olvido, by Judith Ortiz Cofer pp. 1282-1285	Point of View SE p. 1283
Poem My Father and the Figtree, by Naomi Shihab Nye pp. 1286-1290	Symbol SE p. 1287

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Evaluate Sensory Details SE p. 1215 Monitor Comprehension TE p. 1216	Context Clues SE p. 1221 Academic Vocabulary	Punctuation TE p. 1218
Interpret Imagery SE p. 1223 Identify Figurative Language TE p. 1224	Synonyms SE p. 1225	Write a Poem SE p. 1225
Analyze Voice SE p. 1227 Predict TE p. 1229	Word Origins SE p. 1231 Academic Vocabulary		Oral Interpretation TE p. 1228 Literature Group SE p. 1231
Evaluate Figures of Speech SE p. 1233 Identify Slant Rhyme TE p. 1234	Analogies SE p. 1235	Write a Dialogue SE p. 1235
Recognize Author's Purpose SE p. 1236 Predict TE p. 1236	Connotation TE p. 1238	Note Taking TE p. 1236
Identify Genre SE p. 1240 Analyze Narrator TE p. 1244	Analogies SE p. 1251 Academic Vocabulary	Write Science Fiction TE p. 1248
Connect to Contemporary Issues SE p. 1254	Word Parts SE p. 1256	Write a Journal Entry SE p. 1256
Make Inferences About Theme SE p. 1258	Analogies SE p. 1262 Academic Vocabulary	Write Free Verse TE p. 1260	Oral Interpretation SE p. 1262

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Make Inferences About Characters SE p. 1265	Synonyms SE p. 1272 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 1272	Write a Comparison-Contrast Essay SE p. 1271 Write an Autobiographical Narrative SE p. 1273 Sentence Fragments SE p. 1273
Question SE p. 1275, TE p. 1276 Connect TE p. 1278	Context Clues SE p. 1281 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 1281		Debate SE p. 1281
Examine Connotation SE p. 1283 Draw Conclusions TE p. 1284	Denotation and Connotation SE p. 1285	Write a Poem SE p. 1285
Summarize SE p. 1287 Make Inferences TE p. 1288 Scan TE p. 1288	Context Clues SE p. 1290	Write a List SE p. 1290

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 3: Extending and Remaking Traditions (continued)

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Poem I Chop Some Parsley While Listening to Art Blakey's Version of "Three Blind Mice," by Billy Collins pp. 1291-1295	Personification SE p. 1292
Essay The Names of Women, by Louise Erdrich 7.3/62/1300 pp. 1296-1303	Catalog SE p. 1297 Symbolism TE p. 1300 Symbol (review) SE p. 1302
Short Story Salvador Late or Early, by Sandra Cisneros 5.5/63/0000 pp. 1304-1307	Imagery SE p. 1305
Essay Thoughts on the African-American Novel, by Toni Morrison 7.4/61/1130 pp. 1308-1314	Essay SE p. 1309 Parallelism (review) SE p. 1313
Vocabulary Workshop p. 1315
Literary Periods From Comic Strips to Graphic Novels pp. 1316-1317	Science Fiction TE p. 1316
Short Story Nineteen Thirty-Seven, by Edwidge Danticat 5/54/900 pp. 1318-1330	Magic Realism SE p. 1319 Style (review) SE p. 1329
Poem The Man with the Saxophone, by Ai pp. 1331-1335	Narrative Poetry SE p. 1332
Poem Ending Poem, by Rosario Morales and Aurora Levins Morales pp. 1336-1341	Motif SE p. 1337 Tone (review) SE p. 1340
Writing Workshop pp. 1342-1349
Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop pp. 1350-1351
Media Workshop pp. 1352-1357
Independent Reading pp. 1358-1359
Assessment pp. 1360-1365	First-Person Point of View TE p. 1361

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Connect to Personal Experience SE p. 1292 Analyze Tone TE p. 1292	Word Usage SE p. 1295	Write a Journal Entry SE p. 1295
Distinguish Fact and Opinion SE p. 1297	Word Parts SE p. 1303 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 1303	Apostrophes TE p. 1300 Apply Symbolism SE p. 1303
Analyze Sound Devices SE p. 1305 Identify Sequence TE p. 1306	Academic Vocabulary SE p. 1307	Write an Essay SE p. 1307
Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details SE p. 1309	Word Parts SE p. 1314	Apply Parallelism SE p. 1314
	Word Parts SE p. 1315
Analyze Characterization TE p. 1316
Visualize SE p. 1319 Analyze Foreshadowing TE p. 1322 Question TE p. 1326	Antonyms SE p. 1329 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 1329	Write a Short Story SE p. 1330
Connect to Cultural Context SE p. 1332	Denotation and Connotation SE p. 1335	Write Directions SE p. 1335	Discussion TE p. 1334
Make Generalizations SE p. 1337	Context Clues SE p. 1341 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 1341		Oral Report SE p. 1341
Analyze Persuasion TE p. 1344		Write an Editorial SE p. 1343 Prewrite SE p. 1345 Draft SE p. 1346 Revise SE p. 1348 Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement SE p. 1349	Provide Feedback TE p. 1348 Presentation SE p. 1349
			Debate SE p. 1350 Analyze Persuasive Propositions TE p. 1350
Analyze Media Messages SE p. 1352 Analyze Sound Bites TE p. 1352 Identify Logical Fallacies SE p. 1353 Use Either/Or Reasoning TE p. 1354 Analyze Images TE p. 1356		Make a Chart SE p. 1353	Small Group Discussion SE pp. 1354, 1355 Partner Discussion SE p. 1356 Plan a Multimedia PSA SE p. 1357
Compare TE p. 1358		Write a Letter SE p. 1359
Read Silently TE p. 1360		Write an Essay SE p. 1365

UNIT SEVEN

Focus

Bellringer Options

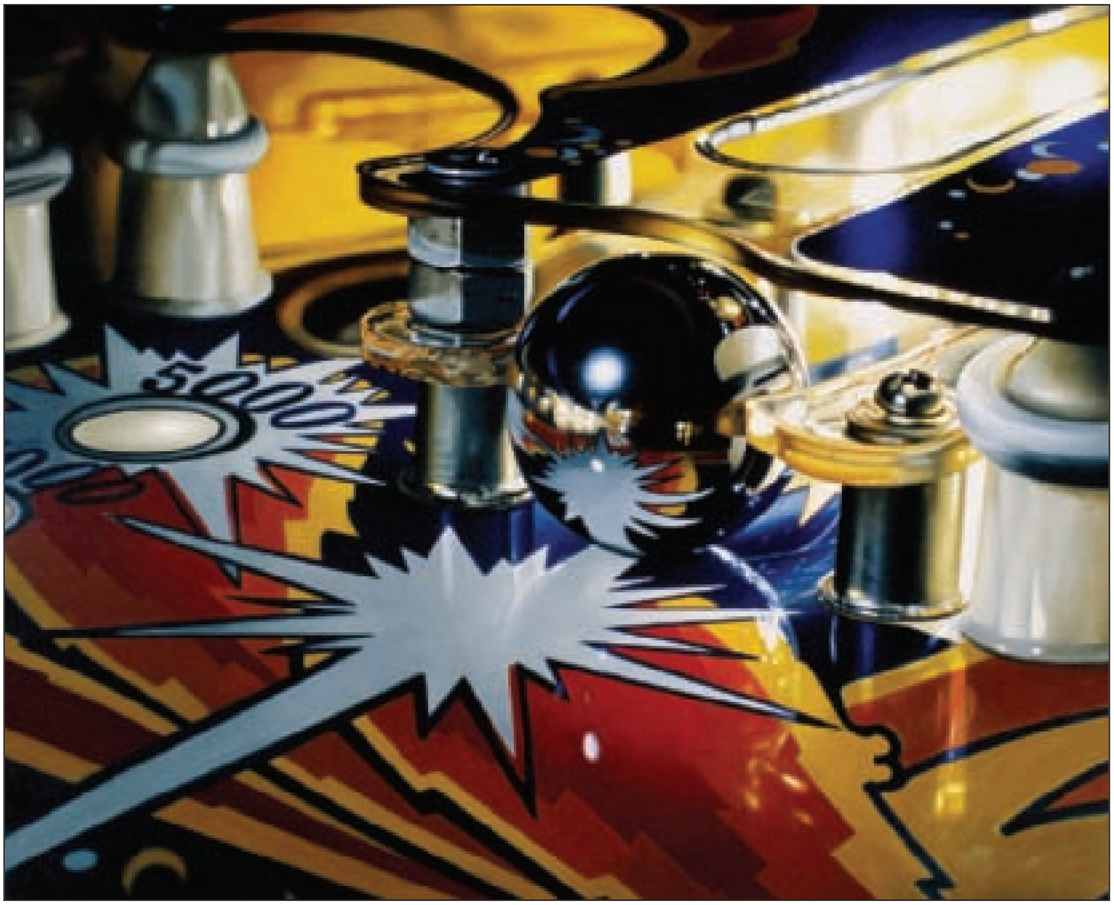
Literature Launcher
Pre-Reading Video: Unit 7

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 96

Or say: The word technology comes from the Greek root techno- that means "art" or "craft." Ask: How has technology changed or improved during your lifetime? Have students list the technological changes they have seen and discuss how each has affected them. As they read the selections in this unit, have them note the influence of technology on themes in literature.

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may say that this painting suggests precision technology, rapid change, or uncertainty of where technology will take us in the future. Charles Bell (1935–1995) belonged to the art movement known as Photorealism. This movement features paintings of scenes that are so realistic they appear to be photographs.



Pin Ball #12, 1984. Charles Bell. Oil on canvas. Louis K. Meisel Gallery.

View the Art Bell is known for his nostalgic depictions of vintage toys and for portraying well-known objects in unexpected scale. How does this image represent the future or a technological world? ★

Unit Introduction Skills

Into the 21st Century

Reading Skills
- Analyze Graphic Information (SE pp. 1138–1141)
- Analyze Cause and Effect (SE pp. 1144–1145)
- Interpret (SE pp. 1146–1147)
- Evaluate (SE pp. 1148–1149)
- Create Graphic Organizers (TE p. 1138)

Literary Elements
- Allusion (TE p. 1145)
- Style (TE p. 1148)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Persuasive Essay (TE p. 1144)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 1136; TE pp. 1141, 1145, 1149)
- Presentation on Postmodernist Literature (SE p. 1150)
- Visual Literacy: Timeline (SE p. 1150)

UNIT SEVEN

Into the 21st Century

1960s–Present

Looking Ahead

The United States is being reshaped today by profound political and social changes, watershed technological innovation, increasing ethnic diversity, and a complex mixture of cultures. As in the past, contemporary American writers have responded to these historical and cultural forces, both by adapting traditional literary forms and by finding new ones. ☆

Keep the following questions in mind as you read:

- ▷ What political, social, and cultural forces contributed to the rise of protest movements in the 1960s and 1970s?
- ▷ How has environmentalism affected contemporary American literature?
- ▷ How have today's writers reshaped the traditions of Modernism?

UNIT SEVEN

Focus

Summary

This introduction begins with an overview of world events and of political, social, and cultural events in the United States from 1960 to 2005. It focuses on the social, political, and environmental movements of the period, the effects of technology and globalization, and increased multiculturalism.

Language History ☆

Personal Computer In the late 1970s, engineers developed computers that were small enough and inexpensive enough for individuals to purchase for personal use at home. Previously, large mainframe computers had been available only to large organizations. Personal computers, or PCs, continue to evolve as they become smaller and more powerful.

For school-to-home activities, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 5–11.

For students who would profit from independent novel study, see Novel Companion pp. 295–338.

For diagnostic and end-of-unit assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 49–55, 343–344

Unit Resources

Print Materials

- Unit 7 Teaching Resources, pp. 1–398
- Interactive Read and Write (On Level, Approaching, EL), pp. 255–294
- Novel Companion, pp. 295–338
- Bellringer Option Transparencies: Selection Focus 65–74; Daily Language Practice 96–123
- Assessment Resources, Selection Assessment, pp. 273–328

Technology

- TeacherWorks Plus CD
- StudentWorks Plus CD
- Literature Launchers: Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Unit 7
- Literature Online
- Visual Vocabulary CD-ROM
- Listening Library CD-ROM
- ExamView CD-ROM
- Skill Level Up! CD-ROM

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Use the Timeline Help students read the timeline and relate events in American literature to events in the United States and in the world.

This timeline covers the period from the beginnings of the civil rights and environmental movements through the war in Iraq and the tsunami in Southeast Asia.

Ask: What event in the United States or in the world at large might have been related to one of the literature titles? (The "I Have a Dream" speech was a part of the March on Washington.)

Political History ☆

Three Mile Island On March 28, 1979, America's most serious nuclear accident occurred at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant. A series of events caused the core to overheat and radioactive gas to escape. Although the health threat to the community was negligible, the accident had an enormous effect on public opinion.

Timeline

1960s–Present

AMERICAN LITERATURE

1 1960 1970

1960
To Kill a Mockingbird by Harper Lee

1962
Silent Spring by Rachel Carson

1963
"I Have a Dream" speech by Martin Luther King Jr.; The Feminine Mystique by Betty Friedan

1965
The Autobiography of Malcolm X

1966
In Cold Blood by Truman Capote

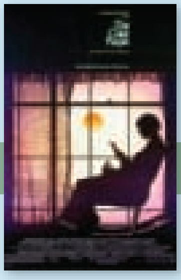
1969
Slaughterhouse Five by Kurt Vonnegut

1970
I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings by Maya Angelou

1971
Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee by Dee Brown

1975
Ragtime by E. L. Doctorow

1976
Roots: The Saga of an American Family by Alex Haley



1982 ▲
The Color Purple by Alice Walker

1984
Cathedral by Raymond Carver

UNITED STATES EVENTS

1960 1970

1960
First sit-in protests for civil rights

1963
March on Washington; President Kennedy assassinated

1964
Civil Rights Act of 1964; Gulf of Tonkin Resolution

1968
Martin Luther King Jr. and Senator Robert Kennedy assassinated

1969 ▲
Apollo 11 landing on the moon

1970
First Earth Day observed; students killed at Kent State during antiwar protests

1972
DDT banned; President Richard Nixon visits China

1973
U.S. signs cease-fire with North Vietnam

▲ Cooling Towers at Three Mile Island ☆

1973
Last Americans withdrawn from Vietnam

1974
President Nixon resigns

1979
Nuclear accident at Three Mile Island

WORLD EVENTS

1960 1970

1961
Cosmonaut Yury Gagarin becomes first man in space

1966 ▶
China's Cultural Revolution begins

1967
Six-Day War breaks out between Israel and multiple Arab nations

1968
Tet Offensive launched by communist forces in Vietnam; Soviets invade Czechoslovakia

1973
Paris Peace Accords signed, ending the Vietnam War

1975
South Vietnam defeated by North Vietnam

1979
Soviets invade Afghanistan

1981 ▶
AIDS identified

1985
Mikhail Gorbachev becomes Soviet leader

1989
Tiananmen Square protests in China; fall of Berlin Wall

Reading Practice

Graphic Organizers A timeline shows events in chronological order. Another way to order events is by theme or subject. A web diagram is one graphic organizer that does this. Model a web diagram around the theme of the environment. Put "environmentalism" in the center circle. In surrounding circles, place "publication of Silent Spring," "First Earth Day observed," "DDT banned," and "Kyoto Protocol." Have students create a web diagram for another theme in the timeline, such as civil rights, Vietnam, or space exploration.

NOW
NATIONAL ORGANIZATION FOR WOMEN

National Organization for Women button

Literature Online

Literature and Reading To explore the Interactive Timeline, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

1990

1987
Beloved by Toni Morrison

1989 ▼
The Joy Luck Club by Amy Tan

☆

1990
The Things They Carried by Tim O'Brien; "afternoon, a story" hypertext fiction by Michael Joyce

1992
Art Spiegelman awarded a Pulitzer Prize for his graphic novel Maus

1993
Toni Morrison wins Nobel Prize in Literature

1996
Infinite Jest by David Foster Wallace

1999
Michael Cunningham wins Pulitzer Prize for Fiction for The Hours

2000

2000
The Interpreter of Maladies by Jhumpa Lahiri

2004
Personal Weblogs, or blogs, affect traditional news coverage and public opinion 2

Towers of Light WTC Memorial, 2002.

1990

1981 ►
Sandra Day O'Connor becomes first female Supreme Court justice

1982
Equal Rights Amendment fails; Vietnam Veterans Memorial dedicated in Washington, D.C.

1986
Space shuttle Challenger explodes

1992
United States, Mexico, and Canada inaugurate NAFTA trade pact

1993
Mosaic, the first popular Web browser, is introduced

1995
Terrorist bombing in Oklahoma City

1999
Columbine High School shootings in Littleton, Colorado

2001 ▲
Terrorist attacks destroy World Trade Center and damage Pentagon

2003
War in Iraq begins

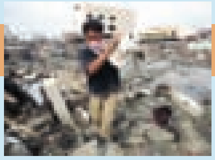
1991
Persian Gulf War; Soviet Union collapses, end of Cold War

1992
Ethnic cleansing kills 200,000 in former Yugoslavia

1993
European Union established

1994 ▲
Nelson Mandela elected president of South Africa; 800,000 killed in Rwanda

1997
Kyoto Protocol on global warming



Indonesian tsunami victim

2000

◄ 2004
Massive tsunami in Southeast Asia kills at least 225,000

Reading Check

Analyze Graphic Information According to this timeline, when was the first popular Web browser introduced?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: The first popular Web browser was introduced in 1993.

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences Ask: How do you think the development of Internet blogs has affected traditional news coverage? (Blogs address stories that traditional news sources do not cover; blogs provide additional perspectives on current events.)

APPROACHING For approaching level students, review the purpose of blogs and their differences from newspaper, radio, and television coverage.

Literary History ☆

The Joy Luck Club This novel speaks to mothers and daughters across cultures. One critic remarked that it is out of the "experience of being caught between countries and cultures that writers such as . . . Amy Tan have begun to create . . . a new genre of American fiction."

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain to students that the three-part timeline allows them to see the world and national events that may have influenced works of American literature published at the same time. Have students look at the section of the timeline for the 1960s. Tell them that To Kill a Mockingbird, the "I Have a Dream" speech, and The Autobiography of Malcolm X address issues of racial inequality; that In Cold Blood analyzes a murder; that Silent Spring discusses environmental pollution; and that Slaughterhouse Five explores World War II. Ask: What national events might have affected writers' treatment of racial issues in the 1960s? (civil rights protests, the March on Washington, the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Interpret Graphs Have students compare the two charts in the section titled "United States in the Vietnam War." Ask: How many troops were in Vietnam during the Tet Offensive? (over 500,000)

APPROACHING Ask: In the years 1965–1969, did the number of troops in Vietnam increase or decrease? Did opposition to the war increase or decrease? (Both increased.)

Reading Strategy 2

Interpret Graphs Point out the graph "U.S. Hispanic Population Growth, 1980–2000." Ask: If the trend on this chart continued, how many more Hispanic people would there be in the United States in 2010 compared with 2000? (about 10 million more)

Cultural History ☆

Cell Phones The cellular phone was invented by Dr. Martin Cooper of Motorola, Inc. Testing of cell phones for public use began in 1977. Over the next 15 years, demand for cell phones grew dramatically. Between 1976 and 2006, the cell phone business grew from $3 million to $30 billion a year.

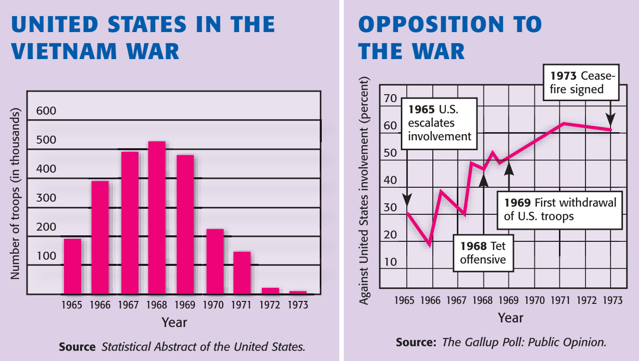
By the Numbers

U.S. Consumption

In 2001, about 284 million people lived in the U.S. and about 1.03 billion in India. But Americans used 25% of the world's resources and produced 25–30% of its waste. Compared to people in India, U.S. citizens used:

- 50 times more steel
- 56 times more energy
- 170 times more synthetic rubber
- 170 times more newsprint
- 250 times more motor fuel
- 300 times more plastic

United States in the Vietnam War



UNITED STATES IN THE VIETNAM WAR

Source Statistical Abstract of the United States.

OPPOSITION TO THE WAR

Source: The Gallup Poll: Public Opinion.

1

ESTIMATED U.S. POPULATION GROWTH

Source U.S. Census Bureau.

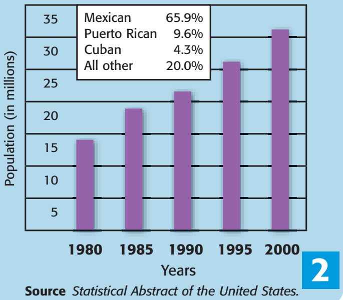
CELL PHONE USE, 2005

- There was almost one cell phone for every two Americans. (By comparison, it took landline phones nearly 100 years to reach this level.) ☆
- About 7.5 million Americans abandoned landline phones and used cell phones exclusively.

COMPUTER USE

- 42,000 bachelor's degrees in computer and information sciences were awarded by U.S. colleges in 2001, up from 2,388 in 1971.
- 99 percent of U.S. schools had Internet access in 2002, up from 50 percent in 1995.
- Online retail sales in the United States for 2003 amounted to $156 billion.
- Projections indicate that 635,000 computer systems analysts will be employed in the United States by 2012, an increase of about 40 percent from 2002.

U.S. HISPANIC POPULATION GROWTH, 1980–2000



2

Source Statistical Abstract of the United States.

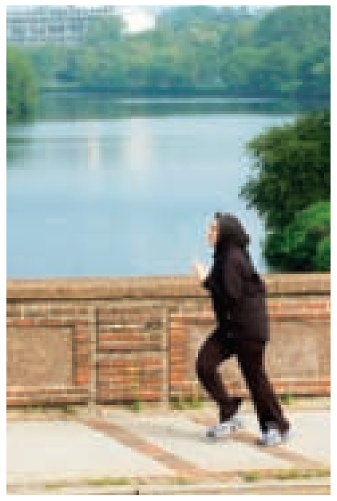
Writing Practice

Make a Line Graph Have students study the graphs in the section "United States in the Vietnam War." Note that one is a bar graph and the other is a line graph. Both show changes over time. Ask students to translate the bar graph "United States in the Vietnam War" to a line graph. Have students create a grid like the one in "Opposition to the War," using the same years on the horizontal axis. Then have them use the numbers of troops shown on the bar graph for the vertical axis. Finally, have students draw a line connecting points that show the numbers of troops for each year in the bar graph. After students have completed their graph, ask: Between what two years was there the greatest decrease in number of troops? (1969 to 1970)

Being There

Since the 1960s, increased immigration has brought many newcomers to the United States from regions beyond Europe. These newcomers have changed the cultural life of many American communities. ★



A Muslim Fatina Abrabboh jogs on a bridge spanning the Charles River in Cambridge, Massachusetts, 2005. John Nordell. Color photograph.

B Children Riding Bicycles Past Mural, 1991. Ralf-Finn Hestoft. Color photograph.

C Chinese New Year in Los Angeles. Nik Wheeler. Color photograph.

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about the history and literature on this period, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Reading Check

Analyze Graphic Information:

1. In what year did U.S. troop strength in Vietnam peak? In what year did opposition to the Vietnam War peak?
2. How many more degrees in computer and information sciences were granted in 2001 than in 1971?
3. What is distinctive about each of the cultures represented in the photographs shown above?

Teach

Reading Check Answers:

1. Troop strength peaked in 1968. Opposition peaked in 1971.
2. About 40,000 more
3. A shows the head covering of a Muslim woman; B shows famous Mexican leaders; C shows a Chinese New Year celebration.

Reading Strategy 3

Use Maps Point out that the letters on the larger map show where each photograph was taken. Ask: What does the small map show? (The small map shows the larger map in the context of the North American and South American continents.)

View the Photograph ★

A. Cambridge is the home of Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT).

B. The mural shows three Mexican heroes. From left to right are the revolutionary leader Emiliano Zapata; Mexico's former president Benito Juárez; and the Aztec ruler Montezuma.

C. Children in Los Angeles celebrate Chinese New Year.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Help English learners with terminology in the Reading Check questions so that students can answer the questions. Explain that they may have heard the word peak used as a noun, as in a sentence such as He climbed all the way to the peak of the mountain. Remind students that peak may be used as a verb, meaning "to come to the highest point." Point out to students that the photographs on this page illustrate specific ethnic experiences. Have English learners look up the word distinctive in the dictionary. Ask them to write simple sentences describing the three illustrations.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Connect Have students read the quote by Martin Luther King Jr. Ask: How do you think the civil rights movement affected the antiwar protests and environmental movement? (Students may say that antiwar activists and environmentalists were inspired by the success of civil rights protestors.)

View the Photograph ★

The Longest Walk was held from February to July of 1978. Several hundred Native Americans marched from San Francisco to Washington, D.C., to symbolize the many times that Native Americans were forced onto reservations. The march was in response to legislation before Congress that would have limited Native Americans' treaty rights.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1142–1150

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study:
Analyzing literary periods.
Analyzing literary genres.
Evaluating historical influences.
Connecting to the literature.

Into the 21st Century

1960s–Present

Historical, Social, and Cultural Forces

The Civil Rights Movement

In the mid-1950s, under the inspiring leadership of Martin Luther King Jr., African Americans launched the modern civil rights movement. This heroic, nonviolent campaign to end segregation and secure voting rights for African Americans in the South achieved many of its goals in the mid-1960s, when the federal government enacted landmark civil rights legislation.

> "Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere." 1
>
> —Martin Luther King Jr.

The Vietnam War

Beginning in the mid-1950s, American efforts to stop the spread of communist influence led to growing U.S. military involvement in the Southeast Asian country of Vietnam. By the mid-1960s, the United States was fighting a major war against Vietnamese communists. In the late 1960s, heavy American casualties and the U.S. failure to achieve military victory in Southeast Asia led to growing opposition to the war at home. The United States signed a cease-fire agreement in 1973 with communist North Vietnam. By early 1975, the last Americans were withdrawn from South Vietnam, which promptly fell to communist North Vietnam.

"The Longest Walk," protest, 1978. Wally McNamee. Color photograph. ★

Environmentalism

During the 1960s, many Americans began to feel that environmental problems plagued every region of their nation. In 1962 Rachel Carson's book Silent Spring first raised widespread concerns about the effects of pollution on the natural environment. By 1970, a grassroots environmental movement developed. In April of that year, the movement sponsored the first Earth Day. Once

Listening and Speaking Practice

SMALL GROUP

Evaluate Persuasive Messages Recordings of well-known speeches from the 1960s are available in many libraries and on the Internet. Divide the class into groups. Assign each group a topic: the Civil Rights Movement, women's rights, the Vietnam War, or environmentalism. Have each group listen to recordings of speeches on their topic, noting the style and content. Allow students to share, in a panel presentation, the similarities and differences among the speakers and their arguments. Have students evaluate the persuasiveness of the various speakers.

the environmental movement gained public support, the federal government also took action and established the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in 1970.

The Computer Revolution

The introduction of the first digital computer in 1946 launched a technological revolution. In the succeeding decades, advances such as the integrated circuit greatly reduced the size and increased the speed of computers. By the mid-1970s, the first practical and affordable home computers became available. In the late 1980s, the development of government-funded supercomputer centers paved the way for the Internet, a global information system that operates commercially.

2 Globalization

Since the 1990s, the Internet, portable communications equipment, and trade deregulation have spurred on the drive for companies to globalize. Often the component parts for consumer goods, like televisions or automobiles, are manufactured in various countries around the world. This trend has been criticized by those who believe that globalization exploits laborers in developing nations, where many of these goods are produced. Some argue that it has slowly siphoned away America's high-wage manufacturing jobs. However, others believe that globalization, in the long term, will benefit both established and developing nations.

Multiculturalism

In literature, writers of European descent have been historically privileged over other groups. Multiculturalism—a product of the 1960s Civil Rights Movement—attempts to correct this by exposing readers to unique voices from a variety of ethnic backgrounds.

Postmodernism

The term Postmodernism refers to trends in art, architecture, literature, and music created after World War II. Postmodernists favor unusual juxtapositions of styles, such as linking fine art and popular culture. Postmodern writing reflects an awareness of the influence of the media on modern sensibilities. Postmodernists also question the central place of Western cultures in world civilization.

PREVIEW Big Ideas of Into the 21st Century

1 An Era of Protest ☆

From the mid-1950s to the mid-1970s, U.S. society experienced political and social upheaval resulting from the Civil Rights Movement and opposition to the Vietnam War. U.S. writers responded to the powerful questions raised by these historical events.

See pages 1144–1145.

2 Nature and Technology

As U.S. citizens became aware of threats to the environment in recent decades, some writers reassessed the importance of the human relationship to nature. At the same time, watershed changes in technology provided new subject matter and new forms for American literature.

See pages 1146–1147.

3 Extending and Remaking Traditions

Increases in immigration and changing attitudes toward ethnic identity are helping to create a much more diverse U.S. society and literature. Innovative approaches to art, such as Postmodernism, are also building on past traditions to reshape contemporary American literature.

See pages 1148–1149.

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Monitor Comprehension

Have students read the section titled "Globalization." Ask: What is globalization? (Globalization refers to companies' doing business around the world; components for one product may be made in several countries.) Ask: Why do some people oppose globalization? (They believe it exploits workers in other countries and eliminates high-paying jobs in this country.)

Political History ☆

Kent State A student anti-war protest took place in 1970 at Kent State University in Ohio after President Nixon announced that U.S. and South Vietnamese forces had invaded Cambodia. Some demonstrators damaged businesses, and the governor ordered the National Guard to disperse them. During a rally on May 4, one of the soldiers thought he heard gunfire and opened fire on the students. Gunfire killed four students and wounded several others. The incident increased antiwar activity.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Help students analyze the term multiculturalism by starting with the word culture and having them define the root, prefix, and suffixes that create various extensions of the word.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Have visual learners preview the three photos on the Big Ideas pages that follow. Have them write a phrase or sentence that summarizes the main idea that each photograph conveys. (equality, clean energy, and new ideas about art)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Cause and Effect

Explain that the civil rights movement was successful in overturning laws in the South that called for segregation. In most parts of the North, there were no laws against hiring African Americans or specifying where they could live. Ask: Why might the civil rights movement have been less successful when leaders tried to gain economic power for African Americans? (It was easier to overturn discrimination that took the form of laws. In the area of economics, prejudice was ingrained in social practices, not laws, which made change more complicated.)

Cultural History ☆

NOW (The National Organization for Women) NOW was formed in October 1966 by women who believed government had been inattentive to women's issues. NOW has used letter-writing campaigns and lobbying to try to change the law and society's attitudes. Today, the group has about 250,000 members.

Big Idea 1

An Era of Protest

Everyone is troubled by injustices—great and small. When injustice or unfairness is part of the basic fabric of a society, however, it may take a social revolution to change things.

Segregation

Throughout the first half of the twentieth century, segregation dominated the lives of African Americans, severely limiting their political freedom and economic opportunities. Segregation was enforced by laws throughout the South. As a result, African Americans were denied equal access to good schools and housing and were barred from public facilities such as hotels, theaters, buses, and trains.

Integration

In 1954 the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in its landmark Brown vs. Board of Education decision that segregated education for whites and blacks was unconstitutional. However, progress in desegregating schools and other public facilities was very slow. Beginning in December 1955, African Americans in Montgomery, Alabama, organized a successful yearlong boycott of the city's segregated buses. The leader of this protest was an eloquent young minister named Martin Luther King Jr. Dr. King inspired a nonviolent civil rights movement through his powerful speeches and writing. This heroic campaign to end segregation and secure voting rights in the South had made huge strides by the mid-1960s, when the federal government enacted landmark civil rights legislation.

1 Black Power

While King advocated a nonviolent path to integration, other African American civil rights leaders favored armed struggle and black separatism. In the early 1960s, militant leader Malcolm X rose to prominence by promoting race pride and black nationalism—the idea that African Americans should band together to gain economic independence and to create a sense of community. In 1966, Stokely Carmichael created the "Black Power" movement, which championed self-defense, autonomy, economic and political power, and black pride.

> "Violence often brings about momentary results."
>
> —Martin Luther King Jr.

Women and Hispanics

During the 1960s and 1970s, American women pushed for greater rights and opportunities. The publication of Betty Friedan's The Feminine Mystique in 1963 gave steam to the women's movement. Friedan joined other activists in 1966 to form the National Organization for Women (NOW), which worked for legislation against gender discrimination in employment, housing, and education. In the early 1960s, César Chavez and Dolores Huerta started organizations that fought for the rights of Hispanic farmworkers.

A Divisive War

The Vietnam War was one of the most divisive conflicts in U.S. history. When U.S. troops went to Vietnam in the spring of 1965, most Americans supported the effort. In time, however, claims by military leaders that victory was near were contradicted by the media, especially on television. Vietnam was the first "living room war"; people were deeply disturbed by images of wounded and dead soldiers. As casualties mounted, many began to protest the war and demand that it end.

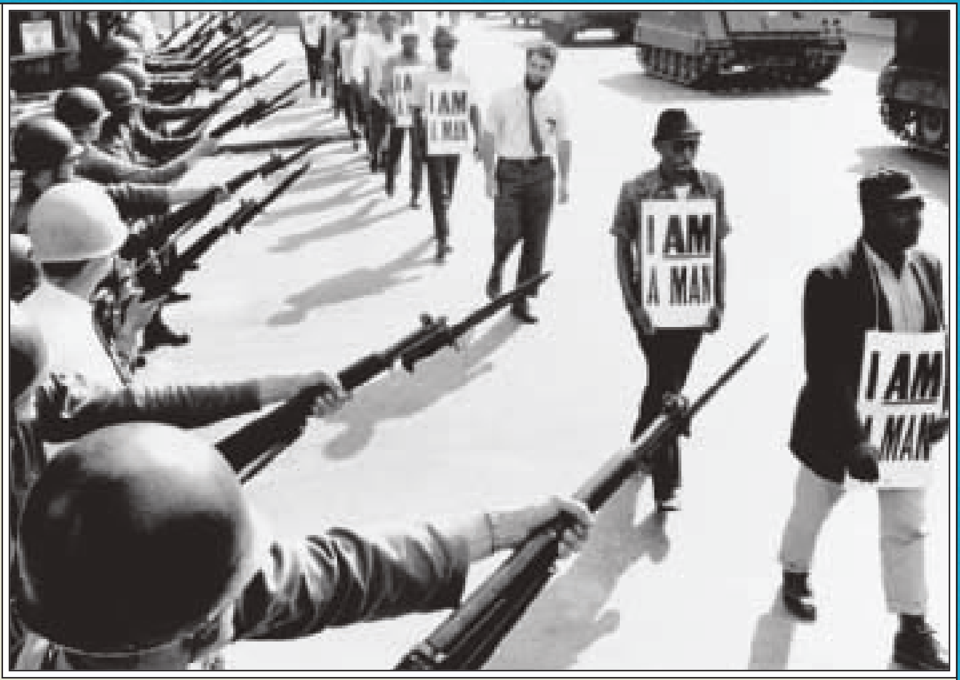
Writing Practice

Persuasive Essay

SMALL GROUP

Malcolm X disagreed with King's philosophy of nonviolence, believing that African Americans should respond to violence from whites with violence of their own. Have students prepare a persuasive essay defending the view of Malcolm X or Martin Luther King Jr. Ask students to meet in small groups to discuss both viewpoints and to brainstorm specific arguments in favor of each position. Then have them write an essay, outlining and supporting their specific arguments.

Have students meet in groups for peer review of their essays. Remind reviewers to pay attention to logical reasoning and concrete support for arguments. Students should revise their essays and correct spelling, punctuation, and grammar. Ask volunteers to share their essays with the class.



Civil rights marchers with "I Am A Man" signs, 1968. Black and white photograph. ★ from Letter from a Birmingham Jail by Martin Luther King Jr.

Oppressed people cannot remain oppressed forever. The yearning for freedom eventually manifests itself, and that is what has happened to the American Negro. Something within has reminded him of his birthright of freedom; something without has reminded him that he can gain it. Consciously or unconsciously, he has been swept in by what the Germans call the Zeitgeist, and 2 with his black brothers of Africa, and his brown and yellow brothers of Asia, South America and the Caribbean, he is moving with a sense of cosmic urgency toward the promised land of racial justice. Recognizing this vital urge that has engulfed the Negro community, one should readily understand public demonstrations. The Negro has many pent-up resentments and latent frustrations. He has to get them out. So let him march sometime; let him have his prayer pilgrimages to the city hall; understand why he must have sit-ins and freedom rides. If his repressed emotions do not come out in these nonviolent ways, they will seek ominous expressions of violence. This is not a threat; it is a fact of history. So I have not said to my people "get rid of your discontent." But I have tried to say that this normal and healthy discontent can be channelized through the creative outlet of nonviolent direct action.

Reading Check

Analyze Cause and Effect How did the rise of Black Power later confirm Dr. King's warning about violence in "Letter from a Birmingham Jail"?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: Black Power arose out of the frustration of civil rights activists with their slow pace of progress in securing equality.

Literary Element 2

Allusion Zeitgeist means "spirit of the times." During the 1950s and 1960s, many former European colonies gained their independence. Ask: Why does King allude to zeitgeist and to the move toward independence by these countries? (He is implying that African Americans are part of the spirit of freedom that is sweeping the world.)

View the Photograph ★

This photograph was taken by Ernest Withers in Memphis, Tennessee, during a strike by sanitation workers in 1968. Withers was a self-employed photographer in the South. He recorded many important moments in the civil rights movement and was an active participant himself. The night before he took this photo, Withers helped the marchers make their signs.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Review words that have multiple meanings and discuss their definitions in the context of protest: march, demonstration, movement, and organize. Ask students to discuss the meanings they know for these words. Then have them look up the words in a dictionary to find the definition that is relevant in the context of protest.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Connect Say: DDT has been banned for decades, thanks to the work of Rachel Carson. Ask: What is the most pressing environmental problem today? Explain. (Possible answer: Greenhouse gas emissions lead to global warming and worldwide climate change.)

Reading Strategy 2

Activate Prior Knowledge

Ask: What have been some important environmental issues over the last several decades? (Air pollution, water pollution, acid rain, damage to the ozone layer, greenhouse gases, and destruction of rainforests)

Political History ☆

The Space Race The space race between the United States and the former Soviet Union was fueled by the tensions of the Cold War. Both countries rushed to put a satellite into orbit; the Soviets were first, launching Sputnik 1 in 1957.

Big Idea 2

Nature and Technology

Americans today are living through events that have the potential to fundamentally change the way we will live for years to come. Among the most basic of these are long-range changes to the natural environment as a result of industrialization and the revolution in communications created by modern technology, including computers.

The Environmental Movement

During the 1960s and 1970s, a growing number of U.S. citizens began to become alarmed at how their highly industrialized society was affecting the natural environment. Widespread use of pesticides had damaged many forms of wildlife. Rising levels of air and water pollution were seen as a threat to health. A leading cause of this change in public perception was the work of marine biologist Rachel Carson. Carson's 1962 book Silent Spring attacked the 1 increasing use of pesticides, particularly DDT. She contended that in addition to controlling harmful insects, pesticides such as DDT also killed the birds, fish, and other creatures further up the food chain. Carson warned Americans of a "silent spring," in which few birds would remain to herald the season with their songs.

> "There was a strange stillness. The birds, for example—where had they gone?"
>
> —Rachel Carson, Silent Spring

By 1970, with the observance of the first Earth Day, a grassroots environmental movement began to take shape. Citizens formed local environmental groups, while long-established organizations, such as the Sierra Club and the Audubon Society, gained greater influence. All these groups worked to protect the environment and promote the conservation of natural resources. The federal government also became involved, establishing the Environmental Protection Agency and passing legislation aimed at curbing air and water pollution and protecting endangered wildlife. 2

Responding to Nature

Going back at least as far as Thoreau's Walden, nature writing has been a persistent strain in American literature. Heightened concern about the environment, coupled with the "back to nature" impulse that was a significant element of the counterculture of the 1960s, prompted a minor renaissance of American nature writing in the recent past. Edward Abbey, Annie Dillard, Edward Hoagland, Terry Tempest Williams, Barry Lopez, John McPhee, and many other writers have evoked a variety of wilderness landscapes, from the desert to the Arctic, and reflected on the lessons nature has to teach.

The Information Age

In the twentieth century, the world experienced a revolution in communications unmatched since the invention of the printing press in the fifteenth century. Modern Americans became enthusiastic users of a wide variety of new media, including telephones, radio, television, video games, cell phones, and the Internet. These new media have created a society in which one of the most valuable commodities is information.

One of the consequences of the Cold War rivalry between the United States and the Soviet Union was competition for dominance in space exploration. ☆ In addition to such achievements as the Moon landings and the shuttle missions, the U.S. space program has contributed to advances in a wide range of technologies, such as the satellites

Vocabulary Practice

New Words Say: Since the 1960s, we have seen a dramatic increase in new English words and expressions. Point out the words video games, cell phones, Internet, and telecommunications in the section titled "The Information Age." In addition to new words, many old words have new meanings. For example, one meaning of to surf is "to ride the waves on a board." A newer usage is "to surf the Net," which means to explore the Internet.

Have students identify new words and their definitions, or new uses of words, in the following categories:

- computers
- environment/environmental movement
- communications

Students should use one word or phrase from each category in a sentence and then share their word lists and sentences with the class.

Wind Farm at Sunset, David Seed. Color photograph. ★ that make up today's global telecommunications and GPS networks.

A recent and revolutionary form of new media is the worldwide communications system of the Internet. With the development of the hypertext transport protocol (http) and new software known as Web browsers, Internet use began to expand rapidly. As early as 1988, it was growing at the rate of 100 percent a year. By the late 1990s, the number of Internet users exceeded 30 million. During its brief existence, the Internet has had a profound effect on many aspects of modern life, from the explosive development of online commerce to the creation of new computer-based literary forms such as hypertext fiction, which uses computer technology to expand the possible sequencings of a narrative.

from Lost by David Wagoner

Stand still. The trees ahead and bushes beside you
Are not lost. Wherever you are is called Here,
And you must treat it as a powerful stranger,
Must ask permission to know it and be known.
The forest breathes. Listen. It answers,
I have made this place around you.
If you leave it you may come back again, saying Here.
No two trees are the same to Raven.
No two branches are the same to Wren.
If what a tree or a bush does is lost on you,
You are surely lost. Stand still. The forest knows Where you are. You must let it find you. 3

Reading Check

Interpret What two different attitudes toward the natural environment are reflected in David Wagoner's poem "Lost"?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: One attitude is the desire to control the natural environment; the other attitude is a willingness to learn what nature can teach.

Literary Element 3

Rhythm Rhythm refers to the pattern of sound created by stressed and unstressed syllables. Some poems have a regular pattern, or meter. Ask: Does this poem have regular meter? (No, the rhythm is irregular.) Ask: How does the punctuation affect the rhythm of the lines? (The periods within lines break up the poem's rhythm, creating emphasis.)

View the Photograph ★

These modern windmills generate electricity by harnessing natural forces rather than by burning fossil fuels. Ask: How does this "wind farm" reflect the poem "Lost"? (Possible answer: It appears to be a kind of forest. Like the forest in the poem, the wind farm "breathes" and appears to be a "powerful stranger.")

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Have students silently read the excerpt from "Lost," noting the punctuation and sentence arrangement. Then arrange the class in small groups and ask them to take turns reading the poem aloud. Have student groups identify and explain the poem's images, including "stand still," "powerful stranger," and "forest breathes." Ask students to describe how the images evoke particular emotions for readers.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Style Explain that using fiction strategies in writing nonfiction is part of a literary movement called The New Journalism. The writer imagines dialogue that might have taken place and includes everyday details of the characters' lives. Ask: What are the advantages of using this technique to tell about an actual event? (Possible answers: The event seems more real; it makes reading more interesting; it allows the writer to explore the story in-depth and give it greater dimension.)

Literary History ☆

Rita Dove In 1993, Rita Dove was named the first African American Poet Laureate of the United States. Dove's work is significant in part for the range of material that it covers. She draws upon her childhood experiences for her poetry, but she also touches on settings from Europe, Africa, and the American South.

Big Idea 3

Extending and Remaking Traditions

In the past, newcomers to the United States were urged to "Americanize" themselves as soon and as fully as possible. The model was "the melting pot," meaning a place in which a complete blending of peoples and cultures takes place. Today, there is a new cultural model that stresses the value of maintaining ethnic diversity in American society.

The New Immigrants

The United States has always been a nation of immigrants. Restrictive immigration laws and economic depression kept immigrant levels low between World War I and World War II. However, since the end of World War II, immigration has been rising. The Immigration Reform Act of 1965 allowed more immigrants from countries outside of northern and western Europe. By the 1980s and 1990s, immigration had reached levels approaching the all-time highs of the early twentieth century. Most of these recent immigrants come from the western hemisphere (primarily Mexico) and from Asia. By 1995 almost 9 percent of Americans were foreign born. Consequently, the traditional canon of American literature is expanding greatly to include works by writers from many different backgrounds.

Cultural Diversity

Newcomers are helping to make U.S. society more culturally diverse. As a result, many communities in the United States have an increasingly multiethnic texture that incorporates language, food, family values, social life, and entertainment. With diversity increasing and opportunities for women expanding, American literature draws upon a wider range of experience than ever before. The literature published in the United States includes fiction, nonfiction, and poetry by African American writers such as Henry Louis Gates Jr. and Rita Dove; ☆ by Native American writers such as N. Scott Momaday and Louise Erdrich; by Hispanic writers such as Sandra Cisneros and Julia Alvarez; and by Asian American writers such as Amy Tan and Jhumpa Lahiri. The enthusiasm with which the works of these writers are received shows that their own ethnic traditions are becoming an integral part of the American cultural experience.

Postmodernism

The Modernists of the early part of the twentieth century believed that as contemporary life became more complex and artificial it also became increasingly inhumane. Postmodernists, such as novelists John Barth and Thomas Pynchon, reject this conclusion. They argue that the modern world's complexities should be explored, even celebrated. Like pop artists, Postmodernists often investigate artifice, or the surfaces of things, to reveal some truth just underneath. These writers accomplish this through a variety of forms and strategies, such as creating literary collages or stories-within-stories, blending genres, introducing material from popular culture, and introducing themselves as characters into their own fiction.

> "Postmodernism is tying your necktie while simultaneously explaining the step-by-step procedure of necktie-tying and chatting about the history of male neckwear—and managing a perfect full windsor anyhow."
>
> —John Barth

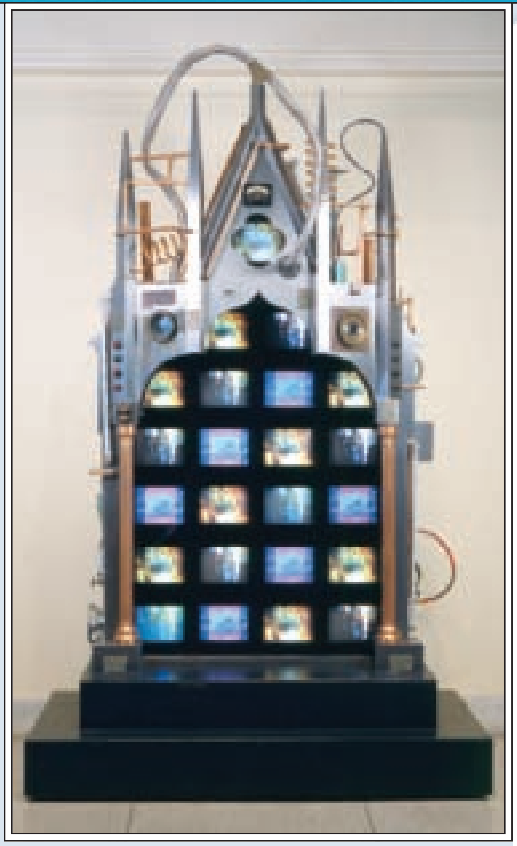
New Literary Forms

The characteristic literary forms of Postmodernism emphasize the blending of genres, such as the

Reading Practice

Imagery Writers use descriptive words and phrases to create imagery that appeals to the five senses. Poets use vivid images to help readers see details of character and scene and to convey emotions. Have students read the poem from Ortiz Cofer's collection The Latin Deli. Ask partners to analyze the images by addressing these questions:

- What images appeal to the sense of sight? The sense of smell?
- What detailed images help you see the woman proprietor?



Technology, 1991. Nam June Paik. 25 video monitors, 3 laser disc players with unique 3 discs in cabinet. Side view. Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC. ★

1 "nonfiction novel," which uses the strategies of fiction to present actual events. One of the earliest and best-known literary works to adopt this strategy was In Cold Blood, Truman Capote's 1965 account of the brutal murder of a Kansas family. Another Postmodern literary form, the graphic novel, blends high and low culture by expanding one of the most familiar forms of twentieth century American popular culture, the comic book, to address serious literary subjects. Probably the best-known graphic novel is Maus by Art Spiegelman, which won a Pulitzer Prize in 1992. Spiegelman uses comic book panels and cat and mouse characters to tell a story about the Holocaust.

from The Latin Deli: An Ars Poetica

by Judith Ortiz Cofer

2

Presiding over a formica counter, plastic Mother and Child magnetized to the top of an ancient register, the heady mix of smells from the open bins of dried codfish, the green plantains hanging in stalks like votive offerings, she is the Patroness of Exiles,
a woman of no-age who was never pretty,
who spends her days selling canned memories
while listening to the Puerto Ricans complain that it would be cheaper to fly to San Juan than to buy a pound of Bustelo coffee here, and to Cubans perfecting their speech of a "glorious return" to Havana—where no one has been allowed to die and nothing to change until then;
to Mexicans who pass through, talking lyrically of dolares to be made in El Norte—all wanting the comfort of spoken Spanish, to gaze upon the family portrait of her plain wide face, her ample bosom resting on her plump arms, her look of maternal interest
as they speak to her and each other of their dreams and disillusions—how she smiles understanding, when they walk down the narrow aisles of her store reading the labels of packages aloud, as if they were the names of lost lovers: Suspiros,
Merengues, the stale candy of everyone's childhood.
          She spends her days
slicing jamón y queso and wrapping it in wax paper tied with string: plain ham and cheese that would cost less at the A&P, but it would not satisfy the hunger of the fragile old man lost in the folds of his winter coat, who brings her lists of items that he reads to her like poetry, or the others, whose needs she must divine, conjuring up products
from places that now exist only in their hearts—closed ports she must trade with.

Reading Check

Evaluate What values of cultural diversity are expressed in Judith Ortiz Cofer's "The Latin Deli"?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: The values include the honest dialogue and the pride in community that arises from a group's common experiences, such as eating the same foods.

Reading Strategy 2

Interpret Read the poem aloud as students follow along. Ask: Who is the "Patroness of Exiles"? (The woman who runs the deli)

ADVANCED Ask: What is "the hunger of the fragile old man"? (He hungers for things that remind him of home.)

View the Art ★

Korean-born artist Nam June Paik uses video and television as his artistic media, incorporating electronic moving images into art. Technology uses an array of intricate machinelike elements and numerous television screens. Ask: Why do you think Paik titled this piece Technology? (The complex elements and swirling images have a futuristic look.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Review with students any unfamiliar analogies, idioms, and references in the poem, for example, "Patroness of Exile," "canned memories," "names of lost lovers," "reads to her like poetry," or "closed ports." Have students write short definitions of the unfamiliar references.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Help students recognize the Spanish/English cognates dolares and dollars, and El Norte and North. Discuss with students the strategy of identifying cognates, and analyze the impact on the poem of including Spanish terms.

Assess/Close

Legacy of the Period

Remind students of the words of Martin Luther King Jr.: “Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.” Ask: Does the United States have the responsibility to see that people of other nations do not suffer injustice?

Cultural and Literary Links

Suggest that as students read the unit, they note how the dramatic changes that began in the 1960s affected these writers.

Activities

1. Follow Up Students’ responses should refer to the text.
2. Contrast Literary Genres Have each member of the group focus on one literary form as the group creates the presentation.
3. Build Literacy Encourage students to use both the Internet and print resources to locate the images for their timeline.

FOLDABLES® Study Organizer

4. Have students make and label the Layered-Look Book. Encourage students to answer these questions for each of the readings in this unit.

Wrap-Up

Legacy of the Period

The African American civil rights movement, the women’s movement, and the related political movements among Hispanics and other groups, transformed American society. Although important problems remain to be resolved, these movements achieved major advances in social justice and economic opportunity during the twentieth century. The legacy of the antiwar movement is far less clear. Americans remain deeply divided on the morality and practicality of military intervention in the affairs of other nations.

The environmental movement has heightened the awareness of U.S. citizens about a broad range of issues, including public health, consumer safety, and preservation of natural resources. It has made people realize that the United States is part of a world that is interdependent environmentally as well as economically.

The U.S. has never been more ethnically diverse or culturally complex. American literature has followed this national trend, growing ever more diverse as it has grown more unique, humorous, and self-aware.

Cultural and Literary Links

- In the 1970s, Alice Walker successfully revived interest in the Harlem Renaissance writer Zora Neale Hurston, who had been largely forgotten.
- The critical and popular success of the oral histories of Studs Terkel has helped to revitalize this literary form.
- The work of Theodore Roethke shows the influence of such Modernist poets as T. S. Eliot and Wallace Stevens.

Literature Online

Unit Resources For additional skills practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Activities

Choose one of the following activities to explore and develop as you read this unit.

1. Follow Up Go back to the Looking Ahead on page 1137 and answer the questions.

2. Contrast Literary Genres Working with other students, research Postmodernist literature and create a brief presentation for your class, describing some of its typical forms, including the nonfiction novel, hypertext fiction, and the graphic novel.

3. Build Literacy Create a visual timeline of the period from 1960 to the present, using images that have become iconic representations of the time (for example, Elizabeth Eckford walking past jeering white students during the desegregation of Central High School in Little Rock in September 1957). When you have completed your timeline, share it with the class.

4. Take Notes Use this graphic organizer to jot down questions you have about the readings in this unit.

FOLDABLES® Study Organizer LAYERED-LOOK BOOK

Speaking Practice

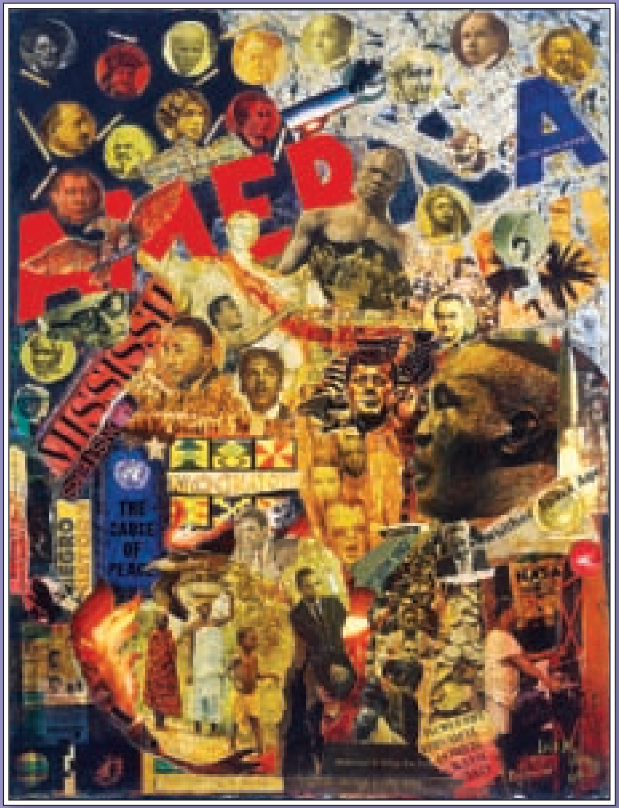
SMALL GROUP

Compare Media Accounts

Have small groups research media accounts of the events at Central High School in Little Rock, Arkansas in September 1957. Suggest that students look through collections of old news magazines at libraries, television news accounts, documentaries, microfilm of newspapers, or reports that have been stored online. Tell groups to choose one account from two different media genres and to compare and contrast them. Have groups present their findings in panel discussions. Each group’s discussion should present a summary of the key information as well as examples of any bias they detected.

PART 1

An Era of Protest



Challenge America, 1964. Lois Mailou Jones. Photomechanical reproduction, acrylic and paper on canvas, 39⅛ x 30⅛ in. Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, Smithsonian Institution, Washington DC.

Many of Jones's works combine African and American images. How does this piece use images from both cultures to "challenge" its viewers to make America a better place? ★

> "We know through painful experience that freedom is never voluntarily given by the oppressor; it must be demanded by the oppressed." 1
>
> —Martin Luther King Jr., "Letter from a Birmingham Jail"

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Point out the words oppressor and oppressed in Martin Luther King Jr.'s quotation. Tell students that to oppress means to weigh someone down with difficulties. Tell students that the suffix -or means "one who performs an action," and that the suffix -ed indicates the past tense of an action. Then ask students to define the words oppressor and oppressed.

Analyze and Extend

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Explain that the quotation is from a letter King wrote while he was jailed for nonviolent demonstration. Ask: What is Martin Luther King Jr. saying about freedom in the quote? (King believes that people must demand their freedom because oppressors will never give it to them without a struggle.)

View the Art ★

Answer: Jones overlaps and intertwines images of men, women, and children; civil rights leaders; white politicians; and people from different periods of history. She challenges viewers to see that these people are all part of America.

Lois Mailou Jones (1905–1998) was an African American painter who became interested in African themes early in her career.

For additional support for English Learners, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 20.

TIME

Focus

Summary

When Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat on a bus to a white person in 1955 in Montgomery, Alabama, she was arrested. Because of Rosa Parks's actions, Martin Luther King Jr. successfully challenged Montgomery's segregation laws.

Teach

Big Idea 1

An Era of Protest The author compares the civil rights struggle to the story of David and Goliath. Ask a volunteer to tell the story of David and Goliath. (In the Biblical story, the boy David kills the giant Goliath with a slingshot.)

Ask: In the case of Rosa Parks, who was David and who was Goliath? (Rosa Parks was David; segregation laws were the Goliath.)

APPROACHING Ask for examples of games or contests in which a weaker or smaller competitor defeats an apparently stronger foe, identifying which competitor is "David" and which is "Goliath."

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.2
DRP: 61
Lexile: 1060

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1152–1154

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objective:

Reading: Analyzing text structure.

Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to learn how an act of protest defined the civil rights movement.

Preview the Article

1. What do you know about the civil rights movement? What else would you like to know?
2. Read the poem excerpt at right. How do you think the author feels about Rosa Parks? How might this affect her tone?

Reading Strategy

Analyze Text Structure

Chronological order, or the time order in which events take place, is one type of text structure. Identify chronological order through dates and key words such as first, then, and finally. Make a chart like the one below.

TIME

The Torchbearer

ROSA PARKS's simple act of protest galvanized America's civil rights revolution

By RITA DOVE

> How she sat there, the time right inside > a place so wrong it was ready.
>
> —From "Rosa," in On the Bus with Rosa Parks by Rita Dove

We know the story. One December evening, a woman left work and boarded a bus for home. She was tired; her feet ached. But this was Montgomery, Alabama, in 1955, and as the bus became crowded, the woman, a black woman, was ordered to give up her seat to a white passenger. When she remained seated, that simple decision eventually led to the disintegration of institutionalized segregation in the South and ushered in a new era of the Civil Rights movement.

This, anyway, was the story I had heard from the time I was curious enough to eavesdrop on adult conversations. I was three years old when a white bus driver warned Rosa Parks, "Well, I'm going to have you arrested," and she replied, "You may go on and do so." As a child, I didn't understand how doing nothing had caused so much activity, but I recognized the template: David slaying the giant Goliath, or the boy who saved his village by sticking his finger in the dike. Perhaps it is precisely the lure of fairy-tale retribution that colors the lens we look back through. Parks was 42 years old when she refused to give up her seat. She has insisted that her feet were not aching; she was, by her own testimony, no more tired than usual. She did not plan her fateful act: "I did not get on the bus to get arrested," she has said. "I got on the bus to go home." 1

Montgomery's segregation laws were complex: Blacks were required to pay their fare to the driver and then get off and reboard through the back door. Sometimes the bus would drive off before the paid-up customers made it to the back entrance. If the white section was full and another white

Reading Practice

Topic Sentences Say: Well-written nonfiction works are organized around a main idea. Each paragraph supports the main idea of the work. Each paragraph also has a topic sentence and supporting details.

Have students look at the third paragraph on this page.

Ask: What is the topic sentence of this paragraph? ("Montgomery's segregation laws were complex.") Ask: What are two details that support the topic sentence? ("Blacks were required to pay their fares . . . and then get off and reboard through the back door." A black person was not allowed to sit across the aisle from whites.)

Rosa Parks getting fingerprinted

customer entered, blacks were required to give up their seats and move farther to the back; a black person was not even allowed to sit across the aisle from whites. These humiliations were compounded by the fact that two-thirds of the bus riders in Montgomery were black.

2 Parks was not the first to be detained for this offense. Eight months earlier, Claudette Colvin, 15, refused to give up her seat and was arrested. Black activists met with this girl to determine if she would make a good test case. As secretary of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), Parks attended the meeting, where it was finally decided that a more "upstanding" candidate than Colvin was necessary to withstand the scrutiny of the courts and the press. Then, in October, a young woman named Mary Louise Smith was arrested; NAACP leaders rejected her, too, as their vehicle, looking for someone more able to withstand media scrutiny. Smith paid the fine and was released.

Six weeks later, the time was ripe. The facts, rubbed shiny for retelling, are these: On December 1, 1955, Mrs. Rosa Parks, seamstress for the Montgomery Fair department store, boarded the Cleveland Avenue bus. She took a seat in the fifth row—the first row of the "Colored Section." The driver was the same one who had put her off a bus 12 years earlier for refusing to get off and reboard through the back door. ("He was still mean-looking," she has said.) Did that make her stubborn? Or had her work in the NAACP sharpened her sensibilities so that she knew what to do—or more precisely, what not to do: Don't frown, don't struggle, don't shout, don't pay the fine?

At the news of the arrest, local civil rights leader E.D. Nixon exclaimed, "My God, look what segregation has put in my hands!" Parks was not only above moral reproach (securely married, reasonably employed), but she possessed a quiet fortitude as well as political savvy. In short, she was the ideal candidate for a test case.

She was arrested on a Thursday; bail was posted by Clifford Durr, the white lawyer whose wife had employed Parks as a seamstress. That evening, after talking it over with her mother and husband, Rosa Parks agreed to challenge the constitutionality of Montgomery's segregation laws. During a midnight meeting of the Women's Political Council, 35,000 handbills were printed for distribution to all black schools the next morning. The message was simple:

"We are . . . asking every Negro to stay off the buses Monday in protest of the arrest and trial . . . You can afford to stay out of school for one day. If you work, take a cab, or walk. But please, children and grown-ups, don't ride the bus at all on Monday. Please stay off the buses Monday."

Monday came. Rain threatened, yet the black population of Montgomery stayed off the buses, either walking or catching one of the black cabs stopping at every municipal bus stop for 10 cents per customer—the standard bus fare. Meanwhile, Parks was scheduled to appear in court. She made her way through the throngs at the courthouse, a demure figure in a long-sleeved black dress with white collar and cuffs, a trim black velvet hat, gray coat, and white gloves. A girl in the crowd caught sight of her and cried out, "Oh, she's so sweet. They've messed with the wrong one now!"

Yes, indeed. The trial lasted 30 minutes, with the expected conviction and penalty. That afternoon, the Montgomery Improvement Association was formed. So as not to ruffle any local activists' feathers, the members elected as their president a relative newcomer to

TIME

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Text Structure

Have students read the first full paragraph on this page.

Ask: What key words in this paragraph signal the chronological order? (The words earlier, finally, and then signal chronological order.)

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 21–29.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Explain that the Latin root of the word segregate means "to set apart from the flock." Describe how the United States once had laws that "set apart" people of different races, making them attend different schools. Civil rights activists worked to change these laws so that African Americans could attend the same schools and use the same public facilities as whites. Explain to students that the prefix de- can mean "not"; adding this prefix can make a word negative. Have volunteers explain how de- changes the meaning of segregation.

TIME

Teach

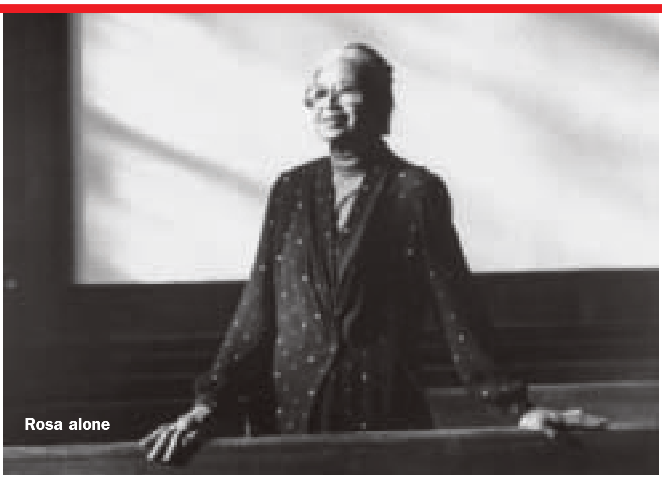
Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Text Structure

Ask: According to the information about Rosa Parks and the Montgomery transportation system, how long did the bus boycott last? (about a year)

Cultural History ☆

Rosa Parks Rosa Parks died in 2005 at her home in Detroit, Michigan, at age 92. She had moved to Detroit in 1957 after being threatened with physical violence and fired from her job because of her activism. After her death, Parks was honored with a week of remembrances. Her coffin was taken to Montgomery for a memorial service and then lay in state at the United States Capitol in Washington, D.C. The last stop was Detroit, where thousands honored her in a funeral that lasted more than seven hours.



Rosa alone

Montgomery, the young minister of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church: the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. That evening, addressing a crowd gathered at the Holt Street Baptist Church, King declared in that sonorous, ringing voice the world would soon thrill to: "There comes a time that people get tired." When he was finished, Parks stood up so the audience could see her. She did not speak; there was no need to.

☆ Here I am, her silence said, among you. And she has been with us ever since—a persistent symbol of human dignity in the face of brutal authority. The famous UPI photo (actually taken more than a year later, on December 21, 1956, the day Montgomery's public transportation system was legally integrated) is a study of calm strength. She is looking out the bus window, her hands resting in the folds of her checked dress, while a white man sits, unperturbed, in the row behind her. That clear profile, the neat hat and eyeglasses and sensible coat—she could have been my mother or anybody's favorite aunt.

History is often portrayed as a grand opera, full of great intrigues and larger-than-life heroics. Some of the most tumultuous events, however, have been provoked by serendipity—the assassination of an unimportant archduke spawned World War I, a kicked-over lantern may have sparked the Great Chicago Fire. One cannot help wondering what role Martin Luther King Jr. would have played in the civil rights movement if the opportunity had not presented itself that first evening of the boycott. What if Rosa Parks had chosen a row farther back from the outset? Or what if she had missed the bus altogether?

1 At the beginning of this new millennium (and after a particularly noisy century), it is the modesty of Rosa Parks's example that sustains us. It is no less than the belief in the power of the individual, that cornerstone of the American Dream, that she inspires. Her life offers the hope that when crunch time comes, all of us—even the least of us—could be that brave, that serenely human.

— Updated 2005, from TIME, June 14, 1999

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Review the graphic organizer you created. Write a brief summary of the main ideas in this article. For help on writing a summary, see page 79.
2. (a)What were the segregation laws for Montgomery's bus system? (b)Why were these laws especially humiliating to African American people?
3. (a)Why did the NAACP reject two other bus riders before meeting Parks? (b)What does this indicate about the organization?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. Why were Parks's appearance and social standing important?
5. (a)How do you think the author feels about the Montgomery bus boycott? (b)What evidence supports your conclusion?

Connect

6. How might you have reacted if you were at Parks's trial?

Assess

1. Students' summaries should include key events of Parks's struggle.
2. (a) African Americans had to pay their fare and then get off and reboard through the back door; if the white section was full, African Americans had to give up their seats and move farther back; they could not sit across the aisle from a white person. (b) The laws treated them as second-class citizens.
3. (a) The NAACP did not feel the others could withstand media scrutiny. (b) Leaders had planned carefully.
4. Parks had to have a good reputation and appear non-threatening.
5. (a) She is grateful for the change that the Montgomery bus boycott brought about. (b) She wonders what the world would be like if the boycott had not happened.
6. Students answers will vary. They should support their opinions with details from the text.

Before You Read

from Stride Toward Freedom

Meet Martin Luther King Jr.

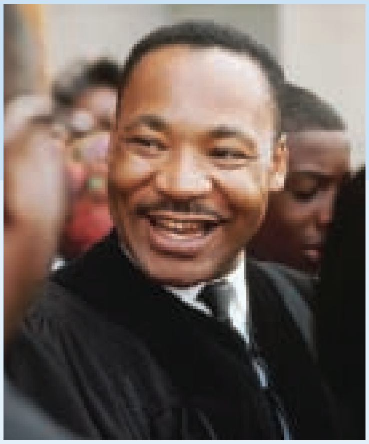
(1929–1968)



Martin Luther King Jr. showed that segregation and forced inequality could be successfully combated without violence. His steady advocacy uplifted the despondent and challenged the complacent. Combining high ideals with practicality, he inspired people from all races and backgrounds to demand the best from themselves and their country.

> "Do your work so well that no one could do it better. Do it so well that all the hosts of heaven and earth will have to say: Here lived a man who did his job as if God Almighty called him at this particular time in history to do it."
>
> —Martin Luther King Jr.

Historic Struggles Born the son of a minister in Atlanta, Georgia, King distinguished himself at school and entered Morehouse College at fifteen. After receiving his PhD in theology, King became a minister in Montgomery, Alabama.

☆ Shortly after moving to Montgomery, the first major nonviolent protest of the civil rights movement took place: the Montgomery bus boycott. The boycott was an attempt to end segregation on public buses. For more than a year, Montgomery's fifty thousand black citizens stayed off the buses. The boycott was successful, and King's public speaking and leadership skills drew national attention. Afterward, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference was founded to confront all forms of segregation, and King became its president.

Commitment and Dedication When the center of the civil rights struggle shifted to Birmingham, Alabama, in 1963, King was there. He and other demonstrators were jailed, and violence exploded in the streets, but King's stance on nonviolent resistance remained firm: "We will go on," he told his supporters, "because we have started a fire in Birmingham that water cannot put out. We are going on because we love Birmingham and we love democracy. And we are going to remain nonviolent."

One of the best-known triumphs of the civil rights movement was the March on Washington in 1963. There King delivered his famous "I Have a Dream" speech to an audience of approximately 250,000 people. One year later, he became the youngest person ever to win the Nobel Peace Prize.

Despite his commitment to nonviolence, King himself was the target of threats and violence. In 1968, at the age of thirty-nine, he fell victim to an assassin's bullet. King's funeral took place at the church where he had acted as pastor, Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta, Georgia. Over a thousand people, including political leaders and foreign dignitaries, crowded into the church for the service. Outside, almost one hundred thousand more paid tribute.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Martin Luther King Jr., go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 65

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 97

Or display images of segregation, such as drinking fountains labeled "colored" and "white," segregated restaurants and buses, and so on.

Ask: What do you think is the most effective—and appropriate—way to confront this type of segregation?

Political History ☆

Segregation U.S. segregation laws have a long history. After the Civil War, "black codes" in Southern states separated African Americans from other races. "Black codes" were abolished and later replaced with "Jim Crow" laws, in place from the late 1800s to the 1950s. These laws restricted African Americans from the use of facilities, including parks, schools, and theaters. In 1954, the Supreme Court ruled school segregation unconstitutional.

Selection Skills

from Stride Toward Freedom

Literary Elements
- Structure (SE pp. 1156–1160; TE p. 1156)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Usage (SE pp. 1160)
- Cognates (TE p. 1156)

Reading Skills
- Paraphrase (SE pp. 1156–1160)
- Analyze Arguments (TE p. 1158)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Summary (SE p. 1160)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

King makes a compelling argument for nonviolent resistance. He says that oppressed people have three choices: acquiescence, which he dismisses as immoral; violent resistance, which he dismisses as immoral, ineffective, and damaging; and nonviolent resistance, which he presents as the only moral and effective solution.

Vocabulary

Cognates Many English and Spanish words sound alike and have similar meanings. These words, called cognates, often come from the same Latin root word. Recognizing cognates can help readers decode the meaning of words. Say: The vocabulary word repudiate and the Spanish verb repudiar both come from the Latin word repudiare, which means "to reject a spouse, to divorce." How did the meaning of the word change when it became an English word? (It no longer referred only to a spouse.)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Selection

What is a situation in the United States today that you think is unjust and needs to be changed? Write a list of ways you might be able to help make this change.

Build Background

King based his theory of nonviolent resistance on the ideas of Henry David Thoreau, Mohandas Gandhi, and others. The movement was supported by the Fellowship of Reconciliation, a group that promoted nonviolent direct action.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea An Era of Protest

As you read, ask yourself, Who did King seek to convince as he embarked upon his campaign of nonviolent resistance?

Literary Element Structure

Structure is the order or pattern a writer uses to present ideas in a logical way. By focusing his argument on three main points and giving evidence for each point before moving to the next, King is able to express his position clearly and methodically. As you read, ask yourself, What reasons and evidence does he give as he seeks to persuade his audience that nonviolence is the best way to fight injustice?

Reading Strategy Paraphrase

When you state in your own words the main point of a piece of writing, you are paraphrasing. Paraphrasing helps you better remember and understand what you read. As you read, ask yourself, What is King saying?

Tip: Paraphrase Use a chart to paraphrase important details.

Detail	Paraphrase
"… the oppressed resign themselves to their doom. They tacitly adjust themselves to oppression, and thereby become conditioned to it."	People who suffer from injustice believe there is no way out. They get so used to living with injustice that they come to accept it.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1155–1160

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing structure.

Reading: Paraphrasing.

Vocabulary

ordeal (ôr dēl´) n. a circumstance or experience that is painful or difficult; a trial; p. 1157 The storm was a physical ordeal for people on the ship.

stature (stach´ ər) n. a level attained; standing; status; p. 1159 Mayor Evans is a person of great stature in our community.

imperative (im per´ ə tiv) n. something absolutely necessary; an essential; p. 1159 When you write a business letter, correct spelling is an imperative.

repudiate (ri pū´ dē āt´) v. to refuse to accept as valid; to reject; to renounce; p. 1159 The mayor gave a speech to repudiate reports of a scandal.

Tip: Word Usage When you encounter new words, it might help you to answer a specific question about the word. Example: Name some types of ordeals. Running a marathon, surviving a war, or passing a series of grueling academic tests are different kinds of ordeals.

Writing Practice

Structure Students may benefit from a review of writing structure. Remind students that writers use details to support their arguments just as people give evidence in a court of law.

Display the following example:

Dena is the strongest candidate for the position of sales manager because she has many years of sales experience. Dena worked part time at her aunt's store after school. She continued to work in retail sales while she earned her bachelor's degree in business. The day after college graduation, she began work as a sales representative for a major clothing manufacturer.

Have students identify the main idea, and then list the supporting details. Have students write their own paragraphs using the example above as a model.

from Stride Toward Freedom

Martin Luther King Jr.

. . . Oppressed people deal with their oppression in three characteristic ways. One way is acquiescence:[1] the oppressed resign themselves to their doom. They tacitly[2] adjust themselves to oppression, and thereby become conditioned to it. In every movement toward freedom some of the oppressed prefer to remain oppressed. Almost 2,800 years ago Moses set out to lead the children of Israel from the slavery of Egypt[3] to the freedom of the promised land.[4] He soon discovered that slaves do not always welcome their deliverers. They become accustomed to being slaves. They would rather bear those ills they have, as Shakespeare pointed out, than flee to others that they know not of.[5] They prefer the "fleshpots of Egypt" to the ordeals of emancipation.

There is such a thing as the freedom of exhaustion. Some people are so worn down by the yoke of oppression that they give up. A few years ago in the slum areas of Atlanta, a Negro guitarist used to sing almost daily: "Been down so long that down don't bother me." This is the type of negative freedom and resignation that often engulfs the life of the oppressed.

But this is not the way out. To accept passively an unjust system is to cooperate with that system; thereby the oppressed become as evil as the oppressor. Noncooperation with evil is as much a moral obligation as is cooperation with good. The oppressed must never

Family History Collage. Jane Sterrett.

---

[1] Acquiescence means "the act of consenting or agreeing silently, without objections."

[2] Tacitly means "silently."

[3] [Moses . . . of Egypt] As Moses led the Israelites across the wilderness, supplies brought from Egypt ran out. The Bible (Exodus 16:2–3) tells how the people complained and began to regret having left Egypt where, although they were in bondage, they had sufficient food.

[4] In the Bible, the Promised Land is the land of Canaan, promised by God to Abraham's descendants.

[5] [Shakespeare . . . know not of] In Shakespeare's play Hamlet, the title character says (act 3, scene 1, lines 80–81): ". . . And makes us rather bear those ills we have, / Than fly to others that we know not of."

1 Structure What do the opening sentences suggest about the way King intends to organize his ideas?

Paraphrase Rephrase this passage in your own words. 2

Vocabulary

ordeal (ôr dēl′) n. a circumstance or experience that is painful or difficult; a trial

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Remind students that Martin Luther King Jr. was a Christian minister. His speeches are filled with references to stories and quotations from the Bible. Students who find the text challenging may benefit from a discussion of the story of Moses in Egypt. Retell or read aloud a short passage describing Moses leading the Israelite slaves to freedom and discuss the story with the class. Then have students write a phrase or sentence that describes the Bible story King uses in his speech.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Structure Answer: The opening sentences suggest that King has three main points about the way the oppressed deal with their oppressors and that he will discuss the points one by one.

Ask: After King presents the three main points, what do you think will follow? (He will probably explain which of the three points he believes is most effective.)

Reading Strategy 2

Paraphrase Answer: Students should show an understanding of King's main points, which might be summarized as follows: It is wrong to cooperate with evil by suffering in silence. The oppressed have a duty to show oppressors the errors of their ways.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 11.2
DRP: 67
Lexile: 1040

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 30–42.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Paraphrase Answer: Nonviolent resistance is a way of fighting injustice without resorting to violence, so both those who abhor injustice and those who abhor violence can agree to it.

Writer's Technique ☆

Allusion The phrase "an eye for an eye" is an allusion to a passage from the Old Testament. Here and elsewhere, King makes implicit and explicit biblical allusions. These add moral weight to his argument and are persuasive to Christians and followers of other religions.

allow the conscience of the oppressor to slumber. Religion reminds every man that he is his brother's keeper. To accept injustice or segregation passively is to say to the oppressor that his actions are morally right. It is a way of allowing his conscience to fall asleep. At this moment the oppressed fails to be his brother's keeper. So acquiescence—while often the easier way—is not the moral way. It is the way of the coward. The Negro cannot win the respect of his oppressor by acquiescing; he merely increases the oppressor's arrogance and contempt. Acquiescence is interpreted as proof of the Negro's inferiority. The Negro cannot win the respect of the white people of the South or the peoples of the world if he is willing to sell the future of his children for his personal and immediate comfort and safety.

A second way that oppressed people sometimes deal with oppression is to resort to physical violence and corroding hatred. Violence often brings about momentary results. Nations have frequently won their independence in battle. But in spite of temporary victories, violence never brings permanent peace. It solves no social problem; it merely creates new and more complicated ones.

☆ Violence as a way of achieving racial justice is both impractical and immoral. It is impractical because it is a descending spiral ending in destruction for all. The old law of an eye for an eye leaves everybody blind. It is immoral because it seeks to humiliate the opponent rather than win his understanding; it seeks to annihilate rather than to convert. Violence is immoral because it thrives on hatred rather than love. It destroys community and makes brotherhood impossible. It leaves society in monologue rather than dialogue. Violence ends by defeating itself. It creates bitterness in the survivors and brutality in the destroyers. A voice echoes through time saying to every potential Peter, "Put up your sword."[6] History is cluttered with the wreckage of nations that failed to follow this command.

If the American Negro and other victims of oppression succumb to the temptation of using violence in the struggle for freedom, future generations will be the recipients of a desolate night of bitterness, and our chief legacy to them will be an endless reign of meaningless chaos. Violence is not the way.

The third way open to oppressed people in their quest for freedom is the way of nonviolent resistance. Like the synthesis in Hegelian philosophy, the principle of nonviolent resistance seeks to reconcile the truths of two opposites—acquiescence and violence—while avoiding the extremes and immoralities of both. The nonviolent resister agrees with the person who acquiesces that one should not be physically aggressive toward his opponent; but he balances the equation by agreeing with the person of violence that evil must be resisted. He avoids the nonresistance of the former and the violent resistance of the latter. With nonviolent resistance, no individual or group need submit to any wrong, nor need anyone resort to violence in order to right a wrong.

Visual Vocabulary
German philosopher Georg Hegel (hā´ gəl) (1770–1831) proposed the theory that for each idea or concept (thesis) there is an opposite (antithesis), and that these two eventually merge to form a new, unified idea or concept (synthesis).

It seems to me that this is the method that must guide the actions of the Negro in the present crisis in race relations. Through nonviolent resistance the Negro will be able to rise to the noble height of opposing the unjust [6] [Peter . . . sword] In the New Testament (Matthew 26:52, John 18:11), when the soldiers and priests come to arrest Jesus, the disciple Peter cuts off the ear of the high priest's servant. Jesus condemns this use of violence.

---

Paraphrase How does nonviolent resistance reconcile those who abhor injustice and those who abhor violence? 1

Reading Practice

Analyze Arguments Have students analyze King's argument by identifying the options, the reasons for and against them, and King's conclusion, using a chart like the one shown.

Issue: Responding to Oppression

Options	Acquiescence	Violent Resistance	Nonviolent Resistance
Reasons For Reasons Against
Conclusion

system while loving the perpetrators of the system. The Negro must work passionately and unrelentingly for full stature as a citizen, but he must not use inferior methods to gain it. He must never come to terms with falsehood, malice, hate, or destruction.

Nonviolent resistance makes it possible for the Negro to remain in the South and struggle for his rights. The Negro's problem will not be solved by running away. He cannot listen to the glib[8] suggestion of those who would urge him to migrate en masse[9] to other sections of the country. By grasping his great opportunity in the South he can make a lasting contribution to the moral strength of the nation and set a sublime example of courage for generations yet unborn.

By nonviolent resistance, the Negro can also enlist all men of good will in his struggle for equality. The problem is not a purely racial one, with Negroes set against whites. In the end, it is not a struggle between people at all, but a tension between justice and injustice. Nonviolent resistance is not aimed against oppressors but against oppression. Under its banner consciences, not racial groups, are enlisted.

If the Negro is to achieve the goal of integration, he must organize himself into a militant and nonviolent mass movement. All three elements are indispensable. The movement for equality and justice can only be a success if it has both a mass and militant character; the barriers to be overcome require both. Nonviolence is an imperative in order to bring about ultimate community.

A mass movement of a militant quality that is not at the same time committed to nonviolence tends to generate conflict, which in turn breeds anarchy. The support of the participants and the sympathy of the uncommitted are both inhibited by the threat that bloodshed will engulf the community. This reaction in turn encourages the opposition to threaten and resort to force. When, however, the mass movement repudiates violence while moving resolutely toward its goal, its opponents are revealed as the instigators and practitioners of violence if it occurs. Then public support is magnetically attracted to the advocates of

★

---

[8] Glib means "offhanded" or "showing little thought or concern."

[9] The French expression en masse (än mas´) means "in a group" or "all together."

2 Structure Notice that King first addresses acquiescence to oppression, then violent resistance, and finally nonviolent resistance. Why does he choose this order for his argument?

3 An Era of Protest Why should African Americans remain in the South and struggle for their rights, according to King?

Vocabulary

stature (stach´ ər) n. a level attained; standing; status

4 Structure According to King, how does their opponents' violence tend to ultimately advance the goals of nonviolent resisters?

Vocabulary

imperative (im per´ ə tiv) n. something absolutely necessary; an essential repudiate (ri pū´ dē āt´) v. to refuse to accept as valid; to reject; to renounce

Teach

Literary Element 2

Structure Answer: By dealing with his preferred option after eliminating the other two options, King gives his option an advantage.

Big Idea 3

An Era of Protest Answer: According to King, leaving the South would not solve African Americans' problems. He argues that staying and fighting injustice will help strengthen the nation and provide a great example of courage.

APPROACHING Discuss the fact that many African Americans during this time migrated from the rural South to cities in the North.

Literary Element 4

Structure Answer: When their opponents resort to violence, the public is sympathetic to the nonviolent resisters.

View the Photograph ★

In this photograph Rosa Parks sits on the bus in front of a white person. Just a year earlier, Parks was arrested for refusing to give up her seat to a white person. The nonviolent acts of the Montgomery bus boycott, led by Martin Luther King Jr., brought about the end of segregation on buses.

Progress Check

Can students analyze structure?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 36.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging To help students understand the history of segregation, explain that many African Americans were denied access to good schools and were discouraged from voting before the passage of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Make a chart with the headings "Unequal Treatment" and "Effects." Under "Unequal Treatment," write "riding buses," "attending schools," and "voting in elections." Ask students to write a sentence explaining the negative effects in the community of each type of unequal treatment.

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) It is impractical and immoral. (b) He believes in love and moral actions.
2. (a) Opposing oppression through nonviolent means (b) Similar to passive acceptance in its nonviolence; similar to violence in its resistance
3. (a) Oppression (b) Seeking to create community and not divide people further
4. (a) To accept injustice is to say that the oppressor is morally right. (b) Not all people are in a position to resist.
5. (a) He would agree. (b) Yes, since hating brings one down to the level of the oppressor.
6. (a) He insisted that protestors be nonviolent and resistant. (b) Love, courage, patience, determination, faith
7. Students should cite reasons for their continued relevance.

Literary Element

1. (a) Three ways people deal with oppression (b) It indicates he will discuss three points in the order stated.
2. The third point should be the concluding one. It represents a combination of acquiescence and violent resistance.

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' summaries:

- Students should identify King's main ideas and supporting details.
- Students should use their own words to summarize King's ideas.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What does King think of using violence to bring about social change? (b)What does this opinion tell you about King himself?
2. (a)What is nonviolent resistance? (b)How is it similar to and different from both passive acceptance and violent resistance?
3. (a)Against whom or what should nonviolence be aimed, according to King? (b)Why do you suppose King took pains to make this target clear?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)How does King support his claim that "to accept passively an unjust system is to cooperate with that system"? (b)Do you see any flaws with this claim? Explain why or why not.
5. (a)Booker T. Washington said, "I shall allow no man to belittle my soul by making me hate him." How might King respond to this? (b)Do you agree with the quote? Why or why not?

Connect

6. Big Idea An Era of Protest (a)Considering what you know about the era leading up to the civil rights movement, what would you say was distinctive about King's method of protesting injustice? (b)What qualities would a protestor need to possess in order to follow King's directions?
7. Connect to Today This selection was first published in 1958. Do you think King's ideas are still relevant today? Explain.

Literary Element Structure

The structure of persuasive or expository writing may vary. Listing detailed information, using cause and effect, or describing a problem and its solution are some ways of structuring a topic.

1. (a)What does King state in the first sentence? (b)Explain how this sentence helps set up the structure of the entire piece.
2. Would switching the order of King's three points affect his argument? Why or why not?

Reading Strategy Paraphrase

When you paraphrase, you put details or ideas from a selection into your own words. Paraphrasing can help you better understand difficult passages.

1. What is the main point of this selection?
2. Which particular passages or details did paraphrasing help you to better understand? Explain.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Usage Respond to the following to explore the selection vocabulary.

1. Identify someone in your community who has attained an esteemed stature.
2. Describe a physical or mental ordeal that you have endured.
3. List things that would be imperative to bring when camping.
4. Describe a situation from a drama you know in which someone repudiates something.

Writing

Write a Summary In this speech, King argues in support of a particular philosophy. Summarize his arguments, making sure to identify the main idea, or thesis, and supporting evidence. Use your paraphrasing chart as an aid. Be careful to put King's ideas into your own words.

Vocabulary

Sample answers:

1. My mom has achieved an esteemed stature because of her charity work.
2. Running a half marathon was a physical ordeal.
3. A tent, a flashlight, and a compass are imperative when camping.
4. In King Lear, Lear repudiates his daughter Cordelia.

Reading Strategy

1. Nonviolent resistance is the only way to overcome oppression.
2. Students should mention a specific passage and reason why paraphrasing was helpful.

Before You Read

Choice: A Tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Meet Alice Walker
(born 1944)

Born into a poor, rural life in Eatonton, Georgia, Alice Walker knew how it felt to bear the legacy of slavery, racism, and segregation. Her parents and grandparents worked on what had been a plantation, she recalled decades later, toiling "all their lives for barely enough food and shelter to sustain them. They were sharecroppers—landless peasants—the product of whose labor was routinely stolen from them."

> "We will be ourselves and free, or die in the attempt. Harriet Tubman was not our great-grandmother for nothing."
>
> —Alice Walker

Early Struggles in the South Walker entered Spelman College on scholarship in 1961, at the peak of the civil rights movement. There she met Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. She continued her education at Sarah Lawrence College in New York and after graduation worked in the New York City Welfare Department. Returning to the South in 1966, Walker became a Head Start worker in Mississippi and helped organize voter registration in Georgia. She called the civil rights movement "a time of intense friendships, passions, and loves among the people who came south (or lived there), and who risked everything to change [the] system." In 1967 she married a fellow civil rights worker. She had to do so in the North, however, for she married a white man and interracial marriage was still illegal in the South.

The Rights of Women Interestingly, the civil rights leader whom Walker calls her "spiritual ancestor" is not Dr. King or another figure from the Civil Rights movement, but Sojourner Truth—a former slave who became an abolitionist and advocate for women's rights in the nineteenth century. Walker says it gives her joy to realize she shares her name with Sojourner Truth. Walker and sojourner can have roughly the same meaning, and Alice means "truth" in ancient Greek. Aside from their names, their common bond, Walker says, is a concern for the rights not only of African Americans but also of women. Much of Walker's writing can be called womanist, a term Walker coined to describe work appreciating women's culture, characters, and feelings.

Since the publication of her novel The Color Purple, which won both a Pulitzer Prize and an American Book Award and was adapted into a highly successful film, Walker has been a celebrity. Beside novels, she has written short stories, poems, essays, and children's books. She also has won acclaim for her nonfiction work, including Anything We Love Can Be Saved: A Writer's Activism.

LOG ON Literature Online

Author Search For more about Alice Walker, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 66

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 98

Or tell students that Alice Walker often writes about the importance of a sense of home. Draw a web diagram with the word home in the center circle and the words memories, places, and people in surrounding circles. Have students offer ideas for each category, or have them complete the diagram themselves. Then, have students compare their responses with elements mentioned in Alice Walker's essay.

Selection Skills

Choice: A Tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Literary Elements
- Anecdote (SE pp. 1162, 1164, 1165)

Reading Skills
- Activate Prior Knowledge (SE pp. 1162-1165)

Vocabulary Skills
- Analogies (SE pp. 1165)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Speech (SE p. 1165)
- Tribute (TE p. 1162)
- Past Perfect Tense (TE p. 1164)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Alice Walker begins by referring to her great-great-great-grandmother. She emphasizes the importance of memories and heritage to African Americans and speaks of her own awakening to the struggle for equality inspired by Martin Luther King Jr. Walker reflects on King's accomplishments and emphasizes his gift of home and heritage to African Americans.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 43–48.

Vocabulary

Words that Describe Time

Some of the words in the vocabulary list are related to time. One of these words describes the duration of an event. Ask: Which word in this selection's vocabulary describes an event that is over quickly? (ephemeral)

APPROACHING Explain that words describing time can show relationships between people or things. Ask: Which word might you use to describe a person whose relationship with you extends far into the past? (ancestral)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 51.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Speech

What gives the places you love their special quality? Write a journal entry that describes one of these places, and explain why it is special to you.

Build Background

Walker gives a short history of African Americans since the late nineteenth century. She refers to the period after the Civil War called Reconstruction (1865–1877), when African Americans enjoyed new rights. Reconstruction ended when Southern whites regained control of state governments. In the climate of oppression that followed, millions of African Americans left the South. Walker then jumps to 1960, when a federal court ordered the University of Georgia to admit African Americans. Her final reference is to the desegregation of a Mississippi restaurant. Beginning in 1960, protestors held "sit-ins" to force compliance with desegregation laws.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea An Era of Protest

As you read, ask, What kind of resentment might naturally build up when a group of people are deprived of basic rights and the means of a decent livelihood over many generations?

Literary Element Anecdote

An anecdote is a brief account of an interesting event. As you read, ask yourself, What anecdotes does Walker tell and why?

Reading Strategy Activate Prior Knowledge

As a reader, your prior knowledge and personal experiences help you understand a text. As you read, ask yourself, What do I already know about Walker's topics?

Tip: Apply What You Know Use a chart like the one below to connect Walker's ideas and your prior knowledge.

from "Choice"	What I Know
Yet the history of my family, like that of all black Southerners, is a history of dispossession.	The ancestors of black Southerners were taken from their land in Africa and enslaved in America.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1161–1165

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing anecdote.

Reading: Activating prior knowledge.

Vocabulary

ancestral (an ses´ trəl) adj. of or relating to those from whom one is descended; p. 1163 My family's ancestral property was sold long ago.

colossal (kə los´ əl) adj. extraordinary in size or degree; enormous; p. 1164 A colossal wave overturned the ship.

continuity (kon´ tə no͞o´ ə tē) n. the state or quality of going on without interruption; p. 1164 If the President dies in office, the Vice President immediately takes over to ensure continuity.

ephemeral (i fem´ rəl) adj. lasting for a very brief time; short-lived; p. 1164 A rainbow is brilliant but ephemeral.

Tip: Analogies Comparisons based on relationships between words are known as analogies. For example, in the analogy continuity : disruption :: dark : light, each pair of words is opposite in meaning. To complete an analogy, decide on the relationship represented by the first pair of words. Then apply that relationship to the second set of words.

Writing Practice

Tributes Explain that a tribute is written to honor someone of importance in your life or community. Rather than just writing a description of the person, tribute writers often use anecdotes to create a clearer image of the person. Have students write down the name of someone they admire. Next, have students write down a word or two explaining the admirable characteristics the person they selected has. Have students write a brief anecdote about the person in which the person is displaying that admirable characteristic.

Stewart's Farm, 1995. Jonathan Green. Oil on canvas, 48 x 60 in. Collection of the artist.

Choice:
A Tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Alice Walker

This address was made in 1972 at a Jackson, Mississippi, restaurant that refused to serve people of color until forced to do so by the Civil Rights movement a few years before.

My great-great-great-grandmother walked as a slave from Virginia to Eatonton, Georgia—which passes for the Walker ancestral home—with two babies on her hips. She lived to be a hundred and twenty-five years old and my own father knew her as a boy. (It is in memory of this walk that I choose to keep and to embrace my "maiden" name, Walker.)

There is a cemetery near our family church where she is buried; but because her marker was made of wood and rotted years ago, it is impossible to tell exactly where her body lies. In the same cemetery are most of my mother's people, who have lived in Georgia for so long nobody even remembers when they came. And all of my great-aunts and uncles are there, and my grandfather and grandmother, and, very recently, my own father.

1 Activate Prior Knowledge Based on what you know about U.S. geography, about how many states did Walker's ancestor walk through?

Vocabulary

ancestral (an ses´ trəl) adj. of or relating to those from whom one is descended

If it is true that land does not belong to anyone until they have buried a body in it, then the land of my birthplace belongs to me, dozens of times over. Yet the history of my family, like that of all black Southerners, is a history of dispossession. We loved the land and worked the land, but we never owned it; and even if we bought land, as my great-grandfather did after the Civil War, it was always in danger of being taken away, as his was, during the period following Reconstruction.

2 My father inherited nothing of material value from his father, and when I came of age in the early sixties I awoke to the bitter knowledge that in order just to continue to love the land of my birth, I was expected to leave it. For black people —including my parents—had learned a long time ago that to stay willingly in a beloved but brutal place is to risk losing the love and being forced to acknowledge only the brutality.

It is a part of the black Southern sensibility that we treasure memories; for such a long time, that is all of our homeland those of us who at one time or another were forced away from it have been allowed to have.

I watched my brothers, one by one, leave our home and leave the South. I watched my sisters do the same. This was not unusual; abandonment, except for memories, was the common thing, except for those who "could not do any better," or those whose strength or

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Activate Prior Knowledge

Answer: She walked through four states: Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia.

Big Idea 2

An Era of Protest

Ask: How does Walker's ironic statement about being expected to leave the land she loves express the frustration and anger that many African American Southerners felt? (African American Southerners felt frustration because they were not welcome in their homes, even though they were born and raised there. They left because of this injustice.)

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 7.3
DRP: 60
Lexile: 1170

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Established Because this selection was written as a speech, it lends itself to oral presentation. Reading aloud can aid in comprehension and increase fluency.

In small groups, have students take turns reading the speech aloud. Tell the listeners to take notes on any words, phrases, or passages that are unclear. Then have the groups discuss their notes, working together to clear up any confusion. Finally, have volunteers summarize the speech for their group or for the class.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Activate Prior Knowledge

Ask: What "public acts" or other facts do you know about Dr. King, and how does that knowledge help you undertand this speech better? (Students might mention the Montgomery bus boycott, King's jail time in Birmingham, his "I Have a Dream" speech at the March on Washington, and his nonviolent beliefs.)

Literary Element 2

Anecdote Answer: This comment makes the anecdote more personal because it provides insight into Walker's thought process.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Clarify the importance of television in Walker's anecdote. Television introduces Martin Luther King Jr. to Walker and makes her feel a personal tie to him and the civil rights movement.

Big Idea 3

An Era of Protest Answer: Students might point out that many groups were discriminated against during this time. A spokesperson and leader such as King probably gave them a voice they had been lacking.

stubbornness was so colossal they took the risk that others could not bear.

In 1960, my mother bought a television set, and each day after school I watched Hamilton Holmes and Charlayne Hunter as they struggled to integrate—fair-skinned as they were—the University of Georgia. And then, one day, there appeared the face of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. What a funny name, I thought. At the moment I first saw him, he was being handcuffed and shoved into a police truck. He had dared to claim his rights as a native son, and had been arrested. He displayed no fear, but seemed calm and serene, unaware of his own extraordinary courage. His whole body, like his conscience, was at peace.

At the moment I saw his resistance I knew I would never be able to live in this country without resisting everything that sought to disinherit me, and I would never be forced away from the land of my birth without a fight.

He was The One, The Hero, The One Fearless Person for whom we had waited. I hadn't even realized before that we had been waiting for Martin Luther King Jr. but we had. And I knew it for sure when my mother added his name to the list of people she prayed for every night.

I sometimes think that it was literally the prayers of people like my mother and father, who had bowed down in the struggle for such a long time, that kept Dr. King alive until five years ago. For years we went to bed praying for his life, and awoke with the question "Is the 'Lord' still here?"

1 The public acts of Dr. King you know. They are visible all around you. His voice you would recognize sooner than any other voice you have heard in this century—this in spite of the fact that certain municipal libraries, like the one in downtown Jackson, do not carry recordings of his speeches, and the librarians chuckle cruelly when asked why they do not.

You know, if you have read his books, that his is a complex and revolutionary philosophy that few people are capable of understanding fully or have the patience to embody in themselves. Which is our weakness, which is our loss.

And if you know anything about good Baptist preaching, you can imagine what you missed if you never had a chance to hear Martin Luther King Jr. preach at Ebenezer Baptist Church.

You know of the prizes and awards that he tended to think very little of. And you know of his concern for the disinherited: the American Indian, the Mexican American, and the poor American white—for whom he cared much.

You know that this very room, in this very restaurant, was closed to people of color not more than five years ago. And that we eat here together tonight largely through his efforts and his blood. We accept the common pleasures of life, assuredly, in his name.

But add to all of these things the one thing that seems to me second to none in importance: He gave us back our heritage. He gave us back our homeland; the bones and dust of our ancestors, who may now sleep within our caring and our hearing. He gave us the blueness of the Georgia sky in autumn as in summer; the colors of the Southern winter as well as glimpses of the green of vacation-time spring. Those of our relatives we used to invite for a visit we now can ask to stay. . . . He gave us full-time use of our own woods, and restored our memories to those of us who were forced to run away, as realities we might each day enjoy and leave for our children.

2 Anecdote How does this observation add to the interest of Walker's anecdote?

3 An Era of Protest How might a person's concern for the disinherited help make that person a hero during this period?

Vocabulary

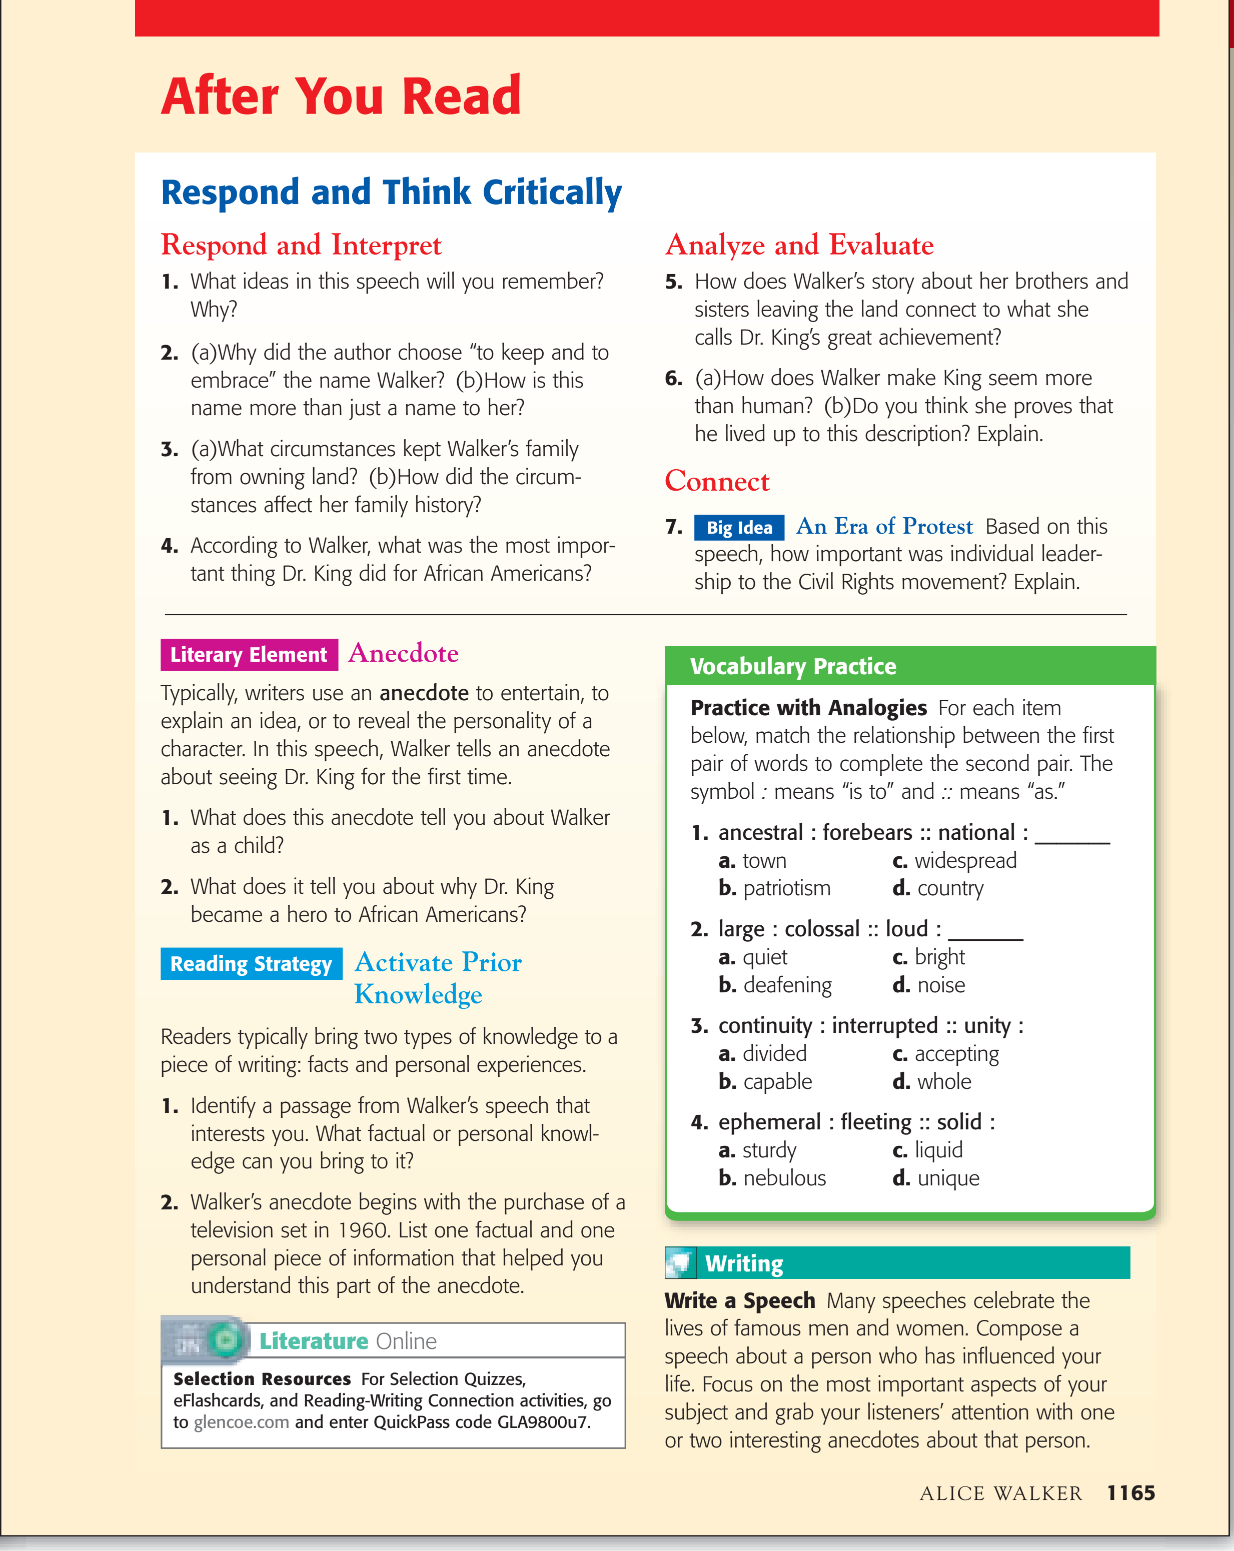
colossal (kə los′ əl) adj. extraordinary in size or degree; enormous continuity (kon′ tə no͞o′ ə tē) n. the state or quality of going on without interruption ephemeral (i fem′ rəl) adj. lasting for a very brief time; short-lived

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Past Perfect Tense Point out these sentences on this page: "At the moment I first saw him, he was being handcuffed and shoved into a police truck. He had dared to claim his rights as a native son, and had been arrested." Explain that Walker is using the past perfect tense, formed by using had and the past participle of a verb. This tense indicates that one action began and ended before another began.

Have students review the paragraph containing these sentences. Then have them write three sentences using the past perfect tense.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What ideas in this speech will you remember? Why?
2. (a)Why did the author choose "to keep and to embrace" the name Walker? (b)How is this name more than just a name to her?
3. (a)What circumstances kept Walker's family from owning land? (b)How did the circumstances affect her family history?
4. According to Walker, what was the most important thing Dr. King did for African Americans?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. How does Walker's story about her brothers and sisters leaving the land connect to what she calls Dr. King's great achievement?
6. (a)How does Walker make King seem more than human? (b)Do you think she proves that he lived up to this description? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea An Era of Protest Based on this speech, how important was individual leadership to the Civil Rights movement? Explain.

Literary Element Anecdote

Typically, writers use an anecdote to entertain, to explain an idea, or to reveal the personality of a character. In this speech, Walker tells an anecdote about seeing Dr. King for the first time.

1. What does this anecdote tell you about Walker as a child?
2. What does it tell you about why Dr. King became a hero to African Americans?

Reading Strategy Activate Prior Knowledge

Readers typically bring two types of knowledge to a piece of writing: facts and personal experiences.

1. Identify a passage from Walker's speech that interests you. What factual or personal knowledge can you bring to it?
2. Walker's anecdote begins with the purchase of a television set in 1960. List one factual and one personal piece of information that helped you understand this part of the anecdote.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Analogies For each item below, match the relationship between the first pair of words to complete the second pair. The symbol : means "is to" and :: means "as."

1. ancestral : forebears :: national : _______
   a. town c. widespread
   b. patriotism d. country
2. large : colossal :: loud : _______
   a. quiet c. bright
   b. deafening d. noise
3. continuity : interrupted :: unity :
   a. divided c. accepting
   b. capable d. whole
4. ephemeral : fleeting :: solid :
   a. sturdy c. liquid
   b. nebulous d. unique

Writing

Write a Speech Many speeches celebrate the lives of famous men and women. Compose a speech about a person who has influenced your life. Focus on the most important aspects of your subject and grab your listeners' attention with one or two interesting anecdotes about that person.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students may remember Walker's vivid anecdotes or the unique assessment of King's work giving people back their heritage.
2. (a) The name is in memory of her great-great-great-grandmother who, as a slave, walked from Virginia to Georgia. (b) It represents the strength upon which her heritage was founded.
3. (a) Slavery and the oppression of the post-Civil War South (b) Her father did not inherit any land, forcing Walker and her siblings to leave home to find better lives.
4. He returned their heritage and home.
5. King gave African Americans back their homeland, which her siblings had abandoned.
6. (a) She refers to him as "The One, The Hero, The One Fearless Person for whom we had waited." (b) Walker lists King's virtues and accomplishments.
7. Individual leadership was very important. Leaders inspired others to act and resist oppression.

Literary Element

1. It shows her youthful innocence.
2. It shows his courage and his nonviolent nature.

Reading Strategy

1. Students should identify whether the information they bring to their passage is factual or personal.
2. Walker's television set would have been black and white. Students might reflect on the importance of television in their lives.

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' speeches:

- Speeches should focus on one important feature of the subject.
- Speeches should include anecdotes to illustrate the subject's significance.

Vocabulary

1. d 2. b 3. a 4. a

Progress Check

Can students analyze an anecdote?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 49.

Vocabulary Workshop

Loaded Words

Focus

Explain that the directions for the exercise indicate that students choose words that reflect the author's opposition to war. Suggest that after students complete the exercise, they substitute words that indicate approval of a war. Point out how simply changing a word or a phrase can dramatically change the effect of a passage.

Teach

Diction Say: An author's choice of words, called diction, reflects the author's attitude and sets the tone. For example, compare these two sentences: His eyes glittered. His eyes blazed.

Assess

Practice

1. b 2. c 3. a 4. a

For additional vocabulary practice, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Learning Objectives

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Vocabulary: Understanding how to recognize loaded words.

Vocabulary Workshop

Loaded Words

Literature Connection In the following passage, Alice Walker leaves no doubt that she admires Dr. King.

> "He displayed no fear, but seemed calm and serene, unaware of his own extraordinary courage."

Walker's words and phrases—calm, serene, "extraordinary courage"—all help her praise him. "Loaded words" such as these can make speech and writing powerful and persuasive. We encounter them at political rallies, on TV commercials, in the editorial pages of newspapers, and in our own everyday conversation. Loaded words are powerful weapons. They should be used responsibly.

There are different kinds of loaded words.

- Language that expresses an author's prejudice demonstrates bias. Try substituting bold for reckless in the statement below. Note how bold seems positive, while reckless seems disapproving.

  One particularly reckless young protestor scaled the White House fence.
- Exaggerated language used to make a point is hyperbole.

  All the police dogs in the world could not have stopped this demonstration.
- Language that may distort the truth in order to influence the public is known as propaganda.

  Communists and other anti-American elements infiltrated the Civil Rights Movement in order to betray our nation's values.

Loaded words express strong opinions or emotions. Some reveal bias, or prejudice. Some are hyperbole, or the use of exaggeration to make a point. Some rely on propaganda, or language that may distort the truth to be persuasive.

Tip

Ask yourself, Why did the writer write this? What is his or her point of view? Once you have established the author's purpose for writing, look for words or phrases that support this stance.

Practice From the loaded words or phrases that follow the paragraph below, select those that best support the author's opposition to a war.

This was no one's idea of a just war. It was a war conceived by 1. _____ politicians, who watched from their 2. _____ as 3. _____ of our finest young men marched to their deaths. It was a conflict that finally revealed the rulers of the "free world" to be little more than 4. _____.

1. a. brilliant b. cynical c. elected
2. a. workplaces b. homes c. ivory towers
3. a. a generation b. many c. several
4. a. war criminals b. ordinary people c. heroes

Literature Online

Vocabulary For more vocabulary practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Vocabulary Practice

Persuasive Language Point out to students that they may use loaded words in their own conversations when they exaggerate or include their opinions in descriptions. For example, they might describe a book as "a million pages long" or say that a new song is "the best ever written." Discuss with students how loaded words can influence the listener. Have them read the statements below and then modify them to include bias, hyperbole, and propaganda. When students have finished, discuss how loaded words changed the meaning of the original statements.

1. The movie was long. (hyperbole: The movie went on forever!)

2. The candidate supports a bill that will raise taxes. (propaganda: The candidate supports a bill that will make taxes go sky high.)

3. She hardly spoke at the party. (bias: She was so proud and arrogant that she hardly spoke at the party.)

Before You Read

from Working: Roberto Acuna, Farm Worker

Meet Studs Terkel

(born 1912)

Would you report on the March on Washington and leave out Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I Have a Dream" speech? That's what Studs Terkel did. Rather than focus on the typical center of attention, he depicted a group of people from Chicago as they rode to and from the famous 1963 civil rights gathering. While other reporters and newscasters deluged the public with stories of heroes and big events, Terkel quietly explored the motivations, choices, dilemmas, and dreams of everyday people.

Born Louis Terkel in New York, Terkel spent most of his life in Chicago. He borrowed the nickname "Studs" from a fictional Chicago character, Studs Lonigan. Although he received a law degree, he took a job in radio. He moved from acting on radio soap operas to writing radio shows to eventually having his own show.

Interviews and Oral Histories As a talk show host on Chicago radio, Terkel brought a natural talent to the job of interviewing. His skill, which grew with practice, translated well to the work for which he has become most famous, collecting oral histories. His first book of oral histories, Division Street: America, was published in 1967. This collection of more than seventy interviews with Chicago residents focuses on the topic of the gap between rich and poor.

What Terkel did in Division Street was the same thing he would do again and again: interview "real people" about real-life events and lay the bits and pieces of their lives out before the American reading public. He reflected, through interviews, on the American dream. And, perhaps most famously of all, he collected a world of insight into how Americans felt about their working lives.

A Voice of Protest Terkel's work is both history ☆ and commentary. He spoke out early in the struggle against Jim Crow laws, poll taxes, and economic inequality. His work also expresses great empathy for the "working man" and the working class.

> "I was constantly astonished by the extraordinary dreams of ordinary people. No matter how bewildering the times, . . . those we call ordinary are aware of a sense of personal worth—or more often a lack of it—in the work they do."
>
> —Studs Terkel

With his sympathetic ear for the voices of real people, Studs Terkel influenced a whole generation of radio talk show hosts and had a powerful effect on the interviewing style on popular public radio shows. In 1985, he won the Pulitzer Prize in nonfiction for The Good War: An Oral History of World War II. Terkel continues to work, interview, and listen.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Studs Terkel, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 99

Or draw a Venn diagram on the board and label it HISTORY. Label the left oval Oral History and the right oval Written History.

Ask: How do you think oral history is different from written history? How are they similar?

Encourage students to brainstorm answers, writing their responses in the diagram. Then tell students that they will be reading an excerpt from a piece of oral history. Have them think about how a historian might write about the events differently.

Political History ☆

Political Protests Terkel's political beliefs led him to be blacklisted during the 1950s. Because he supported left-wing causes, he was investigated by the House Un-American Activities Committee and his television show—"Studs' Place"—was canceled.

Selection Skills

from Working: Roberto Acuna, Farm Worker

Literary Elements
- Oral History (SE pp. 1168–1173, 1176-1178)
- Structure (SE p. 1178)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships (SE pp. 1168, 1170, 1171, 1174, 1176, 1178)
- Review (TE p. 1176)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE p. 1178)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 1178)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Conduct an Interview (SE p. 1178; TE p. 1172)
- Interview Practice (TE p. 1168)
- Analyze Art (TE pp. 1169, 1172, 1173)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Evaluate an Interview (SE p. 1178)
- Using Good and Well (TE p. 1170)
- Biographical Report (TE p. 1174)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Roberto Acuna reflects on his life as a migrant farm worker. He describes the hardships he faced as a child. Acuna explains the discrimination he and other farm workers faced from the townspeople and the growers for whom they worked. With his mother's encouragement, Acuna joined the Marine Corps and later took a job as a prison guard. He quit his job because he did not want to become a "mean man." When Acuna learned about Cesar Chavez, who organized farm workers, he joined the movement to unionize workers.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 56–61.

Vocabulary

Root Words and Suffixes

Students can decode the meanings of unfamiliar words by identifying root words. Say: The root of solidarity is solid. How would you describe relationships that exhibit solidarity? (They are strong and stable).

ENGLISH LEARNERS Explain that suffixes can change a word's part of speech. For example, adding the suffix -tion to some verbs changes them to nouns. Ask: What verb is the root word of compensation? (compensate) Have students look up the meaning of compensate, if necessary, and then guess what it means to be compensated. (to be paid)

Literature and Reading Preview

Learning Objectives

For pages 1167–1178

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Evaluating oral history.

Reading: Analyzing cause-and-effect relationships.

Connect to the Interview

What working conditions do you think should be guaranteed to all workers? With a partner, discuss basic rights that should be available to all workers.

Build Background

This interview comes from a collection called Working: People Talk About What They Do All Day and How They Feel About What They Do. Terkel regarded his interactions with workers as "conversations," so most selections do not have a traditional interview format. Rather they consist of excerpts and fragments. Changes in type (from roman to italic) show where one part of the conversation leaves off and another begins.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea An Era of Protest

As you read, ask, What aspects of life did Acuna find most difficult to accept and which were most in need of change?

Literary Element Oral History

Oral history is history that passes by word of mouth and begins with those who actually lived it. As you read, ask yourself, How do the thoughts of an ordinary farm worker help you understand the events, as well as the hopes and frustrations, of farm workers in the 1960s?

Reading Strategy Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships

When you analyze cause-and-effect relationships, you look for the causes or reasons why something happened and relate them to the effects or results. A single cause can have any number of effects. As you read, ask yourself, What event leads to the next event?

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record cause-and-effect relationships.

Cause	Effect
picking lettuce	swollen, callused hands
falling behind at work	foreman puts pressure on worker

Vocabulary

civic (siv´ ik) adj. related to citizenship; p. 1170 Voting is a civic responsibility.

degrading (di grā´ ding) adj. tending to drag down in character or social status; p. 1171 Having to sit in the back was degrading.

compensation (kom´ pən sā´ shən) n. payment; p. 1175 The compensation for babysitting depends on how long you work.

solidarity (sol´ ə dar´ ə tē) n. unity of a group that produces a sense of community; p. 1175 Their sense of solidarity helped them work together for voting rights.

stipulate (stip´ yə lāt´) v. to require or demand as part of an agreement; p. 1176 The negotiators stipulate four requirements.

Tip: Context Clues To infer a word's meaning, look at other words in the sentence. Example: Even though they worked hard and for long hours, the compensation they earned was minimal. Compensation means "payment"; hard work and long hours should earn more compensation.

Writing Practice

Interview Practice Help students understand the Oral History format by having them interview each other. Students should take notes during the interview and then write up a summary as a newspaper or magazine article of no longer than 250 words. Display these questions to get students started:

- What jobs have you had?
- What are your strengths as an employee?
- What would be your ideal job?

Have students brainstorm additional questions that might lead to a successful interview.

from

Working

Roberto Acuna, Farm Worker

Studs Terkel

1 I walked out of the fields two years ago. I saw the need to change the California feudal system,[1] to change the lives of farm workers, to make these huge corporations feel they're not above anybody. I am thirty-four years old and I try to organize for the United Farm Workers of America.

His hands are calloused and each of his thumbnails is singularly[2] cut. "If you're picking lettuce, the thumbnails fall off 'cause they're banged on the box. Your hands get swollen. You can't slow down because the foreman[3] sees you're so many boxes behind and you'd better get on. But people would help each other. If you're feeling bad that day, somebody who's feeling pretty good would help. Any people that are suffering have to stick together, whether they like it or not, whether they be black, brown, or pink."

According to Mom, I was born on a cotton sack out in the fields, 'cause she had no money to go to the hospital. When I was a child, we used to migrate from California to Arizona and back and forth. The things I saw shaped my life. I remember when we used to go out and pick carrots and onions, the whole family. We tried to scratch a livin' out of the ground. I saw my parents cry out in despair, even though we had the whole family working. At the time,

Oral History In what ways is the speaker an ordinary person or "common man"? 2

---

1. A California feudal system is a bitter metaphor comparing the use of serfs on feudal manors in the Middle Ages to the use of farm workers by growers in California.
2. Singularly means "oddly."
3. A foreman is any leader of a work crew.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Explain to students that Acuna describes a number of problems facing migrant workers, including poor working conditions, low pay, long hours, and discrimination. Copy the accompanying chart on the board. Students who have difficulty reading Terkel's interview can benefit from seeing the chart, and then adding more examples of workers' difficulties and the reasons for these difficulties.

Difficulty	Reasons for Difficulty
"If you're picking lettuce, the thumbnails fall off."	Workers bang their hands when they work fast.
"I was born on a cotton sack out in the fields."	Acuna's family has no money for doctors.

Teach

Big Idea 1

An Era of Protest Say: This piece is about a migrant farm worker. Ask: What do you think might cause farm workers to protest? (They might protest low wages or unfair labor practices.)

Literary Element 2

Oral History Answer: He is extremely poor: he was born in a field, and his family members are migrant workers.

View the Photograph

Explain that this1956 photograph shows temporary laborers, or braceros, crossing the border from Mexico to Texas. The bracero program, which operated from 1942 to 1964, led to many abuses of workers. Ask: What does this picture suggest to you? (By showing no faces, the photograph takes away the workers' individuality.)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 4.8
DRP: 52
Lexile: 720

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships Answer: Different crops were harvested at different times in different places.

Ask: How might this constant cycle of moving affect children? (prevents children from making lasting friendships; interferes with their education)

APPROACHING Ask students to describe the difference in climate between a southern and a northern state. Explain that crops will ripen at different times in different climates.

Big Idea 2

An Era of Protest Answer: He feels the church is unfair because it does not offer help, but instead takes from the people.

Literary Element 3

Oral History Answer: Acuna does not always use standard English, so he probably did not have a complete formal education. That such a small thing as buying his own canned food fills Acuna with pride suggests that his pride vanishes when he cannot buy food and must accept what is provided by welfare.

they were paying sixty-two and a half cents an hour. The average income must have been fifteen hundred dollars, maybe two thousand.[4]

This was supplemented[5] by child labor. During those years, the growers used to have a Pick-Your-Harvest Week. They would get all the migrant kids out of school and have 'em out there pickin' the crops at peak harvest time. A child was off that week and when he went back to school, he got a little gold star. They would make it seem like something civic to do.

We'd pick everything: lettuce, carrots, onions, cucumbers, cauliflower, broccoli, tomatoes—all the salads you could make out of vegetables, we picked 'em. Citrus fruits, watermelons—you name it. We'd be in Salinas about four months. From there we'd go down into the Imperial Valley. From there we'd go to picking citrus. It was like a cycle. We'd follow the seasons.

After my dad died, my mom would come home and she'd go into her tent and I would go into ours. We'd roughhouse and everything and then we'd go into the tent where Mom was sleeping and I'd see her crying. When I asked her why she was crying she never gave me an answer. All she said was things would get better. She retired a beaten old lady with a lot of dignity. That day she thought would be better never came for her.

"One time, my mom was in bad need of money, so she got a part-time evening job in a restaurant. I'd be helping her. All the growers would come in and they'd be laughing, making nasty remarks, and make passes at her. I used to go out there and kick 'em and my mom told me to leave 'em alone, she could handle 'em. But they would embarrass her and she would cry.

"My mom was a very proud woman. She brought us up without any help from nobody. She kept the family strong. They say that a family that prays together stays together. I say that a family that works together stays together—because of the suffering. My mom couldn't speak English too good. Or much Spanish, for that matter. She wasn't educated. But she knew some prayers and she used to make us say them. That's another thing: when I see the many things in this world and this country, I could tear the churches apart. I never saw a priest out in the fields trying to help people. Maybe in these later years they're doing it. But it's always the church taking from the people.

"We were once asked by the church to bring vegetables to make it a successful bazaar. After we got the stuff there, the only people havin' a good time were the rich people because they were the only ones that were buyin' the stuff . . ."

I'd go barefoot to school. The bad thing was they used to laugh at us, the Anglo kids. They would laugh because we'd bring tortillas and frijoles[6] to lunch. They would have their nice little compact lunch boxes with cold milk in their thermos and they'd laugh at us because all we had was dried tortillas. Not only would they laugh at us, but the kids would pick fights. My older brother used to do most of the fighting for us and he'd come home with black eyes all the time.

What really hurt is when we had to go on welfare. Nobody knows the erosion of man's dignity. They used to have a label of canned goods that said, "U.S. Commodities.[7] Not to be sold or exchanged." Nobody knows how proud it is to feel when you bought canned goods with your own money.

---

[4] Acuna adds: "Today, because of our struggles, the pay is up to two dollars an hour. Yet we know that is not enough."

[5] Supplemented means "added to."

[6] Tortillas are thin, flat, unleavened bread. Frijoles is the Spanish word for beans.

[7] Commodities are goods.

1 Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships What kept migrant workers on the move?

Vocabulary

civic (siv´ ik) adj. related to citizenship

An Era of Protest In addition to the work, what else strikes Roberto Acuna as unfair? 2

Oral History How do both the meaning and the language of this comment reveal what type of person Acuna is? 3

Reading Practice

Generate Questions Point out that Terkel's interview of Acuna contains excerpts of Acuna's answers, but not Terkel's questions. Have students work in small groups. Assign each group one section of the selection. Have students generate possible questions Terkel may have asked Acuna. Have each group share its questions and discuss why each is a good interview question.

Cultural History ☆

Imperial Valley California's Imperial Valley was first irrigated in 1901. The construction of the Hoover Dam in 1936 allowed for widespread irrigation of the 50-mile-long valley. The desert's long growing season makes it an important source of fruits and vegetables.

"I wanted to be accepted. It must have been in sixth grade. It was just before the Fourth of July. They were trying out students for this patriotic play. I wanted to do Abe Lincoln, so I learned the Gettysburg Address inside and out. I'd be out in the fields pickin' the crops and I'd be memorizin'. I was the only one who didn't have to read the part, 'cause I learned it. The part was given to a girl who was a grower's daughter. She had to read it out of a book, but they said she had better diction. I was very disappointed. I quit about eighth grade.

"Any time anybody'd talk to me about politics, about civil rights, I would ignore it. It's a very degrading thing because you can't express yourself. They wanted us to speak English in the school classes. We'd put out a real effort. I would get into a lot of fights because I spoke Spanish and they couldn't understand it. I was punished. I was kept after school for not speaking English."

Filipino migrant workers cut lettuce in a field of the Imperial Valley of California, 1939. Dorothea Lange. ★

We used to have our own tents on the truck. Most migrants would live in the tents that were already there in the fields, put up by the company. We got one for ourselves, second-hand, but it was ours. Anglos[8] used to laugh at us. "Here comes the carnival," they'd say. We couldn't keep our clothes clean, we couldn't keep nothing clean, because we'd go by the dirt roads and the dust. We'd stay outside the town.

I never did want to go to town because it was a very bad thing for me. We used to go to the small stores, even though we got clipped[9] more. If we went to the other stores, they would laugh at us. They would always point at us with a finger. We'd go to town maybe every two weeks to get what we needed. Everybody would walk in a bunch. We were afraid. (Laughs.) We sang to keep our spirits up. We joked about our poverty. This one guy would say, "When I get to be rich, I'm gonna marry an Anglo woman, so I can be accepted into society." The other guy would say, "When I get rich I'm gonna marry a Mexican woman, so I can go to that Anglo society of yours and see them hang you for marrying an Anglo." Our world was around the fields.

I started picking crops when I was eight. I couldn't do much, but every little bit counts. Every time I would get behind on my chores, I would get a carrot thrown at me by my parents. I would daydream: If I were a millionaire, I would buy all these ranches and give them back to the people. I would picture my mom living in 5 4 Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships What was one reason why Anglos made fun of migrant workers?

Vocabulary

degrading (di grā´ ding) adj. tending to drag down in character or social status

---

[8] Anglos refers to people who do not have a Hispanic or Latino heritage.

[9] Here, clipped is an informal way of saying "cheated."

Teach

Reading Strategy 4

Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships Answer: The Anglos made fun of the migrant workers because they lived in tents.

ADVANCED Ask: How do you think the Anglos' behavior may have influenced Acuna's decision to help organize the United Farm Workers of America? (Acuna wanted farm workers to have a decent wage so they would not be humiliated by having to live in tents; he may have wanted to give the workers a sense of dignity.)

Literary Element 5

Oral History Remind students that an oral history is a narrative.

Ask: What narrative elements does the last paragraph on this page contain? (It contains characters, events, and reflections on those events.)

View the Photograph ★

Migrant farm workers do back-breaking work, bending over crops for hours; it can also be extremely hot work under the summer sun.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Preteach the following phrases: "pick the harvest"; "sort them into different sizes"; "thinning and hoeing"; "stoop labor." Have students demonstrate.

Ask: What was the workers' posture when they were picking crops? (bent over or on their knees)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Students may better understand the concept of oral history and may improve their reading fluency by reading the selection aloud. Have students take turns reading sections of the selection. Discuss the unconventional uses of grammar and diction.

Teach

Big Idea 1

An Era of Protest Answer: Children were forced to work as many as 15 hours a day. They also had to work all weekend. The teachers showed no understanding of their plight.

Literary Element 2

Oral History Answer: This passage emphasizes the difficulty of the work for an ordinary worker. A history of agriculture might focus more on crop yields and methods.

APPROACHING Say: This passage is told from the perspective of a migrant worker. Ask: From whose perspective might a history of U.S. agriculture be told? (A history of U.S. agriculture might be told from the perspective of a scholar who had studied data and other facts supplied by growers or the government.)

View the Photograph

Many of the photographs in this selection were taken by Dorothea Lange. In the 1930s, the State of California commissioned her to photograph migrant workers. Her moving documentation of workers' poverty led the state to build camps to house needy workers.

Ask: What does the building in the photograph reveal about the lives of field workers in California? (Survival was difficult for workers and their families.)

A migrant Mexican field worker's home on the edge of a frozen pea field in California's Imperial Valley, 1937. Dorothea Lange.

one area all the time and being admired by all the people in the community. All of a sudden I'd be rudely awaken by a broken carrot in my back. That would bust your whole dream apart and you'd work for a while and come back to daydreaming.

We used to work early, about four o'clock in the morning. We'd pick the harvest until about six. Then we'd run home and get into our supposedly clean clothes and run all the way to school because we'd be late. By the time we got to school, we'd be all tuckered out.[10] Around maybe eleven o'clock, we'd be dozing off. Our teachers would send notes to the house telling Mom that we were inattentive. The only thing I'd make fairly good grades on was spelling. I couldn't do anything else. Many times we never did our homework, because we were out in the fields. The teachers couldn't understand that. I would get whacked there also.

School would end maybe four o'clock. We'd rush home again, change clothes, go back to work until seven, seven thirty at night. That's not counting the weekends. On Saturday and Sunday, we'd be there from four thirty in the morning until about seven thirty in the evening. This is where we made the money, those two days. We all worked.

I would carry boxes for my mom to pack the carrots in. I would pull the carrots out and she would sort them into different sizes. I would get water for her to drink. When you're picking tomatoes, the boxes are heavy. They weigh about thirty pounds. They're dropped very hard on the trucks so they have to be sturdy.

The hardest work would be thinning and hoeing with a short-handled hoe. The fields would be about a half a mile long. You would be bending and stooping all day. Sometimes you

An Era of Protest What reasons for protest are implied in these facts and other facts on this page? 1

Oral History What does this oral history tell you that a history of U.S. agriculture might not tell? 2

---

[10] Tuckered out means "exhausted."

Listening and Speaking Practice

Interview Have students develop a brief oral history by interviewing a person who has experienced a notable historic event. Encourage students to choose a person who remembers an event such as the Vietnam War, astronauts landing on the moon, or a natural disaster.

Have students prepare a brief list of questions. Tell students to focus on letting their interviewee speak about the event while they tape-record or take notes on the interview. After they have finished, have students present the most interesting information to the rest of the class. If possible, have students share a selection from their recordings with the class.

A woman cooking in a camp for migrant agricultural workers. Imperial Valley, California, February-March 1937. Dorothea Lange. ★ would have hard ground and by the time you got home, your hands would be full of calluses. And you'd have a backache. Sometimes I wouldn't have dinner or anything. I'd just go home and fall asleep and wake up just in time to go out to the fields again.

I remember when we just got into California from Arizona to pick up the carrot harvest. It was very cold and very windy out in the fields. We just had a little old blanket for the four of us kids in the tent. We were freezin' our tail off. So I stole two brand-new blankets that belonged to a grower. When we got under those blankets it was nice and comfortable. Somebody saw me. The next morning the grower told my mom he'd turn us in unless we gave him back his blankets—sterilized.[11] So my mom and I and my kid brother went to the river and cut some wood and made a fire and boiled the water and she scrubbed the blankets. She hung them out to dry, ironed them, and sent them back to the grower. We got a spanking for that.

I remember this labor camp that was run by the city. It was a POW[12] camp for German soldiers. They put families in there and it would have barbed wire all around it. If you were out after ten o'clock at night, you couldn't get back in until the next day at four in the morning. We didn't know the rules. Nobody told us. We went to visit some relatives. We got back at about ten thirty and they wouldn't let us in. So we slept in the pickup outside the gate. In the morning, they let us in, we had a fast breakfast and went back to work in the fields.[13]

The grower would keep the families apart, hoping they'd fight against each other. He'd have three or four camps and he'd have the

---

[11] Here, sterilized means "free from germs."

[12] POW stands for prisoner of war.

[13] Acuna adds: "Since we started organizing, this camp has been destroyed. They started building housing on it."

Oral History Why would it be unusual to hear this point of view in a traditional history? 3

Teach

Literary Element 3

Oral History Answer: This kind of fact is likely to be known but undocumented. Companies would be unlikely to admit to a policy of encouraging strife among workers.

View the Photograph ★

Ask: How does this photograph reflect Acuna's description of his family life as a youngster? (His family was extremely poor; his mother worked hard to care for the children.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Less proficient readers may have difficulty with such a long selection. Have students examine the organization of the text. Elicit from them the fact that the selection is divided into sections, with type that alternates between italics and Roman. Ask students what benefit there is to having the sections have different type. (It is easier to read.)

Have students work in small groups. Assign each group one section (or two of the shorter sections). Have them read and review its events. Then have the group analyze how the author's organization of the section, as well as key words and repetition of ideas, affects their understanding of the story. Have groups share their findings with the rest of the class.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships Answer: Acuna was angry about his rate of pay. He wanted to become a "first-class citizen." He wanted to be accepted. The uniform seemed to give him dignity.

Big Idea 2

An Era of Protest Answer: He lists several things: pipes supply water for crop irrigation but not for workers' homes; there is medical care for animals but not for workers; the government gives growers land subsidies but doesn't give workers adequate unemployment compensation; there is heat for barns but not for the workers' shacks.

people over here pitted against the people over there. For jobs. He'd give the best crops to the people he thought were the fastest workers. This way he kept us going harder and harder, competing.

When I was sixteen, I had my first taste as a foreman. Handling braceros,[14] aliens, that came from Mexico to work. They'd bring these people to work over here and then send them back to Mexico after the season was over. My job was to make sure they did a good job and pushin' 'em even harder. I was a company man, yes. My parents needed money and I wanted to make sure they were proud of me. A foreman is recognized. I was very naïve. Even though I was pushing the workers, I knew their problems. They didn't know how to write, so I would write letters home for them. I would take 'em to town, buy their clothes, outside of the company stores. They had paid me $1.10 an hour. The farm workers' wage was raised to eighty-two and a half cents. But even the braceros were making more money than me, because they were working piecework.[15] I asked for more money. The manager said, "If you don't like it you can quit." I quit and joined the Marine Corps.

"I joined the Marine Corps at seventeen. I was very mixed up. I wanted to become a first-class citizen. I wanted to be accepted and I was very proud of my uniform. My mom didn't want to sign the papers, but she knew I had to better myself and maybe I'd get an education in the services.

"I did many jobs. I took a civil service exam and was very proud when I passed. Most of the others were college kids. There were only three Chicanos in the group of sixty. I got a job as a correctional officer in a state prison. I quit after eight months because I couldn't take the misery I saw. They wanted me to use a rubber hose on some of the prisoners—mostly Chicanos and blacks. I couldn't do it. They called me chicken-livered because I didn't want to hit nobody. They constantly harassed me after that. I didn't quit because I was afraid of them but because they were trying to make me into a mean man. I couldn't see it. This was Soledad State Prison."

I began to see how everything was so wrong. When growers can have an intricate watering system to irrigate their crops but they can't have running water inside the houses of workers. Veterinarians tend to the needs of domestic animals but they can't have medical care for the workers. They can have land subsidies[16] for the growers but they can't have adequate unemployment compensation for the workers. They treat him like a farm implement. In fact, they treat their implements better and their domestic animals better. They have heat and insulated barns for the animals but the workers live in beat-up shacks with no heat at all.

---

[14] A bracero is a Mexican citizen who comes to the U.S. temporarily to do agricultural labor.

[15] Piecework is work paid by the amount done, rather than by the hour.

[16] Subsidies are grants of money from the government to companies or private individuals for projects that serve the public interest.

1 Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships Why do you think Acuna joined the Marine Corps?

An Era of Protest What does Acuna view as wrong? 2

Writing Practice

SMALL GROUP Biographical Information Roberto Acuna admired Cesar Chavez and worked as a union organizer for the United Farm Workers of America. Have students use the Internet to learn more about Cesar Chavez and the role he played in organizing workers. Have small groups of students research a particular event in Chavez's life that related to his work, such as an important strike or meeting, and present their findings to the class.

Illness in the fields is 120 percent higher than the average rate for industry. It's mostly back trouble, rheumatism and arthritis, because the damp weather and the cold. Stoop labor is very hard on a person. Tuberculosis is high. And now because of the pesticides, we have many respiratory diseases.

The University of California at Davis has government experiments with pesticides and chemicals. To get a bigger crop each year. They haven't any regard as to what safety precautions are needed. In 1964 or '65, an airplane was spraying these chemicals on the fields. Spraying rigs they're called. Flying low, the wheels got tangled on the fence wire. The pilot got up, dusted himself off, and got a drink of water. He died of convulsions. The ambulance attendants got violently sick because of the pesticides he had on his person. A little girl was playing around a sprayer. She stuck her tongue on it. She died instantly.

These pesticides affect the farm worker through the lungs. He breathes it in. He gets no compensation. All they do is say he's sick. They don't investigate the cause.

There were times when I felt I couldn't take it any more. It was 105 in the shade and I'd see endless rows of lettuce and I felt my back hurting . . . I felt the frustration of not being able to get out of the fields. I was getting ready to jump any foreman who looked at me cross-eyed. But until two years ago, my world was still very small.

I would read all these things in the papers about Cesar Chavez[17] and I would denounce[18] him because I still had that thing about becoming a first-class patriotic citizen. In Mexicali they would pass out leaflets and I would throw 'em away. I never participated. The grape boycott[19] didn't affect me much because I was in lettuce. It wasn't until Chavez came to Salinas, where I was working in the fields, that I saw what a beautiful man he was. I went to this rally,[20] I still intended to stay with the company. But something—I don't know—I was close to the workers. They couldn't speak English and wanted me to be their spokesman in favor of going on strike. I don't know—I just got caught up with it all, the beautiful feeling of solidarity. 3

You'd see the people on the picket lines at four in the morning, at the camp fires, heating up beans and coffee and tortillas. It gave me a sense of belonging. These were my own people

An unidentified Mexican shows his permit to cross the border and work in the fields of South Texas under the Bracero program. The federal government has now decided to keep the Mexican Bracero south of the border. August 1964.

---

[17] Cesar Chavez (1927-1993) was an activist and community organizer who helped unionize farm workers.

[18] Here, denounce means "criticize."

[19] The grape boycott was a successful national effort to persuade citizens not to buy table grapes so that growers would give in to workers' demands for better wages and conditions.

[20] Here, a rally is a large meeting for the purpose of creating enthusiasm.

Vocabulary

compensation (kom´ pən sā´ shən) n. payment

Vocabulary

solidarity (sol´ ə dar´ ə tē) n. unity of a group that produces a sense of community

Teach

Vocabulary 3

Context Clues Remind students that they sometimes can figure out unfamiliar words by looking at more familiar words in the text. Have them look at the passage in brackets. Ask: What does the phrase "it gave me a sense of belonging" convey about the meaning of solidarity? (Solidarity indicates closeness and community.)

ADVANCED Ask: What other phrases in the bracketed passage give clues about the meaning of solidarity? ("my own people," "close to the workers")

Political History

Cesar Chavez and the UFW

Cesar Chavez began to organize migrant farm workers in the 1960s. Despite the gains made by Chavez, migrant workers still have a bleak existence today. According to a Department of Labor survey in 2000, 61 percent of farm workers live in poverty.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English learners may have difficulty following the paragraph beginning "I joined the Marine Corps at seventeen." Tell students that by wanting "to become a first-class citizen," Acuna means he wanted to be accepted as a full-fledged American. He believed becoming a Marine would help him achieve that goal.

Point out that after Acuna was discharged from the Marines, he took the civil service exam, a test required for anyone who applies for a government job. A correctional officer is an employee of the state or federal government. Have students look up the terms correct, correction, and correctional in the dictionary to learn what the terms mean.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships Ask: According to Acuna, why is childhood lost? (Children cannot go to school for a full year anywhere, and they cannot form lasting friendships.)

Literary Element 2

Oral History Answer: There is true anger and resentment in Acuna's tone here. There is a kind of name-calling here that is usually omitted from historical accounts.

Ask: Why do you think Acuna is angry? (He is angry because the growers do not treat him and other workers as human beings.)

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 67.

and they wanted change. I knew this is what I was looking for. I just didn't know it before.

My mom had always wanted me to better myself. I wanted to better myself because of her. Now when the strikes started, I told her I was going to join the union and the whole movement. I told her I was going to work without pay. She said she was proud of me. (His eyes glisten. A long, long pause.) See, I told her I wanted to be with my people. If I were a company man,[21] nobody would like me any more. I had to belong to somebody and this was it right here. She said, "I pushed you in your early years to try to better yourself and get a social position. But I see that's not the answer. I know I'll be proud of you."

All kinds of people are farm workers, not just Chicanos. Filipinos started the strike. We have Puerto Ricans and Appalachians too, Arabs, some Japanese, some Chinese. At one time they used us against each other. But now they can't and they're scared, the growers. They can organize conglomerates.[22] Yet when we try organization to better our lives, they are afraid. Suffering people never dreamed it could be different. Cesar Chavez tells them this and they grasp the idea—and this is what scares the growers.

Now the machines are coming in. It takes skill to operate them. But anybody can be taught. We feel migrant workers should be given the chance. They got one for grapes. They got one for lettuce. They have cotton machines that took jobs away from thousands of farm workers. The people wind up in the ghettos of the city, their culture, their families, their unity destroyed.

We're trying to stipulate it in our contract that the company will not use any machinery without the consent of the farm workers. So we can make sure the people being replaced by the machines will know how to operate the machines.

Working in the fields is not in itself a degrading job. It's hard, but if you're given regular hours, better pay, decent housing, unemployment and medical compensation, pension plans[23]—we have a very relaxed way of living. But the growers don't recognize us as persons. That's the worst thing, the way they treat you. Like we have no brains. Now we see they have no brains. They have only a wallet in their head. The more you squeeze it, the more they cry out.

1 If we had proper compensation we wouldn't have to be working seventeen hours a day and following the crops. We could stay in one area and it would give us roots. Being a migrant, it tears the family apart. You get in debt. You leave the area penniless. The children are the ones hurt the most. They go to school three months in one place and then on to another. No sooner do they make friends, they are uprooted again. Right here, your childhood is taken away. So when they grow up, they're looking for this childhood they have lost.

If people could see—in the winter, ice on the fields. We'd be on our knees all day long. We'd build fires and warm up real fast and go back onto the ice. We'd be picking watermelons in 105 degrees all day long. When people have melons or cucumber or carrots or lettuce, they don't know how they got on their table and the consequences to the people who picked it. If I had enough money, I would take busloads of people out to the fields and into the labor camps. Then they'd know how that fine salad got on their table.

---

[21] A company man is a worker who unquestioningly carries out the policies of an employer.

[22] Conglomerates are large corporations made up of many different types of companies.

[23] A pension is a fixed sum paid regularly to someone after retirement.

Vocabulary

stipulate (stip´ yə lāt´) v. to require or demand as part of an agreement

Oral History In what ways does this sound like the real voice of a real person? 2

Study Skills Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Review Remind students that a quick review of any notes or graphic organizers they may have created can help them answer the questions on the "After You Read" page. Have students look at each question in the "Respond and Interpret" section and then locate the place in the narrative where they can find the answers to these detailed questions. The questions under the "Analyze and Evaluate" heading require examples from the text to support students' theses and opinions. The "Connect" questions ask students to use other experience, reading, or research to inform their responses.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What did Acuna do as a foreman? (b)How did he feel about the work?
2. (a)How did Acuna react when people first talked to him about politics and civil rights? (b)Why didn't Acuna get involved at first?

Analyze and Evaluate

3. (a)In your opinion, what was the most difficult part of Acuna's life? Support your answer with details from the story. (b)How does hearing about Acuna in his own voice help you understand the challenges he faced?
4. (a)What was Acuna's childhood like? (b)How well does the interview communicate the details and feelings of that time in his life? Use details from the selection in your answer.
5. Studs Terkel once said, "Poor people never lose hope. They can't afford to." How well does this opinion relate to the life of Roberto Acuna as recounted in Working?

Connect

6. Big Idea An Era of Protest Do you regard this selection more as a work of protest or as an ordinary narrative of a working life? Explain.
7. Connect to Today Acuna describes his working life from several decades ago. Do you know of any similar working conditions today? Explain.

Literary Element Oral History

This oral history is brimming with details, large and small, told almost exclusively in the first person. The use of the pronouns I, we, me, my, and mine help create an intimate voice, a voice that may seem to be talking only to you, or from the pages of a diary.

1. How does the use of the first person help you hear Acuna's voice and understand his history? Cite at least one example.
2. Name one or more other places in the narrative where you feel as if you are listening to a real person. Explain why.

Review: Structure

Structure is the particular order or pattern a writer uses to present ideas. Fiction and nonfiction narratives are mainly chronological in structure. Other nonfiction works often use a combination of structures, including cause and effect, main idea and details, problem and solution, and other patterns.

1. In addition to cause-and-effect and chronological order, what other organizational methods do you find in this interview? Name one method and identify the page and paragraph where you find it.
2. This selection is presented as a series of recollections rather than one simple story told from beginning to end. What advantages and disadvantages do you see to this structure?

Partner Activity Choose one passage of three or more paragraphs and work with a classmate to analyze its structure.

Passage begins with . . .	Pattern or Order
One time, my mom . . .	chronological
My mom was a very . . .
We were once asked . . .

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) He supervised braceros. (b) He felt okay; he was a "company man."
2. (a) He ignored political talk and denounced Cesar Chavez. (b) He felt that union organizing was unpatriotic.
3. (a) Having to work long hours as a child; was ridiculed, moved often, lived in a tent (b) His tone is emotional. You hear the bitterness and sadness.
4. (a) Constant moving, working, and humiliation (b) It gives him the opportunity to retell many life episodes, such as bringing vegetables to a church fair or working when it was 105 degrees in the shade.
5. He was a poor person who did not lose hope: he had different jobs and became involved in the union.
6. Students who say it is an ordinary narrative may cite details about family life, jobs in the fields, and changes in a working life over time. Those who say it is a work of protest may cite comments about the church, the pesticides, or the actions of foremen, growers, and corporations.
7. Some students will note that work for many immigrants and other laborers has not improved much since Acuna's time. Others will explain that there have been advances in worker safety over the years.

Literary Element

1. It brings Acuna closer to the reader and emphasizes that he is a real person. For example, the reader can feel his strong emotions.
2. The section on page 1175 that describes a little girl dying reflects the feelings of a powerless worker.

Review: Structure

1. Main idea and details are used in the paragraph on page 1171 beginning "I wanted to be accepted."
2. Advantages: the piece seems more informal and conversational; the details are more vivid and believable. Disadvantages: lack of clear organization, which makes the events more difficult to follow.

Progress Check

Can students analyze an oral history?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 62.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. B is the correct answer because Acuna's growing up as a farm worker and realizing he didn't fit in with the company helped create the feeling of solidarity with (not estrangement from) his people that motivated him to become a union organizer.

Vocabulary

1. The sentence states that civic is related to citizenship.
2. For a person in such a high position, going to prison would lower him in social status and reputation.
3. A synonym of compensation is pay; "get paid" is used in the sentence.
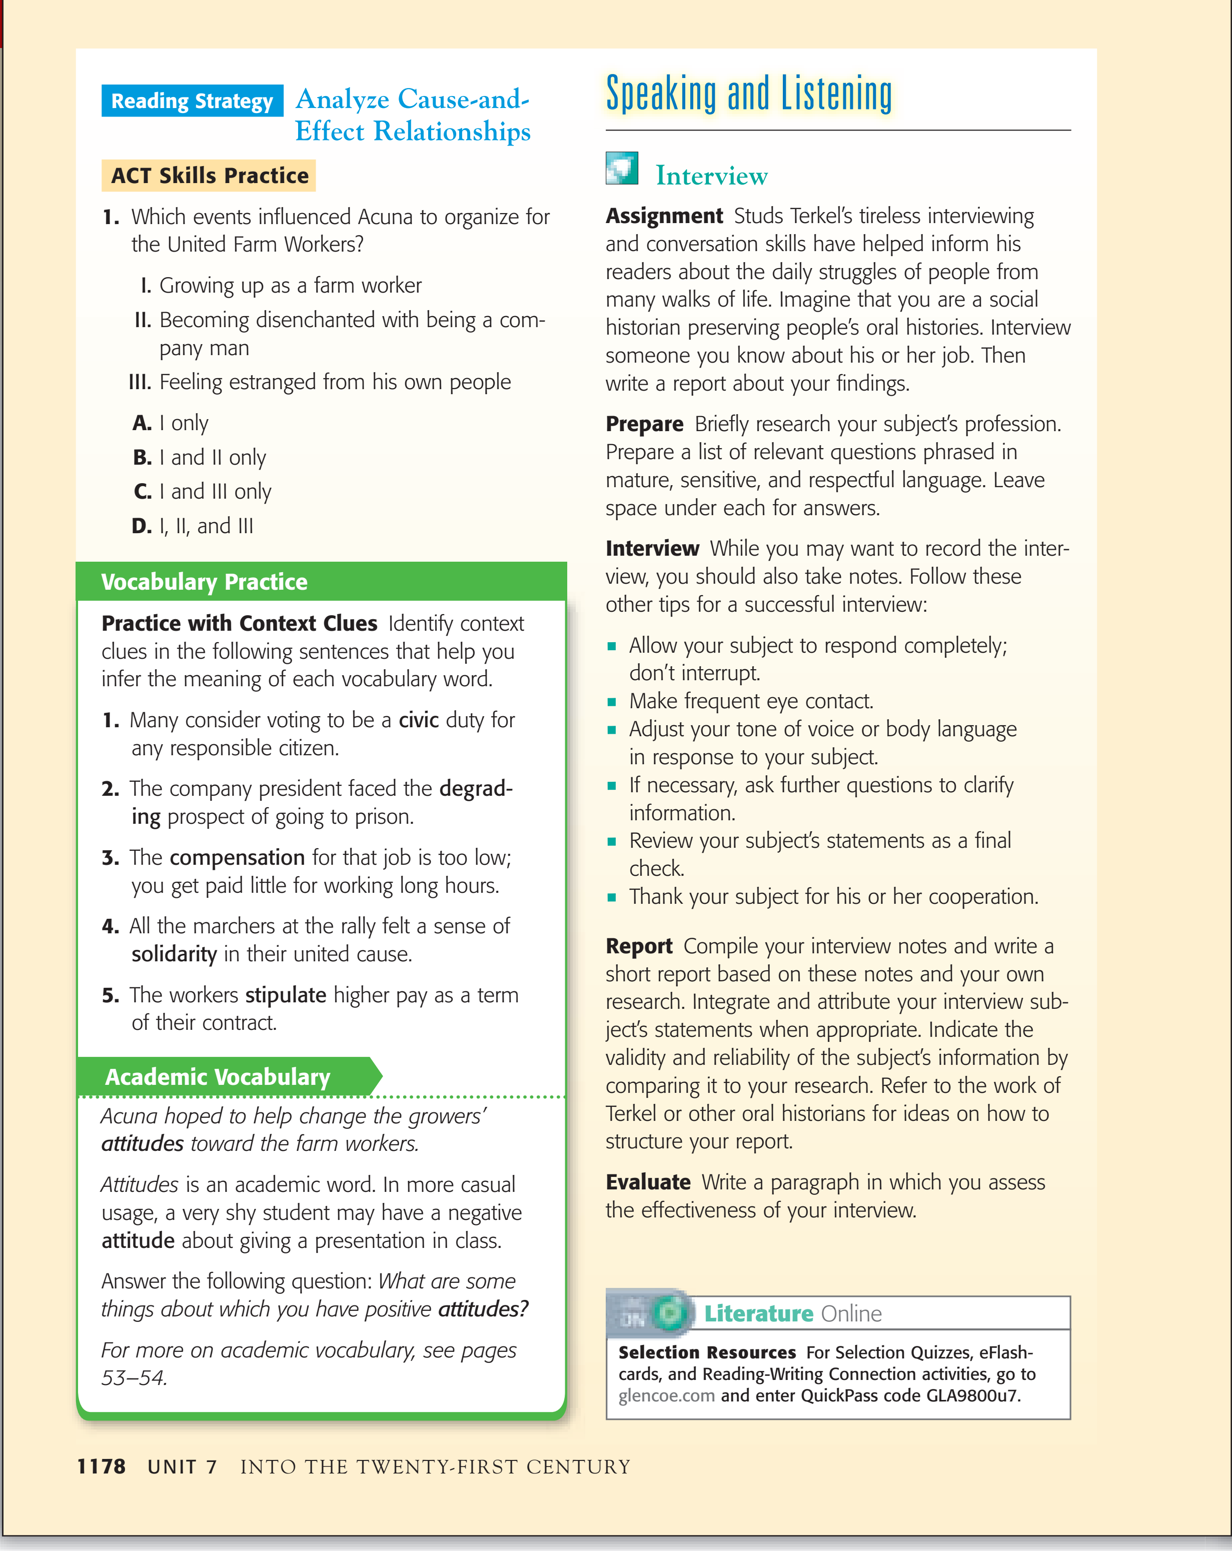
4. Solidarity is a sense of community and is implied by "their united cause."
5. A term of a contract is something workers demand, a word that is a synonym for stipulate.

Academic Vocabulary

Students should name things they feel good about, such as college, career, and interests.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 279–280.



Reading Strategy Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships

ACT Skills Practice

1. Which events influenced Acuna to organize for the United Farm Workers?

   I. Growing up as a farm worker
   II. Becoming disenchanted with being a company man
   III. Feeling estranged from his own people

   A. I only
   B. I and II only
   C. I and III only
   D. I, II, and III

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Identify context clues in the following sentences that help you infer the meaning of each vocabulary word.

1. Many consider voting to be a civic duty for any responsible citizen.
2. The company president faced the degrading prospect of going to prison.
3. The compensation for that job is too low; you get paid little for working long hours.
4. All the marchers at the rally felt a sense of solidarity in their united cause.
5. The workers stipulate higher pay as a term of their contract.

Academic Vocabulary

Acuna hoped to help change the growers' attitudes toward the farm workers.

Attitudes is an academic word. In more casual usage, a very shy student may have a negative attitude about giving a presentation in class.

Answer the following question: What are some things about which you have positive attitudes?

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Speaking and Listening

Interview

Assignment Studs Terkel's tireless interviewing and conversation skills have helped inform his readers about the daily struggles of people from many walks of life. Imagine that you are a social historian preserving people's oral histories. Interview someone you know about his or her job. Then write a report about your findings.

Prepare Briefly research your subject's profession. Prepare a list of relevant questions phrased in mature, sensitive, and respectful language. Leave space under each for answers.

Interview While you may want to record the interview, you should also take notes. Follow these other tips for a successful interview:

- Allow your subject to respond completely; don't interrupt.
- Make frequent eye contact.
- Adjust your tone of voice or body language in response to your subject.
- If necessary, ask further questions to clarify information.
- Review your subject's statements as a final check.
- Thank your subject for his or her cooperation.

Report Compile your interview notes and write a short report based on these notes and your own research. Integrate and attribute your interview subject's statements when appropriate. Indicate the validity and reliability of the subject's information by comparing it to your research. Refer to the work of Terkel or other oral historians for ideas on how to structure your report.

Evaluate Write a paragraph in which you assess the effectiveness of your interview.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Speaking and Listening

Use these criteria when evaluating students' interview reports:

- Does the report indicate background research of the subject's profession?
- Does the report clearly compile, integrate, and attribute the subject's responses?
- Did the student follow Terkel or some other oral historian in the report's structure?

Grammar Workshop

Avoid Run-On Sentences

Literature Connection In "Roberto Acuna, Farm Worker," Studs Terkel uses compound sentences—sentences with two or more main clauses.

> "They didn't know how to write, so I would write letters home for them."

Be careful to avoid run-on sentences, which are two or more complete sentences written as though they were one sentence.

Examples of Run-On Sentences

Two main clauses are separated by only a comma.

Everybody would walk in a bunch, we were afraid.

Two main clauses do not have punctuation between them.

I knew this was what I was seeking I just did not know it before.

Solutions

Break the sentence into two short sentences.

Everybody would walk in a bunch. We were afraid.

I knew this was what I was seeking. I just did not know it before.

Separate the clauses with a semicolon.

Everybody would walk in a bunch; we were afraid.

I knew this was what I was seeking; I just did not know it before.

Separate the clauses with a comma and a coordinating conjunction.

Everybody would walk in a bunch, for we were afraid.

I knew this was what I was seeking, but I just did not know it before.

Revise Rewrite the following, applying one of the solutions shown.

1. When you are picking tomatoes, the boxes are heavy they weigh about thirty pounds.
2. I would pull the carrots out and she would sort them.
3. Sometimes you would have hard ground, by the time you got home, your hands would be full of calluses.

Learning Objectives

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Grammar: Understanding how to avoid run-on sentences.

Vocabulary Terms

A run-on sentence occurs when two or more complete sentences are written as through they were one sentence.

Tip

When writing in a test-taking situation, return to any sentences that present more than one thought. Check carefully to be sure that each clause has proper punctuation and any necessary conjunctions.

Language Handbook

For more about run-on sentences, see the Language Handbook, p. R49.

Literature Online

Grammar For more grammar practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Grammar Workshop

Avoid Run-On Sentences

Focus

Write on the board: The cat oozed around the corner it moved like melting butter.

Have students find the two complete sentences.

Teach

Run-On Sentences Students who have difficulty identifying run-on sentences should read the examples aloud. Explain that in general, pauses mark places where a sentence should end.

Assess

Revise

1. When you are picking tomatoes, the boxes are heavy. They weigh about thirty pounds.
2. I would pull the carrots out, and she would sort them.
3. Sometimes you would have hard ground; by the time you got home, your hands would be full of calluses.

For grammar practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 69.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Established Tell students that while they often speak in run-on sentences and sentence fragments, they must avoid run-on sentences when writing. Divide the class into pairs. Ask each student to take one minute to tell their partner about a time or event that had special significance for them. Then have them write one or two paragraphs of their story. Have partners exchange papers, identifying and correcting any run-on sentences or sentence fragments that they find.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Write on the board three subjects—Roberto Acuna, Studs Terkel, and field workers—and three verbs—worked, wrote, and protested. Have students write three simple sentences, using one subject with one verb. Then have them combine two sentences using two different methods.

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers:
Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Selection Launcher

Selection Focus Transparency 67

Daily Language Practice Transparency 100

Or explain that the Vietnam War was a conflict that cost many lives and divided the nation.

Ask: Why is war considered part of the human experience? What are some of the consequences of war?

Compare Literature About War

Allow students to share their responses to the opening question. Then have students discuss what they know about war or about the writers Tim O'Brien, Tran Mong Tu, Pin Yathay, and Yusef Komunyakaa.

Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Objectives

For pages 1180–1191

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing mood.

Reading: Analyzing concrete details.

Compare Literature About War

War has always been part of the human experience. What would your life be like if it were touched by war? The three writers compared here—Tim O'Brien, Tran Mong Tu, Pin Yathay, and Yusef Komunyakaa—explore how war affects individuals swept up in its complex events. In the following selections, they describe the horrors of war and its tragic consequences.

Ambush by Tim O'Brien .... short story 1181

The Gift in Wartime by Tran Mong Tu .... poem 1186

from Stay Alive, My Son by Pin Yathay .... memoir 1187

Camouflaging the Chimera by Yusef Komunyakaa ..... poem 1190

COMPARE THE Big Idea An Era of Protest

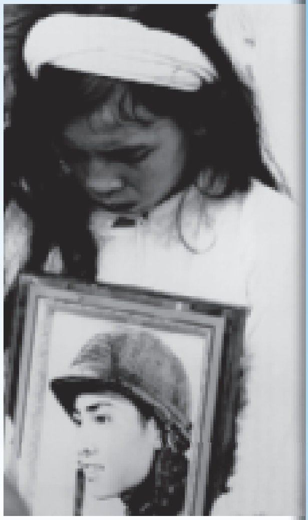
People protest, or voice objections, in different ways. Some hold vigils; others march together, waving banners or placards. Still others create literature to change minds and stir hearts. As you read, ask yourself, How do Tim O'Brien, Tran Mong Tu, Pin Yathay, and Yusef Komunyakaa show the human cost of war?

COMPARE Themes

The theme is the central message of a work of literature—an insight that readers can apply to their own lives. Each of these writers uses literary elements to convey a theme about war and its consequences. As you read, ask yourself, What theme does each writer share with the reader?

COMPARE Cultures

Tim O'Brien, Tran Mong Tu, Pin Yathay, and Yusef Komunyakaa all belong to different cultures, each of which influences the writer's message significantly. Through their choice of words and details, the writers invite readers to enter their worlds, relive their experiences, and share their messages. As you read, ask yourself, What does each selection reveal about the writer's culture?



Literature Online

Author Search For more about Tim O'Brien, Tran Mong Tu, Pin Yathay, and Yusef Komunyakaa, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

Comparing Literature

Literary Elements
- Mood (SE pp. 1182, 1184, 1185; TE pp. 1182, 1184, 1190)
- Theme (TE p. 1189)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Concrete Details (SE pp. 1182, 1183, 1185)
- Make Predictions (TE p. 1188)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Origins (SE pp. 1182, 1185)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Small-Group Discussion (SE p. 1189)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Journal Entry (SE p. 1185)
- Contrast Images (SE p. 1186)
- Visual Display (SE p. 1191)

Study Skills/Research
- Prepare an Oral Report (TE p. 1191)

Before You Read

Ambush

Meet Tim O'Brien

(born 1946)

☆ Recognized as one of the major writers on the Vietnam War, Tim O'Brien has earned both critical and popular acclaim for his novels, short stories, and nonfiction works. His writing often describes the experiences of ordinary soldiers in Vietnam and explores philosophical issues, such as the meaning of courage, duty, and honor.

As a political science major at Macalester College in Minnesota, O'Brien protested the U.S. military involvement in Vietnam. Then, shortly after his college graduation, O'Brien received a draft notice. For the rest of that summer, he struggled with his conscience trying to decide what to do. He considered escaping to Canada, where many other war protesters had fled. Finally, he decided to report for induction and enter the service, thereby honoring a family tradition.

> "The object of storytelling, like the object of magic, is not to explain or to resolve, but rather to create and to perform miracles of the imagination."
>
> —Tim O'Brien

Soldier and Writer Beginning in 1968, O'Brien spent just over a year in Quang Ngai Province, Vietnam, as an infantryman and as a clerk. He became a sergeant and earned several medals, including the Purple Heart, an award given to U.S. soldiers wounded or killed in battle. While stationed in Vietnam, O'Brien kept a journal, recording his observations and impressions. These journal entries later furnished material for his books. His first book, If I Die in a Combat Zone, Box Me Up and Ship Me Home (1973), is a memoir of his tour of duty in Vietnam.

Writer of War Stories In 1978, O'Brien wrote a novel called Going After Cacciato (kä chä´ tō), about a soldier who simply decides to walk away from the Vietnam War one day. O'Brien won the National Book Award for this novel in 1979. He was also nominated for a Pulitzer Prize for his short-story collection, The Things They Carried (1990).

O'Brien's fiction has been compared to that of Stephen Crane, Ernest Hemingway, Joseph Heller, and others who have written about war. Like those authors, he builds a picture of soldiers' daily lives by compiling masses of sensory details. Unlike Crane and Hemingway, he intertwines fantasy with reality in his war stories.

O'Brien has said that he probably will continue to write about the Vietnam War because he believes that the emotions in war and those in ordinary life are almost identical. His recent novels include In the Lake of the Woods (1994) and Tomcat in Love (1999). Each of these novels alludes to events that occurred in Vietnam.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Tim O'Brien, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Before You Read

Focus

Ask students to think about situations in which they reacted without thinking. Tell them to reflect on how they felt later about what happened. As they read, have students consider how the narrator feels about a situation that happened in his past.

Political History ☆

The Vietnam War Shortly after the division of Vietnam into two parts in 1954, a civil war began. The communist government in North Vietnam sought to reunify with South Vietnam. The conflict escalated into a war that pitted the government of North Vietnam and its allies in the South against the government of South Vietnam and the United States. American troops withdrew from Vietnam in 1975.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established List on the board some of the war-related words from the introduction and the selection to prepare students for reading: draft, induction, infantryman, Purple Heart, tour of duty, soldier, ambush, grenade, muzzle. Have students research three of these words, using a dictionary and other reference material. Have students write a few sentences about each word, explaining its meaning, and including at least one fact about the meaning of this word during the period of the Vietnam War. Give students an example, Say: The draft is a system for selecting individuals for compulsory military service. A lottery system that determined who would be called first to service was used in 1969. It had not been used since 1942, during World War II. Have volunteers share their explanations with the class.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

When the narrator's daughter asks him if he has ever killed anyone, he lies and says "no." Then he recalls his encounter with an enemy soldier during the Vietnam War. On watch one night, the narrator saw a young enemy soldier walking up a path. The narrator threw a grenade, killing the enemy soldier. The narrator still wonders if he did the right thing by throwing the grenade.

Vocabulary

Action Verbs Explain that most verbs are called action verbs, even though they do not necessarily describe movement or activity. The verbs in the vocabulary list involve very little movement, yet they are precise and strong. Have students compare the meanings of the verbs and their synonyms to explore their differences: grope vs. feel; ponder vs. think; gape vs. stare; dwell vs. think.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Point out the similarity in meaning between the words ponder and dwell. Both involve thinking thoroughly about a subject. Have students use a dictionary to find the meanings and explain the differences between the words.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

Why do some experiences continue to haunt one's memory? Write a journal entry in which you describe a significant memory that has stayed with you.

Build Background

From 1965 to 1973, U.S. troops fought alongside the South Vietnamese in their struggle against the communist Viet Cong from the North.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea An Era of Protest

During the Vietnam War, student protests were common in the U.S. and in South Vietnam. As you read, ask yourself, How is this story a protest against the Vietnam War?

Literary Element Mood

The mood of a story or poem is the feeling or atmosphere that a writer creates. Writers develop a mood with carefully chosen words and details that vividly describe the setting and events As you read, ask yourself, What words and details help to create the mood?

Reading Strategy Analyze Concrete Details

Concrete details are vivid sensory details, or evocative words and phrases that appeal to one or more of the five senses. To convey fear, a writer might include concrete details such as a clenched jaw, a dry mouth, or sweaty palms. As you read, ask,

- What do the details emphasize?
- What does this emphasis imply?

Tip: Note Details Use a chart to record concrete details in the story and what they imply.

Details	Implications
"the dense brush along the trail"	The narrator's hiding place seems safe and well-hidden.

Vocabulary

grope (grōp) v. to feel about uncertainly with the hands; to search blindly; p. 1183 I groped in the dark while searching for my keys.

stooped (sto͝opt) adj. bent forward and downward; p. 1184 Stooped with fatigue, he looked as though he carried a heavy load on his shoulders.

ponder (pon´ dər) v. to think about thoroughly and carefully; p. 1184 In combat, soldiers have no time to reflect and ponder; instead, they must react quickly without thinking.

gape (gāp) v. to stare with the mouth open, as in wonder or surprise; p. 1184 Stunned and shaken, the soldier gaped at his fallen comrade.

dwell (dwel) v. to think about at length; p. 1184 Even if one tries not to dwell on painful memories, they sometimes refuse to go away.

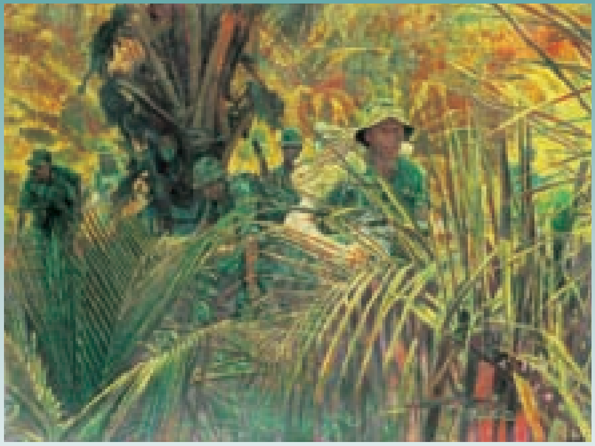
Tip: Word Origins The study of word origins and their development is called etymology. Etymologies are often found in dictionary entries and can help you understand the modern meaning of a word. If you know that the word ponder, for example, came from a word that meant "to weigh", you can understand how someone who ponders a difficult decision can almost feel its heaviness.

Reading Practice

Create Mood Students may benefit from evaluating the impact of words on the mood of a piece of writing. Display the following sentences:

- As he strolled into the sunny hall, he was greeted by the scent of baking bread.
- As he ran into the stifling hall, he was assaulted by the sour odor of burning coffee.

Ask: What mood does each sentence evoke? (first sentence: comfort, happiness; second sentence: discomfort, distaste) What words contribute to these moods? (strolled, sunny, greeted; stifling, assaulted, sour, burning) Have students work with a partner to choose a sentence from one of the selections in this section and assess the mood it creates.



Indiana Rangers: The Army Guard in Vietnam, 1984. Mort Künstler. Oil on canvas, 24 x 32 in. Collection National Guard Bureau, Pentagon, Washington, DC. ★

AMBUSH

Tim O'Brien

When she was nine, my daughter Kathleen asked if I had ever killed anyone. She knew about the war; she knew I'd been a soldier. "You keep writing these war stories," she said, "so I guess you must've killed somebody." It was a difficult moment, but I did what seemed right, which was to say, "Of course not," and then to take her onto my lap and hold her for a while. Someday, I hope, she'll ask again. But here I want to pretend she's a grown-up. I want to tell her exactly what happened, or what I remember happening, and then I want to say to her that as a little girl she was absolutely right. This is why I keep writing war stories:

He was a short, slender young man of about twenty. I was afraid of him—afraid of something—and as he passed me on the trail I threw a grenade that exploded at his feet and killed him.

Or to go back:

Shortly after midnight we moved into the ambush site outside My Khe. The whole platoon[1] was there, spread out in the dense brush along the trail, and for five hours nothing at all happened. We were working in two-man teams—one man on guard while the other slept, switching off every two hours—and I remember it was still dark when Kiowa shook me awake for the final watch. The night was foggy and hot. For the first few moments I 1 felt lost, not sure about directions, groping for my helmet and weapon. I reached out and found three grenades and lined them up in front of me; the pins had already been straightened for quick throwing. And then for maybe half an hour I kneeled there and waited. Very gradually, in tiny slivers, dawn began to break through the fog, and from my position in the brush I could see ten or fifteen meters up the trail. The mosquitoes were fierce. I remember slapping at them, wondering if I should wake up Kiowa and ask for some repellent, then thinking it was a bad

Analyze Concrete Details Why does the author include this detail? 2

Vocabulary

grope (grōp) v. to feel about uncertainly with the hands; to search blindly

---

[1] A platoon is a military unit, usually commanded by a lieutenant, that forms part of a company.

Comparing Literature

Teach

Vocabulary 1

Use Context Clues Ask: What contextual clues can you use to define the word groping? (Possible answer: I felt lost, not sure about directions, . . . I reached out and found. . . .)

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Concrete Details
Answer: This detail suggests that the narrator is tense and anxious, anticipating danger. He not only has straightened the pins of the three grenades but has lined them up for easy use.

View the Art ★

Have students study the face of the soldier in the foreground of the painting.

Ask: Which emotions expressed by the narrator of "Ambush" are conveyed by the soldier's face? (Possible answer: Like the narrator, the soldier shows anxiety and fear.)

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 5.8
DRP: 53
Lexile: 940

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students, pp. 255–268
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 255–268
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 255–268

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Explain that making predictions helps readers become more involved in the literature. When readers make a prediction, they have a stake in the outcome of the story. Making accurate predictions helps readers understand and predict events in literature and life.

Ask students to pause at the end of page 1183. Point out that the narrator is "on watch" and has three grenades ready to throw.

Ask: What do you think will happen next? Have students work independently to make predictions, listing the facts they used to make each prediction.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Mood Answer: The fog creates an eerie, threatening feeling, suggesting an environment where anything is possible.

Literary Element 2

Mood Say: O'Brien uses carefully chosen words to create the mood of this story.

Ask: What are some words, phrases, or images that help create the mood of this story? How would you describe the mood? (Possible answer: "The young man coming out of the fog" or "the grenade seeming to freeze above me for an instant" are details that create the story's tense, anxious, and worried mood.)

Big Idea 3

An Era of Protest Answer: These sentences suggest that war is senseless. Killing occurs for no good reason.

Political History ☆

Guerrilla Warfare Much of the fighting in Vietnam consisted of guerrilla warfare. Guerrilla comes from the Spanish term meaning "little war." Guerrilla tactics are surprise actions meant to harass and sabotage the enemy, executed by small groups of fighters. During the Vietnam War, the North Vietnamese army supported guerrilla fighters, known as the Vietcong, who fought against South Vietnamese and U.S. soldiers.

---

idea, then looking up and seeing the young man come out of the fog. He wore black clothing and rubber sandals and a gray ammunition belt. His shoulders were slightly stooped, his head cocked to the side as if listening for something. He seemed at ease. He carried his weapon in one hand, muzzle down, moving without any hurry up the center of the trail. There was no sound at all—none that I can remember. 1 In a way, it seemed, he was part of the morning fog, or my own imagination, but there was also the reality of what was happening in my stomach. I had already pulled the pin on a grenade. I had come up to a crouch. It was entirely automatic. I did not hate the young man; I did not see him as the enemy; I did not ponder issues of morality or politics or military duty. I crouched and kept my head low. I tried to swallow whatever was rising from my stomach, which tasted like lemonade, something fruity and sour. I was terrified. There were no thoughts about killing. The grenade was to make him go away—just evaporate—and I leaned back and felt my mind go empty and then felt it fill up again. I had ☆ already thrown the grenade before telling myself to throw it. The brush was thick and I had to lob it high, not aiming, and I remember the grenade seeming to freeze above me for an instant, as if a camera had clicked, and I remember ducking down and holding my breath and seeing little wisps of fog rise from the earth. The grenade bounced once and rolled across the trail. I did not hear it, but there must've been a sound, because the young man dropped his weapon and began to run, just two or three quick steps, then he hesitated, swiveling to his right, and he glanced down at the grenade and tried to cover his head but never did. It occurred to me then that he was about to die. I wanted to warn him. The grenade made a popping noise—not soft but not loud either—not what I'd expected—and there was a puff of dust and smoke—a small white puff—and the young man seemed to jerk upward as if pulled by invisible wires. He fell on his back. His rubber sandals had been blown off. There was no wind. He lay at the center of the trail, his right leg bent beneath him, his one eye shut, his other eye a huge star-shaped hole.

3 It was not a matter of live or die. There was no real peril. Almost certainly the young man would have passed by. And it will always be that way.

Later, I remember, Kiowa tried to tell me that the man would've died anyway. He told me that it was a good kill, that I was a soldier and this was a war, that I should shape up and stop staring and ask myself what the dead man would've done if things were reversed.

None of it mattered. The words seemed far too complicated. All I could do was gape at the fact of the young man's body.

Even now I haven't finished sorting it out. Sometimes I forgive myself, other times I don't. In the ordinary hours of life I try not to dwell on it, but now and then, when I'm reading a newspaper or just sitting alone in a room, I'll look up and see the young man coming out of the morning fog. I'll watch him walk toward me, his shoulders slightly stooped, his head cocked to the side, and he'll pass within a few yards of me and suddenly smile at some secret 2

1 Mood What feelings does this detail stir in you?

3 An Era of Protest What attitude toward war do these sentences reveal?

Vocabulary

stooped (stoopt) adj. bent forward and downward ponder (pon′ dər) v. to think about thoroughly and carefully

Vocabulary

gape (gāp) v. to stare with the mouth open, as in wonder or surprise dwell (dwel) v. to think about at length

Reading Practice

Flashbacks The central action of "Ambush" is told within the framework of a flashback. Explain that the narrator takes a series of steps back in time to tell the story.

- Have students create a chart with the following headings:

Time Table for "Ambush"
Paragraph 1	Paragraph 2

- As students read, have them write when the events in those paragraphs take place.

Ask: When does the author expect to give his daughter the real answer to her question? (when she is grown up)

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. If you could speak with the narrator about his experience in Vietnam, what would you talk about?
2. (a)How does the narrator respond to his daughter's question? (b)In your opinion, why does he lie to her?
3. (a)What does the narrator do when he sees the young man? (b)What does this episode suggest about the role of a soldier in wartime?
4. (a)What does Kiowa tell the narrator, and how does the narrator feel about this advice? (b)What does this exchange suggest to you about the narrator's values?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. Do the narrator's reactions to the killing of an enemy soldier seem convincing to you? Explain.
6. A frame story is a story that either surrounds or introduces a more important story. What effect does O'Brien achieve by using a frame story?

Connect

7. Big Idea An Era of Protest In what ways does this story protest the Vietnam War?
8. Connect to Today How do you think a soldier today might respond to the actions of the narrator? Explain.

Literary Element Mood

To determine mood, look closely at scene-setting descriptions and reactions of characters to events.

1. How would you describe the mood of "Ambush"? What details contribute to it?
2. How does the mood of the story affect its overall impact on you? Explain.

Reading Strategy Analyze Concrete Details

Review the concrete details that describe the young man's appearance in the story.

1. What is the effect of reading about what the young man wore, carried, and did immediately before and after the narrator tosses the grenade?
2. How do the concrete details in the final paragraph help you understand the narrator?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Origins Studying the etymology, or origin and history, of a word can help you better understand and explore its meaning. Create a word map for each of these vocabulary words. Include the word's definition and etymology, and write a sentence in which you use the word correctly. Use a print or online dictionary for help.

grope stooped ponder gape dwell

Writing

Write a Journal Entry Imagine you are the narrator's daughter Kathleen, now an adult, and your father has just told you this story. How would you react? Write a journal entry in which you record your thoughts and feelings about your father's actions in Vietnam, as well as his decision to postpone telling you the truth. Does he deserve forgiveness? Why or why not?

Comparing Literature

After You Read

Assess

1. Students should show understanding of the narrator's dilemma.
2. (a) He tells her he did not kill anyone. (b) He thinks she is too young to hear the truth.
3. (a) Throws a grenade (b) Soldiers act on instinct based on their training.
4. (a) He says the man would have died anyway and would have done the same thing if the situation were reversed. The narrator does not accept this. (b) The narrator values human life.
5. Yes. He was trained to do as he did, yet he feels deep remorse.
6. He draws the reader in and shows how the past affects him.
7. It shows that war inflicts guilt and remorse on those who kill.
8. Having had combat experience, he or she would probably relate to the actions of the narrator.

Reading Strategy

1. The details make him seem real and human, not an abstract "enemy."
2. The young man appears gentle and vulnerable. In the narrator's memory, he survives.

Literary Element

1. Tense, unsettling; Mosquitoes, a strange place at night, foul taste.
2. It keeps readers nervous as they try to guess what comes next.

Progress Check

Can students analyze mood?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 77.

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' journal entries:

- Is the entry written from the narrator's daughter's perspective?
- Does the journal entry explain whether or not the father deserves forgiveness?

Vocabulary

grope (Old English grápian means "to use the hands.")

stooped (Old English stúpian means "to bow down.") ponder (Middle French ponderer means "to assess mentally.") gape (Old Norse gapa means "to open the mouth."

dwell (Old English dwellan means "to lead astray.")

Focus

Summary

A woman is alone after the death of her husband, a soldier. She contrasts mementos they left each other.

Teach

Big Idea 1

An Era of Protest Say: Keep this question in mind as you read: How does the poem convey that war has lasting consequences even for those who do not participate in battle?

APPROACHING Ask students to locate words or phrases that indicate that the speaker's husband has recently died. (buried in your new grave, your tomb still green, still shining)

Assess

Quickwrite

Evaluate students' writing based on these criteria:

- Does the student discuss the contrast between the gifts given by the speaker and those given by the dead person?
- Does the student address the impact of the contrasting images on the reader?

The Gift in Wartime

Tran Mong Tu

Translated by Vann Phan

I offer you roses 1
Buried in your new grave
I offer you my wedding gown
To cover your tomb still green with grass

You give me medals
Together with silver stars
And the yellow pips[1] on your badge
Unused and still shining

I offer you my youth
The days we were still in love
My youth died away
When they told me the bad news

You give me the smell of blood
From your war dress
Your blood and your enemy's
So that I may be moved

I offer you clouds
That linger on my eyes on summer days
I offer you cold winters
Amid my springtime of life

You give me your lips with no smile
You give me your arms without tenderness
You give me your eyes with no sight
And your motionless body

Seriously, I apologize to you
I promise to meet you in our next life
I will hold this shrapnel[2] as a token

Build Background

"War is a terrible thing," says Tran Mong Tu (trän mông to͞o), who has had firsthand experience with the war in Vietnam. By the time the United States became heavily involved in the Vietnam War in the 1960s, Tran worked for the Associated Press (a large U.S. news service) in Saigon, the capital of South Vietnam. When the United States pulled its troops out of South Vietnam in 1975, the Associated Press evacuated its Vietnamese employees because it feared communist reprisal against those working for U.S. interests. In Tran's poem, the speaker contrasts her gifts to a dead loved one and his gifts to her.

Quickwrite

Much of the power of this poem comes from the writer's use of contrasting images. In two or three paragraphs, discuss these contrasting images and comment on their overall impact.

---

[1] Pips are military badges of rank worn on the shoulder.

[2] Shrapnel are fragments scattered from an exploding shell or bomb.

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Analyze Images Have students work with a partner to make a list of pairs of words or phrases that create contrasting images in the poem. Have one student write a word or phrase that creates an image, and then have the other student write a word or phrase that creates a contrasting image. (roses–medals; wedding gown–badge; youth–blood) Ask: What affect is created by the contrasts between the speaker's gifts and her husband's? (She offers hope and a future; he gives violence and death.) How does it contribute to the meaning of the poem? (War affects more than just soldiers.)

Build Background

Pin Yathay (pin yä´ tī) was born in the village of Oudong, just north of Phnom Penh, Cambodia's capital and largest city. When the Khmer Rouge, a communist political organization, seized power in Cambodia in 1975, Pin Yathay knew he was in danger because of his position as an employee of the state. As the situation worsened, he and his family joined the refugees who clogged the roads, seeking safety away from the cities. Eventually, most of Pin Yathay's family died of malnutrition, disease, or murder. The Khmer Rouge, which controlled the government until 1979, executed an estimated one to three million citizens—anyone it felt was a threat. Pin Yathay survived this nightmare and lived to tell audiences throughout the world about his ordeal.

from

Stay Alive, My Son

Pin Yathay
with John Man

My first reaction was to give way to despair, to give up, to surrender to my fate. Everything was lost, I was going to die anyway, I knew that. There was no escape. We swelled up[1] and died. It was the law of nature, unalterable. We all died one after another. There was nothing to be done. What did it matter? I would die, and the sooner the better, there in the house with my wife and son.

Then the true enormity of my situation struck me. There would be no such choice. Even that tiny freedom would be taken from me. There would be no gentle, natural passing with my family beside me. They were going to slaughter me, like an animal, away in the forest.

At that thought, I felt another sensation, a surge of raw energy that drove out all other feelings. The instinct for self-preservation took over, and I suddenly, desperately, wanted to stay alive. I told myself: "Pull yourself together! Sharpen up! Get out of this! You've always succeeded before! This is your last chance! Do something!"

I began to think. What was to be done? Leave alone? But there was Nawath across the hut, lying prostrate,[2] his limbs swollen. I could hardly bear the thought of leaving him and Any. But neither could I imagine escaping with them. Better they should have a enormity (i nôr´ mə tē) n. outrageousness; state of being monstrous

Vocabulary

---

[1] Their bodies swelled up, or became bloated, from malnutrition and vitamin deficiencies.

[2] Prostrate means "flat on the ground," in this case from exhaustion.

Comparing Literature

Focus

Summary

Pin Yathay, a government worker facing the prospect of death by execution during the Khmer Rouge genocide in Cambodia, struggles with a life-and-death decision regarding his wife, Any, and his son, Nawath. Pin Yathay and his wife decide to leave their son to die alone in a hospital rather than take him with them into hiding.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 6.5
DRP: 49
Lexile: 650

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

AAVE Approaching-level students who use African American vernacular English may have difficulty with pronouncing "th" sounds, replacing them with "d" sounds at the beginning of words and "f" sounds in the middle or end of words. The first four paragraphs of the selection have a frequent occurrence of "th" words. Read the first paragraph of the selection aloud, properly pronouncing the "th" words. For the next three paragraphs, have student volunteers read one sentence at a time, clearly enunciating the "th" words.

Dialogue Have student pairs act out the scene between the narrator and his wife as they contemplate their decision. Have students explain how they use vocal inflections, gestures, or other physical cues to express the emotions depicted in the scene.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Exposition Point out that the narrator uses exposition in key places in the memoir.

Say: Why might the author describe his wife in the following way: "But as I glanced up at her, and saw her sweet and wasted features . . ." (The narrator wants the reader to know that the wife is suffering fom hunger and that he cares deeply for her.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Review the meaning of exposition: material that introduces the story's characters, settings, and situation. Have students identify other examples of expository text in the story.

Literary History ☆

Khmer Rouge Khmer Rouge is the name of the communist movement that ruled Cambodia from 1975 to 1979. The movement took power after attacking the city of Phnom Penh, the capital city of Cambodia. Pol Pot, the military leader of the Khmer Rouge, became prime minister of Cambodia. The Khmer Rouge believed that educated, skilled, professional people were their enemy, and they executed as many as one and a half million Cambodians.

chance to live here than die with me. Better that I should get away, and give myself a chance to live, or at least die on my own terms.

It was all very simple. My mind was made up. I had to tell Any of my decision, that very evening.

After we had eaten, as we sat on the floor opposite each other, with Nawath sleeping behind his cloth partition across the hut, I prepared myself to speak. I was certain of my 1 course, but that did not make me any less nervous. It was a terrible thing to do to us as a family, a terrible thing to impose on Any. But as I glanced up at her, and saw her sweet and wasted features lit dimly by the flickering flames of the cooking fire, I knew there was no other course. It was purposeless to stay on there merely to face death. They would be alone all too soon, anyway.

"Any, my dearest," I said, "I have something to tell you." She looked up, without surprise, and I realized she had been expecting a decision of some kind. She too must have known that I could not stay. Speaking softly in order not to wake Nawath—I could see his little bloated face round the edge of the partition—I began to explain. I was doomed, I ☆ said. All the former high officials had disappeared. I was trained in the West. I was irredeemable[3] in the eyes of the Khmer Rouge. They would come for me in a week, and that would be that. "But you're a woman, Any, if you were alone with Nawath I don't think they would harm you."

She said nothing, but I saw her gaze turn to one of horror.

"You can live on here with Nawath," I went on. "It's the only answer. I'll take my chances in the forest. If I succeed, we'll meet again. But I have to go soon. In one week, it'll be too late."

"You'll leave?" she said. "Leave me here with Nawath?" And suddenly she began to sob as if she were being torn apart.

"Yes, my dearest. It's the only way," I said, desperately. For the first time, I began to realize that she had not come to the same conclusion as me. "What did you think?"

"Not that. Not that."

I said nothing, for there was only one other course open, the one that was impossible to contemplate. She would see that in a few minutes, I thought, and accept my decision.

But no. With hesitations and bitter sobs, she went on, "It's impossible, my dearest Thay . . . I don't want to be separated from you . . . I prefer to die with you rather than to stay here . . ." As I listened to her in silence, unable to say anything to stem the slow, whispered outpouring of words and sobs and tears, I couldn't believe that she understood what she was saying. Soon, soon, she would see, and know why I had to go alone. "I cannot live without you!" she sobbed. "I prefer to die quickly and cleanly, with you."

She paused, wracked by sobs. I waited for her to say: But if you think it is for the best, of course that is how it must be.

Silence.

To my astonishment, I began to realize she meant what she said. For the first time in our lives, she was refusing to accept my judgment of what was best.

The silence dragged on, broken only by her gasps. She was looking at me. I could see the highlights cast by the fire on her cheeks and in her eyes. Still she said nothing further. I knew then she had understood all along what she was saying.

I felt the strength of her, as well. Once, she had asked my opinion even before buying a dress. Now she had been hardened by experience. She knew what she was doing, knew that in any event she and Nawath would die, knew that we were in the process not of choosing life over death, but of choosing different ways of dying.

---

[3] Irredeemable here refers to being unable to be changed or reformed to accept the new government.

Reading Practice

Make Predictions This memoir shows the profound human suffering caused by war by focusing on the effects of war on one man's family. Ask students to pause at the end of page 1187 and predict what the narrator will decide to do. Have them pause again at the end of the first column on page 1188 and predict what Any will decide to do. Finally, tell them to pause at the bottom of the second column on page 1188 and predict what the couple will do with their child. As they read, ask students to consider the magnitude of the decision forced upon the narrator and his wife.

And she knew that, having chosen, there was one more fearful choice still to make. There seemed nothing I could do or say to help her through it. It was too awful for me to put into words. If I spoke the words, it would turn something that was merely a nightmarish fear into dreadful reality. I could not say them.

"But," she said at last. "But what shall we do with Nawath?"

Yes: those were the words I had refused to utter.

"Tell me, Thay dearest. What shall we do with Nawath?" She broke down again as she struggled to express the thought. "He can't come with us. We can't carry him, and he can't walk far. They would catch us and kill us before . . ." She paused, her face working to control her emotion. "We . . . we have to leave him behind. But . . . what are we going to do with him if we leave him?" She broke off again, overcome by sobs.

Could she really contemplate leaving Nawath? It seemed an extraordinary thing for a mother to do. I realize now that she had made a mother's supreme sacrifice. People say that for a mother the supreme sacrifice is to die with her child. No—if death is inevitable, the mother's supreme sacrifice is to abandon her child, if thereby she can prolong her own life.

But I felt her resolve, and knew there was nothing I could say to make her change her mind.

I did not understand all that right then and there. But I felt her resolve, and knew there was nothing I could say to make her change her mind. 2 After what we had been through, after being made one body with her by what we had endured together, it never even occurred to me to argue her out of her decision. I don't think I could have done so. 2 I simply had to accept that things were different now.

Any was still sobbing. "What do we do with Nawath?" she asked again, and fell silent. I knew from her tone of voice, and the silence, that she already knew the answer, for there was only one. Knowing it, again neither of us could bring ourselves to express it. Again, expressing it would make it irrevocable.

I glanced at Nawath, still asleep. I felt I wanted to go to him, stroke his head, provide some comfort for him, or myself. But I did not move. I couldn't risk waking him. I glanced back at Any. Her eyes were lowered, as if waiting for me to pronounce sentence.

After another eternal minute, the burden of silence became intolerable. I felt it as an accusation against me for evading responsibility.

"You know there is only one thing to do," I whispered. "We must take him to the hospital."

The hospital, where people went only to die.

☆

Vocabulary

inevitable (i nev´ ə tə bəl) adj. incapable of being avoided or evaded

Vocabulary

irrevocable (i rev´ ə kə bəl) adj. not possible to undo ensure (en shoor´) v. to make certain; guarantee

Discussion Starter

Meet with a small group to discuss whether Pin Yathay and Any made the only reasonable choice in their situation or not. Consider whether they acted according to their values or whether they were simply trying to save themselves. Summarize your discussion for the rest of your class.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Before participating in small group discussions, give students an opportunity to write down their initial responses to the discussion prompts. Restate the first section of the prompt as a question. Ask: Did Pin Yathay and Any make the only reasonable choice in their situation or not? Give students several minutes to write their responses. Ask: Did they act according to their values, or were they simply trying to save themselves? Give students several minutes to write their responses. Next, have students identify passages from the text that support their responses. Once students have some ideas and some support, have them meet in small groups to discuss.

Comparing Literature

Teach

Literary Element 2

Theme Ask: How does the author convey the feeling of doom that genocide creates? (The author uses words such as resolve and irrevocable*, whose meanings imply finality, when describing the circumstances in which he finds himself.)*

Political History ☆

Pin Yathay Pin Yathay lost seventeen family members during the genocide, including his wife and children. He left Nawath with a kindly woman at the hospital. After the fall of the Khmer Rouge in 1979, Pin Yathay spent years searching for Nawath, but without success.

Assess

Discussion Starter

Evaluate students' summaries based on these criteria:

- Does the summary include evidence for the evaluation of the parents' decision?
- Does the summary show that students based their conclusions on an understanding of self-preservation?

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Concrete Details Ask students to identify references to animals in the poem. (tiger, hummingbird, songbirds, rock apes, chameleons) Ask: Why do you think Komunyakaa included so many references to animals? (To make the actions of the soldiers seem animalistic rather than human or civilized; to emphasize the natural, jungle-like setting)

Quickwrite

Students may identify the mood as being dark or suspenseful. The vivid action verbs (wove, hugged, wrestling) contribute to the development of suspense.

Camouflaging the Chimera

Yusef Komunyakaa

Build Background

Like Tim O'Brien, Yusef Komunyakaa served in the American armed forces during the Vietnam War. Although Komunyakaa went to Vietnam as a correspondent and managing editor for the Southern Cross, a military newspaper, he did not publish any poetry about the war until 1988. His poem "Camouflaging the Chimera" carefully outlines how soldiers dressed to become invisible in the Vietnamese landscape. In ancient Greek mythology, the chimera was a fire-breathing monster that destroyed the regions of Lycia and Caria. Today, the word chimera also refers to an illusion or an imagined creation.

We tied branches to our helmets.
We painted our faces & rifles with mud from a riverbank, blades of grass hung from the pockets of our tiger suits.[1] We wove ourselves into the terrain, content to be a hummingbird's target.

We hugged bamboo & leaned against a breeze off the river, slow-dragging with ghosts

from Saigon to Bangkok,[2] with women left in doorways reaching in from America.
We aimed at dark-hearted songbirds.

In our way station of shadows rock apes[3] tried to blow our cover, throwing stones at the sunset.
Chameleons

crawled our spines, changing from day to night: green to gold, gold to black. But we waited till the moon touched metal, till something almost broke inside us. VC[4] struggled with the hillside, like black silk wrestling iron through grass.

We weren't there. The river ran through our bones. Small animals took refuge against our bodies; we held our breath, ready to spring the L-shaped ambush, as a world revolved under each man's eyelid.

1

---

1. Tiger suits are black-and-green striped camouflage uniforms
2. Saigon (sī gon´)—now called Ho Chi Minh City—was the capital of South Vietnam. Bangkok (bang´ kok) is the capital of Thailand.
3. Here, rock apes refers to the monkeys who live in the Vietnamese mountains.
4. VC refers to the Vietcong forces.

Quickwrite

Write for a few minutes about the mood, or emotional quality, of "Camouflaging the Chimera." How would you describe the mood of the poem? What words, images, or ideas help create this mood?

Reading Practice

Poetry Analysis Have students analyze the poem by asking them to select what they think is the most important word in the poem. Tell them they may choose only one word. Have students write their word at the top of the page, and then write two or three sentences defending their selection. Have students come to the board to write their word. Discuss words that appear frequently on the board, asking students to comment. Be sure students explain how the word represents a larger theme found in the poem. (Students' words and explanations will vary; some may choose tiger, target, waited, almost, ambush, chameleons. Initiate a discussion to focus on the relationship of the word to the meaning of the whole poem.)

Wrap-Up: Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

- Ambush by Tim O'Brien
- The Gift in Wartime by Tran Mong Tu
- from Stay Alive, My Son by Pin Yathay
- Camouflaging the Chimera by Yusef Komunyakaa

COMPARE THE Big Idea An Era of Protest

Writing Activity The writers of these selections created literary works to protest the war in Vietnam and Cambodia. Review each selection. Then write a brief essay discussing how each writer reveals the human cost of war. Cite evidence from each selection to support your ideas.

MASS GRAVE
OF 450 VICTIMS

Marker at the extermination camp of Choeung Ek.

COMPARE Themes

Group Activity Though Tim O'Brien, Tran Mong Tu, Pin Yathay, and Yusef Komunyakaa all write about the tragedy of war, each conveys a distinct theme, or message, about this subject. With a small group, discuss the following questions:

1. What message about war does each writer share with the reader?
2. What literary elements does each writer use to convey his or her message?
3. Which of the selections, in your opinion, makes the most effective protest against war? Support your answer.

COMPARE Cultures

Visual Display Culture influences a writer's ideas and choice of subject, words, and images. Tim O'Brien and Yusef Komunyakaa grew up in the U.S.; Tran Mong Tu, in Vietnam; and Pin Yathay, in Cambodia. Create a visual display to accompany one of the four selections. Include images that reflect the writer's culture, such as a collage of photographs or works of art. If possible, present your display orally to your classmates.

LOG ON Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain that images can enhance understanding of literature.

Ask: Why is the image on this page appropriate to the quotation from each selection? (The image commemorates the terrible result of war—death.)

Wrap-Up: Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Assess

Compare the Big Idea

Writing Activity

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' essays:

- Does the essay describe how each selection explains the horrors of war?
- Does the essay use evidence from the texts to support the claim?

Compare Themes

1. O'Brien: sensitive people who kill in combat are haunted forever; Tran: war devastates the survivor of a loved one, replacing love with tokens of bloodshed, loss, and death. Pin Yathay: war makes people do things that they would not ordinarily consider; Komunyakaa: in war, violence and chaos hide beneath a false exterior, such as the soldiers efforts to blend into their environment.
2. O'Brien: frame story, dialogue, mood, suspense, description; Tran: imagery, repetition, apostrophe; Pin Yathay: dialogue, description, rhetorical questions' Komunyakaa: mood, alliteration, imagery, surrealism.
3. Students should support their views with details.

Compare Cultures

Students' visual displays should

- show planning;
- include words and/or images that reflect the culture of a selection;
- be visually appealing; and
- include a sheet for comments.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 281–282.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 101

Or explain that the Vietnam War killed millions of Vietnamese civilians and greatly damaged their country.

As students read, have them consider how Merwin's poems make the reader think about death and loss.

Cultural History ☆

War Protest When W. S. Merwin was chosen to receive the Pulitzer Prize in 1971, he saw this as not just an honor, but also an opportunity. After being selected, he published a letter in The New York Review of Books, entitled, "On Being Awarded the Pulitzer Prize." In his essay, he explained his opposition to the Vietnam War and indicated that he would donate his prize money to anti-war efforts.

Before You Read

The Asians Dying, Separation, and When You Go Away

Meet W. S. Merwin

(born 1927)

"It makes me angry to feel that the natural world is taken to have so little importance," American poet W. S. Merwin once said. It is no wonder then that the pervading themes of Merwin's poetry revolve around our self-imposed separation from nature and the terrible consequences that come from humanity's irresponsible treatment of the natural world.

> "Poetry . . . tries to convey the sense of what one has seen to those to whom it may matter, including, if possible, one's self."
>
> —W. S. Merwin

William Stanley Merwin was born in New York City, but grew up in Pennsylvania. His father was a Presbyterian minister, and at the age of five, Merwin was writing hymns for his father's services. When Merwin was a teenager, he met Ezra Pound, who advised him to write seventy-five lines of poetry a day and to learn languages. Merwin took this advice to heart. In 1947, at age twenty, Merwin graduated from Princeton University with a degree in English. In 1952, he published his first poetry collection, A Mask for Janus.

Style and Substance Merwin's early poetry was inspired by Biblical stories and classical myths. These early poems adhered to traditional narrative forms and regular meter patterns. By the 1960s, ☆ Merwin had become a pacifist, environmentalist, and an anti-Vietnam War activist. His poetry became more personal as he delved deeper into the failures of humanity. His language became more relaxed and colloquial. He abandoned punctuation and traditional narrative forms in favor of free verse. In 1967, the protest movement against the Vietnam War had grown in the United States as the war itself had escalated and the numbers of casualties had increased. That year, Merwin published The Lice, a collection of angry poems in which he lashed out against society's lack of moral responsibility. Included in this collection was "The Asians Dying," considered Merwin's most overt anti-Vietnam War poem. The poems in his next collection, The Carrier of Ladders, for which he won the Pulitzer Prize for poetry in 1971, begin to show signs of hope for the human condition.

Beyond Anger Merwin's later poetry moved beyond the angry, "searing, dumb vision" that guided him in The Lice. "One can't live only in despair and anger," he said, "without eventually destroying the thing one is angry in defense of."

In his long and illustrious career, Merwin has published more than 30 volumes of poetry, contributed to a variety of magazines and anthologies, written three plays, and translated the works of classical writers such as Dante and contemporary poets such as Pablo Neruda. In reviewing one of Merwin's recent poems, a critic commented that the poem "will not recompense the lives lost to history. It will not stop wars or stay death. Merwin, for all his acute awareness of loss, writes not to alter the world but to honor it."

LOG ON Literature Online

Author Search For more about W. S. Merwin, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

The Asians Dying, Separation, and When You Go Away

Literary Elements
- Figurative Language (SE pp. 1193, 1194, 1196)
- Free Verse (SE p. 1196)

Vocabulary Skills
- Analogies (SE p. 1193, 1197)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 1197)

Reading Skills
- Clarify Meaning (SE pp. 1193, 1195, 1197)
- Make Critical Judgments (TE p. 1194)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Literature Groups (SE p. 1197)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poems

Why does the pleasurable experience of living include loss? Freewrite for several minutes about the nature of our diverse experiences of war and love.

Build Background

American poetry became more political and radical during the 1960s. It abandoned the formal tone and rigid meter of previous eras and became more open and free. Many poets spoke out against social injustice. Merwin's poetry changed during this time period. He eliminated punctuation in an attempt to "transmit [poetry] more directly in words and do it in a way that carried more of the cadences of pure language, of speech."

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea An Era of Protest

As you read, ask yourself, How does Merwin protest the Vietnam War and the absence of a loved one?

Literary Element Figurative Language

Figurative language is descriptive language that goes beyond its literal meaning to convey ideas and emotions. For example, the phrase, "my words are the garment" is a metaphor that is not literally true. As you read, ask yourself, How does Merwin use figurative language to create images and feelings?

Reading Strategy Clarify Meaning

Free verse does not always use conventional punctuation or sentence patterns. As a result, poems written in this form can be challenging. As you read, ask, What does this part of the poem mean? Reread lines that are confusing to clarify meaning. Be sure to read the footnotes for further help. If you still cannot figure out what something means, ask questions to clarify.

Tip: Use a chart to note your questions after rereading.

Poem	Questions	Answer
"The Asians Dying"	What does "Over the watercourses / Like ducks in the time of the ducks" mean?

Learning Objectives

For pages 1192–1197

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing figurative language.

Reading: Clarifying meaning.

Vocabulary

possessor (pə zes´ ər) n. one who has or takes control of something; owner; p. 1194 As the possessor of all the land in the region, she determined how the area was to be developed.

pointless (point´ lis) adj. making no sense; p. 1194 They can't hear you; it's pointless to speak.

garment (gär´ mənt) n. a piece of clothing; p. 1195 The fabric of his outer garment had been worn thin.

Tip: Analogies Analogies are comparisons that are based on the relationships between things or ideas. For example, the relationship between "garment" and "wardrobe" is the same as the relationship between "chapter" and "book": garments and chapters are both sections of wardrobes and books, respectively.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In "The Asians Dying," the speaker provides images of the futility of the Vietnam War. "Separation" and "When You Go Away" both center on the feeling of loss caused by the absence of a loved one.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 84–89.

Vocabulary

Roots Explain to students that understanding a vocabulary word's origin can help them learn the nuances of the word. Both clothing and garment have Anglo-Saxon roots, but their roots mean, respectively, "cloth covering" and "equip." Ask: How does the root of the word garment help explain the greater formality of the word? (A garment has a specific purpose, like a piece of equipment.) Have students research the derivations of possessor and pointless.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Students may benefit from reviewing figurative language. Display the following sentences:

- The small dog looked like a dust mop.
- My sister climbs trees like a squirrel.
- When it comes to general knowledge, my grandfather is an encyclopedia.
- After purchasing a number of expensive gifts, Dana was drowning in debt.

Remind them that figurative expressions are not literally true but are used for descriptive effect, to convey emotions or ideas. A grandfather cannot literally be an encyclopedia, but the comparison emphasizes the extent of his knowledge. As students read, have them note the examples of figurative language that they find. When they have finished, discuss with the class how the comparisons added to their understanding.

Teach

Big Idea 1

An Era of Protest

Say: Keep these questions in mind as you read: What is Merwin protesting in "The Asians Dying"? (the devastation of war) Who does Merwin hold responsible? (all of humanity)

APPROACHING Tell students that people were sharply divided about the Vietnam War. Merwin is among wanting an end to the war.

Big Idea 2

An Era of Protest

Answer: The possessors are those who wage war. The ghosts of the people and the land that they destroyed in war will haunt them forever. This war will be their only reality.

Literary Element 3

Figurative Language

Answer: The disappearing nights and the dead are compared to bruises. Both go away, "but nothing is healed." This comparison suggests that something untouchable and almost unknowable is changed by war. Humanity bears responsibility for the wounds of war forever.

THE ASIANS DYING

W. S. Merwin

Untitled, 2000. Brenda Chrystie.

When the forests have been destroyed their darkness remains 1
The ash the great walker follows the possessors
Forever
Nothing they will come to is real
Nor for long
Over the watercourses[1]
Like ducks in the time of the ducks[2]
The ghosts of the villages trail in the sky
Making a new twilight

Rain falls into the open eyes of the dead
Again again with its pointless sound
When the moon finds them they are the color of everything

The nights disappear like bruises but nothing is healed
The dead go away like bruises
The blood vanishes into the poisoned farmlands
Pain the horizon
Remains
Overhead the seasons rock
They are paper bells
Calling to nothing living

The possessors move everywhere under Death their star
Like columns of smoke they advance into the shadows
Like thin flames with no light
They with no past
And fire their only future

---

[1] Watercourses are streams of water, such as a river or a brook.

[2] The phrase ducks in the time of ducks recalls the Asian belief that the year of one's birth is influenced by the traits of particular animals.

An Era of Protest Who are the possessors? What does Merwin think is going to happen to them? 2

Figurative Language What are the similes in these lines comparing? What ideas about war do these comparisons suggest? 3

Vocabulary

possessor (pə zes´ ər) n. one who has or takes control of something; owner pointless (point´ lis) adj. making no sense

Reading Practice

Make Critical Judgments Making critical judgments focuses students' attention on the structure, language, theme, images, and other elements of a poem.

- Have students brainstorm a list of literary elements to use as a basis for evaluating and judging a poem, such as rhyme, rhythm, figures of speech, mood, and imagery.
- Have each student choose three or four elements to judge "The Asians Dying." Have students provide specific examples from the poem to support their critical judgments.

Separation

W. S. Merwin

Your absence has gone through me
Like thread through a needle.
Everything I do is stitched with its color.

When You Go Away

W. S. Merwin

When you go away the wind clicks around to the north
The painters work all day but at sundown the paint falls
Showing the black walls
The clock goes back to striking the same hour
That has no place in the years

And at night wrapped in the bed of ashes
In one breath I wake
It is the time when the beards of the dead get their growth
I remember that I am falling
That I am the reason
And that my words are the garment of what I shall never be 4
Like the tucked sleeve of a one-armed boy

Clarify Meaning What does the simile in line 12 mean? 5

Vocabulary

garment (gär´ mənt) n. a piece of clothing

Teach

Literary Element 4

Figurative Language

Ask: How does Merwin use figurative language in "Separation" to express how the absence of a loved one affected the narrator? (Merwin uses a vivid image—being pierced like the eye of a needle—to describe the painful feeling of loss. He says that the loved one's absence affects everything he does.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Ask: What are the characteristics of thread going through a needle that are similar to missing someone? (The thread passes from one side of the needle to the other; loss is like a hole in your body or heart. Thread is attached to the needle, and his feeling of loss follows him everywhere.)

Reading Strategy 5

Clarifying Meaning

Answer: The image of an armless sleeve represents the speaker's feeling of a lack of fulfillment and of helplessness. It also continues the motif of blending the bleakness of the speaker's emotional state with the devastation of the Vietnam War.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English language learners may more readily visualize the figurative language Merwin uses if they are familiar with the similarities between the terms that he is comparing. Ask: How do bruises go away? How is that process similar to the way the "dead go away"? (Both are slow processes, "blood vanishes," a bruise may leave a lasting mark.) What are some purposes of a garment? How are words like a garment? (Garments cover the body and can signify something about a person. Words can be like a protective covering over emotions.)

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) They are destroyed. (b) The farmlands are poisoned, completing the cycle of destruction.
2. (a) The paint falls off the walls, and the clocks strike. (b) Nothing
3. Although war appears to resolve conflicts, it does not. The effects of war linger, even when not visible.
4. (a) Neither day nor night; symbolizes confusion or uncertainty (b) Reflects emptiness and loss; the darkness of night reinforces the sense of doom.
5. (a) A beloved person who has died or left (b) The speaker has deep feelings of loss.
6. (a) Might create sympathy or anger (b) The theme of the disappearance of conscience could support the protests.
7. Some students will argue that the message of war's destruction is relevant today. Others may say the specific Vietnam geography makes the poem less relevant to today's conflicts.

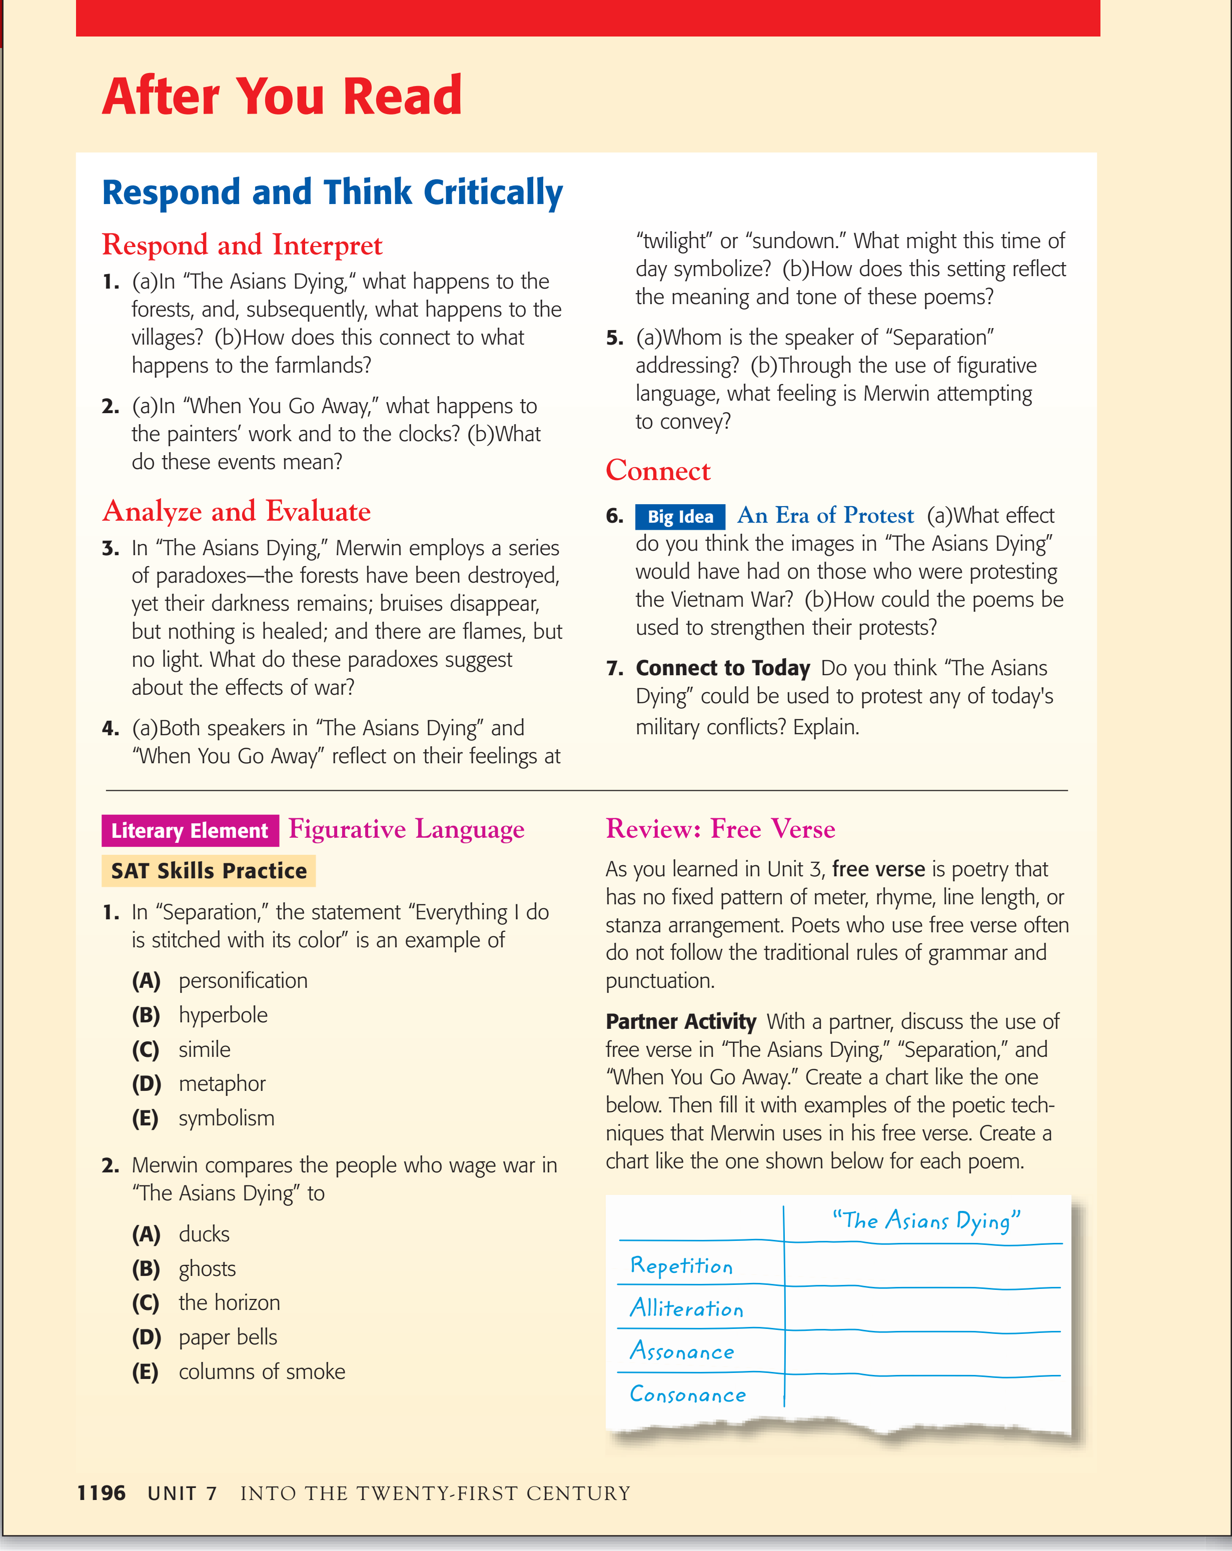
Literary Element

1. D is the correct answer because Merwin compares the far-reaching effect of someone's loss with cloth being stitched with thread.
2. E is the correct answer because Merwin says, "The possessors move everywhere under Death their star / Like columns of smoke they advance into the shadows"

Progress Check

Can students analyze figurative language?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 90.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)In "The Asians Dying," what happens to the forests, and, subsequently, what happens to the villages? (b)How does this connect to what happens to the farmlands?
2. (a)In "When You Go Away," what happens to the painters' work and to the clocks? (b)What do these events mean?

Analyze and Evaluate

3. In "The Asians Dying," Merwin employs a series of paradoxes—the forests have been destroyed, yet their darkness remains; bruises disappear, but nothing is healed; and there are flames, but no light. What do these paradoxes suggest about the effects of war?
4. (a)Both speakers in "The Asians Dying" and "When You Go Away" reflect on their feelings at "twilight" or "sundown." What might this time of day symbolize? (b)How does this setting reflect the meaning and tone of these poems?
5. (a)Whom is the speaker of "Separation" addressing? (b)Through the use of figurative language, what feeling is Merwin attempting to convey?

Connect

6. Big Idea An Era of Protest (a)What effect do you think the images in "The Asians Dying" would have had on those who were protesting the Vietnam War? (b)How could the poems be used to strengthen their protests?
7. Connect to Today Do you think "The Asians Dying" could be used to protest any of today's military conflicts? Explain.

Literary Element Figurative Language

SAT Skills Practice

1. In "Separation," the statement "Everything I do is stitched with its color" is an example of
   - (A) personification
   - (B) hyperbole
   - (C) simile
   - (D) metaphor
   - (E) symbolism
2. Merwin compares the people who wage war in "The Asians Dying" to
   - (A) ducks
   - (B) ghosts
   - (C) the horizon
   - (D) paper bells
   - (E) columns of smoke

Review: Free Verse

As you learned in Unit 3, free verse is poetry that has no fixed pattern of meter, rhyme, line length, or stanza arrangement. Poets who use free verse often do not follow the traditional rules of grammar and punctuation.

Partner Activity With a partner, discuss the use of free verse in "The Asians Dying," "Separation," and "When You Go Away." Create a chart like the one below. Then fill it with examples of the poetic techniques that Merwin uses in his free verse. Create a chart like the one shown below for each poem.

	"The Asians Dying"
Repetition
Alliteration
Assonance
Consonance

Review: Free Verse

	"The Asians Dying"	"Separation"	"When You Go Away"
Repetition	again; like bruises	through	I am
Alliteration	forests, follows, forever; bruises, blood; poisoned, pain	through, thread	when, wind, work, walls, wake
Assonance	follows possessors; like, time	is stitched, its	at, wrapped, ashes
Consonance	forests, destroyed; rain, open, again, pointless, sound, moon, finds	thread, needle	wind, around, sundown; black, clock, back

Reading Strategy Clarify Meaning

The main concepts of Merwin's poems may be difficult to understand because of the irregular sentence patterns and a lack of punctuation. Look back at the questions you wrote in your chart from page 1193. Reread the lines that were challenging and try to put them in your own words.

1. What is the main message of "The Asians Dying"?

2. In "When You Go Away," how does the speaker feel about the absent person?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Analogies Choose the word pair that best completes the analogy.

1. possessor : owner ::
  a. army : soldier
  b. supplier : consumer
  c. manager : supervisor

2. pointless : significant ::
  a. remote : distant
  b. responsible : trustworthy
  c. meaningful : irrelevant

3. garment : shirt ::
  a. tool : pliers
  b. hat : head
  c. rain : snow

Academic Vocabulary

Merwin's objective in "The Asians Dying" is to make people accept responsibility for the disastrous effects of war.

Objective is an academic word. A medical researcher's objective in studying a virus may be to develop a vaccine against it.

To further explore the meaning of this word, answer the following question: What is your objective in attending high school?

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Speaking and Listening

Literature Groups

Assignment With a small group, discuss the meaning of "The Asians Dying." Try to reach a consensus on whether the poem's theme is relevant today.

Prepare Before your group meets, review "The Asians Dying" and identify its theme(s). Then use resources such as the Internet and newspapers to search for current events that relate to the poem's message.

Discuss Your group members may disagree on the overall message of "The Asians Dying." So together, use a chart such as the one below to note inferences you each made about the poem's meaning. Then, compare examples of current events that you have individually researched to come to a consensus on the poem's relevance today.

Quote	Inference
"When the forests have been destroyed their darkness remains"	Remnants of nature will serve as reminders of man's destruction.

Report Have one group member present your consensus to the class or explain why no consensus was reached. He or she should defend your group's opinion with evidence from your inference chart and research. Presenters should speak clearly and loudly.

Evaluate Write a paragraph in which you assess the effectiveness of your discussion. Address both your individual role and the group as a whole.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. Humanity has no past and no future as long as we continue to engage in war.

2. The speaker believes that the absent person was the source of order in the world; without the loved one, the world is in chaos.

Vocabulary

1. c 2. c 3. a.

Academic Vocabulary

Students should mention their ultimate goals in attending high school, which might be graduating or being accepted into a college.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 283–284.

Speaking and Listening

Use these criteria when evaluating students' participation in the literature group:

- Did the student listen attentively to the opinions of others?
- Did the student express carefully thought-out opinions that linked to Merwin's poem?
- Did the student organize information by using a graphic organizer and research?

Focus

Summary

The selection is the text of Maya Lin's design proposal for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. It describes the memorial wall and the materials to be used to build it and contains Lin's views on memorializing the dead.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Political Assumptions Have students construct a chart to organize their data. Charts should

- include examples of direct statements Lin makes to express underlying political opinions or assumptions
- include examples of implied statements of political opinion or assumptions
- paraphrase the underlying political assumptions and opinions in Lin's proposal

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 13
DRP: 66
Lexile: 1310

Artistic Perspective
on the Vietnam War

PROPOSAL FOR the Vietnam Veterans Memorial

Maya Lin

National Design Award Winner

Learning Objectives

For pages 1198–1201

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objective:

Reading: Analyzing political assumptions.

Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to find out how Lin hopes that her memorial will inspire visitors.

Build Background

Architect Maya Lin was only twenty-one years old when she submitted this proposal for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. Unlike most war memorials, it features no statues of heroic soldiers. Instead, it is a black granite wall that first rises from and then falls to the earth. On its surface are the names of the American men and women who were killed. "I thought about what death is, what a loss is," Lin explains. "A sharp pain that lessens with time but can never quite heal over. A scar. The idea occurred to me there on the site. Take a knife and cut open the earth, and with time the grass will heal it."

1 Reading Strategy

Analyze Political Assumptions

Analyzing political assumptions involves carefully examining political beliefs that have shaped an author's message. An author may state each opinion or assumption directly or may merely imply it. As you read, ask yourself, How does Lin reveal her beliefs?

Walking through this park-like area, the memorial appears as a rift[1] in the earth—a long, polished black stone wall, emerging from and receding into the earth. Approaching the memorial, the ground slopes gently downward, and the low walls emerging on either side, growing out of the earth, extend and converge at a point below and ahead. Walking into the grassy site contained by the walls of this memorial we can barely make out the carved names upon the memorial's walls. These names, seemingly infinite in number, convey the sense of overwhelming numbers, while unifying those individuals into a whole. For this memorial is meant not as a monument to the individual, but rather as a memorial to the men and women who died during this war, as a whole.

The memorial is composed not as an unchanging monument, but as a moving composition, to be understood as we move into and out of it; the passage itself is gradual, the descent to the origin slow, but it is at the origin that the meaning of this memorial is to be fully

---

[1] A rift is a deep crack or slash.

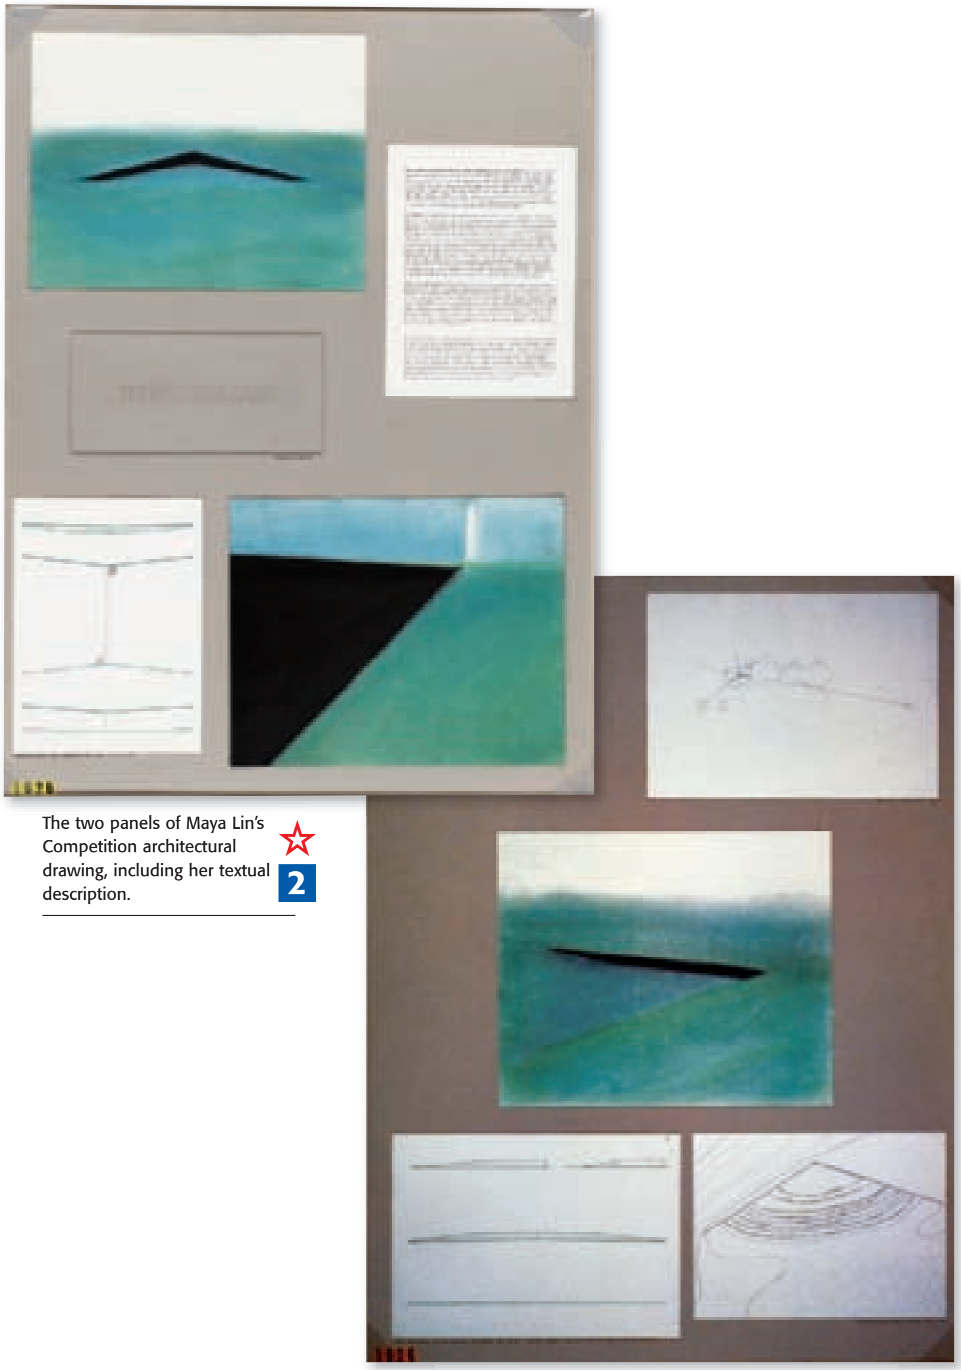
Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP Analyze a Proposal Proposals are examples of persuasive writing. When Maya Lin wrote this proposal, her intention was to persuade the selection committee to choose her design for the memorial. In persuasive writing, the author can use three types of appeals which were introduced on page 112 (The Rhetoric of Revolution). Review the following rhetorical appeals with students:

- appeal to reason, logic, and evidence
- appeal to emotions, such as fear, pride, or hate
- ethical appeal, or persuasion based on what we ourselves, moral philosophers, or the majority of people in our culture think is right

Have students read the first paragraph. Ask: What type of appeal is she making? (emotional) How does she support her appeal? (descriptive and concrete details explain the emotional symbolism of different elements of the monument)

As students continue reading, have them identify other persuasive appeals in Lin's essay.



The two panels of Maya Lin's Competition architectural drawing, including her textual description. ☆ 2

Artistic Perspective
on the Vietnam War

Teach

Big Idea 2

An Era of Protest Explain that even the Vietnam Veterans Memorial was not exempt from protest. Have students discuss their initial impression of Lin's drawings.

Ask: How well does the design honor the men and women who died in the Vietnam War? (Some students may find the design ineffective because it does not portray acts of heroism. Others may find the design appropriate because the overwhelming number of names highlights the many lives lost in the war.)

Political History ☆

Controversial Design Lin's design was initially met with heated public opposition. Some critics said the design lacked a sense of heroism. Among the protesters were Vietnam veterans and politicians, including U.S. Secretary of the Interior James Watt, who had the right of veto over the project. Finally, a compromise was reached by adding a bronze sculpture of American soldiers and the American flag to the site.

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 93–101.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Write a Persuasive Letter Discuss how people's positions on the Vietnam War, affected the response to the proposed memorial. Ask students to write a letter that a person might have sent to U.S. Secretary of the Interior James Watt to support or protest building the memorial. Tell students that their letters should contain a thesis sentence completing the statement, "The Department of the Interior should _____ (approve/reject) Maya Lin's design because _____." Explain that their letters should include three reasons or examples to support their argument. Encourage students to use each type of rhetorical appeal listed on page 1198 to make their letters as persuasive as possible.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Visualize Have students discuss how the architect depicts the war as "coming full circle" where its beginning and end join. Ask a student with artistic ability to make a drawing of the wall on the board, using the sketches on page 1199 as a guide. Then help students understand where the names of the first person and last person to die appear on the wall.

View the Photograph ★

Answer: The photograph captures the diminishing line of the Wall until it "disappears" into the earth at the end aligned with the Washington Monument. Also visible is the seemingly endless list of names of those who died in the war. The names contrast with the polished, black granite wall.

The Vietnam Memorial at night, with the Washington Monument in the distance.

View the Art What aspects of the Vietnam Memorial are captured in this photograph? ★ understood.[2] At the intersection of these walls, on the right side, at this wall's top is carved the date of the first death. It is followed by the names of those who have died in the war, in chronological order. These names continue on this wall, appearing to recede into the earth at the wall's end. The names resume on the left wall, as the wall emerges from the earth, continuing back to the origin, where the date of the last death is carved, at the bottom of this wall. Thus the war's beginning and end meet; the war is "complete," coming full circle, yet broken by 1 the earth that bounds the angle's open side, and contained within the earth itself. As we turn to leave, we see these walls stretching into the distance, directing us to the Washington Monument to the left and the Lincoln Memorial to the right, thus bringing the Vietnam Memorial into historical context. We, the living, are brought to a concrete realization of these deaths.

Brought to a sharp awareness of such a loss, it is up to each individual to resolve or come to terms with this loss. For death is in the end a personal and private matter, and the area contained

---

[2] The monument stands in a long, grassy park in Washington, DC. Visitors standing at the monument can look to the left and right and see the faraway ends of the park. At one end stands a tall white obelisk, the Washington Monument, and at the other end stands the Lincoln Memorial, with its famous statue of the seated Abraham Lincoln.

Writing Practice

Reflective Essay Have students write a reflective essay about the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and its relevance today.

- Review the writing process steps: Prewriting, Drafting, Revising, Editing/Proofreading, and Publishing/Presenting.
- Provide images of the memorial in books and on the Internet.
- Have students practice reading their essays aloud to partners. Encourage partners to offer suggestions for making the presentations more effective.
- Allow time for students to share their essays with the class.

within this memorial is a quiet place meant for personal reflection and private reckoning.[3] The black granite walls, each 200 feet long, and 10 feet below ground at their lowest point (gradually ascending towards ground level) effectively act as a sound barrier, yet are of such a height and length so as not to appear threatening or enclosing. The actual area is wide and shallow, allowing for a sense of privacy, and the sunlight from the 2 memorial's southern exposure along with the grassy park surrounding and within its wall contribute to the serenity of the area. Thus this memorial is for those who have died, and for us to remember them.

The memorial's origin is located approximately at the center of this site; its legs each extending 200 feet towards the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial. The walls, contained on one side by the earth, are 10 feet below ground at their point of origin, gradually lessening in height, until they finally recede totally into the earth at their ends. The walls are to be made of a hard, polished black granite, with the names to be carved in a simple Trajan[4] letter, 3/4 inch high, allowing for nine inches in length for each name. The memorial's construction involves recontouring the area within the wall's boundaries so as to provide for an easily accessible descent, but as much of the site as possible should be left untouched (including trees).[5] The area should be made into a park for all the public to enjoy.

---

[3] Private reckoning suggests deep, personal thoughts about the magnitude of the war dead.

[4] Trajan is the name of the font that Lin has chosen for the letters in the names.

[5] Lin specifies here that some recontouring, or excavating, of the land will be necessary in order to accommodate the downward slope of the granite walls.

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Write a brief summary of the main ideas in this article before you answer the following questions. For help writing a summary, see page 79.
2. Imagine being a visitor at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. How do you think you would respond to the memorial? Explain.
3. (a)Describe the appearance of the memorial. (b)Why may Lin have wanted the names to convey "the sense of overwhelming numbers"?
4. (a)In what order are the names arranged on the monument? (b)Why may Lin have chosen this type of order instead of alphabetical order?
5. How does Lin conclude her proposal? Why do you think she ends with this idea?

Analyze and Evaluate

6. Lin envisioned the memorial "not as an unchanging monument, but as a moving composition, to be understood as we moved into and out of it." From her description of the memorial and the pictures accompanying the proposal, do you believe that she accomplished that vision? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea An Era of Protest Do you think that the Vietnam Veterans Memorial reflects an "era of protest"? Why or why not?
8. Connect to Today At first, many people were shocked and disappointed with Lin's design. They expected a more traditional monument, such as a statue conveying the bravery of U.S. soldiers. Do you agree with the critics that such a monument would have been more appropriate? Explain.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Have English learners look up in a dictionary and demonstrate the meanings of the words that describe the many words that refer to position and movement: emerge, recede, slope, descent, intersection, ascend.

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences Ask: Why do you think the architect wanted the contour of the ground around the memorial to create a sense of privacy? (Lin wanted a quiet, peaceful place for visitors to contemplate the honored dead.)

Assess

1. Students' summaries should include key details about Lin's proposal and its meaning.
2. Students may imagine feeling sad or moved.
3. (a) It is a long black granite wall, etched with the names of the war dead. (b) To show how many lives were lost
4. (a) Chronological order, by date of death (b) To show the history of the war
5. Lin suggests the area be made a public park. She wanted the memorial to be part of the context of our history, our lives, and the earth. She wanted living things to surround the memorial.
6. Students should refer to details from the selection to support their evaluations.
7. Some will link the design, with its seemingly endless list of war dead, to the "era of protest." Others may say it is a simple and powerful tribute to those who gave their lives.
8. Students' responses will vary.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 103

Or display images of the national unrest of the 1960s—civil rights marches, the Cuban missile crisis, the 1968 Democratic Convention, campus riots, and so on.

Ask: What words come to mind as you view these images? (turmoil, unrest, dissatisfaction, rebellion) As they read, have students consider how literature and music reflect the social issues of an era.

Before You Read

A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall

Meet Bob Dylan

(born 1941)

Born Robert Zimmerman and raised in the small mining town of Hibbing, Minnesota, Bob Dylan received his first guitar at the age of fourteen. Throughout his teens, he listened to the music of Hank Williams, Elvis Presley, and Little Richard.

> "I see my light come shining
> From the west unto the east.
> Any day now, any day now,
> I shall be released."
>
> —Bob Dylan, "I Shall Be Released"

Protest Singer In 1959, the summer before Dylan enrolled at the University of Minnesota he first heard the records of Woody Guthrie, the folk singer who would become his idol. In Minneapolis, he encountered the era's beatnik, folk-inflected counterculture. Dylan dropped out of college at the end of his freshman year and headed for New York City in search of Guthrie, who had vanished from the public eye due to illness.

When he arrived in New York City in 1961, Dylan had already changed his name and was developing his distinct musical sound. While playing in small clubs throughout Greenwich Village, the center of bohemian New York, he regularly visited Guthrie, who was suffering from Huntington's chorea, a nervous system disorder.

In September 1961, the New York Times gave one of Dylan's live performances a positive review, prompting John Hammond, Columbia Records' premier talent scout, to take notice. In less than a year, Dylan recorded and released his first album, which received mixed reviews. However, his next album, The Freewheelin' Bob Dylan, earned widespread acclaim.

In 1963, Dylan played at the Newport Folk Festival in Rhode Island. His performance firmly established him as the new voice of folk music. After the release of his next album, The Times They Are A-Changin', Dylan personified the folk "protest song" movement, which influenced the Civil Rights, free speech, and anti-war movements.

Going Electric The album Bringing It All Back Home, released in 1965, featured electric instruments, shocking his purist folk fans. Highway 61 Revisited, Dylan's next album, included surreal lyrics and a heavy electric sound—but no protest songs. Blonde on Blonde, the critically acclaimed following album, followed suit. The tours promoting these albums became legendary: feeling betrayed, angry fans booed and jeered.

In 1966, Dylan was involved in a motorcycle accident, forcing him into a period of seclusion. When he emerged, his musical style changed again. His next two albums—John Wesley Harding, released in 1968, and the country infused Nashville Skyline, released in 1969—again defied expectations.

Inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, he earned multiple Grammys, including Album of the Year for Time Out of Mind in 1998. Recently, Dylan released Chronicles, the first volume of his memoirs, to overwhelmingly positive reviews.

LOG ON Literature Online

Author Search For more about Bob Dylan, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall

Literary Elements
- Rhythm (SE pp. 1203, 1205, 1206)
- Mood (SE p. 1206)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Assess Oral Interpretation (SE p. 1207)
- Simple and Compound Sentences (TE p. 1204)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Rhetorical Devices (SE pp. 1203, 1205, 1207)

Vocabulary Skills
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 1207)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Oral Interpretation (SE p. 1207)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Song

Do you think life will be better or worse ten years from now? Create a pro-con list that describes how you think life will improve or decline over the next decade.

Build Background

☆ Dylan wrote "A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall" during the Cuban missile crisis in 1962, when the United States and the Soviet Union were on the brink of nuclear war. The United States had discovered that the Soviet Union was installing ballistic missiles on the island of Cuba, approximately ninety miles from the U.S. mainland. These missiles were capable of destroying millions of lives within minutes. In response to this threat, President Kennedy set up a naval blockade around Cuba. The crisis ended when the Soviet Union agreed to remove the missiles in exchange for the United States' promise not to invade Cuba. Though nuclear war was averted, the crisis left a gnawing anxiety in the minds of many about the threat of nuclear disaster.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea An Era of Protest

As you read, ask yourself, How does this song respond to issues raised by historical events?

Literary Element Rhythm

Rhythm refers to the pattern of beats created by the arrangement of stressed and unstressed syllables, especially in poetry. Rhythm gives poetry a musical quality, can add emphasis to certain words, and may help convey the poem's meaning. As you read the protest song aloud, ask yourself, How does the rhythm support the song's meaning?

Reading Strategy Analyze Rhetorical Devices

In "A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall," Dylan uses several rhetorical devices, including juxtaposition, parallelism, and repetition. Juxtaposition refers to the placing of two or more distinct things next to each other in order to compare or contrast them. Parallelism is the use of a series of words, phrases, or sentences that have similar grammatical form. Repetition is the recurrence of sounds, words, phrases, or lines. These devices call attention to particular ideas and evoke emotional responses in the reader. As you read, ask yourself, How do these rhetorical devices contribute to the song's power?

Learning Objectives

For pages 1202–1207

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing rhythm.

Reading: Analyzing rhetorical devices.

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record rhetorical devices and their effects.

Rhetorical Device	Effect
Juxtaposition: "I saw a newborn baby with wild wolves all around it" (line 12)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

"A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall" is a folk song written to protest social and political issues, including racism, poverty, and the threat of nuclear warfare. The writer uses juxtaposition, parallelism, and repetition to engage the reader/listener in the song's message both intellectually and emotionally.

Cultural History ☆

Protest Songs Many of Bob Dylan's songs protested policies he thought were unfair. In 1963, Dylan was invited to appear on the Ed Sullivan Show, a popular television program. However, when he was forbidden from performing the satiric song "Talkin' John Birch Paranoid Blues," Dylan decided not to appear on the program rather than delete the song from his performance.

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 104–114.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Students may benefit from a review of the terms that refer to rhetorical devices. Write the following list of examples on the board:

- children playing in a cemetery
- "government of the people, by the people, and for the people"
- "I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed."

Work with students to identify juxtaposition, parallelism, and repetition, underlining the relevant terms in each example. Discuss how the rhetorical devices can help make memorable images and phrases. Explain to students that Dylan's song was meant to be performed, and that such devices help listeners follow his complex song lyrics.

Teach

Big Idea 1

An Era of Protest Say: Keep these questions in mind as you read: What part of the song is the refrain? (The last two lines of every verse) How does the refrain sum up the meaning of the song? (The second speaker, the son, has seen and heard things and has met people. These experiences compel him to spread the word of a pending event.)

APPROACHING Ask students to mark the location of the refrains with sticky notes. Then have them restate the refrain in their own words.

Big Idea 2

An Era of Protest Answer: These men might represent officials from the Soviet Union and the United States threatening the world with nuclear war

Writer's Technique ☆

Repetition A writer may use repetition in the form of a question and an answer as a device to change the action or task in the verses of a song and the repetition in a refrain to unify the verses.

Bob Dylan

A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall

Oh, where have you been, my blue-eyed son?
Oh, where have you been, my darling young one?
I've stumbled on the side of twelve misty mountains,
I've walked and I've crawled on six crooked highways,
I've stepped in the middle of seven sad forests,
I've been out in front of a dozen dead oceans,
I've been ten thousand miles in the mouth of a graveyard,
And it's a hard, and it's a hard, it's a hard, and it's a hard,
And it's a hard rain's a-gonna fall.

Oh, what did you see, my blue-eyed son?
Oh, what did you see, my darling young one?
I saw a newborn baby with wild wolves all around it
I saw a highway of diamonds with nobody on it,
I saw a black branch with blood that kept drippin',
I saw a room full of men with their hammers a-bleedin',
I saw a white ladder all covered with water,
I saw ten thousand talkers whose tongues were all broken,
I saw guns and sharp swords in the hands of young children,
And it's a hard, and it's a hard, it's a hard, it's a hard,
And it's a hard rain's a-gonna fall.

An Era of Protest Who do you think these men might represent?

Grammar Practice

Simple and Compound Sentences A simple sentence has one main clause and no subordinate clauses. It can have a compound subject, a compound predicate, or both. A compound sentence has two or more main clauses.

Have students write sentences about Dylan's song using these patterns:

1. Simple sentence with compound subject
2. Simple sentence with compound subject and compound predicate
3. Compound sentence and compound predicate
4. Compound sentence with two main clauses

And what did you hear, my blue-eyed son?
And what did you hear, my darling young one?
I heard the sound of a thunder, it roared out a warnin',
Heard the roar of a wave that could drown the whole world,
Heard one hundred drummers whose hands were a-blazin',
Heard ten thousand whisperin' and nobody listenin',
Heard one person starve, I heard many people laughin',
Heard the song of a poet who died in the gutter,
Heard the sound of a clown who cried in the alley,
And it's a hard, and it's a hard, it's a hard, it's a hard,
And it's a hard rain's a-gonna fall.

Oh, who did you meet, my blue-eyed son?
Who did you meet, my darling young one?
I met a young child beside a dead pony,
I met a white man who walked a black dog,
I met a young woman whose body was burning,
I met a young girl, she gave me a rainbow,
I met one man who was wounded in love,
I met another man who was wounded with hatred,
And it's a hard, it's a hard, it's a hard, it's a hard,
It's a hard rain's a-gonna fall.

Oh, what'll you do now, my blue-eyed son? 3
Oh, what'll you do now, my darling young one?
I'm a-goin' back out 'fore the rain starts a-fallin',
I'll walk to the depths of the deepest black forest,
Where the people are many and their hands are all empty,
Where the pellets of poison are flooding their waters,
Where the home in the valley meets the damp dirty prison,
Where the executioner's face is always well hidden,
Where hunger is ugly, where souls are forgotten,
Where black is the color, where none is the number,
And I'll tell it and think it and speak it and breathe it,
And reflect it from the mountain so all souls can see it,
Then I'll stand on the ocean until I start sinkin',
But I'll know my song well before I start singin',
And it's a hard, it's a hard, it's a hard, it's a hard,
It's a hard rain's a-gonna fall.

Rhythm How would you describe the rhythm of these lines? 4

Analyze Rhetorical Devices What rhetorical device is found in this line? What effect does it create? 5

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Make Inferences Ask: Why does the writer switch from past tense to future tense in the last stanza of the song? (Possible answer: The listener is told the disastrous event is yet to come; therefore, there is hope: there is still time to change what is wrong and unjust in the world; there is still time to stop being a spectator and become involved in making the world a better place.)

Literary Element 4

Rhythm Answer: The repetition of "I met" makes the rhythm insistent; it controls the reader's pace.

Reading Strategy 5

Analyze Rhetorical Devices Answer: The rhetorical device is juxtaposition. The images contrasted are the home in the valley and the prison, suggesting that the modern age can transform the pastoral into the institutional.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Have English learners identify the words and phrases repeated in Dylan's lyrics. Have students define and explain the meaning of the following: "blue-eyed son," "darling young one," and "it's a hard rain's a-gonna fall." Review comprehension by having students use the phrases in their own sentences. Then discuss with students how repetition emphasizes the phrases' importance in the lyrics.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Help students understand the selection's implied meanings. Have students write questions as they read, such as, "What are 'pellets of poison'?" and "Why does the speaker 'sink'?" Help them answer their questions by making inferences.

After You Read

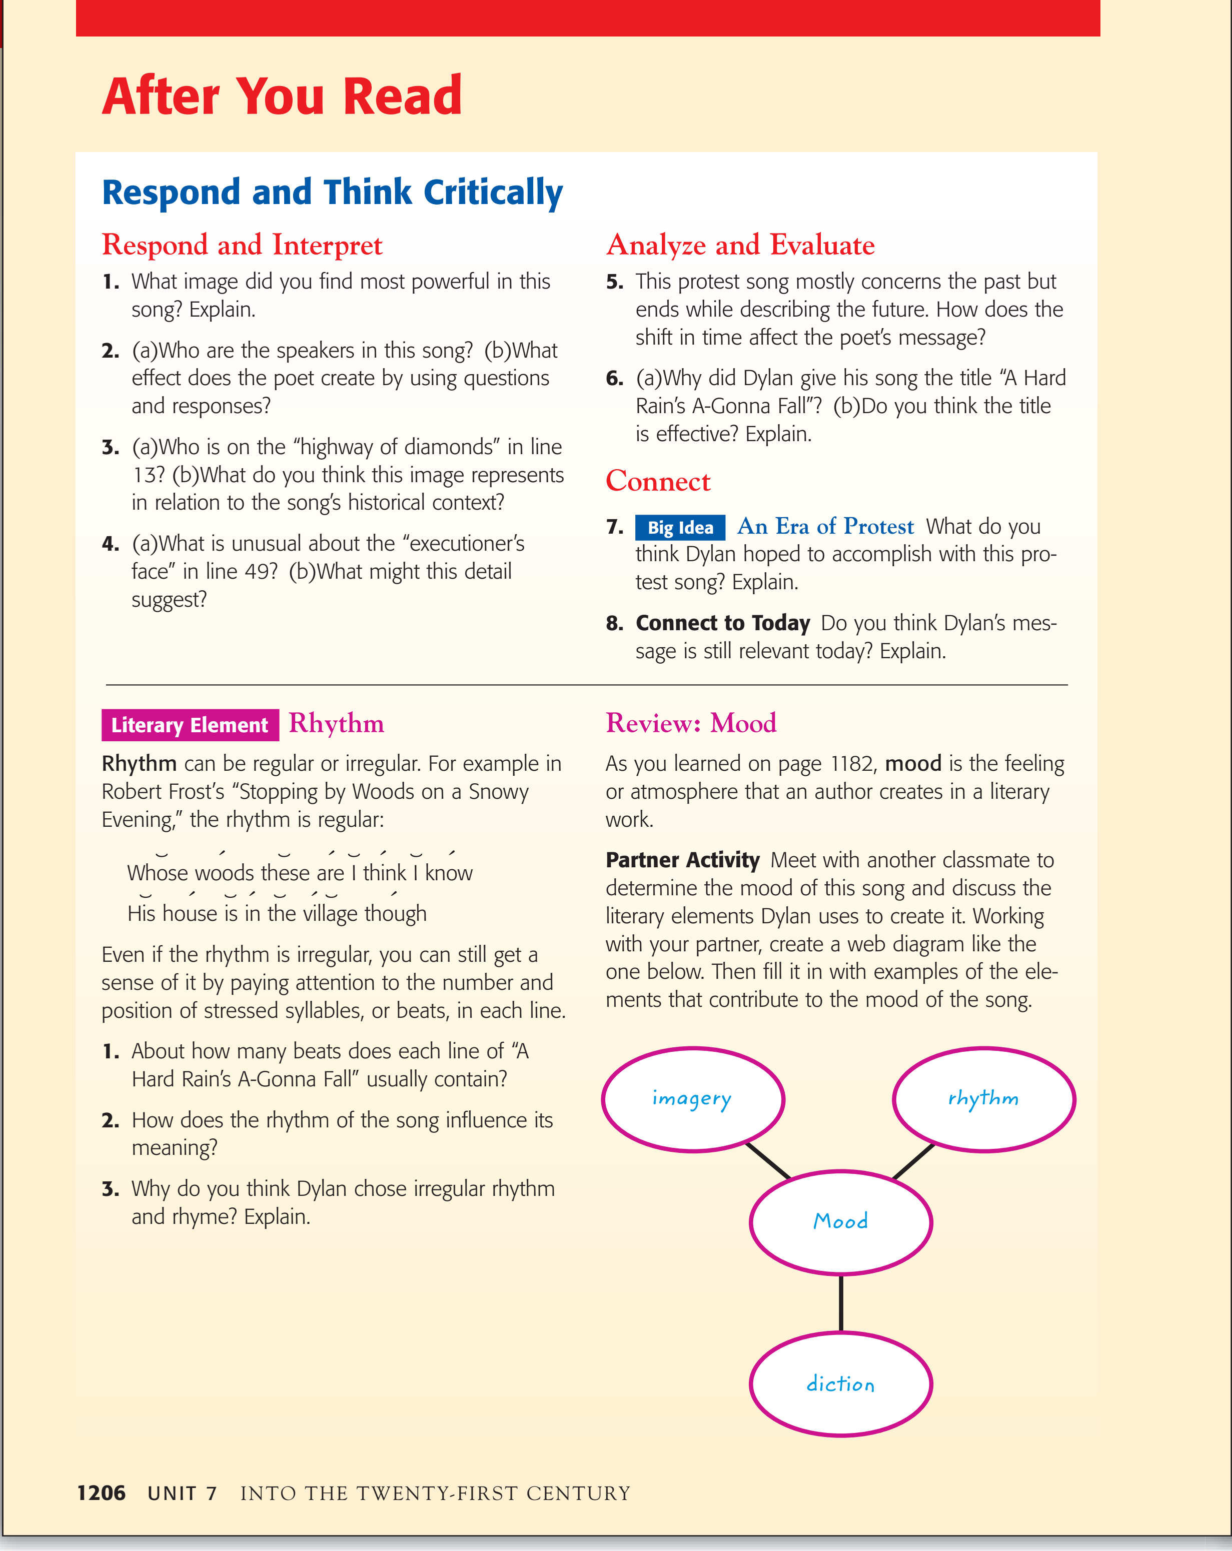
Assess

1. Some students may mention a stark, violent image, such as the young woman who is burning.
2. (a) An affectionate parent or representative of the older generation and a blue-eyed son (b) They place the listener inside the song, as if the questions in the first two lines were directed at the listener.
3. (a) Nobody (b) An empty highway represents the United States after a nuclear war.
4. (a) It is always well hidden. (b) That the people in control of nuclear weapons are beyond public control
5. The shift in time suggests the disastrous event has not yet occurred, emphasizing that it is still possible to prevent nuclear war.
6. (a) Rain is traditionally associated with fertility and nurturing. The rain in this protest song, however, is hard and destructive, rather than life-giving. (b) The title is effective because it suggests the raining down of nuclear missiles.
7. Dylan hopes to prevent war. Students may point to the title or to the images of desolation and violence throughout the song.
8. Although Dylan wrote this song in response to a specific historical event, most students will see that people in the world still suffer and that his words continue to have relevance.

Progress Check

Can students analyze rhythm?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 110.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What image did you find most powerful in this song? Explain.
2. (a)Who are the speakers in this song? (b)What effect does the poet create by using questions and responses?
3. (a)Who is on the "highway of diamonds" in line 13? (b)What do you think this image represents in relation to the song's historical context?
4. (a)What is unusual about the "executioner's face" in line 49? (b)What might this detail suggest?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. This protest song mostly concerns the past but ends while describing the future. How does the shift in time affect the poet's message?
6. (a)Why did Dylan give his song the title "A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall"? (b)Do you think the title is effective? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea An Era of Protest What do you think Dylan hoped to accomplish with this protest song? Explain.
8. Connect to Today Do you think Dylan's message is still relevant today? Explain.

Literary Element Rhythm

Rhythm can be regular or irregular. For example in Robert Frost's "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening," the rhythm is regular:

˘ ´ ˘ ´ ˘ ´ ˘ ´
Whose woods these are I think I know
˘ ´ ˘ ´ ˘ ´ ˘ ´
His house is in the village though

Even if the rhythm is irregular, you can still get a sense of it by paying attention to the number and position of stressed syllables, or beats, in each line.

1. About how many beats does each line of "A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall" usually contain?
2. How does the rhythm of the song influence its meaning?
3. Why do you think Dylan chose irregular rhythm and rhyme? Explain.

Review: Mood

As you learned on page 1182, mood is the feeling or atmosphere that an author creates in a literary work.

Partner Activity Meet with another classmate to determine the mood of this song and discuss the literary elements Dylan uses to create it. Working with your partner, create a web diagram like the one below. Then fill it in with examples of the elements that contribute to the mood of the song.

Literary Element

1. Most lines contain approximately four beats.
2. The rhythm is driving. It gives the song a sense of urgency.
3. Dylan may have felt that the conventions of regular rhythm and rhyme were too restrictive for his subject.

Review: Mood

The mood is disquieting and threatening, suggested by violent imagery such as "a room full of men with their hammers a-bleedin'" and diction such as "pellets of poison."

Reading Strategy Analyze Rhetorical Devices

Though most often found in persuasive essays or speeches, rhetorical devices sometimes support an implied argument in poetry and fiction. Review the chart you created on page 1203 listing rhetorical devices in this protest song.

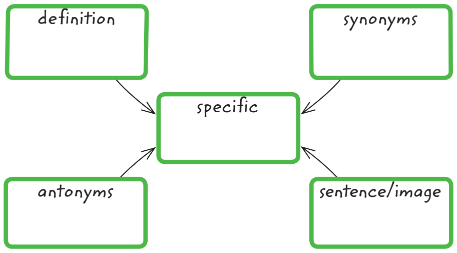
1. What argument is implied in "A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall"?
2. List three rhetorical devices and explain how each one helps advance that argument.

Academic Vocabulary

In "A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall," Dylan uses specific imagery to provoke an emotional response from his audience.

Specific is an academic word. When giving your friend directions to a location, it is important to give him specific details, or else he might get lost.

To study this word further, fill out the graphic organizer below.



For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

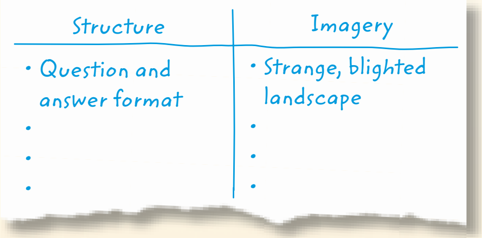
Speaking and Listening

☒ Oral Interpretation

Assignment Present an oral interpretation of "A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall."

Prepare First listen to a recording of the song several times, focusing on your own reactions to it. Then analyze Dylan's intended meaning and how he shapes this meaning through both language and performance techniques.

Create a chart like the one below to analyze the structure and imagery of the song. Use this analysis to help you decide on both the meaning of the song and on appropriate verbal and nonverbal techniques to use in your oral interpretation. For example, Dylan uses a question-and-answer format in this song. You may want to create the effect of dialogue in your oral interpretation by using a different vocal style for the questions.



Structure	Imagery
• Question and answer format	• Strange, blighted landscape
•	•
•	•
•	•

Experiment with different tones, volumes, speeds, and other vocal devices. Use facial expressions and gestures to reflect what you are saying.

Perform Read the song aloud in front of the class, paying close attention to the rhythm and mood you create with your voice.

Evaluate Write a paragraph in which you assess the effectiveness of your oral interpretation. Use the guidelines on page 841 to help in this self-evaluation.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

International Music Students interested in music may enjoy exploring music of another culture.

- Have groups of students listen to a variety of musical selections from different cultures. Use music from the same time period—an era of protest—if possible.
- Have groups identify the elements that characterize the music of the culture they have chosen. Then have them share their findings with the class.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. The implied argument is that war must end and nuclear war must be prevented at all costs.
2. Students might identify the refrain "it's a hard rain's a-gonna fall" as an example of repetition used to emphasize the threat of nuclear war; the image of the poet dying in the gutter as an example of juxtaposition, suggesting that nuclear war does not spare the gifted. Examples of parallelism throughout the song reinforce meaning and mood.

Academic Vocabulary

specific

Definition: exact or definite

Synonyms: particular, express, defined

Antonyms: general, ambiguous, equivocal

Sentence: Dogs of that specific breed are intelligent and good at hunting.

Speaking and Listening

Use these criteria when evaluating students' oral interpretations and paragraphs:

- Did the student's oral interpretation indicate a close reading of the song?
- Did the student use verbal techniques to underscore the meaning of the song?
- Did the student use nonverbal techniques effectively?

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 104

Or say: The word courage comes from the Latin root cor meaning "heart." Ask: How do you think people's "heart" or "spirit" might move them to perform courageous acts? (Students may say that people's love of someone or their passion for an idea could give them the power to perform courageous acts.)

Writer's Technique ☆

"Workshopping" Anne Sexton and her friend Maxine Kumin were both poets and mothers. Because their parenting duties often kept them at home, they developed a technique to work together on their poetry. On private telephone lines, Sexton and Kumin "workshopped" their poems, discussing ideas and writing without leaving their homes.

Before You Read

Courage

Meet Anne Sexton

(1928–1974)

The work of some poets is so intimately bound to the poet's experiences that the poetry is almost never discussed without references to his or her life. Such is the case with Anne Sexton, whose troubled life was not only reflected in her poetry but also actually led to her becoming a successful poet in the first place.

Poetry as Therapy Born in Newton, Massachusetts, Anne Sexton was the youngest of three daughters in a middle class family. Beautiful and rebellious, Sexton eloped at the age of nineteen, marrying Alfred Muller Sexton II, whom she had known only briefly. Sexton gave birth to her first daughter in 1953, and her second daughter in 1955. It was after the births of her children that she began to suffer from severe postpartum depression and attempted suicide several times. During this time, her therapist encouraged her to try writing poetry to explore her feelings.

> "Poetry should be a shock to the senses. It should almost hurt."
>
> —Anne Sexton

In 1960, Sexton published her first collection of poems titled To Bedlam and Part Way Back, which chronicled her early struggles with mental illness. This was followed, in 1962, by the publication of All My Pretty Ones. These first collections received mixed reviews. Some critics praised Sexton's work as "remarkable," "full of the exact flavors of places and peoples remembered," and "an honest and impressive achievement." Others saw her work as flawed and nothing more than a "determinedly outspoken soap-opera."

Fame and Pain Sexton, meanwhile, was becoming firmly established as a member of the "Confessional School," a group of poets who wrote during the late 1950s and 1960s and were categorized by their intensely introspective writing styles. At first, Sexton railed against being labeled a "confessional." Later she said, "I decided I was the only confessional poet."

While much of her work over the following years remained "confessional" and decidedly feminist, Sexton did occasionally go outside of herself for material. Transformations, published in 1971, is a retelling of the popular fairy tales of the Brothers Grimm. Reviewers delighted in the "colorful imagery" and sharp wit that Sexton exhibited in this collection.

During her career, Anne Sexton published ten books of poetry, as well as a play, essays, and several children's books. Sexton received the Pulitzer Prize in 1967 for her collection Live or Die. As her fame grew, Sexton took on other responsibilities. She taught poetry workshops and creative writing, and she became a popular figure at poetry readings on college campuses. All the while, Sexton continued to struggle with mental illness. On October 4, 1974, she met with close friend Maxine Kumin to review the page galleys for her latest collection, The Awful Rowing Toward God. Later that day, Anne Sexton took her own life.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Anne Sexton, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

Courage

Literature Elements
- Verse Paragraph (SE pp. 1209, 1210, 1212; TE p. 1211)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Letter (SE p. 1212)

Reading Skills
- Examine Denotation and Connotation (SE pp. 1209, 1211, 1212)
- Make Predictions (TE p. 1210)

Vocabulary Skills
- Synonyms (SE pp. 1209, 1212)
- Verb Power (TE p. 1209)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Essay

Would you call yourself courageous? Write a journal entry in which you describe different kinds of courage.

Build Background

The Awful Rowing Toward God, in which "Courage" appears, was Sexton's last collection of poetry. When Sexton wrote these poems, she was battling severe mental illness and was frequently an inpatient at mental hospitals. Many reviewers, including some of her close friends, criticized the poems in this collection as being too personal, disjointed, and lacking the strength of her earlier and best poems. Sexton herself called the poems "raw" and "unworked."

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea An Era of Protest

As you read, ask yourself, How does the poet focus on the individual's conflicts with society?

Literary Element Verse Paragraph

A verse paragraph is a group of lines in a poem that form a unit. While stanzas traditionally have a fixed number of lines and are typical of poems written before the twentieth century, verse paragraphs are not uniform in length and reflect the open, freer form of contemporary verse. As you read, ask yourself, How does Sexton use each verse paragraph to organize her ideas about courage and life?

Reading Strategy Examine Connotation and Denotation

The denotation of a word is its literal, or dictionary, meaning. The connotation of a word is the meaning or association that the word has beyond its literal meaning. As you read, ask yourself, What are the positive or negative feelings that the connotations of specific words evoke?

Tip: List Words Use a chart to list words with positive and negative connotations in the poem.

Positive Connotation	Negative Connotation
awesome	fatty

Learning Objectives

For pages 1208–1212

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing verse paragraph.

Reading: Examining connotation and denotation.

Vocabulary

wallowing (wol´ ō ing) v. moving in a clumsy manner or with difficulty; p. 1210 After the heavy rain, we found ourselves wallowing through muddy ditches to get home.

fondle (fond´ əl) v. to handle gently; p. 1210 The cat squirmed as the kids tried to pet and fondle it.

transfusion (trans fū´ zhən) n. the act of passing life-saving fluids from one to another; p. 1211 He received a blood transfusion during the operation.

transformed (trans fôrmd´) adj. changed in a dramatic way; p. 1211 The messy vacant lot was transformed into a lush garden.

Tip: Synonyms Understanding words that are similar in meaning to an unfamiliar word, or synonyms, can help you learn the word. Example: Courage and valor are synonyms; they both mean "the ability to face difficulty without being overcome."

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

The speaker challenges our concept of courage by sharing examples of actions that may seem like ordinary events in any person's life. The speaker implies, however, that every person is faced with challenges that require courage and, therefore, we are all capable of heroism.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 115–120.

Vocabulary

Verb Power This selection's vocabulary words are either verbs or have verbs as their roots. When Sexton describes the courage of the young, she uses wallowing and fondle. Both contain the l sound, which is often in gentle words such as lullaby and vulnerable. When she describes the courage of an older person, she chooses two more forceful words, transfusion and transformed. Say: Both words contain the Latin prefix trans-, meaning "across" or "through." What might these words imply about the courage of the older person? (The words imply that the older person has the ability to connect to others, to give and receive; or to come through adversity.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Review with students some literary forms of poetry that have a specific number of lines, for example, the two-line rhyming couplet. or the fourteen-line sonnet, and read aloud an example. Have students compare these forms with the verse paragraphs as they read Sexton's poem. Have them find and discuss two examples that show how the unstructured format allows for a more conversational style.

Teach

Big Idea 1

An Era of Protest Say: Keep these questions in mind as you read: Where does the poet say we can see acts of courage? (in the small things of life; the simple acts of living from birth to death) How would you describe the examples of courageous acts included in the poem? (Possible answer: They are individual and personal; they are examples of courage of the heart.)

Literary Element 2

Verse Paragraph Answer: Courage begins in childhood with a first step, a first bicycle ride, and the first time a child dares to go alone. The last five lines describe how vulnerable children are to the cruelty and insensitivity of others. The speaker suggests that we show courage by concealing our pain.

Big Idea 3

An Era of Protest Answer: The speaker suggests that he faced death with little to protect him but his hat over his heart.

Courage

Anne Sexton

1 It is in the small things we see it.
The child's first step,
as awesome as an earthquake.
The first time you rode a bike,
wallowing up the sidewalk.
The first spanking when your heart went on a journey all alone.
When they called you crybaby or poor or fatty or crazy and made you into an alien,[1]
you drank their acid and concealed it.

Later,
if you faced the death of bombs and bullets
you did not do it with a banner, you did it with only a hat to cover your heart.
You did not fondle the weakness inside you though it was there.
Your courage was a small coal that you kept swallowing.
If your buddy saved you and died himself in so doing,
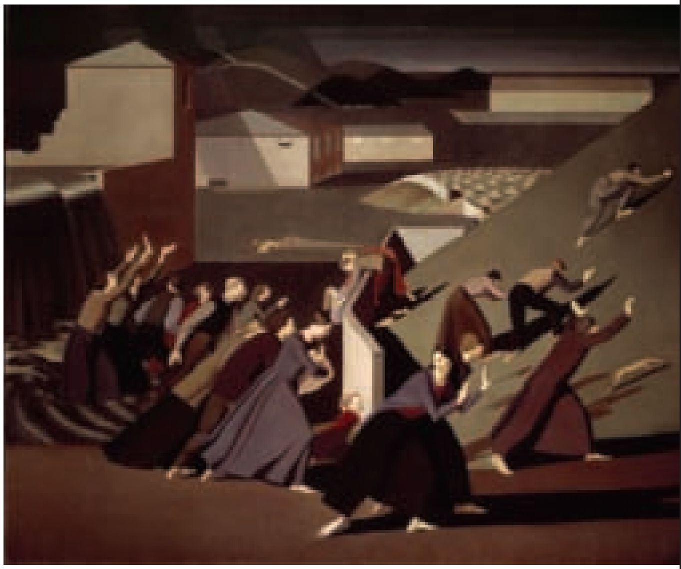
then his courage was not courage,
it was love, love as simple as shaving soap.



The Deluge, 1920. Winifred Knights. Oil on canvas, 59⅓ x 71⅓ in. Tate Gallery, London.

---

[1] Alien here means "someone who feels like an outsider."

2 Verse Paragraph How do the lines that follow develop this idea?

3 An Era of Protest According to the speaker, how does the person addressed in this verse paragraph face death?

Vocabulary

wallowing (wol´ ō ing) v. moving in a clumsy manner or with difficulty fondle (fond´ əl) v. to handle gently

Reading Practice

Make Predictions Before reading, ask students to make a prediction about the meaning of the poem's title.

Ask: What do you think the poem will be about? (Possible answer: Students may say that they think the poem will describe dramatic acts of heroism.)

- Have students read the first line, and ask if it confirms or challenges their predictions.
- Have students read the poem and find out how the poet defines courage.

Later,
if you have endured a great despair,
then you did it alone,
getting a transfusion from the fire,
picking the scabs off your heart,
then wringing it out like a sock.
Next, my kinsman,[2] you powdered your sorrow,
you gave it a back rub and then you covered it with a blanket and after it had slept a while it woke to the wings of the roses and was transformed.[3]

Later,
when you face old age and its natural conclusion[4]
your courage will still be shown in the little ways, each spring will be a sword you'll sharpen,
those you love will live in a fever of love,
and you'll bargain with the calendar and at the last moment
when death opens the back door you'll put on your carpet slippers and stride out. 4

---

[2] Kinsman is a relative. Here the speaker aligns herself with those who suffer the pain of loneliness and despair.

[3] The poet may be making an illusion to the Phoenix, a mythical bird that burns itself to ashes and then rises anew from the ashes to live again.

[4] The natural conclusion of life is death.

Examine Denotation and Connotation Why do you think the poet chose to use the word powdered instead of some other phrase? 5

Vocabulary

transfusion (trans fū´ zhən) n.	the act of passing life-saving fluids from one to another transformed (trans fôrməd´) adj.	changed in a dramatic way

Teach

Literary Element 4

Verse Paragraph Ask: For what purpose does the poet use the verse paragraph device throughout "Courage"? (Possible answer: Sexton uses the device to show the chronology of a person's life from childhood to death; within this chronology, the poet gives examples of challenges facing people at different stages of their lives.)

Reading Strategy 5

Examine Denotation and Connotation Answer: Powdered has a positive connotation that suggests gentle pampering when powdering a baby; a phrase such as took care of would be neutral sounding and would not evoke a specific image.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Help English learners find the literal meaning of the poem before they interpret and analyze it. Ask students to orally paraphrase the main ideas in "Courage." Review the literal meaning of the stanzas, and have students use their work to help predict events in the poem.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Have students summarize each stanza with one sentence or phrase. Then ask them to write a sentence or phrase describing the progression they see between each of the stanzas.

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) Suffers without reacting and hides pain (b) It is a vulnerable time when we first feel pain.
2. (a) Shaving soap is compared to love. (b) Courage is seen in small, everyday things.
3. (a) She addresses readers as kinsman. (b) The speaker has felt isolated and alone.
4. (a) Transfusion from the fire, picking scabs off your heart, wringing it out like a sock (b) The individual endures and transforms emotional pain alone.
5. People learn to accept death.
6. Society forces us to repress our fears. Inner strength and courage help us face them.
7. Answers will vary. Students should note that Sexton sees moments of courage in each of the four characters, but that in her death she probably related to the final image, "striding out."

Literary Element

1. Later is a transition between verses 2, 3, and 4; within verses, she uses when, then, next, and after.
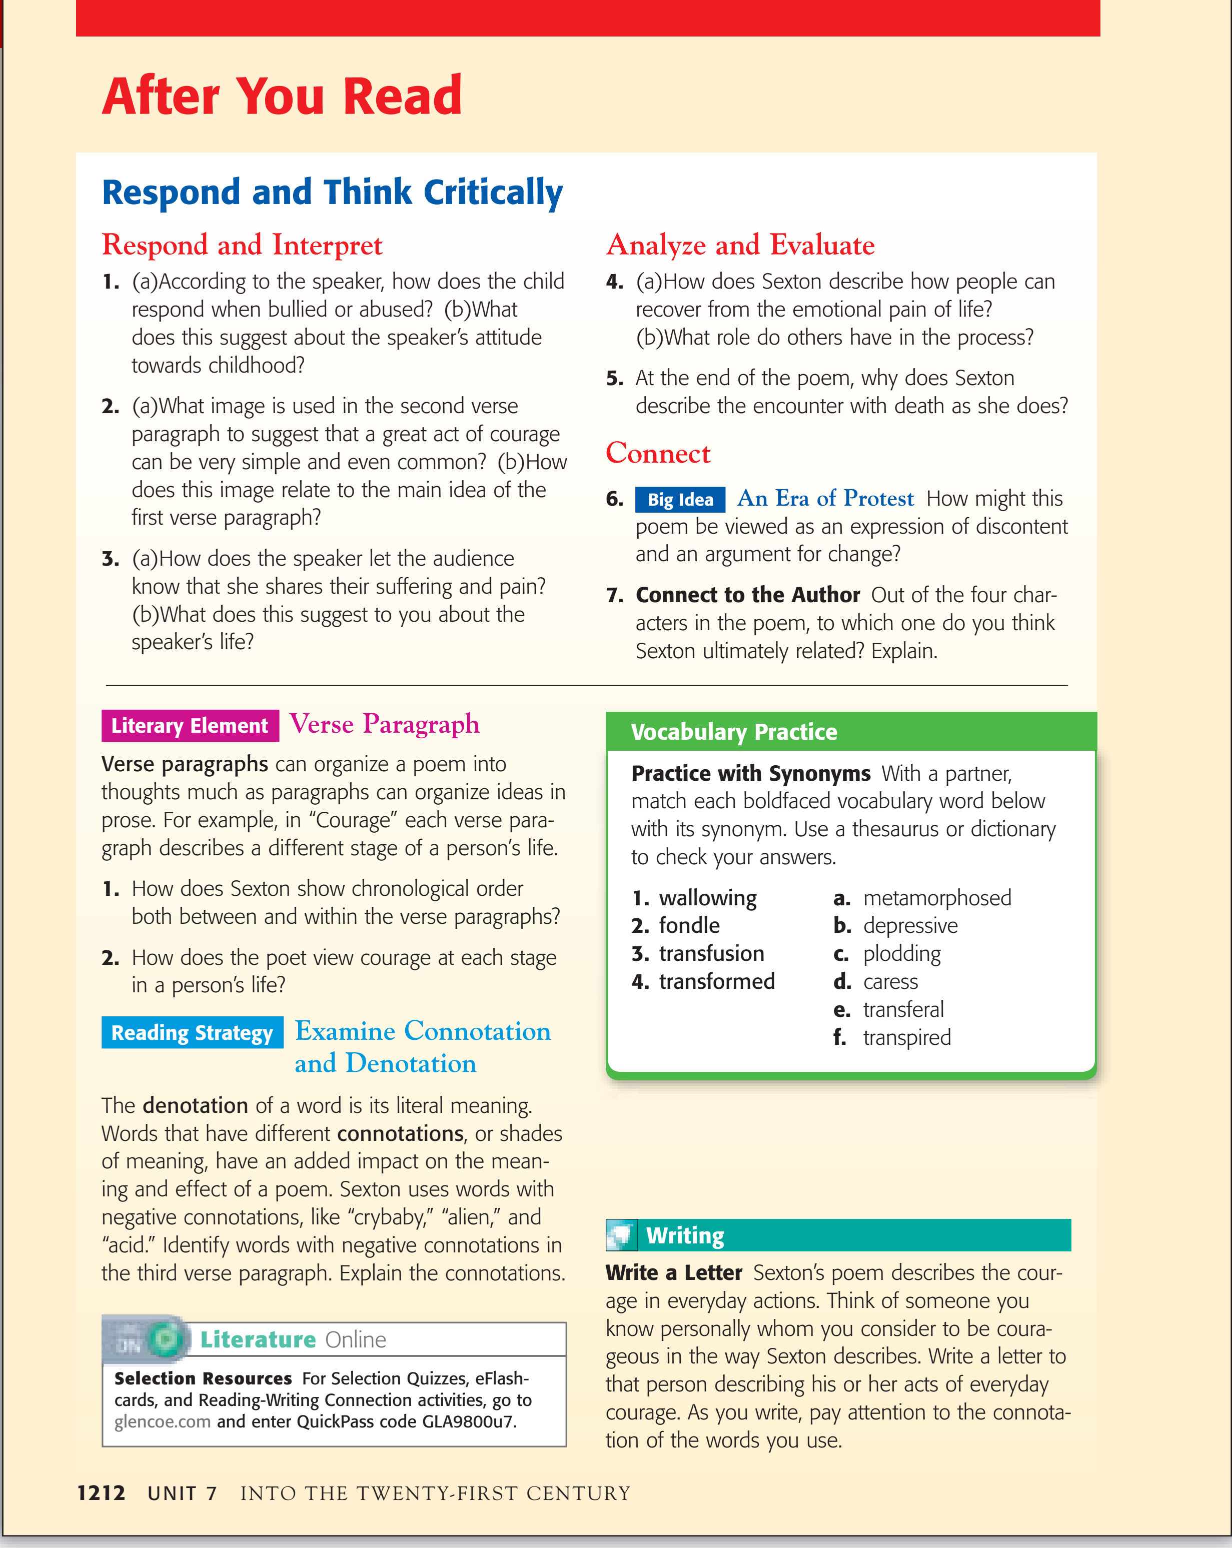
2. Childhood: simple experiences and concealing pain; young adult in war: represses fear; adulthood: helps us recover from despair; old age: helps us resist and then accept death

Progress Check

Can students analyze verse paragraphs?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 121.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)According to the speaker, how does the child respond when bullied or abused? (b)What does this suggest about the speaker's attitude towards childhood?
2. (a)What image is used in the second verse paragraph to suggest that a great act of courage can be very simple and even common? (b)How does this image relate to the main idea of the first verse paragraph?
3. (a)How does the speaker let the audience know that she shares their suffering and pain? (b)What does this suggest to you about the speaker's life?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)How does Sexton describe how people can recover from the emotional pain of life? (b)What role do others have in the process?
5. At the end of the poem, why does Sexton describe the encounter with death as she does?

Connect

6. Big Idea An Era of Protest How might this poem be viewed as an expression of discontent and an argument for change?
7. Connect to the Author Out of the four characters in the poem, to which one do you think Sexton ultimately related? Explain.

Literary Element Verse Paragraph

Verse paragraphs can organize a poem into thoughts much as paragraphs can organize ideas in prose. For example, in "Courage" each verse paragraph describes a different stage of a person's life.

1. How does Sexton show chronological order both between and within the verse paragraphs?
2. How does the poet view courage at each stage in a person's life?

Reading Strategy Examine Connotation and Denotation

The denotation of a word is its literal meaning. Words that have different connotations, or shades of meaning, have an added impact on the meaning and effect of a poem. Sexton uses words with negative connotations, like "crybaby," "alien," and "acid." Identify words with negative connotations in the third verse paragraph. Explain the connotations.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Synonyms With a partner, match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with its synonym. Use a thesaurus or dictionary to check your answers.

1. wallowing	a. metamorphosed
2. fondle	b. depressive
3. transfusion	c. plodding
4. transformed	d. caress
	e. transferal
	f. transpired

Writing

Write a Letter Sexton's poem describes the courage in everyday actions. Think of someone you know personally whom you consider to be courageous in the way Sexton describes. Write a letter to that person describing his or her acts of everyday courage. As you write, pay attention to the connotation of the words you use.

Reading Strategy

Despair, transfusion, scabs, and wringing have negative connotations. Despair connotes the depths of sadness. Transfusion relates to blood and injuries. Scabs connotes crusty wounds. Wringing implies a violent motion.

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' letters:

- Is the writing in the form of a letter?
- Is the student aware of the connotation of his or her words?

Vocabulary

1. c 2. d 3. e 4. a

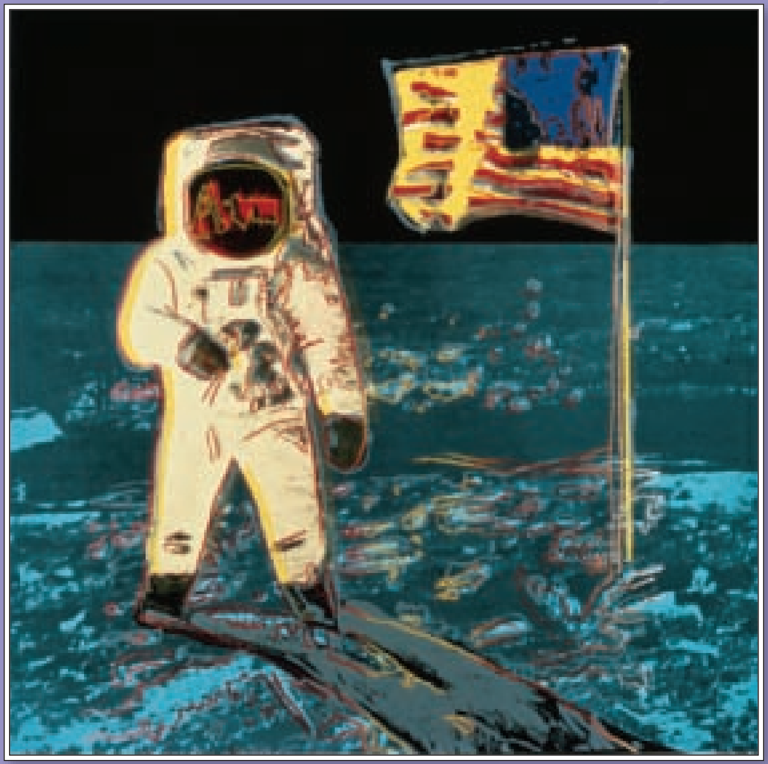
PART 2

Nature and Technology



Moonwalk, 1987. Andy Warhol. Screenprint on lenox museum board, 38 x 38 in. The Andy Warhol Foundation for the Visual Arts.

View the Art Warhol used famous scenes from the arts, science, and popular culture as inspiration for his work. How does this image combine the worlds of science and technology with the symbol of America? ★

> "The 'control of nature' is a phrase conceived in arrogance, born of the Neanderthal age of biology and the convenience of man."
>
> —Rachel Carson, Silent Spring 1

UNIT SEVEN

PART 2

Analyze and Extend

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Direct students to read the quotation from Rachel Carson. Ask: What do you think Rachel Carson means by these words? (Carson suggests that people's efforts to control nature shows a crude understanding of life on Earth.) Discuss with students whether human beings should try to control nature.

View the Art ★

Answer: The worlds of science and technology are represented by the astronaut on the Moon.

Andy Warhol (1928–1987) began his career as a commercial artist. He became famous for using images from popular culture in his art. Moonwalk is an excellent example of Warhol's use of a familiar image as a starting point for an artwork.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain that "Neanderthals" were early relatives of humans who lived until about 30,000 years ago. The term is sometimes used to mean primitive or crude. Ask: Substitute the word primitive for Neanderthal in Carson's statement. How would you paraphrase her words now? (Trying to control nature comes from an understanding of life on Earth that is not sophisticated.)

For additional support for English Learners, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 128.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Strategic Authors deliberately choose words to set a particular tone. Have students reread Carson's quote. Ask: How do the words arrogance, Neanderthal age, and convenience convey her tone? (The words convey a negative and critical tone.)

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 68

Daily Language Practice Transparency 105

Or explain that the poems by Elizabeth Bishop they are about to read are filled with images to help them picture the fish and the filling station. Ask: Imagine you are on a fishing trip and you catch an enormous fish. How do you picture the fish? Prompt students to write lists of vivid sensory details that describe the fish they "caught."

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 129–134.

Before You Read

The Fish and Filling Station

Meet Elizabeth Bishop
(1911–1979)

Elizabeth Bishop once told her writing class at Harvard University, "Use the dictionary. It's better than the critics." Bishop's wit and devotion to careful, precise language came through in her own writing, which earned her nearly every major poetry prize in the U.S.

For Bishop, writing poetry was an act of "self-forgetfulness," in which she focused on shaping and sharing her impressions of the physical world rather than on giving the details of her sometimes difficult personal life. When she was very young, her father died and her mother was permanently hospitalized, so Bishop was raised by relatives. After graduation from Vassar College in 1934, she traveled frequently and lived in many places, including Florida, New York, Europe, and Brazil. She kept in touch with people she met through thousands of letters, some of which were collected and published in her book One Art.

> "[It is] far more important to just keep writing poetry than to think of yourself as a poet whose job it is to write poetry all the time."
>
> —Elizabeth Bishop

In 1934 Bishop was introduced to the poet Marianne Moore, who became Bishop's valued friend and mentor. Bishop also became close to poet Robert Lowell, who provided unstinting moral support and helped her obtain grants, fellowships, and awards. They critiqued each other's poetry and remained staunch allies throughout their lives.

Described by many friends as generous and wise, Bishop was also complicated and intensely private. Though she suffered from depression, people were struck by her warmth and self-deprecating sense of humor. She appreciated friends and relatives who made her laugh. She wrote, "I have been very lucky in having had, most of my life, some witty friends,—and I mean real wit, quickness, wild fancies, remarks that make one cry with laughing."

Bishop's voice is one of the most distinctive in American poetry, conveying not only the sights and sounds of nature but also the thoughts and feelings of a speaker groping toward an understanding of nature. Bishop was preoccupied with questions of guilt, loss, and artistic vision, and these issues appear in her poetry.

Over her fifty-year writing career, Bishop published five slim volumes of poetry with a total of 101 poems. Of her final poetry collection, critic Alfred Corn wrote that Bishop achieved "a perfected transparence of expression, warmth of tone, and a singular blend of sadness and good humor, of pain and acceptance—a radiant patience few people ever achieve and few writers ever successfully render." Besides writing, Bishop taught at Harvard for seven years and served as a poetry consultant to the Library of Congress.

LOG ON Literature Online

Author Search For more about Elizabeth Bishop, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

The Fish and Filling Station

Literary Elements
- Tone (SE pp. 1215, 1217, 1218, 1220)
- Setting (SE p. 1220)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Report (SE p. 1221)
- Punctuation (TE p. 1218)

Reading Skills
- Evaluate Sensory Details (SE pp. 1215–1217, 1219, 1220)
- Monitor Comprehension (TE p. 1216)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE pp. 1215, 1221)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 1221)
- Parts of Speech (TE p. 1215)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poems

When have you discovered something unexpected about a familiar person or place? Freewrite for a few minutes about your initial impressions and your discovery.

Build Background

The following passage from a letter Bishop wrote to Marianne Moore may have developed into her poem "The Fish."

> The other day I caught a parrot fish, almost by accident. They are ravishing fish—all iridescent, with a silver edge to each scale, and a real bull-like mouth just like turquoise; the eye is very big and wild, and the eyeball is turquoise too—they are very humorous-looking fish.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Nature and Technology

In these poems, carefully examine the observations about the fish and the filling (or gas) station. As you read, ask yourself, What do Bishop's patient reflections tell you about modern life and nature's role in it?

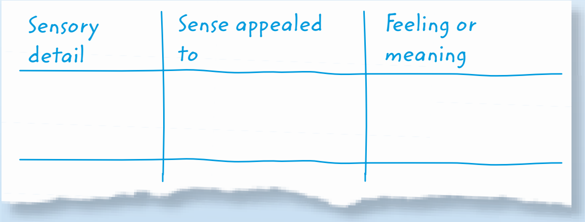
Literary Element Tone

Tone is the attitude that an author expresses toward his or her subject matter. As you read, ask, What is the speaker's tone?

Reading Strategy Evaluate Sensory Details

Sensory details are evocative words or phrases that appeal to one or more of the five senses. Poets use sensory details to help the reader imagine or experience more deeply the content of poems. As you read, ask yourself, What feeling or meaning do the sensory details convey to you?

Tip: Chart Sensory Details Record sensory details in a chart like the one shown. List the sense that the detail appeals to.



Sensory detail	Sense appealed to	Feeling or meaning

Learning Objectives

For pages 1214–1221

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing tone.

Reading: Evaluating sensory details.

Vocabulary

tarnish (tär´ nish) v. to dull, soil, or stain; p. 1217 The cabinet was tarnished by the fire.

permeate (pur´ mē āt´) v. to penetrate, spread through, or diffuse; p. 1218 Water may permeate the bag if it is not sealed shut before the storm.

extraneous (ek strā´ nē əs) adj. not intrinsically belonging; not forming a vital part; coming from outside; p. 1219 The music seemed extraneous to the scientific presentation.

Tip: Context Clues To determine a word's meaning, look at the other words in the sentence and try to guess at a possible meaning. Example: Although her necklace was pretty, it was an extraneous part of her heavily accessorized outfit. If the girl's outfit already has several accessories, she probably doesn't need a necklace, so extraneous means "unnecessary."

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

"The Fish" describes in detail a fish that the speaker has caught. The speaker notes the lines and hooks hanging from its mouth like medals of honor. Overcome with respect, the speaker lets the fish go. The speaker in "Filling Station" contemplates a gas station, wondering whether the attendants live there. After describing the homey touches on the porch, the speaker notes that they are signs of love.

Vocabulary

Parts of Speech Point out that many words can be used as both nouns and verbs. Have students write sentences using tarnish as a noun and as a verb.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Explain that the suffix -ous means "having the quality of." Ask: What does "extraneous" mean? (having the quality of being extra)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Remind students that understanding poetry often depends on the ability to recognize and understand imagery. Elizabeth Bishop uses various forms of imagery in her poems. "The Fish" contains a number of similes. Remind students of the definition of a simile.

Display the following:

- The old fish had brown skin that hung from its bones and was darker brown in some places. It had stains on it.
- His brown skin hung in strips like ancient wall-paper, and its pattern of darker brown was like wall-paper: shapes like full-blown roses stained and lost through age.

Ask: Which of these descriptions is more effective in helping you visualize the fish? Why? (The second one compares the fish's skin to wallpaper, so it creates a better picture.)

Established Ask: What are the similes in the second description? (like ancient wall-paper, like full-blown roses) Remind students to look for other examples of imagery as they read Bishop's poems.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Nature and Technology

Answer: The lines establish that animals are subservient to people and frequently at their mercy.

APPROACHING Suggest that students also read lines 5–9 and use a dictionary for any words they do not know.

Reading Strategy 2

Evaluate Sensory Details

Answer: The details convey the idea of an elaborately decorated, but filthy, fish. Some aspects of the fish's skin are portrayed as ornamental, but the fish is also infested with lice and defiled by "rags of green weed."

View the Art ★

Early in his career, Winslow Homer (1836–1910) painted with oil paints. In 1873, Homer began to work with watercolors. Although his early Civil War paintings are considered important, Homer's work with watercolors sets him apart as a truly great American artist. Ask: How does Winslow Homer use color in his painting in the same way that Elizabeth Bishop uses words? (Homer uses color and Bishop uses words to tell a story, convey emotions, and describe a scene.)

Returning Fishing Boats, 1883. Winslow Homer. Watercolor. Fogg Museum of Art, Harvard University, Cambridge, MA. ★

The Fish

Elizabeth Bishop

I caught a tremendous fish and held him beside the boat half out of water, with my hook fast in a corner of his mouth.
He didn't fight.
He hadn't fought at all.
He hung a grunting weight, battered and venerable[1]
and homely. Here and there his brown skin hung in strips like ancient wall-paper, and its pattern of darker brown was like wall-paper:
shapes like full-blown roses
stained and lost through age.
He was speckled with barnacles,
fine rosettes of lime,
and infested
with tiny white sea-lice, and underneath two or three rags of green weed hung down.
While his gills were breathing in the terrible oxygen
—the frightening gills,
fresh and crisp with blood,
that can cut so badly—
I thought of the coarse white flesh packed in like feathers,
the big bones and the little bones,
the dramatic reds and blacks of his shiny entrails,[2]
and the pink swim-bladder[3]
like a big peony.
I looked into his eyes

---

[1] Venerable means "deserving respect because of age."

[2] Entrails are internal organs.

[3] A swim-bladder, or air bladder, is an air sac that enables some fish to maintain buoyancy and equilibrium.

1 Nature and Technology What relationship between people and animals do these lines establish?

2 Evaluate Sensory Details What ideas about the fish do these visual details convey?

Reading Practice

Monitor Comprehension The vivid language of poetry can be difficult for students to understand. Clarifying and paraphrasing small sections will help them interpret the broader meaning. If students have problems understanding Bishop's poems, have them try the following strategies:

- Reread each section, restating the meaning of the passage in your own words.
- Use context to determine the meanings of unfamiliar words and to interpret figures of speech.
- Use punctuation to break up the poem into sentences or other units.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

which were far larger than mine but shallower, and yellowed, the irises backed and packed with tarnished tinfoil seen through the lenses of old scratched isinglass.[4]
They shifted a little, but not to return my stare.
—It was more like the tipping of an object toward the light.
I admired his sullen face,
the mechanism of his jaw,
and then I saw that from his lower lip
—if you could call it a lip—grim, wet, and weapon-like,
hung five old pieces of fish-line,
or four and a wire leader with the swivel still attached, with all their five big hooks grown firmly in his mouth.
A green line, frayed at the end where he broke it, two heavier lines, and a fine black thread
still crimped from the strain and snap when it broke and he got away.
Like medals with their ribbons
frayed and wavering,
a five-haired beard of wisdom
trailing from his aching jaw.
I stared and stared and victory filled up
the little rented boat,
from the pool of bilge[5]
where oil had spread a rainbow around the rusted engine to the bailer rusted orange, the sun-cracked thwarts,[6]
the oarlocks on their strings, the gunnels[7]—until everything was rainbow, rainbow, rainbow!
And I let the fish go.

---

[4] Isinglass (ī´zin glas´) was used in windows before glass panes became common.

[5] Bilge (bilj) is stagnant water in the bottom of a boat.

[6] Thwarts (thwôrts) are seats going across a small boat.

[7] Gunnels (gə´ nəlz) are the upper edges of the sides of a boat.

Vocabulary

tarnish (tär´ nĭsh) v. to dull, soil, or stain

Evaluate Sensory Details What do these details reveal about the fish? 3

Tone What do these lines reveal about the speaker's attitude toward the fish? 4

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Evaluate Sensory Details
Answer: The details reveal that the fish has escaped after being hooked by other anglers.

Literary Element 4

Tone Answer: Students' answers will vary. Some may say that the phrase "beard of wisdom" conveys admiration and respect for the fish.

APPROACHING Ask: What effect do these details have on the reader? (Students may say that Bishop's tone inspires them with new admiration for the fish.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Beginning Point out that poets often use descriptive adjectives to create images and tone. Have students work in pairs to identify five adjectives that describe the fish. Ask: How does each adjective help explain Bishop's attitude toward the fish? ("tremendous fish"—Bishop is impressed by the size of the fish; "grunting weight, battered and venerable"—Bishop is showing respect for the fish and what it has endured; "his sullen face"—Bishop is aware that the fish is unhappy at being caught.) Have students use these adjectives in their own sentences.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Write Imagery Divide students into pairs or small groups. Have students choose a short passage from the poem, about five lines, containing at least one simile or metaphor. Ask students to paraphrase the passage and explain the comparison that is made.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Tone Answer: Students' answers will vary. Some may say that the line conveys a humorous disdain for the extreme filth of the gas station.

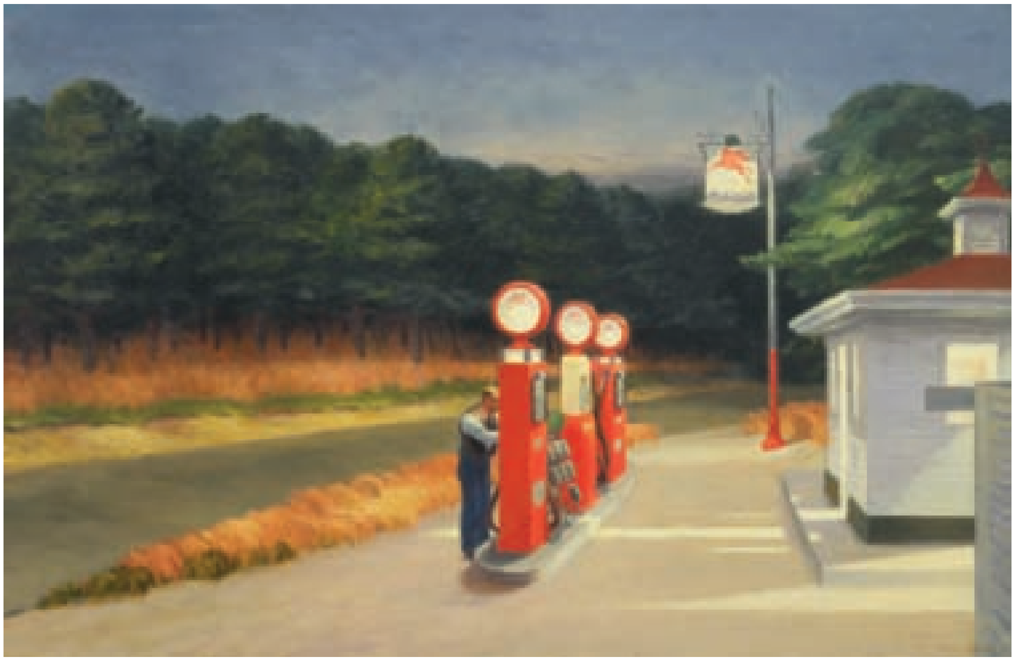
Writer's Technique ☆

Caesuras Tell students that a caesura is a natural pause within a line of poetry. Have them note the caesuras in the first stanza of "Filling Station." Discuss with students the effect of the caesuras and tell them that such pauses within lines can make a poem's rhythm more conversational. Have students look for another example of a caesura as they read the poem.



Gas. 1940. Edward Hopper. Oil on canvas, 26¼ x 40¼ in. The Museum of Modern Art, NY.

Filling Station

Elizabeth Bishop

Oh, but it is dirty!
—this little filling station,
oil-soaked, oil-permeated ☆ to a disturbing, over-all black translucency.
Be careful with that match!

Father wears a dirty,
oil-soaked monkey suit
that cuts him under the arms, and several quick and saucy and greasy sons assist him
(it's a family filling station), all quite thoroughly dirty.

Tone What does this line suggest about the speaker's attitude toward the gas station? 1

Vocabulary

permeate (pur´mē āt´) v. to penetrate, spread through, or diffuse

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Punctuation Point out that it is important to pay attention to punctuation in poetry. Ask: What is the purpose of the exclamation points in the first stanza? (Possible response: They are meant to express strong feelings.) Suggest that these exclamation points might also be a way that Bishop shows her wry sense of humor. Ask: Why does Bishop use so many dashes in line 39? (Students may say she uses the dashes to create a picture of how the cans look all lined up. They may also say that it is humorous.)

Do they live in the station?
It has a cement porch
behind the pumps, and on it a set of crushed and grease-impregnated wickerwork;
on the wicker sofa
a dirty dog, quite comfy.

Some comic books provide the only note of color—of certain color. They lie upon a big dim doily[1]
draping a taboret[2] (part of the set), beside a big hirsute[3] begonia.

Why the extraneous plant?
Why the taboret?
Why, oh why, the doily?
(Embroidered in daisy stitch with marguerites, I think, and heavy with gray crochet.)

Somebody embroidered the doily.
Somebody waters the plant, or oils it, maybe. Somebody arranges the rows of cans
so that they softly say:
esso—so—so—so
to high-strung automobiles.
Somebody loves us all.

---

[1] A doily is a small, often decorative, napkin.
[2] A taboret is a seat or stool without arms or back.
[3] Hirsute means "hairy."

Evaluate Sensory Details What is significant about the doily's presence? 2

Vocabulary

extraneous (ek strā´ nē əs) adj. not intrinsically belonging; not forming a vital part; coming from outside

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Evaluate Sensory Details

Answer: The doily shows a level of care and attention on the part of the family that is incongruous with the dirty station.

ADVANCED Ask: How would you describe the author's tone in this line? (Students may note the wry humor in the line, shown by the repetition in "Why, oh why.")

ENGLISH LEARNERS Explain that the word doily refers to a lacy, old-fashioned cover used to protect a small table the way a tablecloth protects a larger one. Have students describe a place where they might expect to see a doily.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 138.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Advanced Have small groups of students reread "Filling Station" and list the adjectives that Bishop uses to describe how objects look.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Reread with students the last stanza of the poem. Ask: How is the mood or feeling different in this stanza than in the rest of the poem? (The mood changes to a more positive and loving one.) What technique does the poet use to achieve this change? (The repetition of the word somebody changes the mood.)

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) It is "grunting," "battered and venerable," "homely," and ornamented "like ancient wallpaper." (b) It seems dirty and repulsive; it is speckled with barnacles, infested with sea-lice, and dirty with weeds.
2. (a) Victory (b) The speaker may be inspired by the fish's toughness.
3. (a) A father and his sons (b) Dirty and greasy
4. (a) The dirtiness of the station and the attempts to beautify it may suggest that the family is hard-working but tries to create a homelike feeling. (b) That "somebody loves us all"—that people care for one another no matter what.
5. The detailed descriptions support the statement. Her struggle with the fish is an event, contradicting the statement.
6. (a) The speaker at first seems fascinated by the griminess of the fish, and then adopts a more nuanced view, imagining the insides of the fish. Finally, the speaker sees the fish as an entity in its own right, a survivor. (b) Students' answers will vary.
7. Bishop waits until the end to give the theme; the details take on a richer meaning when considered along with the theme.
8. Students may describe her attitude as curious, attentive, and thoughtful.
9. Bishop's observations reveal her interest in nature, her ability to notice details, and her awe for the immense world around her.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 291–292.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)In "The Fish," what details about the fish are provided in lines 1–21? (b)How would you characterize the fish based on these details? Cite words and phrases from the poem to support your conclusion.
2. (a)In line 66, what does the speaker say fills the boat? (b)What, in your opinion, motivates the speaker to let the fish go? Explain.
3. (a)In "Filling Station," who runs the filling station? (b)In what terms does the speaker describe the station and the people who run it?
4. (a)What details in the poem may provide clues about the lives of the people who run the station? (b)To the speaker, what do these details suggest about people in general? Explain.

Analyze and Evaluate

5. One critic wrote that Bishop focused less on an event than on what she "saw and felt and shared with others." How do these two poems support and contradict this statement? Explain your answer citing details from the poem.
6. (a)In "The Fish," how do the speaker's feelings and ideas about the fish develop over the course of the poem? (b)If you had been in the boat, would you have drawn the same conclusions about the fish that the speaker does? Explain.
7. Why do you think Bishop chose to end "Filling Station" with the sentence in line 41? Explain how this sentence influences the meaning of the poem as a whole.

Connect

8. Big Idea Nature and Technology On the basis of "The Fish," what attitude would you say that Bishop adopted toward the natural world? Explain your answer.
9. Connect to the Author Bishop wanted her poetry to focus on her observations of the natural world rather than on her personal life. Do you think the reader learns anything about Bishop from these poems? Explain.

Literary Element Tone

SAT Skills Practice

1. The first half of "The Fish" creates a tone of
   - (A) disgust.
   - (B) fear.
   - (C) curiosity.
   - (D) admiration.
   - (E) regret.
2. The tone of "Filling Station" is primarily
   - (A) amused.
   - (B) condescending.
   - (C) admiring.
   - (D) indifferent.
   - (E) resentful.

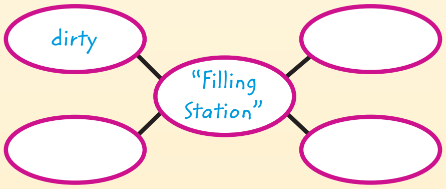
Review: Setting

As you learned on page 602, setting is the time and place in which the events of a literary work occur. Setting includes not only physical conditions, but also the ideas and customs of a time and place.

Partner Activity Meet with another classmate to discuss the setting of "Filling Station." Create a web like the one below and use it to list the different elements of the poem's setting. Then discuss what atmosphere, or mood, these details of setting help to create. Share your thoughts with the class.



Literary Element

1. C is the correct answer because Bishop initially describes the fish objectively, maintaining her judgmental distance.
2. A is the correct answer because of the humorous attitude in the lines "Be careful with that match!" and "Why, oh why, the doily?"

Review: Setting

Elements of the setting include comic books, "a big dim doily," and "a big hirsute begonia." These details create a mood of wonder.

Progress Check

Can students analyze tone?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 135.

Reading Strategy Evaluate Sensory Details

Sensory details are images that appeal to the reader's senses of hearing, sight, smell, taste, and touch.

1. Identify an image from each poem that appeals to your sense of sight. Describe what you see.
2. One critic writes that "the more we examine the description of contrast, the more we understand the poetry of Elizabeth Bishop." How does this statement apply to "The Fish" and "Filling Station"? Mention specific sensory details in your response.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Identify the context clues in the following sentences that help you determine the meaning of each boldfaced vocabulary word.

1. If you incorrectly apply the cleanser, you may tarnish the candlestick and do more harm than good.
2. Acid is strong; it can permeate almost any container.
3. If you add extraneous ingredients to the recipe, the food will taste wrong.

Academic Vocabulary

In Bishop's poem, the fish bears physical signs of its prior encounters with fishermen.

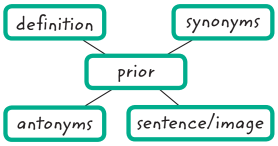
Prior is an academic word. In more casual conversation, you might tell your parents that prior to coming home for curfew, you had gone to a diner with some friends.

To study this word further, fill out the graphic organizer below.



For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Connect to Science

Assignment Research one aspect of the science underlying the poem "The Fish." For example, you can explore how a swim bladder functions, learn about sea-lice, or investigate the optics of refraction that cause a rainbow to form in oily water. Then present your findings in a written report.

Get Ideas Generate questions to aid in your investigation. Then make a list of possible sources of information and begin your research. Take notes on what you learn from each source, verifying that the information presented is reliable. Use a variety of sources, both print and online.

Create As you research, create a graphic organizer like the one below to keep track of what you learn.

Fact	Source
The tissues in fish's gills are filled with blood vessels, which makes them look bright red	Encyclopedia Britannica Online, "Fish: The Respiratory System"

Brainstorm a visual aid that will enhance your final report. You could create a chart to clarify ideas from your report or to display data, or you could include photographs or drawings.

Report Summarize and explain the pertinent information you have gathered. Use scientific terms as needed, but explain them in simpler language your classmates will understand. Then add your visual aid, integrating it using word processing software.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. Students' answers will vary but should be based on details in the poems.
2. Students may say that in each poem Bishop develops a contrast between her first perceptions and her later perceptions. They should support their answers with details from the poems.

Vocabulary

1. The sentence implies that tarnishing the candlestick will be counterproductive when using a cleanser, so to tarnish must be the opposite of "to clean."
2. The sentence implies that a strong acid can move through, or permeate, the container.
3. Recipes call for only what is necessary, so if you added extraneous ingredients to it, they would be unnecessary.

Academic Vocabulary

Sample answer:

prior

Definition: occurring before a given time or event

Synonyms: before, previous to, earlier

Antonyms: later, following, subsequent

Sentence: Prior to moving to America, Mariel lived in Australia for four years.

Connect to Science

Students' reports should:

- use reliable primary and secondary sources
- include attribution for quotations and factual information
- include a clarifying visual aid

To create custom assessments online, go to Progress Reporter Online Assessment.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 106

Or write the word sight on the board. Have students describe the classroom in terms only of what they see. Ask: How else can you describe the room? One by one, add the words sound, smell, touch, and taste, encouraging students to come up with as many descriptions as possible for each sense.

Literary History ☆

Transcendentalism Ralph Waldo Emerson (1803–1882) is the writer most closely identified with the transcendental movement, which emphasized the importance of the experiences of the senses. In his essay Nature, Emerson wrote, "The lover of nature is he whose inward and outward senses are still truly adjusted to each other."

Before You Read

Root Cellar

Meet Theodore Roethke
(1908–1963)

A much loved and acclaimed poet during his lifetime, Theodore Roethke won many prestigious awards, including the Pulitzer Prize, the National Book Award, and the Bollingen Prize. However, many of his poems have received higher honors than official prizes can bestow: They have become personal favorites for many readers, touching their lives deeply.

Roethke fashioned many of his poems from intense memories of his childhood in Saginaw, Michigan. His father and grandfather were florists, and Roethke grew up in a world of flowers, plants, and large commercial greenhouses. From these early experiences, he acquired a passionate love for nature and a deep understanding of natural processes. Like Emerson and Whitman, he almost mystically identified with the natural world: "In my veins, in my bones I feel it." Images of growth and decay recur in all of his volumes of poetry, including Open House (1941), The Lost Son and Other Poems (1948), The Waking (1953), and Words for the Wind (1958).

> "For Roethke, boundaries between outer and inner dissolve; the natural world seems a vast landscape of the psyche, just as the voyage inward leads to natural things—roots, leaves, and flowers—as emblems of the recesses of the self."
>
> —Mark Doty, from A Profile of Twentieth-Century American Poetry

Finding His Calling During Roethke's sophomore year of high school, his father died from lung cancer. This loss devastated him. At seventeen, he entered the University of Michigan, the first in his family to attend college. He graduated magna cum laude and after a semester in law school, enrolled as a graduate student in literature, first at the University of Michigan and a year later at Harvard.

At Harvard, Roethke handed three of his poems to Robert Hillyer, a poet and professor. After reading them, Hillyer said, "Any editor who wouldn't buy these is a fool!" Encouraged by Hillyer, Roethke submitted the poems to different journals and dedicated his life to writing poetry.

Poet and Teacher Despite his publishing success, Roethke could not afford to continue graduate school in 1931, when the United States was mired in the Great Depression. He took a position teaching English at Lafayette College in Easton, Pennsylvania, and later taught at Michigan State College, Pennsylvania State University, Bennington College, and the University of Washington.

Roethke brought the same passion to teaching as to writing poetry. Throughout his adult life, however, he struggled with psychological problems. He died of a heart attack when he was only fifty-five.

LOG ON Literature Online

Author Search For more about Theodore Roethke, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

Root Cellar

Literary Elements
- Simile (SE pp. 1223, 1225)
- Figurative Language (TE p. 1224)

Reading Skills
- Interpret Imagery (SE pp. 1223–1225)

Vocabulary Skills
- Synonyms (SE pp. 1223, 1225)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Poem (SE p. 1225)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poem

Which places in nature can you recall in great detail? Make a list of sensory details that describe this place.

Build Background

A root cellar is a dark, moist place where root vegetables, including carrots, beets, and potatoes, are stored for the winter along with potting soil and fertilizers. Root cellars are commonly built into the sides of hills, where the surrounding earth and the dirt floors help keep the temperature inside cool and the humidity high. Even in root cellars, however, produce can spoil. Sometimes, mold forms on the surfaces of plants, causing them to decay. Other times, vegetables stored too long begin to sprout, causing the roots or bulbs to rot.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Nature and Technology

As you read, ask yourself, What does the speaker suggest about the relationship between humans and nature?

Literary Element Simile

A simile is a figure of speech using a word or phrase such as like or as to compare seemingly unlike things. As you read, ask yourself, What is compared in the similes?

Reading Strategy Interpret Imagery

Interpreting imagery can help you better understand the meaning of a poem and the poet's intention. Imagery refers to any "word pictures" that writers create to evoke emotional responses. Imagery includes sensory details, or descriptions that appeal to one or more of the five senses: sight, hearing, touch, taste, and smell. As you read, ask yourself, To what senses do the images appeal?

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record the images in this poem and their sensory appeal.

Details	Sensory appeal
Bulbs broke out of boxes

Learning Objectives

For pages 1222–1225

In reading this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing simile.

Reading: Interpreting imagery.

Vocabulary

mildewed (mil´ dyūd) adj. coated or partially coated with a fungus that causes spoilage; p. 1224 We threw out the books stored in the basement because they were mildewed and damaged.

congress (kong´ gris) n. a formal meeting; p. 1224 There was a congress of physicists at the convention center.

rank (rangk) adj. having a strong, offensive odor; p. 1224 The clothing left in the gym lockers was dirty and rank.

Tip: Synonyms Words that have the same or nearly the same meaning are called synonyms. For example, the words dank and moist are synonyms. Synonyms are always the same part of speech.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In this poem, the speaker describes a root cellar where the bulbs have escaped their containers and have sent out roots in an attempt to grow. He notes with admiration the determined struggle of life, even in a damp, dark cellar filled with rotting plants.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 140–145.

Vocabulary

Common and Proper Nouns Tell students that the proper noun Congress refers to the governing bodies of the United States. The common noun, congress, refers to any group having a formal meeting. Have students write two sentences using the word mayor as a common and a proper noun. (A mayor runs a city. I called Mayor Jones.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Present the following sentences to students:

- The rope was coiled like a snake.
- The rotten food smelled like a swamp.
- The attic was a furnace.
- The clouds danced through the sky.

Say: Which words in these sentences would be called "figurative language"? (like a snake, like a swamp, was a furnace, clouds danced) Have students explain each use. Tell them to start a list with these examples and keep them in mind as they read Roethke's poem. Have them add to the list as they read.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Beginning List the following words from "Root Cellar" on the board: cellar, ditch, shoots (noun), lolling, tropical, pulpy, planks. Have students work in pairs to use a dictionary to look up the words and create a two-column chart to list each word and its meaning.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Nature and Technology

Answer: When root vegetables develop shoots, the vegetables rot and are no longer fit for humans to eat.

Ask students how vegetables could harm humans.

Reading Strategy 2

Interpret Imagery Answer: There is a shift from sensory details that appeal mainly to sight to ones that appeal mainly to smell.

APPROACHING Ask: What are some examples of details that appeal to sight? ("shoots dangled and drooped"; "yellow evil necks") What are some examples of details that appeal to smell? ("ripe as old bait"; "manure")

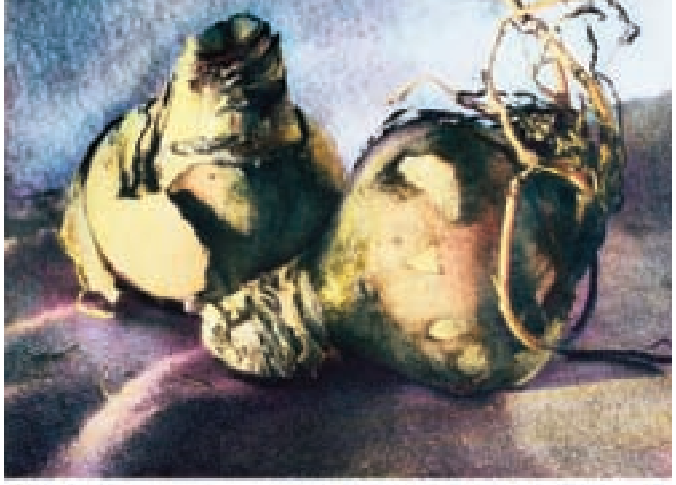
View the Art

Freyda Miller Freyda Miller is a contemporary photographer, painter, and conceptual artist whose "Fruits and Vegetables" series shows how man and nature are connected through shape and form. Ask: How would Roethke react to the use of this image with his poem? (Responses will vary but should indicate how the image captures some description in the poem.)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

ROOT CELLAR

Theodore Roethke



In the Beginning. Freyda Miller.

Nothing would sleep in that cellar, dank as a ditch,
Bulbs[1] broke out of boxes hunting for chinks[2] in the dark,
Shoots dangled and drooped,
Lolling obscenely from mildewed crates,
Hung down long yellow evil necks, like tropical snakes.
And what a congress of stinks!—
Roots ripe[3] as old bait,
Pulpy stems, rank, silo-rich,[4]
Leaf-mold, manure, lime,[5] piled against slippery planks.
Nothing would give up life:
Even the dirt kept breathing a small breath.

---

[1] Bulbs, here, refer to modified, underground stems surrounded by fleshy leaves that serve as the food supply for the growing plant.

[2] Chinks are narrow openings.

[3] Ripe, here, means "giving off a very foul odor."

[4] A silo is a tall, cylindrical structure in which plant materials are stored. The adjective silo-rich refers to an odor similar to that emitted by partially fermented plant materials stored in a silo.

[5] Lime, here, refers to a chemical used as a fertilizer for plants.

Nature and Technology Why does the speaker describe the necks of the shoots as evil? 1

Interpret Imagery How do the sensory details change with line 6 of the poem? 2

Vocabulary

mildewed (mil´ dyūd) adj. coated or partially coated with a fungus that causes spoilage congress (kong´ gris) n. a formal meeting rank (rangk) adj. having a strong, offensive odor

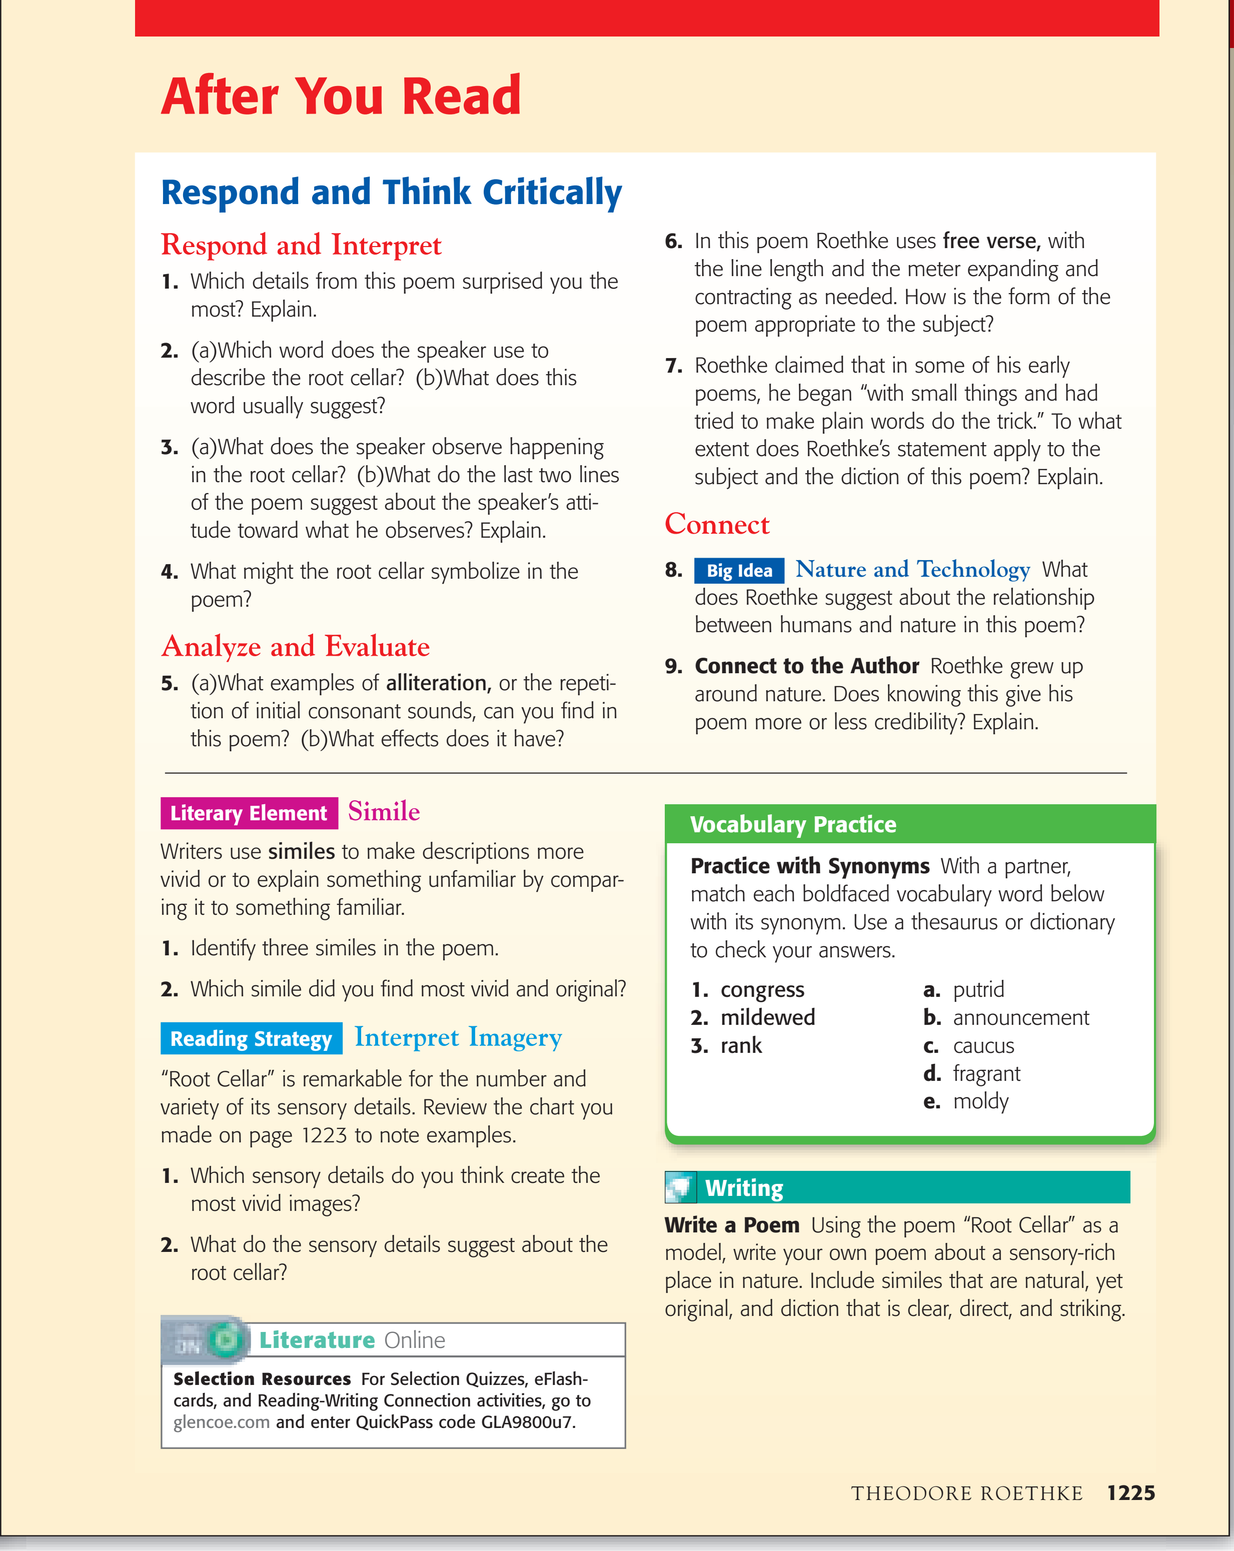
Reading Practice

Figurative Language Remind students of these types of figurative language, and have them identify examples of each in the poem:

- Simile: a comparison of two things by means of the word like or as (Possible answer: "like tropical snakes")
- Metaphor: a comparison of two things without like or as (Possible answer: "a congress of stinks")
- Personification: attributing human characteristics to animals, objects, or concepts (Possible answer: "the dirt kept breathing a small breath")

Ask: What do these examples of figurative language add to the poem?



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which details from this poem surprised you the most? Explain.
2. (a)Which word does the speaker use to describe the root cellar? (b)What does this word usually suggest?
3. (a)What does the speaker observe happening in the root cellar? (b)What do the last two lines of the poem suggest about the speaker's attitude toward what he observes? Explain.
4. What might the root cellar symbolize in the poem?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)What examples of alliteration, or the repetition of initial consonant sounds, can you find in this poem? (b)What effects does it have?
6. In this poem Roethke uses free verse, with the line length and the meter expanding and contracting as needed. How is the form of the poem appropriate to the subject?
7. Roethke claimed that in some of his early poems, he began "with small things and had tried to make plain words do the trick." To what extent does Roethke's statement apply to the subject and the diction of this poem? Explain.

Connect

8. Big Idea Nature and Technology What does Roethke suggest about the relationship between humans and nature in this poem?
9. Connect to the Author Roethke grew up around nature. Does knowing this give his poem more or less credibility? Explain.

Literary Element Simile

Writers use similes to make descriptions more vivid or to explain something unfamiliar by comparing it to something familiar.

1. Identify three similes in the poem.
2. Which simile did you find most vivid and original?

Reading Strategy Interpret Imagery

"Root Cellar" is remarkable for the number and variety of its sensory details. Review the chart you made on page 1223 to note examples.

1. Which sensory details do you think create the most vivid images?
2. What do the sensory details suggest about the root cellar?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Synonyms With a partner, match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with its synonym. Use a thesaurus or dictionary to check your answers.

1. congress
2. mildewed
3. rank

a. putrid
b. announcement
c. caucus
d. fragrant
e. moldy

Writing

Write a Poem Using the poem "Root Cellar" as a model, write your own poem about a sensory-rich place in nature. Include similes that are natural, yet original, and diction that is clear, direct, and striking.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) Dank (b) An unpleasant moistness
3. (a) Bulbs bursting through their containers, shoots sprouting through boxes, and dirt "breathing" (b) The speaker admires the power of life in the cellar.
4. The cellar symbolizes the speaker's subconscious—a dark place of growth and decay, primal urges, and an instinct not to give up life.
5. (a) dank/ditch (line 1); bulbs/broke/boxes (line 2) (b) It creates a musical effect and links words.
6. It suggests the breathing of a living thing.
7. The subjects of this poem, bulbs and shoots, are "small things." Such phrases as "lolling obscenely" and "a congress of stinks" may not seem like "plain words."
8. Nature is outside human control. Nature is also an image of the human psyche, reflecting the energy and turmoil of the hidden self.
9. Students may say that Roethke's experiences around plants gave him the opportunity to observe them first-hand. Others will argue that a poet should be able to imagine any situation regardless of his or her personal experiences.

Reading Strategy

1. Students may identify several images, such as those of the stored bulbs as hunters, the rotten roots smelling like old bait, and the dirt as a breathing animal.
2. The sensory details suggest that the root cellar is throbbing with life forces and primal energy.

Vocabulary

1. c 2. e 3. a

Writing

Students' poems should describe the place in great detail and include similes and proper diction.

Literary Element

1. "Dank as a ditch" (line 1); "hung down . . . like tropical snakes" (line 5); "ripe as old bait" (line 7)
2. Possible answer: The comparison of the shoots to snakes is most vivid because of its suggestion of vitality and evil.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 107

Or explain that the colors in our surroundings can often affect our mood. Ask students to share how various colors make them feel. Ask: What colors do you associate with a desert? How do you think those colors might affect your mood? Remind students to look for Plath's use of colors in her poems.

Literary History ☆

The Bell Jar Sylvia Plath's only novel, The Bell Jar, was first published in England in 1963 under the pseudonym Victoria Lucas. The novel traces the nervous breakdown and psychiatric treatment of Esther Greenwood, a successful college student spending the summer of 1953 working for a New York magazine.

Before You Read

Sleep in the Mojave Desert and Crossing the Water

Meet Sylvia Plath

(1932–1963)

Sylvia Plath was only eight when a Boston newspaper published her first poem. In high school, she won literary prizes and excelled academically, earning a scholarship to Smith College. During college, her poetry and prose were published in prestigious national magazines, and she continued to win awards. Sadly, her creative journey was shadowed by bouts of severe depression, during which she struggled with thoughts of death. These struggles ended when Plath took her own life at the age of thirty, a month after her critically acclaimed novel, The Bell Jar, was first published. Because much of her writing was so starkly personal, Plath's struggles and death have been closely tied to her image as a poet. However, her dark, beautiful poems speak on their own, fulfilling her ambition to create profound and lasting works.

> "I think my poems immediately come out of the sensuous and emotional experiences I have, but . . . I believe that one should be able to control and manipulate experiences, even the most terrific."
>
> —Sylvia Plath
> from a 1962 interview with Peter Orr

Confessions of a Poet Plath was born in Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts. Her father, Otto Plath, was a German immigrant and respected college professor who wrote a renowned study on bees. Her mother, Aurelia, had been one of her father's students at Boston University, where she graduated as valedictorian. Plath's father died when she was just eight, and the loss deeply affected her.

After graduating from Smith, Plath was awarded a Fulbright Fellowship and went to Cambridge, England, for graduate studies in poetry. There, in February 1956, she met an ambitious young British poet, the soon-to-be-famous Ted Hughes. By June they were married, beginning a passionate but turbulent relationship that heavily influenced the poetry of both. They were exploring an emerging type of literature—confessional poetry, which draws heavily on intimate details from the writer's life. After Cambridge, Plath returned to Massachusetts with Hughes and took a writing class with Robert Lowell, a highly regarded poet.

After a short time teaching and writing in the United States, Plath and Hughes moved back to England, where Plath published her first book of poems, Colossus, in 1960. During the last years of her life, she wrote at an often feverish pace. Many of these final poems were included in Plath's landmark collection Ariel, which was published two years after her death in February 1963. Over the next twenty years, more of Plath's poems would be collected and published by Hughes. Her final book, The Collected Poems, was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in 1982.

LOG ON Literature Online

Author Search For more about Sylvia Plath, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

Sleep in the Mojave Desert and Crossing the Water

Literary Elements
- Mood (SE pp. 1227, 1229, 1230)
- Figurative Language (SE p. 1230)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Compare and Contrast Setting (SE p. 1231)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Voice (SE pp. 1227, 1228, 1231)
- Predict (TE p. 1229)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Origins (SE pp. 1227, 1231)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Oral Interpretation of Literature (TE p. 1228)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poem

Have you ever been in a place that you thought reflected how you felt? Freewrite for a few minutes about this place and describe what made it significant for you.

Build Background

The poems "Crossing the Water" and "Sleep in the Mojave Desert" were among the dozens that Plath wrote as she struggled with her deepening depression. Although they do not include specific personal details, these are considered confessional poems because they explore Plath's emotions.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Nature and Technology

As you read, ask yourself, How is the speaker in these poems an outsider within the natural setting?

Literary Element Mood

Mood refers to the emotional quality, or atmosphere, of a literary work. The language, pace, and imagery combine to convey the mood of a poem. As you read, ask yourself, What is the mood of each poem?

Reading Strategy Analyze Voice

Voice is the personality that a writer conveys in a piece of writing. The reader can analyze voice by examining a poet's choice of words and the tone, or attitude toward the subject matter, that a poem expresses. As you read, ask yourself, What kind of language does the poet use?

Tip: Describe Voice Describe each element of voice in a chart like the one below. Consider what these elements contribute to the poem's overall voice and write a description of that voice.

Element	Description
Word choice
Tone
Voice

Learning Objectives

For pages 1226–1231

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing mood.

Reading: Analyzing voice.

Vocabulary

recede (ri sēd´) v. to move back or away from a limit, point, or mark; p. 1228 After the storm passed, we could see the floodwater recede.

swelter (swel´ tər) v. to suffer from oppressive heat; p. 1228 The crowd will swelter under the sun.

congregate (kong´ gri gāt´) v. to bring or come together in a group, a crowd, or an assembly; p. 1228 The team will congregate in the dugout.

valedictory (val´ ə dik´ tə rē) adj. of or relating to an occasion or expression of farewell; p. 1229 In his valedictory address, he bade farewell.

Tip: Word Origins Word origins, also called etymologies, are the history and development of words. They are often found in dictionary entries. If you know that the word "swelter" comes from an Old English word related to death, you can understand how oppressive and stifling it might feel to swelter in the heat.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Emphasize that mood refers to the emotional quality of the selection. Some words may make them feel happy, sad, or angry. Tone refers to the author's feelings toward the subject matter or the audience. Display the following: "You're a big help." Ask: How can you say this sentence in different ways to convey different tones? How would each make you feel? (can be either a true compliment or a sarcastic remark; could feel happy or angry) Explain that authors and poets use language and punctuation to convey how we use the tone of our voices.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

"Sleep in the Mojave Desert" presents a dark, even hostile, relationship between a desert landscape and humanity. In "Crossing the Water," the speaker and a companion are enveloped by blackness as they row on a lake.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 151–156.

Vocabulary

Latin Roots and Prefixes

Tell students that the words recede, congregate, and valedictory all derive from Latin roots and prefixes. Display the following: re- + cede; con- + gregate; vale + dictory. Ask: Based on the definitions in the vocabulary list and your own knowledge, what do you think each prefix or root means? (re-, again; cede, withdraw; con-, with; gregate, collect into a group; vale, farewell; dictory, to say) Have students list other words that use the prefixes re- and con-.

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 159.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Voice

Answer: Students may say that the author's voice is defined by the first-person point of view, the matter-of-fact tone, and the use of repetition.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 158.

Big Idea 2

Nature and Technology

Answer: Students may say that the dozing animals represent nature's indifference to the speaker's plight.

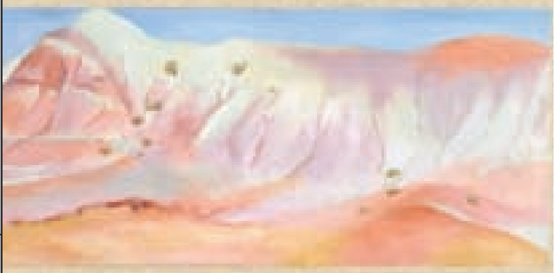
View the Art ★

This painting is by Georgia O'Keeffe (1887–1986), well known for her New Mexico landscapes and her close-up views of flowers. Ask: Do you think O'Keeffe's painting reflects the mood of Plath's poem? (Possible answers: The painting is more colorful than Plath's desert; the tone of the painting seems more cheerful than that of the poem.)

Sleep in the Mojave Desert

Sylvia Plath



Lavender Hill with Green, 1952. Georgia O'Keeffe. Oil on canvas. 12 x 27 ¹/₈ in. Gift of the Burnett Foundation and The Georgia O'Keeffe Foundation. The Georgia O'Keeffe Museum, Santa Fe, NM. ©ARS, NY. ★

Out here[1] there are no hearthstones,[2]
Hot grains, simply. It is dry, dry.
And the air dangerous. Noonday acts queerly
On the mind's eye, erecting a line
Of poplars[3] in the middle distance, the only Object beside the mad, straight road
One can remember men and houses by.
A cool wind should inhabit those leaves
And a dew collect on them, dearer than money,
In the blue hour before sunup.
Yet they recede, untouchable as tomorrow,
Or those glittery fictions of spilt water
That glide ahead of the very thirsty.

I think of the lizards airing their tongues
In the crevice of an extremely small shadow
And the toad guarding his heart's droplet.
The desert is white as a blind man's eye,
Comfortless as salt. Snake and bird
Doze behind the old masks of fury.
We swelter like firedogs[4] in the wind.
The sun puts its cinder out. Where we lie
The heat-cracked crickets congregate
In their black armorplate and cry.
The day-moon lights up like a sorry mother,
And the crickets come creeping into our hair
To fiddle the short night away.

---

[1] In saying Out here, Plath refers to the Mojave Desert, an arid region of southeastern California and parts of Arizona, Nevada, and Utah. Once part of an ancient inland sea, the desert was formed by volcanic action and materials deposited by the Colorado River.

[2] Hearthstones are stones used to create the floor of a fireplace; the word also conveys the sense of family life.

[3] Poplars are fast-growing deciduous trees (trees that lose their leaves seasonally).

[4] Firedogs, or andirons, are a pair of metal supports that hold logs in a fireplace.

Vocabulary

recede (ri sēd´) v. to move back or away from a limit, point, or mark swelter (swel´ tər) v. to suffer from oppressive heat congregate (kong´ gri gāt´) v. to bring or come together in a group, a crowd, or an assembly

Analyze Voice How does this passage help define the author's voice? 1

Nature and Technology How does this sentence reflect the role of nature in this poem? 2

Listening and Speaking Practice

SMALL GROUP

Oral Interpretation of Literature Have groups of students analyze the poem. Encourage them to explore how the speaker's tone might be conveyed in an oral presentation of the poem. Then have each group choose a volunteer to present a dramatic reading of the poem, using the group's interpretation of tone and meaning to guide his or her emphasis, inflection, and speed of reading. Have students compare and contrast the readings.

Crossing the Water

Sylvia Plath

River and Trees. Dider Dorval.

Black lake, black boat, two black, cut-paper people.
Where do the black trees go that drink here? 3
Their shadows must cover Canada.

A little light is filtering from the water flowers.
Their leaves do not wish us to hurry:
They are round and flat and full of dark advice.

Cold worlds shake from the oar.
The spirit of blackness is in us, it is in the fishes.
A snag[1] is lifting a valedictory, pale hand;

Stars open among the lilies.
Are you not blinded by such expressionless sirens?[2]
This is the silence of astounded souls.

---

[1] A snag is a tree or tree branch embedded in water that prevents navigation.

[2] In Greek mythology, Sirens were half-bird, half-woman sea creatures whose sweet singing lured mariners to destruction on the rocks that surrounded their island.

Mood What technique does Plath use in the opening lines to create mood? 4

Vocabulary

valedictory (val´ ə dik´ tə rē) adj. of or relating to an occasion or expression of farewell

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Predict Have a student read the first stanza aloud. Ask: On the basis of this stanza, what mood do you think the rest of the poem will have? (Students may say that the dark imagery in the opening stanza foreshadows a serious or dark mood.)

Literary Element 4

Mood Answer: She uses repetition of the word black.

APPROACHING Remind students that analyzing a poet's word choice can help them understand what mood the poet is trying to create in a poem. Have students make a list of words and phrases that they feel contribute to the dark and serious mood of the poem. ("dark advice," "cold worlds," "spirit of blackness")

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Discuss with students that although the overall mood of "Crossing the Water" might be considered dark and sad, there are some images that could be considered lighter and happier. Ask: Which images in this poem lighten the mood? ("A little light is filtering from the water flowers."; "Their leaves do not wish us to hurry"; "Stars open among the lilies.")

Emerging Remind students that personification is when a writer gives an animal, plant, or object human characteristics. In "Crossing the Water," Plath uses personification to enhance the onimous mood of the poem. Ask students to list some lines where the poet uses personification. ("Where do the black trees go that drink here?"; "Their leaves do not wish us to hurry"; "A snag is lifting a valedictory, pale hand")

After You Read

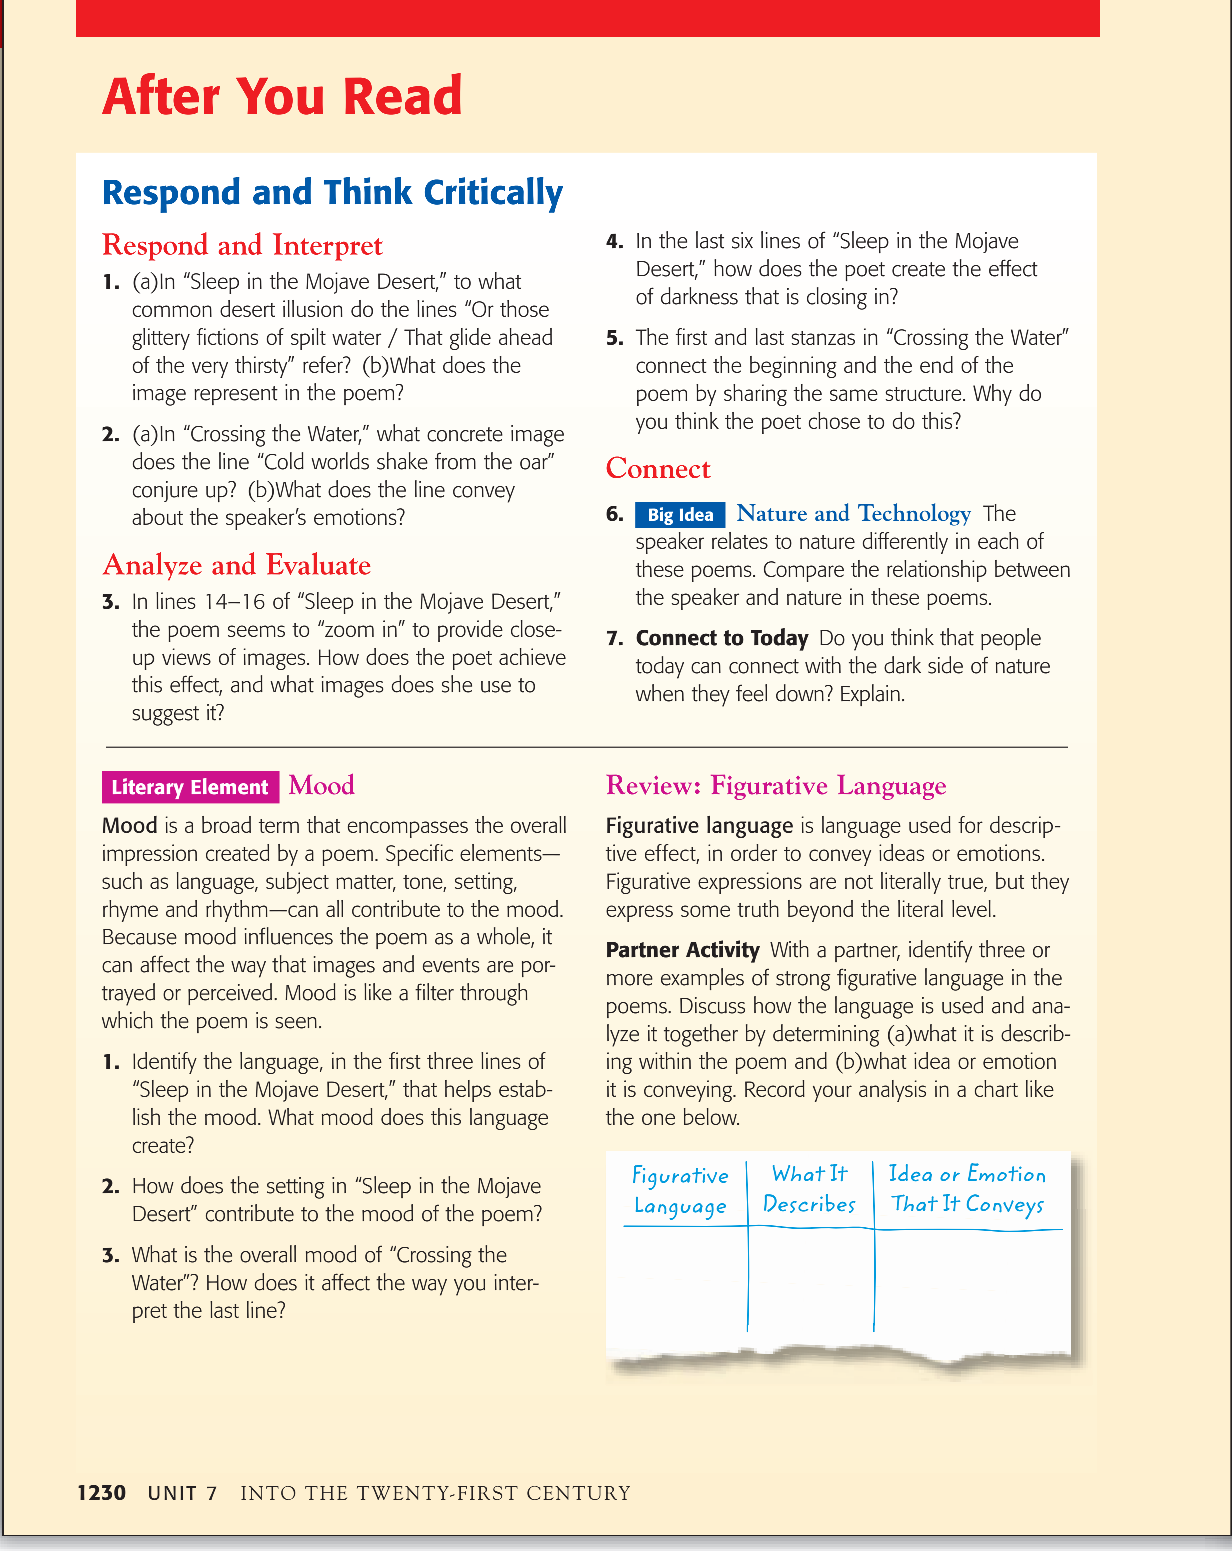
Assess

1. (a) A mirage (b) It represents an elusive desire.
2. (a) The line describes drops of water falling from the oar as it leaves the water. (b) The image might convey that the speaker is shaking off past sadness or pain.
3. The poet focuses on small images, such as the lizard tongues in the small shadow and the droplet of blood in the toad's heart.
4. The sun sinks, the moon rises, and black crickets surround the speaker, actually invading her hair.
5. The poet presents a line of description, a line that is a question, and a line that is a statement. The first and last stanza sharing the same structure gives the poem a circularity and feeling of timelessness.
6. Most students will say that nature seems more sympathetic to the speaker in "Crossing the Water" than in "Sleep in the Mojave Desert." In the latter poem, nature is indifferent—perhaps even hostile—to the speaker.
7. Students may argue that when someone is depressed they perceive everything as bleak, while others may say that connecting to nature might be a way to heal a person's emotions.

Progress Check

Can students analyze mood?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 157.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)In "Sleep in the Mojave Desert," to what common desert illusion do the lines "Or those glittery fictions of spilt water / That glide ahead of the very thirsty" refer? (b)What does the image represent in the poem?
2. (a)In "Crossing the Water," what concrete image does the line "Cold worlds shake from the oar" conjure up? (b)What does the line convey about the speaker's emotions?

Analyze and Evaluate

3. In lines 14–16 of "Sleep in the Mojave Desert," the poem seems to "zoom in" to provide close-up views of images. How does the poet achieve this effect, and what images does she use to suggest it?
4. In the last six lines of "Sleep in the Mojave Desert," how does the poet create the effect of darkness that is closing in?
5. The first and last stanzas in "Crossing the Water" connect the beginning and the end of the poem by sharing the same structure. Why do you think the poet chose to do this?

Connect

6. Big Idea Nature and Technology The speaker relates to nature differently in each of these poems. Compare the relationship between the speaker and nature in these poems.
7. Connect to Today Do you think that people today can connect with the dark side of nature when they feel down? Explain.

Literary Element Mood

Mood is a broad term that encompasses the overall impression created by a poem. Specific elements—such as language, subject matter, tone, setting, rhyme and rhythm—can all contribute to the mood. Because mood influences the poem as a whole, it can affect the way that images and events are portrayed or perceived. Mood is like a filter through which the poem is seen.

1. Identify the language, in the first three lines of "Sleep in the Mojave Desert," that helps establish the mood. What mood does this language create?
2. How does the setting in "Sleep in the Mojave Desert" contribute to the mood of the poem?
3. What is the overall mood of "Crossing the Water"? How does it affect the way you interpret the last line?

Review: Figurative Language

Figurative language is language used for descriptive effect, in order to convey ideas or emotions. Figurative expressions are not literally true, but they express some truth beyond the literal level.

Partner Activity With a partner, identify three or more examples of strong figurative language in the poems. Discuss how the language is used and analyze it together by determining (a)what it is describing within the poem and (b)what idea or emotion it is conveying. Record your analysis in a chart like the one below.

Figurative Language	What It Describes	Idea or Emotion That It Conveys

Literary Element

1. "Hot," "dry, dry," and "dangerous" create a mood of desperation.
2. The desert is oppressive; it is a setting that conveys emptiness and isolation.
3. The mood is dark and sad. The phrase "silence of astounded souls" takes on an emptiness instead of any feeling of profound discovery.

Review: Figurative Language

Figurative Language—"glittery fictions of spilt water"

What It Describes—desert mirages

Idea That It Conveys—the false hopes of an empty life

Reading Strategy Analyze Voice

SAT Skills Practice

1. The voice shared by Plath's two poems exhibits:

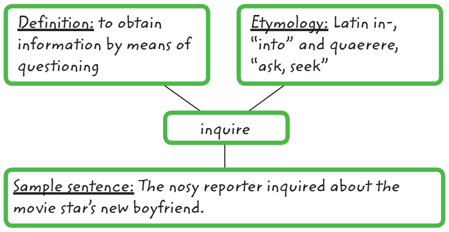
   I. gentleness.
   II. sadness.
   III. detachment.

   (A) I only
   (B) III only
   (C) I and II only
   (D) I, II, and III
   (E) II only

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Origins Create a word map like the one below for each vocabulary word from the selection. Use a dictionary for help.

recede swelter congregate valedictory



Definition: to obtain information by means of questioning Etymology: Latin in-, "into" and quaerere, "ask, seek" inquire
Sample sentence: The nosy reporter inquired about the movie star's new boyfriend.

Academic Vocabulary

Plath was a confessional poet, so aspects of her poems draw on her personal experiences.

Aspects is an academic word. More familiar words that are similar in meaning are traits, characteristics, parts, and features.

Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of aspects in each sentence and explain the difference between the two meanings:

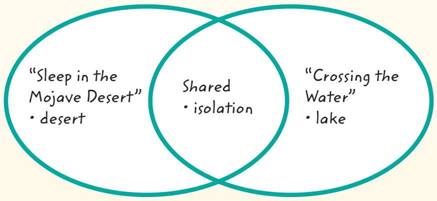
1. Before she spoke, I could tell by my aunt's sour aspect that I had made a grievous error.
2. Having examined all aspects of the situation, Gina decided that we should follow the map.

Speaking and Listening

Literature Groups

Assignment In a small group, compare and contrast the settings in these two poems. Discuss the elements that create each setting, differences and similarities between the settings, and how setting is used in each poem (for example, to create mood or atmosphere). Conclude by evaluating how effectively Plath uses setting. Do you find one poem more powerful than the other? Why or why not?

Prepare Before your discussion, create a Venn diagram like the one below. In the left oval, list elements from the setting of "Sleep in the Mojave Desert." In the right oval, list elements from "Crossing the Water." In the center section, list elements that the two poems share.



Discuss As you discuss your conclusions and share your diagrams, listen actively to your group members' opinions. Ask follow-up questions to help clarify their views. Support your own opinions with evidence from the poems.

Report Take notes on your classmates' opinions and supporting evidence. Then choose one person to present an informal but effective summary of your group's discussion to the whole class.

Evaluate Write one paragraph assessing your participation and another evaluating your group as a whole.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. D is the correct answer because the voice of Plath's poems, while melancholy and detached, is also gentle.

Vocabulary

recede

Definition: to move back or away from a limit; Etymology: Latin cedere means "to go"; Sample sentence: When the water began to recede, we knew that the pump was working.

swelter

Definition: to suffer from oppressive heat; Etymology: Old English sweltan means "to die"; Sample sentence: Even though we sat in the shade, we still sweltered at the baseball game.

congregate

Definition: to gather in a group; Etymology: Latin gregare means "to gather"; Sample sentence: The Spanish club congregates once a week for tapas and conversation.

valedictory

Definition: of or relating to an occasion or expression of farewell; Etymology: Latin valere, "to be well," and dicere, "to say"; Sample sentence: We had a valedictory party because an employee was leaving.

Speaking and Listening

Use these criteria to evaluate students' participation in the literature group:

- Did the student compare and contrast the settings in the two poems?
- Did the student express carefully thought-out opinions based on evidence from the poems?
- Did the student listen attentively to the opinions of others?

Academic Vocabulary

1. The speaker can tell just by looking that his or her aunt is upset, so here aspect means "a facial expression."
2. Ginas has considered the problem from every angle, so here aspects means "the factors to be considered."

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 108

Or ask: Do you think it is justifiable to develop woods or parkland into homes or shopping centers? Why or why not?

Have students debate the relative importance of development and nature. Apply the discussion to your hometown. Ask if students have noticed trees being cut down to make room for new buildings. Do they feel this action is good or bad?

Literary History ☆

Poet Laureate The Librarian of Congress has appointed the Poet Laureate Consultant in Poetry annually since 1936. His or her role is to increase Americans' appreciation of poetry. Among past U.S. Poet Laureates are Robert Lowell, Elizabeth Bishop, Robert Frost, and Billy Collins.

Before You Read

The War Against the Trees

Meet Stanley Kunitz

(1905–2006)

Stanley Kunitz's earlier work displays great wit and defiance; his later poems often express a passionate search for meaning and identity. One of the finest expressions of that quest is found in his poem "The Layers":

> I have walked through many lives,
> some of them my own,
> and I am not who I was,
> though some principle of being > abides, from which I struggle > not to stray.

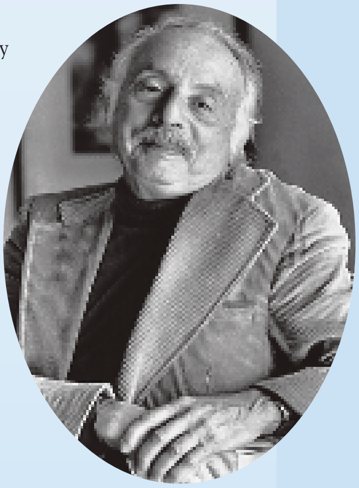
☆ Kunitz, twice U.S. Poet Laureate, won several literary awards, including a Pulitzer Prize for Selected Poems: 1928–1958 and a National Book Award for Passing Through: The Later Poems, New and Selected. In 1993, President Clinton awarded Kunitz the National Medal of the Arts.

Early Years Born in Worcester, Massachusetts, Kunitz studied at Harvard, graduating summa cum laude in 1926 and earning a master's degree in 1927. "I felt very isolated as a young person," he stated. "I didn't know another soul with whom I could share my interests. Eventually, after my Harvard years, I gravitated to New York, the magnet city of the arts, where I found an editorial job and began to send out my poems . . . but I was too busy and too shy to make friends easily, so I still felt like an outsider." In poetry, Kunitz found an outlet for his loneliness and a way to explore his "hidden self."

Poet and Teacher Intellectual Things, his first book of poetry, was published in 1930, when he was only twenty-five. Fourteen years later, Passport to War was published. After serving in World War II, Kunitz accepted a teaching position at Bennington College, where he joined fellow poet Theodore Roethke. Eventually, Kunitz taught at several other esteemed schools, including Yale, Princeton, Rutgers, and the New School for Social Research. He also served as poet-in-residence at the University of Washington, Queens College, Brandeis University, and Princeton and taught at Columbia University in the graduate writing program, which he helped found. To encourage and develop young writers, Kunitz founded the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown, Massachusetts, and Poets House in New York City.

Mentor Kunitz always enjoyed mentoring and encouraging young people interested in the arts. In 1984 the National Endowment for the Arts awarded him a Senior Fellowship "for his inordinate generosity in working with younger writers." Kunitz often responded to such accolades with characteristic wit: "As for my companionship with younger poets, I feel that I'm the one who's blessed in that relationship."



In addition to his poetry and literary criticism, Kunitz translated Russian poems by Yevtushenko, Stolzenberg, Akhmatova, and others into English and edited volumes of poetry by British poets William Blake and John Keats. Kunitz was considered one of the most gifted and influential writers of the modern era.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Stanley Kunitz, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

The War Against the Trees

Literary Elements
- Personification (SE pp. 1233–1235)
- Slant Rhymes (TE p. 1234)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Dialogue (SE p. 1235)

Reading Skills
- Evaluate Figures of Speech (SE pp. 1233–1235)

Vocabulary Skills
- Analogies (SE p. 1233, 1235)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poem

Which is more important to you: natural landscape or new development? In a small group, debate this question. Consider both economic and environmental issues.

Build Background

After World War II, the United States enjoyed a booming economy. Cities spread out, and suburbs sprang up. Land was cleared to make way for factories, housing developments, shopping malls, and schools. The national mood was optimistic, and growth and development were regarded as signs of the triumph of technology. Swept along in the march of progress, the public often condoned the destruction of natural landscapes.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Nature and Technology

As you read, ask yourself, How does Kunitz depict the conflict between nature and technology?

Literary Element Personification

Personification is a figure of speech in which an animal, an object, a force of nature, or an idea is given human characteristics. As you read, ask, How does Kunitz use personification?

Reading Strategy Evaluate Figures of Speech

A figure of speech is a specific kind of figurative language. Poets use figures of speech for descriptive effects and to convey ideas or emotions. In this poem, Kunitz often uses metaphor, a figure of speech that equates two unlike things. As you read, ask yourself, How does each metaphor affect the poem?

Tip: Chart Figurative Language Use a chart to list metaphors and the effect of the comparison.

Metaphor	Things Compared	Effect
“the bulldozers . . . overthrowing first the privet-row.”	the bulldozers and an attacking army

Learning Objectives

For pages 1232–1235

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing personification.

Reading: Evaluating figures of speech.

Vocabulary

lopped (lopt) v. trimmed or chopped off, as the branches of a tree; p. 1234 With its branches lopped off, the tree looked stubby and bare.

subverting (səb vurt´ ing) v. overthrowing and destroying; p. 1234 The people were intent on subverting the dictator and replacing him with a merciful ruler.

rampages (ram´ pāj´ iz) v. rushes wildly about; scurries; p. 1234 The hungry squirrel rampages from tree to tree, searching for acorns.

grievous (grē´ vəs) adj. causing or characterized by grief; extremely sad; p. 1234 The memorial service was a grievous occasion for both family and friends.

Tip: Analogies Comparisons based on relationships between words are known as analogies. For example, in the analogy lopped : attached :: weak : strong, each pair of words is opposite in meaning. To complete an analogy, decide on the relationship represented by the first pair of words. Then apply that relationship to the second set of words.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In this poem, the speaker describes the destruction of a lot bought by an oil company. As the neighbors gather to watch, the bulldozers tear up hedges, flowers, and century-old elm trees. The speaker reminisces about the children who once played there.

Vocabulary

Shades of Meaning

Review with students that although synonyms are words with similiar meanings, they can signal different tones or moods. Have students use a thesaurus and look up three synonyms for each verb in the vocabulary list. Have them work in small groups and decide how the tone or mood of the poem might change if the different synonyms were used in the poem instead.

APPROACHING Help approaching level students with this exercise by showing them examples of synonyms whose connotations are very different from that of the vocabulary word. (pruned or trimmed vs. lopped; ruining or damaging vs. subverting; scurries or hurries vs. rampages)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English learners will more easily understand the poem if they are fully familiar with the language of war. Preteach the following words in the context in which they are used in the poem: overthrowing, forays, raids, maimed, charged, hacking, craters, amputated. Have students create a two-column chart with the headings Words and Meanings. Direct them to consult a dictionary and find the appropriate meaning of each word in this context to include in their charts.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Viewpoint “The War Against the Trees” presents a view of life and nature. Have students write a paragraph stating these views using details from the poem to support their ideas.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Figures of Speech

Answer: The trees have lived on the land longer than any of the people in the town. Like old men, they are both dignified and frail.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Remind English learners that a metaphor is a figure of speech and that the poet is not saying that the trees are actually "great-grandfathers of the town." Ask: What other metaphors does the poet use to describe trees in this poem? (giants, gorgons)

Literary Element 2

Personification

Answer: They are the bulldozers attacking the trees and are described as charging, like soldiers charging enemies in battle.

Big Idea 3

Nature and Technology

Answer: It suggests that technology is more powerful than nature.

Progress Check

Can students analyze personification?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 169.

The War Against the Trees

Stanley Kunitz

The man who sold his lawn to standard oil[1]
Joked with his neighbors come to watch the show
While the bulldozers, drunk with gasoline,
Tested the virtue of the soil
Under the branchy sky
By overthrowing first the privet-row.[2]

Forsythia-forays and hydrangea-raids
Were but preliminaries to a war
Against the great-grandfathers of the town,
So freshly lopped and maimed.
They struck and struck again,
And with each elm a century went down.[3]

All day the hireling engines charged the trees,
Subverting them by hacking underground
In grub-dominions, where dark summer's mole[4]
Rampages through his halls,
Till a northern seizure shook
Those crowns,[5] forcing the giants to their knees.

I saw the ghosts of children at their games
Racing beyond their childhood in the shade,
And while the green world turned its death-foxed page
And a red wagon wheeled,
I watched them disappear
Into the suburbs of their grievous age.

Ripped from the craters much too big for hearts
The club-roots bared their amputated coils,
Raw gorgons[6] matted blind, whose pocks and scars
Cried Moon! on a corner lot
One witness-moment, caught
In the rear-view mirrors of the passing cars.

---

[1] An oil company has bought the land.

[2] A privet-row is a row of bushes.

[3] Elm trees grow very tall and, if they survive such onslaughts as Dutch Elm Disease, can live for more than a hundred years.

[4] Both grubs and moles live underground. Grubs are the wormlike larvae of beetles, and moles are burrowing rodents.

[5] Crowns refers to the top branches of the trees.

[6] In Greek mythology, the Gorgons were three monstrous sisters with coiled snakes for hair.

1 Evaluate Figures of Speech Why does the poet include this metaphor?

2 Personification What are "the hireling engines," and what human qualities does the poet give them?

Nature and Technology What does this line suggest about the conflict between technology and nature? 3

Vocabulary

lopped (lopt) v. trimmed or chopped off, as the branches of a tree subverting (səb vurt´ ing) v. overthrowing and destroying rampages (ram´ pāj´ iz) v. rushes wildly about; scurries grievous (grē´ vəs) adj. causing or characterized by grief; extremely sad

Reading Practice

Slant Rhyme Remind students that slant rhyme refers to the words at the ends of lines of poetry that almost—but do not quite—rhyme (like hearts and scars). Have students identify full rhymes and slant rhymes in this poem. (Possible answers: full rhymes—oil/soil; show/row; slant rhymes—raids/maimed; games/ shade/page*)* Ask: Is there a regular rhyme scheme? (No) How do the irregular rhymes affect the poem's message? (The irregular rhymes appear to "pop up" at the reader, like the roots sticking out of the bulldozed lot.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)Why is the land being cleared of trees? (b)Why have the neighbors "come to watch the show"?
2. (a)What are the "preliminaries" to the "war against the trees"? (b)Why does the speaker describe the bulldozers as "drunk with gasoline"?
3. (a)How do the bulldozers attack the trees? (b)Why does this action eventually topple them?
4. (a)What scene does the speaker imagine as the trees are coming down? (b)What message does the speaker convey through this scene? Explain.

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)After the trees have fallen, why does the speaker compare the land to the moon's surface? (b)Is this comparison effective or not? Explain.
6. (a)In the last two lines of the poem, what does the speaker suggest about the motorists driving by? (b)Does this image provide an effective ending to the poem? Explain why or why not.

Connect

7. Big Idea Nature and Technology Which people might conclude that they have won this "war"? Which people might conclude that they have lost it?
8. Connect to Today How might this poem be used to share a pro-environment message today? Explain.

Literary Element Personification

Poets often use personification to give ordinary, lifeless objects human characteristics such as personality, dignity, motive, and force.

1. How are the trees and bulldozers personified? What do these personifications suggest?
2. Why does the speaker personify the roots as Gorgons?

Reading Strategy Evaluate Figures of Speech

Occasionally, writers use an extended metaphor, or one that develops beyond a single line. What extended metaphor is used in "The War Against the Trees"? How effective do you think it is?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Analogies Choose the word pair that best completes each analogy

1. grievous : loss ::
   - a. slight : prediction
   - b. glorious : victory
   - c. humble : award
   - d. shameful : honor
2. lopped : cut ::
   - a. ignited : extinguished
   - b. gazed : looked
   - c. climbed : descended
   - d. succeeded : failed

Writing

Write a Dialogue While Kunitz does not give a voice to the people watching the bulldozers, he does imply several things about their character. Write a dialogue between some of the spectators. Use Kunitz's descriptions as a starting place for their conversation, tone, attitudes, and mannerisms.

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) So the oil company can construct a gas station (b) The arrival of the bulldozers has stirred curiosity.
2. (a) Uprooting of bushes (b) They have been filled with gas to prepare for work.
3. (a) Dig away the earth around the roots (b) When the trees are no longer anchored to the ground, they fall.
4. (a) Children playing in the shade (b) The speaker likens the children's disappearance to the destruction of the trees.
5. (a) The land is bare and pocked with holes, like the cratered surface of the moon. (b) Yes; it suggests the terrible damage done to the land.
6. (a) They notice the destruction only for an instant. (b) Yes; it emphasizes people's indifference to the destruction of nature; the motorists' demand for gasoline indirectly led to the trees' demise.
7. The oil company, the man who sold the land, and people who equate development with progress have won. People who value natural beauty over progress have lost.
8. Kunitz's descriptions of the destruction of the trees is powerful and could be used to make people reconsider development that destroys nature.

Literary Element

1. The trees are personified as elderly, gigantic great-grandfathers; the bulldozers, as warriors bent on destruction. The speaker is on the side of the trees.
2. The roots are coiled and snaky, like the Gorgons' hair.

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' writing:

- Is the writing in the form of a dialogue between two or more characters?
- Does the dialogue help to create the characters' individual personalities?

Reading Strategy

The extended metaphor is that of a relentless army (the bulldozers) attacking defenseless old men (the trees); it is very effective.

Vocabulary

1. b 2. b

Focus

Summary

This excerpt from Silent Spring begins with a fable of a beautiful rural town where, one spring, the animals, insects, plants, and people become ill, and many die. Carson then tells the reader that the people themselves caused the destruction through crop dusting.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Predict Ask: What tone does Carson set in the first paragraph? and which words set that tone? (idyllic tone; harmony, prosperous farms, orchards, white clouds, green fields, blaze of color)

Encourage students to predict, on the basis of what they read in Build Background, what will happen to this happy town.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 7.4
DRP: 62
Lexile: 1150

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 175–183.

Scientific Perspective on The War Against the Trees

from Silent Spring

Rachel Carson

National Book Award Winner

Learning Objectives

For pages 1236–1238

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Reading:
Recognizing author's purpose.
Analyzing informational text.

Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to discover Carson's persuasive dramatization of the dangers that chemicals pose to the environment.

Build Background

In 1962, scientist and author Rachel Carson published Silent Spring in an effort to warn the public about the serious environmental risks of such pesticides as DDT. Immediately, the chemical industry, agricultural organizations, and many government officials questioned the validity of the book's findings. However, scientific studies ordered by President John F. Kennedy found evidence to support Carson's research. These studies led to new legislation that banned or limited pesticide use.

Reading Strategy

Recognize Author's Purpose

To determine an author's purpose, carefully analyze such elements as the tone, structure, and content. As you read, ask yourself, Why does Carson begin Silent Spring with a tale about a town destroyed by chemicals?

There was once a town in the heart of America where all life seemed to live in harmony with its surroundings. The town lay in the midst of a checkerboard[1] of prosperous farms, with fields of grain and hillsides of orchards where, in spring, white clouds of bloom drifted above the green fields. In autumn, oak and maple and birch set up a blaze of color that flamed and flickered across a backdrop of pines. Then foxes barked in the hills and deer silently crossed the fields, half hidden in the mists of the fall mornings. 1

Along the roads, laurel, viburnum and alder,[2] great ferns and wildflowers delighted the traveler's eye through much of the year. Even in winter the roadsides were places of beauty, where countless birds came to feed on the berries and on the seed heads of the dried weeds rising above the snow. The countryside was, in fact, famous for the abundance and variety of

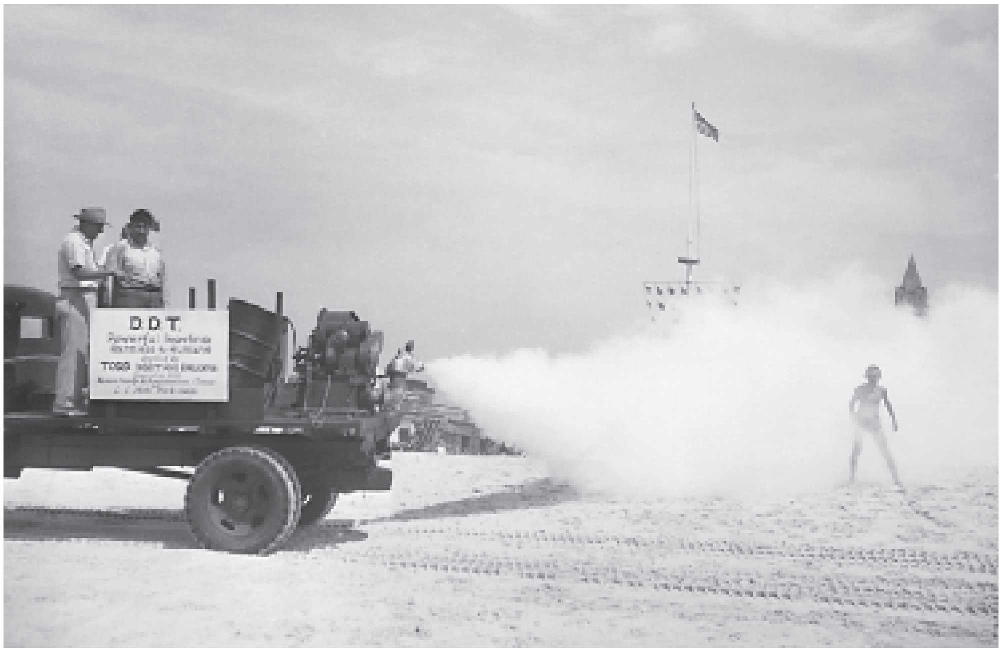
---

[1] The farmland looks somewhat like a checkerboard because each square field, planted with different crops, is slightly different in color and texture.

[2] Laurel refers to the flowering shrub mountain laurel; viburnum is the scientific name for the fragrant honeysuckle bush; alder is the name of trees in the birch family.

Writing Practice

Take Notes Tell students to reread this selection and identify the main idea and details, the author's tone and purpose for writing, the rhetorical devices the author uses, and unfamiliar words whose meanings they may need to investigate. Write the headings "Main Idea and Supporting Details," "Tone," "Author's Purpose," "Rhetorical Devices," and "Unfamiliar Words" on the board, and have students copy them onto sheets of paper to guide their note taking as they reread.



First Public Test of Insecticide Machine. Beachgoers are sprayed with DDT as a new machine for distributing the insecticide is tested for the first time. 1945. ★ its bird life, and when the flood of migrants[3] was pouring through in spring and fall people traveled from great distances to observe them. Others came to fish the streams, which flowed clear and cold out of the hills and contained shady pools where trout lay. So it had been from the days many years ago when the first settlers raised their houses, sank their wells, and built their barns.

Then a strange blight[4] crept over the area and everything began to change. Some evil spell had settled on the community: mysterious maladies[5] swept the flocks of chickens; the cattle and sheep sickened and died. Everywhere was a shadow of death. The farmers spoke of much illness among their families. In the town the doctors had become more and more puzzled by new kinds of sickness appearing among their patients. There had been several sudden and unexplained deaths, not only among adults but even among children, who would be stricken suddenly while at play and die within a few hours.

There was a strange stillness. The birds, for example—where had they gone? Many people spoke of them, puzzled and disturbed. The feeding stations in the backyards were deserted. The few birds seen anywhere were moribund;[6] they trembled violently and could not fly. It was a spring without voices. On the mornings that had once throbbed with the dawn chorus of robins, catbirds, doves, jays, wrens, and scores of other bird voices there was now no sound; only silence lay over the fields and woods and marsh. 2

---

3. Here, migrants refers to migrating birds.
4. A blight is a widespread withering or illness caused by such negative forces as pollution, bacteria, insects, or parasites.
5. Maladies are illnesses.
6. Moribund means "having very little strength left." The remaining birds are weakening and dying.

Teach

Big Idea 2

Nature and Technology

Ask: What is Carson's view of the impact of technology on nature? (Her view is negative. In her fable, everything dies because of technology.) Is her concern realistic? Could this happen today? Why or why not? (Some students may say that technology has become so sophisticated that it could not happen today. Others may say that advances in technology bring greater risks.)

View the Photograph ★

Although DDT was discovered in 1874, it was not widely used as a pesticide in the United States until after World War II. Scientists were concerned because DDT builds up in the food chain, harming wildlife. Silent Spring brought the issue to the public's attention in 1962.

Ask: How does the photo show the conflict between nature and technology? (A person enjoying the beach is sprayed with a harmful substance created by technology.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Ask students to find the paragraph in which the tone changes. Have them list the words that helped them identify this change. (first full paragraph on p. 1237; words include "strange blight," "evil spell," "mysterious maladies," "sickened and died," "shadow of death")

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

AAVE Approaching level students who use AAVE may have difficulty inverting syntax to form questions. Write the question from the passage above, "where had they gone?" on the board. Ask students to write a response to the question as a statement. (They had gone away.) Point out the inverted positions of the subject and verb. Write the sentence "She isn't home" and the word "why." Have students write a sentence combining the two. (Why isn't she home?) Discuss the inversion of "isn't" and "she" to formulate a question.

Assess

1. Many students will cite the destruction of life—plant, animal, and human—as the most surprising and shocking revelation.
2. (a) It changes from an idyllic, productive community to a weakened, poisoned place. (b) Most students will say that it is a chemical that the people used to kill insects.
3. (a) Carson shifts to the first-person point of view. (b) Students may say that Carson wants to address the reader directly, to issue a strong warning.
4. Carson began with a fable in order to engage readers in a way that cold facts and examples might not. The picture of the town's destruction is far more immediate and personal than statistics about places that readers have never visited.
5. The rural setting is particularly effective because of its original unspoiled character.
6. Students' answers will vary.

On the farms the hens brooded, but no chicks hatched. The farmers complained that they were unable to raise any pigs—the litters were small and the young survived only a few days. The apple trees were coming into bloom but no bees droned among the blossoms, so there was no pollination and there would be no fruit.

The roadsides, once so attractive, were now lined with browned and withered vegetation as though swept by fire. These, too, were silent, deserted by all living things. Even the streams were now lifeless. Anglers[7] no longer visited them, for all the fish had died.

> On the mornings that had once throbbed with the dawn chorus of robins, catbirds, doves, jays, wrens, and scores of other bird voices there was now no sound . . .

In the gutters under the eaves and between the shingles of the roofs, a white granular powder still showed a few patches; some weeks before it had fallen like snow upon the roofs and the lawns, the fields and streams.

No witchcraft, no enemy action had silenced the rebirth of new life in this stricken world. The people had done it themselves.

This town does not actually exist, but it might easily have a thousand counterparts in America or elsewhere in the world. I know of no community that has experienced all the misfortunes I describe. Yet every one of these disasters has actually happened somewhere, and many real communities have already suffered a substantial number of them. A grim specter has crept upon us almost unnoticed, and this imagined tragedy may easily become a stark reality we all shall know.

---

[7] An angler is a person who fishes with a rod and reel.

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What most shocked or surprised you about the possible effects of environmental pollution that Carson suggests? Explain.
2. (a)Describe the change that occurs in the town. (b)What might the "white granular powder" have been? Explain your interpretation.
3. (a)What shift occurs in the final paragraph? (b)What effect do you think Carson is trying to achieve with this shift?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. Carson chose to begin her book with a simple tale rather than with dramatic examples of the misuse of dangerous chemicals. Why do you think she made that choice? Explain whether you think it was a wise choice.
5. Carson called this piece the "Fable of Tomorrow." It takes place in a perfect, rural setting. Do you think it would have been more effective if Carson had chosen some other setting, such as a large city or suburb? Explain.

Connect

6. What thoughts about environmental health in your community did the excerpt inspire in you? Explain.

Vocabulary Practice

Connotations Remind students of the importance of connotations in creating tone. Carson at first uses words with strongly positive connotations in her description of the town. Then she uses words with negative connotations to indicate a grim transformation. Have students point out words with negative connotations in the selection. (Possible responses: blight; moribund; withered) Instruct students to go through the selection, adding unfamiliar or difficult vocabulary to their lists.

Before You Read

SQ

Meet Ursula K. Le Guin

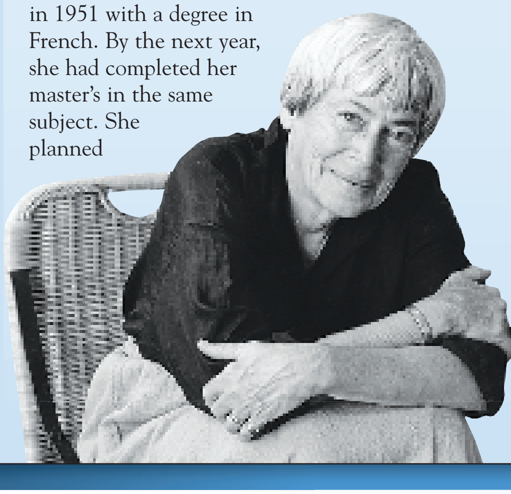
(born 1929)

Ursula Le Guin revolutionized science fiction. Before she began publishing in the 1960s, the genre was dominated by male writers. Le Guin's stories, in which women and people from different cultures began to appear as main characters, broadened the genre.

A Rich Background Le Guin grew up in Berkeley, California, where her father, an internationally respected anthropology professor, taught. Her mother, a writer with a background in psychology, wrote mainly children's books but was famous for her nonfiction work about the lone survivor of the Yahi tribe of California. This book, Ishi in Two Worlds, is still read and admired today.

Scholar, Writer, and Mother Le Guin always considered herself to be a writer. She wrote her first fantasy story at nine. By age twelve, she had submitted a science fiction story for publication. Although it was not accepted, Le Guin took pride in receiving a "real rejection slip." Unfazed, she continued writing. Her father, however, encouraged her to be practical when it was time to choose a career. A talented language scholar, Le Guin graduated from Radcliffe in 1951 with a degree in French. By the next year, she had completed her master's in the same subject. She planned to write a dissertation, receive her doctorate, and make a career of teaching at the university level.



That plan soon changed. In 1953 Le Guin was on her way to Europe on a Fulbright scholarship to study Italian and French literature. Traveling on the ocean liner the Queen Mary, Le Guin met another Fulbright scholar, Charles Le Guin, who was also going to study in Europe. The two fell in love and were married by the end of the year.

> "My father studied real cultures and I make them up—in a way, it's the same thing."
>
> —Ursula K. Le Guin

When they returned to the U.S., Ursula decided to drop her studies to write and to raise a family. She sold her first science fiction story in 1962. Four years later, her first novel was published.

A Prolific Career Le Guin has published more than thirty novels and over a hundred short stories, including works for children and young adult readers. Le Guin has received dozens of awards for her work, among them the prestigious Hugo and Nebula awards for her science fiction and the National Book Award. She has written poetry, essays, and literary criticism; collaborated on screenplays and an opera; and taught classes and workshops for many aspiring science fiction and fantasy writers. Le Guin believes strongly in the importance of the imagination, asserting that "It is above all by the imagination that we achieve perception, compassion, and hope."

LOG ON Literature Online

Author Search For more about Ursula K. Le Guin, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 109

Or explain that the story they are about to read deals with the use of standardized tests to judge people's sanity. Start a discussion about why standardized tests should or should not be used by colleges and other institutions to judge applicants. Ask: How do you think colleges should choose among applicants? Why?

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 184–189.

Selection Skills

SQ

Literary Elements
- Satire (SE pp. 1240, 1241, 1243, 145-1249, 1251)
- Narrator (SE p. 1250; TE p. 1244)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Expository Essay (SE p. 1252)
- Science Fiction (TE p. 1248)

Reading Skills
- Identify Genre (SE pp. 1240, 1242, 1244-1249, 1251)
- Use Graphic Organizers (TE p. 1242)
- Predict (TE p. 1246)

Vocabulary Skills
- Analogies (SE pp. 1251)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 1251)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE pp. 1243, 1244)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

The narrator, Mary Ann Smith, is head secretary for Dr. Speakie, who has invented an SQ (sanity quotient) test. The World Government adopts the test despite protests. Eventually, the majority of the world is either in asylums or on the asylums' staffs. Finally, the World Government collapses when most of its members flunk the SQ test. Speakie takes over the running of the world. When he too flunks the test, Mary Ann runs the world.

Vocabulary

Prefixes and Suffixes Have students identify any prefixes and suffixes they recognize in the vocabulary list, and indicate their meanings. (In the word implementation, im- means "into" and -tion means "act of." In the word infrastructure, infra- means "below." In hysterical, -al means "characterized by." In uncanny, un- means "not.") Have them list other words with these prefixes and suffixes.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

What would be the benefits and drawbacks of checking mental health on a regular basis? Write a pro-con list in which you explore reasons for and against regular mental health check-ups.

Build Background

"SQ" is set in a time in the future when one government rules the world and uses standardized tests to measure mental health. Standardized tests are often used to test mastery of academic subjects or aptitude for different professions. Standardized tests have also been devised to measure intelligence. Such tests are called intelligence quotient, or IQ, tests. Though widely used, they remain controversial as regards what exactly they measure.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Nature and Technology

As you read, ask yourself, How important is technology in Dr. Speakie's plan?

Literary Element Satire

Satire is writing that uses humor to comment on philosophical ideas, social customs, political institutions, and even general human tendencies. As you read, ask yourself, What does Le Guin satirize?

Reading Strategy Identify Genre

A short story is a brief fictional narrative in prose that generally includes setting, characters, plot, and theme. Science fiction is a type of fiction that deals with the impact of science, technology, or both on individuals and society. Science fiction is often set in the future. As you read, ask yourself, What features of this story make it science fiction?

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart like the one below to record details that indicate this work is a science fiction story.

Science Fiction Characteristics
Setting
Impact of Science
Impact of Technology

Learning Objectives

For pages 1239–1252

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing satire.

Reading: Identifying genre.

Vocabulary

implementation (im´ plə mən tā´ shən) n. putting into effect; putting into use; p. 1242 The implementation of a test involves several steps.

infrastructure (in´ frə struk´ chər) n. the underlying base for an organization or a system; p. 1243 Without the infrastructure of teachers, administrators, and building support staff, it would be difficult to educate the youth of our nation.

stigma (stig´ mə) n. mark or characteristic of disgrace; p. 1245 Ripped jeans have changed from stigma to fashion statement.

hysterical (his ter´ i kəl) adj. characterized by panic or other uncontrolled emotion; p. 1247 A person who is hysterical might not make sense.

secede (si sēd´) v. to formally withdraw from an alliance; p. 1247 South Carolina was the first of the Southern states to secede from the United States in the events leading up to the Civil War.

Reading Practice

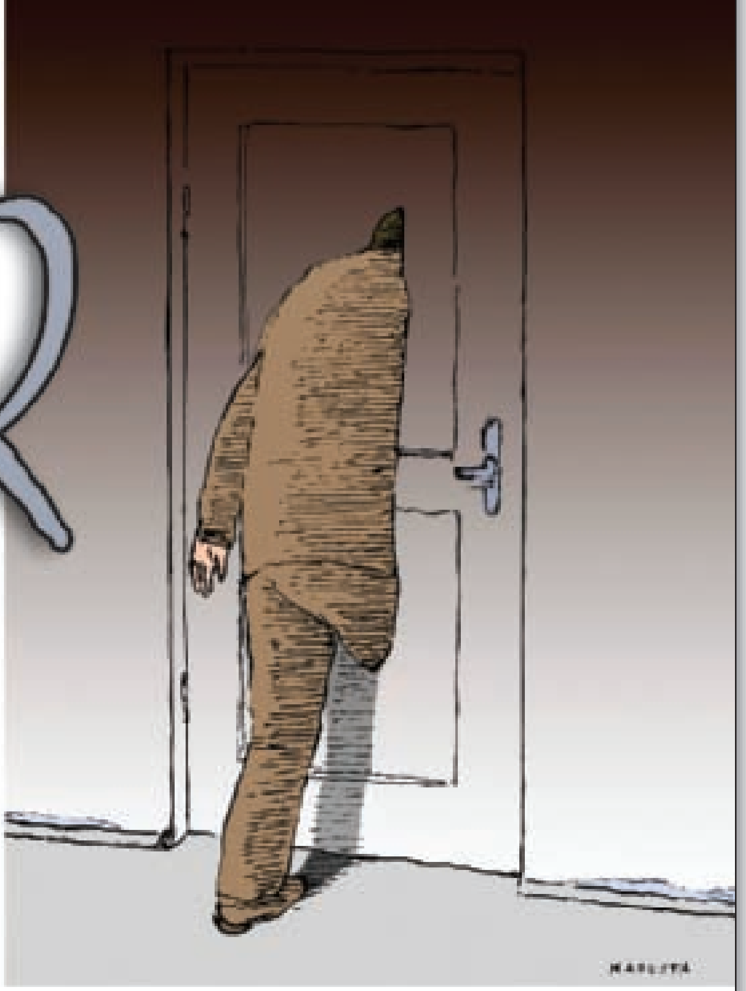
SMALL GROUP

Charting Jargon Explain that throughout the story, Le Guin satirizes wordy, official-sounding language that is often found in government or technical documents. Explain that this type of language is jargon, or specialized language used by a certain group. Jargon often hides the truth behind euphemisms that sound authoritative. Show students the examples in the chart, and have them fill in a similar chart as they read.

Jargon from "SQ"	Meaning
"…before the actual implementation of its application could be eventualized." (eventualized is a made-up word)	before people could take the test
"structurization of the Cure Centers" (structurization is a made-up word)	building of places to hold people who do not pass a test

SQ

Ursula K. Le Guin



Man Disappearing through Closed Door. Janusz Kapusta. ★

1 I think what Dr. Speakie has done is wonderful. He is a wonderful man. I believe that. I believe that people need beliefs. If I didn't have my belief, I really don't know what would happen.

And if Dr. Speakie hadn't truly believed in his work, he couldn't possibly have done what he did. Where would he have found the courage? What he did proves his genuine sincerity.

There was a time when a lot of people tried to cast doubts on him. They said he was seeking power. That was never true. From the very beginning all he wanted was to help people and make a better world. The people who called him a power seeker and a dictator were just the same ones who used to say that Hitler was insane and Nixon[1] was insane and all the world leaders were insane and the arms race was insane and our misuse of natural resources was insane and the whole world civilization was insane and suicidal. They were always saying that. And they said it about Dr. Speakie. But he stopped all that insanity, didn't he? So he was right all along, and he was right to believe in his beliefs.

2 Satire What form of humor is Le Guin using here?

---

[1] Nixon refers to Richard M. Nixon, who was U.S. president from 1969 to 1974. As president, Nixon was involved in a political scandal known as Watergate. In 1974 he opted to resign from office rather than face an impeachment trial.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Nature and Technology

Say: As you read, keep this question in mind: What are the dangers of scientific progress? (Most students will see the scientific "progress" in this story as dehumanizing.)

Literary Element 2

Satire

Answer: Irony

Ask: What is ironic about these lines? (By criticizing Speakie's detractors, who also condemn Hitler, the narrator unwittingly implies that Speakie is despotic and destructive.)

ADVANCED Have students reread the third paragraph and examine the author's choice of words. Ask: How does the repetition of the word insane add to the irony? (The repetition of the word insane adds to the readers' impression that the narrator is raving and may not be the best judge of sanity.)

View the Art ★

Janusz Kapusta Polish artist Janusz Kapusta has worked on everything from paintings to magazine illustrations to set designs. He is known for inventing an eleven-faced polyhedron, which he named K-dron.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Make sure English learners are familiar with the references on this page. Explain the following as needed: Hitler, Nixon, Watergate, and the arms race. Ask: What do these people and events have in common? (They are all considered immoral or threatening.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Tell students that it helps to try to "hear" the humor as they read. Have students take turns reading a paragraph aloud, trying different tones of voice in their readings—sarcastic, matter-of-fact, monotone, and so forth.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.3
DRP: 58
Lexile: 1120

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Identify Genre Answer: This event has not occurred, so the story must be set in the future. A futuristic setting is a characteristic of science fiction.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 191.

Big Idea 2

Nature and Technology
Answer: The author may not view technology with unreserved enthusiasm.

Reading Strategy 3

Identify Genre Answer: The idea that sanity can be measured by a simple test

Political History ☆

The United Nations The United Nations came into official existence, with 51 member nations, when its charter was ratified on October 24, 1945. It now has more than 190 member nations. Every October 24 is celebrated as United Nations Day.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

I came to work for him when he was named the Chief of the Psychometric[2] Bureau. I used to work at the U.N.,[3] and when the World Government took over the New York U.N. Building, they transferred me up to the thirty-fifth floor to be the head secretary in Dr. Speakie's office. I knew already that it was a position of great responsibility, and I was quite excited the whole week before my new job began. I was so curious to meet Dr. Speakie, because of course he was already famous. I was there right at the dot of nine on Monday morning, and when he came in, it was so wonderful. He looked so kind. You could tell that the weight of his responsibilities was always on his mind, but he looked so healthy and positive, and there was a bounce in his step—I used to think it was as if he had rubber balls in the toes of his shoes. He smiled and shook my hand and said in such a friendly, confident voice, "And you must be Mrs. Smith! I've heard wonderful things about you. We're going to have a wonderful team here, Mrs. Smith!"

Later on he called me by my first name, of course.

That first year we were mostly busy with Information. The World Government Presidium and all the Member States had to be fully informed about the nature and purpose of the SQ Test, before the actual implementation of its application could be eventualized. That was good for me too, because in preparing all that information I learned all about it myself. Often, taking dictation,[4] I learned about it from Dr. Speakie's very lips. By May I was enough of an "expert" that I was able to prepare the Basic SQ Information Pamphlet for publication just from Dr. Speakie's notes. It was such fascinating work. As soon as I began to understand the SQ Test Plan, I began to believe in it. That was true of everybody else in the office and in the Bureau. Dr. Speakie's sincerity and scientific enthusiasm were infectious. Right from the beginning we had to take the Test every quarter, of course, and some of the secretaries used to be nervous before they took it, but I never was. It was so obvious that the Test was right. If you scored under 50 it was nice to know that you were sane, but even if you scored over 50 that was fine too, because then you could be helped. And anyway it is always best to know the truth about yourself.

As soon as the Information service was functioning smoothly, Dr. Speakie transferred the main thrust of his attention to the implementation of Evaluator training, and planning for the structurization of the Cure Centers, only he changed the name to SQ Achievement Centers. It seemed a very big job even then. We certainly had no idea how big the job would finally turn out to be!

As he said at the beginning, we were a very good team. We all worked hard, but there were always rewards.

I remember one wonderful day. I had accompanied Dr. Speakie to the Meeting of the Board of the Psychometric Bureau. The emissary[5] from the State of Brazil announced that his State had adopted the Bureau Recommendations for Universal Testing—we had known that that was going to be announced. But then the delegate from Libya and the delegate from China announced that their States had adopted the [2] Psychometric (sī´ kə met´ rik) relates to a branch of psychology that deals with tests designed to measure any psychological variable, such as intelligence, aptitude, or personality type.

---

[3] U.N. is an abbreviation that stands for the United Nations.

[4] Taking dictation is the act of writing down what someone else is saying. It used to be common for secretaries to take dictation from their bosses. They would type up the information as a letter, a memo, or in another written format.

[5] An emissary is a person sent on a mission to represent or advance the interests of another person, especially those of a leader of a nation.

1 Identify Genre What detail of the setting helps you identify this story as science fiction?

2 Nature and Technology What does this sentence suggest about the author's attitude toward technology?

Vocabulary

implementation (im´ plə mən tā´ shən) n. putting into effect; putting into use

Identify Genre What aspect of the story's subject helps you identify the story as science fiction? 3

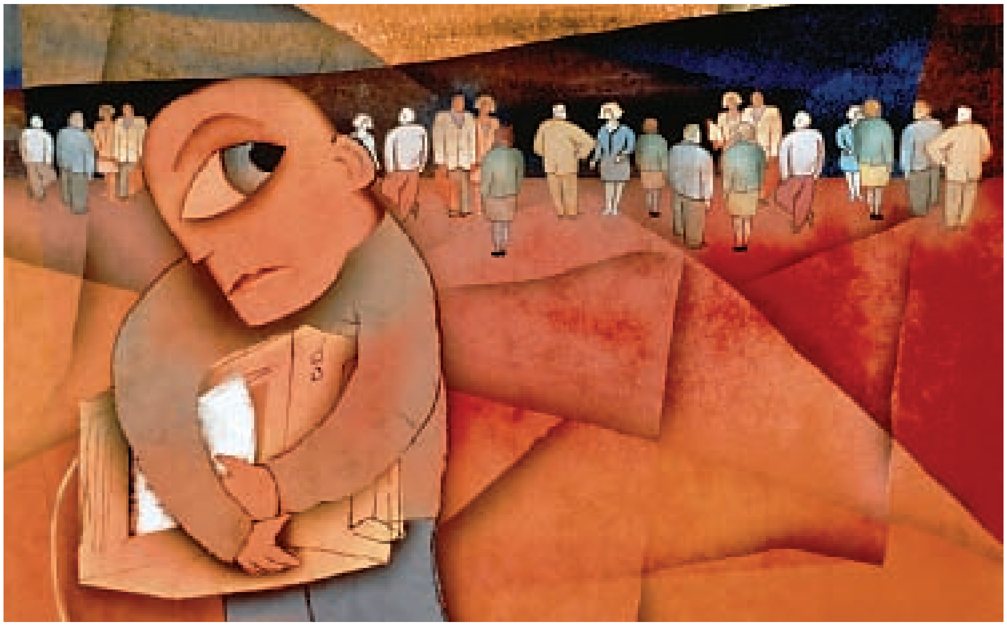
Study Skills Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW

Use Graphic Organizers Details about the main characters gradually unfold throughout this story. Ask: What do we know about the narrator so far? (The narrator is a woman named Mrs. Smith, and she is the head secretary for Dr. Speakie. She formerly worked at the U.N.) Have students make graphic organizers to keep track of character details. Tell students to create a concept web with "Mrs. Smith" in the middle and details about Smith in the surrounding boxes. Tell students to create a similar web for Dr. Speakie.



Fearful Man Turned Away From Crowd. John Ritter.

View the Art While Plato saw beauty in precise proportions, many contemporary artists distort the size of objects. Why do you think John Ritter used a disproportionately large eye here? What aspects of Dr. Speakie's personality does the man in this image capture? ★

Test too! Oh, Dr. Speakie's face was just like the sun for a minute, just shining. I wish I could remember exactly what he said, especially to the Chinese delegate, because of course China was a very big State and its decision was very influential. Unfortunately I do not have his exact words because I was changing the tape in the recorder. He said something like, "Gentlemen, this is a historic day for humanity." Then he began to talk at once about the effective implementation of the Application Centers, where people would take the Test, and the Achievement Centers, where they would go if they scored over 50, and how to establish the Test Administrations and Evaluations infrastructure on such a large scale, and so on. He was always modest and practical. He would rather talk about doing the job than talk about what an important job it was. He used to say, "Once you know what you're doing, the only thing you need to think about is how to do it." I believed that that is deeply true.

From then on, we could hand over the Information program to a subdepartment and concentrate on How to Do It. Those were exciting times! So many States joined the Plan, one after another. When I think of all we had to do, I wonder that we didn't all go crazy! Some of the office staff did fail their quarterly Test, in fact. But most of us working in the Executive Office with Dr. Speakie remained quite stable, even when we were on the job all day and half the night. I think his presence was an inspiration. He was always calm and positive, even when we had to arrange things like training 4 Nature and Technology Does this technology seem advanced? Why or why not?

Vocabulary

infrastructure (in´ frə struk´ chər) n. the underlying base for an organization or a system

Satire The narrator considers Dr. Speakie's statement to be wise and profound. How does it strike you? 5

Teach

Big Idea 4

Nature and Technology

Answer: The technology is not especially advanced; tape recorders have been in use for decades, and digital means of making sound recordings are more common now.

Literary Element 5

Satire Answer: Many students may consider it a simple and superficial statement.

ADVANCED Ask: How does this statement add to the satirical effect of the writing? (It juxtaposes an obvious statement with a statement about how profound it is.)

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may say that the man in the image seems isolated, suspicious, and defensive. They may also see these traits in Speakie. Ritter might have used a large eye to emphasize the man's feelings of isolation and suspicion.

John Ritter is a contemporary photo-illustrator living in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. In the early 1990s, he helped develop computer graphics programs by experimenting and testing the programs' capabilities.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Some students may need help recognizing how Le Guin uses humor to create satire. One form of humor she uses is incongruity, where a writer puts two ideas or things together that do not usually go together. An example is Mrs. Smith's taking dictation, which is a very old-fashioned way of transmitting information, from a man who is supposed to be brilliant and ahead of his time. Ask: What is incongruous about the narrator missing what Dr. Speakie says to the delegates? (The speech is supposed to be very important, yet she misses some of it because she is doing something very ordinary—changing the tape in the recorder.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Identify Genre Answer: Applying the SQ Test to everyone in such a populous country would have led to the identification of huge numbers of people as insane, requiring many more Achievement Centers and people to staff them.

View the Art

Answer: The man in the image appears to be giving orders to the others. Students may say he appears to be important, powerful, and threatening, unlike the man pictured on the preceding page. The large heads might represent large egos or the importance we place on intelligence.

Man Entering Room of Men. John Ritter.

View the Art Each figure in this image has a disproportionately large head. What might that represent? How does the man in this image appear different from the one on the previous page?

113,000 Chinese Evaluators in three months. "You can always find out 'how' if you just know the 'why'!" he would say. And we always did.

When you think back over it, it really is quite amazing what a big job it was—so much bigger than anybody, even Dr. Speakie, had realized it would be. It just changed everything. You only realize that when you think back to what things used to be like. Can you imagine when we began planning Universal Testing for the State of China, we only allowed for eleven hundred Achievement Centers, with sixty-eight hundred Staff? It really seems like a joke. But it is not. I was going through some of the old files yesterday, making sure everything is in order, and I found the first China Implementation Plan, with those figures written down in black and white. I believe the reason why even Dr. Speakie was slow to realize the magnitude of the operation was that even though he was a great scientist, he was also an optimist. He just kept hoping against hope that the average scores would begin to go down, and this prevented him from seeing that universal application of the SQ Test was eventually going to involve everybody either as Inmates or Staff.

When most of the Russians and all the African States had adopted the Recommendations and were busy implementing them, the debates in the General Assembly of the World Government got very excited. That was the period when so many bad things were said about the Test and about Dr. Speakie. I used to get quite angry, reading the World Times reports of debates. When I went as his secretary with Dr. Speakie to General Assembly meetings, I had to sit and listen in person to people insulting him personally, casting aspersions[6] on his motives, and questioning his scientific integrity and even his sincerity. Many of those people were very disagreeable and obviously unbalanced. But he never lost his temper. He would just stand up and prove to them, again, 1 Identify Genre What do you think ends up happening with the testing plan in China?

---

[6] Casting aspersions on something means saying uncomplimentary things about it.

Reading Practice

The Narrator's Role By this point in the story, students have likely gathered that the narrator's gullibility—her willingness to "believe"—is one source of the humor in the story. Explain that Le Guin could have told the story in the third person, satirizing only the testing. Instead, she adds an extra layer of humor by creating a character who believes deeply in the testing. The reader can laugh not only at the testing system, but at the narrator's failure to notice how silly it is. Have students review the first few pages of the story to find several passages that show the narrator's willingness to believe and discuss these. (p. 1241: "I believe that people need beliefs"; p. 1242: "As soon as I began to understand the SQ Test Plan, I began to believe in it"; p. 1243: "I believed that that is deeply true.") that the SQ Test did actually literally scientifically show whether the testee was sane or insane, and the results could be proved, and all psychometrists accepted them. So the Test Ban[7] people couldn't do anything but shout about freedom and accuse Dr. Speakie and the Psychometric Bureau of trying to "turn the world into a huge insane asylum." He would always answer quietly and firmly, asking them how they thought a person could be "free" if they lacked mental health. What they called freedom might well be a delusional system with no contact with reality. In order to find out, all they had to do was to become testees. "Mental health is freedom," he said. "'Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty,' they say,[8] and now we have an eternally vigilant watchdog: the SQ Test. Only the testees can be truly free!"

There really was no answer they could make to that. Sooner or later the delegates even from Member States where the Test Ban movement was strong would volunteer to take the SQ Test to prove that their mental health was adequate to their responsibilities. Then the ones that passed the test and remained in office would begin working for Universal Application in their home State. The riots and demonstrations, and things like the burning of the Houses of Parliament in London in the State of England (where the Nor-Eurp SQ Center was housed), and the Vatican Rebellion, and the Chilean H-Bomb,[9] were the work of insane fanatics appealing to the most unstable elements of the populace. Such fanatics, as Dr. Speakie and Dr. Waltraute pointed out in their Memorandum to the Presidium, deliberately aroused and used the proven instability of the crowd, "mob psychosis." The only response to mass delusion of that kind was immediate implementation of the Testing Program in the disturbed States, and immediate amplification[10] of the Asylum Program.

That was Dr. Speakie's own decision, by the way, to rename the SQ Achievement Centers "Asylums." He took the word right out of his enemies' mouths. He said: "An asylum means a place of shelter, a place of cure. Let there be no stigma attached to the word 'insane,' to the word 'asylum,' to the words 'insane asylum'! No! For the asylum is the haven of mental health—the place of cure, where the anxious gain peace, where the weak gain strength, where the prisoners of inadequate reality assessment win their way to freedom! Proudly let us use the word 'asylum.' Proudly let us go to the asylum, to work to regain our own God-given mental health, or to work with others less fortunate to help them win back their own inalienable right to mental health. And let one word be written large over the door of every asylum in the world—'WELCOME!' "

Those words are from his great speech at the General Assembly on the day World Universal Application was decreed by the Presidium. Once or twice a year I listen to my tape of that speech. Although I am too busy ever to get really depressed, now and then I feel the need of a tiny "pick-me-up," and so I play that tape. It never fails to send me back to my duties inspired and refreshed.

---

[7] The use of the term Test Ban alludes to nuclear weapons and the popular movements in the 1960s and 1970s to try to limit them. The Nuclear Test-Ban Treaty was signed in 1963 between the United States, the Soviet Union, and more than one hundred other nations to ban the testing of nuclear weapons anywhere on or near Earth except underground.

[8] The quote "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty" means that people must always be aware if they want to hold on to their freedoms. This quote is based on a sentence in a speech made by Irish statesman John Philpot Curran in 1790.

[9] An H-bomb is an abbreviation for a hydrogen bomb, a powerful nuclear weapon.

[10] Here, amplification means "enlargement."

2 Identify Genre What specific issue related to science and society is raised here?

3 Nature and Technology What does this reference indicate about the level of resistance to the testing plan in some parts of the world?

Satire Do you agree with the narrator's assessment of the protesters? Why or why not? 4

Satire Do you think Le Guin wants you to believe what Dr. Speakie says in this speech? Why or why not? 5

Vocabulary

stigma (stig´ mə) n. mark or characteristic of disgrace

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Identify Genre Answer: The issue is whether standardized tests can measure what they are designed to measure and whether such tests can be universally applied with accuracy.

Big Idea 3

Nature and Technology
Answer: It indicates that in some places, resistance to the plan was extremely fierce.

Literary Element 4

Satire Answer: Most students will disagree because the extreme terms used by the narrator show that her assessment is biased and unreliable.

Literary Element 5

Satire Answer: Le Guin means this speech to be a parody, as is shown by the jargon and the ironic statement that people need to be locked up to become free.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Explain that the word asylum can have different connotations. Explain that although the primary meaning ("a place of refuge") has a positive connotation, the word has a negative connotation when used to refer to an institution for the mentally ill.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Nature and Technology

Answer: A government would need to have a worldwide network of computers, a universal communication network, and a way to identify each individual.

Reading Strategy 2

Identify Genre

Answer: Not mentioning her given name before may be an indication of Mary Ann's impersonal nature.

Literary Element 3

Satire

Answer: Le Guin pokes fun by using jargon that might be used in a scientific or technical document. Say: It is clear that the system is falling apart, yet Mary Anne continues to parrot Dr. Speakie's contention that measuring sanity through a test is a scientifically proven method.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Explain that jargon is specialized language used by a particular group of people in their work. Ask: Where have you heard or read this kind of language before? (government, business, or technical speeches or documents)

Man with Giant Pencil and Paper. John Ritter.

Considering all the work there was to do, as the Test scores continued to come in always a little higher than the Psychometric Bureau analysts estimated, the World Government Presidium did a wonderful job for the two years that it administered Universal Testing. There was a long period, six months, when the scores seemed to have stabilized, with just about half of the testees scoring over 50 and half under 50. At that time it was thought that if 40 percent of the mentally healthy were assigned to Asylum Staff work, the other 60 percent could keep up routine basic world functions such as farming, power supply, transportation, etc. This proportion had to be reversed when they found that over 60 percent of the mentally healthy were volunteering for Staff work, in order to be with their loved ones in the Asylums. There was some trouble then with the routine basic world functions functioning. However, even then contingency plans were being made for the inclusion of farmlands, factories, power plants, etc., in the Asylum Territories, and the assignment of routine basic world functions work as Rehabilitation Therapy, so that the Asylums could become totally self-supporting if it became advisable. This was President Kim's special care, and he worked for it all through his term of office. Events proved the wisdom of his planning. He seemed such a nice, wise little man. I still remember the day when Dr. Speakie came into the office and I knew at once that something was wrong. Not that he ever got really depressed or reacted with inopportune emotion,[11] but it was as if the rubber balls in his shoes had gone just a little bit flat. There was the slightest tremor of true sorrow in his voice when he said, "Mary Ann, we've had a bit of bad news I'm afraid." Then he smiled to reassure me, because he knew what a strain we were all working under, and certainly didn't want to give anybody a shock that might push their score up higher on the next quarterly Test! "It's President Kim," he said, and I knew at once—I knew he didn't mean the President was ill or dead.

"Over 50?" I asked, and he just said quietly and sadly, "55."

Poor little President Kim, working so efficiently all that three months while mental ill health was growing in him! It was very sad and also a useful warning. High-level consultations were begun at once, as soon as President Kim was committed;[12] and the decision was made to administer the Test monthly, instead of quarterly, to anyone in an executive position.

Even before this decision, the Universal scores had begun rising again. Dr. Speakie was not distressed. He had already predicted that this rise was highly probable during the transition period to World Sanity. As the number of the mentally healthy living outside the Asylums grew fewer, the strain on them kept growing greater, and [11] Inopportune emotion is inappropriate feeling.

---

[12] Committed, here, means "to put into a place for confinement or for preservation."

1 Nature and Technology What types of technology do you think a government would need to successfully carry out periodic standardized testing of every single person in the world?

2 Identify Genre What effect does learning the narrator's name this late in the story have on your impression of the character?

3 Satire What hint do you have that Le Guin is poking fun at the ideas that the narrator expresses here?

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Predict Have students summarize what has happened so far in the story. Ask: Judging by the latest news about President Kim, what do you think will happen next? (Students may say that with President Kim gone, Speakie will be the logical choice to take his place.) How does your prediction help you understand Dr. Speakie? (Students may note that they now realize that Speakie is motivated by power and world domination rather than by humanitarian principles.)

they became more liable to break down under it—just as poor President Kim had done. Later, he predicted, when the Rehabs began coming out of the Asylums in ever increasing numbers, this stress would decrease. Also, the crowding in the Asylums would decrease, so that the Staff would have more time to work on individually orientated therapy, and this would lead to a still more dramatic increase in the number of Rehabs released. Finally, when the therapy process was completely perfected, there would be no Asylums left in the world at all. Everybody would be either mentally healthy or a Rehab, or "neonormal," as Dr. Speakie liked to call it.

It was the trouble in the State of Australia that precipitated[13] the Government crisis. Some Psychometric Bureau officials accused the Australian Evaluators of actually falsifying Test returns, but that is impossible since all the computers are linked to the World Government Central Computer Bank in Keokuk.[14] Dr. Speakie suspected the Australian Evaluators had been falsifying the Test itself, and insisted that they themselves all be tested immediately. Of course he was right. It had been a conspiracy, and the suspiciously low Australian Test scores had resulted from the use of a false Test. Many of the conspirators tested higher than 80 when forced to take the genuine Test! The State Government in Canberra[15] had been unforgivably lax. If they had just admitted it, everything would have been all right. But they got hysterical, and moved the State Government to a sheep station in Queensland,[16] and tried to withdraw from the World Government. (Dr. Speakie said that was a typical mass psychosis: reality evasion, followed by fugue[17] and autistic withdrawal.[18]) Unfortunately, the Presidium seemed to be paralyzed. Australia seceded on the day before the President and Presidium were due to take their monthly Test, and probably they were afraid of overstraining their SQ with agonizing decisions. So the Psychometric Bureau volunteered to handle the episode. Dr. Speakie himself flew on the plane with the H-bombs, and helped to drop the information leaflets. He never lacked personal courage.

When the Australian incident was over, it turned out that most of the Presidium, including President Singh, had scored over 50. So the Psychometric Bureau took over their functions temporarily. Even on a long-term basis this made good sense, since all the problems now facing the World Government had to do with administering and evaluating the Test, training Painting Of Man with Negative. John Ritter.

---

[13] Here, precipitated means "brought about suddenly."

[14] Keokuk is a small town in Iowa on the western banks of the Mississippi River.

[15] Canberra is the capital of Australia.

[16] Queensland is one of the states that make up Australia; raising sheep is an important industry there.

[17] In psychology, a fugue is a state in which a person seems to be conscious of his or her actions but later has no recollection of these actions; a fugue may last for months and is a sign of severe mental stress.

[18] Autistic withdrawal is a form of mental illness that involves extreme withdrawal from reality.

4 Identify Genre How do you think the idea that people can manipulate the Test relates to the theme of the story?

Nature and Technology What does this use of technology tell you about Dr. Speakie and the government he is a part of? 5

Satire Why is this statement funny? What point is Le Guin making here? 6

Vocabulary

hysterical (his ter′ i kəl) adj. characterized by panic or other uncontrolled emotion

Vocabulary

secede (si sēd′) v. to formally withdraw from an alliance

Teach

Reading Strategy 4

Identify Genre Answer: It confirms that people can alter individuals' and groups' test results. This highlights that the test is really a means of dominating everyone in the world.

Big Idea 5

Nature and Technology
Answer: It tells you that the World Government is a totalitarian organization that will use extreme methods to keep control of its citizens.

Literary Element 6

Satire Answer: The statement is funny because it is ironic; it indicates that the test itself has become the world's only problem.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Tell students that using understatement is another way Le Guin makes this satire funny. Understatement makes a thing or event seem less important than the thing or event really is. Ask: How does Le Guin use understatement in the description of Dr. Speakie's handling of the Australian secession? (As if dropping an H-bomb were a normal response to secession, Mary Anne casually reports that "Dr. Speakie himself flew on the plane with the H-bombs . . . ." Then, she speaks as if dropping H-bombs and leaflets were of equal weight, and as if people who had been bombed would be able to read a leaflet.)

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Imagine a Scene Challenge students to write the scene of President Kim's removal from power from his point of view. Have students describe his thoughts and feelings about the event.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Satire Answer: She is making fun of Speakie's use of jargon and his blindness to the horrible results of his testing program.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Have students find each word in the phrase "preponderant inverse sanity quotient" in a dictionary to understand the phrase.

Reading Strategy 2

Identify Genre Answer: Some students may be surprised that Speakie would allow his wife to be judged insane, but this shows no one is immune in his crazy system.

Literary Element 3

Irony Ask: Why is it ironic that Mary Ann envies her former secretaries? (Students may say that it is ironic to envy those whose job is dealing with "insane" people.)

the Staff, and providing full self-sufficiency structuration to all Asylums.

What this meant in personal terms was that Dr. Speakie, as Chief of the Psychometric Bureau, was now Interim President of the United States of the World. As his personal secretary, I was, I will admit it, just terribly proud of him. But he never let it go to his head.

He was so modest. Sometimes he used to say to people, when he introduced me, "This is Mary Ann, my secretary," he'd say with a little twinkle, "and if it wasn't for her I'd have been scoring over 50 long ago!"

There were times, as the World SQ scores rose and rose, that I would become a little discouraged. Once the week's Test figures came in on the readout, and the average score was 71. I said, "Doctor, there are moments I believe the whole world is going insane!"

But he said, "Look at it this way, Mary Ann. Look at those people in the Asylums—3.1 billion inmates now, and 1.8 billion staff—but look at them. What are they doing? They're pursuing their therapy, doing rehabilitation work on the farms and in the factories, and striving all the time, too, to help each other toward mental health. The preponderant inverse sanity quotient is certainly very high at the moment; they're mostly insane, yes. But you have to admire them. They are fighting for mental health. They will—they will win through!" And then he dropped his voice and said as if to himself, gazing out the window and bouncing just a little on the balls of his feet, "If I didn't believe that, I couldn't go on."

And I knew he was thinking of his wife.

Mrs. Speakie had scored 88 on the very first American Universal Test. She had been in the Greater Los Angeles Territory Asylum for years now.

Anybody who still thinks Dr. Speakie wasn't sincere should think about that for a minute! He gave up everything for his belief.

1 Satire What is Le Guin making fun of with Dr. Speakie's answer to Mary Ann?

2 Identify Genre Based on how the plot has progressed, does this information surprise you? How does it relate to Le Guin's theme?

Looking For the Ideal Candidate. Janusz Kapusta.

And even when the Asylums were all running quite well, and the epidemics in South Africa and the famines in Texas and the Ukraine were under control, still the workload on Dr. Speakie never got any lighter, because every month the personnel of the Psychometric Bureau got smaller, since some of them always flunked their monthly Test and were committed to Bethesda.[19] 3 I never could keep any of my secretarial staff any more for longer than a month or two. It was harder and harder to find replacements, too, because most sane young people volunteered for Staff work in the Asylums, since life was much easier and more sociable inside the Asylums than outside. Everything so convenient, and lots of friends and acquaintances! I used to positively envy those girls! But I knew where my job was.

At least it was much less hectic here in the U.N. Building, or the Psychometry Tower as it had been renamed a long time ago. Often there wouldn't be anybody around the whole building all day long but Dr. Speakie and myself, and maybe Bill the janitor (Bill scored 32 regular as

---

[19] Bethesda is a suburban community near Washington, D.C.

Writing Practice

SMALL GROUP Science Fiction Discuss Le Guin's vision of the world of the future. Ask: What do you think the world will be like in 100 years? Challenge students to dabble in the science fiction genre by creating their own future worlds. Divide them into groups, and tell each group to write a science fiction story, taking into consideration any or all of the following questions:

- What are the governments like? Is there only one government?
- What are the people like? How do they dress? What languages do they speak?
- What is technology like? How does it affect people's daily lives?
- What are the arts like?

clockwork every quarter). All the restaurants were closed, in fact most of Manhattan was closed, but we had fun picnicking in the old General Assembly Hall. And there was always the odd call from Buenos Aires[20] or Reykjavik,[21] asking Dr. Speakie's advice as Interim President about some problem, to break the silence.

But last November 8, I will never forget the date, when Dr. Speakie was dictating the Referendum for World Economic Growth for the next five-year period, he suddenly interrupted himself. "By the way, Mary Ann," he said, "how was your last score?"

☆ We had taken the Test two days before, on the sixth. We always took the Test every first Monday. Dr. Speakie never would have dreamed of excepting himself from Universal Testing regulations.

"I scored 12," I said, before I thought how strange it was of him to ask. Or, not just to ask, because we often mentioned our scores to each other; but to ask then, in the middle of executing important world government business.

"Wonderful," he said, shaking his head. "You're wonderful, Mary Ann! Down two from last month's Test, aren't you?"

"I'm always between 10 and 14," I said. "Nothing new about that, Doctor."

"Some day," he said, and his face took on the expression it had when he gave his great speech about the Asylums, "some day, this world of ours will be governed by men fit to govern it. Men whose SQ score is Zero. Zero, Mary Ann!"

"Well, my goodness, Doctor," I said jokingly—his intensity almost alarmed me a little—"even you never scored lower than 3, and you haven't done that for a year or more now!"

He stared at me almost as if he didn't see me. It was quite uncanny. "Some day," he said in just the same way, "nobody in the world will have a Quotient higher than 50. Some day, nobody in the world will have a Quotient higher than 30! Higher than 10! The therapy will be perfected. I was only the diagnostician.[22] But the Therapy will be perfected! The cure will be found! Some day!" And he went on staring at me, and then he said, "Do you know what my score was on Monday?"

"7," I guessed promptly. The last time he had told me his score it had been 7.

"92," he said.

I laughed, because he seemed to be laughing. He had always had a puckish[23] sense of humor. But I thought we really should get back to the World Economic Growth Plan, so I said laughingly, "That really is a very bad joke, Doctor!"

"92," he said, "and you don't believe me, Mary Ann, but that's because of the cantaloupe."

I said, "What cantaloupe, Doctor?" and that was when he jumped across his desk and began to try to bite through my jugular vein.

I used a judo hold and shouted to Bill the janitor, and when he came, I called a robo-ambulance to take Dr. Speakie to Bethesda Asylum.

That was six months ago. I visit Dr. Speakie every Saturday. It is very sad. He is in the McLean area, which is the Violent Ward, and every time he sees me he screams and foams. But I do not take it personally. One should never take mental ill health personally. When the Therapy is perfected, he will be completely rehabilitated. Meanwhile, I just hold on here. Bill keeps the floors clean, and I run the World Government. It really isn't as difficult as you might think.

---

[20] Buenos Aires is the capital and largest city of Argentina.

[21] Reykjavik (rā′ kyə vēk′) is the capital and largest city of Iceland.

[22] A diagnostician is someone who figures out the nature of a problem, especially by identifying an illness.

[23] Puckish means "mischievous."

4 Identify Genre How have things changed since the beginning of the story? What is the cause of this breakdown in society?

Vocabulary

uncanny (un kan′ ē) adj. peculiarly unsettling in an eerie way

Satire Do you think that this scene is supposed to be funny? Explain. 5

Nature and Technology What does the existence of this technology imply about the way the world runs by the end of the story? 6

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate Have students work in small groups to identify and describe the main events in the story in sequential order. Make sure students take turns within the group in describing events.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Analyze Themes Have students work in small groups to analyze the story's themes and describe Le Guin's views on society. Have each group present its analysis to the class.

Teach

Reading Strategy 4

Identify Genre Answer: The cities are depopulated, and there is very little activity outside the asylums, where most people now live, either as patients or as workers. The use of the SQ Test has caused the breakdown in society.

Literary Element 5

Satire Answer: Most students will see the scene as intentionally funny. Speakie's reference to cantaloupe and his attempt to bite the narrator are farcical.

Big Idea 6

Nature and Technology
Answer: It implies that a very small number of people can control the world through the use of SQ testing and robots.

Cultural History ☆

Measuring Intelligence The first attempt to measure intelligence was made by British scientist Sir Francis Galton in the late 1880s. He wanted to prove that intelligence was inherited and could be measured. French psychologist Alfred Binet developed the first test to help predict success in academics. He based his test on practical knowledge, reasoning, vocabulary, and problem solving. Revised many times and now known as the Stanford-Binet intelligence scale, the test is still used, but the idea of measuring IQ remains controversial.

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) Sanity (b) As a test used to identify people who are insane
2. (a) People who pass the test become advocates for it, and those who do not pass are put in asylums. (b) The government is coercive and exerts strong control over people.
3. (a) Billions are sent to asylums, billions more staff the asylums, and the world outside the asylums is depopulated. (b) Le Guin thinks that the test is ridiculous.
4. (a) First person (b) It reinforces the humor of the "sane" narrator's inability to see the insanity of the situation she has helped create.
5. (a) "Eventualized"; "structurization" (b) It makes the SQ plan sound ridiculous.
6. Students' answers will vary.
7. Very important, because SQ testing and the suppression of the rebellion could not have occurred without technologies.
8. It shows the dangers of totalitarian government and of granting too much power to "experts."

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 301–302.

To create custom assessments online, go to Progress Reporter Online Assessment.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What does the SQ Test measure? (b)How does the story present the use of such a test?
2. (a)How does SQ testing come to be universal? (b)What does this imply about the government that controls the world in this story?
3. (a)What happens when the testing program is applied worldwide? (b)Given this result, what is Le Guin's attitude toward the test?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)What point of view does the writer use in this story? (b)How does this point of view help reinforce the story's irony?
5. (a)Jargon is specialized language used by a particular group of people. What are some examples of jargon in this story? (b)How does Le Guin's use of jargon strengthen the story's satire?
6. Irony is a deliberate contrast between what is written and what is really meant. Identify two examples of irony in this story, and explain how each relates to the story's main message.

Connect

7. Big Idea Nature and Technology How important is technology in this story? Support your response with evidence from the story.
8. Connect to Today How do you think this story comments on or relates to contemporary society?

Primary Source Quotation

Plausibility in Science Fiction

When asked about the plausibility (or, believability) of science fiction compared to other genres, Ursula K. Le Guin made this comment.

> "Unless it is in the satirical mode, science fiction tends to avoid the actual present time. A story about the immediate contemporary world is read with high expectations of factuality, and blatant contradiction of fact, if not satirical, will be taken as nonsense.
>
> In general, science fiction proceeds just as realistic fiction does, meeting conventional expectations of how people generally act, and either avoiding events that will strike the reader as improbable, or plausibly explaining them. Realism and science fiction both employ plausibility to win the reader's consent to the fiction."
>
> —Ursula K. Le Guin

The New Planet, 1921. Konstantin Yuon. Tretyakov Gallery, Moscow.

Group Activity Discuss the following questions with your classmates. Refer back to the quotation and cite evidence from "SQ" for support.

1. In the above quotation, Le Guin explains when satire may be useful in relation to a story's time period. What does that tell you about the time period in which "SQ" occurs?
2. What makes the science fiction story "SQ" just as plausible as realistic fiction?

Primary Source Quotation

1. Students should deduce that "SQ" is most likely written about contemporary society, though it takes place in a world that seems to be in the future.
2. Students should be able to identify that Le Guin mirrors the real world by creating an alternate landscape where people work at government jobs and measure global statistics. The element of science fiction, or the tests and how they are conducted, is written as if it actually happens.

Literary Element Satire

The story "SQ" is a satire because Le Guin uses humor to comment on society and its foibles. She also uses parody and understatement as part of her satire. Parody is humorous imitation. Understatement is language that makes something seem less important than it really is.

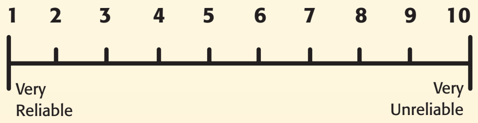
1. How is the title of this short story a parody? If necessary, reread the Build Background information on page 1240 and then think about what the initials in the title most likely represent.
2. Find an example of understatement in this short story. How does the understatement contribute to the humor of the story?

Review: Narrator

As you learned on page 982, a narrator is the person telling a story in a work of fiction. In a story with a first-person point of view, the narrator is a character in the story. In "SQ," the narrator is a woman named Mary Ann Smith.

Group Activity A first-person narrator tends to have a limited perspective that presents a particular viewpoint. In a small group, discuss the narrator's perspective and opinions in "SQ." What makes the narrator a good source of information for this story? What makes her an unreliable source of information? Use the scale below to rate the narrator's reliability. Discuss your rating with the class.

Narrator's Reliability



Reliability Rating ______

Reasons

1.

2.

3.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Analogies For each item below, identify the relationship between the first pair of words. Then apply that relationship to the second pair. In each expression, : means "is to" and :: means "as."

1. hysterical : calm ::
   - a. reluctant : forgiving
   - b. exemplary : outstanding
   - c. miserable : happy
   - d. doubtful : questioning
2. shame : stigma ::
   - a. erasure : marking
   - b. recreation : work
   - c. pride : badge
   - d. anxiety : success
3. power supply : infrastructure ::
   - a. doctor : health care system
   - b. bridge : river
   - c. teacher : student
   - d. judge : sheriff
4. implementation : application ::
   - a. wheel : axle
   - b. flower : petal
   - c. agenda : schedule
   - d. climax : exposition
5. secede : ally ::
   - a. apply : work
   - b. member : join
   - c. nominate : elect
   - d. forfeit : play

Academic Vocabulary

According to Dr. Speakie, a low score on the SQ test indicates insanity.

Indicate is an academic word. When driving, you put on your turn signal to indicate to the other drivers that you are about to turn.

To further explore the meaning of this word, complete this sentence: To indicate my support of my ____, I ____.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53 and 54.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

After You Read

Assess

Vocabulary

1. c 2. c 3. a 4. c 5. d

Academic Vocabulary

Possible answer: To indicate my support of my best friend, I held her hand while she opened the letter from her university of choice.

Literary Element

1. SQ, which may stand for "sanity quotient," is a parody of IQ, which stands for "intelligence quotient."
2. Description of response to Australian rebellion is humorous because of the offhand tone in describing destruction.

Progress Check

Can students recognize satire?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 190.

Review: Narrator

She is a good source because she has inside knowledge of the SQ testing program; she is an unreliable source because of her admiration for Dr. Speakie. The narrator's limited perspective and strong opinions contribute to the humor of "SQ."

After You Read

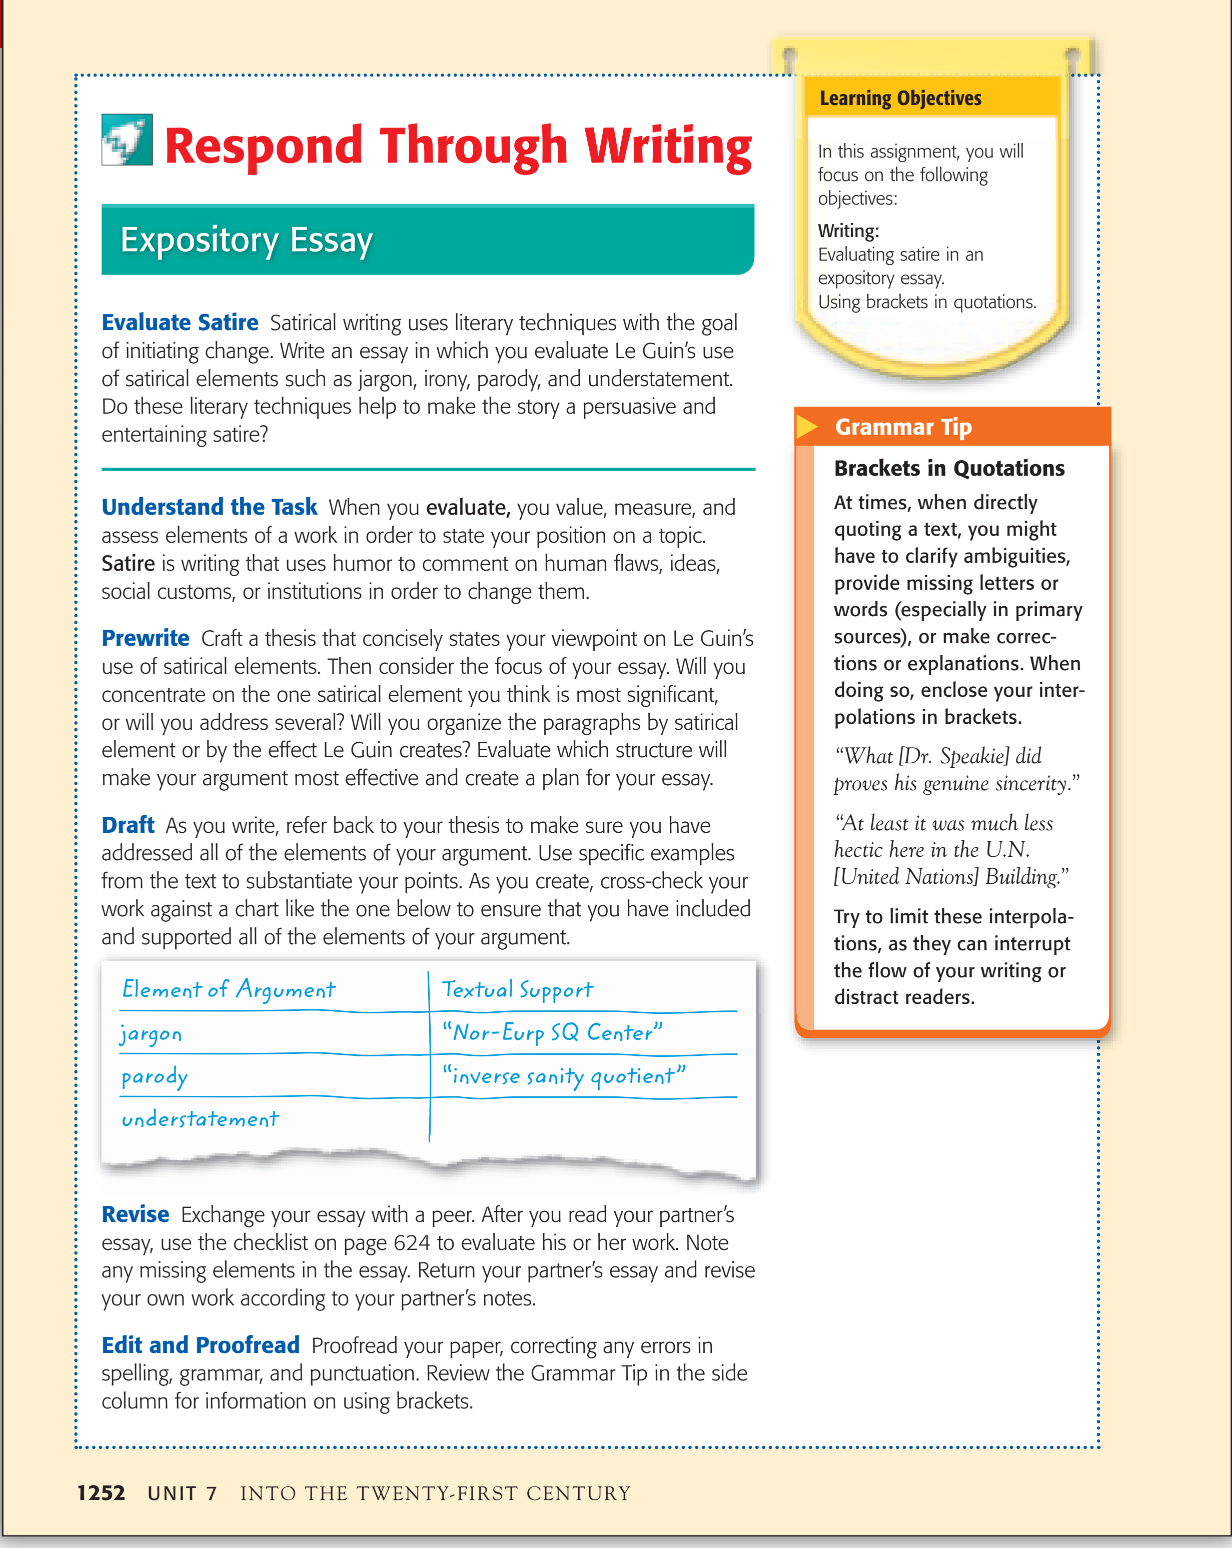
Assess

Respond Through Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' writing:

- Does the student include a thesis that offers an appraisal of Le Guin's use of satire?
- Does the student evaluate the literary techniques Le Guin uses, such as jargon, irony, parody, and understatement?
- Does the student support his or her claims with textual evidence?

For grammar practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 194.



Respond Through Writing

Expository Essay

Evaluate Satire Satirical writing uses literary techniques with the goal of initiating change. Write an essay in which you evaluate Le Guin's use of satirical elements such as jargon, irony, parody, and understatement. Do these literary techniques help to make the story a persuasive and entertaining satire?

Understand the Task When you evaluate, you value, measure, and assess elements of a work in order to state your position on a topic. Satire is writing that uses humor to comment on human flaws, ideas, social customs, or institutions in order to change them.

Prewrite Craft a thesis that concisely states your viewpoint on Le Guin's use of satirical elements. Then consider the focus of your essay. Will you concentrate on the one satirical element you think is most significant, or will you address several? Will you organize the paragraphs by satirical element or by the effect Le Guin creates? Evaluate which structure will make your argument most effective and create a plan for your essay.

Draft As you write, refer back to your thesis to make sure you have addressed all of the elements of your argument. Use specific examples from the text to substantiate your points. As you create, cross-check your work against a chart like the one below to ensure that you have included and supported all of the elements of your argument.

Element of Argument	Textual Support
jargon	"Nor-Eurp SQ Center"
parody	"inverse sanity quotient"
understatement

Revise Exchange your essay with a peer. After you read your partner's essay, use the checklist on page 624 to evaluate his or her work. Note any missing elements in the essay. Return your partner's essay and revise your own work according to your partner's notes.

Edit and Proofread Proofread your paper, correcting any errors in spelling, grammar, and punctuation. Review the Grammar Tip in the side column for information on using brackets.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objectives:

Writing:
Evaluating satire in an expository essay.
Using brackets in quotations.

Grammar Tip

Brackets in Quotations

At times, when directly quoting a text, you might have to clarify ambiguities, provide missing letters or words (especially in primary sources), or make corrections or explanations. When doing so, enclose your interpolations in brackets.

"What [Dr. Speakie] did proves his genuine sincerity."

"At least it was much less hectic here in the U.N. [United Nations] Building."

Try to limit these interpolations, as they can interrupt the flow of your writing or distract readers.

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Task addressed	fully	mostly	partially	barely
Thesis	meaningful	provided	partial	weak
Support	thoughtful	provided	limited	weak
Language	varied, descriptive	varied, often descriptive	predictable, imprecise	repetitive, limited
Convention errors	few or none	several	many	serious
Analysis is	convincing	mostly convincing	partially convincing	not convincing

Before You Read

Snow

Meet Julia Alvarez

(born 1950)

Julia Alvarez found herself at ten thrust into an unfamiliar culture. Although she was born in New York City, she had grown up in the Dominican Republic during the brutal regime of General Rafael Trujillo, a military dictator who terrorized the nation for thirty-one years. Fleeing their country in the last few months of Trujillo's rule, Alvarez and her family settled in New York City.

Culture Shock Moving from her mother's family compound in the Dominican Republic to the Bronx was not easy for Alvarez. Unable to feel at home in cold and crowded New York City, she took comfort in reading and writing. "I consider this radical uprooting from my culture, my native language, my country, the reason I began writing," the award-winning poet and novelist has stated. "English, not the United States, was where I landed and sank deep roots."

Alvarez learned her new language quickly. In high school, she enjoyed writing and even began to think of it as a possible career. By the time she entered college, she was devoting serious attention to writing. "I was raised in a very traditional, Old World family," she said, "so I never had thoughts about having a career. Moving to a new country, having to learn a new language, I got interested in words, and suddenly being in a world where there were books and encouragement of women to discover their talents helped me become a writer."

A Migrant Poet Alvarez graduated from Middlebury College and later received a graduate degree from Syracuse University. Then she began her career as what she calls "a migrant poet," in which she taught writing in prisons and senior-citizen centers as well as in schools and colleges. "I would go anywhere," she told one interviewer. Finally she returned to Middlebury College, where she earned tenure in the English Department. She has won several awards for her poetry and prose.

> "I feel like one of the blessings in life is to be doing the work you think you were put here to do. You have to keep writing and achieving it day by day. The one thing I would want for myself is to keep writing and growing."
>
> —Julia Alvarez

Alvarez's first novel, How the García Girls Lost Their Accents, was an immediate success. Published in 1991, it tells the story of four Dominican sisters and their struggle to make a new home in the U.S. Alvarez's three sisters saw many similarities between their experiences and those in the novel. "My sisters were a little taken aback," Alvarez admitted, "but they're also very proud of me."

Alvarez's other novels include In the Time of the Butterflies and ¡Yo! (or, in the English translation, I!), which describes the García girls as adults. Her poetry collections include Homecoming and The Other Side/El Otro Lado.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Julia Alvarez, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers:
  Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Selection Launcher

Selection Focus
  Transparency 72

Daily Language Practice
  Transparency 110

Or say: Imagine seeing a flash of lightning or gently falling snow for the first time. How do you think you would react? Have students freewrite words that express their imagined reactions.

Political History ☆

The Mirabal Sisters Alvarez's novel In the Time of the Butterflies is based on the lives of the four Mirabal sisters, who founded an underground movement against Rafael Trujillo's brutal dictatorship. The sisters, code named las Mariposas (the Butterflies), caused so much trouble for Trujillo that he ordered three of them killed on November 25, 1960. The United Nations declared the date International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women.

Selection Skills

Snow

Literary Elements
- Indirect Characterization (SE pp. 1254–1256)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Parts (SE pp. 1256)
- Suffixes (TE p. 1253)

Reading Skills
- Connect to Contemporary Issues (SE pp. 1254–1256)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Journal Entry (SE p. 1256)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

The narrator, a recent immigrant named Yolanda, recalls her first year attending school in New York City. During the Cuban missile crisis, her teacher explains radioactive fallout by drawing dots falling from a mushroom cloud. The crisis passes, but when Yolanda sees snowflakes falling from the sky on a cold December day, she thinks they are fallout and yells, "Bomb!"

Vocabulary

Suffixes Remind students that adding a suffix to a word can change its part of speech. For example, adding the suffix -ly changes the adjective wary into the adverb warily. Ask: Which suffix can turn the adjectives ominous and random into nouns? (-ness) Have students write sentences using the adjective and noun forms of the words.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

What amazed you as a child about snow when you experienced it for the first time? Freewrite for several minutes about this experience and explain what made it special.

Build Background

This selection addresses the 1962 Cuban missile crisis, when President John F. Kennedy ordered a naval blockade to prevent shipment of missiles from the Soviet Union to Cuba. The world waited for the Soviets to respond, deeply fearful of a nuclear war. All over the U.S., schools established air-raid drills in an attempt to prepare the nation's children for nuclear attack. At the sound of a siren, students were to file quickly to a hallway away from windows or doors or to crouch under their desks. They were to remain in this position until an all-clear signal sounded. Fortunately, the crisis ended peacefully, and these inadequate safety measures were never needed.

Big Idea Nature and Technology

As you read, ask yourself, How do nature and technology become confused in the mind of a young girl?

Literary Element Indirect Characterization

A writer uses indirect characterization to reveal the personality of a character through that character's words and actions or through what others think and say about that character. As you read, ask yourself, How does indirect characterization reveal information about Sister Zoe?

Reading Strategy Connect to Contemporary Issues

Connecting to contemporary issues enriches our appreciation of what we read. As you read, ask yourself, How have recent events in cities around the world made people fearful about security measures that seem inadequate?

Tip: Keep Informed Learn something about the context of the works you are reading to help you understand them better.

- Keep up with current affairs by means of the newspaper, Internet, radio, or television.
- Ask yourself, "What was happening in the world when this literary work was written?"

Learning Objectives

For pages 1253–1256

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing indirect characterization.

Reading: Connecting to contemporary issues.

Vocabulary

enunciate (i nun´ sē āt´) v. to pronounce distinctly; p. 1255 Unless you enunciate clearly, we will be unable to understand you.

holocaust (hol´ ə kôst´) n. great or complete destruction, especially by fire; p. 1255 The Cuban missile crisis brought the world to the brink of a nuclear holocaust.

random (ran´ dəm) adj. lacking a definite pattern; haphazard; p. 1255 Up close the painting looked like a random collection of brush strokes.

warily (wār´ ə lē) adv. in a watchful or alert manner; cautiously; p. 1255 From high on its branch, the bird warily watched the cat.

Tip: Word Parts Many English words consist of parts that occur in various combinations. The word enunciate has as its root the Latin word nuntiare, meaning "to report."

Reading Practice

Track Characterization Remind students that direct characterization tells about the character, while indirect characterization shows what the character is like through what the character says, thinks, and does as well as how other characters react to him or her. Display the following:

- Kendra sat quietly on the sand, watching the waves as the sun slowly dipped below the horizon.
- "This is my favorite time of day at the beach," she thought. "It's so peaceful here at dusk."

Ask: Which form of characterization does each represent? (The first is direct because it tells about the character; the second is indirect because it describes the character's thoughts and emotions.) Instruct students to make a two column chart with Speech, Thoughts, and Actions as rows in the left column. Have them fill in the right column as they read the story.

Snow

Julia Alvarez

Our first year in New York we rented a small apartment with a Catholic school nearby, taught by the Sisters of Charity, hefty women in long black gowns and bonnets that made them look peculiar, like dolls in mourning. I liked them a lot, especially my grandmotherly fourth grade teacher, Sister Zoe. I had a lovely name, she said, and she had me teach the whole class how to pronounce it. Yo-lan-da. As the only immigrant in my class, I was put in a special seat in the first row by the window, apart from the other children so that Sister Zoe could tutor me without disturbing them. Slowly, she enunciated the new words I was to repeat: laundromat, cornflakes, subway, snow.

Soon I picked up enough English to understand holocaust was in the air. Sister Zoe explained to a wide-eyed classroom what was happening in Cuba. Russian missiles were being assembled, trained supposedly on New York City. President Kennedy, looking worried too, was on the television at home, explaining we might have to go to war against the Communists. At school, we had air-raid drills: an ominous bell would go off and we'd file into the hall, fall to the floor, cover our heads with our coats, and imagine our hair falling out, the bones in our arms going soft. At home, Mami and my sisters and I said a rosary[1] for world peace. I heard new vocabulary: nuclear bomb, radioactive fallout,[2] bomb shelter. Sister Zoe explained how it would happen. She drew a picture of a mushroom on the blackboard and dotted a flurry of chalk-marks for the dusty fallout that would kill us all.

The months grew cold, November, December. It was dark when I got up in the morning, frosty when I followed my breath to school. One morning as I sat at my desk daydreaming out the window, I saw dots in the air like the ones Sister Zoe had drawn—random at first, then lots and lots. I shrieked, "Bomb! Bomb!" Sister Zoe jerked around, her full black skirt ballooning as she hurried to my side. A few girls began to cry.

But then Sister Zoe's shocked look faded. "Why, Yolanda dear, that's snow!" She laughed. "Snow."

"Snow," I repeated. I looked out the window warily. All my life I had heard about the white crystals that fell out of American skies in the winter. From my desk I watched the fine powder dust the sidewalk and parked cars below. Each flake was different, Sister Zoe said, like a person, irreplaceable and beautiful.

---

[1] For Roman Catholics, a rosary is a circle of beads and also the prayers said as one holds these beads.

[2] Fallout, made of tiny radioactive particles, is released into the atmosphere after a nuclear explosion.

1 Indirect Characterization What do these details reveal about Sister Zoe's character?

2 Connect to Contemporary Issues What are some examples of new vocabulary that current events have introduced into the lexicon today?

3 Nature and Technology Why does the narrator contrast the comparison of snowflakes to bombs with the comparison of snowflakes to people?

Vocabulary

enunciate (i nun´ sē āt´) v. to pronounce distinctly holocaust (hol´ ə kôst´) n. great or complete destruction, especially by fire

Vocabulary

random (ran´ dəm) adj. lacking a definite pattern; haphazard warily (wār´ ə lē) adv. in a watchful or alert manner; cautiously

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established To help students understand the vocabulary for the story, assign each student a partner. Each pair needs one piece of paper. Tell the students that they will be having a Silent Conversation with their partner. Instead of talking, the students will write questions and comments on the piece of paper and pass it back and forth, responding to each other. Tell the students that by the end of the conversation, both students must use each of the five vocabulary words at least once. Students must write in complete sentences with proper punctuation. Have students share interesting exchanges from the exercise with the class.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Indirect Characterization

Answer: The details reveal that Sister Zoe is compassionate and respectful.

Reading Strategy 2

Connect to Contemporary Issues

Answer: Students' answers will vary. Some students may cite terms such as bioterrorism, 9/11, terror cell, and blog.

Big Idea 3

Nature and Technology

Answer: To emphasize the irreplaceability and beauty of human beings by contrast with the deadliness of fallout

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 5.2
DRP: 56
Lexile: 980

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students, pp. 269–276
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 269–276
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 269–276

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) Laundromat, cornflakes, subway, and snow (b) They relate to everyday life.
3. (a) Each snowflake is irreplaceable and beautiful. (b) So Yolanda sees she is special
4. She conveys the mood with words such as "holocaust" and "ominous bell." She describes the air-raid drills.
5. She does not speak English well and is new to the environment; everything seems strange.
6. Intelligent, eager to learn, sensitive, and emotional
7. (a) Yolanda mistakes the pure, beautiful snowfall for toxic fallout. (b) Alvarez sets the natural world and technology in opposition by showing the impact of political issues on perceptions.
8. Schools can prepare students by teaching emergency procedures.

Literary Element

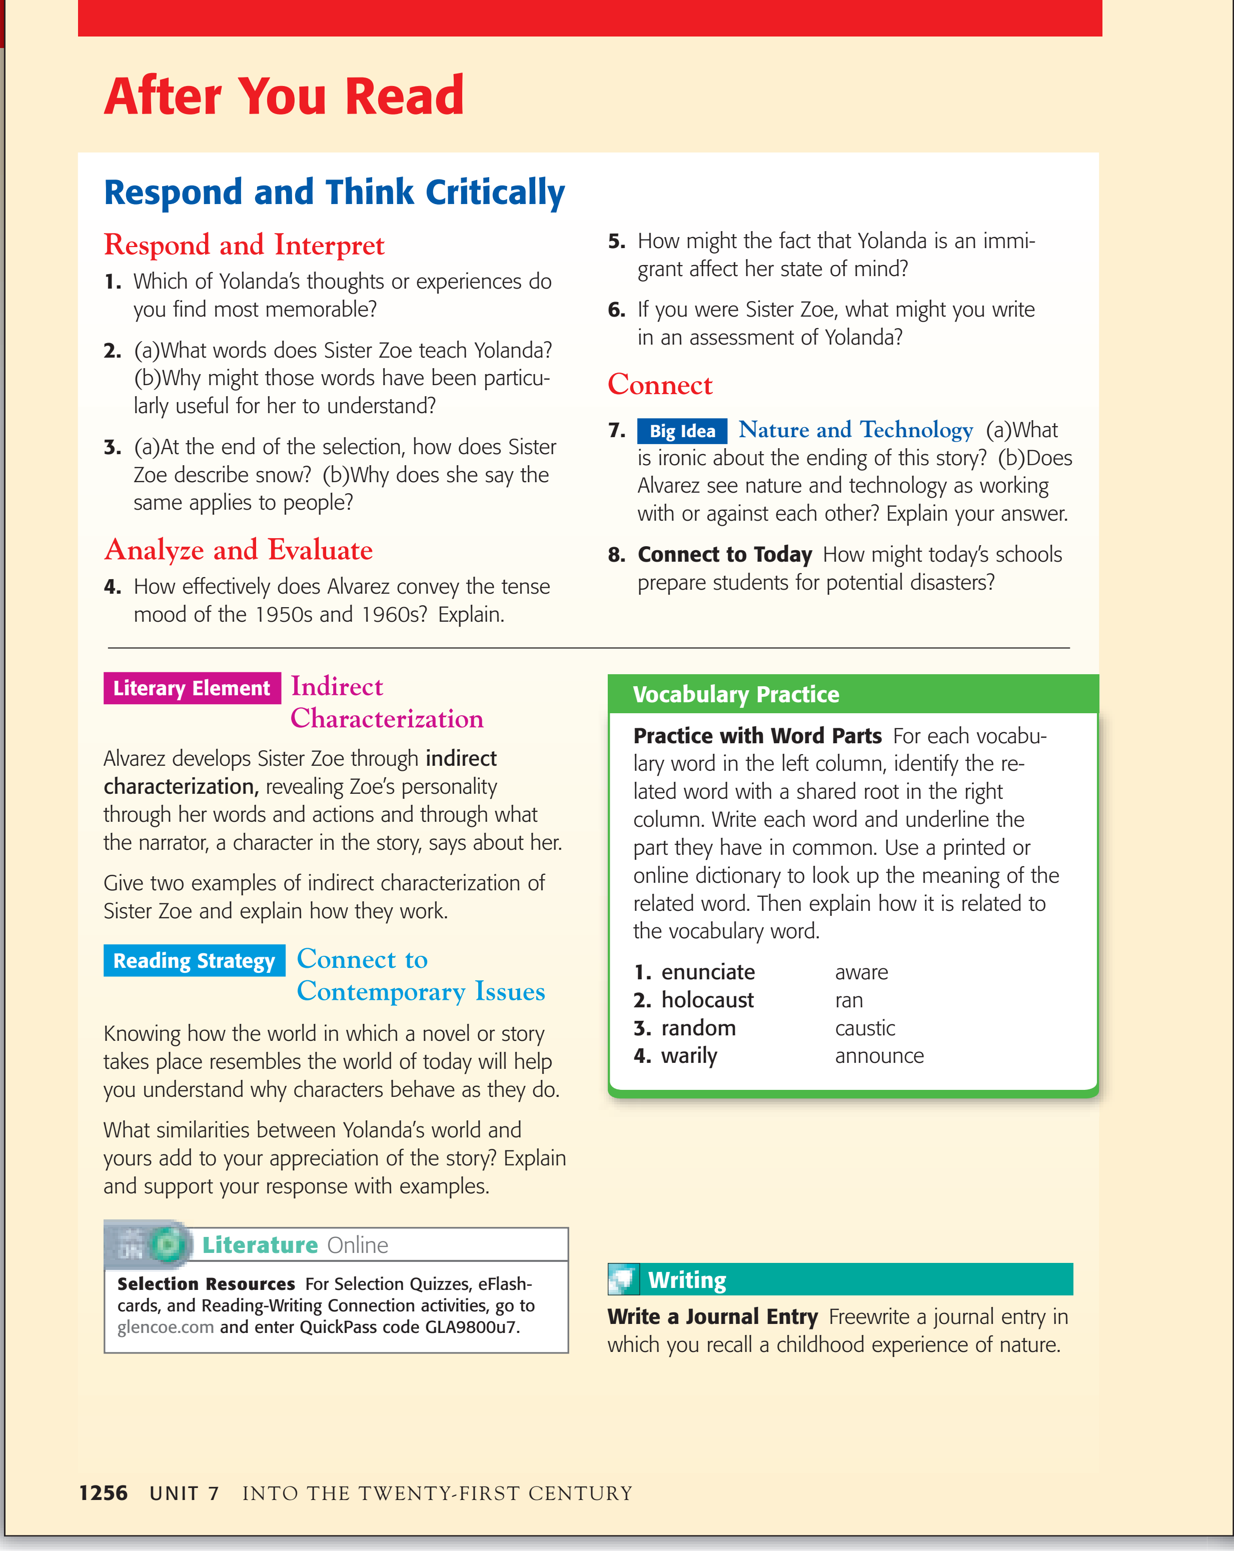
Sister Zoe says Yolanda's name is beautiful and each snowflake is irreplaceable. Reassuring Yolanda shows Sister Zoe's kindness and sensitivity.

Reading Strategy

Fear of an attack and concern about the safety of armed forces link the two worlds.

Writing

Students' journals should include a specific memory and details about nature.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which of Yolanda's thoughts or experiences do you find most memorable?
2. (a)What words does Sister Zoe teach Yolanda? (b)Why might those words have been particularly useful for her to understand?
3. (a)At the end of the selection, how does Sister Zoe describe snow? (b)Why does she say the same applies to people?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. How effectively does Alvarez convey the tense mood of the 1950s and 1960s? Explain.
5. How might the fact that Yolanda is an immigrant affect her state of mind?
6. If you were Sister Zoe, what might you write in an assessment of Yolanda?

Connect

7. Big Idea Nature and Technology (a)What is ironic about the ending of this story? (b)Does Alvarez see nature and technology as working with or against each other? Explain your answer.
8. Connect to Today How might today's schools prepare students for potential disasters?

Literary Element Indirect Characterization

Alvarez develops Sister Zoe through indirect characterization, revealing Zoe's personality through her words and actions and through what the narrator, a character in the story, says about her.

Give two examples of indirect characterization of Sister Zoe and explain how they work.

Reading Strategy Connect to Contemporary Issues

Knowing how the world in which a novel or story takes place resembles the world of today will help you understand why characters behave as they do.

What similarities between Yolanda's world and yours add to your appreciation of the story? Explain and support your response with examples.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Parts For each vocabulary word in the left column, identify the related word with a shared root in the right column. Write each word and underline the part they have in common. Use a printed or online dictionary to look up the meaning of the related word. Then explain how it is related to the vocabulary word.

1. enunciate	aware
2. holocaust	ran
3. random	caustic
4. warily	announce

Writing

Write a Journal Entry Freewrite a journal entry in which you recall a childhood experience of nature.

Vocabulary

1. enunciate, announce: Enunciate means "to pronounce distinctly"; announce means "to declare publicly." Both words refer to talking.
2. holocaust, caustic: Holocaust means "great or complete destruction, especially by fire"; caustic means "capable of corroding or burning or painfully sarcastic." Both words refer to fire.
3. random, ran: Random means "lacking a definite pattern; haphazard" and comes from a root that means "great speed"; ran is the past tense of run, meaning "to go at a fast pace." Both words refer to speed.
4. warily, aware: Warily means "in a watchful or alert manner"; aware means "mindful of something's existence because of observation." Both words refer to watching.

Before You Read

Cottonmouth Country and Daisies

Meet Louise Glück

(born 1943)

When Louise Glück was a young girl, she had an experience that helped define her feelings about poetry. While driving Glück and her classmates to school, a classmate's mother asked Glück to recite the poem that she had written for a school assignment. The burgeoning poet was happy to share her work and was particularly excited about the experimental ending of her new poem. For effect, she had purposefully omitted the rhyme in the final line. To her developing ear, Glück says the result "was exhilarating, a kind of explosion of form." After she recited the poem, her classmate's mother said it was very good, but then corrected the final line, explaining that all it was missing was the last rhyme. The young poet was furious. She hadn't even reached middle school yet, but Glück had already developed a passion to write and be heard in her own precise, original voice. Fifty years after her backseat recital, the talented Glück was named Poet Laureate of the United States.

> "It seems to me that the desire to make art produces an ongoing experience of longing. . . . It's like a lighthouse, except that, as one swims toward it, it backs away."
>
> —Louise Glück

Born Poet Glück was born in New York City and raised on Long Island. Her father shared with his daughter a love of stories. However, it was Glück's mother—a well-educated woman who had fought to go to college and revered creative gifts—who became the first reader of her poems and who gave the young writer her earliest critiques. Glück began devouring poetry and stories at an early age, and her reading of Greek myths provided figures and images that she frequently references in her own poems.

Poetic Influence While studying at Columbia University, Glück met her greatest influence, poet Stanley Kunitz. She published her first collection of poems, Firstborn, when she was twenty-five. Since that debut, Glück's work has been recognized with a National Book Critics Circle Award and a Pulitzer Prize. Glück's poems express mythical, mystic perceptions of everyday objects and experiences. Her exacting language and unexpected line breaks create distinct, often haunting, verses.

In addition to writing poetry, Glück frequently teaches and provides young poets with the kind of support and encouragement that Kunitz offered her.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Louise Glück, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 111

Or ask students to recall the last time they stopped to appreciate some beautiful natural sight or to see some evidence of nature's destructive power. Ask: Is there any way to reconcile these two views of nature? Have students write a short paragraph on how their encounters with nature have shaped their view of it.

National Standards TK

Literary History ☆

Averno Louise Glück's eleventh book of poetry, Averno, was nominated for the National Book Award in the poetry section in 2006. The poems explore themes such as life and death, love, and depression through the retelling of the myth of Persephone.

Selection Skills

Cottonmouth Country and Daisies

Literary Elements
- Free Verse (SE pp. 1258, 1260, 1261)
- Voice (SE p. 1261)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Evaluate Interpretation (SE p. 1262)
- Free Verse (TE p. 1260)

Reading Skills
- Make Inferences About Theme (SE pp. 1258, 1259, 1262)

Vocabulary Skills
- Analogies (SE pp. 1258, 1262)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 1262)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

"Cottonmouth Country" is filled with images of death. However, the speaker states that "birth, not death, is the hard loss." In "Daisies," the daisies are the speakers. They seem to mock readers for their inability to appreciate them. The poem illustrates the separation between human beings and nature.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources, pp. 210–215.

Vocabulary

Word Origins Tell students that the word nostalgia comes from the Greek nostas, "return home" and algos, "pain, grief, distress." Also, the word scorn originally came from the Latin ex-, "without" and cornu "horn." Ask: How does knowing the origins of these words help you understand their meanings?

ENGLISH LEARNERS Have English learners note that the word rear is used as a verb in the poem. Ask: As what other parts of speech can rear be used? (noun, adjective) Have students write sentences using the word as both a noun and a verb.

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 218.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poems

Have you ever felt as though you could communicate with nature? Discuss with a partner what you might have learned from this experience with nature.

Build Background

Both of these poems demonstrate the important role of setting, or time and place, in Glück's work. In some poems, setting is so important that it becomes a distinct character.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Nature and Technology

As you read, ask yourself, How do the poems juxtapose elements from the natural world with man-made elements?

Literary Element Free Verse

Many contemporary poems are written in free verse: they do not adhere to a fixed rhyme, meter, line, or stanza structure. Free verse allows poets to create and depart from their own patterns. Some free verse flows like conversation or private thoughts. Unusual changes in rhythm or startling line breaks (the endings of lines) may create drama or tension. As you read, ask, What words or ideas do the line breaks help emphasize?

Reading Strategy Make Inferences About Theme

In poetry, images, events, and observations frequently convey an underlying message, or theme. In the poems you're about to read, nature imagery and other details help to express themes about nature, life, and humanity. By considering each poem's imagery and language, you can make inferences, or conclusions based on reason and evidence, about its themes.

Tip: Make Inferences As you read, ask yourself, What images or ideas help me understand the theme of each poem? Note your reactions to specific images or ideas in a chart like the one below. Then note your inferences about the poem's themes.

Images or Ideas	Inference about Theme

Learning Objectives

For pages 1257–1262

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing free verse.

Reading: Making inferences about theme.

Vocabulary

woo (wo͞o) v. to tempt or invite; p. 1259 The candidate tried to woo voters with big promises.

rear (rir) v. to lift upright; raise; p. 1259 The bull reared his head before he charged.

nostalgia (nə stal´ jə) n. a bittersweet longing for things, persons, or situations of the past; p. 1260 As she grew older, she felt nostalgia for her youth.

scorn (skorn) n. contempt or disdain felt toward a person or object considered despicable or unworthy; p. 1260 She felt scorn for the thief.

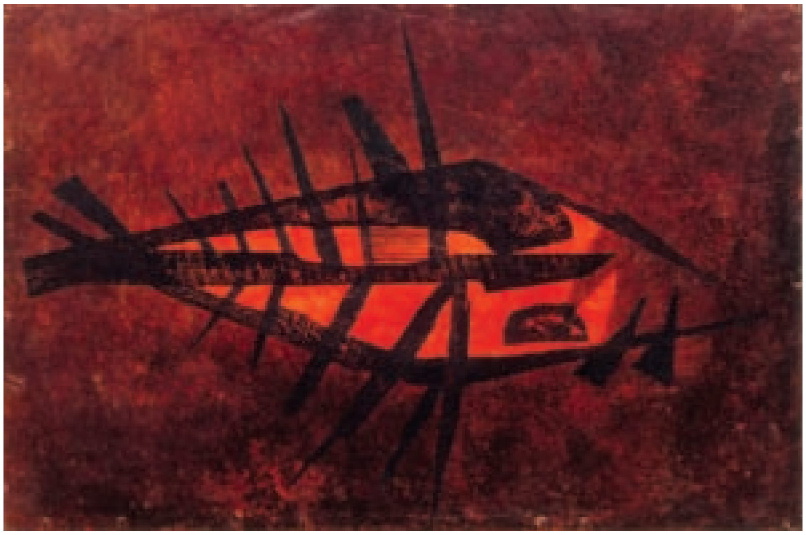
Tip: Analogies Analogies are word pairs that show relationships. To complete an analogy, determine the kind of relationship in the first pair of words and apply the same relationship to the second pair. Example:
high : low :: scorn : approval

Reading Practice

Reread Remind students that poems may not reveal themselves after one reading. In the poems they are about to read, Glück uses very few words to convey her thoughts, so each word represents an important choice. Have students read each poem once and record any words or phrases that they do not understand. Then have them stop and look up any words whose meanings are not clear. For example, they may want to look up the location of Hatteras. Then have them read each poem again and discuss how the meaning of the poem changed on the second reading.



Fish. Tadek Beutlich. Color woodcut/linocut. Victoria and Albert Museum, London. ★

Cottonmouth Country

Louise Glück

Fish bones walked the wave off Hatteras.
And there were other signs
That Death wooed us, by water, wooed us
By land: among the pines
An uncurled cottonmouth[1] that rolled on moss
Reared in the polluted air.
Birth, not death, is the hard loss.
I know. I also left a skin there. 1

---

[1] Also known as a water moccasin, this snake is a semiaquatic pit viper of lowlands and swampy regions of the southern United States.

Make Inferences About Theme Why does the image of "polluted air" reinforce Death's presence? 2

Vocabulary

woo (wo͞o) v. to tempt or invite rear (rir) v. to lift upright; raise

Teach

Literary Element 1

Personification Remind students that personification is a figure of speech in which an animal, object, or idea is given human qualities. Ask: What is personified in the poem? (Fish bones, since they "walked," and death, since it "wooed")

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences About Theme Answer: Students may say that this image suggests something dangerous and unhealthy.

View the Art ★

Tadek Beutlich is a contemporary Polish artist known primarily for his tapestry art on and off the loom and for his woodcuts. Ask: How does this print relate to the poem? (Possible answer: The poem refers to fish bones as a sign of death.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Students may grasp the effect of the line breaks in Glück's poem by practicing reading it aloud. Ask one student to read the poem aloud, pausing at the end of each line. Then have another student read the poem aloud, using the punctuation as a guide to when to pause. Discuss the difference in the two readings with students. Ask: What is the effect of the line breaks on the reading? (Some students may feel that the line breaks create tension; others may feel that they create a more conversational rhythm.)

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Identifying Theme Have advanced learners determine the poet's theme as expressed in the last two lines of the poem. Then have pairs of students discuss and debate their different interpretations.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Nature and Technology Answer: Students may say that the daisies say it makes sense to avoid them because their existence calls into question what people consider important.

Literary Element 2

Tone Ask: What is the attitude of the daisies toward humans? (The daisies seem to be mocking humans' inability to appreciate nature.)

Literary Element 3

Free Verse Answer: Students may say that the short lines emphasize the ideas in the lines and help to create drama.

Daisies

Louise Glück

Go ahead: say what you're thinking. The garden is not the real world. Machines are the real world. Say frankly what any fool could read in your face: it makes sense to avoid us, to resist nostalgia. It is not modern enough, the sound the wind makes stirring a meadow of daisies: the mind cannot shine following it. And the mind wants to shine, plainly, as machines shine, and not grow deep, as, for example, roots. It is very touching, all the same, to see you cautiously approaching the meadow's border in early morning, when no one could possibly be watching you. The longer you stand at the edge, the more nervous you seem. No one wants to hear impressions of the natural world: you will be laughed at again; scorn will be piled on you.
As for what you're actually hearing this morning: think twice before you tell anyone what was said in this field and by whom. 2

Nature and Technology Why does the speaker say that it makes sense to avoid the daisies (lines 4–5)? 1

Free Verse What dramatic effect is created by the varying line lengths in the last four lines? 3

Vocabulary

nostalgia (nə stal′ jə) n. a bittersweet longing for things, persons, or situations of the past scorn (skôrn) n. contempt or disdain felt toward a person or object considered despicable or unworthy

Writing Practice

Free Verse Ask: Do you think it is easier to write free verse or to write poetry with a regular pattern of meter and rhyme? Challenge students to create their own free verse poems. Encourage them to reflect the Big Idea of nature and technology in their poems. Have students consider their attitudes toward nature and technology. Tell students to convey those attitudes through the tones of their poems. Encourage them to include metaphors that develop the themes of their poems.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which one of these poems did you connect with more? Explain.
2. (a)What words and images in "Cottonmouth Country" suggest death? (b)Why do you think the speaker says that "birth, not death, is the hard loss"?
3. (a)Why does the listener in "Daisies" "cautiously" approach the meadow, when no one could possibly be watching? (b)Why does gazing at the meadow make the listener nervous?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)In "Cottonmouth Country," how does the image in the last line of the poem echo the images in the first and fifth lines? (b)Given what comes before, was the image in the last line an effective way to end the poem? Explain.
5. Why do the daisies in "Daisies" seem to be all-knowing about the listener's thoughts? Explain what this might suggest about nature.
6. (a)Which lines in "Daisies" suggest that people are reluctant to engage with nature? (b)Did the perceptions expressed in these lines ring true to you? Explain your answer.

Connect

7. Big Idea Nature and Technology (a)In these poems, how does the modern world intrude on nature? (b)Explain the conflict that you think Glück's poems may be intended to illuminate.
8. Connect to Today What do these poems say about human habits? Do you think Glück's observations are accurate today?

Literary Element Free Verse

On the first reading, a free verse poem may appear to have no regular form. However, analysis usually reveals one or more poetic techniques. One verse may follow a strict form, while the next verse may depart completely from that form.

Neither of these poems contains fixed meter, fixed line lengths, or formal stanza structures. "Daisies" makes use of rhyme, and "Cottonmouth Country" employs techniques such as slant rhyme and repetition, the use of recurring sounds, words, or phrases.

1. (a)List one or two examples of slant rhyme or repetition in "Cottonmouth Country." (b)What is the effect of these techniques on the poem's meaning, musicality, or overall unity?
2. Is free verse is an especially good way to convey the words of the speaker in "Daisies"? Support your answer with details from the poem.

Review: Voice

As you learned on page 420, voice is the personality that a writer conveys in a piece of writing. By examining a poet's choice of words and the tone, or attitude toward the subject matter, that a poem expresses, you can arrive at a clearer understanding of the poet's voice.

Partner Activity With a partner, discuss the voice in each of the poems. How would you describe the voice? Which words or phrases in each poem are especially good examples of the distinctive use of voice? For each poem, use a graphic organizer like the one shown to record your examples, give your characterization of the voice, and tell what the voice adds to the poem.

Examples of distinctive use of voice → My description of the voice → What the voice adds to the poem

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a)"Fish bones"; the cottonmouth; "polluted air" (b) Birth involves giving up a comfortable existence to pass into a new and hard world.
3. (a) The listener is embarrassed at being attracted to nature. (b) It may remind the listener of some long-suppressed need.
4. (a) The image of the speaker leaving behind a skin echoes the fish bones, which have lost their skin, and the cottonmouth, which may be shedding its skin. (b) The image is effective in relating the speaker's emotional milestones to the previous images of nature.
5. Students may say that it suggests that nature has much to teach people.
6. (a) Lines 4–6 and 16–19 (b) Answers will vary but should be supported with apt examples.
7. (a) The modern world's pollution and machinery intrude on the purity of nature. (b) The poems may be intended to illuminate humanity's kinship with nature, despite people's reluctance to acknowledge it.
8. Answers will vary. Students should support their answers with reference to the poems.

Literary Element

1. (a) Repetition: "walked the wave"; "wooed us, by water, wooed us / By land." Slant rhyme: "Hatteras"/ "wooed us" (b) Students may say these elements reinforce the relationships of ideas in the poem.
2. Students may say that the free verse imitates the rhythms and sounds of a real conversation.

Review: Voice

Possible answers from "Daisies":

- Example—use of second person
- My description—personal; conversational
- What the voice adds—makes a closer connection between reader and speaker

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. C is the correct answer because the line implies that birth leads inevitably to death.

Progress Check

Can students make inferences about the theme?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 217.

Vocabulary

1. b 2. c 3. a 4. c

Academic Vocabulary

Possible answer: an image is a vivid sensory representation.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 305–306

To create custom assessments online, go to Progress Reporter Online Assessment.

To create custom assessments using software, use ExamView Assessment Suite.

Reading Strategy Make Inferences About Theme

SAT Skills Practice

1. Line 7 of "Cottonmouth Country" ("Birth, not death, is the hard loss.") states the poem's
   - (A) implied theme of renewal and hope.
   - (B) stated theme of renewal and hope.
   - (C) implied theme of death's inevitability.
   - (D) stated theme of death's inevitability.
   - (E) implied theme of life's incomprehensibility.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Analogies Choose the word that best completes each analogy below.

1. woo : courtship :: study :
   a. hardship b. apprenticeship
   c. relationship
2. rear : raise :: ascend :
   a. descend b. envelop c. climb
3. nostalgia : reminisce :: grief :
   a. mourn b. celebrate c. withdraw
4. scorn : admire :: praise :
   a. explore b. debate c. criticize

Academic Vocabulary

Glück's poetry is filled with potent images that engage the reader's senses.

Image is an academic word. After seeing a movie, you might say that a particular image from it resonated with you. Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of the word in the sentence about the poem above. Check your inference in a dictionary.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53 and 54.

Speaking and Listening

Oral Interpretation

Assignment Present an oral interpretation of either "Cottonmouth Country" or "Daisies." Incorporate facial expressions, gestures, and audio or visual effects. Explain how your interpretation reflects the poem's meaning.

Prepare Refer to the theme chart you made to help you determine the literal and implied meaning of the poem. You should also identify the mood of the poem. Consider how you will use your body language and voice to reflect your interpretation of the poem's mood and meaning. Practice reading the poem in front of a mirror to evaluate your expressions and movements.

Perform When you present, use visual aids or other media to reinforce your interpretation. For example, you might display paintings or photographs that illustrate the poem's theme(s). Or you might play sound clips that mirror transitions in the poem, such as a slow song changing into something more harsh and dramatic. The way you dress can also communicate mood and meaning. However, do not let your props overshadow your presentation. The most effective way to convey mood and meaning is through gestures, tone of voice, and eye contact. When you finish reading the poem, explain how your presentation mirrors the selection's meaning.

Evaluate Discuss your performance with a partner. Write a paragraph evaluating your interpretation, noting any areas for improvement. Use the guidelines on page 841 to help in your evaluation.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

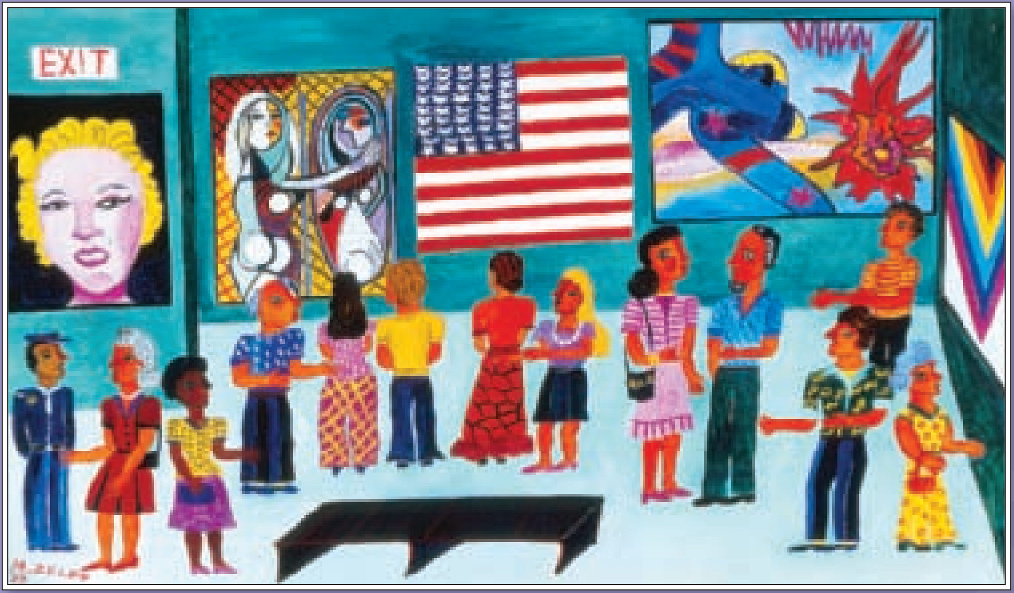
Speaking and Listening

Use these criteria when evaluating students' oral interpretations:

- Did the student use effective verbal and nonverbal techniques?
- Did the student convey implied meaning of the poem?
- Did the student use effective visual and media aids?

PART 3

Extending and Remaking Traditions



The Museum of Modern Art, 1973. Malcah Zeldis.

View the Art Zeldis is a self-taught artist who follows her own rules of painting. How does this attitude represent a potential new way of seeing tradition and innovation? ★

> "We became filled with a hunger—I call it now, sometimes, Latino Hunger. A hunger to see ourselves, our families and friends, our values and lives and realities reflected in something other than our own minds." 1
>
> —Carmen Tafolla, "Mi Familia"

Analyze and Extend

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Direct students to read the quotation. Ask: Why might Tafolla use the word "hunger" to convey her point? (When people do not see their lives represented in the society around them, they may feel an emptiness inside that is like hunger.)

View the Art ★

Answer: In following her own rules of painting, Zeldis is able to create her own style of art that blends tradition and innovation.

Malcah Zeldis (1931–) is a prominent folk artist whose subjects are social and religious events and her personal heroes.

For additional support for English learners, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 223.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Help students see how a writer uses sensory words to represent concepts or emotions that might be difficult to convey. In this case, Tafolla uses the feeling of physical hunger to describe the feeling of being invisible in society. Have students create a chart listing three emotions in one column as shown. Work with students to identify physical sensations or actions that might be associated with these feelings. Have students propose other emotions to add to the chart.

Emotion	Physical
feeling invisible	hunger
anger	(clenched fist)
excitement	(jumping)

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 70

Daily Language Practice Transparency 112

Or display images that show how a person's appearance changes over time (such as photos of a person as a baby, a child, a teenager, and an adult). Ask: How do people change throughout their lives? What, if anything, about a person remains the same over time?

Have students consider, as they read, how the two sisters in the selection have changed and how they have remained the same over time.

Before You Read

from The Woman Warrior

Meet Maxine Hong Kingston
(born 1940)

Finding meaning was Maxine Hong Kingston's primary mission when she began to write The Woman Warrior: Memories of a Girlhood among Ghosts. The American daughter of Chinese immigrants, Kingston had long been fascinated by the differing ways in which women were viewed by her parents and by other Chinese immigrants of their generation. In talking to her parents, Kingston discovered that cherished myths about powerful warrior women existed side by side with what Kingston perceived as sexist ideas. Kingston's mother often sang the Ballad of Mu Lan, about a young woman who took her father's place in battle. She also talked about her own experiences training and working as a doctor in China at a time when few women could gain an education, take on a profession, or work outside the home. Nevertheless, Kingston's mother would often say, "It's better to raise geese than girls."

A Life of Her Own Kingston began writing poetry when she was nine years old. A talented student, she attended the University of California at Berkeley before marrying Earll Kingston, an actor. She taught English and creative writing for almost a decade before submitting her writing for publication.

Writing as a Way of Life The Woman Warrior won the National Book Critics' Circle Award and was named one of the ten best nonfiction books of the 1970s by TIME magazine. The New York Times wrote, "As an account of growing up female and Chinese American in California . . . it is anti-nostalgic; it burns the fat right out of the mind. As a dream—of the 'female avenger'—it is dizzying, elemental, a poem turned into a sword."

> "I have no idea how people who don't write endure their lives . . . words and stories create order. And some of the things that happen to us in life seem to have no meaning, but when you write them down you find the meanings for them . . ."
>
> —Maxine Hong Kingston

While still writing The Woman Warrior, Kingston began China Men, which later won the American Book Award. The first is the story of the women in her family, the second, the story of the men.

In recent years, in addition to her writing, Kingston has taught English and math. "I get a recurring dream in which my mother appears and she says to me: 'What have you done to educate America? Have you educated America yet? And what about the rest of the world? Have you gotten them educated yet?' . . . Those are my orders!"

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Maxine Hong Kingston, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

from The Woman Warrior

Literary Elements
- Exposition (SE pp. 1265–1267, 1270, 1272)
- Dialogue (SE p. 1272)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Autobiographical Narrative (SE p. 1273)
- Sentence Fragments (SE p. 1273)
- Connect (TE p. 1266)

Reading Skills
- Make Inferences About Characters (SE pp. 1265–1268, 1270, 1272)

Vocabulary Skills
- Synonyms (SE p. 1272)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (TE p. 1266)

Study Skills/Research/Assessment
- Short Responses (TE p. 1270)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

When family members are raised in different cultures, how does it affect their relationships with one another? Working in a small group, discuss this question. Consider how food, clothing, language, behavior, and music might affect the relationship.

Build Background

The main character in this selection is Kingston's mother, Brave Orchid. When Brave Orchid came to the United States, she left her younger sister, Moon Orchid, behind in China. Moon Orchid later joined her sister in 1969. During that time, the Vietnam War was under way. Many draft-age men went to Canada to avoid going to Vietnam.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions

As you read, ask yourself, How does Kingston present a fresh take on U.S. culture and history?

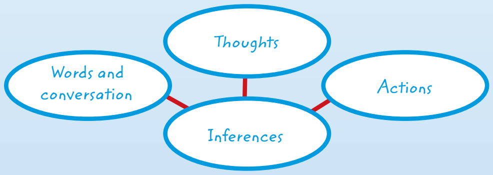
Literary Element Exposition

Exposition in nonfiction presents information that readers will need to understand the characters, the setting, and the situation discussed in a narrative. As you read, ask yourself, Where does Kingston use exposition and where does she require you to make inferences to understand the story?

Reading Strategy Make Inferences About Characters

When you make inferences, you use your reason and experience to understand what an author does not say directly. Inferring helps you look more deeply at characters and points you toward the theme, or overall message, of a selection. As you read, ask yourself, What do you know about Brave Orchid based on her thoughts, words, and actions?

Tip: Character Web Use a web like the one below to record details about Brave Orchid and your inferences based on them.



Learning Objectives

For pages 1264–1272

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Identifying exposition.

Reading: Making inferences about characters.

Vocabulary

downy (dou´ nē) adj. soft and fluffy, like the feathers of young birds; p. 1267 With their downy feathers, baby birds look innocent and cute.

inaudibly (in ô´ də blē) adv. in a manner not able to be heard; p. 1270 We could see her mouth moving, but she was speaking inaudibly.

gravity (grav´ ə tē) n. seriousness; importance; p. 1270 He wanted to laugh but didn't because he recognized the gravity of the graduation ceremony.

oblivious (ə bliv´ ē əs) adj. without conscious awareness; unmindful; p. 1270 We jumped up and down in joy, oblivious to the stares of the people around us.

dusk (dusk) n. the time of day just before nightfall; p. 1270 We returned home before dusk.

Tip: Synonyms Words with the same or similar meanings are called synonyms. Knowing synonyms can help you add interest and variety to your writing. Dusk, for example, is more poetic than evening.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Preview some of the text connectors that help readers understand the sequence of events in a story, such as when, first, then, next. The first word of the story is a sequencing word, when. "When she was about sixty-eight years old, Brave Orchid. . . . She had not seen Moon Orchid for thirty years." Ask: How old was Brave Orchid when she last saw her sister? (38 years old) Have students keep a list of sequencing words and phrases they find as they read the story. (after a short while, suddenly, finally, at last) Ask students to make a note next to each entry in the list that indicates how the connector helped their reading.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

It is 1969. Brave Orchid waits at the airport for her sister—Moon Orchid, whom she has not seen for 30 years—to arrive from China. As she waits, she thinks about how she came to the United States, how she feels about the impending reunion, and how her children are more American than Chinese. The reunion, although warm, is bittersweet, as both sisters cannot believe how much time has passed since they were last together and how old they have become.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 224–229.

Vocabulary

Multiple Meaning Words

Explain to students that the definition listed for a vocabulary word may not be the meaning with which they are most familiar. Ask: What is the scientific definition of the word gravity? (a physical force on objects)

ADVANCED Explain that the word gravity comes from the Latin root, gravis, meaning "heavy." Have students research the roots of the words gravity and grave. Ask: Does the word grave, meaning a burial place, have the same root as the word grave, meaning serious? (No; the burial place comes from an Old English root, grafan, that means "to dig.")

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 232–233.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Exposition Answer: "about sixty-eight years old"; "bringing her sister to the United States"

For additional literary element practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 230.

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences About Characters Answer: She is determined and forceful.

View the Art ★

Chinese-born Zifen Qian (1957–) combines traditional and modern styles in his paintings. Ask: How might this painting depict a scene from Brave Orchid's past? (The women in the painting could represent Moon Orchid and Brave Orchid as young women in China.)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

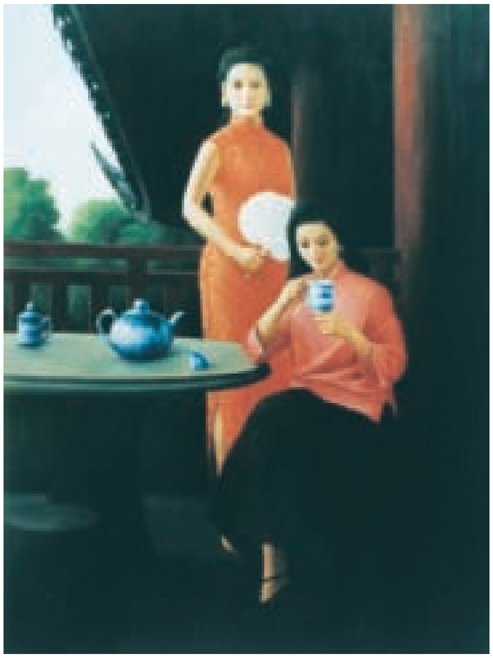
Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 4.4
DRP: 51
Lexile: 800

---

from The Woman Warrior

Maxine Hong Kingston



A Sunny Day with Gentle Breeze, 1993. Zifen Qian. Oil on canvas, 42 x 56 in. Private collection.

When she was about sixty-eight years old, Brave Orchid took a day off to wait at San Francisco International Airport for the plane that was bringing her sister to the United States. She had not seen Moon Orchid for thirty years. She had begun this waiting at home, getting up a half-hour before Moon Orchid's plane took off in Hong Kong. Brave Orchid would add her will power to the forces that keep an airplane up. Her head hurt with the concentration. The plane had to be light, so no matter how tired she felt, she dared not rest her spirit on a wing but continuously and gently pushed up on the plane's belly. She had already been waiting at the airport for nine hours. She was wakeful.

Next to Brave Orchid sat Moon Orchid's only daughter, who was helping her aunt wait. Brave Orchid had made two of her own children come too because they could drive, but they had been lured away by the magazine racks and the gift shops and coffee shops. Her American children could not sit for very long. They did not understand sitting; they had wandering feet. She hoped they would get back from the pay T.V.'s or the pay toilets or wherever they were spending their money before the plane arrived. If they did not come back soon, she would go look for them. If her son thought he could hide in the men's room, he was wrong.

"Are you all right, Aunt?" asked her niece.

"No, this chair hurts me. Help me pull some chairs together so I can put my feet up."

She unbundled a blanket and spread it out to make a bed for herself. On the floor she had two shopping bags full of canned peaches, real peaches, beans wrapped in taro[1] leaves, cookies, Thermos bottles, enough food for everybody, though only her niece would eat with

---

[1] Taro (tär′ ō) is a tropical Asian plant with broad leaves. It is customary in Chinese cooking to wrap rice, vegetables, or fish in the leaves for steaming.

1 Exposition What details help you understand the situation of Brave Orchid and her family?

Mak Inferences About Characters What does this detail tell you about Brave Orchid's character? 2

Writing Practice

SMALL GROUP

Connect The illustrations accompanying this selection convey messages about generational and cultural differences. Help students connect the art with the Big Idea:

- Have students work in small groups to create a magazine in which this selection will be published.
- Ask groups to choose art for the selection and to explain their choices, referring to story details. Students can choose existing art, describe what they would recommend, or sketch their ideas.

her. Her bad boy and bad girl were probably sneaking hamburgers, wasting their money. She would scold them.

Many soldiers and sailors sat about, oddly calm, like little boys in cowboy uniforms. (She thought "cowboy" was what you would call a Boy Scout.) They should have been crying hysterically on their way to Vietnam. "If I see one that looks Chinese," she thought, "I'll go over and give him some advice." She sat up suddenly; she had forgotten about her own son, who was even now in Vietnam. Carefully she split her attention, beaming half of it to the ocean, into the water to keep him afloat. He was on a ship. He was in Vietnamese waters. She was sure of it. He and the other children were lying to her. They had said he was in Japan, and then they said he was in the Philippines. But when she sent him her help, she could feel that he was on a ship in Da Nang.[2] Also she had seen the children hide the envelopes that his letters came in.

"Do you think my son is in Vietnam?" she asked her niece, who was dutifully eating.

"No. Didn't your children say he was in the Philippines?"

"Have you ever seen any of his letters with Philippine stamps on them?"

"Oh, yes. Your children showed me one."

"I wouldn't put it past them to send the letters to some Filipino they know. He puts Manila[3] postmarks on them to fool me."

"Yes, I can imagine them doing that. But don't worry. Your son can take care of himself. All your children can take care of themselves."

"Not him. He's not like other people. Not normal at all. He sticks erasers in his ears, and the erasers are still attached to the pencil stubs. The captain will say, 'Abandon ship,' or, 'Watch out for bombs,' and he won't hear. He doesn't listen to orders. I told him to flee to Canada, but he wouldn't go."

She closed her eyes. After a short while, plane and ship under control, she looked again at the children in uniforms. Some of the blond ones looked like baby chicks, their crew cuts like the downy yellow on baby chicks. You had to feel sorry for them even though they were Army and Navy Ghosts.[4]

Suddenly her son and daughter came running. "Come, Mother. The plane's landed early. She's here already." They hurried, folding up their mother's encampment. She was glad her children were not useless. They must have known what this trip to San Francisco was about then. "It's a good thing I made you come early," she said.

Brave Orchid pushed to the front of the crowd. She had to be in front. The passengers were separated from the people waiting for them by glass doors and walls. Immigration Ghosts were stamping papers. The travelers crowded along some conveyor belts to have their luggage searched. Brave Orchid did not see her sister anywhere. She stood watching for four hours. Her children left and came back. "Why don't you sit down?" they asked.

"The chairs are too far away," she said.

"Why don't you sit on the floor then?"

No, she would stand, as her sister was probably standing in a line she could not see from

---

[2] Da Nang (dä näng), a port city in South Vietnam, was the site of a major U.S. military base during the Vietnam War.

[3] Manila (mə nil′ ə) is the capital of the Philippines and its largest city.

[4] Here, ghosts refers to white people.

3 Extending and Remaking Traditions From Brave Orchid's thoughts here, what can you infer about differences between Brave Orchid and her children?

4 Extending and Remaking Traditions Why do you think Brave Orchid is mistrustful of her children? Why does she have more trust in her niece?

Make Inferences About Characters What do the children's actions tell you about the children? What does Brave Orchid's remark reveal about her? 5

Exposition Why are these details about the setting important to the story? 6

Vocabulary

downy (dou′ nē) adj. soft and fluffy, like the feathers of young birds

Teach

Big Idea 3

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: She wants her children to do things her way, but her children do not always obey her.

Big Idea 4

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: They have American ways and do not always obey her. Her niece is not as "American."

Reading Strategy 5

Make Inferences About Characters Answer: They are attuned to their mother. She doesn't want her children to know she appreciates them.

Literary Element 6

Exposition Answer: They emphasize her strong will and traditional Chinese way of approaching the situation.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Instruct English learners to identify actions and thoughts of Brave Orchid that seem unusual but reveal her personality. (One example is Brave Orchid's thinking that she was helping keep the plane in the air.) Ask them to describe her character. (strong, devoted to her family, fond of tradition)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Some locations mentioned in the selection may not be familiar to students. Ask students to find place names (such as Vietnam, China, Da Nang, and the Philippines) in the selection and then locate them on a world map.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Inferences About Characters Answer: Her trip to the United States 30 years ago was difficult.

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences About Characters Answer: Brave Orchid expects her sister to look as she did 30 years before, when Brave Orchid last saw her. She has an unrealistic concept of the passage of time.

Reading Strategy 3

Make Inferences About Characters Answer: Brave Orchid's remark indicates that she does not like being contradicted.

Literary History ☆

Port of Entry The Ellis Island immigration station closed in 1954. By that time, more than 12 million people had passed through it. At Ellis Island, officials screened immigrants in order to identify criminals and people with infectious diseases or histories of mental illness. Federal law banned such people from entering the United States.

here. Her American children had no feelings and no memory.

To while away time, she and her niece talked about the Chinese passengers. These new immigrants had it easy. On Ellis Island[5] the people were thin after forty days at sea and had no fancy luggage.

"That one looks like her," Brave Orchid would say.

"No, that's not her."

☆ Ellis Island had been made out of wood and iron. Here everything was new plastic, a ghost trick to lure immigrants into feeling safe and spilling their secrets. Then the Alien Office could send them right back. Otherwise, why did they lock her out, not letting her help her sister answer questions and spell her name? At Ellis Island when the ghost asked Brave Orchid what year her husband had cut off his pigtail, a Chinese who was crouching on the floor motioned her not to talk. "I don't know," she had said. If it weren't for that Chinese man, she might not be here today, or her husband either. She hoped some Chinese, a janitor or a clerk, would look out for Moon Orchid. Luggage conveyors fooled immigrants into thinking the Gold Mountain was going to be easy.

> Brave Orchid felt her heart jump—Moon Orchid. "There she is," she shouted. But her niece saw it was not her mother at all.

Brave Orchid felt her heart jump—Moon Orchid. "There she is," she shouted. But her niece saw it was not her mother at all. And it shocked her to discover the woman her aunt was pointing out. This was a young woman, younger than herself, no older than Moon Orchid the day the sisters parted. "Moon Orchid will have changed a little, of course," Brave Orchid was saying. "She will have learned to wear western clothes." The woman wore a navy blue suit with a bunch of dark cherries at the shoulder.

"No, Aunt," said the niece. "That's not my mother."

"Perhaps not. It's been so many years. Yes, it is your mother. It must be. Let her come closer, and we can tell. Do you think she's too far away for me to tell, or is it my eyes getting bad?"

"It's too many years gone by," said the niece.

Brave Orchid turned suddenly—another Moon Orchid, this one a neat little woman with a bun. She was laughing at something the person ahead of her in line said. Moon Orchid was just like that, laughing at nothing. "I would be able to tell the difference if one of them would only come closer," Brave Orchid said with tears, which she did not wipe. Two children met the woman with the cherries, and she shook their hands. The other woman was met by a young man. They looked at each other gladly, then walked away side by side.

Up close neither one of those women looked like Moon Orchid at all. "Don't worry, Aunt," said the niece. "I'll know her."

"I'll know her too. I knew her before you did."

The niece said nothing, although she had seen her mother only five years ago. Her aunt liked having the last word.

Finally Brave Orchid's children quit wandering and drooped on a railing. Who knew what they were thinking? At last the niece called out, "I see her! I see her! Mother! Mother!" Whenever the doors parted, she shouted,

---

[5] From 1892 to 1943, Ellis Island, in upper New York Bay, was the chief U.S. immigration station.

1 Make Inferences About Characters What can you infer about Brave Orchid's background from her thoughts here?

Make Inferences About Characters What do Brave Orchid's unrealistic ideas about her sister tell you about Brave Orchid? 2

Make Inferences About Characters What trait, or personal characteristic, of Brave Orchid is suggested by this remark? 3

Grammar Practice

Quoted Questions When direct quotations end with questions, the question marks are placed inside the closing quotation marks. Have students find questions in the selection that follow this rule.

Direct students to imagine they are about to be reunited with people they have not seen in a long time. Ask them to write dialogues that include questions they would ask at the reunion. Remind them to punctuate the questions correctly.

Gate
21
23
24
Ga
2

probably embarrassing the American cousins, but she didn't care. She called out, "Mama! Mama!" until the crack in the sliding doors became too small to let in her voice. "Mama!" What a strange word in an adult voice. Many people turned to see what adult was calling, "Mama!" like a child. Brave Orchid saw an old, old woman jerk her head up, her little eyes blinking confusedly, a woman whose nerves leapt toward the sound anytime she heard "Mama!" Then she relaxed to her own business again. She was a tiny, tiny lady, very thin, with little fluttering hands, and her hair was in a gray knot. She was dressed in a gray wool suit; she wore pearls around her neck and in her earlobes. Moon Orchid would travel with her jewels showing. Brave Orchid momentarily saw, like a larger, younger outline around this old woman, the sister she had been waiting for. The familiar dim halo faded, leaving the woman so old, so gray. So old. Brave Orchid pressed against the glass. That old lady? Yes, that old lady facing the ghost who stamped her papers without questioning her was her sister. Then, without noticing her family, Moon Orchid walked smiling over to the Suitcase Inspector Ghost, who took her boxes apart, pulling out puffs of tissue. From where she was, Brave Orchid could not see what her sister had chosen to carry across the ocean. She wished her sister would look her way. Brave Orchid thought that if she were entering a new country, she would be at the windows. Instead Moon Orchid hovered over the unwrapping, surprised at each reappearance as if she were opening presents after a birthday party. 4

"Mama!" Moon Orchid's daughter kept calling. Brave Orchid said to her children, "Why don't you call your aunt too? Maybe she'll hear us if all of you call out together." But her children slunk away. Maybe that shame-face they so often wore was American politeness.

Extending and Remaking Traditions How does this sentence help explain why there is tension between Brave Orchid and her children? 5

Teach

Literary Element 4

Exposition Ask: How does Kingston give the reader insight into Brave Orchid's thoughts? (She describes Brave Orchid's desire for her sister to look her way and her efforts to get her children to call to her sister.)

Big Idea 5

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: It shows that Brave Orchid may not understand her children because of the cultural gap between them and herself.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Ask students how they interpret the use of ghosts in the text. Ask: Does Kingston believe the people are truly ghosts? (The word ghosts expresses Brave Orchid's point of view. She sees all Caucasians as ghosts because of the whiteness of their skin.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Have students suggest emotions that Brave Orchid feels as she is about to see her sister and when she finally sees her. Help them find evidence in the text to support their answers. For example, she feels protective (She hoped some Chinese . . . would look out for Moon Orchid), defensive (I knew her before you did), joyful (Brave Orchid felt her heart jump), sad (Brave Orchid said with tears), disapproving (Moon Orchid would travel with her jewels showing), stunned (That old lady?). Point out that though the sisters were happy to see each other again, they were also sad because they have grown old without each other.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Tone Ask: How does the story's tone change between the time the plane lands and Brave Orchid stands to wait for her sister and the time the sisters meet each other face to face? (Possible answer: At first, the tone is suspenseful and anxious as Brave Orchid and her niece try to identify Moon Orchid and attract her attention. Then the tone becomes humorous and bittersweet as the women face each other for the first time in 30 years.)

Literary Element 2

Exposition Answer: The situation set up in the early part of the story is moving to a close. Moon Orchid has arrived, and the reader has come to certain realizations about Brave Orchid's character.

Reading Strategy 3

Make Inferences About Characters Answer: Brave Orchid is clearly moved by being reunited with her sister. She may have expected her sister to react to their reunion more seriously.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 235.

"Mama!" Moon Orchid's daughter called again, and this time her mother looked right at her. She left her bundles in a heap and came running. "Hey!" the Customs Ghost yelled at her. She went back to clear up her mess, talking inaudibly to her daughter all the while. Her daughter pointed toward Brave Orchid. And at last Moon Orchid looked at her—two old women with faces like mirrors.

1 Their hands reached out as if to touch the other's face, then returned to their own, the fingers checking the grooves in the forehead and along the side of the mouth. Moon Orchid, who never understood the gravity of things, started smiling and laughing, pointing at Brave Orchid. Finally Moon Orchid gathered up her stuff, strings hanging and papers loose, and met her sister at the door, where they shook hands, oblivious to blocking the way.

"You're an old woman," said Brave Orchid.

"Aiaa. You're an old woman."

"But you are really old. Surely, you can't say that about me. I'm not old the way you're old."

"But you really are old. You're one year older than I am."

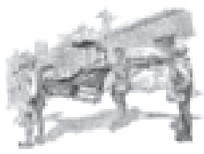
"Your hair is white and your face all wrinkled."

"You're so skinny."

"You're so fat."

"Fat women are more beautiful than skinny women."

The children pulled them out of the doorway. One of Brave Orchid's children brought the car from the parking lot, and the other heaved the luggage into the trunk. They put the two old ladies and the niece in the back seat. All the way home—across the Bay Bridge, over the Diablo hills,[6] across the San Joaquin River to the valley, the valley moon so white at dusk—all the way home, the two sisters exclaimed every time they turned to look at each other, "Aiaa! How old!"



Visual Vocabulary
A palanquin (pal′ ən kēn′) is a covered or enclosed couch, carried on the shoulders of two or more men by means of poles.

Brave Orchid forgot that she got sick in cars, that all vehicles but palanquins made her dizzy. "You're so old," she kept saying. "How did you get so old?"

Brave Orchid had tears in her eyes. But Moon Orchid said, "You look older than I. You are older than I," and again she'd laugh. "You're wearing an old mask to tease me." It surprised Brave Orchid that after thirty years she could still get annoyed at her sister's silliness. ∾

---

[6] The Bay Bridge crosses the San Francisco Bay, connecting the cities of San Francisco and Oakland. The Diablo (dē ä′ blō) hills are at the base of Mount Diablo, a peak located about twenty miles east of Oakland.

Vocabulary

inaudibly (in ô′ də blē) adv. in a manner not able to be heard gravity (grav′ ə tē) n. seriousness; importance oblivious (ə bliv′ ē əs) adj. without conscious awareness; unmindful

Exposition How does the author develop the details about character and plot that were introduced in the first part of the story? 2

Make Inferences About Characters Why is Brave Orchid annoyed by her sister's remarks? 3

Vocabulary

dusk (dusk) n. the time of day just before nightfall

Assessment Practice

Short Responses Explain that a short-response question may not have one correct answer. Instead, an answer will be judged by its insightfulness and the quality of textual evidence included. Ask: How does Brave Orchid's reaction to her children's "wandering off" at the airport indicate her relationship with them? (Possible answer: Her reaction is one indication that a generational and cultural gap exists between her children and herself; she is exasperated with their impatience, but she admires their independence.)

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Did you find this selection serious, humorous, or both? Describe your impressions.
2. (a)How long before her sister's plane is scheduled to land does Brave Orchid arrive at the airport? (b)Why do you think she does this?
3. (a)How do Brave Orchid and Moon Orchid react when they see each other? (b)Why do the sisters respond to each other as they do?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. Since this narrative is from Kingston's memoir, a reader might expect a first-person point of view. Why might Kingston have chosen to use the third-person point of view here?
5. Brave Orchid finds her children to be a mystery. Why might she feel this way? Explain.
6. Did you find Kingston's rendering of the family convincing and true-to-life? Why or why not?

Connect

7. Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions How does this excerpt from The Woman Warrior portray the immigrant experience?

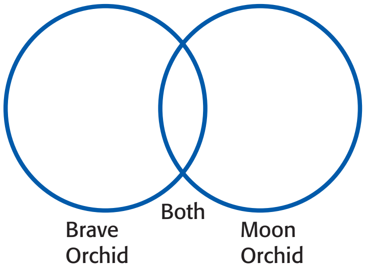
Visual Literacy

Compare and Contrast Characters

As you did for Brave Orchid, make a web diagram to record details and inferences about Moon Orchid's character. After you have completed the web about Moon Orchid, examine both webs to see how Brave Orchid's and Moon Orchid's characters are similar and different. Use a Venn diagram to compare them.



Group Activity

Share the graphic organizers you made with one or more classmates.

1. Work with a partner or group to discuss how Brave Orchid and Moon Orchid are similar and how they are different.
2. At what points in the selection do you receive critical information about each of the two characters? For each character, explain how thoughts, words, actions, or some combination of the three provided the information.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) She arrives at least nine hours early. (b) She is looking forward to seeing her sister.
3. (a) Brave Orchid is moved to be reunited with Moon Orchid, yet also annoyed. They bicker. (b) Perhaps they have always argued; arguing is part of their relationship.
4. She may have wanted to make this memoir a universal statement about culture and family.
5. Her children, raised in the United States, have had different experiences than she. She does not understand how these experiences shaped them.
6. Students' answers will vary. Students should support their answers with examples from the selection.
7. By providing a glimpse of Brave Orchid's inner world, Kingston helps foster sympathy and understanding for Chinese immigrants in the United States.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 307–308.

To create custom assessments online, go to Progress Reporter Online Assessment.

To create custom assessments using software, use ExamView Assessment Suite.

Visual Literacy

1. Both make quick, sharp remarks; Brave Orchid is less patient and more serious than Moon Orchid.
2. Students should offer specific examples from the story (conversations or descriptive details) that provide essential information.

After You Read

Assess

Literary Element

1. The story is set in an airport. An older woman is to meet her sister there after a 30-year separation. The setting is developed further as the narrator describes departing soldiers and arriving immigrants.
2. Students may choose Brave Orchid's opinionated nature or her old-fashioned manner. Readers feel more sympathy as they learn about her struggles.

Review: Dialogue

1. (a) The niece treats her with respect and deference. (b) The niece loves her aunt; she grew up around people like Brave Orchid.
2. (a) It is a familiar pattern and a way of showing their affection. (b) It is moving and humorous. It is amusing that they immediately begin to bicker; the bickering is moving because it shows their relationship has not changed.

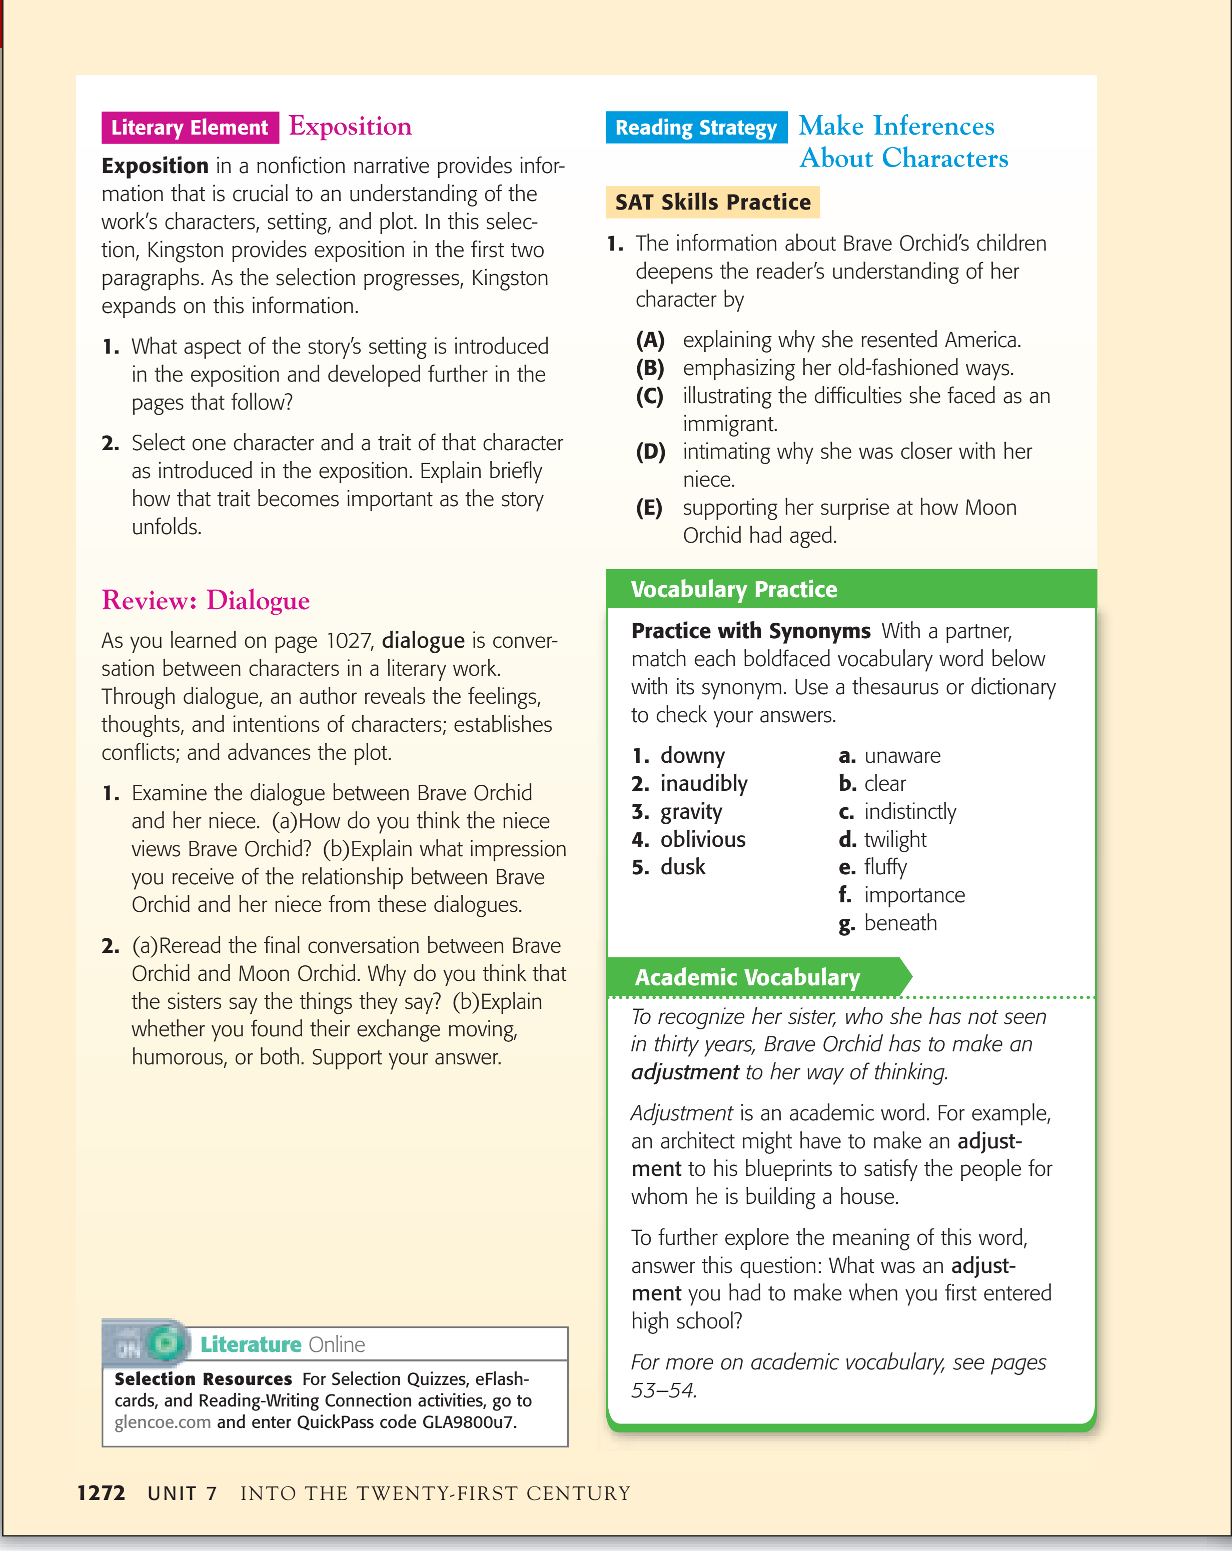
Reading Strategy

1. C is the correct answer because Kingston's description of Brave Orchid's Americanized children helps explain her struggles to retain her cultural connection after immigrating to America.

Progress Check

Can students make inferences about characters?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 231.



Literary Element Exposition

Exposition in a nonfiction narrative provides information that is crucial to an understanding of the work's characters, setting, and plot. In this selection, Kingston provides exposition in the first two paragraphs. As the selection progresses, Kingston expands on this information.

1. What aspect of the story's setting is introduced in the exposition and developed further in the pages that follow?
2. Select one character and a trait of that character as introduced in the exposition. Explain briefly how that trait becomes important as the story unfolds.

Review: Dialogue

As you learned on page 1027, dialogue is conversation between characters in a literary work. Through dialogue, an author reveals the feelings, thoughts, and intentions of characters; establishes conflicts; and advances the plot.

1. Examine the dialogue between Brave Orchid and her niece. (a)How do you think the niece views Brave Orchid? (b)Explain what impression you receive of the relationship between Brave Orchid and her niece from these dialogues.
2. (a)Reread the final conversation between Brave Orchid and Moon Orchid. Why do you think that the sisters say the things they say? (b)Explain whether you found their exchange moving, humorous, or both. Support your answer.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Reading Strategy Make Inferences About Characters

SAT Skills Practice

1. The information about Brave Orchid's children deepens the reader's understanding of her character by
   - (A) explaining why she resented America.
   - (B) emphasizing her old-fashioned ways.
   - (C) illustrating the difficulties she faced as an immigrant.
   - (D) intimating why she was closer with her niece.
   - (E) supporting her surprise at how Moon Orchid had aged.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Synonyms With a partner, match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with its synonym. Use a thesaurus or dictionary to check your answers.

1. downy	a. unaware
2. inaudibly	b. clear
3. gravity	c. indistinctly
4. oblivious	d. twilight
5. dusk	e. fluffy
	f. importance
	g. beneath

Academic Vocabulary

To recognize her sister, who she has not seen in thirty years, Brave Orchid has to make an adjustment to her way of thinking.

Adjustment is an academic word. For example, an architect might have to make an adjustment to his blueprints to satisfy the people for whom he is building a house.

To further explore the meaning of this word, answer this question: What was an adjustment you had to make when you first entered high school?

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Vocabulary

1. e 2. c 3. f 4. a 5. d

Academic Vocabulary

Possible answer: When I first entered high school, I made the adjustment to having to write more papers than I had to write in middle school.

Respond Through Writing

Autobiographical Narrative

Apply Flashback Unlike The Woman Warrior, which is written in the third person, most memoirs are written in the first person. Write an autobiographical narrative in the first person about a time when you encountered someone you hadn't seen in a long time. How did reality differ from your expectations? What had changed? What remained the same? Incorporate at least one flashback in your essay, as Kingston does.

Understand the Task An autobiographical narrative is a story in which an author tells a sequence of events from his or her life and reveals the personal significance of the experience. A flashback is an interruption in the chronological sequence of a narrative to leap back in time.

Prewrite Decide on an experience and a flashback and then outline the sequence of your narrative. Think about how you will weave the flashback into your narrative, remembering that you will need to use logical transitions to show how the flashback relates to the main action. You may want to organize your ideas in a diagram.

Draft As you draft, check to make sure that the pacing and sequence of your story make sense. Use interior monologue to capture the thoughts you had during this experience and to show how reality may have differed from your expectations.

Revise Go back over your essay. Check to see that you have used concrete details (who, what, when, and where) and sensory details (sights, sounds, smells, tastes, and textures) to describe actions, events, thoughts, and feelings in your narrative. Add more details as necessary to bring your narrative to life.

ORIGINAL: I waited for my friend at the café.
REVISION: As I waited for my friend at the café, I clutched my warm cup of jasmine-flower tea, my eyes darting nervously around the room.

Edit and Proofread Proofread your paper, correcting any errors in grammar, spelling, and punctuation. Use the Grammar Tip in the side column to help you avoid sentence fragments.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objective:

Writing: Applying flashback in an autobiographical narrative.

Grammar Tip

Avoiding Sentence Fragments

Sentence fragments are "sentences" that do not express complete thoughts. Examples:

Waited for my friend.
My oldest friend.

The first fragment lacks a subject. The second lacks both subject and verb. Correct these mistakes by adding the missing part(s) to form a complete sentence:

I waited for my friend.
He was my oldest friend.

Some sentence fragments are subordinate clauses:

When I finally got to see him.

To correct this type of fragment, add a main clause to the subordinate clause:

I was glad when I finally got to see him.

After You Read

Assess

Writing

Students' autobiographical narratives should effectively incorporate a flashback and use interior monologue. Students should also enhance their narrative with concrete and sensory details.

Scoring Guide

Assess students' performance in the following categories using the scoring guide at the bottom of the page:

- Addresses all parts of the writing task.
- Provides a flashback that relates to the main action and is woven into the narrative logically.
- Includes interior monologue that describes the writer's inner thoughts and feelings.
- Provides well chosen concrete and sensory details that bring the narrative to life.
- Employs a variety of sentence types and uses precise, descriptive language.
- Follows English language conventions.

For grammar practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 234.

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Task addressed	fully	mostly	partially	barely
Flashback	transition to flashback is very logical	transition to flashback is logical	transition to flashback is confusing	no flashback
Interior monologue	fully describes inner thoughts	describes some inner thoughts	describes few inner thoughts	does not describe inner thoughts
Concrete and sensory details	well employed	employed	few employed	none
Language	varied, precise, descriptive	varied, somewhat descriptive	predictable, basic	not varied, limited
Convention errors	few or none	several	some	many

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 113

Or ask: When have you had to choose between doing something pleasurable and something responsible? (Students may share experiences such as wanting to go out with friends when they had to study for a test.) Is there a decision that you look back on and wish that you had handled differently? (Students may share a variety of experiences; encourage them to explore why they regretted their decisions.)

Before You Read

Everything Stuck to Him

Meet Raymond Carver
(1938–1988)

In the summer of 1958, Raymond Carver borrowed $125 from the pharmacist for whom he delivered prescriptions. With that money, he moved his young family to the outskirts of Chico, California, where he would attend college. Although he and his wife were already working hard to support their two children, the twenty-year-old Carver knew that he wanted to be a writer and felt that this move would help him pursue his dream. That fall at Chico State, he met writer John Gardner, who became his mentor. Gardner paid special attention to Carver's work and offered him the key to his office, a gesture Carver called "a turning point" in his life. Every weekend, Carver spent part of the day in Gardner's office, typing page after page, developing his craft. Carver had begun his journey toward becoming an important twentieth-century writer.

> "Every great, or even every very good writer, makes the world over according to his own specifications."
>
> —Raymond Carver
> from "A Storyteller's Shoptalk"

Working-Class Perspective Raymond Carver was born in Clatskanie, Oregon. By the time he was three, his family had moved to Yakima, Washington, where his father worked at a sawmill. Carver's childhood in Yakima was beset with troubles. His father was an alcoholic, the family was dreadfully poor, and survival was a daily challenge.

Throughout his twenties and thirties, Carver struggled financially and battled with alcoholism, but kept his eye on the world around him, gathering material for his fiction and poetry. By the age of forty, however, he had quit drinking and established himself as a master of the short story.

Literary Acclaim One lesson Carver learned from Gardner was that revision, revision, and more revision were essential to good writing. Following this process, Carver created spare, realistic fiction, telling stories about everyday people in a singular voice that added tension and depth.

Carver won numerous awards for his writing, and received a National Book Award nomination for fiction in 1977. His short stories appear in several collections, including Will You Be Quiet, Please? (1976), Furious Seasons (1977), and Where I'm Calling From (1988). He published three collections of poetry during his lifetime, and another collection was published posthumously. Though Carver died at the age of fifty from lung cancer, his reputation continues to grow. Carver provided some of the most enduring human portraits of the twentieth century.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Raymond Carver, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

Everything Stuck to Him

Literary Elements
- Frame Story (SE pp. 1275, 1276, 1279, 1280)
- Style (SE p. 1280)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (TE p. 1276, 1279)

Reading Skills
- Question (SE pp. 1275, 1277–1279, 1281; TE p. 1276)
- Connect (TE p. 1278)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE pp. 1275, 1281)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Evaluate Debate (SE p. 1281)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

Have you ever had to choose between having fun and doing something responsible? Write a journal entry in which you describe how you made this decision.

Build Background

"Everything Stuck to Him" was included in Carver's collection of short stories What We Talk About When We Talk About Love. Published in 1981, the collection represents Carver at the peak of his early period, when he perfected a spare, succinct style of storytelling. Carver used direct, everyday language, which was perfectly suited to the content and characters in his stories. He is also known for his innovative techniques, such as blending dialogue and narration.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions

As you read, ask yourself, What innovative techniques does Carver use in this story?

Literary Element Frame Story

A frame story is a plot structure that includes the telling of one story within another story. The frame is the outer story, which precedes and usually follows the inner, more important story. In this way, the outer story "frames" the inner one. As you read, ask yourself, Where does the inner story begin and end?

Reading Strategy Question

Questioning involves asking yourself whether you understand what you are reading. As you read, ask yourself, Do I understand what I've just read? How does this action fit into the overall conflict?

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record your questions while reading the story. You can fill in the answers to these questions after you finish reading.

Questions	Answers
Why does the father tell his daughter about the dentist's letterhead?

Learning Objectives

For pages 1274–1281

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Understanding frame stories.

Reading: Questioning.

Listening and Speaking: Using logical arguments in debates.

Vocabulary

coincide (kō´ in sīd´) v. to occur at the same time; p. 1276 His birthday coincided with the exam.

ambition (am bish´ ən) n. a desire to achieve a particular end; p. 1277 Driven by ambition, she worked tirelessly to succeed.

striking (strī´ king) adj. impressive; attractive; p. 1277 The model was even more striking in person than in her photographs.

marvel (mär´ vəl) v. to be filled with wonder; p. 1277 The diver marveled at the coral reef.

fitfully (fit´ fəl lē) adv. irregularly; in stops and starts; p. 1277 The sick child coughed fitfully.

Tip: Context Clues The words and phrases surrounding a word can often provide clues to its meaning. Consider the sentence, Driven by ambition, she worked tirelessly to become a champion gymnast. If she worked tirelessly, she must have been very motivated, so ambition must mean "motivation" or "desire."

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

A father shares his memories of something that happened when his daughter was an infant. It is a story about a choice he made between enjoying a simple pleasure and taking personal responsibility.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 237–242.

Vocabulary

Word Parts The suffix -ful, meaning "full of," can turn a noun into an adjective: careful means "full of care," meaningful means "full of meaning." Ask: How would you turn careful and meaningful into adverbs? (add -ly) Say: Discuss, with the aid of a dictionary, how the word fitfully might have come to its current definition from its root, fitt, meaning "conflict." (conflict might have come to mean sudden attack, which might have come to mean sudden onset, which might have come to mean irregular interval)

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain how "Everything Stuck to Him" uses a frame story for its plot structure. Remind students that they may have seen this plot structure used in a movie. For example, the movie might begin with a grandfather sitting by a child's bed telling her a story. As the older person is talking, the action on the screen switches to the story being told. Sometimes the grandfather and child do not appear on the screen again until the end of the movie. Ask students to think of other characteristics of this type of story. (The story may change the feelings or behavior of the person hearing it; the story from the past may solve a present mystery.)

Teach

Big Idea 1

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: This technique makes the story feel more immediate, blurring the distinction between past and present, between dialogue and narration.

Literary Element 2

Frame Story Answer: The narrator has set up the telling of this inner story in the opening, which is a frame story.

Big Idea 3

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: It suggests the complexity of human relationships, particularly those within a family.

View the Art ★

Ask: How does the painting relate to the narrator of the story? (Possible answer: The narrator is telling a story about his wife and infant.)

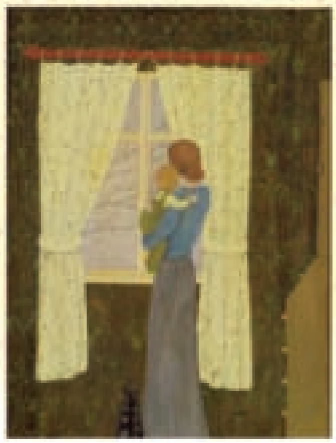
For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 3.3
DRP: 46
Lexile: 460

Everything Stuck to Him

Raymond Carver



Mother and Child. Ditz. Private collection. ★

She's in Milan for Christmas and wants to know what it was like when she was a kid.

Tell me, she says. Tell me what it was like when I was a kid. She sips Strega, waits, eyes him closely.

She is a cool, slim, attractive girl, a survivor from top to bottom.

That was a long time ago. That was twenty years ago, he says.

You can remember, she says. Go on.

What do you want to hear? he says. What else can I tell you? I could tell you something that happened when you were a baby. It involves you, he says. But only in a minor way.

Tell me, she says. But first fix us another so you won't have to stop in the middle.

He comes back from the kitchen with drinks, settles into his chair, begins.

They were kids themselves, but they were crazy in love, this eighteen-year-old boy and this seventeen-year-old girl when they married. Not all that long afterwards they had a daughter.

The baby came along in late November during a cold spell that just happened to coincide with the peak of the waterfowl season. The boy loved to hunt, you see. That's part of it.

The boy and girl, husband and wife, father and mother, they lived in a little apartment under a dentist's office. Each night they cleaned the dentist's place upstairs in exchange for rent and utilities. In summer they were expected to maintain the lawn and the flowers. In winter the boy shoveled snow and spread rock salt on the walks. Are you still with me? Are you getting the picture?

I am, she says.

That's good, he says. So one day the dentist finds out they were using his letterhead for their personal correspondence. But that's another story.

He gets up from his chair and looks out the window. He sees the tile rooftops and the snow that is falling steadily on them.

Tell the story, she says.

1 Extending and Remaking Traditions Why do you think the author does not use quotation marks to indicate dialogue?

2 Frame Story How does the reader know that the narrator is beginning to tell a story about himself?

Extending and Remaking Traditions Why does the author identify the couple by the roles they play? 3

Vocabulary

coincide (kō´ in sīd´) v. to occur at the same time

Reading Practice

Question To keep track of the questions they develop as they read, students can take notes. Suggest that they use the questions in their notes to make charts like the one shown. Have them write questions in the left-hand column and answers in the right-hand column.

Question	Answer
Why does the father mention the story about the letterhead?	It foreshadows what happens later on.

The two kids were very much in love. On top of this they had great ambitions. They were always talking about the things they were going to do and the places they were going to go.

Now the boy and girl slept in the bedroom, and the baby slept in the living room. Let's say the baby was about three months old and had only just begun to sleep through the night.

On this one Saturday night after finishing his work upstairs, the boy stayed in the dentist's office and called an old hunting friend of his father's.

Carl, he said when the man picked up the receiver, believe it or not, I'm a father.

Congratulations, Carl said. How is the wife?

She's fine, Carl. Everybody's fine.

That's good, Carl said, I'm glad to hear it. But if you called about going hunting, I'll tell you something. The geese are flying to beat the band. I don't think I've ever seen so many. Got five today. Going back in the morning, so come along if you want to.

I want to, the boy said.

The boy hung up the telephone and went downstairs to tell the girl. She watched while he laid out his things. Hunting coat, shell bag, boots, socks, hunting cap, long underwear, pump gun.

What time will you be back? the girl said.

Probably around noon, the boy said. But maybe as late as six o'clock. Would that be too late?

It's fine, she said. The baby and I will get along fine. You go and have some fun. When you get back, we'll dress the baby up and go visit Sally.

The boy said, Sounds like a good idea.

Sally was the girl's sister. She was striking. I don't know if you've seen pictures of her. The boy was a little in love with Sally, just as he was a little in love with Betsy, who was another sister the girl had. The boy used to say to the girl, If we weren't married, I could go for Sally.

What about Betsy? the girl used to say. I hate to admit it, but I truly feel she's better looking than Sally and me. What about Betsy?

Betsy too, the boy used to say.

After dinner he turned up the furnace and helped her bathe the baby. He marveled again at the infant who had half his features and half the girl's. He powdered the tiny body. He powdered between fingers and toes.

He emptied the bath into the sink and went upstairs to check the air. It was overcast and cold. The grass, what there was of it, looked like canvas, stiff and gray under the street light.

Snow lay in piles beside the walk. A car went by. He heard sand under the tires. He let himself imagine what it might be like tomorrow, geese beating the air over his head, shotgun plunging against his shoulder.

Then he locked the door and went downstairs.

In bed they tried to read. But both of them fell asleep, she first, letting the magazine sink to the quilt.

It was the baby's cries that woke him up.

The light was on out there, and the girl was standing next to the crib rocking the baby in her arms. She put the baby down, turned out the light, and came back to the bed.

He heard the baby cry. This time the girl stayed where she was. The baby cried fitfully and stopped. The boy listened, then dozed. But the baby's cries woke him again. The living-room light was burning. He sat up and turned on the lamp.

Question Carl, Sally, and Betsy are the only characters who are named in the story. Why does Carver name them? 4

Question Why does the boy have this vision of himself hunting geese? 5

Vocabulary

ambition (am bish´ ən) n. a desire to achieve a particular end striking (strī´ king) adj. impressive; attractive

Vocabulary

marvel (mär´ vəl) v. to be filled with wonder fitfully (fit´ fəl lē) adv. irregularly; in stops and starts

Teach

Reading Strategy 4

Question Answer: Choosing not to name the main characters makes the story universal. However, naming the minor characters provides the texture of a specific reality.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Ask: Why does the author choose to call the baby's mother and father "the girl" and "the boy" rather than "the woman" and "the man"? (to emphasize that in the story he tells, they are even younger than his daughter)

Reading Strategy 5

Question Answer: The boy has a momentary yearning for freedom from responsibility.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate English language learners may benefit from pausing periodically to summarize text. Have students work in pairs to review what they have read. Suggest that they use guiding questions such as, What has happened? Who is speaking? What is the situation?

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Ask: What events cause the girl to present the boy with an ultimatum? (the baby's constant crying, the girl's lack of sleep, the boy not talking with her about his decision to go hunting)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Question Answer: The girl feels abandoned by the boy. Her maternal feelings cause her to focus on the baby, to the exclusion of the boy.

APPROACHING Help students trace how the argument between the boy and girl leads both people to say things that are not entirely true. Ask: What statement that the boy makes leads the girl to say, "That's not the point and you know it."? (The boy challenges her by saying that she does know Carl even though she says she does not.) What does this exchange reveal about the two characters? (They are both getting flustered and upset.)

Writer's Technique ☆

Tone Ask: How does the tone of the story change after the boy swears? (Possible answer: Tension builds between the boy and the girl. The girl becomes angry because he wants to go hunting. The tension reaches a peak when the girl tells him to choose between having a family and going hunting.)

View the Art ★

Ask: How might the man in the painting resemble the boy in the story? (Possible answer: The man looks as though he is pondering an important decision.)

I don't know what's wrong, the girl said, walking back and forth with the baby. I've changed her and fed her, but she keeps on crying. I'm so tired I'm afraid I might drop her.

You come back to bed, the boy said. I'll hold her for a while.

He got up and took the baby, and the girl went to lie down again.

Just rock her for a few minutes, the girl said from the bedroom. Maybe she'll go back to sleep.

The boy sat on the sofa and held the baby. He jiggled it in his lap until he got its eyes to close, his own eyes closing right along. He rose carefully and put the baby back in the crib.

It was a quarter to four, which gave him forty-five minutes. He crawled into bed and dropped off. But a few minutes later the baby was crying again, and this time they both got up.

The boy did a terrible thing. He swore.

For God's sake, what's the matter with you? the girl said to the boy. Maybe she's sick or something. Maybe we shouldn't have given her ☆ the bath.

The boy picked up the baby. The baby kicked its feet and smiled.

Look, the boy said, I really don't think there's anything wrong with her.

How do you know that? the girl said. Here, let me have her. I know I ought to give her something, but I don't know what it's supposed to be.

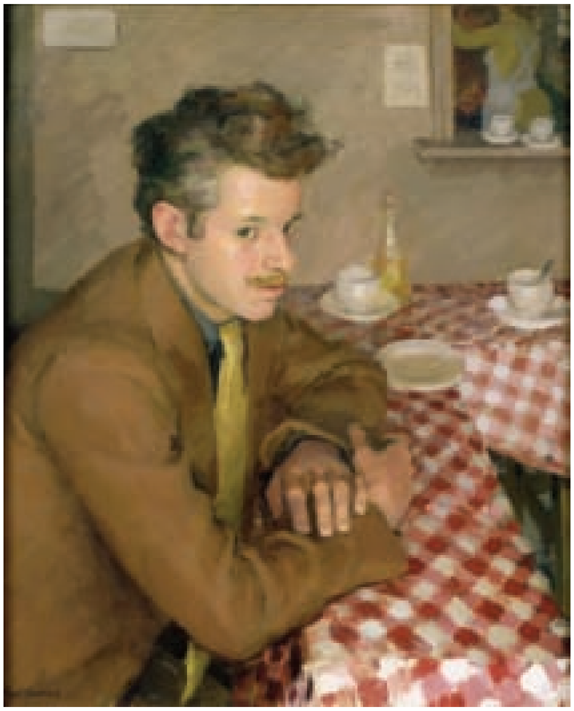
The girl put the baby down again. The boy and the girl looked at the baby, and the baby began to cry.

The girl took the baby. Baby, baby, the girl said with tears in her eyes.

Probably it's something on her stomach, the boy said.

The girl didn't answer. She went on rocking the baby, paying no attention to the boy.

The boy waited. He went to the kitchen and put on water for coffee. He drew his woolen underwear on over his shorts and T-shirt, buttoned up, then got into his clothes.



Portrait of Denis Lucas. Paul Bullard. Oil on canvas, 59 x 48 in. Private collection. ★

What are you doing? the girl said.

Going hunting, the boy said.

I don't think you should, she said. I don't want to be left alone with her like this.

Carl's planning on me going, the boy said. We've planned it.

I don't care about what you and Carl planned, she said. And I don't care about Carl, either. I don't even know Carl.

You've met Carl before. You know him, the boy said. What do you mean you don't know him?

That's not the point and you know it, the girl said.

What is the point? the boy said. The point is we planned it.

1 Question Why does the girl ignore the boy?

Reading Practice

Connect The girl in the selection puts the boy in a position of having to choose between doing something he would find pleasurable or keeping his family. Have students discuss the boy's dilemma. Ask: Is the girl justified in presenting him with an ultimatum? Do you think she means what she says? What do you think she should have said to the boy? (Students should acknowledge such factors as the couple's youth, the fact that they probably are not used to arguing, people's tendency to make extreme statements when they are angry.)

The girl said, I'm your wife. This is your baby. She's sick or something. Look at her. Why else is she crying?

I know you're my wife, the boy said.

The girl began to cry. She put the baby back in the crib. But the baby started up again. The girl dried her eyes on the sleeve of her nightgown and picked the baby up.

* * *

The boy laced up his boots. He put on his shirt, his sweater, his coat. The kettle whistled on the stove in the kitchen.

You're going to have to choose, the girl said. Carl or us. I mean it.

What do you mean? the boy said.

You heard what I said, the girl said. If you want a family, you're going to have to choose.

They stared at each other. Then the boy took up his hunting gear and went outside. He started the car. He went around to the car windows and, making a job of it, scraped away the ice.

* * *

He turned off the motor and sat awhile. And then he got out and went back inside.

The living-room light was on. The girl was asleep on the bed. The baby was asleep beside her.

The boy took off his boots. Then he took off everything else. In his socks and his long underwear, he sat on the sofa and read the Sunday paper.

The girl and the baby slept on. After a while, the boy went to the kitchen and started frying bacon.

The girl came out in her robe and put her arms around the boy.

Hey, the boy said.

I'm sorry, the girl said.

It's all right, the boy said.

I didn't mean to snap like that.

It was my fault, he said.

You sit down, the girl said. How does a waffle sound with bacon?

Sounds great, the boy said.

She took the bacon out of the pan and made waffle batter. He sat at the table and watched her move around the kitchen.

She put a plate in front of him with bacon, a waffle. He spread butter and poured syrup. But when he started to cut, he turned the plate into his lap.

I don't believe it, he said, jumping up from the table.

If you could see yourself, the girl said.

The boy looked down at himself, at everything stuck to his underwear.

I was starved, he said, shaking his head.

You were starved, she said, laughing.

He peeled off the woolen underwear and threw it at the bathroom door. Then he opened his arms and the girl moved into them.

We won't fight anymore, she said.

The boy said, We won't.

* * *

He gets up from his chair and refills their glasses.

That's it, he says. End of story. I admit it's not much of a story.

I was interested, she says.

He shrugs and carries his drink over to the window. It's dark now but still snowing.

Things change, he says. I don't know how they do. But they do without your realizing it or wanting them to.

Yes, that's true, only—But she does not finish what she started.

She drops the subject. In the window's reflection he sees her study her nails. Then she raises her head. Speaking brightly, she asks if he is going to show her the city, after all.

He says, Put your boots on and let's go.

But he stays by the window, remembering. They had laughed. They had leaned on each other and laughed until the tears had come, while everything else—the cold, and where he'd go in it—was outside, for a while anyway.

2 Question When the girl first gives the boy an ultimatum, he leaves. Why does he now go back inside?

Frame Story What questions do you have about the time between the inner story and the frame story? 3

Question What does the cold represent in the story? 4

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Question Answer: The boy has clarified his priorities and realizes that staying with the girl is more important than going hunting with Carl.

Literary Element 3

Frame Story Answer: Students may wonder what happened to the boy and girl in the inner story, how long the father has been out of his daughter's life, and where the mother is now.

Reading Strategy 4

Question Answer: The cold represents the world away from his wife and their daughter.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 243.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Assign four students the roles of the narrator, the daughter, the boy, and the girl, and have them read aloud the last section of the story that begins with "The boy waited." Ask: Why did Carver omit the quotation marks? (Perhaps he wanted to indicate that the whole story is the father's memory and may not be exactly what the characters said.) Ask: How did the absence of quotation marks affect your ability to read the parts? (Students' opinions may differ.)

After You Read

Assess

1. Answers will vary.
2. (a) They live in a small apartment below a dentist's office where they worked. (b) They are poor and struggling.
3. (a) He plans to go goose hunting with his father's friend Carl. (b) It is a chance to take a break from his responsibilities and have fun.
4. (a) A plateful of waffles and bacon sticks to the boy (b) The adult responsibilities that have "stuck" to the boy
5. He is not with his daughter's mother anymore.
6. (a) She knows nothing will change between her parents. (b) She may have been about to ask why he did not try to save the marriage.
7. (a) Keeping that memory private might make it seem more special. (b) It makes the reader feel the man's loss.
8. His simple, concise language, his creation of dramatic scenes, his depiction of ordinary people and everyday events, and his blending of dialogue and narration are intriguing.
9. Students may say that couples argue over money, children, career or personal goals, friends, family, or household issues.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. How did you react to the end of this story?
2. (a)Where did the couple live? (b)What does this tell you about them at the time?
3. (a)What was the boy planning to do in the morning? (b)Why is this activity so important to him?
4. (a)What is it that sticks to the boy? (b)What might this image symbolize in the story?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. What does the father mean at the end of the story when he says "Things change"?
6. (a)After hearing her father's story, why does the daughter stop speaking in mid-sentence? (b)What do you think she was about to say?
7. (a)Why do you think the father chooses to keep the last part of his story to himself? (b)How does placing this memory at the end increase the power of the story's conclusion?

Connect

8. Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions What do you find most intriguing about Carver's style? Support your opinion.
9. Connect to Today What kind of arguments do you think young couples might have today?

Literary Element Frame Story

In some cases, a frame story provides a stark contrast to the inner story. In other cases, a frame story is closely related to the inner story. By examining the relationship between a frame story and its inner story, you can explore the meaning of a literary work and the author's intent.

1. In "Everything Stuck to Him," what do the frame story and the inner story have in common?
2. How does framing the inner story in the present affect how you view it?

Review: Style

As you learned on page 743, style refers to the expressive qualities that distinguish an author's work, including word choice and the length and arrangement of sentences, as well as the use of figurative language and imagery. Carver's style resembles Ernest Hemingway's in its terse, spare language.

Partner Activity Meet with another classmate and find examples of Carver's style in "Everything Stuck to Him." Then compare those examples with the opening or closing paragraphs from Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The Minister's Black Veil" (p. 280). Working with your partner, fill in a chart like the one below to record what you learn.

	Carver's style	Hawthorne's style
word choice
sentence length
use of imagery

Literary Element

1. The father and his daughter are in both stories; both stories take place mainly indoors but feature images of snow and cold.
2. It makes the events seem farther in the past, stirring feelings of nostalgia.

Progress Check

Can students analyze a frame story?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 243.

Review: Style

Hawthorne uses complex vocabulary, long sentences, and strong imagery. Carver's style is more concise and his imagery more subtle.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 309–310.

Reading Strategy Question

Asking questions while you read is the first step in the process of generating meaning. The next step—answering those questions—usually requires more time and analysis.

1. What does Carver achieve by having the man identify the characters in his story merely as "the boy" and "the girl"?
2. What do you think eventually happens to the girl and the boy? Explain.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Look back at pages 1276–1279 to find context clues for the vocabulary words below. Record your findings in a chart like the one here.

coincide	ambition	striking
marvel	fitfully

EXAMPLE:

Word: ambition

↓

Textual Clues: "They were always talking about the things they were going to do and the places they were going to go," so they are driven toward goals

↓

Meaning: a desire to achieve a particular end

Academic Vocabulary

The girl does not want her husband to go hunting because she is concerned about their baby's welfare.

Welfare is an academic word. Many people do volunteer work because they want to contribute to the welfare of society as a whole.

To further explore the meaning of this word, complete this sentence: ______, ______, and ______ are necessary for a child's welfare.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Speaking and Listening

Debate

Assignment Carver's story illustrates a universal issue: the conflict between an individual's desires and family responsibility. Which is more important? Divide into two teams and debate this issue.

Prepare Working together, the two teams should develop a proposition based on the issue. The proposition might be phrased this way: Resolved: That a person's responsibility to family is a more basic duty than the fulfillment of individual desires. Then decide which team will be the affirmative (arguing in favor of the proposition) and which will be the negative (arguing against it). With your team, discuss real-life situations you might use to support your position, along with evidence from Carver's story.

Debate During the debate, introduce real-life situations as logical arguments that reinforce your position. For example, you might employ the following analogy to support the proposition above: A family is in many ways like a sports team. Different members of the team have different roles and different levels of skill. But all the team members must sacrifice their individual ambitions to the goals of the team or the team will not succeed.

Remember that your language can impact your effectiveness. Formal language, for example, can add credibility and authority to your arguments.

Evaluate Write a paragraph assessing the effectiveness of both teams' performance, as well as your individual role. Which side do you think presented a stronger case? Why? Use the checklist on page 1351 to help in this evaluation.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. It emphasizes how young they were—even though they were parents—and how different the boy was from the man who tells the story.
2. Students may say that the couple fell out of love, perhaps because the boy was not as devoted as the girl to family responsibilities.

Academic Vocabulary

Possible answer: A supportive family, a good education, and social interaction are necessary for a child's welfare.

Speaking and Listening

Use these criteria when evaluating students' participation in the debate:

- Did the student use real-life situations as evidence?
- Did the student use logical arguments?
- Did the student use an appropriate level of language?

For help with creating presentations, see Student Presentation Builder on StudentWorks Plus.

Vocabulary

Word: coincide

Textual Clues: The baby arrives in late November, the same time when the boy wants to go hunting.

Meaning: "to occur at the same time"

Word: striking

Textual Clues: You can tell this about Sally from "pictures of her," that make the boy fall "a little in love" with her, though the girl thinks that Betsy is "better looking than Sally."

Meaning: "impressive; attractive"

Word: marvel

Textual Clues: He carefully examines the baby, fascinated by the fact that it has "half his features and half the girl's," so he must be interested and amazed.

Meaning: "to be filled with wonder"

Word: fitfully

Textual Clues: The baby's cries start and stop, waking him up periodically.

Meaning: "irregularly; in stops and starts"

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 114

Or ask: What things have you learned from a parent or other adult but then ignored or forgot? (Students may list rules for behavior that they find outdated or silly.) Why do you think you ignore some of the things you have learned from adults? (Students may suggest that older people are not in touch with present reality.)

Before You Read

El Olvido

Meet Judith Ortiz Cofer
(born 1952)

Culture clash is a familiar theme in the work of Judith Ortiz Cofer (ôr tēz´ kō´ fer). Many of her poems, novels, and autobiographical essays dramatize the differences between the values of her Puerto Rican relatives and the values of people in the United States.

Born in Puerto Rico, she moved to the United States at the age of three. Until she was sixteen, however, her childhood was split almost evenly between the two places. Ortiz Cofer usually spent about six months of each year in Paterson, New Jersey, where she lived the urban life of a Puerto Rican immigrant, speaking Spanish at home, experiencing discrimination, and struggling to fit in at school. Ortiz Cofer often spent the remaining part of each year in Puerto Rico, where her mother took her every time her father, a career navy man, shipped out. There she lived a more relaxed, rural life and was embraced by a large extended family.

Split in Half Yet Doubled The effects of frequent relocation were challenging to Ortiz Cofer's friendships and education, and left her with two indelible marks on her soul: the feeling of never really belonging in either place and the curious gift of possessing, fully and deeply, two cultures and languages.

When Ortiz Cofer was sixteen, her family moved to Augusta, Georgia, presenting yet another cultural and social adjustment for her. However, some things remained constant. Her parents still spoke Spanish at home, and Catholicism remained a major force in her family life and her education.

A Late Start as a Writer Ortiz Cofer did not begin to write poetry until she was studying for her master's degree. It was then that she began to recognize the literary and narrative influences that had been part of her makeup all along. These included a grandmother who was a storyteller and a grandfather who was a reader and writer of poetry. When Ortiz Cofer's writing began to flow, it was perhaps no surprise to those who knew her best that her imagination readily drew on both of her cultural identities. She did not choose to identify as either American or Puerto Rican but rather showed how new cultural identities simultaneously seem to spring from, move away from, and reclaim the old.

> "The assimilation of a new culture is the coming into maturity by accepting the terms necessary for survival."
>
> —Judith Ortiz Cofer

Much of Ortiz Cofer's work is autobiographical or uses the facts of her childhood as a springboard. One of her most successful books, Silent Dancing: A Partial Remembrance of a Puerto Rican Childhood, is made up of thirteen essays about her experiences growing up. Memories of her parents, she says, are always finding their way into her poetry and stories as well. "My family is one of the main topics of my poetry," Cofer has said. "In tracing their lives, I discover more about mine."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Judith Ortiz Cofer, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

El Olvido

Literary Elements
- Point of View (SE pp. 1283, 1285)

Reading Skills
- Examine Connotations (SE pp. 1283, 1285)
- Draw Conclusions (TE p. 1284)

Vocabulary Skills
- Denotation and Connotation (SE pp. 1283, 1285)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (TE p. 1284)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poem

Do you think information and values you get from your family will be important to you for your entire life? Freewrite for 15 minutes on this topic.

Build Background

Many people experience a cultural shift when they move from Puerto Rico to the United States. For example, Cofer's ancestors would have often seen statues of saints in shops, backyards, and city streets. They would also have commonly invoked the names of the holy family, Jesús, María, y José (Jesus, Mary, and Joseph, Mary's husband) as part of daily conversation.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions

As you read, ask yourself, How are the old ways or traditions being replaced with the new ways?

Literary Element Point of View

Point of view is the relationship of the narrator to a story or the speaker to a poem. Point of view in poetry is determined, in part, by how close or removed the speaker is from the events or ideas of the poem. As you read, ask yourself, Where does this speaker stand in relation to ideas and events?

Reading Strategy Examine Connotations

Examining connotations is identifying the feelings, attitudes, and suggestions that go beyond the dictionary definition of a word. In a poem such as "El Olvido," word choice helps show the attitudes and feelings of the speaker. As you read, ask yourself, What feeling is suggested by the speaker's words?

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart like the one below to record the connotations of some of the words Ortiz Cofer uses.

Word or Phrase	Connotation
choke out	violent, strangling

Learning Objectives

For pages 1282–1285

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Understanding point of view.

Reading: Examining connotations.

Writing: Writing a poem.

Vocabulary

spurn (spurn) v. to reject with contempt; to scorn; p. 1284 Poor but proud, the family spurned all offers of charity.

disdain (dis dān´) v. to look down on, to despise; p. 1284 The classical violinist disdains popular music.

Tip: Denotation and Connotation Denotation is the literal, or dictionary, meaning of a word. Connotation is the implied, or cultural, meaning of a word. For example, the words disdain and disapprove have a similar denotation, "to reject something," but they have different connotations:

Negative	More Negative
disapprove	disdain

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

A mother speaks to her child about the risks of ignoring familial and cultural origins. The mother expresses her concern that her child will not survive in an environment lacking cultural and family traditions.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 250–255.

Vocabulary

Synonyms Point out that even though words may be synonyms with the same denotative meaning, the connotative meanings might differ. For example, scorn is listed as a synonym for spurn in the thesaurus. Their roots help distinguish one word from the other. The root word that spurn is derived from means "to kick." The root word that scorn comes from means "mockery." Ask: Which word has more of a sense of inducing shame? (scorn)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 258.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Cofer uses the word climate in "El Olvido" figuratively. She speaks of "the climate of your birthplace." Discuss with students the difference between a word's literal meaning and its figurative meaning. Have students look up the word climate in a dictionary. Ask them to find the literal meaning of the word. (the prevailing weather conditions of a region) Say: Sometimes a figurative meaning is in the dictionary as well. What is the figurative meaning of the word climate? (the prevailing attitude or conditions) Ask: What do you think Cofer means by "the climate of your birthplace"? (the feel, the atmosphere, the smell, the people, the culture, the way of life)

Teach

Big Idea 1

Extending and Remaking Traditions Say: Keep this question in mind as you read: What does the mother fear? (She fears her child will "die of exposure" if she ignores familial and cultural origins.)

Big Idea 2

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: The room provides no link to family traditions.

View the Art ★

Ask: How does the art relate to the point of view of the poem? (Possible answer: The figure facing away from the other may be putting her past behind her, like the person being spoken to in the poem.)

Ancestral Dream I, 1996. Maria Eugenia Terrazas. Watercolor, 70 x 60 cm. Kactus Foto, Santiago, Chile. ★

El Olvido[1]

(Según las Madres)[2]

Judith Ortiz Cofer

1

It is a dangerous thing to forget the climate of your birthplace; to choke out the voices of the dead relatives when in dreams they call you by your secret name; dangerous to spurn the clothes you were born to wear for the sake of fashion;
to use weapons and sharp instruments you are not familiar with; dangerous to disdain the plaster saints before which your mother kneels praying for you with embarassing fervor that you survive in the place you have chosen to live; a costly, bare and elegant room with no pictures on the walls: a forgetting place where she fears you might die of exposure.
Jesús, María y José.
El olvido is a dangerous thing.

---

[1] El Olvido (el ōl vē′ dō) is Spanish for "the forgetting" or "heedlessness" or "the end of memory."

[2] Según las Madres (sə gōōn′ läs mä′ drās) means "according to mothers."

2 Extending and Remaking Traditions Why might the speaker consider such a room dangerous?

Vocabulary

spurn (spurn) v. to reject with contempt; to scorn disdain (dis dān′) v. to look down on, to despise

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Draw Conclusions Say: To draw conclusions, look at the evidence given in a text and use that information to infer new information. Remind students that good conclusions are supported by evidence, which may come from the selection or from readers' knowledge and experience. Have students work in small groups to draw conclusions.

Ask: What does "El Olvido" say about the mother's feelings about her child's lifestyle? Remind students to support their conclusions with specific references.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. How is the mother in this poem like or unlike mothers you know?
2. (a)According to lines 1–12, what kinds of things are dangerous? (b)Why do you think the speaker calls them dangerous?
3. (a)What fear does the mother have? (b)Why might she have this fear?
4. (a)What words does the poet write in Spanish in the poem? (b)How are these words linked?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)Look at line 17 and think about the phrase "die of exposure." Do these words have literal meanings in the poem, or are they a figure of speech? Explain. (b)What do these words contribute to the tone of the poem?
6. (a)What mothers does the subtitle "Según las Madres" refer to? (b)How well does the subtitle match the content of the poem?

Connect

7. Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions Has this poem convinced you that forgetting one's roots "is a dangerous thing" or even a possible thing? Why or why not?
8. Connect to the Author Do you think Ortiz Cofer's message applies only to the children of immigrants, or is it meaningful to any family?

Literary Element Point of View

Point of view can be first-, second-, or third-person. In first-person point of view, the speaker is a character in the poem and uses I. In second-person point of view the speaker uses you. In third-person point of view the speaker is not a character in the poem and refers to others as he, she, or they.

1. (a)Is this poem written in the first-, second-, or third-person point of view? How do you know? (b)Why does the speaker use this point of view?
2. How does the point of view affect the tone and message of the poem?

Reading Strategy Examine Connotations

"El Olvido" is full of words with powerful connotations. Review the chart you made on page 1283 listing words and their connotations in this poem.

1. Find a word you recorded whose connotative meaning is different from its denotative meaning. Write the word and both meanings.
2. Write a word you recorded that you think has powerful connotations and explain why.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Denotation and Connotation Each of the vocabulary words is listed with a word that has a similar denotation. Choose the word that has the more negative connotation.

1. spurn	reject
2. disdain	despise

Writing

Write a Poem Write a free verse poem on the topic of forgetting one's culture, roots, or past. Think about what has been lost or changed in your own family over time, in the family of someone you know, or in general as people move away from parents and guardians and reject traditions.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) Forgetting one's past and family traditions (b) They are a key part of a person's identity.
3. (a) Her child will die of exposure. (b) Her child has rejected traditions.
4. (a) The title, the subtitle, and "Jesús, María, y José" (b) They are part of the traditions she wants her child to remember.
5. (a) A figure of speech: turning one's back on the past is a kind of death. (b) They add emotional power and convey the mother's fears.
6. (a) All mothers who are like the one in the poem (b) Students' answers will vary.
7. Students may note that although Ortiz Cofer writes about forgetting, by writing she remembers.
8. Her message is directed at families in general, although cultural changes from one country to another might be more pronounced or obvious.

Literary Element

1. (a) Second person; use of the word you (b) To address all children who do not follow traditions
2. There is a sense of urgency in the tone; the use of you intensifies the poem's personal nature.

Progress Check

Can students analyze point of view?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 256.

Vocabulary

1. spurn 2. disdain

Reading Strategy

1. Possible answer: secret, the denotative meaning of which is "hidden" or "concealed" but which connotes intimacy and privacy
2. Possible answer: bare, because it powerfully suggests the sterility and lifelessness of the room

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' poems:

- Is the poem written in free verse?
- Does the poem focus on the changes and losses that occur when someone forgets tradition?

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 115

Or display images of popular icons and symbols, such as ones that appear on bracelets, T-shirts, caps, and pins. Ask: Why are these popular? (They represent individuals, groups, or ideas that people admire, enjoy, or endorse.)

Have students consider what the fig tree in the poem represents to the author's father.

Before You Read

My Father and the Figtree

Meet Naomi Shihab Nye

(born 1952)

In the introduction to her collection Words Under the Words, poet Naomi Shihab Nye shares a simple story about looking through a childhood photo album. The album was barely intact—its pages in a stack and no longer bound. Some of the black and white photos were as many as forty years old. The pages were not in chronological order, so as she looked through the pictures, her impressions and memories fluctuated in time. Nye saw herself, "Preparing to blow out two candles on a cake . . . With neighbors who disappeared into the world . . . With baby brother freshly home from the hospital. With grandparents who died." She continued paging through the album and recalled stories about when the photos were taken. While she looked, however, Nye began to wonder about the moments not captured in the photos. It struck her that it is the hidden details of life—the forgotten memories—that make all of us who we are and in some way put us all on common ground. Nye's poems in some ways resemble timeless family portraits in which we recognize ourselves. Her writing draws not only from her own memories and heritage but also from a variety of cultural traditions. Nye is committed to revealing what people have in common and to exploring the themes of acceptance and conciliation.

> "The mystery of remembering has added its own light to the garden. Whatever existed then has deepened, been forgotten or restored in some other form. We planted our voices."
>
> —Naomi Shihab Nye

Connecting to the World Nye's Palestinian father and American mother encouraged her to express herself. Nye has said that even as a child she was "fascinated by the power of words on the page to make us look differently at our lives, to help us see and connect." She was first published at the age of seven, when a children's magazine accepted one of her poems.

At the age of fourteen, Nye spent a year in Jerusalem, where she was able to meet the Palestinian side of her family. She grew especially close to her grandmother, who appears in many of her poems and a children's book called Sitte's Secrets. She won a National Poetry Series prize for Hugging the Box and was a National Book Award finalist for 19 Varieties of Gazelle.

Reaching Out to the Reader Nye's straightforward style appeals to a diverse audience and readers of all ages. "Ultimately, I look at writing as a form of discovery," she told an interviewer. "I hope my words reach out to the reader and they can say yes to them." She often writes about connections between people separated by time or distance, and her poems emphasize our shared humanity. Nye uses the familiar settings of everyday life and the power of memory to create poetry that is rich with "the gleam of particulars."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Naomi Shihab Nye, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

My Father and the Figtree

Literary Elements
- Symbol (SE pp. 1287, 1289, 1290)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a List (SE p. 1290)

Reading Skills
- Summarize (SE pp. 1287, 1289, 1290)
- Scan (TE p. 1288)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE pp. 1287, 1290)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poem

Is there anything unique that you share with a family member or friend that connects the two of you? With a partner, share this commonality and explain what makes it special for you.

Build Background

Nye's poem refers to elements of her cultural heritage. Figs have been a popular fruit since ancient times. The fig tree is common in the Middle East and can grow in rocky, arid climates, producing fruit and providing shade. Another cultural reference in the poem is a character named Joha. In Arab folklore, Joha is a wise fool or trickster, and he plays that role in a variety of traditional tales.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions

As you read, ask yourself, How does Nye place elements of traditional tales in a contemporary context, creating her own modern folktale?

Literary Element Symbol

A symbol is any object, person, place, or experience that represents something beyond the literal meaning. As you read, ask yourself, What are Nye's symbols and what do they mean?

Reading Strategy Summarize

Summarizing is briefly restating the events or ideas in a literary work in your own words. After reading a poem, you can summarize what happened by determining the main ideas and events and placing them in a logical order.

Tip: Make a Chronological List As you read, ask yourself, What is happening in this poem? List the main ideas and events in the poem in the order in which they occur. Look for time clues, such as "At age six," or "Years passed."

Main Ideas and Events

Learning Objectives

For pages 1286–1290

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing symbols.

Reading: Summarizing.

Writing: Writing a list.

Vocabulary

indifferent (in dif´ ər ənt) adj. having no marked feeling for or against; p. 1288 Most of the audience was indifferent toward the mediocre performance.

vivid (viv´ id) adj. perceived as bright and distinct; brilliant; p. 1288 The vivid tropical fish swam in the clear blue water.

token (tō´ kən) n. something serving as an indication, proof, or expression of something else; a sign; p. 1289 The gift was a token of his appreciation.

emblem (em´ bləm) n. an object or a representation that functions as a symbol; p. 1289 The keys were an emblem of his new independence.

Tip: Context Clues You can often find clues to the meaning of an unfamiliar word in its context, or the surrounding words and phrases. For example, consider the sentence The gift was a token of his appreciation. Gifts are usually given to symbolize appreciation, so token must mean "symbol."

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

This poem tells the story of recurrent conversations between a father and a daughter about the father's lifelong passion for fresh figs. The figs and fig tree symbolize more than food to the father. They represent his homeland, cultural heritage, and past.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 261–266.

Vocabulary

Synonyms Remind students that when they are learning a new word, a useful strategy is to think of synonyms with which they are familiar. Ask: Which vocabulary word or words is a synonym for symbol? (emblem, token) What type of symbol would you be more apt to wear—an emblem or a token? (an emblem)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 269–270.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Point out that students will read about three main time periods in "My Father and the Figtree": (1) when the poet was a little girl, (2) the years between being little and grown up, and (3) when she is an adult living away from her parents. Assign students different pieces of the poem to paraphrase: (1) a parent telling bedtime stories, (2) a child eating a dried fig, (3) a garden with no figs, and (4) ripe figs on a tree. Explain how each of the stanzas go together. Ask: Why might the father have waited so long to plant his own figs? (the climate was too cold; it took time to accept that he had to make the United States his home)

Teach

Big Idea 1

Extending and Remaking Traditions Say: Keep these questions in mind as you read: Why does the father include a fig tree in all the folktales he tells his daughter? (Figs are his favorite fruit; figs remind him of his culture and homeland.) Why does the speaker refer to figs as "tokens" and "emblems"? (To the father, they symbolize his culture, his homeland, and his memories.)

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences Say: Make an inference about the relationship between the father and the child, based on the information in the firt stanza. (They have a close relationship, as evidenced by the fact that the father spends time "weaving folktales" for his child.)

My Father and the Figtree

Naomi Shihab Nye

1

For other fruits my father was indifferent.
He'd point at the cherry trees and say,
"See those? I wish they were figs."
In the evenings he sat by my bed weaving folktales like vivid little scarves. 2
They always involved a figtree.
Even when it didn't fit, he'd stick it in.
Once Joha was walking down the road and he saw a figtree.
Or, he tied his camel to a figtree and went to sleep.
Or, later when they caught and arrested him,
his pockets were full of figs.

At age six I ate a dried fig and shrugged.
"That's not what I'm talking about!" he said,
"I'm talking about a fig straight from the earth—
gift of Allah![1]—on a branch so heavy it touches the ground.
I'm talking about picking the largest fattest sweetest fig in the world and putting it in my mouth."
(Here he'd stop and close his eyes.)

---

[1] Allah is the Arabic word for God.

Vocabulary

indifferent (in dif´ ər ənt) adj. having no marked feeling for or against vivid (viv´ id) adj. perceived as bright and distinct; brilliant

Reading Practice

Scan Scanning is one way to locate information and specific details. Have students scan page 1288 to answer these questions. Ask: What is the speaker's first encounter with figs and fig trees? (Figs and fig trees are always included in the folktales told by the speaker's father.) What is the speaker's second encounter? (When six years old, the speaker eats a dried fig.) What is her father's reaction to that encounter? (He explains that a dried fig is not the same as a fig fresh from a tree.)

Years passed, we lived in many houses, none had figtrees.
We had lima beans, zucchini, parsley, beets.
"Plant one!" my mother said, but my father never did.
He tended garden half-heartedly, forgot to water,
let the okra[2] get too big.
"What a dreamer he is. Look how many things he starts and doesn't finish."

The last time he moved, I got a phone call.
My father, in Arabic, chanting a song I'd never heard.
"What's that?"
"Wait till you see!"
He took me out to the new yard.
There, in the middle of Dallas, Texas,
a tree with the largest, fattest, sweetest figs in the world.
"It's a figtree song!" he said, plucking his fruits like ripe tokens,
emblems, assurance of a world that was always his own.

---

[2] Okra is a plant with pods that are eaten as vegetables.

Summarize Summarize the main event that occurs in this stanza. 3

Extending and Remaking Traditions How does Nye place a traditional element in a modern context in these lines? 4

Symbol What does the fig tree symbolize for the speaker's father? 5

Vocabulary

token (tō´ kən) n. something serving as an indication, proof, or expression of something else; a sign emblem (em´ bləm) n. an object or a representation that functions as a symbol

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Summarize Answer: During the years in which the speaker is growing up, her father moves the family to various locations but never plants a fig tree.

Big Idea 4

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: Her father is sharing a traditional form of expression, an Arabic song, by way of modern technology, the telephone.

Literary Element 5

Symbol Answer: The fig tree is a symbol of identity and belonging. The tree gives the father a sense of continuity with his homeland and his past.

Progress Check

Can students identify symbols?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 267.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Ask: Are there any foods from your own culture or another culture you are familiar with that have a symbolic meaning, as the fig does for the father in the poem?

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Remind students that a simile is a figure of speech in which the writer compares two seemingly different things. To identify a simile, students should look for one of two key words, like or as. Model how to analyze a simile. Have students look at line 5. Ask: What are the two things the poet is comparing? (folktales and scarves) What word describes something that can apply to both a folktale and a scarf? (weaving) Direct students to find the other simile in the poem by looking for the word like or as and have them discuss the comparisons. (plucking his fruits like ripe tokens)

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) Vivid little scarves (b) The stories captured her attention, or she found the stories beautiful.
2. (a) He claims that a dried fig is not the same as a fresh one. (b) The father misses fresh figs, especially since they seem to represent his homeland.
3. (a) In his yard in Dallas, Texas (b) On his American property he has planted a symbol of his Arabic heritage.
4. Joha appears in many traditional Arab tales. By mentioning Joha in conjunction with figs, the father shows how important figs are in his culture.
5. (a) Students may mention the images of fat, sweet figs. (b) Without them, the symbolism of the fig tree would carry less weight.
6. Students may say the fig tree effectively symbolizes the father's past and his culture.
7. Students' answers will vary but should be supported with evidence from the poem.
8. The figs and the other vegetables show her Palestinian and American background.

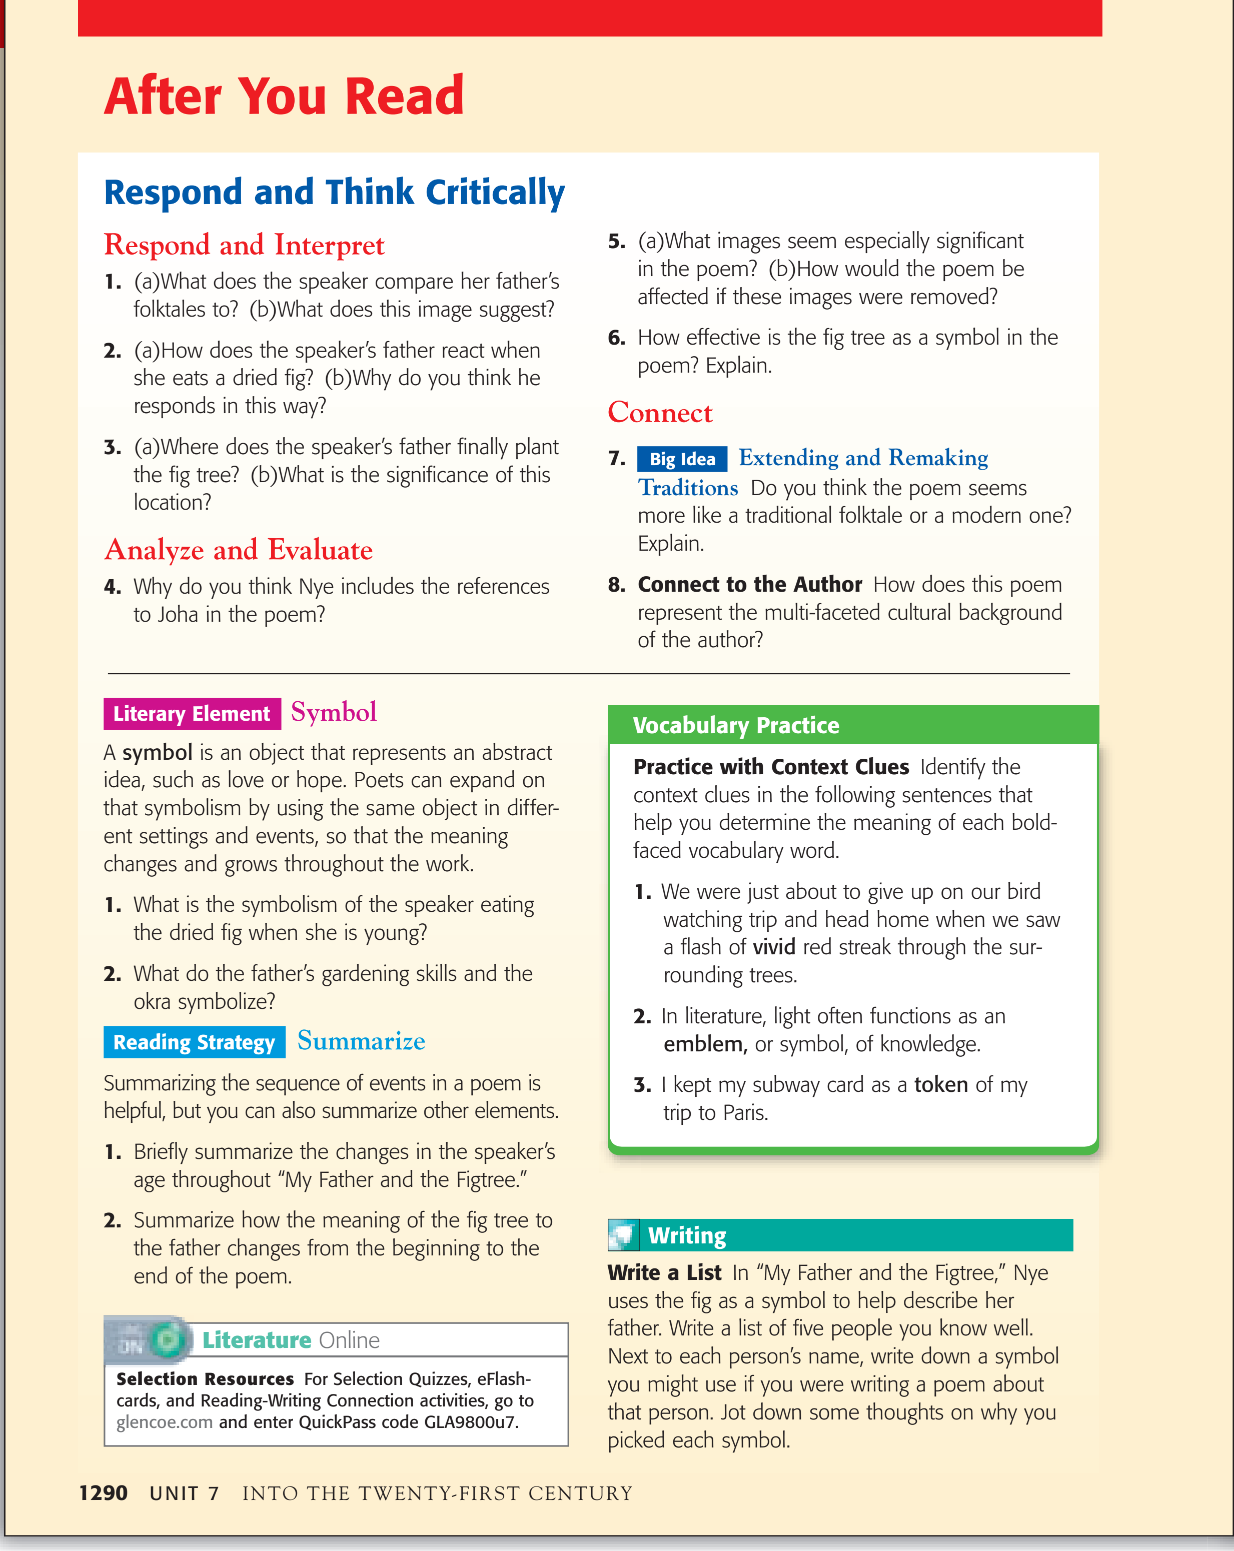
Literary Element

1. She is symbolically trying to connect with her father.
2. They symbolize his dreaminess and unfinished projects.

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' lists:

- Does the list include five people and five symbols?
- Does the list explain why each symbol was chosen?



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What does the speaker compare her father's folktales to? (b)What does this image suggest?
2. (a)How does the speaker's father react when she eats a dried fig? (b)Why do you think he responds in this way?
3. (a)Where does the speaker's father finally plant the fig tree? (b)What is the significance of this location?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. Why do you think Nye includes the references to Joha in the poem?
5. (a)What images seem especially significant in the poem? (b)How would the poem be affected if these images were removed?
6. How effective is the fig tree as a symbol in the poem? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions Do you think the poem seems more like a traditional folktale or a modern one? Explain.
8. Connect to the Author How does this poem represent the multi-faceted cultural background of the author?

Literary Element Symbol

A symbol is an object that represents an abstract idea, such as love or hope. Poets can expand on that symbolism by using the same object in different settings and events, so that the meaning changes and grows throughout the work.

1. What is the symbolism of the speaker eating the dried fig when she is young?
2. What do the father's gardening skills and the okra symbolize?

Reading Strategy Summarize

Summarizing the sequence of events in a poem is helpful, but you can also summarize other elements.

1. Briefly summarize the changes in the speaker's age throughout "My Father and the Figtree."
2. Summarize how the meaning of the fig tree to the father changes from the beginning to the end of the poem.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Identify the context clues in the following sentences that help you determine the meaning of each boldfaced vocabulary word.

1. We were just about to give up on our bird watching trip and head home when we saw a flash of vivid red streak through the surrounding trees.
2. In literature, light often functions as an emblem, or symbol, of knowledge.
3. I kept my subway card as a token of my trip to Paris.

Writing

Write a List In "My Father and the Figtree," Nye uses the fig as a symbol to help describe her father. Write a list of five people you know well. Next to each person's name, write down a symbol you might use if you were writing a poem about that person. Jot down some thoughts on why you picked each symbol.

Reading Strategy

1. At first, she is a young child; then, six years old; finally, an adult.
2. At first it is a far-off dream. By the end of the poem, it is a reality.

Vocabulary

1. The color grabs their attention and is distinct against the foliage.
2. A synonym for emblem, symbol, is included in the sentence.
3. The object proves that the speaker was in Paris and reminds the speaker of the trip.

Before You Read

I Chop Some Parsley While Listening to Art Blakey's Version of "Three Blind Mice"

Meet Billy Collins

(born 1941)

Before he became Poet Laureate of the United States in 2001, Billy Collins stood at a gymnasium podium at a large high school and read to an enthusiastic crowd of students as part of their "Poetry Day." This experience helped to inspire one of his signature endeavors. As Poet Laureate, Collins founded the program "Poetry 180: A Poem a Day for American High Schools." This program works to bring poetry to high school students by having a new poem read aloud every day. Collins wanted to create an environment where students could hear and enjoy poetry, but did not have to officially respond. The project is a prime example of one of Collins's missions as a writer—to make poetry a part of people's daily lives. His dedication to expanding poetry's audience and deepening its connection with people has helped to make Collins one of the most popular poets in the U.S.

> "Clarity is the real risk in poetry. To be clear means opening yourself up to judgment."
>
> —Billy Collins
> from the introduction to Poetry 180

Student, Teacher, Poet Collins was born in the same New York hospital where pioneering poet William Carlos Williams worked as a pediatrician. Collins grew up in New York City and attended parochial school there. He went on to Holy Cross College and eventually earned a Ph.D. in Romantic Poetry at the University of California, Riverside in 1971. After finishing his graduate work, Collins began teaching at Lehman College, City University of New York, and continued teaching there for over thirty years. He published his first collection of poems, Pokerface, in 1977, and has since received numerous fellowships and awards for his work. From 2001 to 2003, Collins was Poet Laureate of the United States.

Celebration of Daily Life Collins's poetry illuminates the ordinary aspects of daily life by revealing the universal themes that those scenes can hide. He uses a conversational tone, the cadences of everyday speech, and familiar settings to engage readers. His poems are full of imaginative leaps; a dog's constant barking connects to Beethoven's musical genius, and a day at the beach ends with the speaker walking across the Atlantic toward Spain. However, in order for readers to connect with these ideas, Collins believes it is vital to provide them with an easy entrance: "Usually I try to create a hospitable tone at the beginning of a poem. Stepping from the title to the first lines is like stepping into a canoe. A lot of things can go wrong."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Billy Collins, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 116

Or ask students to think about nursery rhymes that they learned when they were younger. Write several rhymes on the board, including "Three Blind Mice." Read them aloud. Ask: What is your reaction to the topics and messages of these rhymes, hearing them as high school students?

Have students consider, as they read, how Collins uses the nursery rhyme to explore universal themes.

Selection Skills

I Chop Some Parsley . . .

Literary Elements
- Personification (SE pp. 1292, 1294, 1295)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Journal Entry (SE p. 1295)
- Subject Complements (TE p. 1294)

Reading Skills
- Connect to Personal Experience (SE pp. 1292–1295)
- Tone (TE p. 1292)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Usage (SE p. 1295)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

The speaker is listening to music as he prepares a meal. The music is a jazz rendition of a well-known nursery rhyme. Hearing the music causes the speaker to meditate on the deeper meaning of the rhyme and explore human experiences, such as isolation and conflict.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 273–278.

Vocabulary

Synonyms Tell students that a good strategy for learning a new vocabulary word is to think of synonyms for the new word that are familiar. They might be more likely to use the word worry than the word brood to describe behavior that shows anxiety over a possible problem. Ask: What does brood connote that worry does not? (It connotes persisting in an anxious state over time.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Ask: The meaning of sear is "to scorch or burn." What are the differences among these synonyms? (Scorch connotes burning the surface of something unintentionally, such as when ironing a shirt. One might intentionally sear meat, for example. Burning implies going deeper than the surface.)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 281–282.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poem

Can you think of a time when listening to music sparked an unusual train of thought? Freewrite for a few minutes about how music can affect your mood.

Build Background

The poem begins and ends with musical references, and both men mentioned—Blakey and Freddie Hubbard—are famous U.S. jazz musicians. Blakey was a pioneering drummer and bandleader in the 1950s and '60s. Hubbard, who was born a few years before Collins, is a jazz trumpeter from the generation after Blakey's. The song "Three Blind Mice" is a jazz standard inspired by the well-known nursery rhyme. "Blue Moon" is a popular jazz ballad characterized by its moody tone.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions

As you read, ask yourself, How does the poem's tone and structure differ from more traditional poetry you have read?

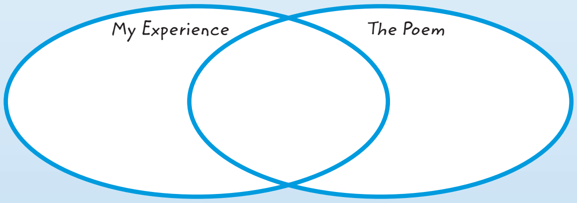
Literary Element Personification

Personification is a figure of speech in which an animal, an object, a force of nature, an idea, or an emotion is given human characteristics. As you read, ask yourself, Where does the speaker use personification?

Reading Strategy Connect to Personal Experience

One of the best ways to examine a poem is to identify ideas or facets that connect to your experience. As you read, ask yourself, Have I ever felt his way? What else have I read that is like this selection? Do I know someone like this?

Tip: Finding Common Ground Choose a personal experience that you can link to the poem and create a Venn Diagram. Use one circle for your experience and one circle for the poem. In the overlapping area, list what your experience and the poem have in common.



Learning Objectives

For pages 1291–1295

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Identifying personification.

Reading: Connecting to personal experience.

Writing: Writing a journal entry.

Vocabulary

congenital (kən je´ nə təl) adj. of or relating to a condition that is present at birth, as a result of either heredity or environmental influences; p. 1293 The baby had a congenital heart defect.

brood (brood) v. to focus the attention on a subject persistently and moodily; worry; p. 1293 The whole team sat brooding over the last-second loss.

sear (sēr) v. to char, scorch, or burn the surface with or as if with a sudden application of intense heat; p. 1293 The lava seared the plants as it fell to earth.

cynic (si´ nik) n. a person whose outlook is scornfully and often habitually negative; p. 1294 He never donated to charity because he was a cynic and was convinced that they would waste his money.

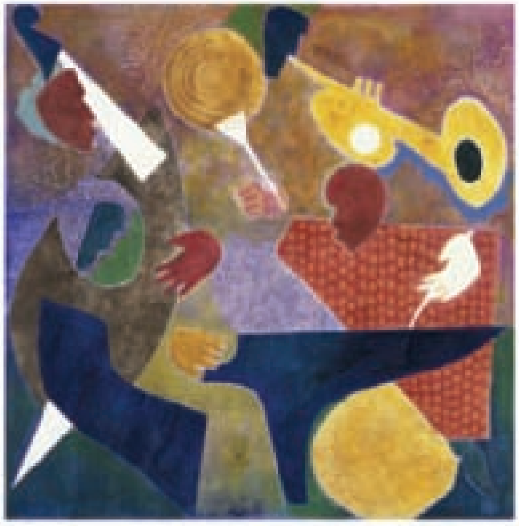
Tip: Word Usage When learning a new word, it often helps to answer a question using the word. For example, have you ever brooded over something that, in retrospect, does not seem so bad?

Reading Practice

Tone Understanding a poet's tone can help a reader connect his or her personal experience to the poem. Remind students that tone is the poet's attitude toward the subject matter or the reader. It is revealed in the poet's choice of words and sounds. Ask: If someone smiles and speaks to you softly, how do you interpret their tone? (as kind) Ask: Given that this poem is about the three blind mice of the children's nursery rhyme, what do you predict the poet's tone will be? (humorous, silly) Direct students to read the poem aloud, and then discuss the poet's tone.

I Chop Some Parsley While Listening to Art Blakey's Version of "Three Blind Mice"

Billy Collins



Soulful Solace, 1997. Gil Mayers.

1

And I start wondering how they came to be blind.
If it was congenital, they could be brothers and sisters, and I think of the poor mother brooding over her sightless young triplets.

Or was it a common accident, all three caught in a searing explosion, a firework perhaps?
If not,
if each came to his or her blindness separately,

how did they ever manage to find one another?
Would it not be difficult for a blind mouse to locate even one fellow mouse with vision let alone two other blind ones?

---

2 Connect to Personal Experience Why might someone try to unravel a mystery or figure out a silly riddle that other people take for granted?

Vocabulary

congenital (kən je´ nə təl) adj. of or relating to a condition that is present at birth, as a result of either heredity or environmental influences brood (brood) v. to focus the attention on a subject persistently and moodily; worry sear (sēr) v. to char, scorch, or burn the surface with or as if with a sudden application of intense heat

Teach

Big Idea 1

Extending and Remaking Traditions Say: Keep this question in mind as you read: How is the speaker affected by hearing the music? (The music causes the speaker to ponder the deeper meaning of the nursery rhyme.)

Reading Strategy 2

Connect to Personal Experience Answer: Students may say that at times a person suddenly sees a word or idea in a new light.

View the Art ★

Ask: How might this painting relate to the poem? (Possible answer: The painting depicts a group of jazz musicians, like the ones the speaker in the poem is listening to.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate List the vocabulary words on the board and have students work with partners to create a two-column chart with the headings Words and Examples. Provide an example that illustrates the word's meaning and then ask students to come up with two other sample sentences for each word. (Cynic: A cynic believes that all governments are corrupt. Congential: A congenital condition is not necessarily caused by genes. Brood: Someone might brood when a friend ignores him. Sear: One way to sear food is on a grill.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Connect to Personal Experience Ask: How would you describe the speaker's feelings at the end of the poem? (Possible answer: Thinking about the fate of the mice has saddened the speaker. He tries to hide his own internal conflict by rationalizing his tears.)

Reading Strategy 2

Connect to Personal Experience Answer: Students may cite instances when familiar images, words, or ideas seemed to acquire deeper clarity or meaning for them.

Literary Element 3

Personification Answer: One part of the speaker's mind is personified as "the cynic who always lounges within me."

Progress Check

Can students analyze personification?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 279.

And how, in their tiny darkness, could they possibly have run after a farmer's wife or anyone else's wife for that matter?
Not to mention why.

Just so she could cut off their tails with a carving knife, is the cynic's answer, but the thought of them without eyes and now without tails to trail through the moist grass or slip around the corner of a baseboard has the cynic who always lounges within me up off his couch and at the window trying to hide the rising softness that he feels.

By now I am on to dicing an onion which might account for the wet stinging in my own eyes, though Freddie Hubbard's mournful trumpet on "Blue Moon," which happens to be the next cut, cannot be said to be making matters any better. 1

---

2 Connect to Personal Experience This image has a strong effect on the speaker of the poem. Can you think of a time where you experienced similar feelings?

3 Personification What is being personified here?

Vocabulary

cynic (si´ nik) n. a person whose outlook is scornfully and often habitually negative

Grammar Practice

Subject Complements Explain that two types of subject complements are predicate nominatives and predicate adjectives. A predicate nominative is a noun that follows a linking verb and further identifies the subject (The ball is a football). A predicate adjective follows a linking verb and describes the subject (The actor was funny). Have each student use both kinds of subject complements in four sentences describing the mice in the poem. Students should exchange papers with partners and check them for accuracy.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What was your first reaction to the title of this poem?
2. (a)In the first line of the poem, what is the speaker wondering about? (b)What causes the speaker to think about this topic?
3. The speaker of the poem gives several reasons why the mice might be blind. What are those reasons?
4. (a)After they chase the farmer's wife, what happens to the mice? (b)How does the speaker of the poem react to this?
5. (a)At the end of the poem, what vegetable does the speaker begin to cut and what song is playing? (b)What is the connection between the vegetable and the song?

Analyze and Evaluate

6. (a)Throughout the poem, the speaker poses a series of questions. Which questions would you call silly or humorous, and which questions seem to have larger, more serious implications? (b)How does posing unanswered questions affect the tone and meaning of the poem?

Connect

7. Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions Did the poem's conversational tone make it easier or harder for you to connect with the poem? Why or why not?
8. Connect to the Author Collins wants to make poetry accessible to more readers. How might the subject of this poem further this goal?

Literary Element Personification

Personification is the attribution of human emotions or traits to ideas, animals, or inanimate objects. In our daily lives, we use personification all the time to help us understand our world.

1. How does the personification in this poem dramatize the speaker's inner conflict?
2. (a)Does this help you to better understand the speaker's emotions? (b)Why or why not?

Reading Strategy Connect to Personal Experience

Sometimes you may not connect with any of the specific events or experiences in a poem, particularly when reading work from different cultures or a different time period. In these cases it helps to broaden your strategy and seek out more general connections.

1. What element or part of the poem did you feel most strongly connected to? Explain your answer.
2. What did you gain by attempting to connect?

Vocabulary Practice

Word Usage Respond to these statements to explore vocabulary from the selection.

1. Identify a trait that is, in you, congenital.
2. Name something that you might brood over.
3. Name something that is capable of searing.
4. Describe the outlook of a cynical person.

Writing

Write a Journal Entry Have you ever wondered about something others might find ridiculous? Write a journal entry describing your question. Invent possible answers and evaluate their plausibility.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students may have found the poem title funny or silly.
2. (a) How the mice became blind (b) He hears the song "Three Blind Mice."
3. They were born blind; they were in an accident, such as an explosion; they became blind separately from different causes.
4. (a) She chops off their tails. (b) He feels sympathy for the mice with no tails.
5. (a) An onion; Freddie Hubbard's "Blue Moon" (b) Both cause tears.
6. (a) Students' answers will vary. (b) If the speaker gave answers, the poem's tone would not waver between humor and seriousness.
7. Students' answers will vary.
8. By discussing a well-known nursery rhyme and talking about cooking, nearly everyone can relate to his writing.

Literary Element

1. He does not want to feel sympathy for the mice, but he cannot help himself. His cynical feelings are personified, and this inner conflict is played out.
2. Students may say the personification allows them to ponder universal themes in a detached manner.

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' journal entries:

- Does the entry describe a specific question?
- Does the entry offer answers and explanations of their probability?

Reading Strategy

1. Students' answers will vary but should be supported with details from the poem.
2. Students should describe specific understandings they gained.

Vocabulary

1. The student should mention a trait he or she was born with, such as hair or eye color.
2. Students should name problems that would require serious attention.
3. Students might mention a grill or a blowtorch.
4. Students might mention that a cynical individual is pessimistic and doubtful.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 71

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 117

Or lead a discussion on the topic of given names. Ask whether students know the meanings of their names and how their names were chosen. Ask: Why are we given names? (A name establishes a person's identity.) Have students consider, as they read, how the names of the women in the selection established who they were as individuals.

Before You Read

The Names of Women

Meet Louise Erdrich
(born 1954)

Louise Erdrich (âr´ drik) grew up in a Native American storytelling culture that encouraged her to tell stories of her own. Her parents also supported her desire to write. Erdrich recalled, "My father used to give me a nickel for every story I wrote, and my mother wove strips of construction paper and stapled them into book covers. So at an early age I felt myself to be a published author, earning substantial royalties."

Erdrich is the daughter of a German American father and an Ojibway (ō jib´ wā) mother who was born on the Turtle Mountain Reservation in North Dakota. The oldest of seven children, Erdrich grew up in Wahpeton, North Dakota, where her parents worked for a boarding school run by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Erdrich entered Dartmouth College in 1972, the first year that the college admitted women. From there, she went on to Johns Hopkins University, where she wrote poems and stories and earned a master's degree.

> "When you grow up constantly hearing stories rise, break, and fall, it gets into you somehow."
>
> —Louise Erdrich

Popular and Critical Success Before she turned thirty, Erdrich published her first novel, Love Medicine. It was acclaimed by both readers and critics, and won the National Book Critics Circle Award in 1984. The novels Beet Queen and Tracks, which also had wide popular and literary appeal, followed soon after.

In the late 1980s and early 1990s, Erdrich became well-known as an accomplished novelist and a voice of Native American culture. Her marriage to Michael Dorris, a writer, anthropologist, and spokesperson for Native American ways of life, intensified her reputation and literary output. Together, the couple embarked on a series of literary projects while raising several children.

Sources from Life On her way to success as a writer, Erdrich held many different jobs, working as a beet weeder, a lifeguard, a waitress, and a construction flag signaler. She notes that these experiences have lent authenticity to her portrayal of characters in her novels. However, she admits that some of her plots are culled from old Native American stories, though her own characters usually take over. Erdrich has described herself as "an emissary of the between-world, that increasingly common margin where cultures mix and collide." "The Names of Women," originally a piece of nonfiction, was eventually incorporated into a novel.

Erdrich continues to write both nonfiction and fiction, including stories for children. Her life's work also includes learning the language of the Ojibway and studying the culture and traditions of her great-grandmothers. In 2001 she opened a bookstore in Minneapolis, Minnesota that specializes in books by and about Native Americans.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Louise Erdrich, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

The Names of Women

Literary Elements
- Catalog (SE pp. 1297, 1298, 1301, 1302)
- Symbol (SE p. 1302)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Apply Symbolism (SE p. 1303)
- Apostrophes (TE p. 1300)

Reading Skills
- Distinguish Fact and Opinion (SE pp. 1297–1299, 1303)
- Analyze Sections (TE p. 1298)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Parts (SE pp. 1297, 1303)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 1303)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Essay

Which family members, past or present, have helped to shape your personality and values? Make a list of these people and explain why they are special to you.

Build Background

The Anishinabe (a nish′ i nä′ bā)—also known as the Ojibway, Ojibwe, or Chippewa—are one of the largest groups of Native Americans in North America. After the mid-1600s, they migrated west from the Great Lakes region to areas such as Wisconsin, North Dakota, and Montana. Many Anishinabe families still live on the Turtle Mountain Reservation in North Dakota today.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions

As you read, ask yourself, How does Erdrich reveal the present by focusing on and cataloging details from the past?

Literary Element Catalog

A catalog is a list of images, details, people, or events in a piece of writing. The items in a catalog are related and are of relatively equal importance. As you read, ask yourself, What does Erdrich list and why are these objects important?

Reading Strategy Distinguish Fact and Opinion

A fact is a statement that can be verified, or proven true, either through direct experience or by consulting an authoritative source. An opinion is a personal judgment that, unlike a fact, cannot be verified because it expresses a person's beliefs or feelings. As you read, ask yourself, When does Erdrich state a fact and when does she offer an opinion?

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart like the one below to record the facts and opinions you find.

Example	Fact or Opinion	How I Know
Names of Erdrich's ancestors	Fact	Names can be verified in historical records.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1296–1303

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing rhetorical devices.

Reading: Distinguishing fact and opinion.

Writing: Applying symbolism.

Vocabulary

decimated (des′ ə māt əd) adj. destroyed or killed in large numbers; p. 1298 The battle left the village decimated.

presumptuous (pri zump′ cho̅o̅ əs) adj. going beyond what is proper; excessively bold; p. 1299 It was presumptuous of us to ask for so much money.

ecclesiastical (i klē′ zē as′ ti kəl) adj. of or relating to the church; p. 1299 The woman felt comfortable in the ecclesiastical setting.

undeviating (un dē′ vē āt′ ing) adj. not turning away from; p. 1299 The commander showed undeviating concern for the troops.

wane (wān) v. to decrease gradually; to decline; p. 1300 All fads wane in popularity over time.

Tip: Word Parts When taking a word apart to determine meaning, consider these basic elements: root, the main part of a word; prefix, a part added to the beginning of a word; and suffix, a part added to the end of a word. The prefix in the word decimated, for example, is de-.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In this essay, the author discusses her cultural heritage. Through her exploration of the given names of Anishinabe women, Erdrich reveals both the strength of these women and the contributions they made to history. As she examines her origins, the author learns more about her own identity.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 285–290.

Vocabulary

Roots Point out that the key to understanding an unfamiliar word is breaking it down into its parts, and then learning how the root relates to the word's meaning. Ask students to work with a partner to determine each word's root. Provide an example with decimated. Its root is decem, meaning "ten." To decimate literally meant to kill every tenth person, but now means to destroy a very large number of people.

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 293–294.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate Before reading the story, students should work with a partner to read through the italic type in the story as well as the footnotes that describe the pronunciation of words. Explain that the author uses words from the language of her ancestors. Many of the names of the women she describes are translated from a Native American word into English and are written in italic in the text. Ask: How are these names different from typical English names? (They describe the person.)

Teach

Big Idea 1

Extending and Remaking Traditions Say: Keep these questions in mind as you read: What do the names of the women reveal about their life stories? (Each woman's name captures some essential part of her personality.) What impact does the renaming of the Anishinabe women have on their place in history? (The new names give no clues to the personalities of the women.)

Reading Strategy 2

Distinguish Fact and Opinion Answer: Fact: the names of women of the Turtle Mountain Reservation were first recorded in 1892. Opinion: the names tell stories.

Literary Element 3

Catalog Answer: Erdrich wants to show readers that many rich and diverse cultural stories have been lost.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 7.3
DRP: 62
Lexile: 1300

The Names of Women

Louise Erdrich

1 Ikwe[1] is the word for woman in the language of the Anishinabe, my mother's people, whose descendants, mixed with and married to French trappers and farmers, are the Michifs[2] of the Turtle Mountain reservation in North Dakota. Every Anishinabe Ikwe, every mixed-blood descendant like me, who can trace her way back a generation or two, is the daughter of a mystery. The history of the woodland Anishinabe—decimated by disease, fighting Plains Indians tribes to the west and squeezed by European settlers to the east—is much like most other Native American stories, a confusion of loss, a tale of absences, of a culture that was blown apart and changed so radically in such a short time that only the names survive.

And yet, those names.

The names of the first women whose existence is recorded on the rolls of the Turtle Mountain Reservation, in 1892, reveal as much as we can ever recapture of their personalities, complex natures and relationships. These names tell stories, or half stories, if only we listen closely.

There once were women named Standing Strong, Fish Bones, Different Thunder. There once was a girl called Yellow Straps. Imagine what it was like to pick berries with Sky Coming Down, to walk through a storm with Lightning Proof. Surely, she was struck and lived, but what about the person next to her? People always avoided Steps Over Truth, when they wanted a straight answer, and I Hear, when they wanted to keep a secret. Glittering put coal on her face and watched for enemies at night. The woman named Standing Across could see things moving far across the lake. The old ladies gossiped about Playing Around, but no one dared say anything to her face. Ice was good at gambling. Shining One Side loved to sit and talk to Opposite the Sky. They both knew Sounding Feather, Exhausted Wind and Green Cloud, daughter of Seeing Iron. Center of the Sky was a widow. Rabbit, Prairie Chicken and Daylight were all little girls. She Tramp could make great distance in a day of walking.

Cross Lightning had a powerful smile. When Setting Wind and Gentle Woman Standing sang together the whole tribe listened. Stop the Day got her name when at her shout the afternoon went still. Log was strong, Cloud Touching Bottom weak and consumptive.[3] Mirage married Wind. Everyone loved Musical Cloud, but children hid from Dressed in Stone. Lying Down Grass had such a gentle voice and touch, but no one dared to cross She Black of Heart.

---

[1] Ikwe (ik' wā)
[2] Michifs (mi' chifz)
[3] Someone who is consumptive suffers from a disease (especially tuberculosis) in which body tissue wastes away.

2 Distinguish Fact and Opinion In this paragraph, which statement is a fact and which is an opinion?

Vocabulary

decimated (des´ ə māt´ əd) adj. destroyed or killed in large numbers

Catalog In this paragraph, why does Erdrich employ this catalog of names? 3

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Analyze Sections Louise Erdrich's intention for "The Names of Women" is multifold. Point out that there are three breaks—lines of space between paragraphs—that create four distinct sections in the essay. Ask students to work with a partner in mapping out the verb tense and point of view used in each of the four sections. Ask: When does the essay become personal? Is it when the author first uses the pronoun "I?" How does the ending of the essay connect to its title? (The verb tense is past until the last section, when it becomes present. The second section focuses on the personalities of the author's great-grandmothers. The third section begins to focus on the author's sense of home, while the last section focuses on the author's present life. The traditions, knowledge, and gifts of her people, as represented in their names, no longer exist, except through the author's words.)

We can imagine something of these women from their names. Anishinabe historian Basil Johnston notes that ‘such was the mystique and force of a name that it was considered presumptuous and unbecoming, even vain, for a person to utter his own name. It was the custom for a third person, if present, to utter the name of the person to be identified. Seldom, if ever, did either husband or wife speak the name of the other in public.’

Shortly after the first tribal roll, the practice of renaming became an ecclesiastical exercise, and, as a result, most women in the next two generations bear the names of saints particularly beloved by the French. She Knows the Bear became Marie. Sloping Cloud was christened Jeanne. Taking Care of the Day and Yellow Day Woman turned into Catherines. Identities are altogether lost. The daughters of my own ancestors, Kwayzancheewin[4]—Acts Like a Boy and Striped Earth Woman—go unrecorded, and no hint or reflection of their individual natures comes to light through the scattershot records of those times, although they must have been genetically tough in order to survive: there were epidemics of typhoid, flu, measles and other diseases that winnowed the tribe each winter. They had to have grown up sensible, hard-working, undeviating in their attention to their tasks. They had to have been lucky. And if very lucky, they acquired carts.

It is no small thing that both of my great-grandmothers were known as women with carts.

The first was Elise Eliza McCloud, the great-granddaughter of Striped Earth Woman. The buggy she owned was somewhat grander than a cart. In her photograph [page 1298], Elise Eliza gazes straight ahead, intent, elevated in her pride. Perhaps she and her daughter Justine, both wearing reshaped felt fedoras,[5] were on their way to the train that would take them from Rugby, North Dakota, to Grand Forks, and back again. Back and forth across the upper tier of the plains, they peddled their hand-worked tourist items—dangling moccasin brooches and little beaded hats, or, in the summer, the wild berries, plums and nuts that they had gathered from the wooded hills. Of Elise Eliza's industry there remains in the family only an intricately beaded pair of buffalo horns and a piece of real furniture, a ‘Highboy,’ an object once regarded with some awe, a prize she won for selling the most merchandise from a manufacturer's catalogue. ☆

Visual Vocabulary
A highboy is a tall chest of drawers having two sections and four legs.

The owner of the other cart, Virginia Grandbois [page 1301], died when I was nine years old: she was a fearsome and fascinating presence, an old woman seated like an icon 5 behind the door of my grandparents' house. Forty years before I was born, she was photographed on her way to fetch drinking water at the reservation well. In the picture she is seated high, the reins in her fingers connected to a couple of shaggy fetlocked draft ponies. The barrel she will fill stands behind her. She wears a man's sweater and an expression of vast self-pleasure. She might have been saying 4 Distinguish Fact and Opinion In regards to this fact, what is Erdrich's opinion?

Vocabulary

presumptuous (pri zump′ cho͞o əs) adj. going beyond what is proper; excessively bold ecclesiastical (i klē′ zē as′ ti kəl) adj. of or relating to the church undeviating (un dē′ vē āt′ ing) adj. not turning away from

---

[4] Kwayzancheewin (kwā′ zän chē′ win)

[5] Fedoras (fi dôr′ əz) are soft felt hats with curved brims and lengthwise creases in the crown.

Teach

Reading Strategy 4

Distinguish Fact and Opinion Answer: She believes the giving of saints' names marks a loss of Native American identity.

Reading Strategy 5

Distinguish Fact and Opinion Have students find examples of Eridich's opinions in the text. Ask: How does Erdrich support her opinions? (To support the opinion "she was a fearsome and fascinating presence," she describes Virginia Grandbois as "seated like an icon.")

Writer's Technique ☆

Style Discuss Erdrich's writing style. Ask: How does her style affect the reader? (Her style is conversational. Readers may feel they are listening to her personal comments about her ancestry.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Point out to students that the Native American names of the author's ancestors often functioned as metaphors, drawing a comparison between the person's character and an aspect of nature. Daylight might have been a child who often smiled quietly and had abundant positive energy. Green Cloud might have allowed envy to darken a mood. Ask: How do you imagine Wind's character? (She might enter a room in a hurry, rearrange everything, clean the place up, and take charge.) How do you imagine Musical Cloud? (She might have had a lilting voice, pretty in a quiet way.) Why might the church have changed the women's names to those of saints? (Missionaries often sought to convert Native Americans from their nature-centered faith to Christianity.) Ask students to think of a name for themselves that would indicate their personality.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Symbolism Ask: What does the quilt symbolize? (Possible response: It symbolizes the history of the Anishinabe.)

Big Idea 2

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: Erdrich feels connected to the traditions of the Anishinabe tribe, yet many of those traditions have become outdated.

Writer's Technique ☆

Repetition Point out that Erdrich's use of repetition gives her writing a rhythm that highlights major themes. Ask students to identify places in the text where repetition creates such a rhythm. (Possible responses: "she wanted home, to get home, to be home"; "no substitute, no kindness, no reality")

Kaygoh,[6] a warning, to calm the horses. She might have been speaking to whomever it was who held the camera, still a novel luxury.

Virginia Grandbois was known to smell of flowers. In spite of the potato picking, water hauling, field and housework, she found the time and will to dust her face with pale powder, in order to look more French. She was the great-great-granddaughter of the daughter of the principal leader of the A-waus-e,[7] the Bullhead clan, a woman whose real name was never recorded but who, on marrying a Frenchman, was 'recreated' as Madame Cadotte. It was Madame Cadotte who acted as a liaison[8] between her Ojibway relatives and her husband so that, even when French influence waned in the region, Jean-Baptiste Cadotte stayed on as the only trader of importance, the last governor of the fort at Sault St. Marie.[9]

By the time I knew Virginia Grandbois, however, her mind had darkened, and her body deepened, shrunk, turned to bones and leather. She did not live in the present or in any known time at all. Periodically, she would awaken from dim and unknown dreams to find herself seated behind the door in her daughter's house. She then cried out for her cart and her horses. When they did not materialize, Virginia Grandbois rose with great energy and purpose. Then she walked towards her house, taking the straightest line.

That house, long sold and gone, lay over one hundred miles due east and still Virginia Grandbois charged ahead, no matter what lay in her path—fences, sloughs,[10] woods, the yards of other families. She wanted home, to get home, to be home. She wanted her own place back, the place she had made, not her daughter's, not anyone else's. Hers. There was no substitute, no kindness, no reality that would change her mind. She had to be tied to the chair, and the chair to the wall, and still there was no reasoning with Virginia Grandbois. Her entire life, her hard-won personality, boiled down in the end to one stubborn, fixed, desperate idea.

I started with the same idea—this urge to get home, even if I must walk straight across the world. Only, for me, the urge to walk is the urge to write. Like my great-grandmother's house, there is no home for me to get to. A mixed-blood, raised in the Sugarbeet Capital, educated on the Eastern seaboard, married in a tiny New England village, living now on a ridge directly across from the Swan Range in the Rocky Mountains, my home is a collection of homes, of wells in which the quiet of experience shales away into sweet bedrock.

1 Elise Eliza pieced the quilt my mother slept under, a patchwork of shirts, pants, other worn-out scraps, bordered with small rinsed and pressed Bull Durham[11] sacks. As if in another time and place, although it is only the dim barrel of a four-year-old's memory, I see myself lying wrapped under smoky quilts and dank green army blankets in the house in which my mother was born. In the fragrance of tobacco, some smoked in home-rolled cigarettes, some offered to the Manitous[12] whose presence still was honored, I dream myself home. Beneath the rafters, shadowed with bunches of plants and torn calendars, in the nest of a sagging bed, I listen to mice rustle and the scratch of an owl's claws as it paces the shingles.

---

6. Kaygoh (kā gō′)
7. A-waus-e (ä′ wôs ē)
8. Here, a liaison (lē ā′ zon) is a person who maintains or improves communications between two parties.
9. Sault St. (or Ste., meaning Sainte) Marie (so͞o′ sānt mə rē′), Michigan, and its sister city, Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, lie along the St. Mary's River between Lake Huron and Lake Superior.
10. Sloughs (slo͞oz) are marshes, swamps, or bogs.
11. Bull Durham was a brand of tobacco.
12. Manitous (man′ ə to͞oz′) are spirits worshipped as governing forces of life and nature.

Vocabulary

wane (wān) v. to decrease gradually; to decline

Extending and Remaking Traditions How does this passage serve as a metaphor for Erdrich's life? 2

Grammar Practice

Apostrophes Review the use of apostrophes to form possessives and contractions. Remind students that apostrophes are not used in the possessive personal pronouns yours, his, hers, its, ours, and theirs. Have students correct these sentences:

1. The mayors assistant greeted the delegation. (mayor's)
2. The schools baseball team practices in the afternoon. (school's)
3. Do you think its a good idea to skip breakfast? (it's)
4. The dog played with it's toy. (its)

Elise Eliza's daughter-in-law, my grandmother Mary LeFavor, kept that house of hand-hewed and stacked beams, mudded between. She managed to shore it up and keep it standing by stuffing every new crack with disposable diapers. Having used and reused cloth to diaper her own children, my grandmother washed and hung to dry the paper and plastic diapers that her granddaughters bought for her great-grandchildren. When their plastic-paper shredded, she gathered them carefully together and one day, on a summer visit, I woke early to find her tamping[13] the rolled stuff carefully into the cracked walls of that old house.

It is autumn in the Plains, and in the little sloughs ducks land, and mudhens, whose flesh always tastes greasy and charred. Snow is coming soon, and after its first fall there will be a short, false warmth that brings out the sweet-sour odor of highbush cranberries. As a descendant of the women who skinned buffalo and tanned and smoked the hides, of women who pounded berries with the dried meat to make winter food, who made tea from willow bark and rosehips, who gathered snakeroot, I am affected by the change of seasons. Here is a time when plants consolidate[14] their tonic and drop seed, when animals store energy and grow thick fur. As for me, I start keeping longer hours, writing more, working harder, though I am obviously not a creature of a traditional Anishinabe culture. I was not raised speaking the old language, or adhering to the cycle of religious ceremonies that govern the Anishinabe spiritual relationship to the land and the moral order within human configurations. As the wedding of many backgrounds, I am free to do what simply feels right.

My mother knits, sews, cans, dries food and preserves it. She knows how to gather tea, berries, snare rabbits, milk cows and churn butter. She can grow squash and melons from seeds she gathered the fall before. She is, as were the women who came before me, a repository[15] of all of the homely virtues, and I am the first in a long line who has not saved the autumn's harvest in birch bark makuks[16] and skin bags and in a cellar dry and cold with dust. I am the first who scratches the ground for pleasure, not survival, and grows flowers instead of potatoes. I record rather than practise the arts that filled the hands and days of my mother and her mother, and all the mothers going back into the shadows, when women wore names that told us who they were.

---

[13] Tamping means "forcing or packing in with a series of light taps."

[14] To consolidate (kən sol′ ə dāt′) means "to combine."

[15] Here, a repository (ri poz′ ə tôr′ ē) is a person who stores something.

[16] makuks (mä′ kuks)

3 Catalog What is the purpose of this catalog?

Extending and Remaking Traditions Why is this idea important? 4

Extending and Remaking Traditions How is Erdrich extending and remaking her cultural inheritance? 5

Teach

Literary Element 3

Catalog Answer: It provides readers with specific details about everyday Anishinabe life.

Big Idea 4

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: Erdrich acknowledges that while she has an obligation to do what is right, she is also free to reinterpret Anishinabe traditions.

Big Idea 5

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: She preserves her ancestors' arts by writing about them, thus remaking the traditions in a different form.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

AAVE For approaching-level students who are users of African American vernacular English (AAVE), the 's suffix that shows possession is sometimes left out, yielding "mayor assistant," rather than "mayor's assistant." Give students extra practice filling in the apostrophe in the following phrases: my mothers sister, my sisters friend, Jacks football, Talias sweater. (mother's, sister's, Jack's, Talia's) Remind students that the word it can be especially challenging, and many writers confuse it's and its. Review the possessive, as in The dog scratched its ear; and the contraction, as in It's hard for a dog to sit still. When it is followed by 's, the apostrophe signals a contraction of the words it is. The possessive form of it is written without an apostrophe. Say: Identify whether its shows possession or is a contraction: (1) The dog played with its toy. (2) He asked if it's okay to yell out. (possession, contraction)

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) She reveals that the culture of her Native American forebears was radically changed and partly obliterated. (b) She seems fascinated by the strengths of the women and saddened that she does not have the same strengths.
2. (a) She describes Elise Eliza McCloud as "elevated in her pride" and Virginia Grandbois as "fearsome and fascinating." (b) She is in awe of their strengths and abilities and impressed by their sense of purpose.
3. (a) They both have energy and purpose. (b) She too is determined to "get home" by exploring and preserving her family history. She hopes she has the same strength of will.
4. The search for identity should include examining the past; our ancestors' strength can give us purpose. Students' details should support their statements of theme.
5. (a) The names of her Native American ancestors have symbolic significance and point to their unique characters and strengths. (b) Some students may say the title suits the essay. Others may say the essay is also about Erdrich's ancestors and how she does and does not resemble them.
6. Students may say she is extending the traditions by conveying them to others by means of her writing.
7. Students' answers will vary.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 317–318.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What does Erdrich reveal in the first paragraph about her ethnic heritage and the history of her ancestors? (b)What is Erdrich's attitude toward her ancestors' history?
2. (a)What words does Erdrich use to describe her great-grandmothers? (b)How do you think Erdrich feels about her great-grandmothers? Use specific details from the selection to explain your answers.
3. (a)What do Erdrich's great-grandmother Virginia Grandbois and Erdrich have in common? (b)What do you think Erdrich is saying about her own character when she explains what she has in common with Virginia Grandbois? Use details from the selection to support your answer.

Analyze and Evaluate

4. In your opinion, what is the theme, or message about life, of this selection? Support your response with evidence from the text.
5. (a)Why does Erdrich title this essay "The Names of Women"? (b)Do you think this title is appropriate? Why or why not?

Connect

6. Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions Do you think that Erdrich is extending or remaking the traditions of her past? Explain why or why not.
7. Connect to Today Do you think that writing about what people have done in the past is important today? Why or why not?

Literary Element Catalog

Many forms of literature include catalogs. For example, some epic poems list the names of heroes or weapons.

1. Describe two catalogs that appear in this nonfiction selection.
2. Why might Erdrich present this information in the form of catalogs?

Review: Symbol

As you learned on page 1287, a symbol is any object, person, place, or experience that represents itself on a literal level but also stands for something else, usually something abstract. For example, a dove is often used to symbolize peace. In some cases, names can also be symbolic.

Partner Activity Pair up with a classmate to identify symbols in "The Names of Women." Working with your partner, create a two-column chart similar to the one below. Fill in the left-hand column with examples of symbols or symbolic content from the text. In the right-hand column, explain what the name, object, or other symbol can be understood to represent.

Symbol	What It Represents
The name Standing Strong
The great-grandmother's carts

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Literary Element

1. Possible answers: the names of Anishinabe women, Erdrich's mother's tasks
2. Possible answer: to emphasize the scope of the listed items

Review: Symbol

Invite students to compile their charts into a class list.

Progress Check

Can students recognize catalogs?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 291.

Reading Strategy Distinguish Fact and Opinion

SAT Skills Practice

1. Erdrich supports her opinion that the names of her ancestors have stories to tell by
   - (A) giving examples of some women's stories.
   - (B) naming all of her women ancestors.
   - (C) describing the process of renaming.
   - (D) referring readers to the rolls of the Turtle Mountain Reservation.
   - (E) explaining the derivation of her own name.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Parts For each vocabulary word in the left column, identify the related word with a shared prefix, root, or suffix in the right column. Write both words and underline the part they have in common. Then look up the meaning of the related word and explain how it is related to the vocabulary word.

1. decimated	fantastical
2. presumptuous	deviant
3. ecclesiastical	December
4. undeviating	want
5. wane	consume

EXAMPLE: impress, compress
Impress means "to make a mark by applying pressure," compress means "to press together."

Academic Vocabulary

The Anishinabe women were assigned new names, usually those of French saints.

Assign is a word you know from school, but it also has an academic meaning. Using context clues, infer the meaning of assigned in the sentence above and explain the difference between the word's common and academic meanings.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Write with Style

Apply Symbolism

Assignment In her essay, Erdrich uses several symbols to represent both literal and abstract aspects of her heritage. Examine the chart you made on page 1297 to review how Erdrich uses symbolism. Then think of some symbols that apply to your own ethnic background and incorporate them into a short essay.

Get Ideas Brainstorm, talk to family members, and research on the Internet or in a library to develop a list of potential cultural symbols. Think about objects, actions, places, and events that are important to your heritage, and about larger ideas these things could represent. Make a chart similar to the one you made for Erdrich's essay.

EXAMPLE:
Heritage: English

Symbol	What It Represents
drinking tea	hospitality, spending time with others
football (soccer)	competition, athletic skill
The Queen	tradition, formality, patriotism
castles	wealth, history

Give It Structure Come up with a main idea, or thesis, for your essay. Put a checkmark next to the symbols in your chart that support your thesis. Begin your essay with your thesis, followed by supporting sentences (including the applicable symbols), and concluding with a restatement of your thesis.

Look at Language Reread your essay. Did you choose your words and supporting details precisely so that they develop your main idea? Have you used a variety of sentence structures and lengths to help engage your reader? Does the tone of your writing reflect your thesis? If not, do more research to help you write clear, accurate descriptions.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. A is the correct answer because Erdrich supports her opinion with specific examples of names and what they reveal about the women.

Academic Vocabulary

In the sentence above, the words "new names" tell us that the word assigned means "to designate or to name." At school, a teacher might assign homework to the students. In this case, assign means "to give a duty or task."

Writing

Use these criteria when evaluating students' writing:

- Does the writer choose appropriate symbols for his or her culture(s)?
- Does the writer have a clear thesis?
- Does the writer effectively use symbols to support his or her thesis?

For grammar practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 295.

Vocabulary

1. decimated, December; decimated means "destroyed or killed in large numbers," originally one-tenth of a city as punishment; December was the tenth month of the old Roman calendar.
2. presumptuous, consume; presumptuous means "excessively bold," or "taking without right"; consume is to expend something by use.
3. ecclesiastical, fantastical; ecclesiastical means "having the qualities of the church"; fantastical means "having the qualities of fantasy."
4. undeviating, deviant; undeviating means "not turning away from"; deviant means "one who turns away from the social norm."
5. wane, want; to wane means "to decrease gradually"; a want is a shortage.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers:
Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Selection Launcher

Selection Focus Transparency 72

Daily Language Practice Transparency 118

Or ask students to list chores they are responsible for. Ask: How does the size of the family affect a teenager's responsibilities? (Large families may pass more tasks onto teenagers than small families.) How does a teenager's position in the family affect his or her responsibilities? (The oldest children may have more responsibility than younger children.)

As they read, have students consider how family size affects each member's responsibilities.

Before You Read

Salvador Late or Early

Meet Sandra Cisneros
(born 1954)

Sandra Cisneros always felt a bit like an outsider. She was also frequently the new kid on the block. Cisneros was born in Chicago. Her mother was Mexican American and her father was Mexican. Her father was devoted to his mother in Mexico, so he was often homesick. As a result, Cisneros said, the family "returned like the tides, back and forth to Mexico City."

The Outsider One result of this continual migration was that Cisneros retreated into books, becoming an avid, if isolated, reader. This habit was encouraged by her mother, who made sure that her daughter had a library card even before the child was able to read.

During her sophomore year of high school, Cisneros had an English teacher whom she described as "bright and vivacious." This teacher encouraged Cisneros to write. After college she applied to and was accepted by the prestigious University of Iowa Writers' Workshop.

Success In Iowa Cisneros felt isolated and out of place. "My classmates were from the best schools in the country," she wrote later. "They had been bred as fine hot-house flowers. I was a yellow weed among the city's cracks." Suddenly, though, she realized what made her special and therefore what she would write about—her own experiences. The result was The House on Mango Street, published when Cisneros was twenty-nine. In a series of interlocking stories, the book tells the tale of a young Chicana girl growing up in a Chicago barrio, much like the neighborhoods where Cisneros once lived. The book received high praise and was awarded the Before Columbus American Book Award in 1985. It has sold over two million copies, making Cisneros one of the best-known Latina authors in the United States.

Cisneros published My Wicked Wicked Ways, a collection of poetry, in 1987, and Woman Hollering Creek and Other Stories in 1991. Critics disagreed about whether to call the latter prose or poetry, as the author included elements of both genres.

> "To me, the definition of a story is something that someone wants to listen to. If someone doesn't want to listen to you, then it's not a story."
>
> —Sandra Cisneros

Cisneros began writing a story about her father, but kept traveling different paths until her story had mushroomed into a 450-page book, Caramelo, that took almost ten years to complete. "You start a story," she said, "—oh, but you have to explain something first. So you take a detour, but that leads to something else. Then you get back to your story."

Today Cisneros teaches, gives readings, and writes. She still remains somewhat on the outside of society, but this is by choice. "I really like my solitude," she said to an interviewer. "I don't like being lonely, but I'm not lonely. I need to be alone to work."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Sandra Cisneros, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

Salvador Late or Early

Literary Elements
- Imagery (SE pp. 1305–1307)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write an Essay (SE p. 1307)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Sound Devices (SE pp. 1305–1307)
- Identify Sequence (TE p. 1306)

Vocabulary Skills
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 1307)

Literature and Reading Preview

Learning Objectives

For pages 1304–1307

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing imagery.

Reading: Analyzing sound devices.

Writing: Writing an essay.

Connect to the Story

Should children be responsible for adult duties or tasks? Discuss this with a group of classmates. Consider whether childhood should be about play or learning adult skills.

Build Background

While some children have school as their only responsibility, other children have numerous family obligations that shape their lives. These children may work alongside their parents in fields, in shops, or in the home. They may spend hours caring for younger or older relatives. Although laws require children to go to school, not all children are able to do so regularly. In some cultures, family obligations are primary, and a child's individual needs may give way to other family pressures.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions

As you read, ask yourself, How does the language comprise elements of both prose and poetry, reshaping them into a new form?

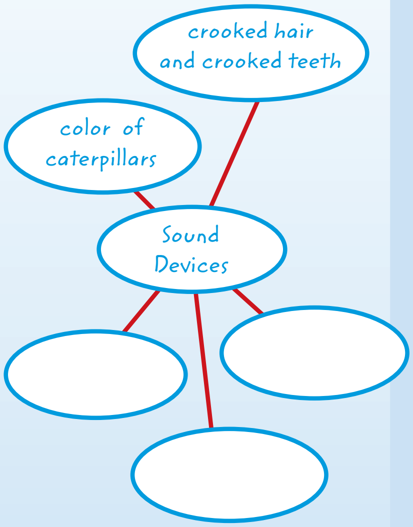
Literary Element Imagery

Imagery is made up of the "word pictures" a writer uses to evoke an emotional response. To create effective images, a writer uses sensory details, or descriptions that appeal to one of the five senses: sight, hearing, touch, taste, and smell. As you read, ask yourself, Which words and phrases create images?

Reading Strategy Analyze Sound Devices

Sound devices are techniques designed to appeal to the ear. Writers use sound devices to emphasize particular words or sounds, to create or enhance rhythm, or to add to the musical quality of their writing. Sound devices include alliteration, assonance, repetition, rhyme, and rhythm.

Tip: Keep Track As you read, ask, Where do sound devices draw my attention to certain words or phrases? Use a word web like the one shown to record sound devices that catch your ear.



Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Young Salvador lives in a poor neighborhood with his mother and many siblings. Salvador is responsible for awakening his younger brothers and getting them dressed and off to school, but he often does not get to school himself. Later in the day he returns to collect them again.

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students, pp. 277–282
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 277–282
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 277–282

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate At a quick glance, this selection looks like a short, short story. As students read it, they will notice the poetic language and sentence structure as well as the absence of a plot. Point out that many of the sentences are incomplete. Ask: What are the essential components of a sentence? (subject and predicate) Ask: One line from the story states, "Helps his mama, who is busy with the business of the baby." What part of the sentence is missing? (subject) Why might the writer have chosen to write incomplete sentences to describe Salvador? (to emphasize the sounds the words make and the sensory pictures they create) Suggest that as students read "Salvador Late or Early," they visualize the images created by the words.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Imagery Answer: The images suggest that he is a concerned brother taking on a parent's role.

Big Idea 2

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: The form is prose, but the rhythm, repetition, and imagery are poetic.

Literary Element 3

Imagery Answer: Another writer might have simply said that the boy dropped a box of crayons.

Reading Strategy 4

Analyze Sound Devices
Answer: The initial sound in hundred and happiness and guitar and grief are repeated. The repetition adds to the rhythm of the lines.

Readability Scores
Dale-Chall: 5.5
DRP: 63
Lexile: not testable due to length

Salvador Late or Early

Sandra Cisneros

El Patio de la Casa del Artista, 1884. Martin Tovar y Tovar. Oil on canvas, $18\frac{1}{4}$ x $21\frac{5}{8}$ in. Private collection.

Salvador with eyes the color of caterpillar, Salvador of the crooked hair and crooked teeth, Salvador whose name the teacher cannot remember, is a boy who is no one's friend, runs along somewhere in that vague direction where homes are the color of bad weather, lives behind a raw wood doorway, shakes the sleepy brothers awake, ties their shoes, combs their hair with water, feeds them milk and corn flakes from a tin cup in the dim dark of the morning.

Salvador, late or early, sooner or later arrives with the string of younger brothers ready. Helps his mama, who is busy with the business of the baby. Tugs the arms of Cecilio, Arturito, makes them hurry, because today, like yesterday, Arturito has dropped the cigar box of crayons, has let go the hundred little fingers of red, green, yellow, blue, and nub of black sticks that tumble and spill over and beyond the asphalt puddles until the crossing-guard lady holds back the blur of traffic for Salvador to collect them again.

Salvador inside that wrinkled shirt, inside the throat that must clear itself and apologize each time it speaks, inside that forty-pound body of boy with its geography of scars, its history of hurt, limbs stuffed with feathers and rags, in what part of the eyes, in what part of the heart, in that cage of the chest where something throbs with both fists and knows only what Salvador knows, inside that body too small to contain the hundred balloons of happiness, the single guitar of grief, is a boy like any other disappearing out the door, beside the schoolyard gate, where he has told his brothers they must wait. Collects the hands of Cecilio and Arturito, scuttles off dodging the many schoolyard colors, the elbows and wrists crisscrossing, the several shoes running. Grows small and smaller to the eye, dissolves into the bright horizon, flutters in the air before disappearing like a memory of kites.

1 Imagery What do these images suggest about Salvador and his life?

2 Extending and Remaking Traditions What elements of both prose and poetry do you see in these lines?

3 Imagery How could the writer have said the same thing without imagery?

4 Analyze Sound Devices What sounds are repeated, and what is the effect of such repetition?

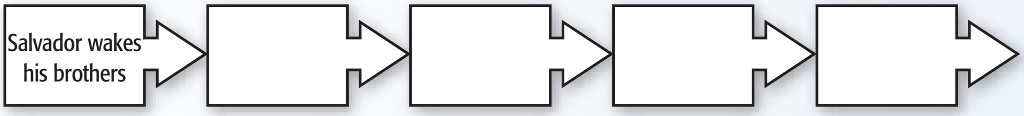
Reading Practice

Identify Sequence Explain that events in Cisneros's writing can be hard to follow because of her freeform sentence structure. Listing events in sequence can help readers track what happens, and when. Have students complete a sequence chart with events from the story.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What was your reaction to learning about Salvador's life? (b)What would you say to Salvador if you could speak to him?
2. (a)What are Salvador's jobs? (b)What does his role reveal about how he is viewed by his family?
3. (a)What images describe Salvador in the third paragraph? (b)What do these details show about his history?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. A major part of Cisneros's style in "Salvador Late or Early" is her use of unusually long sentences. Do you think these sentences add to or detract from the effectiveness of her writing? Explain.
5. The narrator describes Salvador as "a boy who is no one's friend." Who or what is responsible for the boy's situation, do you think? Explain.

Connect

6. Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions Why might Cisneros have written in a form somewhere between poetry and prose?
7. Connect to the Author In what ways might Cisneros see herself in Salvador?

Literary Element Imagery

Imagery often suggests feelings or ideas that are not stated. For example, Salvador "arrives with the string of younger brothers ready." These words create an image of a line of boys following Salvador and convey the idea that people see him as attached to his brothers more than as a separate person.

1. What image does "in that cage of the chest where something throbs with both fists" create?
2. What image do you find most striking?

Reading Strategy Analyze Sound Devices

Sound devices in the story such as alliteration, assonance, repetition, rhyme, and rhythm are associated more with poetry than with prose.

1. Give an example of each sound device from the story.
2. What effect do these have on your reading?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Academic Vocabulary

Salvador does not get acknowledged for the familial responsibilities he takes on.

Acknowledged is an academic word. In more casual conversation, an author's editor or colleagues might be acknowledged for their help with writing a book. Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of the word in the sentence about Salvador above. Check your inference in a dictionary.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Writing

Write an Essay In "Salvador Late or Early," observes scholar Jeff Thomson, "[Cisneros] indicts everyone for the common failure of not protecting children from the horrors of the adult world." Do you agree that she holds everyone responsible? Write a brief essay in response. Use details from the story for support.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2 (a) He awakens, feeds, and takes his brothers to and from school. (b) Viewed as a parent
3. (a) Wrinkled shirt; throat that must clear itself and apologize; limbs stuffed with feathers and rags (b) Fear, hurt, and fragility, but also joy
4. They mirror the breathless quality of Salvador's busy day.
5. Parents, school, or society
6. They both have certain limitations; combining them overcomes their limitations.
7. Even though a child might not work outside the home or get paid for his or her contributions, some children might be expected to care for their siblings or to work in a family business such as a restaurant or store.

Literary Element

1. A creature desperate to escape
2. Students should describe an image and explain why it is striking.

Progress Check

Can students analyze imagery?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 304.

Academic Vocabulary

Because "familial responsibilities" are a kind of extra duty for a child, we can infer that acknowledged means thanked or appreciated.

Writing

Use the following criteria to evaluate students' essays:

- Does the essay explain who is responsible for the children's work?
- Does the essay use examples from the story to support the claim?

Reading Strategy

1. Assonance (puddles, until); alliteration (color, caterpillar); repetition (crooked hair, crooked teeth); rhyme and rhythm (schoolyard gate, they must wait)
2. Soften harsh facts and make the story sound more like a song

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers:

Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Selection Launcher

Selection Focus Transparency 73

Daily Language Practice Transparency 119

Or ask students what novels they have read. Ask: How is a novel like and unlike other literary forms? (Novels are fiction, like short stories, poems, and plays, and unlike articles, memoirs, and nonfiction books.) As they read, have students consider how novels and other literary forms meet people's emotional needs.

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students, pp. 283–294
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 283–294
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 283–294

Before You Read

Thoughts on the African-American Novel

Meet Toni Morrison
(born 1931)

Highly acclaimed as a novelist, essayist, and literary critic, in 1993 Toni Morrison became the first African American to win the Nobel Prize in Literature. Reflecting on this honor, she stated that to become a writer she had to defy stereotypes and value her own potential. "Had I lived the life that the state planned for me from the beginning," she said, "I would have lived and died in somebody else's kitchen, on somebody else's land, and never written a word."

Instead of working as a maid or a sharecropper, Morrison became a writer and expressed her emotions and perceptions as an African American and a woman in award-winning novels and other creative works. When asked whether she considered herself a black writer or a female writer, Morrison responded, "I've just insisted—insisted!—upon being called a black woman novelist."

Early Years Born Chloe Anthony Wofford, Morrison grew up in Lorain, Ohio, a setting that figures prominently in many of her novels. Her family had moved there from the South, looking for better opportunities. With her family's help, she attended Howard University in Washington, D.C., where she studied English and the classics. There she adopted the name Toni, because people had trouble pronouncing her first name.

Morrison graduated from Howard and later earned an M.A. degree from Cornell University. She married, had two sons, and began a long and distinguished career as a teacher and editor. Eventually, Morrison and her husband divorced, and for years she raised her family as a single mother, working by day and writing late at night after her sons were asleep.

> "Writing . . . became the one thing I was doing that I had absolutely no intention of living without."
>
> —Toni Morrison

An African American Writer Morrison's first novel was The Bluest Eye (1970). In this novel and others that followed—including Sula (1973), Song of Solomon (1977), and Tar Baby (1981)—Morrison grappled with the themes that concern her: racism, family, identity, and loss. She created fiction that spoke directly to African Americans, using the "music of black talk."

In 1987, Morrison's novel Beloved became a financial blockbuster. An exploration of boundless love and institutionalized evil, this novel won the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction and later was adapted into a successful film starring Oprah Winfrey.

Despite her prominence and influence as a writer and Nobel laureate, Morrison does not rest on her laurels. She continues to write, to lecture, and to teach. Today her work includes several acclaimed novels, an impressive body of nonfiction, and a play about the murder of Emmett Till, Dreaming Emmett.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Toni Morrison, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

Thoughts on the African-American Novel

Literary Elements
- Essay (SE pp. 1309, 1311, 1313)
- Parallelism (SE p. 1313)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Apply Parallelism (SE p. 1314)
- Identify the Thesis (TE p. 1312)

Reading Skills
- Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details (SE pp. 1309, 1311, 1314)
- Vary Reading Rate (TE p. 1310)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Parts (SE p. 1314)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (TE p. 1310)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Essay

Why do people read novels? With a partner, make a list of your favorite novels. What drew you to these books?

Build Background

When Morrison began writing, the civil rights movement was becoming a force for social change. Morrison, then a teacher, knew several people, both poets and political leaders, who were active in that struggle. Today, Morrison is recognized as one of the pioneers in the field of African American literature.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions

As you read, ask yourself, How does Morrison connect her novels and the traditions of "Black art"?

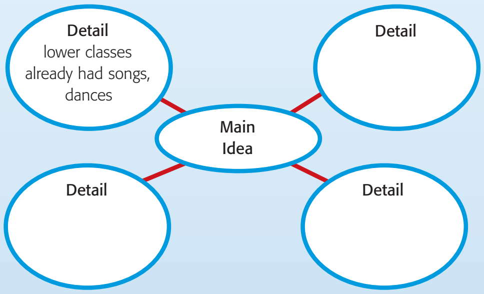
Literary Element Essay

An essay is a type of nonfiction that conveys a writer's ideas and opinions on a specific topic. An informal essay has a lighter tone and a more fluid structure than a formal essay, which features a carefully structured progression of opinions and supporting information. As you read, ask, Is Morrison's essay formal or informal?

Reading Strategy Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details

Determining an author's main idea is finding the most important thought in a paragraph or selection. As you read, ask, What is the one idea that all of the sentences in a paragraph, or all of the paragraphs in a selection, are about? Supporting details may include facts, examples, reasons, and anecdotes.

Tip: Take Notes Map out the main idea and details of a selection by creating a graphic organizer like the one shown.



Learning Objectives

For pages 1308–1314

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing essays.

Reading: Determining main idea and supporting details.

Writing: Applying parallelism.

Vocabulary

aristocracy (a´ rə sto´ krə sē) n. people with high social status due to birth or title; p. 1310 The peasant envied the aristocracy.

exclusively (iks´ klo͞o´ siv lē) adv. without the inclusion or involvement of any others; p. 1311 This room is used exclusively by club members.

enlighten (en līt´ ən) v. to give knowledge or wisdom to; p. 1311 A classic novel can enlighten readers, showing them how to live.

meandering (mē an´ dər ing) adj. following a winding course; p. 1312 We took a meandering, not a direct, route home.

unorthodox (un ôr´ thə doks´) adj. not customary or traditional; p. 1312 The exterminator's methods were unorthodox, but successful.

Tip: Word Parts You can figure out the meanings of some unfamiliar words by examining their parts. For example, the word unorthodox, which means "something that is not traditional," has the prefix un- which means "not."

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In this essay, Toni Morrison describes the origin of the novel as a genre. She maintains that the novel evolved because the middle class lacked an art form and needed one in order to understand its culture and place in society. African Americans, she says, need novels for the same reason—to define and explain their place in American society. Morrison says her goal is to write novels that respond to that need and that use the "characteristics of Black art."

Vocabulary

Abstract Words Explain that the words used to analyze literature are often abstract, that is, they refer to intangible concepts rather than physical things. Have students name concrete items that are associated with each vocabulary word. (aristocracy: money, brocade, jewelry; exclusively: clubs, privileges; enlighten: teacher, book; meandering: river, hiker; unorthodox: foreigner, genius)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Write the vocabulary words on the board and have students locate the words in the essay and read the sentences aloud. Ask them to create a two-column chart with the headings Morrison's Words and My Words. Tell them to use a dictionary to check each word's meaning. In the chart, have them substitute their own word or words for the vocabulary word. Encourage students to use the chart as they read.

SMALL GROUP

Advanced Divide students into in five groups and assign each a paragraph to read. Have students identify the vocabulary word in their section. Ask: How does the vocabulary word in your paragraph help express a central idea ? (Sample answer: The novel came about because a class of people between the poor and the aristocracy developed.)

Teach

Big Idea 1

Extending and Remaking Traditions Say: Keep these questions in mind as you read: According to Toni Morrison, how are the traditions of Black art unique? (Black art inspires strong emotion and action and invites participation.) How do novels help people understand the cultural traditions around them? (They allow people to explore rules of behavior and the consequences of breaking the rules.)

View the Art ★

Jacob Lawrence (1917–2000) came to New York City at age 13. In a culturally vibrant Harlem, he found inspiration and guidance as a young artist. Many of his paintings bring that Harlem and its African American community to life. Ask: How can you link this painting to the title of Morrison's essay? (The painting shows African Americans in a library. Morrison's essay concerns the "African-American novel," which could be about or read by those pictured in this painting.)

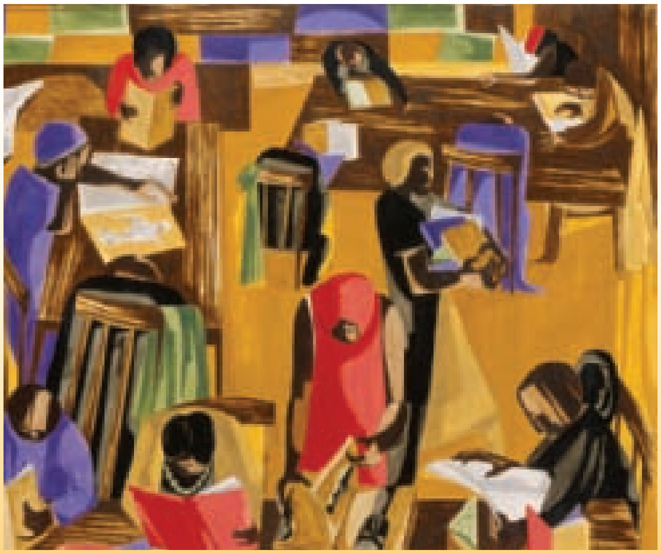
For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 7.4
DRP: 61
Lexile: 1130

Thoughts on the African-American Novel

Toni Morrison



The Library, 1960. Jacob Lawrence. Tempera on fiberboard, 24 x $29\frac{7}{8}$ in. Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC.

1 The label "novel" is useful in technical terms because I write prose that is longer than a short story. My sense of the novel is that it has always functioned for the class or the group that wrote it. The history of the novel as a form began when there was a new class, a middle class, to read it; it was an art form that they needed. The lower classes didn't need novels at that time because they had an art form already: they had songs, and dances, and ceremony, and gossip, and celebrations. The aristocracy didn't need it because they had the art that they had patronized,[1] they had their own pictures painted, their own houses built, and they made sure their art separated them from the rest of the world. But when the industrial revolution[2] began, there emerged a new class of people who were neither peasants nor aristocrats. In large measure they had no art form to tell them how to behave in this new situation. So they produced an art form: we call it the novel of aristocracy (a´ rə sto´ krə sē) n. people with high social status due to birth or title

Vocabulary

---

[1] Here, patronize (pä′ trə nīz′) means "to give financial support or encouragement to."

[2] The industrial revolution helped develop a middle class of workers who began to gain some control over where, for whom, and for what wages they would work.

Reading Practice

Vary Reading Rate Discuss some ways to approach written materials.

- Skimming: to preview or review
- Scanning: to find specific facts or topics
- In-depth reading: to gain thorough knowledge

Before students begin reading, they should skim the essay for general content. Then they should read it in-depth. Ask them to explain the new information they gained. Finally, they should scan for specific words or ideas, such as the novel Samuel Richardson wrote.

manners, an art form designed to tell people something they didn't know. That is, how to behave in this new world, how to distinguish between the good guys and the bad guys. How to get married. What a good living was. What would happen if you strayed from the fold. So that early works such as Pamela, by Samuel Richardson, and the Jane Austen material provided social rules and explained behavior, identified outlaws, identified the people, habits, and customs that one should approve of. They were didactic in that sense. That, I think, is probably why the novel was not missed among the so-called peasant cultures. They didn't need it, because they were clear about what their responsibilities were and who and where was evil, and where was good.

But when the peasant class, or lower class, or what have you, confronts the middle class, the city, or the upper classes, they are thrown a little bit into disarray. For a long time, the art form that was healing for Black people was music. That music is no longer exclusively ours, we don't have exclusive rights to it. Other people sing it and play it; it is the mode[3] of contemporary music everywhere. So another form has to take that place, and it seems to me that the novel is needed by African Americans now in a way that it was not needed before—and it is following along the lines of the function of novels everywhere. We don't live in places where we can hear those stories anymore; parents don't sit around and tell their children those classical, mythological archetypal stories[4] that we heard years ago. But new information has got to get out, and there are several ways to do it. One is in the novel. I regard it as a way to accomplish certain very strong functions—one being the one I just described.

It should be beautiful, and powerful, but it should also work. It should have something in it that enlightens; something in it that opens the door and points the way. Something in it that suggests what the conflicts are, what the problems are. But it need not solve those problems because it is not a case study, it is not a recipe. There are things that I try to incorporate into my fiction that are directly and deliberately related to what I regard as the major characteristics of Black art, wherever it is. One of which is the ability to be both print and oral literature: to combine those two aspects so that the stories can be read in silence, of course, but one should be able to hear them as well. It should try deliberately to make you stand up and make you feel something profoundly in the same way that a Black preacher requires his congregation to speak, to join him in the sermon, to behave in a certain way, to stand up and to weep and to cry and to accede or to change and to modify—to expand on the sermon that is being delivered. In the same way that a musician's music is enhanced when there is a response from the audience. Now in a book, which closes, after all—it's of some importance to me to try to make that connection—to try to make that happen also. And, having at my disposal only the letters of the alphabet and some punctuation, I have to provide the places and spaces so that [3] Here, mode means "a manner of expression." The type of music once considered an art form belonging to African Americans is now the preferred form of contemporary music for many modern listeners.

---

[4] Archetypal (är′ kə tī′ pəl) stories come from ideas inherited through the ages.

2 Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details What main idea do these details support?

3 Essay How does this sentence function in the essay?

4 Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details What details support this main idea?

Vocabulary

exclusively (iks´ klo͞o siv lē) adv. without the inclusion or involvement of any others

Vocabulary

enlighten (en līt´ ən) v. to give knowledge or wisdom to

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details

Answer: The novel of manners was an art form designed to tell people how to live.

Literary Element 3

Essay Answer: It states the main idea in the essay.

Reading Strategy 4

Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details

Answer: Morrison's novels are both print and oral literature that elicit deep personal responses, and Morrison provides places and opportunities for reader participation.

Literary History ☆

Early Novelists Samuel Richardson was an English novelist in the eighteenth century. His novel Pamela is often named as the first novel, and is well-known for its innovative form—the novel is a series of letters.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Help students create an outline to show the hierarchy of the main idea, supporting details, and evidence. Have students identify these elements for each paragraph, and then paraphrase Morrison's overall thesis statement. Explain that Morrison's focus shifts in the third paragraph, where she narrows her focus from the characteristics of the novel to those of the African American novel. Say: For each paragraph, list the main idea. (1. The middle class needed the novel to define its place in society. 2. The African American novel is following this pattern. 3. The African American novel invites emotional participation. 4. Like oral storytelling, it relies on the reader's involvement. 5. Morrison includes various types of choruses in her novels. 6. She continues to try to define the special qualities of the African American novel.) Help students fill in the supporting details and the evidence.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: Morrison leaves out details for the reader to supply, constructs dialogue for the ear, eliminates adverbs, and includes a chorus.

Big Idea 2

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: Morrison uses unorthodox novelistic characteristics that are used in "Black art." She sees her novels as reflecting the oral characteristics of "Black art."

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 321.

the reader can participate. Because it is the affective and participatory relationship[5] between the artist or the speaker and the audience that is of primary importance, as it is in these other art forms that I have described.

To make the story appear oral, meandering, effortless, spoken—to have the reader feel the narrator without identifying that narrator, or hearing him or her knock about, and to have the reader work with the author in the construction of the book—is what's important. What is left out is as important as what is there. To describe sexual scenes in such a way that they are not clinical, not even explicit—so that the reader brings his own sexuality to the scene and thereby participates in it in a very personal way. And owns it. To construct the dialogue so that it is heard. So that there are no adverbs attached to them: "loudly," "softly," "he said menacingly." The menace should be in the sentence. To use, even formally, a chorus. The real presence of a chorus. Meaning the community or the reader at large, commenting on the action as it goes ahead.

In the books that I have written, the chorus has changed but there has always been a choral note, whether it is the "I" narrator of Bluest Eye, or the town functioning as a character in Sula, or the neighborhood and the community that responds in the two parts of town in Solomon. Or, as extreme as I've gotten, all of nature thinking and feeling and watching and responding to the action going on in Tar Baby, so that they are in the story: the trees hurt, fish are afraid, clouds report, and the bees are alarmed. Those are the ways in which I try to incorporate, into that traditional genre the novel, unorthodox novelistic characteristics—so that it is, in my view, Black, because it uses the characteristics of Black art. I am not suggesting that some of these devices have not been used before and elsewhere—only the reason why I do. I employ them as well as I can. And those are just some; I wish there were ways in which such things could be talked about in the criticism. My general disappointment in some of the criticism that my work has received has nothing to do with approval. It has something to do with the vocabulary used in order to describe these things. I don't like to find my books condemned as bad or praised as good, when that condemnation or that praise is based on criteria from other paradigms. I would much prefer that they were dismissed or embraced based on the success of their accomplishment within the culture out of which I write.

I don't regard Black literature as simply books written by Black people, or simply as literature written about Black people, or simply as literature that uses a certain mode of language in which you just sort of drop g's. There is something very special and very identifiable about it and it is my struggle to find that elusive but identifiable style in the books. My joy is when I think that I have approached it; my misery is when I think I can't get there. ❧

---

[5] An affective and participatory relationship influences one's emotions and encourages one to take an active part in the relationship.

1 Extending and Remaking Traditions What does Morrison do to give a story an oral quality?

Extending and Remaking Traditions What connections does Morrison see between her novels and "Black art"? 2

Vocabulary

meandering (mē an′ dər ing) adj. following a winding course

Vocabulary

unorthodox (un ôr′ thə doks′) adj. not customary or traditional

Writing Practice

Identify the Thesis Tell students that the thesis of an essay is often stated in the first paragraph, but many experienced writers do not follow this rule. Have students look for Morrison's thesis in the second paragraph. Then, ask students to write a paragraph each in answer to the following questions:

- What is Morrison's thesis in this essay? What arguments does she use to support her thesis?
- How does the focus of the rest of the essay shift in the third paragraph? Why does it shift?

Remind students that their answers should be supported by evidence from Morrison's essay. After students have finished writing, ask for volunteers to share their paragraphs with the class.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which of Morrison's ideas about novels did you find most interesting? Explain.
2. (a)According to Morrison, what event and what class of people caused the birth of the novel as a literary form? (b)Why was the novel of manners important to that class at that time?
3. (a)What did music provide for African Americans in times past? (b)Why do African Americans need novels at the present time?
4. (a)According to Morrison, what specific qualities should an African American novel have? (b)Explain Morrison's comparison between the novel and an African American preacher.

Analyze and Evaluate

5. How well do novels help readers "distinguish between the good guys and the bad guys"?
6. Why does Morrison include a chorus in her novels?
7. Morrison says that a novel should present problems but need not solve them. Do you agree or disagree with this statement? Why?

Connect

8. Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions In what ways does Morrison extend the traditions of "Black art" in her novels?
9. Connect to the Author Artists often debate the role politics or social movements should play within a work of literature. Would you call Morrison's work a kind of art that makes a statement? Explain.

Literary Element Essay

A formal essay may sound like a dignified speech. An informal essay, however, has a lighter tone and often sounds like a conversation. Moreover, an informal essay may even contain sentence fragments and informal language.

1. Find examples of sentence fragments and informal language in Morrison's essay.
2. What does the use of sentence fragments and informal language contribute to the overall tone of this essay?

Review: Parallelism

As you learned on page 401, parallelism is the use of a series of words, phrases, or sentences that have a similar grammatical form. In "Thoughts on the African-American Novel," Morrison often uses this technique, as in the following example:

"to stand up and to weep and to cry and to accede or to change and to modify . . . "

Partner Activity With a classmate, look for additional examples of parallelism in Morrison's essay. List them on a chart and discuss how they reinforce Morrison's central message. Share your list with the rest of your class.

Example of Parallelism	Effect
"it is not a case study, it is not a recipe"

Literary Element

1. "In the same . . . a response from the audience"; "And owns it." "To construct . . . it is heard"; "To use . . . chorus"; "The real . . . chorus"; "Meaning the community . . . ahead."
2. Their use makes the tone more conversational.

Review: Parallelism

Example: "something in it that enlightens; something in it that opens . . . Something in it that suggests . . ."

Progress Check

Can students analyze an essay?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 316.

After You Read

Assess

1. Answers should demonstrate understanding of the essay.
2. (a) The industrial revolution; the subsequent rise of the middle class (b) It taught middle-class people how to behave, distinguish good from bad, get married, identify a good living, and know the consequences of "straying from the fold."
3. (a) Music provided an art form through which they could express emotions and ease daily stress. (b) Their music has been adopted by other cultures, leaving them without a unique art form.
4. (a) The novel should be beautiful, powerful, enlightening, and able to elicit deep reader responses. (b) Both demand emotional responses from their audience.
5. Novels present examples of good and evil for readers to recognize and correlate to people and events in their own lives.
6. The chorus acts as a larger community— readers at large, or even nature itself—that can comment on the action.
7. Students may say that a writer's job is to present the reader with a view of reality. Since real-life problems often go unresolved, they need not be resolved in a novel.
8. Her language is effective for reading both silently and aloud, her narrator is felt but not identified, and her chorus comments on the action.
9. Morrison describes her work as "Black" art, so it does function somewhat as a statement.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. D is the correct answer because Morrison says, "I don't like to find my books condemned as bad or praised as good, when that condemnation or praise is based on criteria from other paradigms."

Writing

Use these criteria when evaluating students' writing:

- Does the writer employ parallelism?
- Does the writer effectively defend his or her thesis?

For grammar practice, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 320.

Reading Strategy Determine Main Ideas and Supporting Details

ACT Skills Practice

1. What does Morrison find disappointing in some criticism of her work?
   - A. The lack of recognition for her achievements
   - B. The focus on what is left out rather than on what is there
   - C. The comparison of her works with Black art and music
   - D. The application of inappropriate standards to her writing

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Parts Use a printed or online dictionary to find the meaning of each vocabulary word's root and any prefixes or suffixes in the word. List the meanings in a diagram like the one shown. Then find three new words that contain the same prefix, suffix, or root as the vocabulary word. Circle the word part that could help a person guess each new word's meaning.

aristocracy	exclusively	enlighten meandering	unorthodox

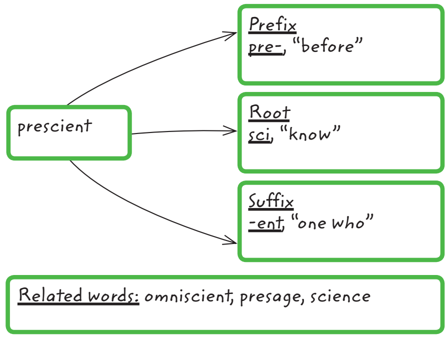
EXAMPLE:



Write with Style

Apply Parallelism

Assignment In this essay, Morrison explains what she hopes to accomplish through her novels and describes some of the techniques she uses. Think about an aspect of your life, such as a decision, behavior, or opinion that others might not understand. Write a brief essay describing and defending your intentions and motivations. Use parallelism, as Morrison does, to reinforce your main idea.

Get Ideas Brainstorm ideas on your own and ask peers or family members for suggestions. After choosing your topic, make an outline for your essay. Your outline should include your main idea, as well as a list of supporting details, such as your reasons for acting a certain way.

Give It Structure Begin with a sentence stating your main idea, or thesis. Follow with sentences supporting the thesis, using your outline as a guide. Finish with a sentence restating your main idea.

Look at Language Keep in mind that the purpose of parallelism is to structure a series of words, phrases, or sentences in a similar grammatical form in order to emphasize an idea. Examine your supporting sentences. Do they include parallelism that supports your thesis? Highlight the repeated words and phrases to evaluate your use of parallelism. If your highlighting is sparse, revise some of your sentences to strengthen the parallelism.

EXAMPLE:

Topic: Defending a decision to join the art club, even though some people think it's not practical.

It was my choice to paint, my choice to kindle my creativity, my choice to stroll through fields of color and shape and size. You can say it's a waste of time, it's a joke. And I say it's my life, my choice. Mine.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Vocabulary

aristocracy: Prefix: (none); Root: aristo, "best"; Suffix: -crat, "strength, might;" -y, "state of"; Related words: aristocrat, democracy exclusively: Prefix: ex-, "out"; Root: clu (part of claudere), "to close, shut"; Suffix: -ive, "performing or tending toward;" -ly, "having the characteristics of"; Related words: inclusive, conclude, closure, derisively enlighten: Prefix: en-, "to cause to be in"; Root: light, "light"; Suffix: -en (suffix that forms a verb); Related words: enchant, delight, soften meandering: Prefix: (none); Root: maeander (Latin word derived from name of Menderes River); Suffix: -ing (suffix added to a verb); Related words: meander, running unorthodox: Prefix: un-, "not;" ortho-, "straight, right"; Root: dox, "belief, opinion"; Suffix: (none); Related words: uneasy, orthodox

For additional vocabulary practice, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Vocabulary Workshop

Noun Suffixes

Literature Connection You may recognize the word information without realizing that it is a noun formed from a verb.

> "But new information has got to get out, and there are several ways to do it."
>
> —Toni Morrison, from "Thoughts on the African-American Novel"

The suffix -ation turns the verb inform into a noun. Noun suffixes change nouns into new nouns and other parts of speech into nouns. Knowing noun suffixes can help you determine the meaning of unfamiliar words.

Common Noun Suffixes

Suffix	Meaning	Base word or word root	Example
-ee	receiver of action	train	trainee
-ance, -ence	state, quality	relevant persist	relevance persistence
-ant, -eer	agent, doer	contest puppet	contestant puppeteer
-ist, -tist	one who does, makes, or studies	cycle drama geology	cyclist dramatist geologist
-ment	result, condition	accomplish	accomplishment
-ness	action, state	bright	brightness
-tion, -ion	the act of	prosecute	prosecution

- When you see a noun, determine whether it has a noun suffix.
  Morrison feels disappointment about some critics' reactions.
- When a noun has a suffix, identify the root or base word.
  Morrison wants her readers to participate in her novels. The participation of readers adds a new dimension to the books.

Practice From the table above, choose a suffix that changes each word below to a noun. Write each complete word. (A final letter in a base word may be dropped before a suffix is added. A y at the end of a word may change to i.)

1. considerate
2. celebrate
3. accomplish
4. punctuate
5. novel
6. congregate
7. descend
8. fragrant
9. construct
10. kind

Learning Objectives

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Vocabulary: Using suffixes to form nouns.

Suffixes

A suffix is a word part that is added to the end of a word. A noun suffix is a word part that, when added to a noun or another part of speech, changes the noun to a new noun and the other part of speech to a noun.

Vocabulary Terms

Suffixes are word parts that are added to the ends of words to create new words.

Tip

When you are asked for the meaning of a word that contains a suffix, think about the meaning of the word root or base word. If you are unsure of its meaning, try to think of other words that contain the same root or base word.

Literature Online

Vocabulary For more vocabulary practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Focus

Point out the example words in the chart, and explain that each word combines a base or root word and a suffix. Ask students to figure out the meaning of each example word.

Teach

Suffixes Remind students that they can also use knowledge of noun suffixes to build meaning even when they don't recognize the root word. In other words, knowing that a word acts as a noun is a clue to meaning, which can be combined with context to build a definition.

Assess

Practice

1. consideration
2. celebration
3. accomplishment
4. punctuation
5. novelist
6. congregation
7. descendant
8. fragrance
9. construction
10. kindness

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Remind students of the definition of suffix and illustrate how suffixes can be used to form nouns from verbs, using the word inflate as an example. (inflation) Then write the following verbs and suffixes on the board and ask students to create nouns by choosing a suffix and adding it to each verb. Explain that more than one word may be created in many cases. Tell students that they may use a dictionary if they are unsure of the spelling.

Verb	Suffix
integrate	-ment
employ	-ion or -tion
resist	-or, -er, -ee
borrow	-ance, -ence

(integration or integrator; employee or employer or employment; resistance or resister; borrower)

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 120

Or ask: Why have visual media become so important to modern communication? As they read, students should consider how visual media interact with written communication.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Science Fiction Ask: How do superheroes reflect science fiction elements? (They have superhuman qualities that could result from improved science or technology.)

View the Art

Joe Shuster worked with writer Jerry Siegal to create the comic book icon Superman. The two men received only a delayed reward for their genius, having first sold the rights for just $130.

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 323–324.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1316–1317

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Reading:
Analyzing cultural context.
Analyzing literary periods.
Evaluating historical influences.

From Comic Strips to Graphic Novels

One of the United States' most popular and influential contributions to world culture has been the comic strip and its later development, the comic book. Among the many forerunners of the comic form was the dime novel, cheaply-made tabloids which usually featured rugged frontiersmen, romantic heroines, or hardened detectives. Often displaying lurid covers that anticipated comic books and pulp fiction, these pocket-sized publications sold by the millions in the years after the Civil War. Newspaper comic strips first appeared in the mid-1890s, largely as a result of fierce competition for readers between big New York City dailies. From the very beginning, comic strips reflected a wide variety of approaches to subject matter and graphic style, ranging from the rough urban slapstick of The Yellow Kid to the elaborate graphic fancies of Little Nemo in Slumberland.

The Golden Age of Comics

The first comic books were reprints of popular newspaper comic strips. However, growing demand prompted comic book publishers to create original stories. The comic book business received a boost in June of 1938 with the arrival of Superman in Action Comics #1, published by DC Comics. The Man of 1 Steel was soon followed by Batman, Wonder Woman, Captain America, Plastic Man, and a host of others. During World War II, these costumed fighters battled enemies of the U.S., and they have remained in popular culture ever since. The period from 1938 to the early 1950s is often referred to as the Golden Age of Comics because of the surge in production and sales.

> "A comic artist begins with a white sheet of paper and dreams up his whole business—he is playwright, director, editor, and artist at once."
>
> —Alex Raymond, creator of Flash Gordon

Action Comics No. 1, Joe Shuster, 1938. Comic book.

Reading Practice

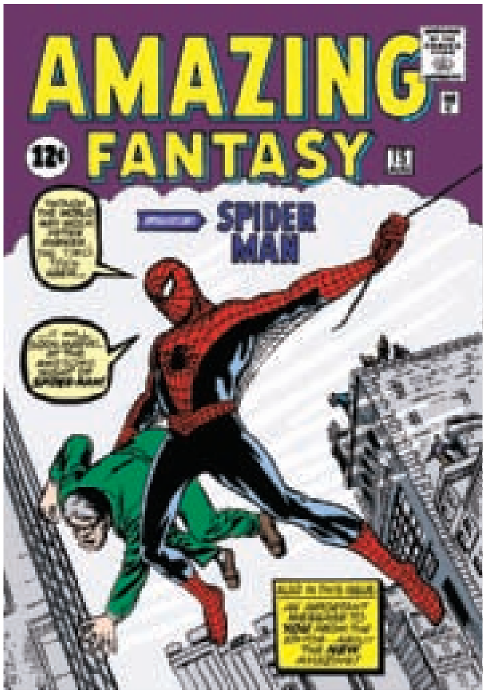
Characterization Explain that because comic strips and graphic novels have little dialogue, creators use visual means to create character. Rather than describing a character's actions, they show them. Rather than describing how others react to a character, they show these reactions. Ask students to examine the image on page 1316 and describe the visual characterization of Superman. (Superman is incredibly strong and daring. He amazes other people.)

Backlash and Recovery

In the conservative climate of the early 1950s, comic books came under attack. Critics, such as psychiatrist Fredric Wertham, author of Seduction of the Innocent, claimed that comics were far too sexual and violent, attacked authority, and destroyed a young person's taste for literature. The comic book industry responded by instituting self-censorship in the form of a set of guidelines known as the Comic Code. The result was bland comic books. During the later 1950s, a new generation of thoughtful, yet flawed superheroes, such as Spider-Man, helped restore the vigor and popularity of comic books. The period from the 1950s to the early 1970s is often called the Silver Age of Comics, marked by a rise in more complicated plots made popular by Marvel Comics. The "underground" comics movement also originated as a subversive alternative to the mainstream comic industry. Reflecting the spirit of the 1960s, underground comics scorned traditional values and celebrated artistic experimentation.

Graphic Novels

Graphic novel is a term loosely applied to any lengthy story in comic book form. Comic book pioneer Will Eisner popularized the term in the late 1970s with his work A Contract with God, and Other Tenement Stories. Since then it has been applied to an extraordinarily broad range of comic book stories. The most widely acclaimed graphic novel is Art Spiegelman's Maus (see page 998), in which he uses a comic book format and animal characters to present his father's experiences during the Holocaust. Spiegelman received a Pulitzer Prize for Maus in 1992. Other well known graphic novels include Daniel Clowes's Ghost World, Frank Miller's Sin City, and Chris Ware's Jimmy Corrigan: The Smartest Kid on Earth. Some critics see the graphic novel as representing a new direction for the visual artform.



Amazing Fantasy, No. 15, Jack Kirby and Steve Ditko, 1962. Comic book. ★

Comic book artist Eddie Campbell, who collaborated with writer Alan Moore on the graphic novel From Hell, says the goal is "to take the form of the comic book, which has become an embarrassment, and raise it to a more ambitious and meaningful level." 2

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about comic strips and graphic novels, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Respond and Think Critically

1. Why do you think superheroes became so popular during the 1930s and 1940s?
2. How does a graphic novel differ from a comic book?
3. Do you think that comic books and graphic novels are a true art form? Explain.

Teach

Big Idea 2

Extending and Remaking Traditions Explain to students that graphic novels often address serious subjects and thus blend the characteristics of the full-length novel with those of the more lighthearted comic book. Ask: How does blending traditions extend the appeal of a genre? (Blended traditions may appeal to those persons initially interested only in one tradition and introduce them to a new art form.)

View the Art ★

Jack Kirby has created some of America's best-known comic superheroes, including Spiderman, as shown here. Kirby's work pushed the comic art genre many steps into the future with new elements such as a book-length format.

Assess

1. The powerful heroes appealed to people struggling with the complex problems of economic depression and global war.
2. A graphic novel is usually longer than a comic book and presents a single, unified story. Graphic novels often deal with more serious subject matter than comic books do.
3. Students' opinions will vary. Students should discuss the artistic merit of comic books and graphic novels.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Point out that graphic images and words depend on each other in comic books and graphic novels. Words can add information the image does not provide, or remind the reader of something going on outside the frame. Words can also reinforce the image by verbalizing the sound of a gesture such as POW! Ask: Look at the image on page 1316 and write two different sentences that would give different meanings to the picture. (Possible answers: Superman is saying, "Take cover. This car is about to blow!" Superman is saying, "You crooks thought you could get away! We'll see about that.")

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 74

Daily Language Practice Transparency 121

Or invite students to share a family story about a pivotal moment, such as a childhood illness, a missed airplane flight, or a relocation. Ask: What happens to stories when they are told over and over? (Details may change; the story may become a myth.) How do such stories help people deal with emotional experiences? (They make the experience into a story that could happen to other people.)

As they read, have students consider how people use stories to cope with tragedy and struggle.

Before You Read

Nineteen Thirty-Seven

Meet Edwidge Danticat
(born 1969)

Born in Haiti, Edwidge Danticat (ed wēj´ dän tē kä´) was a young child when her parents immigrated to New York City. Her parents planned to work hard, save money, and then send for their children. Meanwhile, Danticat was raised by her aunt in a poor neighborhood of the Haitian capital, Port-au-Prince. During her childhood, Danticat asked for a number of gifts from her mother in America, and her mother did her best to oblige. Many of the presents never arrived, including a Barbie doll, gold earrings, and a gold chain. But one gift did reach her—a manual typewriter with black and red ribbons. A writer's career was underway.

> "I write to unearth all those things that scare me, to reach those places in my soul that may seem remote and dark to others."
>
> —Edwidge Danticat

Haitian Roots "While I was growing up, most of the writers I knew were either in hiding, missing, or dead," Danticat says. "We were living under the brutal Duvalier dictatorship in Haiti, and silence was the law of the land." Furthermore, writing was not considered a useful or proper career for a young woman. "Writing was as forbidden as dark rouge on the cheeks or a first date before eighteen," she once wrote. But Danticat, who had written her first story when she was nine, put her typewriter to good use. She typed letters for relatives and neighbors—and learned a lot about life in the process. "They would dictate their most intimate thoughts, forgetting that I was only ten years old."

Danticat was happily reunited with her parents in New York when she was twelve. At first, however, her new life in Brooklyn was an ordeal. Classmates teased her because of her clothing and called her a "boat person." Fluent only in Haitian Creole (based on French), she had to learn English as a second language. "It was like being a baby—learning everything for the first time," Danticat recalls.

Eight Million Stories Danticat excelled in high school and went on to major in French literature at Barnard College. She briefly considered a career in business but returned instead to her first love: the telling of stories. In 1993, when she was twenty-four, she received a master of fine arts degree from Brown University. Her first novel, Breath, Eyes, Memory, was published the following year. The story of a young Haitian girl who joins her mother in New York City, it echoes Danticat's own life story. The short-story collection Krik? Krak! followed the year after and was nominated for a National Book Award. Then, in 1998, Oprah Winfrey announced that she had selected Breath, Eyes, Memory for her book club. The novel became a number-one best seller, and its author became an instant celebrity.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Edwidge Danticat, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

Nineteen Thirty-Seven

Literary Elements
- Magic Realism (SE pp. 1319, 1320, 1324, 1326, 1327, 1329)
- Style (SE p. 1329)
- Foreshadowing (TE p. 1322)

Reading Skills
- Visualize (SE pp. 1319, 1321, 1322, 1325, 1326, 1329)
- Compare and Contrast (TE p. 1320)
- Question (TE p. 1326)

Vocabulary Skills
- Antonyms (SE pp. 1319, 1329)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 1329)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Short Story (SE p. 1330)
- Passive and Active Voice (SE p. 1330)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 1327)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

How can bad experiences sometimes make a person stronger? Freewrite for several minutes about a time when you or someone you know grew stronger through a difficult challenge.

Build Background

"Nineteen Thirty-Seven" is set in Haiti in the 1950s or 1960s. Haiti is an impoverished Caribbean nation occupying the western third of the island of Hispaniola. The eastern part of the island makes up the Spanish-speaking Dominican Republic. The title of the story refers to a historical event that occurred in 1937. In that year, the Dominican dictator Rafael Trujillo authorized the massacre of thousands of Haitian immigrants, who had come across the border to work. Many of the victims fell on the banks of the Río Masacre (Massacre River), which separates the two countries.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions

In recent years, American authors from diverse backgrounds have infused literature with fresh subject matter and new approaches. As you read, ask yourself, What does Danticat choose to write about and how does she approach her subject?

Literary Element Magic Realism

Magic realism is a literary style in which the writer combines realistic settings, characters, dialogue, and other details with elements that are magical, supernatural, or fantastic. As you read, ask yourself, How does Danticat's narrative blend together the believable with the impossible?

Reading Strategy Visualize

"Nineteen Thirty-Seven" describes many extraordinary images and events. Using your imagination to picture these descriptions—a process known as visualizing—will help you better understand and remember the story. As you read, ask yourself, What does each scene look like?

Tip: "Watch" the Action Reading a story can be like watching a movie when you visualize the action.

- Notice the details: Authors often include precise physical information about people and places.
- Imagine the scene: How many characters are present? Where are they? What are they doing?

Learning Objectives

For pages 1318–1329

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Understanding magical realism.

Reading: Visualizing.

Vocabulary

grimace (gri´ məs) v. to contort the face, especially to express pain or displeasure; p. 1321 I saw him grimace after his poor performance.

delirium (di lēr´ ē əm) n. a temporary state of mental disturbance characterized by confusion and disorientation; p. 1325 In her delirium, the old lady believed that she was a little girl again.

console (kən sōl´) v. to comfort; to cheer; p. 1325 Nothing could console Hong when her puppy died.

rejuvenated (ri jo͞o´ və nāt´ əd) adj. restored to youthful vigor or appearance; renewed; p. 1326 She appeared rejuvenated after her summer vacation.

balmy (bä´ mē) adj. soothing; p. 1327 A balmy spring breeze made us forget the long winter.

Tip: Antonyms An antonym is a word that has a meaning opposite to that of another word. Note that anonyms are always the same part of speech. An antonym for console, for example, is depress.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Discuss with students the fact that the story they are about to read includes events that are difficult to believe, but for different reasons. Some events are so senseless and brutal that they are hard to believe. Other events seem to be magical. This fact may make decoding of words more difficult because readers may not trust their reading when sentences sound fantastic. Have students make a list to keep track of the two types of details that may sound unbelievable. Model such a list for students.

Illogical	Magical
Trujillo ordered the massacre of Haitians	Madonna (statue) cried
Women were accused of having wings of flame	She thought the tear meant her mother had died

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Josephine's mother, Manman, has been wrongfully convicted of murdering a child. In 1937, Manman escaped a brutal massacre of Haitian refugees by Dominican soldiers. Superstitious Haitians fear the survivors of that massacre, believing they escaped on "wings of flame." They are often accused of sending their spirits to kill children. On a final visit, Josephine asks, "Did you fly?" Manman gives a cryptic answer. Not long after, Manman is killed. Josephine realizes the truth: the survivors had been so covered by blood, they appeared to have wings of flame.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources, pp. 325–330.

Vocabulary

Antonyms Remind students that an antonym has the opposite meaning of another word. After pointing out that antonyms must be the same part of speech, say: Think of an antonym for each of the five vocabulary words. (grimace, smile; delirium, sanity; console, sadden; rejuvenated, aged; balmy, harsh)

Teach

Big Idea 1

Extending and Remaking Traditions Say: Keep these questions in mind as you read: How does Edwidge Danticat show tradition in her story? (She shows how traditional beliefs or superstitions govern action in Haiti.) What does her story bring to the traditions of American literature? (It brings magic, color, and the vivid setting of Haiti.)

Literary Element 2

Magic Realism Answer: Students will become aware of the magical and unrealistic element in the statue's crying.

Cultural History ☆

Haiti Almost everyone in Haiti has ancestors who were African slaves. Haiti was once a colony of France; its economy was built on a plantation system that required a large labor force. At one time, there were 500,000 slaves out of a total population just more than 550,000.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 5
DRP: 54
Lexile: 900

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 331–337.

NINETEEN THIRTY-SEVEN

1937

Edwidge Danticat

1 My Madonna[1] cried. A miniature teardrop traveled down her white porcelain face, like dew on the tip of early morning grass. When I saw the tear I thought, surely, that my mother had died. I sat motionless observing the Madonna the whole day. It did not shed another tear. I remained in the rocking chair until it was nightfall, my bones aching from the thought of another trip to the prison in Port-au-Prince.[2] But, of course, I had to go.

The roads to the city were covered with sharp pebbles only half buried in the thick dust. I chose to go barefoot, as my mother had always done on her visits to the Massacre River, the ☆ river separating Haiti from the Spanish-speaking country that she had never allowed me to name because I had been born on the night that El Generalissimo, Dios Trujillo,[3] the honorable chief of state, had ordered the massacre of all Haitians living there.

The sun was just rising when I got to the capital. The first city person I saw was an old woman carrying a jar full of leeches.[4] Her gaze was glued to the Madonna tucked under my arm.

"May I see it?" she asked.

I held out the small statue that had been owned by my family ever since it was given to my great-great-great-grandmother Défilé by a French man who had kept her as a slave.

The old woman's index finger trembled as it moved toward the Madonna's head. She closed her eyes at the moment of contact, her wrists shaking.

"Where are you from?" she asked. She had layers of 'respectable' wrinkles on her face, the kind my mother might also have one day, if she has a chance to survive.

"I am from Ville Rose," I said, "the city of painters and poets, the coffee city, with beaches where the sand is either black or white, but never mixed together, where the fields are endless and sometimes the cows are yellow like cornmeal."

The woman put the jar of leeches under her arm to keep them out of the sun.

"You're here to see a prisoner?" she asked.

"Yes."

"I know where you can buy some very good food for this person."

She led me by the hand to a small alley where a girl was selling fried pork and plantains

2 Magic Realism How do you react to the narrator's statement that the Madonna cried?

---

[1] A Madonna is a representation of the Virgin Mary, the mother of Jesus Christ.

[2] The capital city and main port in Haiti is Port-au-Prince (port′ ō prins′).

[3] General Rafael Leónidas Trujillo Molina (rä fä′ el lā ō′ nē däs trōō hē′ yō mō lē′ nä), the tyrannical dictator of the Dominican Republic from 1930 until his assassination in 1961, was responsible for the deaths of thousands of Haitians living in the Dominican Republic in 1937.

[4] Leeches are bloodsucking worms once thought to cure illness by sucking out "bad" blood.

Reading Practice

Compare and Contrast Point out to students that the concept of flight is used in three different ways in this story. Remind students that the term flight can refer to the act of fleeing as well as the act of flying. Ask: A prison is a place from which people would want to flee. What other places, people, or events mentioned so far in the story would people want to flee? (massacre, "the Spanish-speaking country," cages, guards) Ask students to create three-column charts, with the headings Escape, Flying, and Spiritual Uplift. Have them fill in the charts as they continue to read with examples of the way flight is used in the story.

wrapped in brown paper. I bought some meat for my mother after asking the cook to fry it once more and then sprinkle it with spiced cabbage.

The yellow prison building was like a fort, as large and strong as in the days when it was used by the American marines[5] who had built it. The Americans taught us how to build prisons. By the end of the 1915 occupation, the police in the city really knew how to hold human beings trapped in cages, even women like Manman[6] who was accused of having wings of flame.

The prison yard was quiet as a cave when a young Haitian guard escorted me there to wait. The smell of the fried pork mixed with that of urine and excrement was almost unbearable. I sat on a pile of bricks, trying to keep the Madonna from sliding through my fingers. I dug my buttocks farther into the bricks, hoping perhaps that my body might sink down to the ground and disappear before my mother emerged as a ghost to greet me.

The other prisoners had not yet woken up. All the better, for I did not want to see them, these bone-thin women with shorn[7] heads, carrying clumps of their hair in their bare hands, as they sought the few rays of sunshine that they were allowed each day.

My mother had grown even thinner since the last time I had seen her. Her face looked like the gray of a late evening sky. These days, her skin barely clung to her bones, falling in layers, flaps, on her face and neck. The prison guards watched her more closely because they thought that the wrinkles resulted from her taking off her skin at night and then putting it back on in a hurry, before sunrise. This was why Manman's sentence had been extended to life. And when she died, her remains were to be burnt in the prison yard, to prevent her spirit from wandering into any young innocent bodies.

I held out the fried pork and plantains to her. She uncovered the food and took a peek before grimacing, as though the sight of the meat nauseated her. Still she took it and put it in a deep pocket in a very loose fitting white dress that she had made herself from the cloth that I had brought her on my last visit.

I said nothing. Ever since the morning of her arrest, I had not been able to say anything to her. It was as though I became mute the moment I stepped into the prison yard. 5 Sometimes I wanted to speak, yet I was not able to open my mouth or raise my tongue. I wondered if she saw my struggle in my eyes.

Visual Vocabulary
A plantain (plan′ tən) is a starchy tropical fruit that resembles a banana.

She pointed at the Madonna in my hands, opening her arms to receive it. I quickly handed her the statue. She smiled. Her teeth were a dark red, as though caked with blood from the initial beating during her arrest. At times, she seemed happier to see the Madonna than she was to see me.

She rubbed the space under the Madonna's eyes, then tasted her fingertips, the way a person tests for salt in salt water.

"Has she cried?" Her voice was hoarse from lack of use. With every visit, it seemed to get worse and worse. I was afraid that one day, like me, she would not be able to say anything at all.

I nodded, raising my index finger to show that the Madonna had cried a single tear. She pressed the statue against her chest as if to

---

[5] Following years of political instability in Haiti, the United States Marines occupied the country from 1915 to 1934.

[6] Manman (mä män′) is a Creole word meaning "mother."

[7] Shorn, the past participle of shear, means "clipped" or "shaved."

3 Extending and Remaking Traditions What does this paragraph suggest about the Haitian government?

4 Visualize How are these wrinkles different from the "respectable" wrinkles that the old woman with the leeches had?

Vocabulary

grimace (gri′ məs) v. to contort the face, especially to express pain or displeasure

Teach

Big Idea 3

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: It suggests that the government is abusing its ability to jail people, imprisoning many people while doing little to help those outside prison.

Reading Strategy 4

Visualize Answer: Manman's wrinkles are caused by illness, malnutrition, and abuse.

Literary Element 5

Magic Realism Ask: Is the narrator's inability to speak realistic? Explain. (Students may say yes; she does not know what to say to bring joy to her mother and does not want to hear details of her mother's treatment. It is too painful.)

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Real Events Although the story's title refers to a historical event, the characters and plot are fictional. Some of the story's events are realistic, while others are magical or bizarre. Have advanced students record three events from the story that they think actually occurred. To help, have them complete charts like this one.

Historical Event	Details

Then have them use the Internet or library to research whether those events did take place in real life. Have them find additional details describing the events and share their findings with the class.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Inferences Point out the repeated reference to Manman's shaved head. Ask: What can you infer from this repetition? (The shaving has some importance to the story.) Encourage students to watch for other references to hair or shaving as they read.

Reading Strategy 2

Visualize Answer: Answers will vary. Students may notice Josephine's awkwardness and desire to please her mother. They may notice the mother's exhaustion and illness as she tries to force a brave smile for her daughter.

Reading Strategy 3

Visualize Answer: The mob believes the mother is responsible for the death of the baby.

Cultural History ☆

Witches Haitians are among many cultures that identify people as witches. Often, these were women believed to possess supernatural abilities to control people. In the United States, this belief took its greatest shape in the Salem witch trials of 1692. The trials have been traced to stories told by a West Indian (Caribbean) slave.

reward the Madonna and then, suddenly, broke down and began sobbing herself.

I reached over and patted her back, the way one burps a baby. She continued to sob until a guard came and nudged her, poking the barrel of his rifle into her side. She raised her head, keeping the Madonna lodged against her chest as she forced a brave smile.

1 "They have not treated me badly," she said. She smoothed her hands over her bald head, from her forehead to the back of her neck. The guards shaved her head every week. And before the women went to sleep, the guards made them throw tin cups of cold water at one another so that their bodies would not be able to muster up enough heat to grow those wings made of flames, fly away in the middle of the night, slip into the slumber of innocent children and steal their breath.

Manman pulled the meat and plantains out of her pocket and started eating a piece to fill the silence. Her normal ration of food in the prison was bread and water, which is why she was losing weight so rapidly.

"Sometimes the food you bring me, it lasts for months at a time," she said. "I chew it and swallow my saliva, then I put it away and then chew it again. It lasts a very long time this way."

A few of the other women prisoners walked out into the yard, their chins nearly touching their chests, their shaved heads sunk low on bowed necks. Some had large boils on their heads. One, drawn by the fresh smell of fried pork, came to sit near us and began pulling the scabs from the bruises on her scalp, a line of blood dripping down her back.

All of these women were here for the same reason. They were said to have been seen at night rising from the ground like birds on fire. A loved one, a friend, or a neighbor had accused them of causing the death of a child. A few other people agreeing with these stories was all that was needed to have them arrested. And sometimes even killed.

I remembered so clearly the day Manman was arrested. We were new to the city and had been sleeping on a cot at a friend's house. The friend had a sick baby who was suffering with colic. Every once in a while, Manman would wake up to look after the child when the mother was so tired that she no longer heard her son's cries.

One morning when I woke up, Manman was gone. There was the sound of a crowd outside. When I rushed out I saw a group of people taking my mother away. Her face was bleeding from the pounding blows of rocks and sticks and the fists of strangers. She was being pulled along by two policemen, each tugging at one of her arms as she dragged her feet. The woman we had been staying with carried her dead son by the legs. The policemen made no efforts to stop the mob that was beating my mother.

"Lougarou,[8] witch, criminal!" they shouted. ☆

> "Lougarou, witch, criminal!" they shouted.

I dashed into the street, trying to free Manman from the crowd. I wasn't even able to get near her.

I followed her cries to the prison. Her face was swollen to three times the size that it had been. She had to drag herself across the clay floor on her belly when I saw her in the prison cell. She was like a snake, someone with no bones left in her body. I was there watching when they shaved her head for the first time. At first I thought they were doing it so that the open gashes on her scalp could heal.

---

[8] The Creole word lougarou (lo͞o′ gä ro͞o′) means "witch" or "a follower of evil."

2 Visualize How do you visualize the scene as the narrator and her mother are reunited?

Visualize Visualize the events described in this paragraph. Why is the mob beating the mother? 3

Reading Practice

Foreshadowing Point out the description of the imprisoned women in the paragraph beginning with the words "All of these women" on page 1322 as "rising from the ground like birds on fire." Then remind students that foreshadowing means events or images that hint at later events. Ask: How might the simile "like birds on fire" be foreshadowing? (The simile is a clue to a key event that will be clear later in the story.) Ask students to think about what that event might be. (The bird's flight might foreshadow Manman's escape or death.)

1937: Grandmother Told Me That the Massacre River Was Bloody, c. 1975. Ernst Prophete. Oil on masonite, 20 x 24 in. Collection of Jonathan Demme. ★

Later, when I saw all the other women in the yard, I realized that they wanted to make them look like crows, like men.

Now, Manman sat with the Madonna pressed against her chest, her eyes staring ahead, as though she was looking into the future. She had never talked very much about the future. She had always believed more in the past.

When I was five years old, we went on a pilgrimage to the Massacre River, which I had expected to be still crimson with blood, but which was as clear as any water that I had ever seen. Manman had taken my hand and pushed it into the river, no farther than my wrist. When we dipped our hands, I thought that the dead would reach out and haul us in, but only our own faces stared back at us, one indistinguishable from the other.

With our hands in the water, Manman spoke to the sun. "Here is my child, Josephine. We were saved from the tomb of this river when she was still in my womb. You spared us both, her and me, from this river where I lost my mother."

My mother had escaped El Generalissimo's soldiers, leaving her own mother behind. From the Haitian side of the river, she could still see the soldiers chopping up her mother's body and throwing it into the river along with many others.

We went to the river many times as I was growing up. Every year my mother would invite a few more women who had also lost their mothers there.

Until we moved to the city, we went to the river every year on the first of November.[9] The women would all dress in white. My mother would hold my hand tightly as we walked toward the water. We were all daughters of that river, which had taken our mothers from us. Our mothers were the ashes and we were the light. Our mothers were the embers and we were the sparks. Our mothers were the flames and we were the blaze. We came from the bottom of that river where the blood never stops flowing, where my mother's dive toward life—her swim among all those bodies slaughtered in flight—gave her those [9] On November 1, Haitians celebrate La Toussaint (lä too' sän), or All Saints' Day, as a national holiday. The day is also a Roman Catholic holy day commemorating all Catholic saints.

---

4 Extending and Remaking Traditions Why does the author include these details?

Extending and Remaking Traditions In making so many references to light and fire, what is the narrator suggesting about these women? 5

Teach

Big Idea 4

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: The author may have included these details to show the cruel tactics that guards used to humiliate the prisoners.

Big Idea 5

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: The women have brightness and heat in their spirits that cannot be extinguished.

View the Art ★

This painting is in film director Jonathan Demme's collection. Demme, whose wife is a painter, discovered Haitian art by chance on a walk one day. He has lobbied for its acceptance among American art collectors. Demme has also become an advocate of political support for Haitian refugees.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Discuss with students how "Nineteen Thirty-Seven" incorporates important past events into a narrative taking place in the present. Key words alert the reader to the sequence of events. Point out an example on page 1322. When the narrator remembers the day of her mother's arrest, the key words signaling that the narrator is going back in her memory are "I remembered so clearly. . . ." Point out that "now," in "Now, Manman sat with the Madonna pressed against her chest . . ." signals the return to the present. Tell students to look for other key words that signal the transition between the past and the present as they read.

Established Discuss how the narrator's memories present important information. Ask: What do we learn from her memory of her mother's arrest? (We learn that people's beliefs in witches led them to beat and imprison the accused.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Inferences Ask: When Manman says, “At least you came out at the right moment to take my mother’s place,” what does she mean? How do you think Manman felt about the night of her escape? (Manman lost her mother in the river while they were escaping the soldiers, but she gave birth to Josephine after she safely emerges on the other side of the river. Despite the tragedy of losing her mother in the river, Manman is grateful that she did not also lose her baby that night.)

Literary Element 2

Magic Realism Answer: The Madonna’s “perfect” tears are symbolic of people’s need for faith and strength.

Family in Interior. Poisson. Haitian Folk Art.

wings of flames. The river was the place where it had all begun.

1 “At least I gave birth to my daughter on the night that my mother was taken from me,” she would say. “At least you came out at the right moment to take my mother’s place.”

* * *

Now in the prison yard, my mother was trying to avoid the eyes of the guard peering down at her.

“One day I will tell you the secret of how the Madonna cries,” she said.

I reached over and touched the scabs on her fingers. She handed me back the Madonna.

I know how the Madonna cries. I have watched from hiding how my mother plans weeks in advance for it to happen. She would put a thin layer of wax and oil in the hollow space of the Madonna’s eyes and when the wax melted, the oil would roll down the little face shedding a more perfect tear than either she and I could ever cry.

2 Magic Realism If Josephine knows that the tears are not real, why does she still think that they are important?

“You go. Let me watch you leave,” she said, sitting stiffly.

I kissed her on the cheek and tried to embrace her, but she quickly pushed me away.

“You will please visit me again soon,” she said.

I nodded my head yes.

“Let your flight be joyful,” she said, “and mine too.”

I nodded and then ran out of the yard, fleeing before I could flood the front of my dress with my tears. There had been too much crying already.

* * *

Manman had a cough the next time I visited her. She sat in a corner of the yard, and as she trembled in the sun, she clung to the Madonna.

“The sun can no longer warm God’s creatures,” she said. “What has this world come to when the sun can no longer warm God’s creatures?”

I wanted to wrap my body around hers, but I knew she would not let me.

“God only knows what I have got under my skin from being here. I may die of tuberculosis, or perhaps there are worms right now eating me inside.”

Reading Practice

Make Connections Have students look at the charts they made listing images of escape, flying, and spiritual uplift (Reading Practice, p. 1320). Say: Identify places in the story where the narrator refers to people taking flight. (The imprisoned women “rising from the ground like birds on fire,” the massacre was of people “slaughtered in flight,” the narrator’s mother wishing her a joyful flight, the narrator asking her mother if she flew, the mother’s fellow prisoners keeping their arms close to their bodies like “angels hiding their wings,” the narrator wishing her mother a joyful flight.) Ask: What philosophical view of oppression do you think the author implies? (Even when oppressed, an individual can obtain freedom, through resistance and death, if necessary. Flight from annihilation must be a continual state of mind as well as a physical act.)

* * *

When I went again, I decided that I would talk. Even if the words made no sense, I would try to say something to her. But before I could even say hello, she was crying. When I handed her the Madonna, she did not want to take it. The guard was looking directly at us. Manman still had a fever that made her body tremble. Her eyes had the look of delirium.

"Keep the Madonna when I am gone," she said. "When I am completely gone, maybe you will have someone to take my place. Maybe you will have a person. Maybe you will have some flesh to console you. But if you don't, you will always have the Madonna."

"Manman, did you fly?" I asked her.

She did not even blink at my implied accusation.

"Oh, now you talk," she said, "when I am nearly gone. Perhaps you don't remember. All the women who came with us to the river, they could go to the moon and back if that is what they wanted."

* * *

A week later, almost to the same day, an old woman stopped by my house in Ville Rose on her way to Port-au-Prince. She came in the middle of the night, wearing the same white dress that the women usually wore on their trips to dip their hands in the river.

"Sister," the old woman said from the doorway. "I have come for you."

"I don't know you," I said.

"You do know me," she said. "My name is Jacqueline. I have been to the river with you."

I had been by the river with many people. I remembered a Jacqueline who went on the trips with us, but I was not sure this was the same woman. If she were really from the river, she would know. She would know all the things that my mother had said to the sun as we sat with our hands dipped in the water, questioning each other, making up codes and disciplines by which we could always know who the other daughters of the river were.

"Who are you?" I asked her.

"I am a child of that place," she answered. "I come from that long trail of blood."

"Where are you going?"

"I am walking into the dawn."

"Who are you?"

"I am the first daughter of the first star."

"Where do you drink when you're thirsty?"

"I drink the tears from the Madonna's eyes."

"And if not there?"

"I drink the dew."

"And if you can't find dew?"

"I drink from the rain before it falls." 1

"If you can't drink there?"

"I drink from the turtle's hide."

"How did you find your way to me?"

"By the light of the mermaid's comb."

"Where does your mother come from?"

"Thunderbolts, lightning, and all things that soar."

"Who are you?"

"I am the flame, and the spark by which my mother lived."

"Where do you come from?"

"I come from the puddle of that river."

"Speak to me."

"You hear my mother who speaks through me. She is the shadow that follows my shadow. The flame at the tip of my candle. The ripple in the stream where I wash my face. Yes. I will eat my tongue if ever I whisper that name, the name of that place across the river that took my mother from me."

I knew then that she had been with us, for she knew all the answers to the questions I asked.

---

3 Visualize What does the image of a white-clad woman in the night suggest?

Vocabulary

delirium (di lēr′ ē əm) n. a temporary state of mental disturbance characterized by confusion and disorientation

console (kən sōl′) v. to comfort; to cheer

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Visualize Answer: Students may see this image as a reference to a ghost or other supernatural apparition.

Literary Element 4

Mood Ask: What mood is created by this series of questions? (The short questions and short answers form a steady rhythm that creates a trancelike mood, highlighting the magical aspects of the story.)

Language History ☆

Code In literal terms, a code includes information that stands for other information. Here, each question refers to aspects of the massacre that only those involved would have known. Each answer gives details of those aspects to show intimate knowledge.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate Point out that while the entire story is written in the past tense, it presents different periods of time through the narrator's memory. Write on the board the events as the story presents them and then direct students to work in pairs to place the events on a timeline. (The events in chronological order: escape of narrator's mother from the massacre in 1937; narrator's birth; pilgrimage to the Massacre River when narrator was five; arrest of narrator's mother; narrator seeing her mother's head shaved in prison for the first time; Madonna's tear; narrator's visit to mother, bringing pork and plantains; narrator's visit with her mother when she has decided to talk; the visit of an old woman to the narrator in the middle of the night; the last visit to the prison) Ask: Why might the story present past events through the narrator's memory rather than begin the story with the first event? (The reader comes to know more about the narrator; also, it would be difficult to fit such a span of time into a short story.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Inferences Ask: What happened to Manman? (She died.) Which clues in the text support this inference? (The guard says she will be ready for burning, which Josephine describes as an event after her death on page 1321.)

Literary Element 2

Magic Realism Answer: Students may mention the mother's shadow following the old woman's shadow and the blood calling from the ground.

Reading Strategy 3

Visualize Answer: These details imply that the women cared for Manman; they hold a memorial for her. There is a sense of mourning, although the women are solemn in containing their grief.

"I think you do know who I am," she said, staring deeply into the pupils of my eyes. "I know who you are. You are Josephine. And your mother knew how to make the Madonna cry."

I let Jacqueline into the house. I offered her a seat in the rocking chair, gave her a piece of hard bread and a cup of cold coffee.

"Sister, I do not want to be the one to tell you," she said, "but your mother is dead. If she is not dead now, then she will be when we get to Port-au-Prince. Her blood calls to me from the ground. Will you go with me to see her? Let us go to see her."

We took a mule for most of the trip. Jacqueline was not strong enough to make the whole journey on foot. I brought the Madonna with me, and Jacqueline took a small bundle with some black rags in it.

When we got to the city, we went directly to the prison gates. Jacqueline whispered Manman's name to a guard and waited for a response.

1 "She will be ready for burning this afternoon," the guard said.

My blood froze inside me. I lowered my head as the news sank in.

"Surely, it is not that much a surprise," Jacqueline said, stroking my shoulder. She had become rejuvenated, as though strengthened by the correctness of her prediction.

"We only want to visit her cell," Jacqueline said to the guard. "We hope to take her personal things away."

The guard seemed too tired to argue, or perhaps he saw in Jacqueline's face traces of some long-dead female relative whom he had not done enough to please while she was still alive.

He took us to the cell where my mother had spent the last year. Jacqueline entered first, and then I followed. The room felt damp, the clay breaking into small muddy chunks under our feet.

I inhaled deeply to keep my lungs from aching. Jacqueline said nothing as she carefully walked around the women who sat like statues in different corners of the cell. There were six of them. They kept their arms close to their bodies, like angels hiding their wings. In the middle of the cell was an arrangement of sand and pebbles in the shape of a cross for my mother. Each woman was either wearing or holding something that had belonged to her.

One of them clutched a pillow as she stared at the Madonna. The woman was wearing my mother's dress, the large white dress that had become like a tent on Manman.

I walked over to her and asked, "What happened?"

"Beaten down in the middle of the yard," she whispered.

"Like a dog," said another woman.

"Her skin, it was too loose," said the woman wearing my mother's dress. "They said prison could not cure her."

The woman reached inside my mother's dress pocket and pulled out a handful of chewed pork and handed it to me. I motioned her hand away.

"No no, I would rather not."

She then gave me the pillow, my mother's pillow. It was open, half filled with my mother's hair. Each time they shaved her head, my mother had kept the hair for her pillow. I hugged the pillow against my chest, feeling some of the hair rising in clouds of dark dust into my nostrils.

Jacqueline took a long piece of black cloth[10] out of her bundle and wrapped it around her belly.

2 Magic Realism What elements of magical realism does this paragraph contain?

Vocabulary

rejuvenated (ri jo͞o´ və nāt´ əd) adj. restored to youthful vigor or appearance; renewed

Visualize Visualize this scene. What impression do you get of the prison cell? 3 [10] The tying of a black cloth in this manner is a sign of mourning that precedes weeping for the deceased.

---

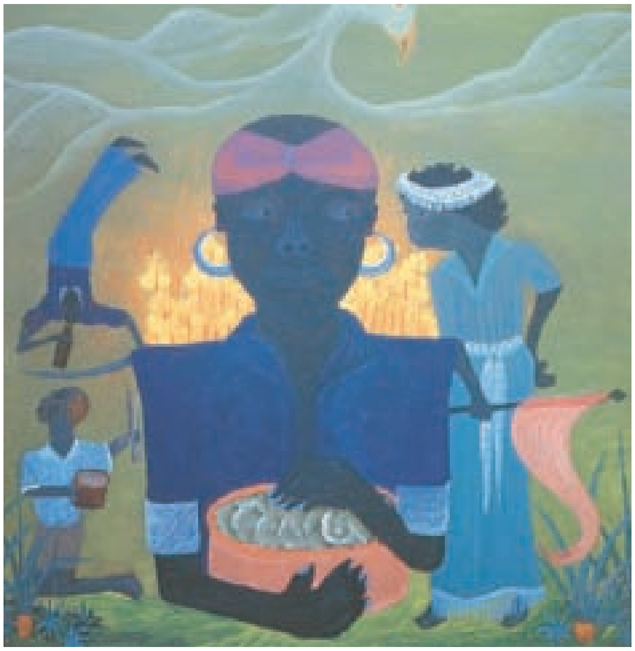
Reading Practice

Question Questioning can help students make sense of stories with magical elements. When readers question, they identify aspects that confuse or interest them. Offer these possible questions about the story so far:

- Why won't Josephine's mother embrace her daughter?
- What does Josephine mean when she asks "Manman, did you fly?"
- Why does Jacqueline refer to Josephine as "Sister"?

Discuss these questions, and then ask students to develop additional questions about the story.



The Phoenix, 1985. Lafortune Félix. Yale University Art Gallery, New Haven, CT. Gift of Selden Rodman.

View the Art Lafortune Félix's first exhibit took place not in a museum gallery, but in the form of wall murals at the temple where he was a voodoo priest. What connections can you make between the images in this painting and the images evoked by the river scenes in Danticat's story? ★

"Sister," she said, "life is never lost, another one always comes up to replace the last. Will you come watch when they burn the body?"

"What would be the use?" I said.

"They will make these women watch, and we can keep them company."

When Jacqueline took my hand, her fingers felt balmy and warm against the lifelines in my palm. For a brief second, I saw nothing but black. And then I saw the crystal glow of the river as we had seen it every year when my mother dipped my hand in it.

"I would go," I said, "if I knew the truth, whether a woman can fly."

"Why did you not ever ask your mother," Jacqueline said, "if she knew how to fly?"

Then the story came back to me as my mother had often told it. On that day so long ago, in the year nineteen hundred and thirty-seven, in the Massacre River, my mother did fly. Weighted down by my body inside hers, she leaped from Dominican soil into the water, and out again on the Haitian side of the river. She glowed red when she came out, blood clinging to her skin, which at that moment looked as though it were in flames.

In the prison yard, I held the Madonna tightly against my chest, so close that I could smell my mother's scent on the statue. When Jacqueline and I stepped out into the yard to wait for the burning, I raised my head toward the sun thinking, One day I may just see my mother there.

"Let her flight be joyful," I said to Jacqueline. "And mine and yours too."

Vocabulary

balmy (bä´ mē) adj. soothing

Magic Realism Why does the story suggest that the mother could fly? 4

Extending and Remaking Traditions Why did this experience of injustice fail to crush Josephine? 5

Teach

Literary Element 4

Magic Realism Answer: The story suggests that the mother's escape was miraculous. Despite being victimized, she was not bitter, and she had remarkable accomplishments.

Big Idea 5

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: Students may say Josephine is able to find encouragement in her mother's words and actions.

View the Art ★

Answer: The woman in the painting appears to have "wings of flames," as the narrator describes her mother as having when she escaped the massacre. The bird over the woman's head symbolizes the flight that the women took to escape.

Point out the many images in the painting, such as the oversized woman, the upside-down man at the left. Ask: How do the separate images create magical realism? (They blend reality with unrealistic elements.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Say: Read the last three paragraphs of the story. Do they support the accusations that the narrator's mother was a witch who could fly like a bird on fire? (No; she was fleeing troops trying to kill her and all the other women, and she seemed to be flying because she came out of the river dripping with the blood of the murdered women.)

Established Ask: Why does the narrator wish her dead mother a joyful flight, even though she knows her mother could not fly? (The story uses flight as a metaphor for escaping oppression. The flight through the river was to escape death. The mother's death frees her from the oppression of her imprisonment.)

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) They are suspected of being witches. (b) It is governed by superstition and is repressive and brutal.
3. (a) Fleeing Haitians were slaughtered by Dominican soldiers. (b) The river is a reminder of evil and a symbol of rebirth and continuity.
4. (a) Manman hides wax and oil in the statue. When these melt, the Madonna appears to cry. (b) The weeping is supernatural, as Manman didn't hide wax. This may foreshadow Manman's death and creates a mood of mystery.
5. Loving and intense; Josephine wishes to "wrap her body around hers."
6. Her title reminds the world of the 1937 massacre and suggests that Haitians still suffer from its effects.
7. Magical realism retells a factual, historical event in a supernatural setting. Bizarre narrative elements add an uplifting quality to a tragic story.
8. Some children would focus on the realistic details of their mother's suffering; others, like Josephine, may turn to a more mystical understanding.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 323–324.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which part of the story elicited the strongest reaction from you? Explain.
2. (a)Why are Josephine's mother and the other women in prison? (b)What does the treatment they receive tell you about the society they live in?
3. (a)What happened at the Massacre River the year Josephine was born? (b)What meaning do you think the river holds for the women?
4. (a)Why does the Madonna cry, according to Josephine? (b)Given Josephine's explanation, how would you explain the event described in the first paragraph of the story?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. How would you define the relationship between Josephine and her mother? Describe a detail from the story that reveals this relationship.
6. Why do you think Danticat entitled the story "Nineteen Thirty-Seven"? Explain what the title may suggest about the significance of the events described in the story.

Connect

7. Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions What innovations in subject matter and literary technique does Danticat bring to this story? Explain.
8. Connect to Today How do you think a child today would react to his or her mother's suffering? Explain.

Daily Life & Culture

Voodoo and Lougarous

In Haiti, enslaved people from west Africa incorporated aspects of Christianity, such as a belief in the Devil, into their own traditions. This exchange formed a new religion, Voodoo, which includes a belief that all people are spirits.

In "Nineteen Thirty-Seven," Manman is imprisoned for being a lougarou. A Creole adaptation of the French loup garou, meaning "werewolf," a lougarou is really more reminiscent of a witch or vampire than a werewolf. Though particulars vary by account, many portray a lougarou as a woman who removes her skin at night, transforms herself—usually into an animal capable of flight—and flies to others' homes, preying on the children within. Lougarous drink children's blood, causing illness, loss of strength, or death.

Group Activity Discuss the following questions with your classmates.

1. The policemen in "Nineteen Thirty-Seven" believe that the Manman can shed her skin and fly on wings of flame. How is the idea of justice affected when someone in authority believes in these kinds of supernatural forces?
2. What sort of beliefs do you think Josephine has? Use examples from the text to illustrate your points.
3. How would you describe Danticat's incorporation of Voodoo and other elements of Haitian folk tradition into the contemporary style of fiction-writing known as Magic Realism?

Daily Life & Culture

1. Students might be shocked or appalled that people who are entrusted with power hold such beliefs.
2. Students might say that Josephine is skeptical of the supernatural, as evidenced by her knowledge of how the Madonna cries, but that she has not shut herself off to it, as she has to ask her mother if she really did fly.
3. By incorporating Voodoo and other elements of Haitian folk tradition into her stories, Danticat creates a style of writing which blends fantastic elements such as magic with realistic elements anchored in Haitian culture and traditions.

Literary Element Magic Realism

Throughout her story, Danticat refers to supernatural events in an otherwise painfully realistic narrative. For example, the narrator's suggestion that certain women could fly with "wings of flame" implies a magical quality about characters whose lives have otherwise been filled with horrible realities.

1. What are other references to magical, supernatural, or bizarre events in "Nineteen Thirty-Seven"?
2. Which events does the narrator find ordinary explanations for? Which does she present as magical?

Review: Style

As you learned on page 743, word choice, the length and arrangement of sentences, and the use of figurative language and imagery all contribute to an author's individual style.

Partner Activity With a partner, choose a passage from "Nineteen Thirty-Seven" that you think is a good example of the author's style. Using a chart like the one shown, analyze the textual elements that contribute to the style. In a paragraph, describe the style. Compare your analysis with that of another pair.

Text Elements	Contribution to Style
sentence length

Reading Strategy Visualize

Many successful movies have been based upon works of fiction, in part because the original story or novel provided precise visual descriptions of characters and settings. For scenes and people not fully described, the film's director and director of photography use their imaginations to fill in the missing details.

1. If you were directing a film of "Nineteen Thirty-Seven," how would Josephine's mother appear?
2. Imagine that you are creating a poster for a movie of "Nineteen Thirty-Seven." What striking scene, character, or image would your poster feature? Describe your poster in detail.

Vocabulary Practice

Antonyms With a partner, match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with its antonym. You will not use all answer choices. Use a thesaurus or dictionary to check your answers.

1. delirium
2. console
3. rejuvenated
4. balmy

a. tired
b. depress
c. scowling
d. young
e. harsh
f. sanity

Academic Vocabulary

Jacqueline must go through the process of answering questions to prove to Josephine that she is a woman from the river.

Process is an academic word. It can have different meanings in different subject areas. Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of process in the sentence above.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Review: Style

Students' answers may point out the following: figurative language contributes to the style by conveying ideas or emotions; imagery contributes by helping readers visualize scenes.

To create custom assessments using software, use ExamView Assessment Suite.

To create custom assessments online, go to Progress Reporter Online Assessment.

After You Read

Assess

Literary Element

1. Examples: Madonna's tears; spirits stealing breath from infants; flying to the moon and back; Manman's blood calling to Jacqueline from the earth
2. Natural: wings of flame; Madonna's tears. Magical: "flying to the moon and back;" Manman's blood calling to Jacqueline

Progress Check

Can students recognize magic realism?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 331.

Reading Strategy

1. Students' answers may reflect the sadness and quiet courage that the narrator sees in her.
2. Answers should be supported with details explaining why students found their poster subjects striking.

Vocabulary

1. f 2. b 3. a 4. e

Academic Vocabulary

Jacqueline has to answer questions to prove herself to Josephine, which hints that the word process means "a systematic series of actions that are done to accomplish some goal."

After You Read

Assess

Respond Through Writing

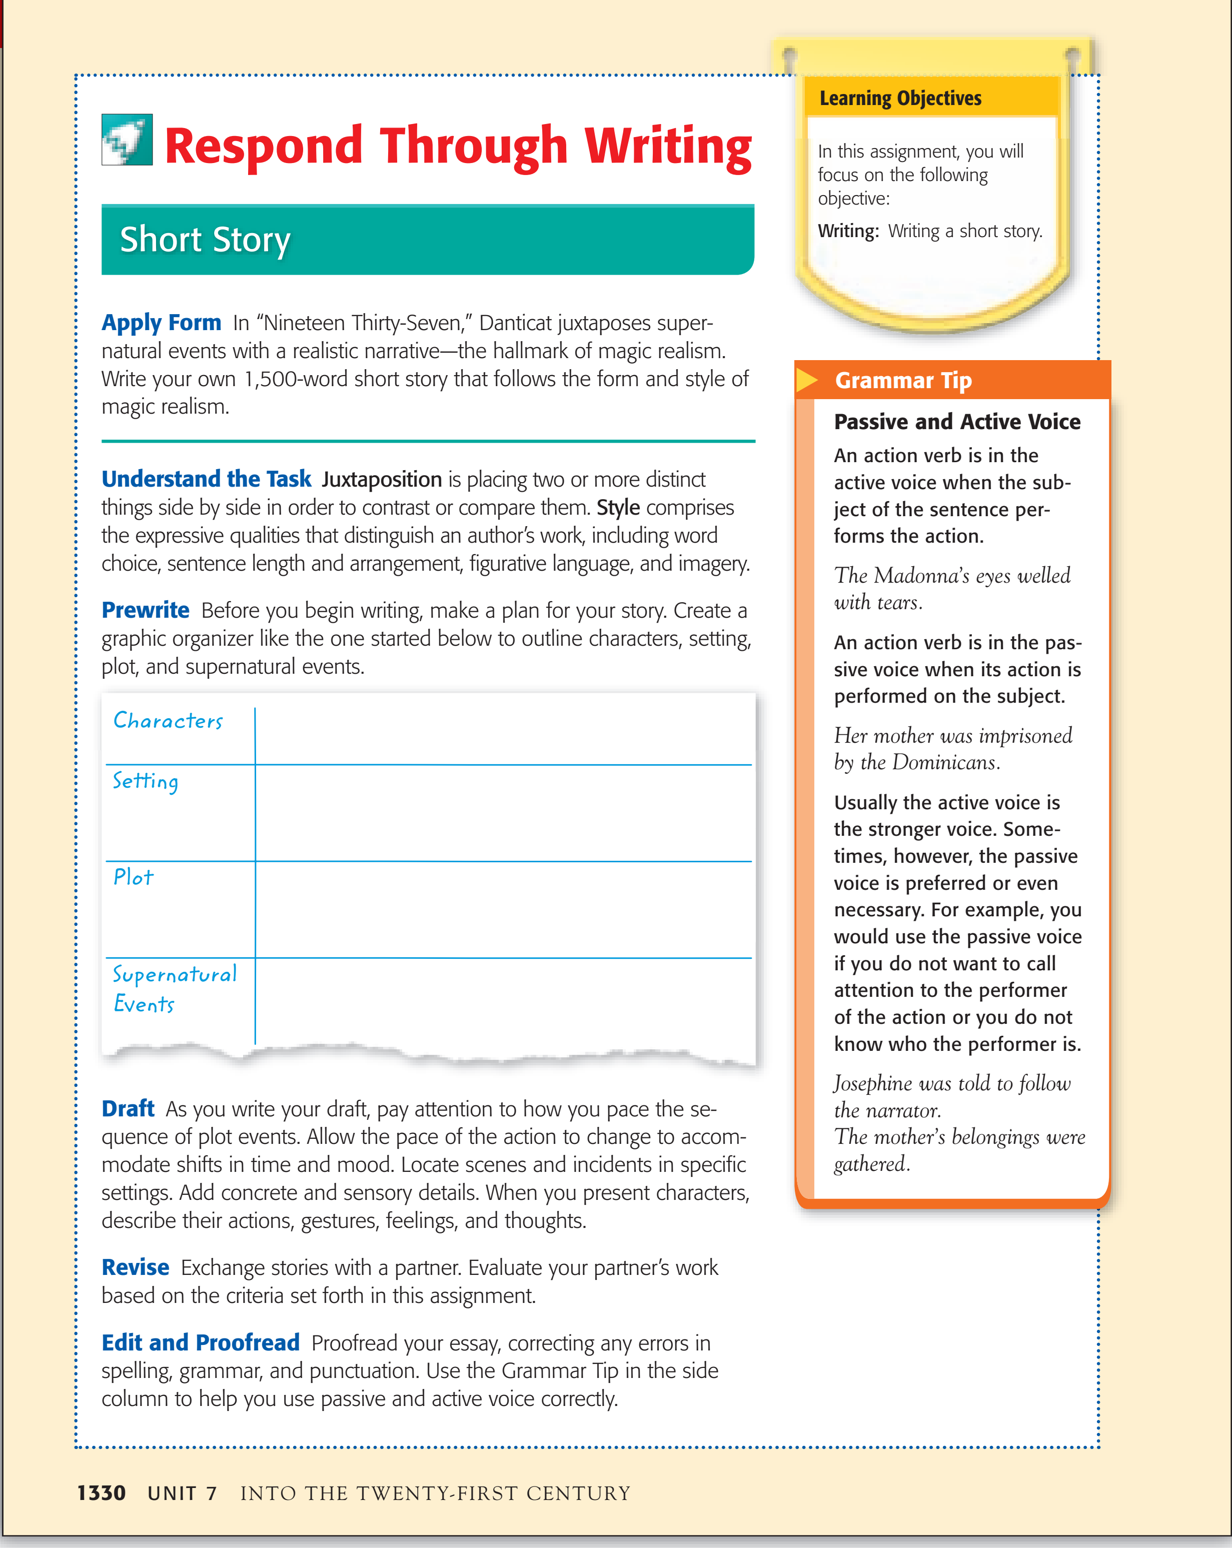
Students' short stories should have a logical sequence of plot events with clearly-defined locations for its scenes. Students should include concrete and sensory details in their stories to establish setting and to describe characters. After students have reviewed each other's stories, they should revise his or her short story based on the criticism he or she received.

Scoring Guide

Assess students' performance in the following categories using the scoring guide below:

- Addresses all parts of the writing task.
- Employs the form and style of magic realism.
- Chooses a pace that matches the shift in the moods and time of the story.
- Provides well chosen concrete and sensory details that bring the story to life.
- Employs a variety of sentence types and uses precise, descriptive language.
- Follows English language conventions.

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Task addressed	fully	mostly	partially	barely
Magic Realism	fully employs proper form and style	somewhat employs proper form and style	attempts to employ proper form and style	does not employ proper form or style
Pace	well handled	somewhat well handled	somewhat choppy or abrupt	no thought was given to pace
Concrete and Sensory Details	well employed	employed	few employed	none
Language	varied, precise, descriptive	varied, somewhat descriptive	predictable, basic	not varied, limited
Convention errors	few or none	several	some	many



Respond Through Writing

Short Story

Apply Form In "Nineteen Thirty-Seven," Danticat juxtaposes supernatural events with a realistic narrative—the hallmark of magic realism. Write your own 1,500-word short story that follows the form and style of magic realism.

Understand the Task Juxtaposition is placing two or more distinct things side by side in order to contrast or compare them. Style comprises the expressive qualities that distinguish an author's work, including word choice, sentence length and arrangement, figurative language, and imagery.

Prewrite Before you begin writing, make a plan for your story. Create a graphic organizer like the one started below to outline characters, setting, plot, and supernatural events.

Characters
Setting
Plot
Supernatural Events

Draft As you write your draft, pay attention to how you pace the sequence of plot events. Allow the pace of the action to change to accommodate shifts in time and mood. Locate scenes and incidents in specific settings. Add concrete and sensory details. When you present characters, describe their actions, gestures, feelings, and thoughts.

Revise Exchange stories with a partner. Evaluate your partner's work based on the criteria set forth in this assignment.

Edit and Proofread Proofread your essay, correcting any errors in spelling, grammar, and punctuation. Use the Grammar Tip in the side column to help you use passive and active voice correctly.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objective:

Writing: Writing a short story.

Grammar Tip

Passive and Active Voice

An action verb is in the active voice when the subject of the sentence performs the action.

The Madonna's eyes welled with tears.

An action verb is in the passive voice when its action is performed on the subject.

Her mother was imprisoned by the Dominicans.

Usually the active voice is the stronger voice. Sometimes, however, the passive voice is preferred or even necessary. For example, you would use the passive voice if you do not want to call attention to the performer of the action or you do not know who the performer is.

Josephine was told to follow the narrator.
The mother's belongings were gathered.

Before You Read
The Man with the Saxophone

Meet Ai
(born 1947)

Ai uses her given middle name as her pen name. She also fiercely claims that it is the only name by which she should be known. She grew up as Florence Anthony; her last name, she learned as an adult, was that of her stepfather. Her genetic father was Japanese, and the name Ai means "love" in that language.

A Young Poet Ai was born in Albany, Texas. Her family was very poor and moved often. As a child, Ai lived not only in Texas, but also in Tucson, Arizona; San Francisco and Los Angeles, California; and Las Vegas, Nevada. When she was fourteen, she lived in Los Angeles. At school she saw an ad for a local poetry contest. She composed a poem, but before she could enter the contest, her family moved. In spite of that disappointment, Ai found that writing poetry suited her: "As I grew older I realized that poetry offered a way to express things that I couldn't do otherwise."

Ai went to college at the University of Arizona. There she majored in Japanese and was also a very serious student of Buddhism. She went on to get a master's degree in fine arts from the University of California. Ai had her first book of poetry published two years later, in 1973. She's been writing and teaching writing ever since.

A Distinctive Style Almost all of Ai's poems are dramatic monologues—writing told from the first-person point of view. Most of her poems feature the voices of unnamed, imaginary characters. However, some use the voices of famous historical figures or celebrities, such as John F. Kennedy, Marilyn Monroe, Elvis Presley, and Alfred Hitchcock.

Ai relies on biographies for information when she wants to write in the voice of a real person. However, fictional speakers take even more work. Ai fleshes out all of her characters fully in her head before beginning to write. For each individual character she says, "I've got to know what kind of person he or she is. What are they doing? What would they wear? What colors do they like?" Once she has a clear picture of a character, she can start crafting a poem in that voice. About this process, Ai has said, "Every time I write a poem, I'm someone else without actually being that person. . . . It's really great."

> "I'm irrevocably tied to the lives of all people, both in and out of time."
>
> —Ai

Readers and critics have sometimes tried to label Ai as an African American poet. However, she points out that she's part African American, part Japanese, part Choctaw, part Cheyenne, part Irish, and part Dutch. She says that she lets any and all of her characters speak, "regardless of sex, race, creed, or color." In summary, she says, "I'm simply a writer. I don't want to be catalogued and my characters don't want to be catalogued and my poems don't want to be catalogued. If a poet's work isn't universal, then what good is it?"

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Ai, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Before You Read
Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 122

Or poll students about their favorite time of day. Ask: What makes this time of day appealing? How does it shape your interaction with other times of day? As they read, have students consider how the speaker in the poem responds to and is nurtured by early morning.

Selection Skills

The Man with the Saxophone

Literary Elements
- Narrative Poetry (SE pp. 1332–1335)
- Free Verse (TE p. 1332)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Set of Directions (SE p. 1335)

Reading Skills
- Connect to Cultural Context (SE pp. 1332–1335)

Vocabulary Skills
- Denotation and Connotation (SE pp. 1332, 1335)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

The poem's speaker walks alone in the early morning of a New York City winter day, carrying a saxophone. The speaker encounters a homeless man with a saxophone and stops to play with him. As they play, the speaker reflects on all that he or she has lost but feels temporarily soothed and liberated by the music.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 338–343.

Vocabulary

Word Parts Ask: Which of the vocabulary words has a prefix? (unencumbered) What does the prefix -un mean? (not) Tell students that the prefix en- can mean "to put into or on." Removing the suffix -ed leaves some form related to cumber as the word's root. Ask: Can you deduce what that word might mean? (to weigh down, burden, from a root meaning "hindrance")

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poem

What associations do you have with early morning? Write a journal entry in which you describe this time of day and explain what makes it special.

Build Background

"The Man with the Saxophone" is set in New York City on the streets of Manhattan. Most Manhattan streets are laid out in a grid pattern; the north-south streets are numbered avenues. First Avenue is to the east and Tenth Avenue is to the west. The east-west streets are numbered streets. The higher the number, the farther north the street. The speaker in "The Man with the Saxophone" is walking south on Fifth Avenue.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions

Poems that present dramatic monologues have long been part of the American literary tradition. The speaker in Edgar Allan Poe's "The Raven," for example, narrates an encounter with an eerie bird. As you read, ask yourself, How does "The Man with the Saxophone" extend or remake that tradition?

Literary Element Narrative Poetry

A narrative poem is a poem that tells a story. Like other stories, narrative poems have a plot, a setting, and characters. As you read, ask yourself, Where do the exposition, the rising action, the climax, and the falling action of the plot occur?

Reading Strategy Connect to Cultural Context

The setting of "The Man with the Saxophone" is Manhattan, and the characters are musicians. Both elements help provide a cultural context for this poem. Note other aspects of culture that may relate to the poet's message.

Tip: Ask Questions As you read, ask yourself:

- Have you ever been in a large city like the one described in the poem?
- Do you know anyone who is like the speaker? Like the man with the saxophone?

Learning Objectives

For pages 1331–1335

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Understanding narrative poetry.

Reading: Connecting to cultural context.

Writing: Writing directions.

Vocabulary

amble (am´ bəl) v. to walk at a leisurely pace; to stroll; p. 1333 On window-shopping trips, my friends amble from one downtown store to the next, looking for unusual gifts.

solitude (sol´ e to͞od´) n. the state of being alone; p. 1333 After attending meetings all day, a quiet walk brought me much-needed solitude.

unencumbered (ən in kəm´ bərd) adj. unhindered; unburdened; p. 1334 I took off my heavy backpack and, unencumbered, danced down the empty hallway.

Tip: Denotation and Connotation Denotation is the literal, or dictionary, meaning of a word. Connotation is the implied, or cultural, meaning of a word. For example, the words walk and amble have a similar denotation, "moving at a slow pace," but they have different connotations:

Neutral	Positive
walk	amble

Reading Practice

Free Verse Tell students that Ai's poem is written in free verse. Review that free verse is poetry with no fixed pattern of meter, rhyme, line length, or stanza arrangement. Explain to students that free verse should be read, unlike other poetry, according to its punctuation, not the line breaks. Readers should pause at commas and periods as they would when reading prose. Have students take turns reading a few lines of the poem until they can follow punctuation correctly.

New York Buildings at Night. Franklin McMahon.

The Man with the Saxophone

Ai

New York. Five A.M.
The sidewalks empty.
Only the steam pouring from the manhole covers[1] seems alive, 1
as I amble from shop window to shop window, sometimes stopping to stare, sometimes not.
Last week's snow is brittle now and unrecognizable as the soft, white hair that bearded the face of the city.
I head farther down Fifth Avenue toward the thirties,[2]
my mind empty[3]
like the Buddhists tell you is possible if only you don't try.
If only I could turn myself into a bird like the shaman[4] I was meant to be,
but I can't,
I'm earthbound
and solitude is my companion,
the only one you can count on.
Don't, don't try to tell me otherwise.
I've had it all and lost it and I never want it back, only give me this morning to keep,
the city asleep

---

1. You might observe steam pouring from manhole covers on a cold day. Water vapor in the warm air rising from the sewer condenses as steam.
2. The phrase toward the thirties refers to the east-west streets in Manhattan, from 30th Street to 39th Street.
3. In line 12, my mind empty refers to a goal of Buddhism—to empty the mind through meditation.
4. A shaman is a priest in some tribal societies.

Narrative Poetry Does the speaker seem to have a definite destination? Explain. 2

Connect to Cultural Context What does the speaker's statement here tell you about his or her culture and goals? Name two or more things. 3

Vocabulary

amble (am′ bəl) v. to walk at a leisurely pace; to stroll solitude (sol′ e tood′) n. the state of being alone

Teach

Big Idea 1

Extending and Remaking Traditions Say: Keep this question in mind as you read: What familiar ways does the poet use to create the fictional character of the speaker? (She shares his or her thoughts and emotions; shows his or her likes and dislikes.)

Literary Element 2

Narrative Poetry Answer: The word amble and the speaker's description of staring into shop windows suggest that the speaker has no definite destination.

Reading Strategy 3

Connect to Cultural Context Answer: The speaker is familiar with Buddhism; speaker may have spiritual awareness and goals.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources, p. 345.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Preview some of the selection's vocabulary with students. Say: Look up recognize in the dictionary. Ask: If you remember that the prefix un- means "not," and that the suffix -able means "capable of," what does "unrecognizable" mean? (not capable of being identified) Say: Look up solitude. Ask: How could solitude be a companion? (Solitude can allow a person to be his or her own companion.) Say: Look up weld. Ask: How can clothes be welded to skin? (They are not really welded, but if clothes are sweaty and dirty enough, they can feel and look as though they are stuck to someone's skin.)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Narrative Poetry Answer: The rising action begins on line 27.

Reading Strategy 2

Connect to Cultural Context Answer: Not everyone would be familiar with the meaning of this signal among musicians. Stepping back might also mean to allow the other person to pass or to show fear of the person.

Big Idea 3

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: The merciful notes meeting an unforgiving day add a tension new in the literary tradition.

Cultural History ☆

Homelessness Many large cities have street musicians. Some are homeless, with no permanent place that provides complete or safe shelter. Some are mentally ill and distrustful of strangers.

and there on the corner of Thirty-fourth and Fifth,
the man with the saxophone,
his fingerless gloves caked with grime, ☆ his face also,
the layers of clothes welded to his skin.
I set down my case,
he steps backward
to let me know I'm welcome, and we stand a few minutes
in the silence so complete
I think I must be somewhere else, not here, not in this city, this heartland of pure noise.
Then he puts the sax to his lips again and I raise mine.
I suck the air up from my diaphragm and bend over into the cold, golden reed,[5] waiting for the notes to come,
and when they do,
for that one moment,
I'm the unencumbered bird of my imagination, rising only to fall back toward concrete,
each note a black flower,
opening, mercifully opening into the unforgiving new day.

---

[5] The reed in the mouthpiece of a saxophone makes the vibrations that produce sound.

Narrative Poetry If you had a graph showing plot development, including exposition, rising action, climax, and falling action, where would you place these lines? 1

Connect to Cultural Context Why do you think the poet includes this explanation? In a different cultural context what might stepping backward mean? 2

Extending and Remaking Traditions How does the speaker's attitude seem new or surprising? 3

Vocabulary

unencumbered (ən in kəm′ bərd) adj. unhindered; unburdened

Listening and Speaking Practice

SMALL GROUP

Discuss Poetry Have students reread the poem silently. When they finish, they must write down the most powerful word and two or three supporting reasons in their notebooks. To begin discussion, ask one student to write the word on the board and share his or her explanation of the choice. Have other students who selected the same word offer further support before moving to another student's word. Be sure all chosen words are written on the board. At the end of the discussion, ask students to write a brief summary of the discussion and which word they now feel best represents the poem. (Students may select words from the beginning of the poem, empty, earthbound, solitude, or lost that represent the darker tones of the poem, or they may choose more uplifting words like moment, unencumbered, rising, or opening, depending on their overall reactions to the poem.) Remind students that their explanations for their chosen word should be supported by evidence directly from the poem.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which aspects of this poem were easy for you to connect to? Which were harder to connect to?

2. The poem is set in New York City. (a)What is the exact time? What time of year do you think it is? (b)Why do you think the speaker is out and about at this time?

3. (a)How does the speaker characterize the sound of the city, both normally and during the events of the poem? (b)How does this difference seem to affect the speaker?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. Ai uses many different images in this poem. (a)Which image do you think is the strongest? (b)What do you think makes this image strong?

5. The speaker of the poem says that "solitude is my companion, / the only one you can count on." What do you think he or she means by this statement? Do you agree?

Connect

6. Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions How does "The Man with the Saxophone" seem different from other narrative poems you have read?

7. Connect to the Author How does Ai include elements of her spiritual beliefs in the poem?

Literary Element Narrative Poetry

Narrative poetry has all of the elements of other narrative fiction. This includes characters as well as plot. Both can be extremely important to the meaning and message of a narrative poem.

1. What problem does the speaker of the poem face that is key to the plot? How is the problem resolved?

2. How does Ai make Manhattan a character in the poem? Cite specific images or lines of the poem in your answer.

Reading Strategy Connect to Cultural Context

The urban setting of "The Man with the Saxophone" and the focus on music and musicians give this poem two very obvious contexts for culture. However, the poem also hints at other more subtle cultural contexts. Reread the poem, looking for other important aspects of culture. What other cultural connections does the poem make?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Denotation and Connotation Each of the vocabulary words is listed with a word that has a similar denotation. Choose the word that has a more positive connotation.

1. amble	walk
2. solitude	isolation
3. unencumbered	free

Writing

Write Set of Directions "The Man with the Saxophone" takes place in New York City. Imagine that you are giving directions to your school for a visitor from out of town. First, write the directions out in words. Then draw a map to illustrate the route, labeling the streets and important landmarks.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

After You Read

Assess

1. Answers should be supported by evidence from the text.

2. (a) 5:00 a.m.; winter or early spring (b) Homeless or coming home from a late job

3. (a) Completely silent now but usually a "heartland of pure noise" (b) Amazed by the quiet, and helped by it to transcend difficulties

4. (a) Answers will vary. (b) Students should provide reasons.

5. Relying on yourself is the safest course because other people can disappoint you. Students may agree or disagree.

6. This poem describes a sequence of events, a short span of time, and few external events.

7. The speaker refers to shamanism and Buddhist beliefs of meditation.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 325–326.

Literary Element

1. The speaker feels alone. A bond with music and a fellow musician solves the problem.

2. Ai personifies the city with images such as snow as a beard on the city's face; she names it and shows it as an unrelenting force.

Progress Check

Can students analyze narrative poetry?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 344.

Reading Strategy

The narrator longs for a religious or spiritual experience, to transcend the city, which is cold and lonely.

Vocabulary

1. amble
2. solitude
3. free

Writing

Use these criteria to evaluate work:

- Do students include a list of realistic directions?
- Do students present an accurate map that includes landmarks and street names?
- Encourage students to word-process their directions or use software to produce their maps.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 123

Or display photographs of multi-ethnic crowds. If appropriate, invite volunteers to share their own ethnic heritage. Ask: Why do we organize people in groups? (It helps us see the parts of our society.) Why do we label those groups? (Labels make us feel secure about our own place in society.)

As they read, have students consider how the poem's speaker challenges the groups and labels we all use.

Before You Read

Ending Poem

Meet Rosario Morales and Aurora Levins Morales

(born 1930 and 1954)

Sometimes two or more writers collaborate on a single piece of literature. Rosario Morales and her daughter Aurora Levins Morales have created several works of literature together.

Early Family Life Rosario Morales was born in New York in 1930. After getting married, she and her husband, Ricardo Levins, moved to Puerto Rico, where Aurora was born in 1954. It was there that Rosario instilled in Aurora a love of reading and writing. Aurora gives her mother credit for teaching her to appreciate female writers, such as Virginia Woolf and Toni Morrison.

The family returned to the United States, where Richard worked at different universities, Rosario continued to write, and Aurora studied and wrote. This professional Jewish Puerto Rican family did not fit into most people's conceptions of what it meant to be Puerto Rican. Both mother and daughter shared a keen awareness of that fact.

Aurora once wrote, "I am new. History made me. My first language was spanglish." She did not see her own cultural heritage reflected in what she read. As a result, she often addresses issues of identity, culture, and racism.

> "Writers have to be leaders in their communities."
>
> —Aurora Levins Morales

Education While in college, Aurora moved to California to finish her education. There, she began to publish her work. During the 1990s, she received recognition and awards for her writing, including the Ardella Mills Prize for journalistic prose. Her writing has appeared in journals, magazines, and books.

In addition to her academic and writing work, Aurora speaks throughout the United States on social issues, such as the treatment of Puerto Ricans by other U.S. citizens. "The vast majority of the popular culture's portrayal of Puerto Ricans is extremely stereotyped and oppressive," she says.

A Family Matter Her work is her response to this problem. Her literary writing includes essays, poems, short stories, and multi-media plays, some of which have been published in anthologies, including Cuentos: Stories by Latinas.

When Aurora was a child, she and her mother shared their writing with each other, each providing feedback and encouragement. Later, this sharing took a more concrete form. A series of long-distance telephone conversations between mother and daughter developed into Getting Home Alive, which was published in 1986. This collection of fiction, poetry, diary entries, and essays explores the lives of two Puerto Rican women living separate lives in different cultures.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Rosario Morales and Aurora Levins Morales, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Selection Skills

Ending Poem

Literary Elements
- Motif (SE pp. 1337, 1339, 1340)
- Tone (SE p. 1340)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Oral Report (SE p. 1341)

Reading Skills
- Make Generalizations (SE pp. 1337, 1338, 1341; TE p. 1338)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE pp. 1337, 1341)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poem

The following poem is a statement of identity created by two people. As you read the poem, think about the following questions:

1. What determines who a person is?
2. Can a person's identity be summed up in a single word or phrase?

Build Background

The speakers in "Ending Poem" celebrate a multicultural identity. They mention the Tainos, the indigenous people of Puerto Rico, or Boriquen, as it was called when Christopher Columbus arrived in 1493. The Spanish intermarried with the Tainos, as they did with the enslaved African people whom they brought to the island in the 1500s. As a result, most Puerto Ricans are mestizos—a blend of Taino, African, and Spanish. The speakers also mention jibaros, rural farmers of Puerto Rico. These rugged people appear often in Puerto Rican folklore, where they are portrayed as generous, loving, hardworking, and courageous.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions

As you read this poem, ask yourself, How do the speakers refer to the traditions of the past?

Literary Element Motif

A motif is a significant word, phrase, description, idea, or other element that is repeated throughout a work and is related to the theme. As you read this poem, look for motifs and ask yourself, What does each motif add to the meaning of the poem?

Reading Strategy Make Generalizations

A generalization is a statement that may be true for a group, but there are always exceptions. To make a generalization, readers must look at details to find relationships that the writer suggests but does not state directly.

Tip: Group Ideas Use a graphic organizer to record details you used to make generalizations.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1336–1341

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Understanding motifs.

Reading: Making generalizations.

Writing: Writing an oral report.

Vocabulary

diaspora (dī as′ pər ə) n. the scattering of a people; p. 1338 The war-torn country saw a diaspora of its artists and writers.

shtetl (shte′ təl) n. small Jewish town or community; p. 1338 Jewish folktales often take place in a shtetl.

ghetto (get′ ō) n. neighborhood where a particular group of people are forced to live either by law, poverty, or social exclusion; p. 1338 During World War II, Jews were forced to live in ghettos.

Tip: Context Clues A word's context—the other words and phrases around it—can often provide clues about its meaning. For example, the sentence During World War II, Jews were forced to live in ghettos gives you a clue to the meaning of ghetto, which means "a neighborhood where a group of people are forced to live."

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

The speaker describes the many different identities that make up who she is. These include mestiza, Puerto Rican, American, Jewish, and more. She describes these identities mixing like many plates at a dinner table and in cloth made by many people.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 349–354.

Vocabulary

Origins Shtetl is a Yiddish word, probably a form of the German word stadt, which means "town." Have students use a dictionary to explore the origins of the other two vocabulary words. Ask: What does the Greek root of the word diaspora mean? (dispersion, scattering) Where was the island of Ghetto? (near Venice, Italy) Have students explore how these words contribute to the poem's focus on the coming together of various ethnicities.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Advanced Remind students that a recurring element in writing, music, or design is known as a motif. Have students practice creating verbal motifs. Remind students to use repetition of the motif in their responses. Model for students. Say: Suppose you are asked, Do you like music? Your response, using a motif, might be: High notes make me quiver, low notes make me roar, and all notes make me smile. Have students work in small groups to write an answer to one or more of the following questions:

- Are puppies cute?
- When are you happy?
- Why are some weeks longer than others?

Students' responses should use repetition of a key word that relates to the theme of the question.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Extending and Remaking Traditions Say: As you read, consider these questions: How do pieces of their heritage affect the traditions these poets embrace? (Ethnic heritage determines traditions.) How do identity labels link the speakers to those traditions? (Each labeled group has its tradition.)

Reading Strategy 2

Make Generalizations
Answer: The speaker's forbears were discriminated against and often treated disrespectfully.

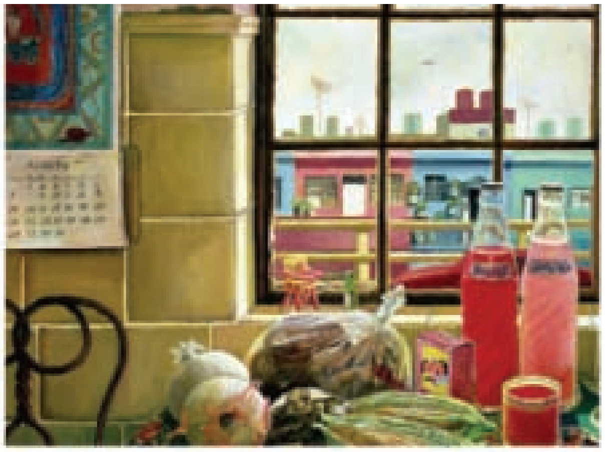
View the Art ★

Elena Climent (1955–) says "wherever we are we reproduce ourselves. People reflect themselves by their surroundings." The Mexican-born artist often paints collections of personal objects and moments of home life.

Ending Poem

Rosario Morales and
Aurora Levins Morales



Kitchen with View of Viaduct, 1995. Elena Climent. Oil on canvas. Phoenix Art Museum, Arizona. Mr. and Mrs. Gene Lemon in honor of Clayton Kirking. ★

I am what I am.
A child of the Americas. 1
A light-skinned mestiza of the Caribbean.
A child of many diaspora, born into this continent at a crossroads.
I am Puerto Rican. I am U.S. American.
I am New York Manhattan and the Bronx.
A mountain-born, country-bred, homegrown jíbara[1] child,
up from the shtetl, a California Puerto Rican Jew
A product of the New York ghettos I have never known.
I am an immigrant
and the daughter and granddaughter of immigrants.
We didn't know our forbears' names with a certainty.
They aren't written anywhere.
First names only or mija, negra, ne, honey, sugar, dear

I come from the dirt where the cane was grown.
My people didn't go to dinner parties. They weren't invited.
I am caribeña, island grown.
Spanish is in my flesh, ripples from my tongue, lodges in my hips, the language of garlic and mangoes.

---

[1] jíbara: peasant

Make Generalizations What do these lines suggest about the way the speaker's forebears were treated? 2

Vocabulary

diaspora (dī as´ pər ə) n. the scattering of a people shtetl (shte´ təl) n. small Jewish town or community ghetto (get´ ō) n. neighborhood where a particular group of people are forced to live either by law, poverty, or social exclusion

Reading Practice

Generalization Have students make a list of the sentences from the poem which begin with "I am" and "I am not." Ask: What effect do the authors create with the repetition of "I am" and "I am not"? (The speaker in the poem is trying to define himself or herself to understand his or her place in society.) Have students reread the last stanza. Ask: Why do the authors switch from "I am," to "We are," in the last stanza? (The speaker's definition of himself or herself is now generalized and applied to a wider group of people.) Have students imitate this effect by writing a short poem which repeats the sentences "I am" and "I am not," and ends with a sentence beginning with "We are." Ask several students to read their poems and discuss how the last sentence generalizes their poems.

Boricua.[2] As Boricuas come from the isle of Manhattan.
I am of latinoamerica, rooted in the history of my continent.
I speak from that body. Just brown and pink and full of drums inside.
I am not African.
Africa waters the roots of my tree, but I cannot return.
I am not Taína.
I am a late leaf of that ancient tree,
and my roots reach into the soil of two Americas.
Taíno is in me, but there is no way back.

I am not European, though I have dreamt of those cities.
Each plate is different.
wood, clay, papier mâché, metals, basketry, a leaf, a coconut shell.
Europe lives in me but I have no home there.

The table has a cloth woven by one, dyed by another, embroidered by another still.
I am a child of many mothers.
They have kept it all going

All the civilizations erected on their backs.
All the dinner parties given with their labor. ☆

We are new.
They gave us life, kept us going,
brought us to where we are.
Born at a crossroads.
Come, lay that dishcloth down. Eat, dear, eat.
History made us.
We will not eat ourselves up inside anymore.

And we are whole.

---

[2] Boricua: Puerto Rican

Motif What underlying idea shown here is repeated several times during the poem? 3

Extending and Remaking Traditions How do these lines refer to the traditions of the past? 4

Teach

Literary Element 3

Motif Answer: Students should recognize that the use of the phrases "I am" and "I am not" identifying the speaker is a recurring motif.

Big Idea 4

Extending and Remaking Traditions Answer: Students may note that the lines show the link between the present—the speakers—and the past. The lines show that all aspects of the speakers' diverse traditions contribute to what the speakers are.

Cultural History ☆

Puerto Rican Poverty Puerto Ricans in the United States have faced many challenges of poverty and have often worked at low-paying jobs, such as the poets refer to here.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Point out that the cowriters of this poem are a mother and daughter. Ask: How does the poem's structure reflect that two people wrote it? (The use of italics in every alternating line might indicate two different voices.) What line might be spoken by the two together? (and the daughter and granddaughter of immigrants)

Established Ask: What do you think the poet means by this seeming contradiction: "A product of the New York ghettos I have never known"? (Her parents grew up in the ghetto, and their experiences there shaped her.)

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) Answers will vary. (b) Answers should be supported by text evidence.
2. (a) She is a child of the Americas with a varied ancestry. (b) Pride
3. (a) African, European, or Taína (b) Perhaps she wants to credit all of her ancestors.
4. (a) They gave life, kept her going, and brought her to where she is. (b) They wove, dyed, and embroidered a cloth; shaped civilizations and lives with work and love.
5. Possible categories: rural, physical, and ethnic ancestry
6. Her mixed heritage
7. Perhaps she believes that she is a new product of history and takes pride in her diverse heritage.
8. Hard work, the Spanish language, art, hospitality
9. She sees herself as part of a distinct new culture and will remake the traditions that she embodies.
10. The voices of two authors fit well with the theme of a multiracial background.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 327–328.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)Which lines in the poem spoke most directly to you? (b)In what ways are the speakers' identities similar to your own? How are they different?
2. (a)In the opening stanza, what does the speaker first say she is? (b)What attitude does the speaker seem to have toward her?
3. (a)What does the speaker say she is not? (b)What motive might she have for saying this?
4. (a)What does the speaker say her female ancestors did for her? (b)What examples illustrate this?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. How would you categorize the qualities that the speaker says that she has?
6. What is the speaker trying to express when she says "I am the child of many mothers"?
7. How do you interpret the final four lines of the poem?

Connect

8. Which traditions does the speaker view positively?
9. Big Idea Extending and Remaking Traditions What kinds of traditions does the speaker expect to remake?
10. Connect to the Authors This poem was written by two authors. How might this affect the theme of the poem? Explain.

Literary Element Motif

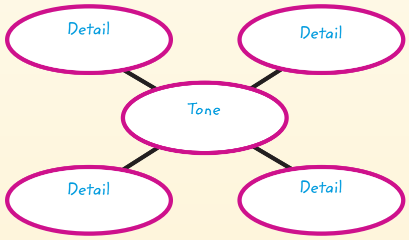
Motifs, or repeated ideas, words, images, or symbols, appear in both literature and other art forms. A motif can emphasize important ideas and show the connections between different parts of a work.

1. What motifs appear in this poem?
2. What typographical motif do you notice in the appearance of the poem, and why do you think the poets use it?

Review: Tone

As you learned on page 133, tone is the author's attitude toward the subject matter or the audience. Tone is conveyed through many elements, such as word choice, figures of speech, and imagery.

Partner Activity Meet with a classmate to discuss the authors' attitudes about their mixed heritage. How would you describe this tone? Working with your partner, create a web diagram like the one below. Fill it with details that you think create the tone of the poem.



Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Literary Element

1. Possible answers: repetition of "I am" and "I am not;" references to food, tableware, and dining; references to place and to roots
2. The italic type may indicate another speaker or the viewpoints of the cultures within the speaker.

Progress Check

Can students analyze motif?

If No → See Unit 7 Teaching Resources Book, p. 355.

Review: Tone

The speaker feels positively about her mixed heritage. Students' diagrams should reflect this tone.

Reading Strategy Make Generalizations

A large number of details may make it difficult to get an overall perspective. Generalizations help you see the larger picture.

1. According to this poem, what are some of the issues related to racial identity that immigrants face in the United States?
2. What other issues are identified in this poem?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Identify the context clues in the following sentences that help you determine the meaning of each boldfaced vocabulary word.

1. Although originally only used to describe an area of residence Jews were forced to live in, the term ghetto is now applied to any area settled by one exclusive minority group.
2. Many connections were lost after the diaspora, or scattering, of families that emigrated.
3. Most families come from large cities, but my family came from a Polish shtetl.

Academic Vocabulary

The Morales' poem reflects the complex cultural background from which the mother and daughter are descended.

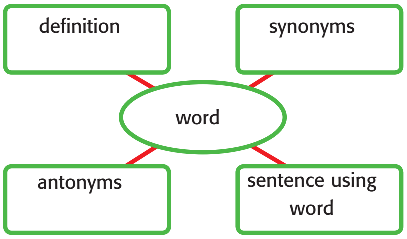
Complex is an academic word. To further study the meaning of the word complex, fill out the graphic organizer below. Use a thesaurus or dictionary where necessary.



For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Speaking and Listening

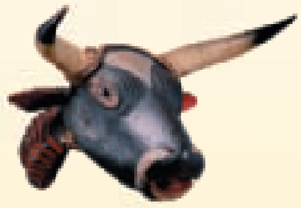
Oral Report

Assignment America is a country comprised of immigrants, ranging from those who arrived recently to those whose ancestors came centuries ago. Write a poem about your own cultural background based on "Ending Poem" and present it to your class. Research your cultural background to generate ideas for the poem. For your oral report, write an introduction that explains what you learned in your research and then recite the poem that is based on your findings.

Prepare For your research, you might consult online genealogical records, interview a family member, or read books about your cultural background. As you research, take note of images, words, and events that can add interest and authenticity to your poem. After you write it, craft an introduction using other background information you discovered in your research.

Incorporate Visual Aids To describe your cultural history, illustrate facts from your report with visual aids. You may want to use family photos and slides. You could also include representations of your cultural background such as pieces of art or photographs of native buildings, dress, and wildlife.

EXAMPLE:



Report As you rehearse and deliver your report, remember to use effective and appropriate eye contact, tone of voice, gestures, and facial expressions.

Evaluate Write a paragraph in which you assess how effectively you explained each of your points, and how well you incorporated your visual aids into your presentation.

Speaking and Listening

Use these criteria when evaluating students' oral reports:

- Did students use multiple resources and specific evidence?
- Did students use effective verbal and nonverbal techniques while presenting their oral reports?
- Did students incorporate visual aids into their oral reports?

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. Lack of identity; separation or disrespectful treatment
2. Attitudes toward people of mixed heritage; the definition of being an American

Vocabulary

1. The sentence includes the definition of ghetto.
2. The sentence contains a synonym for diaspora, "scattering."
3. In this sentence, shtetl is contrasted against "large cities."

Academic Vocabulary

complex

Definition: difficult to understand, analyze, or execute

Synonyms: complicated, intricate, perplexing

Antonyms: simple, evident, obvious, easy

Sentence/Image: Trying to explain a concept as complex as nuclear physics to an eight-year-old is rather daunting.

To create custom assessments online, go to Progress Reporter Online Assessment.

To create custom assessments using software, use ExamView Assessment Suite.

Writing Workshop

Editorial

Focus

Bellringer

Have the class brainstorm a list of technologies they think they would be unable to live without. Ask: Which technological advances are most important and most necessary for people to function? How does technology affect our daily lives? Students might try freewriting about issues that interest them to explore their ideas and feelings about technology.

Summary

In this workshop, students will write and present editorials. Students will follow the stages of the writing process, including prewriting, drafting, revising, and editing. In addition, the workshop includes two mini-lessons on tone and voice and pronoun-antecedent agreement.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1342–1349

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objectives:

Writing: Writing an editorial using the writing process.

Grammar: Understanding prounoun-antecedent agreement.

Writing Process

At any stage of a writing process, you may think of new ideas. Feel free to return to earlier stages as you write.

- Prewrite
- Draft
- Revise
- Focus Lesson: Tone and Voice
- Edit and Proofread
- Focus Lesson: Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement
- Present

Writing Workshop

Editorial

Literature Connection Persuasive writing urges the reader to accept an opinion or to take action. For example, in Silent Spring, Rachel Carson warned about the use of deadly pesticides in our environment.

> "No witchcraft, no enemy action, had silenced the rebirth of new life in this stricken world. The people had done it themselves. This town does not actually exist, but it might easily have a thousand counterparts in America and elsewhere in the world. . . . A grim specter has crept upon us almost unnoticed, and this imagined tragedy may easily become a stark reality we all shall know."

To support her viewpoint, Carson gathered facts, told anecdotes, and employed a compelling tone. To write a strong editorial, follow the goals and strategies featured below.

Checklist: Features of Editorial Writing

Goals	Strategies
To present and support a clearly stated position or claim to a target audience	☑ State a strong, clear claim ☑ Organize ideas logically and for greatest effect on your audience ☑ Support ideas with substantial, specific, and relevant evidence ☑ Attribute sources where appropriate
To use language persuasively	☑ Use persuasive techniques ☑ Open with interest and close with rhetorical force
To anticipate and address audience concerns	☑ Acknowledge and refute opposing arguments

Workshop Resources

Print Materials

- Unit 7 Teaching Resources pp. 361–363
- Writing Kit
- Success in Writing: Research and Reports

Technology

- Literature Online: Writing Resources and Grammar Resources, www.glencoe.com
- Online Essay Grader, www.glencoe.com
- Student Presentation Builder on StudentWorks Plus CD-ROM
- Media Workshop DVD
- Online Student Edition

Assignment: Write an Editorial

Write an editorial of about 1,500 words for your school newspaper that explains your opinion about an issue related to technology. As you work, keep your audience and purpose in mind.

Audience: classmates, teachers, and other readers of the school newspaper

Purpose: to persuade readers that your opinion about technology is valid

Real-World Connection

You use persuasive skills every day: to get what you want from parents and teachers, to win arguments with siblings, to influence peers, and to secure internships and jobs.

Analyze a Professional Model

☆ In this newspaper editorial, Jeremy Blachman, a blogger, presents his outlook on Weblogs. Blogs are a shortened word for Weblogs—Web pages or online journals that often include personal viewpoints about a certain issue. As you read the editorial, notice how Blachman targets his likely readers—people who like to blog. Pay close attention to the comments in the margin. They point out features that you may want to include in your own editorial.

Job Posting: The New York Times

by Jeremy Blachman

Last month, an associate beauty editor at a women's magazine was about to resign and take a job at a teen magazine, where she had been offered a similar position. Then the two magazines discovered she was blogging about work, and she lost both jobs. The women's magazine asked her to leave immediately; the teen magazine rescinded its offer.

It's understandable that the magazines would be angry about confidential information being posted on the Internet—internal financial reports, insider stock tips, studies disproving the women's magazine's recent claim that stress makes people fat.

Except the associate beauty editor wasn't posting anything like that. No, she wrote about the "magic little bags" she received at the office "stuffed with conditioner and moisturizer and lip gloss," and her addiction to perfume. But even these innocent revelations were apparently too much for the magazines to handle.

It's likely that I narrowly escaped the same fate as the associate beauty editor. This past December, I was publicly outed as the author of a Weblog called Anonymous Lawyer, where I post about Engage your reader by using a hook, or strong opener. A hook can be a story, a quotation, a startling fact, or another attention grabber.

Audience

Audience/Purpose

Address opposing viewpoints and present counterarguments.

Literature Online

Writing and Research For prewriting, drafting, and revising tools, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Writing Workshop

Editorial

Teach

Big Idea

Nature and Technology

Explain that in editorials, writers are able to express their views about the environment and technology to the general public. Ask: How has technology affected writing? (Computers have made revising written work easier, and the Internet has provided writers with easy access to information and another place to publish their works.)

Cultural History ☆

Blogs, Bloggers, Blogging One of the newest ways to publish, blogs have burgeoned on the Internet. Anyone can have a blog and publish stories, journals, articles, or other writings to be read by the general public. Blogs are so popular that a code of ethics is being created and published on the Internet. The main points in the current code are to be honest and fair, to minimize harm, and to be accountable.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Opposing Opinions Advanced learners often have firm opinions based on well-developed arguments. Challenge them to write editorials from the opposition's point of view. Have students take positions with which they disagree. They may interview people with the opposing opinions or do research to develop insight into the opponents' arguments. At the conclusion of the project, invite them to discuss how this process affected their views.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Remind English learners about the difference between fact and opinion, and that editorials use facts to support opinions. Have students review the first page of Blachman's article and identify the facts and opinions.

Editorial

Teach

Writing Skills

Counterarguments Ask: What argument against his thesis does Jeremy Blachman set forth in the paragraph beginning "But when it comes to keeping your job . . ."? (The law does not protect anyone from being fired for any reason, no matter how silly.)

Political History ☆

Blogging Protection Traditional newspaper reporters are educated about what they are allowed to write and publish. They are also protected by the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of the press. Most writers of blogs are not trained reporters, though, and the courts are not sure how traditional laws apply to this new type of publication. As the number of blogs continues to increase, lawmakers will have to address how freedom of speech applies to this technology.

Voice
Use your own personal voice to connect with your readers and appeal to their emotions.

Position/Claim
Lead up smoothly and logically to your thesis and state it clearly.

Persuasive Techniques
Use effective word choice, repetition, and hyperbole to persuade.

Support
Use detailed evidence, examples, and reasoning to support your claim.

Word Choice
Consider the connotations of the words you choose. For example, the word honest appeals to the reader's sense of ethics.

life inside a corporate law firm. It's fiction, but many of the stories are inspired by events from the summer I spent at a law firm between my second and third years of law school. Had the firm discovered the blog while I was there, I'm guessing they would have fired me. And under current law, they would have had every right to, no matter that I wasn't writing about real people, real cases or anything that would expose the firm to liability.

Given my own blogging experience, I feel that the natural argument for me to make would be that employers shouldn't be able to fire bloggers simply for having a blog, and that the law should protect us.

But when it comes to keeping your job—at least in the private sector—the law hardly protects anyone. You can be fired for being ugly, you can be fired for being left-handed, you can be fired for something you say to your secretary. And if you can be fired for something you say to your own secretary, it seems silly to say you shouldn't be able to be fired for something you post on the Internet for everyone else's secretary to read.

Besides, there are good reasons employers might want to fire people with Weblogs. Surely it's not great for the work environment if your boss finds out that you are telling the world what a jerk he is. If you're revealing trade secrets or confidential information, clearly your employer has a right to be upset. Even if you are writing innocent content, the mere fact that there's an employee in the ranks who is communicating something to a larger audience can be legitimately scary to companies that are used to controlling the information that gets out.

But here's the problem: Weblogs are worth protecting. It used to be that if you wanted to know what it was like to work for a law firm or a beauty magazine, you had to have a friend on the inside. But now that everyone can publish online, we can get these incredible glimpses into worlds we might otherwise never get to see. People across the world can share stories, commiserate and connect with each other. Potential employees can see beyond the marketing pitches.

If no one was reading, employers wouldn't be concerned. There's a demand for the first-person narratives people are writing about their jobs. There's nowhere else to go to create honest conversation about the working world.

So maybe it does make sense that the law should provide special protection for bloggers, because of the social benefits Weblogs ☆ provide. The simplest place to start would be to put the burden on

Reading Practice

Persuasion Persuasive writing attempts to influence readers to think or act in a particular way. Writers use appeals to logic or emotion, entreaty, sales techniques, and other methods. After students read "Job Posting: The New York Times," have them identify some of the ways in which Blachman tries to persuade readers. Discuss whether his methods are effective. Ask: How has Blachman influenced your thoughts and ideas about blogs?

employers to show actual harm, if they are firing someone because of her Weblog.

This would protect the kind of innocent revelations that bloggers like the associate beauty editor make on their sites, while still giving employers rights if their employees are revealing secrets, disclosing client and customer information or otherwise driving business away. In addition, companies should create Weblog policies that let employees know what management feels is off limits for public consumption.

In any case, blogs may not hurt companies as much as they fear. On Anonymous Lawyer, I paint a frightening picture of life at a law firm. People trip each other in the halls for fun, lawyers work from the hospital while giving birth and no one ever gets a weekend off. Yet a number of law students, not realizing that my blog is fiction, have assumed that the law firm I write about actually exists and have sent me résumés, wanting to work there. Maybe the truth wouldn't be as harmful as some of these employers think. Maybe it's O.K. to let people write about their jobs.

☆ Or maybe it's just too risky for us to know that beauty editors get free nail polish.

Persuasion

Tone

Convey a thoughtful, logical tone throughout the editorial.

Organization

End your editorial memorably. Restate your thesis; write a clincher statement; make a final logical, emotional, or ethical appeal; or issue a call to action.

Persuasive Techniques

Use repetition, hyperbole, irony, and other persuasive techniques.

Persuasive Techniques

Use persuasive techniques like these your editorial:

Repetition: Create emphasis through purposeful repetition.

Word Choice: Select words with especially positive or negative connotations to make a point.

Hyperbole: Exaggerate or overstate your claims or your evidence to stir your audience's feelings.

Irony: Say the opposite of what you mean for added effect.

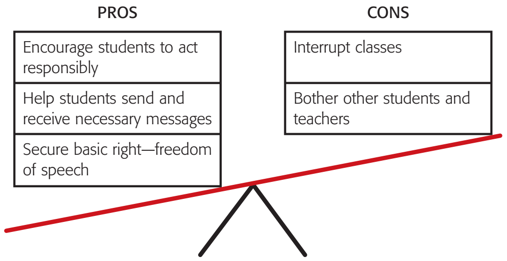
Rhetorical Question: Ask a question with an obvious answer.

Reading-Writing Connection Think about the writing techniques that you have just encountered and try them out in the editorial you write.

Prewrite

Choose an Issue and Gather Ideas Take a stand on a technological issue that concerns you. Consider opposing arguments. Then work with a small group to develop a pro-and-con chart like the one below:

Cell Phones in School



PROS	CONS
Encourage students to act responsibly	Interrupt classes
Help students send and receive necessary messages	Bother other students and teachers
Secure basic right—freedom of speech

Teach

Writing Process

Prewrite Remind students that prewriting always includes considering one's purpose for writing and one's audience. Ask: What is your purpose for writing your editorial? (Possible answer: to get readers to accept an opinion about or take action on an issue related to technology) Who is your audience? (Students may say that their audience is their teacher and their fellow students.)

Writer's Technique ☆

Effective Conclusions Ask: How does Blachman make his ending effective? (He uses humor and irony to show that blogs are not usually harmful.) How does the last sentence hark back to the beginning of the editorial? (It refers to the woman discussed at the beginning of the article, who lost her job.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Help students brainstorm topics for their editorials. Group students with similar interests and have them list the pros and cons for their topics on a graphic organizer. Have them determine the best resources to use to research their topics.

Established Once students have selected topics for their editorials, have them freewrite their ideas about the subject. Then help them organize their work by suggesting that they use separate note cards for each of the pro and con arguments they will use in their editorials.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Have students analyze the end of Blachman's blog. Ask: How does Blachman convey the appropriate tone for persuasive writing? (The words protect, rights, and policies convey a serious tone). What makes the ending effective? (It brings all the elements together.)

Teach

Writing Skills

Organization After students complete their outlines, have them consider how they will organize their arguments. Explain that they can organize arguments in one of these ways:

- Begin with the most convincing evidence and end with the least convincing.
- Build from the least powerful evidence to the strongest.

After students have chosen a plan, have them number each piece of evidence on their outline in the order in which they will use it.

Audience/Purpose

Answer: Writer concedes that students' cell phones can disrupt classes; a ringing phone bothers others.

Map Out Your Editorial

Introduction
- Create interest.
- Introduce the topic.
- Narrow the topic.
- State the thesis.

Body Paragraph(s)
- Support your opinion.
- Respond to counterarguments.

Conclusion
- End memorably.

Writing Frames

As you read the workshop model, think about the writer's use of the following frames:

- It's understandable that ______. No one is arguing that ______. Just about everyone agrees that ______.
- For this plan to work, ______ would need to ______.
- For all these reasons, it's time to change ______.

Consider using frames like these in your own editorial.

State Your Opinion Study your graphic organizer. Decide what you want to say about the issue. In most persuasive writing, a good way to organize an opinion statement or thesis is by using a sentence structure like this one:

______________________ should ______________________ because ______________________________________.

However your thesis is structured, it should clearly state your opinion and concisely sum up the basic reasons for that opinion.

Talk About Your Ideas Meet with a partner. Read your opinion statement aloud. Then, briefly discuss the reasons for your opinion. As you do so, listen to your own voice. How do you sound as you discuss this topic? What makes you most excited or passionate as you explain your ideas? What specific words, what tone, and what kinds of sentences do you use to convey your opinion and feelings? To develop your writing voice, listen to your own speaking voice so that you can remember what you said and how you said it.

Make an Organizational Plan Outline your editorial by writing how you might begin, what main points you might address, where you might state your opinion, and how you might conclude.

- Focus on getting the reader's attention and state your thesis in the first paragraph. You might experiment with placing your thesis in another paragraph, but make sure the thesis does not disrupt the logical flow of ideas.
- Win your readers over by sounding logical. Contest opposing arguments as you build support for your own opinion. Present reasons, examples, anecdotes, facts, statistics, and other relevant details.
- Wrap up your editorial with a compelling conclusion and a call to action.

Draft

Let Your Ideas Flow Drafting is the time for transferring your ideas to sentences and paragraphs. As you write, don't get distracted by spelling, grammar, and punctuation errors you might make. Instead, focus on the single task of getting your words on the page in an order that makes sense.

Analyze a Workshop Model

Here is a final draft of an editorial. Read the editorial and answer the questions in the margin. Use the answers to these questions to guide you as you write.

Writing Practice

Beginning and Ending Like any other piece of writing, an editorial should open with an idea that grabs readers' interest and end with one that is memorable. Techniques for creating both are the same: a provocative or startling statement, a relevant question, an anecdote, a definition, a question, or a statement of belief. Ask students if their opening and closing sentences illustrate any of these techniques. Have them write several opening and closing sentences and then choose the ones that best fit the issue and the audience.

Persuasion

Cell Phone Logic

Last week at Madison High, Lauren Eckler was suspended for breaking a rule—sneaking her cell phone into school. After her phone rang during Mr. Palmerino's biology class, he sent her to the office. There Mrs. Wu promptly suspended Lauren for two days because it was her third offense. Who was on the phone when Lauren's phone rang? It was her mother, asking Lauren to pick up her little brother after school. Mrs. Eckler was frantic. She had had an unexpected meeting and had been unable able to reach Lauren all day. Lauren's mother was worried.

It's understandable that Mr. Palmerino would not want his or her class interrupted. No one is arguing that students shouldn't turn their cell phones off during class. Plenty of students at this school groan when somebody's phone rings at the wrong time.

Nevertheless, the cell phone rule at Madison High should be changed. The current policy of having students "bank" their phones at the office before first period and retrieve them at the end of each day is unfair and a huge waste of time for office staff. It keeps students from getting important information and robs them of the basic right to freedom of speech.

Students have a right to have cell phones. Students need to keep in touch with their families. They need to make plans with friends. Many also need to get or send messages to employers during the day. If students had access to their phones, their calls could be handled during times of day when they are not in class. For example, students could phone while changing class, eating lunch, or taking free periods. There might also be specific times when using a cell phone would be acceptable in the homeroom. Using the phone at these times would probably not bother anyone else.

For this plan to work, students would need to act responsibly. They would have to turn off their cell phones whenever they entered a class. Teachers could help them develop this habit by reminding them—just as people say at plays, concerts, and other gatherings—"Please turn off your cell phones." Students are mature enough to understand and follow that request.

Instead, students are treated like children or prisoners. They don't have the right to their own property. They are not trusted to store their phones in their lockers or shut them off during class. They are denied the chance to send and receive important and necessary messages. In a place where students are learning how to act as mature adults, it is ironic that they are not given the chance to use their cell phones responsibly.

For all these reasons, it's time to change the cell phone policy at Madison High. Students should be allowed to carry their own phones and trusted to use them responsibly. Most of all, students should be able to talk to their families, get important messages, and practice good citizenship.

Introduction

How does this opening sentence create interest?

Audience/Persuasive Techniques

How does the writer address the opposing viewpoint? What persuasive technique appears in the final sentence?

Claim

What is the writer's opinion? How clearly is it stated?

Support

What reasons, facts, and examples does the writer offer?

Tone

What is the writer's tone?

Word Choice/Persuasive Technique

Which words in this sentence pack an emotional punch? What other persuasive techniques doex the writer use here?

Conclusion

How does the writer conclude? What makes the final paragraph effective?

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Help English learners develop their own editiorials by analyzing the structure of the arguments presented in the sample editorial. Have students create a two-column chart with the headings Pro and Con. Have them list each argument in the editorial in the appropriate column and match it with its counterpart in the opposite column. Have students work in pairs to review their lists for completeness and accuracy.

Teach

Writing Skills

Introduction

Answer: It might outrage readers to learn that someone was suspended for having a cell phone, making them eager to read on.

Audience/Persuasive Techniques

Answer: The writer concedes that students' cell phones can disrupt classes; a ringing phone bothers others.

Claim

Answer: The cell-phone rule at Madison High should be changed. It is clearly stated.

Support

Answer: Students have a right to cell phones; they need the ability to be in contact with family, friends, and employers. There are times during the day when cell-phone use would not be intrusive.

Tone

Answer: Reasonable

Word Choice/Persuasive Technique

Answer: Children and prisoners. The writer uses ethical and emotional appeals, logical reasoning, and a reasonable voice.

Conclusion

Answer: The writer concludes by repeating key points. The writer effectively links the plea to family and civic responsibility.

Teach

Writing Skills

Revise As students revise their drafts, have them check that their arguments are complete. If their arguments are weak, students may need to elaborate on their ideas. Emphasize that elaboration is the addition of relevant information. Say: If you elaborate on points in your editorial, be sure that the information you add explains, clarifies, or extends those points instead of making new points.

Writer's Technique

Tone and Voice Have students look at the draft version of the excerpt from "Cell Phone Logic." Ask: Why is the tone of the first sentence inappropriate? (The tone is too harsh.) How is the tone and voice inconsistent in the rest of the excerpt? (The second and third sentences sound informal, whereas the last sentence sounds formal.)

Traits of Strong Writing

Include these traits of strong writing to express your ideas effectively.

Ideas
Organization
Voice
Word Choice
Sentence Fluency
Conventions
Presentation

For more information on using the Traits of Strong Writing, see pages R30–R32.

Word Choice

This academic vocabulary word appears in the student model:

specific (spi si´ fik) adj. related or pertaining to one particular person, place, or event; 2. not ambiguous, accurate. There might also be specific times when using a cell phone would be acceptable in homeroom. Using academic vocabulary may help strengthen your writing. Try to use one or two academic vocabulary words in your editorial. See the complete list on pages R89–R91.

Revise

Peer Review Ask a peer reviewer to read your editorial and to identify the opinion statement. Then ask your reviewer to comment on parts that seem most persuasive or effective and parts that seem least convincing. Have your reviewer explain comments by referring to the traits of strong writing.

Use the checklist below to evaluate and strengthen each other's writing.

Checklist

☑ Do you state a strong, clear claim?
☑ Do you organize ideas logically and effectively for your audience?
☑ Do you support ideas with substantial, specific, relevant evidence?
☑ Do you attribute sources where appropriate?
☑ Do you use persuasive diction and techniques such as repetition?
☑ Do you open with interest and close with rhetorical force?
☑ Do you acknowledge and refute opposing arguments?

Focus Lesson

Tone and Voice

Tone refers to the emotions or attitude an author expresses. For editorial writing, you probably want the tone to be logical, respectful, and thoughtful. Voice includes the unique way you use language to convey the "real person" behind the words. Notice how the writer of "Cell Phone Logic" revised the tone and style.

Draft:

It's totally ridiculous for students not to have their cell phones. Like everyone else, they need to call home. They need to call their friends!!! The need to contact their place of employment also necessitates the use of a phone.

Revision:

Students have a right to have cell phones.[1] Like everyone else, students need to keep in touch with their families. They need to make plans with friends. Many also need to get or send messages to employers during the school day.[2]

1: Appropriate Tone 2: Consistent Tone and Voice

Listening and Speaking Practice

Feedback Writers may want to ask peer reviewers to consider specific questions, such as the following:

- Which evidence is most convincing?
- What additional evidence could I include?
- What opposing arguments should I respond to?

Emphasize that writers need not accept every suggested change. They should listen to all comments and incorporate the ideas they think will improve their editorials.

Edit and Proofread

Get It Right When you have completed the final draft of your essay, proofread for errors in grammar, usage, mechanics, and spelling. Refer to the Language Handbook, pages R42–R61, as a guide.

Focus Lesson

Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement

A pronoun must agree in number, gender, and person with its antecedent, or word it refers to.

Original: The plural pronoun their does not agree with its singular antecedent student.

Most of all, any student should be able to talk to their parents.

Improved: Edit the sentence so that the pronoun agrees with its antecedent. You can change either the pronoun or the antecedent.

Most of all, any student should be able to talk to his or her parents.
Most of all, students should be able to talk to their parents.

Original: The plural pronoun their does not agree with its singular antecedent Everyone.

Everyone would have to turn off their cell phones each time they entered a class.

Improved: Make both the pronoun and its antecedent plural.

They would have to turn off their cell phones each time they entered a class.

Present

☆ Follow Models and Guidelines Newspapers usually have guidelines for editorials. Find out what they are before submitting your essay. As always, neatly word-processed work is a plus.

Peer Review Tips

A classmate may ask you to read his or her editorial. Take your time and jot down notes as you read so you can give constructive feedback. Use the following questions to get started:

- Does the writer use detailed evidence, examples, and reasoning to support the claim?
- Does the writer use effective persuasive techniques?

Word-Processing Tips

Your word choices should require no excess formatting, such as underscoring, italics, or boldface, to give them emphasis. Similarly, avoid excess formatting and flourishes for the title of your essay, your name, and the page numbers.

Writer's Portfolio

Place a copy of your editorial in your portfolio to review later.

LOG ON Literature Online

Writing and Research For editing and publishing tools, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Teach

Writing Skills

Indefinite Pronouns Many students struggle with making pronouns agree with their antecedents. The following indefinite pronouns are considered singular: anybody, anyone, anything, each, either, everybody, everyone, everything, neither, nobody, none, no one, somebody, someone, and something. If one of these pronouns serves as an antecedent, the pronoun that refers to it must also be singular.

Writer's Technique ☆

Publishing Tell students that if they plan to submit an editorial to a newspaper or organization, they should include a cover letter, to an individual if possible, explaining who they are and why they are sending their work.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Help students organize their ideas before writing and revising their drafts. Have students put each main idea or argument at the top of a separate sheet of paper and then list the supporting details they want to include for each one. Remind them to verify that their supporting details are facts, reasons, or examples. Have them mark each item as F (fact), R (reason), or E (example). Have them exchange their papers with a partner to check their organizational structures.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Have students note which indefinite pronouns they used in their editorials. Ask them to identify whether the pronouns are singular or plural and to check their agreement with their antecedents.

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop

Debate

Focus

Summary

In this workshop, students will learn techniques for planning, rehearsing, participating in, and listening to a debate.

Teach

Listening Skills

Types of Propositions To help students write their own effective propositions, give them practice in recognizing types of propositions. Read the following sentences aloud and have students tell you whether each is a proposition of fact, value, or policy.

- The jury system should be abolished. (policy)
- Three years of high school English courses are adequate for a basic education. (value)
- Freedom of speech is protected by the Bill of Rights. (fact)

For help with creating presentations, see Student Presentation Builder on StudentWorks Plus.

Learning Objectives

For pages 1350–1351

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Speaking and Listening: Participating in a debate.

Types of Propositions

A proposition of fact states that something is or is not true, such as "Fast foods contribute to obesity."

A proposition of value expresses a judgment of a person, place, thing, idea, or event, such as, "Fast food presents a danger to the people of Madison."

A proposition of policy suggests a course of action, set of rules, or a law, such as, "The town of Madison should not allow any new fast-food restaurants."

A proposition of problem asks a question, such as, "What should public officials in Madison do about the problem of obesity?"

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop

Debate

Literature Connection Rachel Carson's Silent Spring caused a dramatic change in the way people think about the environment. One reason for this effect was Carson's persuasive skill. In this workshop, you will learn how to present and defend your own opinions—as well as how to anticipate and respond to counterarguments—in a formal debate.

Assignment Conduct a formal debate on a topic that you or your team members presented in your editorials.

Plan Your Presentation

When you wrote your editorial, you were persuading an audience of readers. When you debate, your goal is to persuade an audience of listeners.

A debate is a formal persuasive-speaking competition. To debate, you use some of the same skills that you have already developed to write persuasively. In addition, you must learn new skills, rules, and vocabulary specific to debating.

- Form a group of two, four, or six students. Read your editorials aloud. Choose one with particularly strong positive arguments (pros) and counterarguments (cons) to re-create as a debate.
- Develop a proposition based on the editorial. A proposition is a formal statement of an issue. A proposition is usually phrased like this: Resolved: That the policy of confiscating cell phones at Madison High School should be stopped immediately.
- Form two teams: affirmative, or those in favor of the proposition; and negative, or those against it.
- As separate teams, prepare your brief. A brief is a complete outline of the debate. It includes the following:
  - the proposition
  - the key ideas of the debate, in order of importance
  - arguments for and against each key idea
  - evidence (with sources cited) that supports each of your arguments and counters each of your opponent's arguments

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Practice

Analyze Persuasive Propositions Have students watch and analyze a television news program in which panelists argue for or against a proposition. Students should take notes on the persuasive techniques, reasoning, and proof the panelists use to argue their viewpoints. Invite students to share their observations and analyses with the rest of the class, restating the proposition and categorizing it as a proposition of fact, value, policy, or problem.

Having a thorough brief will help prepare you for a successful debate. To win a debate, however, you must provide enough proof to establish your position and refute, or prove wrong, your opponent's position by

- challenging the quality or credibility of your opponent's evidence
- noting where your opponent's evidence is insufficient in quantity
- challenging the logic of your opponent's reasoning

In a traditional formal debate, both sides make opening and closing constructive speeches of ten minutes each, in this order: first affirmative, first negative, second affirmative, second negative. After a short intermission, rebuttal speeches of five minutes each begin in the opposite order. The rebuttal gives you a chance to rebuild your case. Although you cannot introduce a new argument during the rebuttal, you can do the following:

- restate and expand your previous arguments
- offer more evidence and reasoning to counter objections
- point out weaknesses in your opponent's arguments

Rehearse

Review and rehearse the format of your debate as a group. Establish when each person will speak and how much time he or she will have.

As separate affirmative and negative teams, rehearse your opening, closing, and rebuttal speeches. As you rehearse, reword answers to sound more reasonable and coach each other to speak in a tone appropriate to a formal debate. Avoid exaggerated emotion, sarcasm, or ridicule, and refrain from personal attacks.

Techniques for Listening to and Evaluating a Debate

☑ Keep an Open Mind Try not to prejudge the speaker or the argument. Give all speakers and both sides of the argument equal and unbiased attention.

☑ Listen Purposefully In a debate, your purpose for listening is to identify the arguments and counterarguments and to judge their worth.

☑ Take Notes Note what the arguments are and how well you think that each was delivered, proved, or disproved.

☑ Listen for Persuasive Devices Separate logical, reasoned arguments from illogical arguments. Listen for and dismiss arguments that attack the person, arguments that reduce the topic to a case of false either-or reasoning, present false cause-and-effect relationships, and make false generalizations or overgeneralizations.

Go Online

Read, listen to, or view a real debate. Note that most debaters treat each other with respect. While viewing a debate, you might also note that debaters use good posture, listen thoughtfully, and speak carefully.

Speaking Frames

Consider using the following frames in your debate:

- These facts support our assertion: first, ______; second, ______; and third, ______.
- That argument is illogical because ______.
- How could it possibly be true that ______?

Presentation Tips

Use the following checklist to evaluate your debate.

- Did you prepare a complete brief?
- Did you present strong, well-reasoned arguments?
- Did you effectively refute your opponent by challenging the quality, quantity, and credibility of your opponent's evidence, as well as your logic of your opponent's reasoning?

Literature Online

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing For project ideas, templates, and presentation tips, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Have students bring in advertisements from magazines or other media that use different persuasive devices. Ask students to identify the type of persuasive device used and rate its effectiveness.

Advanced Ask students to watch a courtroom drama, a talk show, and a newscast. Ask them to identify and compare and contrast the types of propositions they observed in these three types of programs.

Teach

Speaking Skills

Voice Before students rehearse their debate, explain how their voices affect their speeches. Point out that people listening to a speech will become bored if the speaker's voice is monotone. Encourage students to do the following:

- practice changing pitch and tone to communicate enthusiasm and other emotions
- be sure the volume of their voice is such that every person in the room can hear clearly
- eliminate distracting filler words, such as uh, um, you know, and OK

Organization Clues Since it can be hard for an audience to follow an oral argument, speakers need to provide clues to the logic and organization of their speeches. For example, a speaker who has three reasons why cell phones should be confiscated at school should tell the audience that three points will be made and enumerate the points as they come up: "The first reason cell phones should be confiscated is . . . ," "A second reason is . . . ," and so on.

Self-Evaluation After completing the debate, have students write a reflection and evaluation of their performance in the activity.

Media Workshop

Analyze Media Messages

Teach

Listening Skills

Sound Bites Explain to students that journalists interview people who can contribute to the story they are writing. Quotes are an important part of any story, lending credibility and color. Because news stories in electronic media are typically shorter than print stories, sources may have their words cut down to a short statement known as a "sound bite." As a result, many public speakers have learned how to speak in sound bites. Ask: What are some sound bites that you have heard in political campaigns? (Students may think of quotes from historical figures or people in the news.)

Learning Objectives

For pages 1352–1357

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objectives.

Media Literacy:
Analyzing reasoning strategies and propaganda in print and nonprint media.
Explaining how text features, such as captions and illustrations, aid the reader's understanding.

Media Workshop

Analyze Media Messages

Connect to Literature The Vietnam War stirred the conscience of many American writers who expressed their views in poetry and fiction. Their works were often published in books and magazines—forms of print media. During the late 1960s protesters against this war gained a powerful ally—the electronic media. Television especially played an important role in molding public opinion. More than 60 million viewers watched the live combat on the nightly news.

Forms of Media

Media messages are communications that reach you in a variety of forms—print and electronic. Print media are conveyed through printed words or images, such as newspapers, magazines, books, and billboards. Electronic media include radio, television, CDs, DVDs, movies, videotapes, documentary films, and the Internet.

The form of a media message affects its meaning and the way you, the audience, interpret it. Imagine watching a political debate on television and then reading the news coverage of the same debate. Each form of media may leave you with a different impression.

The Kennedy-Nixon debate of 1960 illustrates how the form of media can influence audiences' interpretations. Though most radio listeners declared Richard Nixon the winner, John F. Kennedy won the TV image contest. To most TV viewers, Kennedy looked youthful and self-confident, while Nixon appeared tired and tense.

Media Strategies

Many media messages often seem to capture real life. All media messages, though, reflect the creator's viewpoints and are intended to shape the audience's attitudes. How can you make informed opinions as you read, listen to, or view the media in your everyday life? Refer to the checklist to help you analyze the media strategies.

Reading Practice

Analyze Sound Bites Have students search the Internet, magazines, or newspapers for short, punchy quotes that could become "sound bites." If students do not find a ready-made quote, they may find a quote in a news story and shorten it into a more memorable phrase. Have students analyze the quote and write a paragraph explaining both why the quote is effective and also how nuance or complexity is lost in isolating these words.

Strategy	Questions to Ask Yourself
source	☑ Who created the media form? How does the source affect the message?
purpose	☑ What is the goal for creating the media form? To inform? To persuade? To entertain?
word choice	☑ How does the language express the purpose of the message to the audience? Does the use of figurative language heighten the impact of the message?
cultural elements	☑ Does the message also aim to transmit culture—values that reflect a particular group or nation?
symbols	☑ Does the message use symbols that represent popular ideas or values?
target audience	☑ How is the content geared to the intended audience? Are stereotypes of people, such as children or teenagers, used to sway the audience?
design elements and/or film techniques	☑ How are visual elements or film techniques used to communicate a message or influence a viewer's response?

YOUTH FOR KENNEDY

Focus Lesson

Persuasive Techniques: Logical Fallacies

Persuasive techniques used in the media urge readers, viewers, or listeners to agree with a viewpoint or to take action. Some media messages include logical fallacies, or errors in reasoning, to sway audiences. Messages with faulty reasoning may rely on propaganda—the use of ideas, information, or rumors to spread information and to trigger emotional responses. Try to spot the following types of logical fallacies in all forms of media:

- ad hominem shifting attention away from a person's views by attacking the person
- false cause inaccurately drawing a cause-and-effect relationship between two events that follow one after another
- red herring dodging an issue by changing the subject
- overgeneralization making a sweeping statement without solid supporting evidence
- bandwagon urging the audience to think or act like everyone else
- either-or fallacy presenting only two contrasting sides of a situation or a solution instead of showing a broader range of choices

Activity

Make a Chart

Use the Media Strategies chart on this page as a guide to examine a form of print or electronic media. Create a chart in which you add a third column that answers the questions in the second column.

Teach

Reading Skills

Media Strategies Have students discuss some of the ways they can analyze media messages. Ask: When you are listening to the radio, how do you know whether you are listening to a show or an advertisement? (Ads may use a different voice, be louder, have repetitive music, or be announced as coming from a "sponsor.") Ask: If you heard someone on television say that water and soda have the same health benefits, what questions might you ask? (Does this person have medical training? What studies support this idea? What type of show is this person on? Who advertises on the show?)

Activity

Students should add to the third column of their charts as they work through the Media Workshop. Their final charts will guide them while developing their own multimedia presentations.

Language History ☆

Red Herring The term red herring may have come from an old practice of dragging a smoked herring across a trail to throw hunting dogs off the track. Now it is used figuratively to refer to an idea that is presented to distract attention.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Students may need help with some of the terminology used to describe persuasive techniques. Help students decode the name of each technique as well as the phrase "logical fallacy." Remind students that false and fallacy both come from the same root that means "to deceive." Model examples of some techniques and ask students to suggest other examples.

Ask: Which persuasive techniques are being used in this statement: Everyone agrees with me that my opponent's plan will never work because he always lies. (bandwagon, ad hominem, overgeneralization)

Teach

Listening Skills

Irony Remind students that ironic language conveys a meaning that is opposite from its literal meaning. Images add another layer that can create irony. Ask: If you consider only the image presented in this campaign ad, what is its literal message? (Students should note the hopefulness and new beginnings conveyed by the image of the child.) Ask: What message does the sound in the ad convey? (The countdown in a man's voice and a bomb explosion convey danger.) Ask: Why is this combination ironic? (The picture would seem to convey innocence, but instead it conveys the fragility that is threatened by bombs.)

Activity

1. Students' individual responses will vary.
2. Students may say that viewers might be shocked or frightened.
3. Students should provide specific examples and identify specific strategies for each example.

Media Impact: Campaign Ad

Build Background In 1964, President Lyndon B. Johnson defeated Republican candidate Senator Barry Goldwater in the race for the White House. Johnson's TV campaign ad "Daisy Girl" suggested a chilling message: If elected president, Goldwater might launch a nuclear attack. Try to picture watching the ad on television as you analyze the image and the transcript below.

Activity

Speaking and Listening

Meet in groups of four to discuss the following questions:

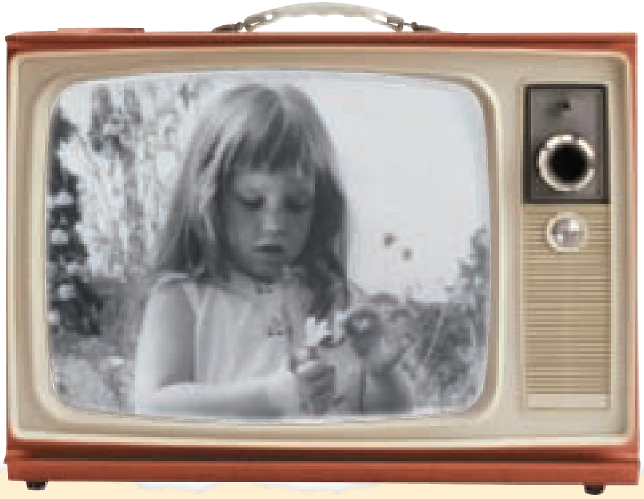
1. What visual representations and language did you find most striking? Why?
2. How might TV viewers react to the special effects—sounds of an exploding bomb?
3. What other Internet or TV political campaign ads have you seen that had a powerful impact on you as a future voter? Describe the ads and identify the media strategies. (Refer to the chart on page 1353.)

Film Techniques

The close-up of the girl's face arouses compassion.

Symbols

Both children and daisies often represent innocence.



Language: Irony

The girl counts the petals as a playful numbers game; the man counts backward to time the explosion of a bomb.

Logical Fallacy

The either/or reasoning assumes only two choices—love or death.

TRANSCRIPT

SMALL CHILD: [with flower]: One, two, three, four, five, seven, six, six, eight, nine, nine . . .

MAN: Ten, nine, eight, seven, six, five, four, three, two, one, zero.

[Sounds of exploding bomb.]

PRESIDENT JOHNSON: These are the stakes: To make a world in which all children can live, or to go into the darkness. We must either love each other, or we must die.

ANNOUNCER: Vote for President Johnson on November 3rd. The stakes are too high for you to stay home.

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Either/Or Reasoning After students read the transcript and consider the images in the ad, have them list the words and ideas that the ad associates with each side of the either/or choice that is presented. (Johnson: flower, child, live, love; Goldwater: countdown, bomb, explosion, darkness, die) Have students work in small groups to form an either/or argument that they might present in order to convince someone of their point of view. Remind students that this type of reasoning is sometimes humorous when its flaws are revealed.

Media Impact: Political Cartoon

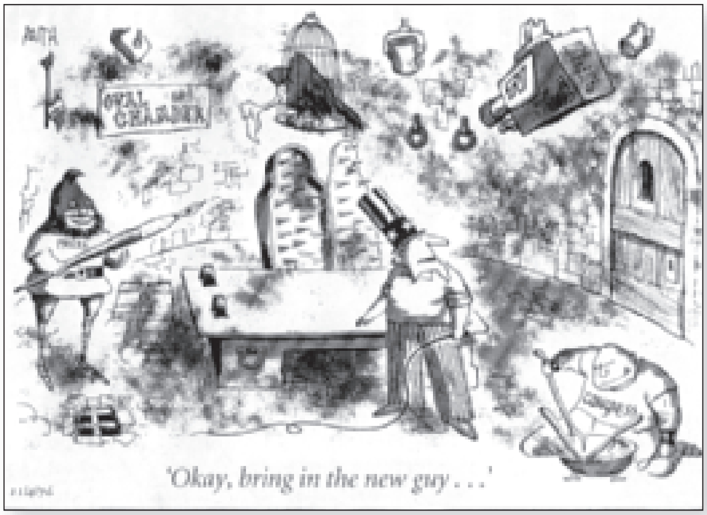
Build Background Political cartoonists are illustrators who combine pictures with words to express opinions about current events. The setting of the political cartoon below is the "oval chamber"—the oval office in the White House where the U.S. president conducts business. However, note that the office resembles a torture chamber from the Middle Ages. The political cartoonist uses persuasive techniques, such as caricature and symbol, to comment on the media and the presidency.

Symbol and Caricature

The American bald eagle is the national emblem of the United States but here looks like a vulture.

Symbol and Caricature

Uncle Sam, the bearded man with the top hat and striped pants, symbolizes the United States, but here he holds a whip.



OVAL CHAMBER
'Okay, bring in the new guy . . .'

Symbol

The TV camera symbolizes the electronic media.

Caricature

The press, or news media, assumes the form of an executioner holding a menacing, sharp-tipped pen.

Caricature

The Congress is represented as a kneeling man poking at hot coals.

Activity

Speaking and Listening

Meet in a small group to discuss the following questions:

1. What is happening in this political cartoon?
2. Who is the "new guy" portrayed in the cartoon?
3. Does the cartoon show a fair or biased portrayal of media and the government? Support your response with examples.
4. Does the cartoon influence your attitude toward national politics? Explain.

Media Workshop

Analyze Media Messages

Teach

Viewing Skills

Political Cartoon After groups of students discuss the questions, have each group present its answer to one of the questions. Have a volunteer explain the reasoning the group used to derive their answers.

Activity

1. The U.S. president's office looks like a torture chamber, which has presumably dealt harshly with "the old guy" and is ready for "the new guy." The press, the Congress, and the public are all prepared to test the mettle of the next president.
2. The "new guy" is probably the president-elect, who has not taken office yet. He is just a "guy" in a series of guys.
3. Because humor often exaggerates for effect, the cartoon shows some bias. It sympathizes with the president, who will be tested, prodded, and "tortured" by the public, Congress, and the press. However, the characters look somewhat amused and amusing rather than threatening. Uncle Sam is dressed as if he is the master of ceremonies in a televised circus, making the chamber look like a stage set.
4. Students answers will vary, but should refer to specific aspects of the cartoon that influenced them.

For video presentations related to this workshop, see Media Workshop DVD.

Teach

Viewing Skills

News Photograph Ask: Do you recall seeing a news photo recently that made an impression on you? Are there photos from the past that you found striking? Alternatively, show students a group of photos and have a discussion about them.

Activity

1. Students' captions will vary. Remind them to consider both the foreground and background and the relationship between the two. Students should also look at the way the light and shadow fall on the statue, and the scale of the people against the statue.
2. Students may bring up concepts such as freedom, power, symbols, immigration, perspective, or industrialization.
3. Students may be surprised to see the people looking out from the statue's crown because visitors are no longer allowed to go into this part of the statue.
4. Students' answers will vary, but should include a clear description of their views.

Media Impact: News Photograph

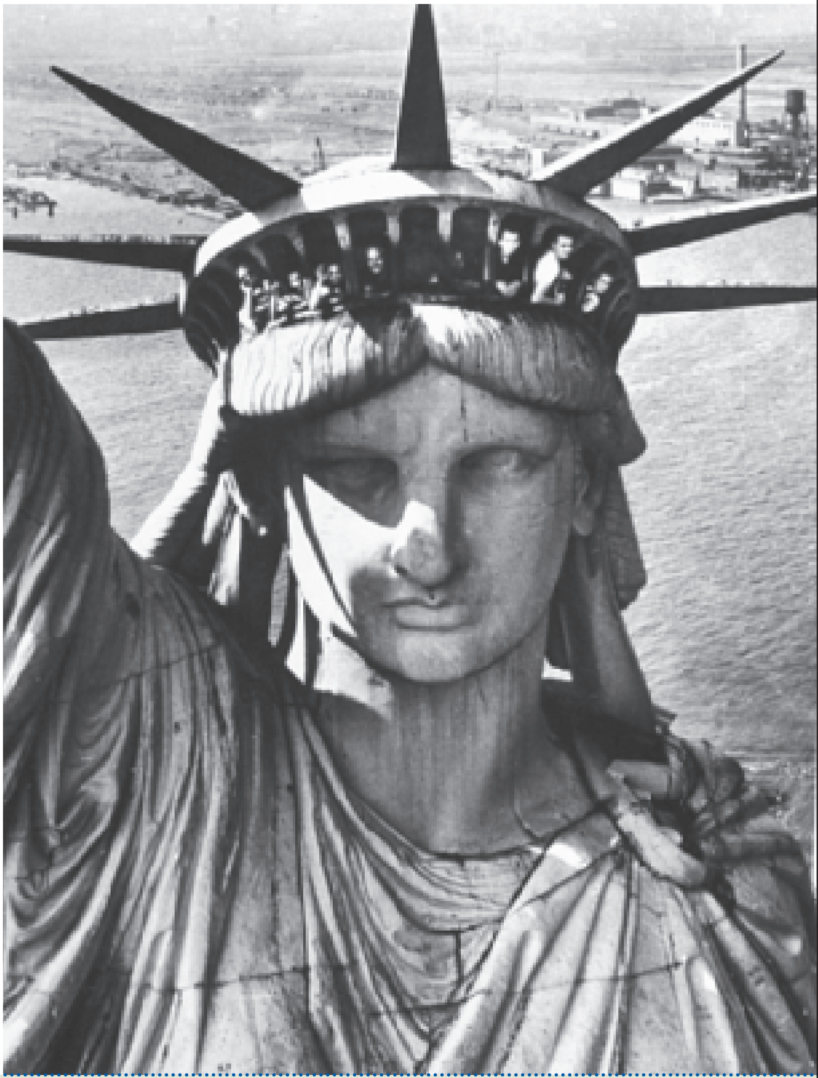
Build Background News photographers shoot pictures that grab the reader's attention and communicate information. Margaret Bourke-White, the first woman photographer to work for Life magazine, captures a unique image of the Statue of Liberty. This photograph was featured in an article titled "A New Way to Look at the U.S.: Camera and Helicopter Give an Exalted View of the Land."

Symbol

This view of the Statue of Liberty calls attention to its symbolic meaning—freedom. Note that the seven rays of the spiked crown represent the seven seas and the seven continents.

Camera Technique

The close-up view, shot from a helicopter, provides an unusual glimpse of sightseers peeking out of the windows of the spiked crown.



Activity

Speaking and Listening

Meet with a partner to discuss the following questions:

1. How would you describe the photograph? Write your description as a one-sentence caption.
2. What ideas or information does the photograph communicate?
3. Do any visual details in the image surprise you? Explain.
4. Does the photograph change the way you view the Statue of Liberty? Why or why not?

Viewing Practice

Analyze Images Have students spend up to one hour noticing and recording the images they see, preferably outside school. For this exercise, an image can be defined as any photo, drawing, sign, logo, or electronic representation. Remind them to include everything they see, from logos on tee shirts to discarded newspapers on the train to signage on stores. Once they have reached 25 images, they can stop. Ask them to reflect on the experience in a group discussion.

Media Impact: Public Service Announcement

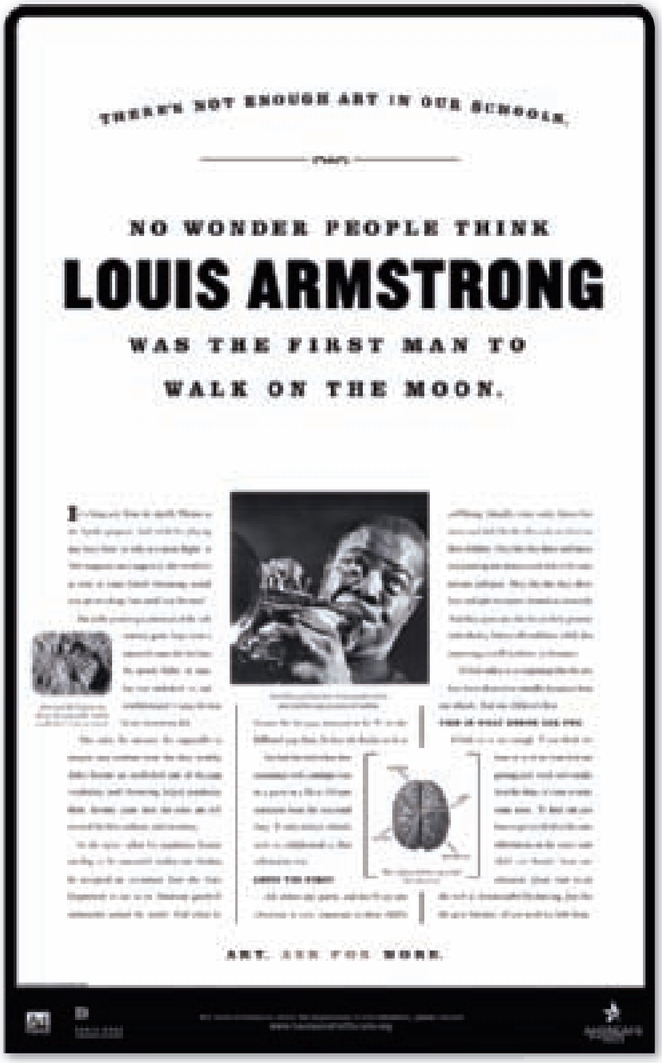
Build Background In 1969, Astronaut Neil Armstrong was the first human to set foot on the moon's surface. The public service announcement (PSA) below takes a clever spin on this historic moment:



THERE'S NOT ENOUGH ART IN OUR SCHOOLS.
NO WONDER PEOPLE THINK
LOUIS ARMSTRONG WAS THE FIRST MAN TO WALK ON THE MOON.
ART. ASK FOR MORE.

PSAs

PSAs persuade an audience to take action on a political, social, or cultural issue. PSAs published in newspapers and magazines resemble print ads used to sell products or services.

Headline

The opening statement makes one concise point.

Design Elements

The large, boldface type focuses the readers' attention on Louis Armstrong.

Activity

Plan a Multimedia PSA

Work in a small group to brainstorm ideas for presenting this print PSA in other media, such as television or the Internet. Think about the following points: (1) your target audience, (2) one action your audience should take, and (3) descriptions of media to include. Write a brief plan outlining your ideas.

Teach

Multimedia Presentation

Public Service Announcement
Ask: What is the difference between a PSA and an advertisement? (Advertisers have to pay for the time or space taken up by their ad; organizations that create PSAs do not have to pay. PSAs are typically from non-profit organizations and are supposed to address a public concern.)

Activity

Plan a Multimedia PSA Have students list what they might add or subtract from the print version of the PSA to make it effective for electronic media. Remind them to consider length, type size, sound, animation, and visuals.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Approaching level students may need help translating the print PSA into another medium. Explain that electronic media typically present ideas in smaller chunks, not expecting that people will read several paragraphs. Have them place sticky notes on those parts of the print PSA that they would retain for an electronic PSA.

Focus

The purpose of Independent Reading is to encourage students to read novels from, about, or influenced by the time period they have learned about in this unit.

Teach

Literary History ☆

Jon Krakauer Into the Wild is based on a true story in which Krakauer was not a participant, so the writer had to imagine some of the details. In his report of his own climb of Mt. Everest, called Into Thin Air, he tells a harrowing tale of an adventure that he survived but others did not. Some other climbers who were on the mountain at the same time have disagreed with parts of Krakauer's retelling. Ask: Is nonfiction always "a true story"? (Students may acknowledge that any retelling of an event includes the author's slant on the story.)

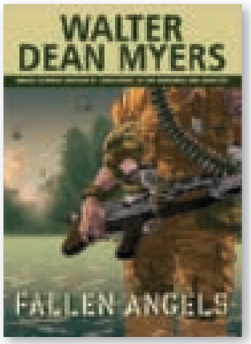
Independent Reading

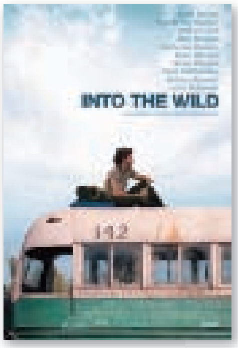
AS OPPORTUNITIES FOR WOMEN AND MINORITIES EXPANDED, American literature from the 1950s on drew upon a wider range of experience than ever before. In their writing, Walter Dean Myers, Jon Krakauer, and Amy Tan contribute to the diversity of voices in a changing America. Myers offers a perspective on the Vietnam War through a young soldier from Harlem. Krakauer uses an emerging form of writing, nonfiction narrative, to tell the tale of a young man who wanders into nature and never returns. Amy Tan weaves the stories of two generations of Chinese American women finding a balance between tradition and modern American life. Each text focuses on the issues involved in reshaping society to incorporate the values of an emerging generation.



Fallen Angels

Walter Dean Myers

Nothing Richie Perry had experienced on the streets of Harlem could have prepared him for the horrors of Vietnam. Just seventeen years old, Richie is one of America's confused young GIs, thrown into a war he does not understand. Days of boredom in camp alternate with the terror of patrol. Racial tensions flare among the soldiers; friendships take root and flourish. This realistic novel about America's longest and most bitter conflict tells a story of gripping adventure and explores the nature of war and the value of human life.



Into the Wild

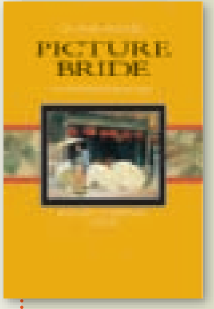
Jon Krakauer

Journalist Jon Krakauer retraces the steps of Chris McCandless who traveled to Alaska after his college graduation. McCandless's journey across America leaves readers wondering why a twenty-year-old with a prosperous future would give away all his money and walk alone into the wilderness. Through the whisperings of Thoreau and Emerson, nature becomes a character in the story and a challenge too great for McCandless to endure. This book was adapted into a movie in 2007.

Reading Practice

Compare Have each student choose and read one of these books or another book that offers a different perspective on the period from 1960 to the present. Suggest that students work together to compile a list of the issues treated in the books. Ask them to consider the impression someone a hundred years in the future might form of our society on the basis of this literature.

GLENCOE LITERATURE LIBRARY



Picture Bride

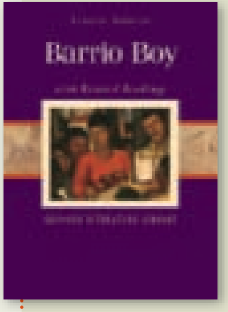
Yoshiko Uchida ☆

A young woman leaves Japan for an arranged marriage in the United States, where she faces hard work, prejudice, and difficult circumstances with courage and dignity.

A Raisin in the Sun

Lorraine Hansberry

The members of a poor African American family have conflicting ideas about how to spend a $10,000 insurance check.



Barrio Boy

Ernesto Galarza

This autobiography tells the story of Galarza's youth in a Sacramento barrio, where his family moved to avoid the upheaval of the Mexican Revolution of 1910.

CRITICS' CORNER

"[Tan reminds us] not just of the nightmarishness of being a woman in traditional China, but of the enormity of the confusing mental journey Chinese emigrants had to make."

—Orville Schell, The New York Times, 1989

The Joy Luck Club

Amy Tan

This novel by first-generation Chinese American Amy Tan draws on her family history. In the novel, four female Chinese immigrants meet regularly to play mahjong, eat, gossip, raise money, and support one another. Skillfully interweaving the voices of the immigrant mothers and their Chinese American daughters, Tan confronts issues of gender, generation, culture, and family in this powerful and touching narrative.

Write a Letter

Write a reflective letter to the author explaining how the book changed your way of thinking about the world or yourself. The purpose of the letter should be to explain the effect of the book, rather than to compliment the author. For example, write, This book has changed the way I ______. Refer to specific passages in your letter.

Independent Reading

Teach

Literary History ☆

Yoshiko Uchida During World War II, Uchida and her family spent time in a California internment camp along with other Japanese Americans. In 1952 she traveled to Japan to research Japanese folk tales. Through her work, she developed a deep feeling for her Japanese heritage. Picture Bride tells the story of many Japanese women who came to America in the 20th century.

Glencoe Literature Library

Glencoe Literature Library offers an extensive collection of hardcover books that help you encourage your students to read independently. Choose among the more than 120 full-length literary works—novels, novellas, plays, and nonfiction. Each book includes related readings from a broad range of genres. Go to www.glencoe.com for more information.

For access to all study guides for the Glencoe Literature Library, see the Literature Library Teacher Resources CD-ROM.

To create customized reading lists from a database of more than 30,000 titles, use BookLink K-12 CD-ROM.

Writing

Have students use sticky notes as they read to flag passages that affect them strongly. Evaluate letters for the following:

- a clear description of the change in their feelings or actions that resulted from reading the book
- specific references to parts of the book that influenced the change
- effective voice, word choice, and sentence variety
- attention to grammar and spelling conventions

Assessment

Focus

Bellringer

Say: Test-taking skills are beneficial throughout a person's life. Some jobs require you to take a test during the interview process and another test to be eligible for advancement.

Have students brainstorm a list of other instances where they will be required to take tests outside of school.

Summary

Assessment Explain to students that this assessment is intended to reinforce general test-taking strategies as well as to test the skills covered in the unit. They will first be asked to read a nonfiction selection and a poem and answer comprehension, context, and inference questions. Then they will be asked to respond to paragraph-improvement questions, and finally, to write an essay.

Assessment

English Language Arts

Reading: Nonfiction and Poetry

Carefully read the following two passages. Use context clues to help define any words with which you are unfamiliar. In each selection, pay close attention to the author's purpose, main idea, and uses of literary or rhetorical devices. Then, on a separate sheet of paper, answer the questions that follow the passage.

from "Transfiguration" by Annie Dillard

One night a moth flew into the candle, was caught, burnt dry, and held. I must have been staring at the candle, or maybe I looked up when a shadow crossed my page; at any rate, I saw it all. A golden female moth, a biggish one with a two-inch wingspan, flapped into the fire, dropped her abdomen into the wet wax, stuck, flamed, frazzled and fried in a second. Her moving wings ignited like tissue paper, enlarging the circle of light in the clearing and creating out of the darkness the sudden blue sleeves of my sweater, the green leaves of jewelweed by my side, the ragged red trunk of a pine. At once the light contracted again and the moth's wings vanished in a fine, foul smoke. At the same time her six legs clawed, curled, blackened, and ceased, disappearing utterly. And her head jerked in spasms, making a spattering noise; her antennae crisped and burned away and her heaving mouth parts crackled like pistol fire. When it was all over, her head was, so far as I could determine, gone, gone the long way of her wings and legs. Had she been new, or old? Had she mated and laid her eggs, had she done her work? All that was left was the glowing horn shell of her abdomen and thorax—a fraying, partially collapsed gold tube jammed upright in the candle's round pool.

And then this moth-essence, this spectacular skeleton, began to act as a wick. She kept burning. The wax rose in the moth's body from her soaking abdomen to her thorax to the jagged hole where her head should be, and widened into flame, a saffron-yellow flame that robed her to the ground like any immolating monk. That candle had two wicks, two flames of identical height, side by side. The moth's head was fire. She burned for two hours, until I blew her out . . .

And that is why I believe those hollow crisps on the bathroom floor are moths. I think I know moths, and fragments of moths, and chips and tatters of utterly empty moths, in any state. How many of you, I asked the people

Skills Practice

Read Silently Tell students that during a test, they will have to read the passages silently, and they will have to avoid being distracted by people and noises around them. Encourage students to check their comprehension by mentally summarizing what they have read after each paragraph or stanza. Students can also jot down brief notes in the margins of a test booklet or on a sheet of scratch paper to remind them of information in the passages and to clarify ideas. Remind students that they will need to read difficult passages more slowly.

in my class, which of you want to give your lives and be writers? I was trembling from coffee, or cigarettes, or the closeness of faces all around me. (Is this what we live for? I thought; is this the only final beauty: the color of any skin in any light, and living, human eyes?) All hands rose to the question. (You, Nick? Will you? Margaret? Randy? Why do I want them to mean it?) And then I tried to tell them what the choice must mean: you can't be anything else. You must go at your life with a broadax. . . . They had no idea what I was saying. (I have two hands, don't I? And all this energy, for as long as I can remember. I'll do it in the evenings, after skiing, or on the way home from the bank, or after the children are asleep. . . .) They thought I was raving again. It's just as well.

"Traveling Through the Dark" by William Stafford

Traveling through the dark I found a deer dead on the edge of the Wilson River road.
It is usually best to roll them into the canyon:
that road is narrow; to swerve might make more dead.

By glow of the tail-light I stumbled back of the car and stood by the heap, a doe, a recent killing;
she had stiffened already, almost cold.
I dragged her off; she was large in the belly.

My fingers touching her side brought me the reason—her side was warm; her fawn lay there waiting, alive, still, never to be born.
Beside that mountain road I hesitated.

The car aimed ahead its lowered parking lights;
under the hood purred the steady engine.
I stood in the glare of the warm exhaust turning red;
around our group I could hear the wilderness listen.

I thought hard for us all—my only swerving—, then pushed her over the edge into the river.

LOG ON Literature Online

Assessment For additional test practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u7.

Teach

Literary Element

First-Person Point of View

Ask students to consider point of view as they read these selections. Each is presented from a first-person point of view: readers see everything through the narrator's or speaker's eyes. Ask: How does this affect the emotional impact of each passage on readers? (Students may note that each selection draws readers into a situation through the thoughts, feelings, and actions of a person who is telling his or her own story.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Before students read "Traveling Through the Dark," have them look at the title and the first line to predict what the poem will be about. Making predictions keeps students actively engaged in the reading process. Evaluating predictions improves students' skills in looking for context clues. Have students answer these questions after they read the poem:

- How accurate were your predictions?
- What about the poem surprised you?

Assess

Reading

1. 1. A is the correct answer because Dillard describes in precise and vivid detail the fleeting moment of the insect's death. DOK 4
2. 2. H is the correct answer because the phrases "wet wax" and "flamed, frazzled and fired" emphasize the initial consonants. DOK 2
3. 3. A is the correct answer because Dillard says the moth's wings "ignited like tissue paper." DOK 1
4. 4. J is the correct answer because Dillard describes how the wax rises through the preserved abdomen and thorax of the moth, causing the flame to widen. DOK 1
5. 5. D is the correct answer because Dillard describes the death of the moth in careful, unemotional detail. DOK 4
6. 6. G is the correct answer because the moth—"robed" in yellow flames—is compared to a burning monk. DOK 1
7. 7. A is the correct answer because in the paragraph Dillard describes an intense emotional commitment to writing. DOK 4
8. 8. H is the correct answer because Dillard asks her students if they are willing to "give" their lives to writing. DOK 2
9. 9. B is the correct answer because the thought begun in line 1 is completed in line 2. DOK 2
10. 10. J is the correct answer because the speaker states "that road is narrow; to swerve might make more dead." DOK 1
11. 11. C is the correct answer because Stafford attributes the human quality of listening to the wilderness. DOK 2
12. 12. J is the correct answer because the poet's acceptance of his grim duty is sobering. DOK 4
13. 13. A is the correct answer because both authors make statements about life after observing death. DOK 4

Directions: Select the best suggested answer to each question and write its number on your paper.

Passage I (the essay excerpt)—Questions 1–8 refer to the passage from "Transfiguration."

1. What can you infer from the first four sentences of this selection?
   A. Dillard is a keen observer of nature.
   B. Dillard uses candles to get rid of insects.
   C. Moths are one of Dillard's special interests.
   D. Golden moths are especially drawn to flame.

2. What sound device is most apparent in "wet wax, stuck, flamed, frazzled and fried in a second"?
   F. rhyme
   G. consonance
   H. alliteration
   J. assonance

3. What causes the moth to ignite so quickly?
   A. The wings of the moth are very flammable.
   B. The moth's flapping wings fan the flame.
   C. Pines emit inflammatory substances.
   D. Female moths burn more quickly than males.

4. What causes the moth to continue burning?
   F. Its horn shell has a wick inside it.
   G. Its head jerks in spasms.
   H. Its force of will sustains it.
   J. Its hollow body becomes saturated with wax.

5. What word best describes the tone of the first paragraph?
   A. ironic
   B. upbeat
   C. solemn
   D. analytical

6. From the context, what do you conclude that the word saffron, in line 22, means?
   F. a material used to make candle wicks
   G. a substance used to dye monks' robes
   H. a type of prayer book
   J. a very bright yellow flower

7. What word best describes the writer's tone in the last paragraph?
   A. passionate
   B. intolerant
   C. indifferent
   D. compassionate

8. Which of the following best expresses the main idea of the analogy in the last paragraph?
   F. A moth is like a candle wick.
   G. A teacher is like an observant scientist.
   H. A writer is like a moth drawn to a flame.
   J. A moth is like a student eager to write.

Passage II (the poem)—Questions 9–13 refer to the poem "Traveling Through the Dark."

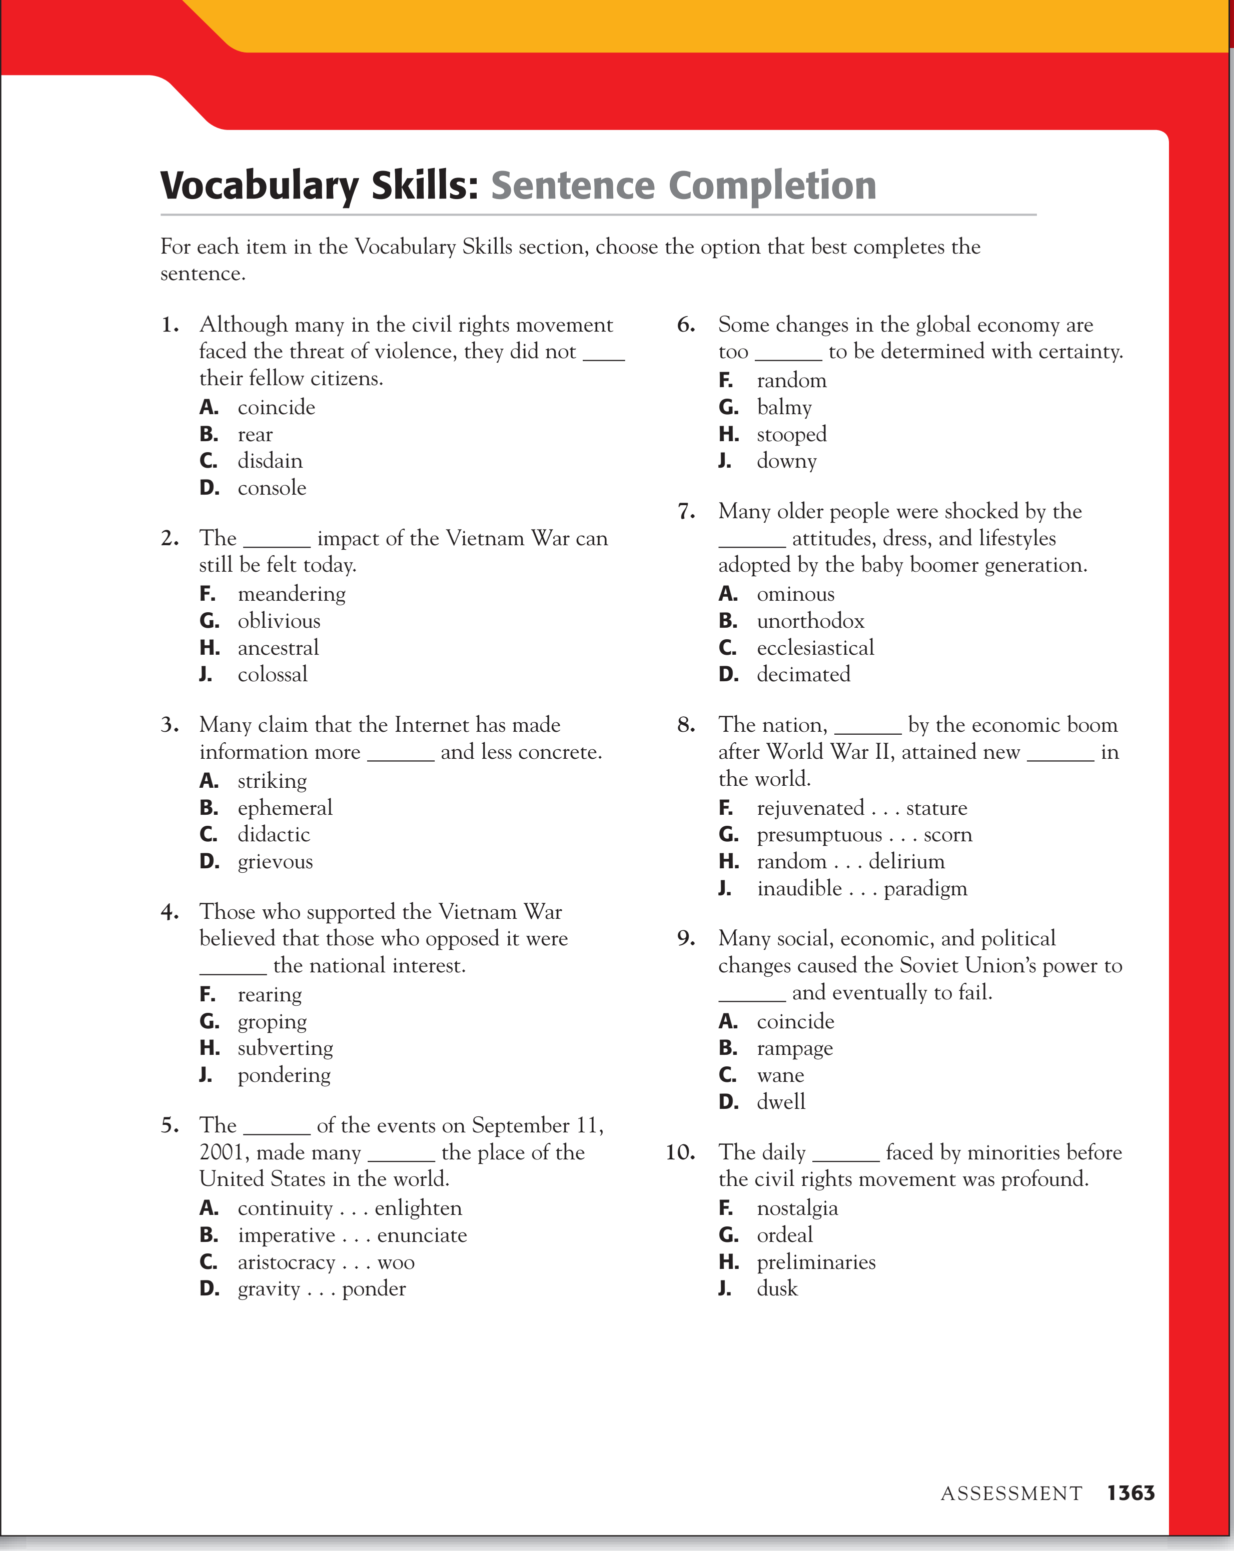
9. What literary device does Stafford use in the first two lines of the poem?
   A. onomatopoeia
   B. enjambment
   C. personification
   D. end rhyme

10. According to the speaker, why is it usually best to "roll them into the canyon"?
    F. It avoids struggling in the dark.
    G. It avoids dealing with the animal's death.
    H. It prevents the spread of disease.
    J. It prevents accidents.

11. What literary device is the speaker's claim, in line 16, that the wilderness was listening?
    A. metaphor
    B. enjambment
    C. personification
    D. rhyme

12. What is the overall mood of this poem?
    F. hopeful
    G. insincere
    H. comic
    J. somber

13. Which of the following themes do the essay excerpt and the poem have in common?
    A. Death can teach us about life.
    B. One should battle against death.
    C. Nature is in conflict with humanity.
    D. One should accept death quietly.



Vocabulary Skills: Sentence Completion

For each item in the Vocabulary Skills section, choose the option that best completes the sentence.

1. Although many in the civil rights movement faced the threat of violence, they did not ____ their fellow citizens.
   - A. coincide
   - B. rear
   - C. disdain
   - D. console

2. The ______ impact of the Vietnam War can still be felt today.
   - F. meandering
   - G. oblivious
   - H. ancestral
   - J. colossal

3. Many claim that the Internet has made information more ______ and less concrete.
   - A. striking
   - B. ephemeral
   - C. didactic
   - D. grievous

4. Those who supported the Vietnam War believed that those who opposed it were ______ the national interest.
   - F. rearing
   - G. groping
   - H. subverting
   - J. pondering

5. The ______ of the events on September 11, 2001, made many ______ the place of the United States in the world.
   - A. continuity . . . enlighten
   - B. imperative . . . enunciate
   - C. aristocracy . . . woo
   - D. gravity . . . ponder

6. Some changes in the global economy are too ______ to be determined with certainty.
   - F. random
   - G. balmy
   - H. stooped
   - J. downy

7. Many older people were shocked by the ______ attitudes, dress, and lifestyles adopted by the baby boomer generation.
   - A. ominous
   - B. unorthodox
   - C. ecclesiastical
   - D. decimated

8. The nation, ______ by the economic boom after World War II, attained new ______ in the world.
   - F. rejuvenated . . . stature
   - G. presumptuous . . . scorn
   - H. random . . . delirium
   - J. inaudible . . . paradigm

9. Many social, economic, and political changes caused the Soviet Union's power to ______ and eventually to fail.
   - A. coincide
   - B. rampage
   - C. wane
   - D. dwell

10. The daily ______ faced by minorities before the civil rights movement was profound.
    - F. nostalgia
    - G. ordeal
    - H. preliminaries
    - J. dusk

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Remind students to use guessing strategies if they do not know the meanings of all the words in the answer choices. For example, even if they know only two of the words, they can use that information to eliminate some of the choices from consideration. That will give them a better chance of correctly guessing the answer. Consider using some of the questions on this page to demonstrate the strategy.

Assess

Vocabulary Skills

1. C is the correct answer because no other option makes sense in this context. DOK 1
2. J is the correct answer because no other option makes sense in this context. DOK 1
3. B is the correct answer because the context suggests that the correct word is an antonym of concrete. DOK 1
4. H is the correct answer because no other option makes sense in this context. DOK 1
5. D is the correct answer because no other option makes sense in this context. DOK 2
6. F is the correct answer because no other option makes sense in this context. DOK 1
7. B is the correct answer because options A and C are historically incorrect, and D makes no sense in the context. DOK 1
8. F is the correct answer because no other option makes sense in this context. DOK 2
9. C is the correct answer because no other option makes sense in this context. DOK 1
10. G is the correct answer because option F is historically incorrect, and answers H and J make no sense in the context. DOK 1

Assess

Writing and Grammar

1. A is the correct answer because no punctuation is needed for a compound verb. DOK 1
2. G is the correct answer because it avoids the awkwardness and wordiness of the other options. DOK 1

Grammar and Writing Skills: Paragraph Improvement

Read carefully through the following passage from the first draft of a student's essay. Pay close attention to number and tense agreement, sentence structure, and punctuation. Then, on a separate sheet of paper, answer the questions that follow.

(1) In Annie Dillard's essay "Transfiguration," the author expresses her fascination with every aspect of the death of a moth. (2) The creature is drawn irresistibly, to the flame of a candle, and so is consumed by it. (3) The speaker observes the disintegration of each body part; the wings, the legs, the antennae, and eventually the head. (4) In language that conveys an objective, almost clinical interest, she describes each step in exquisite detail. (5) Dillard compares a writer who is devoted to pursuing his or her vocation of writing as being like a moth that is consumed in flame.

(6) In this way, the author suggests that—just as the moth was changed, or transfigured into a candle wick, a writer "burns and glows" in pursuit of the writing vocation. (7) In one sense, a writer makes a conscious choice to expend his or her life as a wick so that others may read. (8) In another sense, however, the choice is not the writer's to make this decision. (9) Like the moth drawn irresistibly to the flame that will consume it, the writer simply "can't be anything else," Dillard says.

(10) William Stafford's poem "Traveling Through the Dark" also discusses the meaning of a death, however, Stafford comes to some different, more solemn conclusions. (11) As Dillard in her essay, the speaker in the poem sees the death of an animal as a commentary on human life. (12) In eighteen precise, rhythmic lines, the poet describes the experience of discovering a dead deer alongside a narrow, dark road. (13) A further discovery, that the deer is pregnant and that the fawn is still alive, created a moral dilemma. (14) If the speaker does not push the deer off the road and into the river, they might cause other drivers to swerve and wreck. (15) The reader might well ask, of course, whether saving the deer would be possible, in any case. (16) Stafford skillfully points out, though, that sometimes one "unnatural" death can prevent another.

1. Which of the following is the best revision of sentence 2?
   - A. The creature is drawn irresistibly to the flame of a candle and so is consumed by it.
   - B. The creature is drawn, irresistibly to the flame of a candle, and so is consumed by it.
   - C. The creature is drawn irresistibly to the flame of a candle; and so is consumed by it.
   - D. The creature is drawn irresistibly to the flame of a candle: and so is consumed by it.
2. Which of the following is the best revision of sentence 5?
   - F. Dillard compares what appears to be the self-sacrifice of the moth, to the way that writers give up their entire lives, so that they may pursue their vocation.
   - G. Dillard compares a writer's devotion to a writing vocation to a moth's being consumed in flame.
   - H. Dillard compares the deliberate self-sacrifice of the moth to writers; who sacrifice their lives to pursue their vocation.
   - J. Dillard compares a moth that is sacrificing its life to a writer's sacrifice of their life in pursuit of their vocation.

To create custom assessments online, go to Progress Reporter Online Assessment.

To create custom assessments using software, use ExamView Assessment Suite.

3. Which of the following is the best revision of sentence 6?
   - A. In this way, the author suggests that—just as the moth was changed, or transfigured into a candle wick—a writer burns and glows in pursuit of the writing vocation.
   - B. In this way, the author suggests that just as the moth is changed or transfigured into a candle wick a writer burns and glows, in pursuit of the writing vocation.
   - C. In this way, the author suggests, that just as the moth was changed, or transfigured into, a candle wick—a writer burns and glows in the pursuit of the writing vocation.
   - D. In this way, the author suggests that just as the moth was changed—or transfigured into—a candle wick a writer burns and glows in the pursuit of the writing vocation.

4. What would be the best way to correct sentence 8?
   - F. Insert a comma after “choice.”
   - G. Change “the writer’s” to “up to the writer.”
   - H. Delete “this decision.”
   - J. Move “In another sense” to the end of the sentence.

5. Which of the following errors appears in sentence 10?
   - A. sentence fragment
   - B. run-on sentence
   - C. misplaced modifier
   - D. incorrect verb tense

6. Which of the following errors appears in sentence 13?
   - F. sentence fragment
   - G. run-on sentence
   - H. misplaced modifier
   - J. incorrect verb tense

7. Which of the following is the best revision of sentence 14?
   - A. If the speaker does not push the deer off the road, and into the river; they might cause other drivers to swerve and wreck.
   - B. If the speaker does not push the deer off the road and into the river; it might cause other drivers to swerve and wreck.
   - C. If the speaker does not push the deer off the road and into the river, the animal might cause other drivers to swerve and wreck.
   - D. If the speaker does not push the deer off the road and into the river, we might cause other drivers to swerve and wreck.

8. While writing the concluding paragraph of this draft, what information should the writer include?
   - F. a comparative summary of the main ideas expressed by each author
   - G. more information concerning Dillard’s experience as described in the essay
   - H. short biographies of Dillard and Stafford
   - J. a critical evaluation of both selections

Essay

Toni Morrison wrote, “The ability of writers to imagine what is not the self, to familiarize the strange and mystify the familiar, is the test of their power.” Write an essay in which you consider two works from this unit in light of Morrison’s idea. Include a thoughtful and logical interpretation of her statement, your opinion of the rightness or wrongness of this statement, and an explanation of how this statement is refuted or supported by the works that you examine. As you write, keep in mind that your essay will be checked for ideas, organization, voice, word choice, sentence fluency, conventions, and presentation.

Assess

3. A is the correct answer because it uses two dashes to set off a long clause instead of a dash and a comma. DOK 1

4. H is the correct answer because it eliminates the needless repetition that results from the inclusion of both “choice” and “decision.” DOK 1

5. B is the correct answer because a semicolon should follow “death.” DOK 2

6. J is the correct answer because “created” is in the past tense, while the rest of the discussion is in the present tense. DOK 2

7. C is the correct answer because it clarifies the meaning by substituting the noun animal for the unclear pronoun they. DOK 1

8. F is the correct answer because a summary of the similarities between the two works is the conventional conclusion to a response to literature that compares the writings of two authors. DOK 4

Essay

Evaluate essays for the following:

- a clear interpretation and evaluation of Morrison’s statement about writers’ power with evidence to support or refute it from two works in the unit
- effective voice, word choice, and sentence variety
- effective presentation, with attention to grammar and spelling conventions

Use the scoring guide below to evaluate students’ essays. DOK 3

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Suggest to students who are challenged by the meaning of Toni Morrison’s quotation that they rewrite it in their own words. Have them break the quotation into phrases and paraphrase each one. Then have them put the parts back together and consider the meaning.

Reference Section

Literary Terms Handbook R1

Foldables R22

Functional Documents R24

Writing Handbook R30
  Using the Traits of Strong Writing R30
  Research Paper Writing R33

Reading Handbook R40

Language Handbook R42
  Grammar Glossary R42
  Troubleshooter R49
  Mechanics R55
  Spelling R59

Logic and Persuasion Handbook R62

Glossary/Glosario R66

Academic Word List R89
Index of Skills R92
Index of Authors and Titles R107
Acknowledgments R110

Literary Terms Handbook

A

Abstract language Language that expresses an idea or intangible reality, as opposed to a specific object or occurrence or a concrete reality. The Declaration of Independence includes abstract language such as safety, happiness, prudence, and laws of nature.

See also CONCRETE LANGUAGE.

Absurd, Theater of the Drama, primarily of the 1950s and 1960s, that does not tell a story but instead presents a series of scenes in which the characters, confused and anxious, seem to exist in a meaningless world. Edward Albee is a leading American playwright of absurdist and other plays.

See also SURREALISM.

Act A major unit of a drama, or play. Modern drama has one, two, or three acts. Older drama may have five acts. Acts may be divided into one or more scenes.

See also DRAMA, SCENE.

Allegory A literary work in which all or most of the characters, settings, and events stand for ideas, qualities, or figures beyond themselves. The overall purpose of an allegory is to teach a moral lesson. Nathaniel Hawthorne sometimes used allegorical techniques. "The Minister's Black Veil" can be read as an allegory dealing with sin and admission of sin.

See also SYMBOL.

Alliteration The repetition of consonant sounds at the beginnings of words. It can be used to reinforce meaning or create a musical effect. James Weldon Johnson uses alliteration in the following line from "My City":

> But, ah! Manhattan's sights and sounds,
> her smells, . . .

See also SOUND DEVICES.

Allusion A reference to a well-known character, place, or situation from history or from music, art, or another work of literature. In "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock," T. S. Eliot alludes to the Italian artist Michelangelo, to Lazarus, who was restored to life by Jesus, and to Hamlet, the tragic hero of Shakespeare's play of the same name.

See pages 81 and 667.

Ambiguity The state of having more than one meaning. The richness of literary language lies in its ability to evoke multiple layers of meaning.

Analogy A comparison that shows similarities between two things that are otherwise dissimilar. Writers often use an analogy to explain something unfamiliar by comparing it to something familiar.

See page 504.

See also METAPHOR, SIMILE.

Anapest A metrical foot of three syllables; two unaccented syllables are followed by an accented one (˘˘´). In the following line from Edgar Allan Poe's poem "Annabel Lee," the feet are divided by slashes.

> Ăn̆d thĕ stárs / nĕvĕr ríse, / bŭt I féel / thĕ > brĭght éyes . . .

See also FOOT, METER, SCANSION.

Anecdote A brief account of an interesting event. Essayists often use anecdotes to support their opinions, clarify their ideas, get a reader's attention, or entertain. Biographers often include one or more anecdotes in a biography to illustrate a point about their subject.

See page 1162.

Antagonist A person or a force that opposes the protagonist, or central character, in a story or drama. The reader is generally meant not to sympathize with the antagonist. In Stephen Crane's "The Open Boat," many critics argue that the sea is the antagonist.

See also CONFLICT, PROTAGONIST.

Anthropomorphism The assignment of human characteristics to gods, animals, or inanimate objects. In the myth "The Sky Tree," all the water animals—turtle, beaver, mink, muskrat, and otter—behave like human beings.

Aphorism A short, pointed statement that expresses a wise or clever observation about human experience. "Poor Richard's Almanack" by Benjamin Franklin, contains many aphorisms, such as "What you would seem to be, be really."

See page 110.

See also MAXIM.

Apostrophe A figure of speech in which a speaker addresses an inanimate object, an idea, or an absent person. Ezra Pound addresses the long-dead Walt Whitman in "A Pact," an example of apostrophe.

See page 710.

See also PERSONIFICATION.

Archetype A character type, descriptive detail, image, or story pattern that recurs frequently in the literature of a culture. It derives from a Greek word meaning "the original example."

See pages 21, 23, and 26.

Argument A type of persuasive writing in which logic or reason is used to try to influence a reader's ideas or actions. "Civil Disobedience" is Henry David Thoreau's argument for disobeying a government's laws or protesting its policies.

See page 221.

See also PERSUASION.

Aside In a play, a character's comment that is directed to the audience or another character but is not heard by any other characters on the stage. Asides, which are rare in modern drama, reveal what a character is thinking or feeling.

Assonance The repetition of the same or similar vowel sounds, especially in a line of poetry. The repeated o sound in this line from an Emily Dickinson poem is an example of assonance:

> The Soul selects her own Society . . .

See also SOUND DEVICES.

Atmosphere The physical qualities that contribute to the mood of a literary work, such as time, place, and weather. The dominant atmosphere of Edgar Allan Poe's "The Pit and the Pendulum" is one of wretched darkness.

Author The original writer of a work. The word author comes from a Latin word meaning "to create."

Author's note A note accompanying a literary work and containing explanatory information. Author's notes usually include helpful but nonessential information. Randall Jarrell provides an author's note along with his poem "The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner."

Author's purpose An author's intent in writing a literary work. Authors typically write for one or more of the following purposes: to persuade, to inform, to explain, to entertain, or to describe.

See pages 48, 579, and 971.

See also DICTION, STYLE, THEME, TONE.

Autobiography The story of a person's life written by that person. Autobiographies can give insights into the author's view of himself or herself and of the society in which he or she lived. The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin is a famous example of the genre.

See pages 105 and 352.

See also BIOGRAPHY, MEMOIR, NONFICTION.

B

Ballad A narrative song or poem. Folk ballads, which usually recount an exciting or dramatic episode, were passed down by word of mouth for generations before being written down. Literary ballads are written in imitation of folk ballads but have a known author.

See also FOLKLORE, NARRATIVE POETRY, ORAL TRADITION.

Ballad stanza A quatrain, or four-line stanza, in which the first and third lines have four stressed syllables, and the second and fourth lines have three stressed syllables. Only the second and fourth lines rhyme.

Cólder and lóuder bléw the wínd,
A gále from the Nórthéast,
The snów féll híssing in the bríne,
And the bíllows fróthed like yéast.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow,
"The Wreck of the Hesperus"

See also METER, QUATRAIN, SCANSION, STANZA.

Bias An inclination toward a certain opinion or position on a topic.

See also NONFICTION.

Biography An account of a person's life written by someone other than the subject. Biographies have been written about many of the writers in this text.

See also AUTOBIOGRAPHY, MEMOIR, NONFICTION.

Blank verse Poetry or lines of dramatic verse written in unrhymed iambic pentameter. Each line has five feet, with each foot made up of an unstressed syllable followed by a stressed syllable. Because it may attempt to imitate spoken English, every line need not be perfectly regular. Robert Frost wrote "Birches" in blank verse:

Whĕn Í sĕe bírchĕs bénd tŏ léft ănd ríght . . .

See page 715.

See also FOOT, IAMBIC PENTAMETER, SCANSION.

Blues A melancholy style of music that originated among African Americans in the South. The blues stanza has three lines, and the first two lines are usually identical. Many writers have incorporated the idea of the blues into their work, among them Langston Hughes in his poem "The Weary Blues" and James Baldwin in his story "Sonny's Blues."

See also STANZA.

C

Cadence The rhythmic rise and fall of language when it is spoken or read aloud.

See also FREE VERSE, METER.

Caesura A pause in a line of poetry, usually near the middle of a line, with two stressed syllables before and two after, creating a strong rhythm. A caesura is used to produce variations in meter and to draw attention to certain words. Some pauses are indicated by punctuation, others by phrasing or meaning. In the lines below, the caesuras are marked by double vertical lines. The pauses are indicated by punctuation.

The tide rises, || the tide falls,

The twilight darkens, || the curlew calls;

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow,
"The Tide Rises, the Tide Falls"

See also RHYTHM.

Catalog The listing of images, details, people, or events in a literary work. In Song of Myself, Walt Whitman catalogs different kinds of workers from all over the United States.

See page 1297.

Character A person portrayed in a literary work. A main character is central to the story and is typically fully characterized. A minor character displays few personality traits and is used to help develop the story. Characters who show varied and sometimes contradictory traits, such as Dexter in F. Scott Fitzgerald's "Winter Dreams," are called round. Characters who reveal only one personality trait are called flat. A stereotype, or stock character, is typically flat. A dynamic character grows and changes during the story, as does the captain in Stephen Crane's "The Open Boat." A static character remains basically the same throughout the story.

See also CHARACTERIZATION, STEREOTYPE.

Characterization The methods a writer uses to reveal the personality of a character. In direct characterization, the writer makes explicit statements about a character, as William Faulkner does in "A Rose for Emily." In indirect characterization, the writer reveals a character through his or her words, thoughts, and actions and through what other characters think and say about that character, as in Kate Chopin's "The Story of an Hour."

See pages 241 and 1254.

See also CHARACTER.

Classicism A style that reflects the principles and concerns of the art and literature of ancient Greece and Rome. Typically, a classical style displays simple, harmonious form.

Cliché A word or phrase that is so overused that it is virtually meaningless. "Dead as a doornail," "piece of cake," and "last but not least" are all clichés.

Climax The point of greatest emotional intensity, interest, or suspense in a literary work. Usually the climax comes at the turning point in a story or drama, the point just before the resolution of the conflict, as in Ernest Hemingway's "In Another Country," when the major loses his temper with the narrator.

See also CONFLICT, DÉNOUEMENT, PLOT.

Colloquial language Informal language used in everyday conversation but not in formal writing or speech. Simon Wheeler's language throughout "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," page 497, is full of colloquialisms such as "Why, it never made no difference to him—he would bet on any thing—the dangdest feller."

See also DIALECT, VERNACULAR.

Comedy A type of drama that is humorous and often has a happy ending.

See also DRAMA, FARCE, HUMOR, PARODY, SATIRE, WIT.

Comic relief A humorous scene, event, or speech in a serious drama. It provides relief from emotional intensity, while at the same time highlighting the seriousness of the story.

Conceit An elaborate figure of speech that makes a comparison between two significantly different things. The conceit draws an analogy between some object from nature or everyday life and the subject or theme of a poem.

See also ANALOGY, EXTENDED METAPHOR, IMAGERY.

Concrete language Specific language about actual things or occurrences. Words like dog and sky are concrete, while words like truth and evil are abstract.

See also ABSTRACT LANGUAGE.

Confessional poetry A movement in poetry begun in the 1950s in which the poet writes about his or her own personal experiences. Confessional poets described their problems with mental illness, alcohol abuse, and troubled relationships in an open and direct style. Robert Lowell, Anne Sexton, and Sylvia Plath were known as members of the Confessional school of poets.

Conflict The central struggle between two opposing forces in a story or drama. An external conflict exists when a character struggles against some outside force, such as another person, nature, society, or fate. An internal conflict is a struggle that takes place within the mind of a character who is torn between opposing feelings, desires, or goals. In "The Second Tree from the Corner," the conflict is largely internal. In "The Open Boat," the conflict is mostly external.

See page 552.

See also ANTAGONIST, PLOT, PROTAGONIST.

Connotation The suggested or implied meanings associated with a word beyond its dictionary definition, or denotation. A word can have a positive, negative, or neutral connotation.

See page 372.

See also AMBIGUITY, DENOTATION, FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE.

Consonance The repetition of consonant sounds, typically at the end of nonrhyming words and preceded by different vowel sounds, as "met-cat" or "morn-barn."

See also SOUND DEVICES.

Couplet Two consecutive, paired lines of rhymed verse usually forming a stanza. The last two lines of Phillis Wheatley's "To His Excellency, General Washington" are a couplet.

See page 140.

See also HEROIC COUPLET, RHYME, SONNET, STANZA.

Crisis In a narrative, a moment of high tension that requires a decision. In Jack London's story "To Build a Fire," the crisis occurs when the man breaks through the ice into the freezing river.

See also CLIMAX, DRAMATIC STRUCTURE, RISING ACTION.

D

Dactyl A three-syllable metrical foot in which the first syllable is stressed and the following two are unstressed. The first line of the song "America" is dactylic.

> ´ ˘ ˘ ´ ˘ ˘
> My country 'tis of thee, . . .

Deism The belief that God created the world but no longer has influence or control over life or nature. Many of America's founders were deists.

Denotation The literal, or dictionary, meaning of a word.

See also CONNOTATION, LITERAL LANGUAGE.

Dénouement The outcome, or resolution, of the plot. The climax and dénouement may come close together as in Edgar Allan Poe's "The Pit and the Pendulum."

See also CLIMAX, CONFLICT, PLOT.

Description A detailed portrayal of a person, a place, an object, or an event. Good descriptive writing appeals to the senses through imagery. Eudora Welty's description of Phoenix Jackson in the first two paragraphs of "A Worn Path" is an example of detailed description.

See pages 145 and 889.

See also FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE, IMAGERY.

Dialect A variation of a language spoken within a particular region or class. Dialects may differ from the standard form of a language in vocabulary, pronunciation, or grammatical form. Mark Twain's story "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County" contains the following example of dialect:

> Well, thish-yer Smiley had a yaller one-eyed cow that didn't have no tail, only jest a short stump like a bannanner . . .

See pages 497 and 943.

See also COLLOQUIAL LANGUAGE, LOCAL COLOR, REGIONALISM, VERNACULAR.

Dialogue Conversation between characters in a literary work. Dialogue can contribute to characterization, create mood, advance the plot, and develop theme.

See pages 914 and 1027.

Diary An individual's daily record of impressions, events, or thoughts, written for personal use rather than for publication.

See also JOURNAL.

Diction A writer's choice of words. Diction is an important element in the writer's "voice" or style. Skilled writers choose their words carefully to convey a particular tone and meaning. Ernest Hemingway was known for his spare, simple diction, as in these lines from "In Another Country":

> In the fall the war was always there, but we did not go to it any more. It was cold in the fall in Milan and the dark came very early.

See pages 63 and 383.

See also AUTHOR'S PURPOSE, STYLE, VOICE.

Dimeter A line of verse consisting of two feet.

See also FOOT, METER.

Drama A story intended to be performed before an audience by actors on a stage. The script of a dramatic work may include stage directions that explain how characters should look, speak, move, and behave. The script might also specify details of the setting and scenery, such as lighting, props, and sound effects. A drama may be divided into acts, which may also be broken up into scenes, indicating changes in location or the passage of time.

See also COMEDY, PLAY, STAGE DIRECTIONS, TRAGEDY.

Dramatic convention Any of several devices that a theater audience accepts as a substitute for reality. For example, an audience accepts that a wood floor is a beach or a meadow, that a recording of birdsong is the real thing, or that the fifteen-minute interval between acts is a substitute for a longer passage of time.

Dramatic irony See IRONY.

Dramatic monologue A form of dramatic poetry in which a speaker addresses a silent listener. Edgar Allan Poe's poem "To Helen," in which the speaker passionately addresses his beloved, is an example of dramatic monologue.

See page 515.

See also DRAMATIC POETRY, MONOLOGUE.

Dramatic poetry Poetry in which characters are revealed through dialogue and monologue, as well as through description. Robert Frost's "The Death of the Hired Man" is an example of dramatic poetry.

See also DIALOGUE, DRAMATIC MONOLOGUE.

Dramatic structure The structure of a serious play. Common elements are exposition, rising action, climax, falling action, and resolution.

See also PLOT.

Dynamic character See CHARACTER.

E

Elegy A poem mourning a death or another great loss. Walt Whitman's "A Sight in Camp in the Daybreak Gray and Dim" is an elegy for soldiers killed in the Civil War.

Empathy Close identification with a person, a place, or an event, as when audience members experience the same emotions as a character in a play.

End rhyme The rhyming of words at the ends of lines as in Edwin Arlington Robinson's "Richard Cory."

Enjambment See RUN-ON LINE.

End-stopped line A line of poetry that contains a complete thought, thus requiring a semicolon or period at the end.

> If ever two were one, then surely we.
>
> Anne Bradstreet, "To My > Dear and Loving Husband"

See also RUN-ON LINE.

Epic A long narrative poem that traces the adventures of a hero. Epics intertwine myths, legends, and history, reflecting the values of the societies in which they originate. Homer's Iliad and Odyssey are two famous epics.

See also LEGEND, MYTH, ORAL TRADITION.

Epigram A short, witty verse or saying.

> Classic. A book which people praise and don't read.
>
> Mark Twain, Following the Equator

See also APHORISM, MAXIM.

Epigraph A quotation from another work that suggests the theme, or main idea, of the work at hand. It is often up to the reader to determine how the quoted work relates to the literature it introduces. T. S. Eliot's "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock" contains a six-line epigraph in Italian from Dante's Inferno.

Epiphany A sudden intuitive recognition of the meaning or essence of something. At the end of E. B. White's "The Second Tree from the Corner" the main character has an epiphany when he finally realizes what he wants from life.

Epistle Any letter, such as Abigail Adams's letter to her husband or Robert E. Lee's letter to his son. Often the term is applied to a more literary work than the informal communication written by most people. Travel letters are common and usually intended for publication.

Epitaph A brief statement commemorating a dead person, often inscribed on a gravestone. Edgar Lee Masters's poems in Spoon River Anthology are epitaphs in the form of monologues about imaginary people.

Epithet A brief phrase used to characterize a person, place, or thing. Both "Honest Abe" and "The Great Emancipator" are epithets for Abraham Lincoln. Stephen A. Douglas, who debated Lincoln, was known as "The Little Giant."

Essay A short piece of nonfiction writing on any topic. The purpose of the essay is to communicate an idea or opinion. A formal essay is serious and impersonal, often with the purpose of instructing or persuading. Typically, the author strikes a serious tone and develops a main idea, or thesis, in a logical, highly organized way. An informal, or personal, essay entertains while it informs, usually in light, conversational style. Ralph Waldo Emerson's "Nature" is an example of a formal essay.

See page 1309.

See also NONFICTION.

Exaggeration See HYPERBOLE.

Exposition See PLOT.

Extended metaphor A metaphor that compares two unlike things in various ways throughout a paragraph, a stanza, or a literary work. In Song of Myself, Walt Whitman answers the question "What is the grass?" with an extended metaphor:

> I guess it must be the flag of my > disposition, out of a hopeful green stuff > woven.
>
> Or I guess it is the handkerchief of the > Lord,
>
> A scented gift and remembrancer
> designedly dropt,
>
> Bearing the owner's name someway in > the corners,
> that we may see and remark, and say > Whose?

See also METAPHOR.

F

Fable A short, often humorous, tale intended to teach a lesson about human behavior or to give advice about how to behave. Many fables end by stating the moral or lesson to be learned, while others leave it up to the reader to infer the moral. In a beast fable, animals talk and act like humans.

See also LEGEND, PARABLE, THEME.

Fairy tale A type of folktale that features supernatural elements, such as spirits, talking animals, and magic.

See also FOLKTALE.

Falling action See PLOT.

Fantasy A literary work that is set in an unfamiliar world and that often features unbelievable characters and events. Washington Irving wrote the earliest American fantasies with his stories "Rip Van Winkle" and "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow."

See also SCIENCE FICTION.

Farce A type of comedy with ridiculous situations, characters, or events.

See also COMEDY, HUMOR, PARODY, SATIRE.

Fiction A narrative in which situations and characters are invented by the writer. Some aspects of a fictional work may be based on fact or experience, however. Fictional works include short stories, novels, and plays. Washington Irving's "The Devil and Tom Walker" and Nathaniel Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter are examples of fiction.

See also DRAMA, NONFICTION, NOVEL, SHORT STORY.

Figurative language Language used for descriptive effect in order to convey ideas or emotions. Figurative expressions are not literally true but express some truth beyond the literal level. Figurative language is especially common in poetry. The following line contains personification, a kind of figurative language, in which the sea is treated as a person.

> The sea awoke at midnight from its > sleep, . . .
>
> Henry Wadsworth Longfellow,
> "The Sound of the Sea"

See pages 194 and 1193.

Figure of speech A specific kind of figurative language such as metaphor, personification, or simile.

Flashback An interruption in the chronological order of a narrative to show an event that happened earlier. A flashback gives readers information that may help explain the main events of a story. Ambrose Bierce's "An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge" features a flashback in the middle of the story.

See page 539.

See also FLASH-FORWARD.

Flash-forward An interruption in the chronological sequence of a narrative to leap forward in time. Richard Wright uses this device in his autobiography, Black Boy, when he describes a visit to his father that occurs many years after the time of the story.

See page 900.

See also FLASHBACK.

Flat character See CHARACTER.

Foil A minor character whose contrast with a main character highlights particular characteristics, often flaws, of the main character. The dog in Jack London's "To Build a Fire" exhibits a caution and respect for the cold of the Yukon that the man obviously lacks.

See page 960.

See also ANTAGONIST, CHARACTER, CHARACTERIZATION, PROTAGONIST.

Folklore Traditional beliefs, customs, stories, songs, and dances of a culture. Folklore is passed down through oral tradition and is based on the concerns of ordinary people. Washington Irving used elements of folklore in "The Devil and Tom Walker" when he wrote of a pact with the devil, who appears in human form.

See also BALLAD, EPIC, FOLKTALE, LEGEND, MYTH, ORAL TRADITION, TALL TALE.

Folktale An anonymous traditional story passed down orally long before being written down. Folktales include animal stories, trickster stories, fairy tales, myths, legends, and tall tales.

See also EPIC, FAIRY TALE, FOLKLORE, LEGEND, MYTH, ORAL TRADITION, TALL TALE.

Foot The basic unit in the measurement of a line of metrical poetry. A foot usually contains one stressed syllable (´) and one or more unstressed syllables (˘). The basic metrical feet are the anapest (˘ ˘ ´), the dactyl (´ ˘˘), the iamb (˘ ´), the spondee (´ ´), and the trochee (´ ˘).

See also METER, RHYTHM, SCANSION, STANZA.

Foreshadowing An author's use of clues to prepare readers for events that will happen later in a story. In Tomás Rivera's "The Portrait," the salesman's demand for full cash payment foreshadows the fact that the transaction is a swindle.

See page 875.

See also PLOT, SUSPENSE.

Form The structure of a poem. Many modern writers use loosely structured poetic forms instead of following traditional or formal patterns. These poets vary the lengths of lines and stanzas, relying on emphasis, rhythm, pattern, or the placement of words and phrases to convey meaning.

See page 677.

See also RHYTHM, STANZA, STRUCTURE.

Formal essay See ESSAY.

Formal speech A speech whose main purpose is to persuade, although it may also inform and entertain. Patrick Henry's "Speech to the Second Virginia Convention" is a formal speech to persuade. The four main types of formal speech are legal, political, ceremonial, and religious.

Fourth wall The imaginary wall that separates the performers onstage in a play from the audience watching the performance.

Frame story A story that surrounds another story or that serves to link several stories together. The frame is the outer story, which usually precedes and follows the inner, more important story. Mark Twain uses a frame in "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County." Some literary works have frames that bind together many different stories.

See page 1275.

Free verse Poetry that has no fixed pattern of meter, rhyme, line length, or stanza arrangement. Leslie Marmon Silko's "Prayer to the Pacific" is an example of free verse. Although poets who write free verse ignore traditional rules, they use techniques such as repetition and alliteration to create musical patterns in their poems.

See pages 409, 1258.

See also RHYTHM, RHYME, METER.

G–H

Genre A category or type of literature. Examples of genres are poetry, drama, fiction, and nonfiction.

Gothic novel A novel that has a gloomy, ominous setting and contains strong elements of horror, mystery, and the supernatural. Edgar Allan Poe included some gothic features in his story "The Fall of the House of Usher."

Haiku A traditional Japanese form of poetry that has three lines and seventeen syllables. The first and third lines have five syllables each; the middle line has seven syllables. Usually about nature, a haiku presents striking imagery to evoke a variety of feelings and associations.

Harlem Renaissance A cultural and literary movement among African Americans during the 1920s. The center of the movement was the Harlem section of Manhattan, in New York City, which attracted artists, musicians, and writers such as Langston Hughes, Countee Cullen, Zora Neale Hurston, and others.

Heptameter A metrical line of seven feet.

See also FOOT, METER.

Hero The chief character in a literary work, typically one whose admirable qualities or noble deeds arouse admiration. Although the word hero is applied only to males in traditional usage—heroine being the term used for females—contemporary usage applies the term to either gender.

See also EPIC, LEGEND, MYTH, PROTAGONIST, TALL TALE, TRAGEDY.

Heroic couplet A pair of rhymed lines in iambic pentameter that work together to express an idea or make a point. A heroic couplet is based on the poetic form used by ancient Greek and Roman poets in their heroic epics. Anne Bradstreet uses the heroic couplet in "To My Dear and Loving Husband":

Ĭ príze / thy̆ lóve / mŏre thán / whŏle
  mínes / ŏf góld
Ŏr áll / thĕ rích / ĕs thát / thĕ Éast / dŏth hóld.

See also IAMBIC PENTAMETER, METER, RHYTHM.

Hexameter A line of verse consisting of six feet.

See also FOOT, METER.

Historical fiction Fiction that sets characters against the backdrop of a period other than the author's own. Some works of historical fiction include actual historical people along with fictitious characters.

See also FICTION.

Historical narrative A work of nonfiction that tells the story of important historical events or developments. In La Relación, Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca provides a historical narrative of the experiences of a group of Spanish explorers.

See page 416.

History A factual account of real events that occurred in the past. Typically, a history is arranged chronologically and seeks to provide an objective description of what happened.

Humor The quality of a literary work that makes the characters and their situations seem funny, amusing, or ludicrous. Humor often points out human failings and the irony found in many situations. Humorous language includes sarcasm, exaggeration, puns, and verbal irony. Mark Twain's story "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County" is told with humor, as is E. B. White's "The Second Tree from the Corner."

See also COMEDY, FARCE, PARODY, PUN, SATIRE, WIT.

Hymn A lyric poem or song addressed to a divine being or expressing religious sentiments.

See also LYRIC.

Hyperbole A figure of speech that uses exaggeration to express strong emotion, to make a point, or to evoke humor. American folklore is full of hyperbole, particularly in the stories of Paul Bunyan, who was said to have created the Grand Canyon, Puget Sound, and the Black Hills. Thomas Paine's The Crisis, No. 1 contains hyperbolic language.

See also FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE, UNDERSTATEMENT.

I

Iamb A two-syllable metrical foot consisting of one unaccented syllable and one accented syllable, as in the word divide.

Iambic pentameter A poetic meter in which each line is composed of five feet (pentameter), most of which are iambs.

> Tăll, sóm / bĕr, grím, / ăgáinst / thĕ mórn
> / ĭng sḱy . . .
>
> Paul Hamilton Hayne,
> "Aspects of the Pines"

See also BLANK VERSE, FOOT, HEROIC COUPLET, METER, RHYTHM, SCANSION.

Idiom An expression whose meaning is different from the literal meaning of the words that make it up. Phrases such as "catch his eye," "turn the tables," "over the hill," and "keep tabs on" are idiomatic expressions understood by native speakers but often puzzling to non-native speakers. Idioms can add realism to dialogue in a story and contribute to characterization.

See page 1018.

See also DIALECT.

Imagery The "word pictures" that writers create to evoke an emotional response. In creating effective images, writers use sensory details, or descriptions that appeal to one or more of the five senses. In the following lines from "Snow," Julia Alvarez uses visual imagery to make a scene vivid to the reader:

> All my life I had heard about the white > crystals
> that fell out of American skies in the > winter.
> From my desk I watched the fine powder > dust
> the sidewalk and parked cars below.

See pages 96, 663, 977, and 1305.

See also FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE, SENSORY DETAILS.

Imagism A movement among early twentieth-century poets, including Ezra Pound and Amy Lowell, who believed that the image was the essence of poetry, conveying a poem's meaning and emotion. The language of poetry, they believed, should be brief, clear, concrete, and similar to spoken language. A classic Imagist poem is Pound's "In a Station of the Metro."

See also MODERNISM.

Impressionism A nineteenth-century movement in art and literature. In literature, characters and scenes are presented as the author's or a particular character's impressions rather than as they actually are. The passage below is impressionistic:

> From beyond a curtain of green woods there came the sound of some stupendous scuffle, as if two animals of the size of islands were fighting. At a distance there were occasional appearances of swift-moving men, horses, batteries, flags, and with the crashing of infantry volleys were heard, often, wild and frenzied cheers.
>
> Stephen Crane,
> "A Mystery of Heroism"

See also POINT OF VIEW.

Informal essay See ESSAY.

Interior monologue A technique that records a character's emotions, memories, and opinions. A brief bit of interior monologue is present in Kate Chopin's "The Story of an Hour." Interior monologue is a characteristic of the stream-of-consciousness style of writing.

See also STREAM OF CONSCIOUSNESS.

Internal conflict See CONFLICT.

Internal rhyme Rhyme that occurs within a single line of poetry. Poets use internal rhyme to convey meaning, to evoke mood, or simply to create a musical effect. Edgar Allan Poe uses internal rhyme in his poem "The Raven":

> Once upon a midnight dreary, while I > pondered,
> weak and weary

See also RHYME.

Inversion Reversal of the usual word order for emphasis or variety. Writers use inversion to maintain rhyme scheme or meter, or to emphasize certain words. In the third line below, the verb comes before the subject, a reversal of the usual order of subject plus verb.

> Between the dark and the daylight,
>
> When the night is beginning to lower,
>
> Comes a pause in the day's occupations,
>
> That is known as the Children's Hour.
>
> Longfellow, "The Children's Hour"

Irony A contrast or discrepancy between appearance and reality. Situational irony exists when an occurrence is the opposite of someone's expectations, as at the end of Kate Chopin's "The Story of an Hour," when the main character's husband, thought to be dead, arrives at the front door. Verbal irony occurs when the meaning of a statement is the reverse of what is meant, as when someone says of a mean person, "Nice guy!" Dramatic irony occurs when playgoers have information unknown to characters onstage. In Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet, the audience knows Juliet is dead before Romeo knows.

See page 574.

J–L

Journal A daily record of events kept by a participant in those events or a witness to them. Mary Chesnut's journal about life in the South during the Civil War became well-known.

See page 375.

Juxtaposition The placing of two or more distinct things side by side in order to contrast or compare them. It is commonly used to evoke an emotional response in the reader. For example, in her poem "Richness," Gabriela Mistral juxtaposes the images of a rose and a thorn.

See page 815.

Legend A traditional story handed down from the past, based on actual people and events, and tending to become more exaggerated and fantastical over time. "The Sky Tree," as retold by Joseph Bruchac, is a legend about how Earth came to be.

See also FABLE, FOLKLORE, FOLKTALE, HERO, MYTH, ORAL TRADITION, TALL TALE.

Legendary heroes Idealized figures, sometimes based on real people, who embody qualities admired by the cultural group to which they belong. The adventures and accomplishments of these heroes are preserved in legends or tales that are handed down from generation to generation.

See also FOLKTALE.

Literal language Language that is simple, straightforward, and free of embellishment. It is the opposite of figurative language, which conveys ideas indirectly.

See also DENOTATION.

Literary criticism A type of writing in which the writer analyzes and evaluates a literary work.

Local color The evocative portrayal of a region's distinctive ways of talking and behaving. Mark Twain's "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County" is a classic story for its use of local color.

See also DIALECT, REGIONALISM, VERNACULAR.

Lost Generation A term attributed to writer Gertrude Stein describing a group of American writers, many of whom lived abroad, who became disillusioned at the end of World War I. Included in this "generation" were Ernest Hemingway and F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Lyric A poem that expresses a speaker's personal thoughts and feelings. Lyrics are usually short and musical. Emily Dickinson's "This is my letter to the World" is an example of a lyric.

See also POETRY.

M

Magic realism A literary style in which the writer combines realistic events, settings, characters, dialogue, and other details with elements that are magical, supernatural, fantastic, or bizarre. In Edwidge Danticat's "Nineteen Thirty-Seven," the suggestion that certain women could fly with "wings of flames" implies a magical or supernatural quality about these women.

See page 1319.

Maxim A short saying that contains a general truth or gives practical advice, particularly about morality and behavior. Also known as an adage or aphorism.

Memoir A type of narrative nonfiction that presents the story of a period in the writer's life. It is usually written from the first-person point of view and emphasizes the narrator's own experience of this period. It may also reveal the impact of significant historical events on his or her life.

See also AUTOBIOGRAPHY, BIOGRAPHY.

Metaphor A figure of speech that compares or equates two seemingly unlike things. In contrast to a simile, a metaphor implies the comparison instead of stating it directly; hence there is no use of connectives such as like or as.

See pages 90, 213, and 825.

See also EXTENDED METAPHOR, FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE.

Meter A regular pattern of stressed (´) and unstressed (˘) syllables that gives a line of poetry a more or less predictable rhythm. The basic unit of meter is the foot. The length of a metrical line can be expressed in terms of the number of feet it contains: dimeter, two feet; trimeter, three feet; tetrameter, four feet; pentameter, five feet; hexameter, six feet; heptameter, seven feet. The following lines from "Old Ironsides," by Oliver Wendell Holmes, show one line of iambic tetrameter and one line of iambic trimeter:

> Ăy, teár h̆er tat́ter̆ed énsiğn dówn!
>
> L̆ong h́as ĭt wáved ŏn hígh

See page 802.

See also FOOT, IAMBIC PENTAMETER, SCANSION.

Metonymy A figure of speech in which a word or phrase is substituted for another that is related. For example, the executive branch of the U.S. government is often referred to as the White House.

See also FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE.

Minimalism A movement in visual arts, music, architecture, and literature. Minimalist writers include the fewest words possible in their works and depict ordinary people. Sandra Cisneros is often considered a minimalist writer.

Modernism A term applied to a variety of twentieth-century artistic movements that shared a desire to break with the past. In addition to technical experimentation, modern playwrights, writers, and artists in the first half of the twentieth century were interested in the irrational or inexplicable, as well as in the workings of the unconscious mind. The poetry of T. S. Eliot and Ezra Pound, with its new subject matter, diction, and metrical patterns, came to define Modernism. One example is Eliot's "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock."

See also IMAGISM, STREAM OF CONSCIOUSNESS, SYMBOLIST POETRY.

Monologue A long speech by a character in a literary work.

See also DRAMATIC MONOLOGUE, SOLILOQUY.

Mood The emotional quality of a literary work. A writer's choice of language, subject matter, setting, and tone, as well as sound devices such as rhyme and rhythm, contribute to creating mood. Mood is a broader term than tone, which refers to the attitude of a speaker or narrator toward the reader. It also differs from atmosphere, which is concerned mainly with the physical qualities that contribute to a mood, such as time, place, and weather.

See pages 1182 and 1227.

See also ATMOSPHERE, SETTING, TONE.

Moral A practical lesson about right and wrong conduct, often taught in a fable or parable.

Motif A significant word, phrase, image, description, idea, or other element repeated throughout a literary work and related to the theme.

See page 1337.

Motivation The stated or implied reason or cause for a character's actions.

See pages 295 and 753.

See also PSYCHOLOGICAL REALISM.

Muckrakers American writers who searched for and exposed dishonesty in American government and business in the early 1900s. Ida Tarbell, Upton Sinclair, and Lincoln Steffens were leading muckrakers.

Myth A traditional story that deals with goddesses, gods, heroes, and supernatural forces. A myth may explain a belief, a custom, or a force of nature. See page 20.

See also EPIC, FOLKLORE, FOLKTALE, LEGEND, ORAL TRADITION.

N

Narrative Writing or speech that tells a story. Narratives may be fiction or nonfiction, prose or poetry.

See also NARRATIVE POEM.

Narrative poetry Verse that tells a story. Narrative poetry includes ballads and epics as well as shorter forms that are usually more selective and concentrated than are prose stories. Edgar Allan Poe's "The Raven" is a narrative poem.

See pages 255, 725, and 1332.

See also BALLAD, EPIC, NARRATIVE.

Narrator The person who tells a story. The narrator may be a character in the story, as in John Steinbeck's "Breakfast," or outside the story, as in Bernard Malamud's "The Magic Barrel."

See page 982.

See also NARRATIVE, POINT OF VIEW.

Naturalism The literary movement characterized by a belief that people have little control over their own lives. Naturalist writers such as Frank Norris and Stephen Crane focused on the powerful economic, social, and environmental forces that shape the lives of individuals.

See also PSYCHOLOGICAL REALISM.

Nobel Prize A very prestigious award established in 1901 by Alfred Bernhard Nobel, a Swedish chemist and inventor, to honor individuals' achievements in many fields, including medicine, physics, and literature.

Nonfiction Literature that deals with real people, places, and events. Written from either the first- or third-person point of view, works of narrative nonfiction tell a story and commonly have characteristics of fiction, such as setting, characters, theme, and plot. Biographies, autobiographies, memoirs, and essays are types of narrative nonfiction. Works of informative nonfiction include essays, speeches, and articles that explain a topic or promote an opinion.

See also AUTOBIOGRAPHY, BIOGRAPHY, ESSAY.

Novel A book-length fictional prose narrative, typically having a plot, character, setting, and theme. A short novel is called a novelette or novella.

O

Octave The first eight lines of a Petrarchan, or Italian, sonnet. The octave usually presents a situation, an idea, or a question.

See also SONNET.

Octet A group of eight lines in a poem.

Ode An elaborate lyric poem expressed in a dignified and sincere way. Some odes celebrate a person or an event; others are more private meditations.

See also LYRIC.

Onomatopoeia The use of a word or phrase that imitates or suggests the sound of what it describes. The words mew, hiss, caw, and buzz are onomatopoetic words. In the following example, the writer has tried to convey the sound of a character's movements:

> She heard, behind her, his scrambling movement as he left the easy chair, the scrape and jangle of the lunchbox as he picked it up . . .
>
> James Baldwin, "The Rockpile"

See also SOUND DEVICES.

Oral history The recording of people's memories and feelings. Oral history creates a more vivid and personal picture of the past and gives a voice to people who might have been hidden from ordinary historical records. It is the oldest form of historical inquiry, preceding the written word, and has become a crucial tool, following the invention of tape recorders in the 1940s.

See page 1168.

Oral tradition Literature that passes by word of mouth from one generation to the next. Oral literature was a way of recording the past, glorifying leaders, and teaching morals and traditions to young people.

See page 34.

See also BALLAD, EPIC, FOLKLORE, FOLKTALE, LEGEND, MYTH, TALL TALE.

Oratory The art of effective public speaking, or the use of persuasive skills when speaking. Oratory is common in politics, law, and religion. Today, oratory is usually called "public speaking."

See page 369.

Oxymoron A figure of speech in which opposite ideas are combined. Examples are "bright darkness," "wise fool," and "hateful love."

See also FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE, PARADOX.

P–Q

Parable A simple story pointing to a moral or religious lesson. It differs from a fable in that the characters are people instead of animals. Nathaniel Hawthorne's short story "The Minister's Black Veil" is a parable.

See also FABLE.

Paradox A situation or statement that seems to be impossible or contradictory but is nevertheless true, literally or figuratively.

> When my love swears that she is made of truth,
>
> I do believe her, though I know she lies.
>
> William Shakespeare, Sonnet 138

See also OXYMORON.

Parallelism The use of a series of words, phrases, or sentences that have similar grammatical structure. Parallelism emphasizes relationships between ideas. For example, Walt Whitman uses parallelism in Song of Myself:

> What do you think has become of the young and old men?
>
> And what do you think has become of the women and children?

See page 401.

See also REPETITION.

Parody A humorous imitation of a literary work that aims to point out the work's shortcomings. A parody may imitate the plot, characters, or style of another work, usually through exaggeration.

See also COMEDY, FARCE, HUMOR, SATIRE.

Pastoral Poetry that idealizes the simple lives of shepherds in a rural setting. Pastoral poems often exaggerate the rural pleasures and the innocence of country people living in harmony with nature.

Pentameter A metrical line of five feet.

See also FOOT.

Persona The mask or voice through which an author speaks. Willa Cather's "A Wagner Matinée" is told from the first person; however, the narrator is not Cather but the voice in which she chose to tell her story.

Personification A figure of speech in which an animal, an object, a force of nature, or an idea is given human characteristics. In Emily Dickinson's "Because I could not stop for Death," death is personified.

See pages 448, 1233, and 1292.

See also APOSTROPHE, FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE.

Persuasion Writing, usually nonfiction, that attempts to move readers to a particular viewpoint. Writers of persuasive works use appeals to logic or emotion, and other techniques to sway their readers. Thomas Paine's "The Crisis, No. 1" is an excellent example of persuasive writing.

See also ARGUMENT.

Petrarchan sonnet See SONNET.

Plain style A style of writing common among the Puritan settlers that focused on communicating ideas as clearly as possible. This marked a change from the ornate style used by European writers of that time. Colonial writers such as William Bradford thought of writing as a practical tool for spiritual self-examination and religious instruction, not as an opportunity to demonstrate cleverness.

Play A literary work of any length intended for performance on a stage with actors assuming the roles of the characters and speaking from a playwright's script.

See also DRAMA.

Plot The sequence of events in a short story, novel, or drama. Most plots deal with a problem and develop around a conflict, a struggle between opposing forces. An external conflict is a struggle between a character and an outside force, such as another character, society, nature, or fate. An internal conflict takes place within the mind of a character who struggles with opposing feelings. The plot begins with exposition, which introduces the story's characters, setting, and situation. The rising action adds complications to the conflicts, or problems, leading to the climax, or the point of highest emotional pitch. Falling action is the logical result of the climax, and the resolution, or dénouement, presents the final outcome.

See pages 929, 1073, and 1265.

See also CLIMAX, CONFLICT, DÉNOUEMENT.

Poetic license The freedom given to poets to ignore standard rules of grammar or proper diction in order to create a desired artistic effect.

Poetry A form of literary expression that differs from prose in emphasizing the line, rather than the sentence, as the unit of composition. Many other traditional characteristics of poetry apply to some poems but not to others. Some of these characteristics are emotional, imaginative language; use of figures of speech; division into stanzas; and the use of rhyme and regular patterns of meter.

Point of view The standpoint from which a story is told. In a story with first-person point of view, the narrator is a character in the story and uses the words I and me as in "In Another Country." In a story told from third-person point of view, the narrator is someone who stands outside the story and describes the characters and action as in "The Story of an Hour." Third-person omniscient, or all-knowing point of view, means that the narrator knows everything about the characters and events and may reveal details that the characters themselves could not reveal. If the narrator describes events as only one character perceives them, as in "The Jilting of Granny Weatherall," the point of view is called third-person limited.

See pages 57, 388, 520, 1003, and 1283.

See also NARRATOR, SPEAKER.

Postmodernism A movement in art, music, film, literature, and other disciplines in the late twentieth century. Unreliable narration, the blending of multiple styles and genres within a single work, and magical realism are all features of postmodern literature.

See also MODERNISM.

Propaganda Written or spoken material designed to bring about a change or to damage a cause through use of emotionally charged words, name-calling, or other techniques.

Props A theater term (a shortened form of properties) for objects and elements of the scenery of a stage play or movie or television set.

See also DRAMA.

Prologue An introductory section of a play, speech, or other literary work.

Prose Written language that is not versified. Novels, short stories, and essays are usually written in prose.

Prose poem A short prose composition that uses rhythm, imagery, and other poetic devices to express an idea or emotion. Prose poetry does not have line breaks; instead, the sentences appear in standard paragraph form.

Protagonist The central character in a literary work, around whom the main conflict revolves. Generally the audience is meant to sympathize with the protagonist.

See also ANTAGONIST, CONFLICT, HERO.

Proverb A saying that expresses some truth about life or contains some bit of popular wisdom such as "faint heart never won fair lady," "marry in haste, repent at leisure," or "out of sight, out of mind."

Psalm A song of praise most commonly found in the biblical book of Psalms. David, king of Israel around 1000 B.C., wrote many of these psalms. Occasionally a modern poet will title his or her poem a psalm.

Psychological realism An attempt to portray characters in an objective, plausible manner. Above all else, psychological realism insists that characters be clearly motivated; they should not act without apparent reason.

See also MOTIVATION, NATURALISM, REALISM.

Pun A humorous use of words that are similar in sound (merry and marry) or of a word with several meanings. In Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet, when Mercutio is fatally wounded, he says, "Ask for me tomorrow and you shall find me a grave man," meaning both "serious" and "dead."

Punctuation mark Any standard mark, such as a period, semicolon, hyphen, or comma, inserted to clarify meaning.

Quatrain A stanza of four lines. Edwin Arlington Robinson's poems "Richard Cory" and "Miniver Cheevy" are written in four-line stanzas.

See also COUPLET, OCTAVE, SESTET, STANZA.

R

Rationalism A philosophy that values reason over feeling or imagination.

See also ROMANTICISM.

Realism A literary movement first prominent in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Realism seeks to portray life as it is really lived. Realistic fiction often focuses on middle- or working-class settings and characters, often with reformist intent. Mark Twain was a realist writer, as were Stephen Crane and Theodore Dreiser.

See also NATURALISM, PSYCHOLOGICAL REALISM.

Refrain A line or lines repeated regularly, usually in a poem or song. "Let my people go" is a refrain in the spiritual "Go Down, Moses."

See page 345.

See also REPETITION.

Regionalism An emphasis on themes, characters, customs, and settings of a particular geographical region. Much of Mark Twain's work deals with life in Missouri and along the Mississippi River, where he spent his boyhood and youth. Early twentieth-century regionalists include Sarah Orne Jewett and Mary E. Wilkins Freeman in New England and Booth Tarkington and Hamlin Garland in the Midwest. Later Southern regionalists include William Faulkner and Robert Penn Warren.

See also DIALECT, LOCAL COLOR, VERNACULAR.

Repetition The recurrence of sounds, words, phrases, lines, or stanzas in a speech or literary work. Repetition increases the sense of unity in a work and can call attention to particular ideas. Walt Whitman's "Beat! Beat! Drums!" makes use of repetition.

See page 811.

See also PARALLELISM, REFRAIN.

Resolution See PLOT.

Rhetorical question A question to which no answer is expected or the answer is obvious. In his autobiography, Olaudah Equiano uses rhetorical questions to argue against slavery: "Why are parents to lose their children, brothers their sisters, or husbands their wives?" he asks.

See pages 112 and 115.

Rhyme The repetition of the same stressed vowel sounds and any succeeding sounds in two or more words. End rhyme occurs at the ends of lines of poetry. Internal rhyme occurs within a single line. Slant rhyme occurs when words include sounds that are similar but not identical (jackal and buckle). Slant rhyme typically involves some variation of consonance (the repetition of similar consonant sounds) or assonance (the repetition of similar vowel sounds).

See page 438.

See also ASSONANCE, CONSONANCE, INTERNAL RHYME, RHYME SCHEME, SOUND DEVICES.

Rhyme scheme The pattern that end rhymes form in a stanza or a poem. Rhyme scheme is designated by the assignment of a different letter of the alphabet to each new rhyme. The rhyme scheme of Edgar Allan Poe's "To Helen" follows:

Helen, thy beauty is to me a
Like those Nicéan barks of yore, b
That gently, o'er a perfumed sea, a
The weary, way-worn wanderer bore b
To his own native shore. b

See pages 569 and 938.

See also RHYME.

Rhythm The pattern of beats created by the arrangement of stressed and unstressed syllables, especially in poetry. Rhythm gives poetry a musical quality, can add emphasis to certain words, and may help convey the poem's meaning. Rhythm can be regular, with a predictable pattern or meter, or irregular. On page 707, notice how the rhythm of the first two lines of E. E. Cummings's "anyone lived in a pretty how town," gives a lilting quality to the poem.

See pages 705 and 1203.

See also IAMBIC PENTAMETER, METER.

Rising action See PLOT.

Romanticism An artistic movement that began in Europe and valued imagination and feeling over intellect and reason. Nineteenth-century American writers Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry David Thoreau, Edgar Allan Poe, Walt Whitman, and Emily Dickinson were heavily influenced by Romanticism.

See also TRANSCENDENTALISM.

Round character See CHARACTER.

Run-on line Also called enjambment, the continuation of a sentence from one line of a poem to another.

To him who in the love of Nature holds Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language;

William Cullen Bryant, "Thanatopsis"

Run-on lines enable poets to create a conversational tone, breaking lines at a point where people would normally pause in conversation, yet still maintaining the unit of thought.

See also END-STOPPED LINE.

S

Sarcasm The use of bitter or caustic language to point out shortcomings or flaws.

See also IRONY, SATIRE.

Satire Writing that comments, sometimes humorously, on human flaws, ideas, social customs, or institutions. The purpose of satire may be to reform or to entertain.

See page 1240.

See also COMEDY, FARCE, HUMOR, PARODY, SARCASM, WIT.

Scansion The analysis of the meter of a line of verse. To scan a line of poetry means to note the stressed and unstressed syllables and to divide the line into its feet, or rhythmical units. Stressed syllables (´) and unstressed syllables (˘) are marked. Note the scansion of these lines from Paul Laurence Dunbar's "We Wear the Mask."

W̆e wéar/ th̆e másk /th̆at gríns/ an̆d liés, Ĭt hid́es /oŭr chéeks /an̆d shádes/ ŏur éyes, . . .

Since each line has four feet and the rhythm is an iamb, we can describe the lines as iambic tetrameter.

See also FOOT, METER, RHYTHM.

Scene A subdivision of an act in a play. A scene is shorter than an act.

See also ACT, DRAMA.

Science fiction Fiction that deals with the impact of science and technology—real or imagined—on society and on individuals. Sometimes occurring in the future, science fiction commonly portrays space travel, exploration of other planets, and possible future societies.

See also FANTASY.

Screenplay The script of a film, which, in addition to dialogue and stage directions, usually contains detailed instructions about camera shots and angles.

See also STAGE DIRECTIONS.

Sensory details Evocative words or phrases that appeal to one or more of the five senses. Elizabeth Bishop's "The Fish" uses sensory details that appeal to the sense of sight.

See also IMAGERY.

Septet A stanza of seven lines.

Sestet A stanza of six lines.

See also SONNET.

Setting The time and place in which the events of a literary work occur. Setting includes not only the physical surroundings, but also the ideas, customs, values, and beliefs of a particular time and place. Setting often helps create an atmosphere or a mood. Setting plays an important part in William Faulkner's "A Rose for Emily."

See page 602.

See also ATMOSPHERE, MOOD.

Shakespearean sonnet See SONNET.

Short story A brief fictional narrative that generally includes the following major elements: setting, characters, plot, point of view, and theme.

See also FICTION, NOVEL.

Simile A figure of speech that uses like or as to compare seemingly unlike things. A famous simile appears at the opening of T. S. Eliot's "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock."

> Let us go then, you and I,
>
> When the evening is spread out against > the sky
>
> Like a patient etherised upon a table. . . .

See page 1223.

See also ANALOGY, FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE, METAPHOR.

Slant rhyme See RHYME.

Slave narrative Autobiographical account of the life of a formerly enslaved person. These documents helped expose the cruelty and inhumanity of slavery. The excerpt from Frederick Douglass's My Bondage and My Freedom is a slave narrative.

See pages 70 and 362.

See also AUTOBIOGRAPHY, MEMOIR.

Soliloquy In a drama, a long speech by a character who is alone on stage. A soliloquy reveals the private thoughts and emotions of that character.

See also DRAMATIC MONOLOGUE, MONOLOGUE.

Sonnet A lyric poem of fourteen lines, typically written in iambic pentameter and usually following strict patterns of stanza divisions and rhymes.

The Shakespearean, or English, sonnet consists of three quatrains, or four-line stanzas, followed by a couplet, or pair of rhyming lines. The rhyme scheme is typically abab, cdcd, efef, gg. The rhyming couplet often presents a conclusion to the issues or questions presented in the three quatrains.

In the Petrarchan, or Italian, sonnet, fourteen lines are divided into two stanzas, the eight-line octave and the six-line sestet. The sestet usually responds to a question or situation posed by the octave. The rhyme scheme for the octave is typically abbaabba; for the sestet the rhyme scheme is typically cdecde. "Douglass" by Paul Laurence Dunbar is a Petrarchan sonnet.

See page 787.

See also COUPLET, RHYME SCHEME, STANZA.

Sound devices Techniques used, especially in poetry, to appeal to the ear. Writers use sound devices to enhance the sense of rhythm, to emphasize particular sounds, or to add to the musical quality of their writing and rhyme.

See also ALLITERATION, ASSONANCE, CONSONANCE, ONOMATOPOEIA, RHYME.

Speaker The voice speaking in a poem, similar to a narrator in a work of prose. Sometimes the speaker's voice is that of the poet, sometimes that of a fictional person or even a thing. The speaker's words communicate a particular tone, or attitude, toward the subject of the poem. In Anne Bradstreet's "To My Dear and Loving Husband," the speaker is the poet, who addresses her husband in a tone of passionate devotion. One should never assume that the speaker and the writer are identical, however. The speaker in "The Raven" is not Edgar Allan Poe, the poet.

See also TONE.

Spondee A metrical foot of two accented syllables.

See also FOOT, METER.

Stage directions Instructions written by a playwright to describe the appearance and actions of characters, as well as the sets, costumes, and lighting. Arthur Miller's play The Crucible and Tennessee Williams's play The Glass Menagerie contain numerous stage directions.

See page 1051.

See also DRAMA.

Stanza A group of lines forming a unit in a poem or song. A stanza in a poem is similar to a paragraph in prose. Typically, stanzas in a poem are separated by a line of space.

See page 829.

See also SONNET.

Stereotype A character who is not developed as an individual, but instead represents a collection of traits and mannerisms supposedly shared by all members of a group.

See also CHARACTER.

Stream of consciousness The literary representation of a character's free-flowing thoughts, feelings, and memories. Stream-of-consciousness writing does not always employ conventional sentence structure or other rules of grammar and usage. Parts of T. S. Eliot's poem "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock" exemplify stream of consciousness; Katherine Anne Porter's "The Jilting of Granny Weatherall" does as well.

See page 774.

See also SURREALISM.

Structure The particular order or pattern a writer uses to present ideas. Narratives commonly follow a chronological order, while the structure of persuasive or expository writing may vary. Listing detailed information, using cause and effect, or describing a problem and then offering a solution are some other ways a writer can present a topic.

See pages 121, 683, and 1156.

Style The expressive qualities that distinguish an author's work, including word choice and the length and arrangement of sentences, as well as the use of figurative language and imagery. Style can reveal an author's attitude and purpose in writing.

See page 743.

See also AUTHOR'S PURPOSE, DICTION, FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE, IMAGERY, TONE.

Subject The topic of a literary work.

Surprise ending An unexpected plot twist at the end of a story. The ending might surprise readers because the author provides misleading clues or withholds important information.

Surrealism A literary and artistic style that originated in Europe in the 1920s. Surrealist works feature bizarre and impossible events treated as if they were normal. Surrealist poetry expresses the workings of the unconscious mind and how these workings interact with outer reality. This poetry is characterized by the use of images from dreams and stream-of-consciousness associations.

See also STREAM OF CONSCIOUSNESS.

Suspense A feeling of curiosity, uncertainty, or even dread about what is going to happen next in a story. Writers increase the level of suspense by creating a threat to the central character and raising questions in a reader's mind about the outcome of a conflict. Suspense is especially important in the plot of an adventure or mystery story.

See page 262.

See also PROTAGONIST.

Symbol Any object, person, place, or experience that exists on a literal level but also represents, or stands for, something else, usually something abstract. In Carl Sandburg's "Chicago," the hog butcher, tool maker, and stacker of wheat symbolize the city of Chicago.

See pages 279 and 1287.

See also ALLEGORY, FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE.

Symbolist poetry A kind of poetry that emphasizes suggestion and inward experience instead of explicit description. The symbolist poets influenced twentieth-century writers such as T. S. Eliot and Ezra Pound.

See page 660.

See also IMAGISM, MODERNISM.

Synecdoche A figure of speech in which a part is used for the whole or a whole is used for a part. In "All nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues," tongues (a part) is used for the whole (languages).

T

Tall tale A type of folklore associated with the American frontier. Tall tales are humorous stories that contain wild exaggerations and inventions. Typically, their heroes are bold but sometimes foolish characters who may have superhuman abilities or who may act as if they do. Tall tales are not intended to be believable; their exaggerations are used for comic effect, as in Mark Twain's "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," when Simon Wheeler describes the frog: "[Y]ou'd see that frog whirling in the air like a doughnut—see him turn one summerset, or may be a couple, if he got a good start, and come down flat-footed and all right, like a cat."

See also FOLKLORE, FOLKTALE.

Tercet A stanza of three rhyming lines.

Terza rima A verse form with a sequence of three-line stanzas rhyming aba, bcb, cdc, and so on. Robert Frost's poem "Acquainted with the Night" is written in terza rima.

Tetrameter A metrical line of four feet.

> Listen, / my children, / and you / shall > hear
>
> Of the mid / night ride / of Paul / > Revere . . .
>
> Henry Wadsworth Longfellow,
> "Paul Revere's Ride"

See also FOOT, METER.

Theater of the absurd See ABSURD, THEATER OF THE Theme The central message of a work of literature, often expressed as a general statement about life. Some works have a stated theme, which is expressed directly. More works have an implied theme, which is revealed gradually through events, dialogue, or description. A literary work may have more than one theme. Some themes are universal, meaning that they are widely held ideas about life. Themes and topics are different. The topic of a work might be love; the theme would be what the writer says about love, that it is painful or wonderful or both, for example.

See pages 189, 689, and 867.

See also AUTHOR'S PURPOSE, FABLE, MORAL.

Thesis The main idea of a work of nonfiction. The thesis may be stated directly or implied.

See page 204.

See also NONFICTION.

Tone An author's attitude toward his or her subject matter or the audience. Tone is conveyed through elements such as word choice, punctuation, sentence structure, and figures of speech. A writer's tone might convey a variety of attitudes such as sympathy, objectivity, or humor.

See pages 133, 532, 700, and 1215.

See also AUTHOR'S PURPOSE, DICTION, FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE, MOOD, STYLE, VOICE.

Tragedy A play in which a main character suffers a downfall. That character, the tragic hero, is typically a person of dignified or heroic stature. The downfall may result from outside forces or from a weakness within the character, which is known as a tragic flaw.

See page 1096.

See also DRAMA, HERO.

Transcendentalism A philosophical and literary movement whose followers believed that basic truths could be reached only by "going beyond," or transcending, reason and reflecting on the world of the spirit and on one's own deep and free intuition. Transcendentalists believed that the individual could transform the world—not only through writing, but also through utopian communities, antislavery activity, and other social action.

See also RATIONALISM, ROMANTICISM.

Trimeter A metrical line of three feet.

See also FOOT, METER.

Triplet See TERCET.

Trochee A metrical foot made up of one accented and one unaccented syllable. The lines below, each of which has four feet, can be described as trochaic tetrameter.

> Filléd wĭth / aẃe wăs / Hí ă / wáth ă
> Át thĕ / aś pĕct / óf hĭs / fáth ĕr.
>
> Henry Wadsworth Longfellow,
> The Song of Hiawatha

See also FOOT.

U–W

Understatement Language that makes something seem less important than it really is.

See also HYPERBOLE.

Unreliable narrator A narrator whose account of events is faulty or distorted in some way. Some unreliable narrators intentionally mislead readers. Others fail to understand the true meaning of the events they describe. For example, if a story is narrated by a small child, he or she might misinterpret the behavior of adult characters. Most stories with unreliable narrators are written in the first person.

See also POSTMODERNISM.

Verisimilitude The illusion of reality, often achieved by presenting concrete, detailed descriptions.

Vernacular Ordinary speech of a particular country or region. Vernacular language is more casual than cultivated, formal speech. Slang and dialect are commonly described as vernacular language. Regional writers sometimes employ vernacular language for enhanced realism. Use of vernacular is common in the works of Mark Twain, Zora Neale Hurston, and Alice Walker.

See also COLLOQUIAL LANGUAGE, DIALECT, LOCAL COLOR, REGIONALISM.

Verse paragraph A group of lines in a poem that forms a unit. Unlike a stanza, a verse paragraph does not have a fixed number of lines. While poems written before the twentieth century usually contain stanzas, many contemporary poems are made up of verse paragraphs. Verse paragraphs help to organize a poem into thoughts, as paragraphs help to organize prose.

See page 1209.

See also STANZA.

Voice The distinctive use of language that conveys the author's or narrator's personality to the reader. Voice is determined by elements of style such as word choice and tone.

See page 420.

See also AUTHOR'S PURPOSE, DICTION, NARRATOR, STYLE, TONE.

Wit An exhibition of cleverness and humor. The works of Dorothy Parker, Mark Twain, and Donald Barthelme are known for their wit.

See also COMEDY, HUMOR, SARCASM, SATIRE.

Word choice See DICTION.

Reading and Thinking with Foldables®

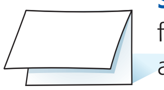
by Dinah Zike, M.Ed., Creator of Foldables®

Using Foldables® Makes Learning Easy and Enjoyable

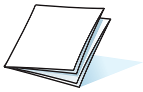
Anyone who has paper, scissors, and maybe a stapler or some glue can use Foldables in the classroom. Just follow the illustrated step-by-step directions. Check out the following sample:

Reading Objective: to understand how one character's actions affect other characters in a short story

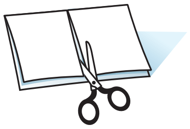
Use this Foldable to keep track of what the main character does and how his or her actions affect the other characters.



Step ① Place a sheet of paper in front of you so that the short side is at the top. Fold the paper in half from top to bottom.



Step ② Fold in half again, from side to side, to divide the paper into two columns. Unfold the paper so that the two columns show.



Step ③ Draw a line along the column crease. Then, through the top layer of paper, cut along the line you drew, forming two tabs.

Step ④ Label the tabs Main character's actions and Effectson others.

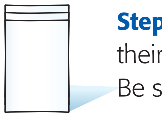
Step ⑤ As you read, record the main character's actions under the first tab. Record how each of those actions affects other characters under the second tab.

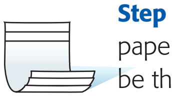
Short Story

Reading Objective: to analyze a short story on the basis of its literary elements

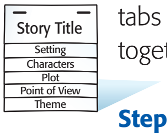
As you read, use the following Foldable to keep track of five literary elements in the short story.



Step ① Stack three sheets of paper with their top edges about a half-inch apart. Be sure to keep the side edges straight.



Step ② Fold up the bottom edges of the paper to form six tabs, five of which will be the same size.



Step ③ Crease the paper to hold the tabs in place and staple the sheets together along the crease.

Step ④ Turn the sheets so that the stapled side is at the top. Write the title of the story on the top tab. Label the five remaining tabs Setting, Characters, Plot, Point of View, and Theme.

Step ⑤ Use your Foldable as you read the short story. Under each labeled tab, jot down notes about the story in terms of that element.

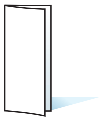
You may adapt this simple Foldable in several ways.

- Use it with dramas, longer works of fiction, and some narrative poems—wherever five literary elements are present in the story.
- Change the labels to focus on something different. For example, if a story or a play has several settings, characters, acts, or scenes, you could devote a tab to each one.

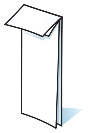
Drama

Reading Objective: to understand conflict and plot in a drama

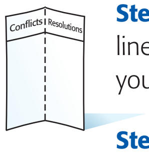
As you read the drama, use the following Foldable to keep track of conflicts that arise and ways that those conflicts are resolved.



Step 1 Place a sheet of paper in front of you so that the short side is at the top. Fold the paper in half from side to side.



Step 2 Fold the paper again, one inch from the top as shown here.



Step 3 Unfold the paper and draw lines along all of the folds. This will be your chart.

Step 4 At the top, label the left column Conflicts and the right column Resolutions.

Step 5 As you read, record in the left column the various conflicts that arise in the drama. In the right column, explain how each conflict is resolved by the end of the drama.

You may adapt this simple Foldable in several ways.

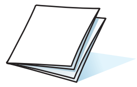
- Use it with short stories, longer works of fiction, and many poems—wherever conflicts and their resolutions are important.
- Change the labels to focus on something different. For example, you could record the actions of two characters, or you could record the thoughts and feelings of a character before and after the story's climax.

Lyric Poem

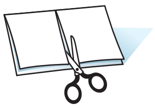
Reading Objective: to interpret the poet's message by understanding the speaker's thoughts and feelings

As you read the poem, use the following Foldable to help you distinguish between what the speaker says and what the poet means.

Step 1 Place a sheet of paper in front of you so that the short side is at the top. Fold the paper in half from top to bottom.



Step 2 Fold the paper in half again from left to right.



Step 3 Unfold and cut through the top layer of paper along the fold line. This will make two tabs.

Step 4 Label the left tab Speaker's Words. Label the right tab Poet's Meaning.

Step 5 Use your Foldable to jot down notes on as you read the poem. Under the left tab, write down key things the speaker says. Under the right tab, write down what you think the poet means by having the speaker say those things.

You may adapt this simple Foldable in several ways.

- Use it to help you visualize the images in a poem. Just replace Speaker's Words with Imagery and replace Poet's Meaning with What I See.
- Replace the label Speaker's Words with Speaker's Tone and under the tab write adjectives that describe the tone of the speaker's words.
- If the poem you are reading has two stanzas, you might devote each tab to notes about one stanza.

Functional Documents

Functional documents are specialized forms of expository writing that serve specifc purposes. Functional documents are an every day part of business, school, and even home life. They must be clear, concise, accurate, and correct in style and usage.

Letter of Application

A letter of application is a form of business writing. It can be used when applying for a job, an internship, or a scholarship. In most cases, the letter is intended to accompany a résumé or an application. Because detailed information is usually included in the accompanying form, a letter of application should provide a general overview of your qualifications and the reasons you are submitting an application. A letter of application should be concise. You should clearly state which position you are applying for and then explain why you are interested and what makes you qualified. The accompanying material should speak for itself.

32 South Street
Austin, Texas 78746
May 6, 2009

Melissa Reyes
City Life magazine
2301 Davis Avenue
Austin, Texas 78764

① Re: Internship

② Dear Ms. Reyes:

I am a junior at City High School and editor of the City High Herald. I am ③ writing to apply for your summer internship at City Life magazine. As a journalism student and a longtime fan of your magazine, I feel that an internship with your magazine would provide me with valuable experience in the field of journalism. I believe that my role with the City High Herald has ④ given me the skills necessary to be a useful contributor to your magazine this summer. In addition, my enclosed application shows that I am also a ⑤ diligent worker.

I thank you for considering my application for your summer internship, and I hope to be working with you in the coming months.

Sincerely,
Anne Moris
Anne Moris

① The optional subject line indicates the topic of the letter.

② In a business letter, the greeting is followed by a colon.

③ The writer states her purpose directly and immediately.

④ The writer comments briefly on her qualifications.

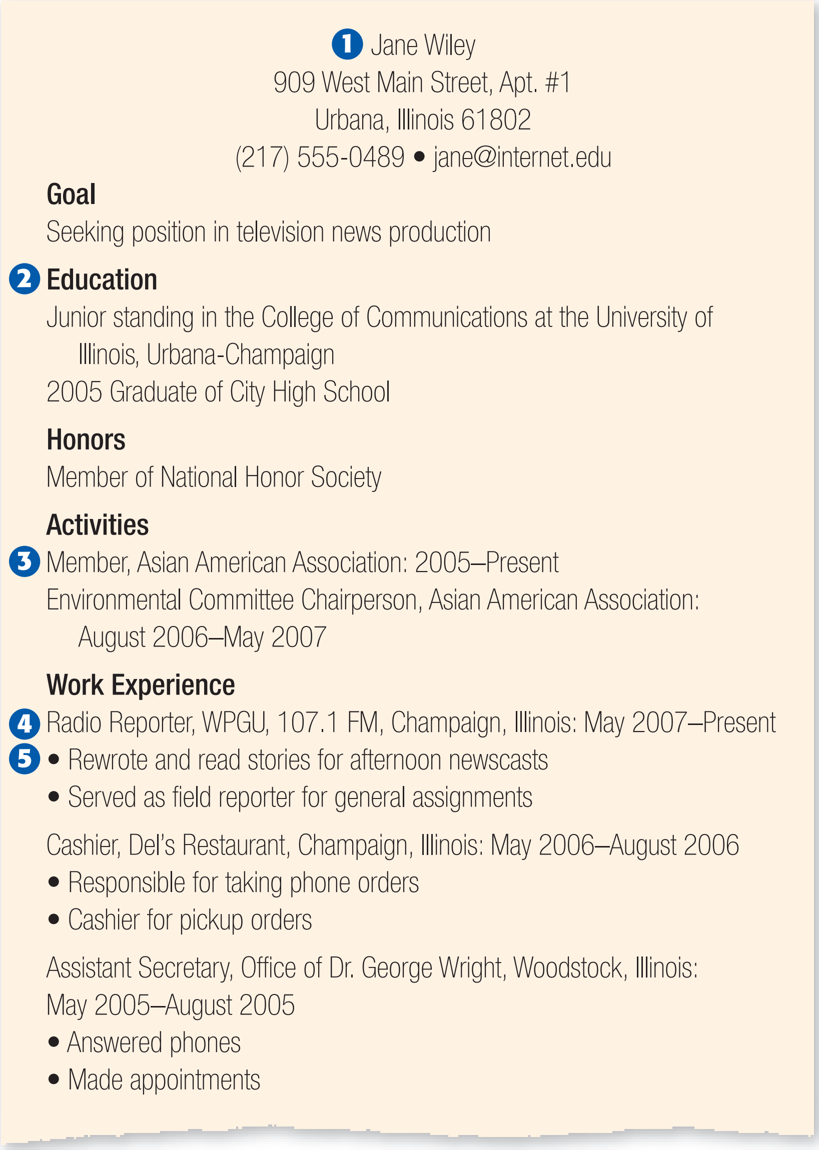
⑤ The writer makes reference to the accompanying material.

Activity

Choose a local business where you might like to work. Write a letter of application for an internship at that business. Assume that you will be submitting this letter along with a résumé or an internship application that details your experience and qualifications.

Résumé

The purpose of a résumé is to provide the employer with a comprehensive record of your background information, related experience, and qualifications. Although a résumé is intended to provide a great deal of information, the format is designed to provide this information in the most efficient way possible.



① Jane Wiley
909 West Main Street, Apt. #1
Urbana, Illinois 61802
(217) 555-0489 • jane@internet.edu

Goal

Seeking position in television news production

② Education

Junior standing in the College of Communications at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign
2005 Graduate of City High School

Honors

Member of National Honor Society

Activities

③ Member, Asian American Association: 2005–Present
Environmental Committee Chairperson, Asian American Association: August 2006–May 2007

Work Experience

④ Radio Reporter, WPGU, 107.1 FM, Champaign, Illinois: May 2007–Present

⑤
- Rewrote and read stories for afternoon newscasts
- Served as field reporter for general assignments

Cashier, Del's Restaurant, Champaign, Illinois: May 2006–August 2006

- Responsible for taking phone orders
- Cashier for pickup orders

Assistant Secretary, Office of Dr. George Wright, Woodstock, Illinois: May 2005–August 2005

- Answered phones
- Made appointments

① Header includes all important contact information.

② All important education background is included.

③ Related dates are included for all listed activities.

④ Job title is included along with the place of employment.

⑤ Job responsibilities are briefly listed, with a parallel structure used in each bulleted item.

Activity

Create an outline that lists the information that you would want to include in a résumé. Use a word processor to help format your outline.

Job Application

When applying for a job, you usually need to fill out a job application. When you fill out the application, read the instructions carefully. Examine the entire form before beginning to fill it out. If you fill out the form by hand, make sure that your handwriting is neat and legible. Fill out the form completely, providing all information directly and honestly. If a question does not apply to you, indicate that by writing n/a, short for "not applicable." Keep in mind that you will have the opportunity to provide additional information in your résumé, in your letter of application, or during the interview process.

① Please type or print neatly in blue or black ink.

② Name: ______________________ Today's date: _____
Address: ______________________________________
Phone #: _______ Birth date: ____ Sex: __ Soc. Sec. #: ___

* *

③ Job History (List each job held, starting with the most recent job.)

1. Employer: ____________________ Phone #: ________
Dates of employment: ____________________________
Position held: __________________________________
④ Duties: ______________________________________

2. Employer: ____________________ Phone #: ________
Dates of employment: ____________________________
Position held: __________________________________
Duties: ______________________________________

* *

Education (List the most recent level of education completed.)

____

* *

Personal References:

1. Name: ____________________ Phone #: ________
Relationship: __________________________________

2. Name: ____________________ Phone #: ________
Relationship: __________________________________

① The application provides specific instructions.

② All of the information requested should be provided in its entirety.

③ The information should be provided legibly and succinctly.

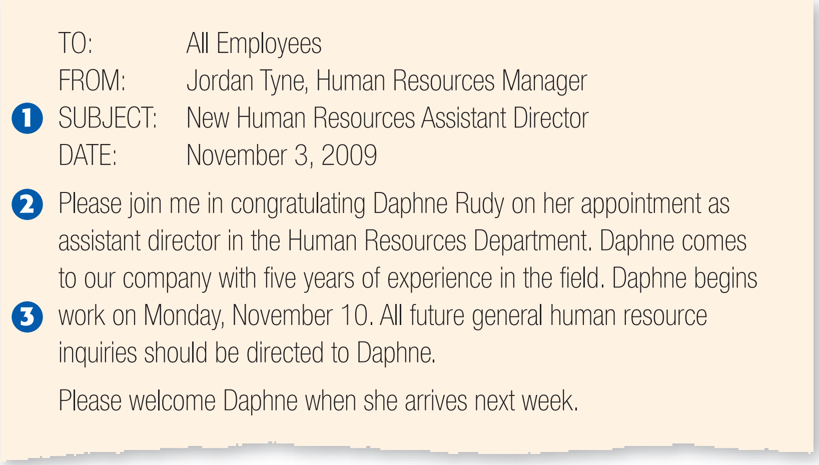
④ Experience should be stated accurately and without embellishment.

Activity

Pick up a job application from a local business or use the sample application shown. Complete the application thoroughly. Fill out the application as if you were actually applying for the job. Be sure to pay close attention to the guidelines mentioned above.

Memos

A memorandum (memo) conveys precise information to another person or a group of people. A memo begins with a leading block. It is followed by the text of the message. A memo does not have a formal closing.



TO: All Employees
FROM: Jordan Tyne, Human Resources Manager
① SUBJECT: New Human Resources Assistant Director
DATE: November 3, 2009

② Please join me in congratulating Daphne Rudy on her appointment as assistant director in the Human Resources Department. Daphne comes to our company with five years of experience in the field. Daphne begins ③ work on Monday, November 10. All future general human resource inquiries should be directed to Daphne.

Please welcome Daphne when she arrives next week.

① The topic of the memo is stated clearly in the subject line.

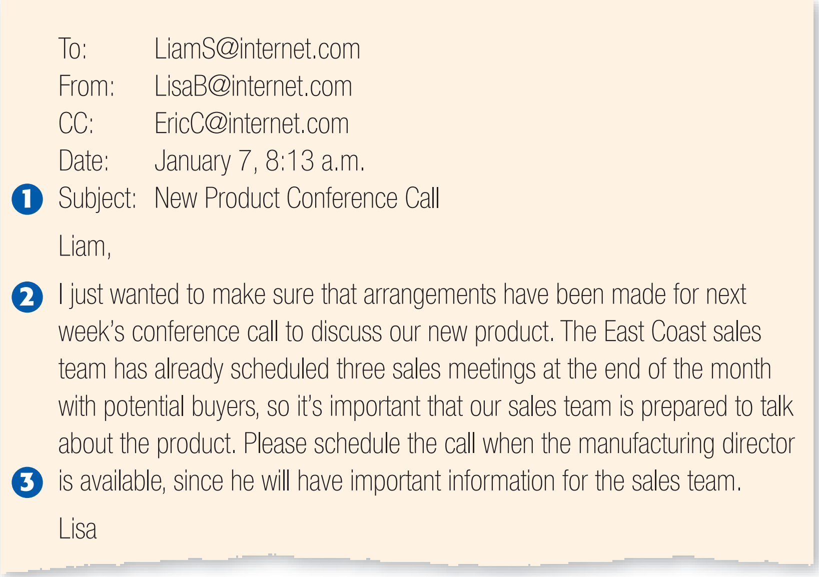
② The announcement is made in the first sentence.

③ All of the important information is included briefly in the memo.

Business E-mail

E-mail is quickly becoming the most common form of business communication. While e-mail may be the least formal and most conversational method of business writing, it shouldn't be written carelessly or too casually. The conventions of business writing—clarity, attention to your audience, proper grammar, and the inclusion of relevant information—apply to e-mail.

An accurate subject line should state your purpose briefly and directly. Use concise language and avoid rambling sentences.



To: LiamS@internet.com
From: LisaB@internet.com
CC: EricC@internet.com
Date: January 7, 8:13 a.m.
① Subject: New Product Conference Call

Liam,

② I just wanted to make sure that arrangements have been made for next week's conference call to discuss our new product. The East Coast sales team has already scheduled three sales meetings at the end of the month with potential buyers, so it's important that our sales team is prepared to talk about the product. Please schedule the call when the manufacturing director ③ is available, since he will have important information for the sales team.

Lisa

① Subject line clearly states the topic.

② The purpose is stated immediately and in a conversational tone.

③ Important details are included in a brief, direct fashion.

Activity

Write an e-mail to your coworkers. Inform them of a change in company procedure that will affect them.

Travel Directions

When planning an event or a social occasion, it is often necessary to provide people with detailed directions to the location. These directions must be clear enough that anyone who is unfamiliar with the surrounding area can easily find their way. Creating a map that shows the route with clearly labeled streets can also be a great help.

Directions to Darien High School's Graduation Ceremony

From I-95 North, take Exit 11. ①

Turn Left onto Post Road (Route 1).

At the first light, turn Left onto Samuel Avenue. Travel 2.5 miles. ②

Turn Right onto Cherry Hill Road.

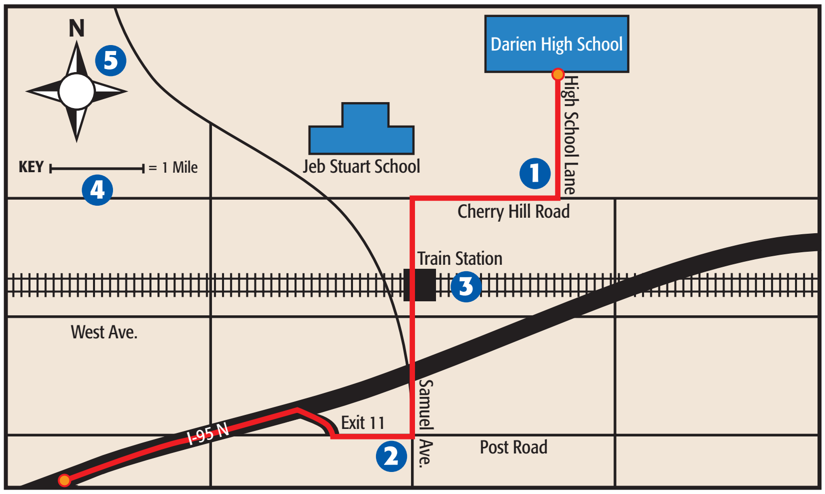
Turn Left onto High School Lane. ③

Follow signs to Visitor Parking.

① Begins at a point from which most people will be coming

② Offers travel distances to help travelers locate streets

③ Gives the name of each street along the route



① Clearly labels all streets to be traveled

② Labels major cross streets so the traveler can keep better track of his or her progress

③ Includes landmarks to help identify the area

④ Includes legend to show scale

⑤ Includes compass rose to help orientate the traveler

Activity

Write directions and draw an accompanying map to a location in your town. Be sure to include enough details and give enough clear directions so that even someone who is unfamiliar with the area could find the destination.

Technical Writing

Technical writing involves the use of very specific vocabulary and a special attention to detail. The purpose of technical writing is to describe a process clearly enough so that the reader can perform the steps and reach the intended goal, such as installing software, connecting a piece of equipment, or programming a device.

Instructions for Connecting DVD Player to HDTV

① Your DVD player can be connected to an HDTV using RCA cables or, for best picture quality, an HDMI cable.

Connecting with RCA Cables:

② Step 1: Insert the ends of the red, white, and yellow cables into the jacks labeled "AUDIO/VIDEO OUT." Be sure to match the colors of the cable with the color of the jack.

Step 2: Insert the other ends of the RCA cables into the jacks labeled "AUDIO/VIDEO IN" on your HDTV. These are usually located on the side or the back of the television. Again, be sure to match the colors of the cables with the colors of the jacks.

Connecting with HDMI Cable:

Step 1: Insert one end of the HDMI cable into the HDMI port located on the back of the DVD player.

Step 2: Insert the other end of the HDMI cable into the HDMI port on your HDTV.

③ Note: Your HDTV may have more than one HDMI port. If so, be sure that you set your HDTV to the correct input when viewing.

① Uses specific language to clearly describe the process

② Lists each step individually

③ Directs attention to possible variations the reader may encounter

Activity

Choose a device that you own or have access to, such as an mp3 player or a cell phone. Write brief step-by-step directions on how to perform a specific function on the device, so that someone else can follow your instructions and perform the function successfully.

Writing Handbook

Using the Traits of Strong Writing

What are some basic terms you can use to discuss your writing with your teacher or classmates? What should you focus on as you revise and edit your compositions? Check out the following terms, or traits, that describe the qualities of strong writing. Learn the meaning of each trait and find out how using the traits can improve your writing.

Ideas

The message or the theme and the details that develop it

Writing is clear when readers can grasp the meaning of your ideas right away. Check to see whether you're getting your message across.

☑ Does the title suggest the theme of the composition?

☑ Does the composition focus on a single narrow topic?

☑ Is the thesis—the main point or central idea—clearly stated?

☑ Do well-chosen details elaborate your main point?

Organization

The arrangement of main ideas and supporting details

An effective plan of organization points your readers in the right direction and guides them easily through your composition from start to finish. Find a structure, or order, that best suits your topic and writing purpose. Check to see whether you've ordered your key ideas and details in a way that keeps your readers on track.

☑ Are the beginning, middle, and end clearly linked?

☑ Is the internal order of ideas easy to follow?

☑ Does the introduction capture your readers' attention?

☑ Do sentences and paragraphs flow from one to the next in a way that makes sense?

☑ Does the conclusion wrap up the composition?

Voice

A writer's unique way of using tone and style

Your writing voice comes through when your readers sense that a real person is communicating with them. Readers will respond to the tone (or attitude) that you express toward a topic and to the style (the way that you use language and shape your sentences). Read your work aloud to see whether your writing voice comes through.

☑ Does your writing sound interesting?

☑ Does your writing reveal your attitude toward your topic?

☑ Does your writing sound like you—or does it sound like you're imitating someone else?

Word Choice

The vocabulary a writer uses to convey meaning

Words work hard. They carry the weight of your meaning, so make sure you choose them carefully. Check to see whether the words you choose are doing their jobs well.

☑ Do you use lively verbs to show action?

☑ Do you use vivid words to create word pictures in your readers' minds?

☑ Do you use precise words to explain your ideas simply and clearly?

Sentence Fluency

The smooth rhythm and flow of sentences that vary in length and style

The best writing is made up of sentences that flow smoothly from one sentence to the next. Writing that is graceful also sounds musical—rhythmical rather than choppy. Check for sentence fluency by reading your writing aloud.

☑ Do your sentences vary in length and structure?

☑ Do transition words and phrases show connections between ideas and sentences?

☑ Does parallelism help balance and unify related ideas?

Conventions

Correct spelling, grammar, usage, and mechanics

A composition free of errors makes a good impression on your readers. Mistakes can be distracting, and they can blur your message. Try working with a partner to spot errors and correct them. Use this checklist to help you.

☑ Are all words spelled correctly?

☑ Are all proper nouns—as well as the first word of every sentence—capitalized?

☑ Is your composition free of sentence fragments?

☑ Is your composition free of run-on sentences?

☑ Are punctuation marks—such as apostrophes, commas, and end marks—inserted in the right places?

Presenting and Publishing

The formatting of writing for various purposes

For many writers, the writing process is not complete until they present their work to an audience. This can mean submitting your writing for publication in a school paper or a national magazine, or it can simply mean preparing your writing in a neat and presentable format. For readers to fully appreciate your writing, it is very important that you present it neatly, effectively, and according to professional standards.

Format

- The standard typeface setting for most writing submissions is Courier 12 point.
- Double-space your work so that it is easy to read.
- Leave one-inch margins on all sides of every page.
- Italicize titles or when using terms from other languages. You may also italicize words to add emphasis, but do this only when it is necessary to make your point clear. (If you are submitting your writing to a professional publication, underline words that should appear in italics.)
- Most word processing programs make it easy to set the page number to appear in the upper right-hand corner of each page. Include your last name before each page number after the first page.
- If you are including charts, graphs, maps, or other visual aids, consider setting them on their own page. This will allow you to show the graphic at a full size that is easy to read.

Organization

- On a separate sheet of paper, center your name under the title of your work. If you are submitting your writing for publication, include the total number of words in the upper right-hand corner, and your name and address in the upper left-hand corner.
- The body of your work follows immediately.
- End your presentation with you list of works cited.

Research Paper Writing

More than any other type of paper, research papers are the product of a search—a search for data, for facts, for informed opinions, for insights, and for new information.

Selecting a topic

- If a specific topic is not assigned, choose a topic. Begin with the assigned subject or a subject that interests you. Read general sources of information about that subject and narrow your focus to some aspect of it that interests you. Good places to start are encyclopedia articles and the tables of contents of books on the subject. A computerized library catalog will also display many subheads related to general topics. Find out if sufficient information about your topic is available.
- As you read about the topic, develop your paper's central idea, which is the purpose of your research. Even though this idea might change as you do more research, it can begin to guide your efforts. For example, if you were assigned the subject of the Civil War, you might find that you're interested in women's roles during that war. As you read, you might narrow your topic down to women who went to war, women who served as nurses for the Union, or women who took over farms and plantations in the South.

Conducting a broad search for information

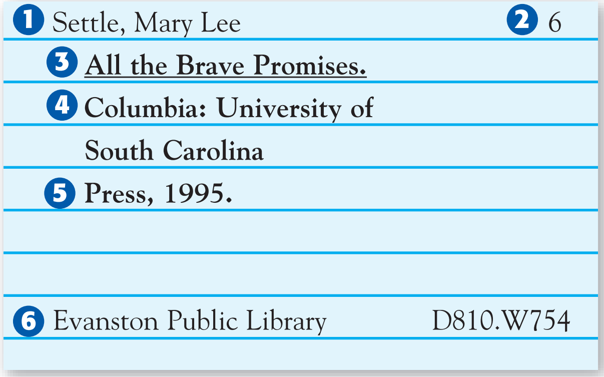
- Generate a series of researchable questions about your chosen topic. Then research to find answers to your questions.
- Among the many sources you might use are the card catalog, the computer catalog, the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature (or an electronic equivalent), newspaper indexes, and specialized references such as biographical encyclopedias.
- If possible, use primary sources as well as secondary sources. A primary source is a firsthand account of an event—for example, the diary of a woman who served in the army in the Civil War is a primary source. Secondary sources are sources written by people who did not experience or influence the event. Locate specific information efficiently by using the table of contents, indexes, chapter headings, and graphic aids.

Developing a working bibliography

If a work seems useful, write a bibliography card for it. On an index card, write down the author, title, city of publication, publisher, date of publication, and any other information you will need to identify the source. Number your cards in the upper right-hand corner so you can keep them in order.

Following are model bibliography, or source, cards.

Book



① Settle, Mary Lee ② 6

③ All the Brave Promises.

④ Columbia: University of South Carolina

⑤ Press, 1995.

⑥ Evanston Public Library D810.W754

① Author

② Source number

③ Title

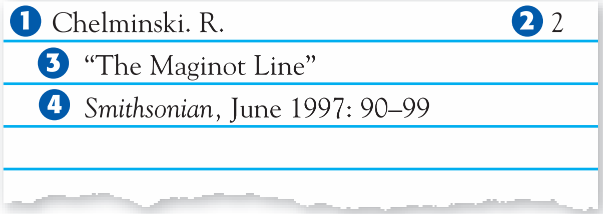
④ City of publication/ Publisher

⑤ Date of publication

⑥ Location of source

⑦ Library call number

Periodicals



① Chelminski. R. ② 2

③ "The Maginot Line"

④ Smithsonian, June 1997: 90–99

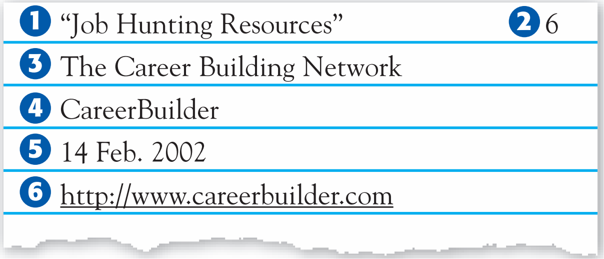
① Author

② Source number

③ Title

④ Title of magazine/date/page number(s)

Online Source



① "Job Hunting Resources" ② 6

③ The Career Building Network

④ CareerBuilder

⑤ 14 Feb. 2002

⑥ http://www.careerbuilder.com

① Title

② Source number

③ Title of database

④ Sponsoring organization

⑤ Date of access

⑥ URL

Evaluating your sources

Your sources should be authoritative, reliable, timely, and suitable (arts).

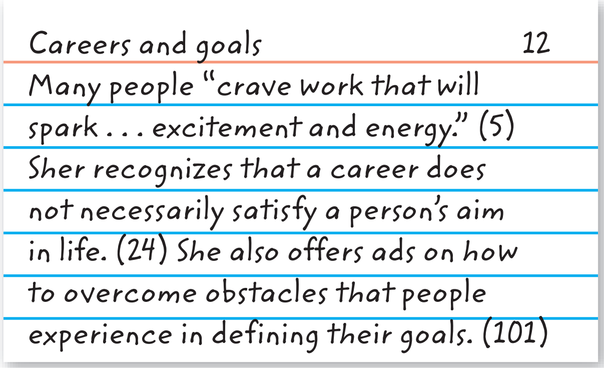
- The source should be authoritative. The author should be well-known in the field. An author who has written several books or articles about a subject or who is frequently quoted may be considered an authority. You might also consult Book Review Index and Book Review Digest to find out how other experts in the field have evaluated a book or an article.
- The source should be reliable. If possible, avoid material from popular magazines in favor of that from more scholarly journals. Be especially careful to evaluate material from online sources. For example, the Web site of a well-known university is more reliable than that of an individual. (You might also consult a librarian or your instructor for guidance in selecting reliable online sources.)
- The source should be timely. Use the most recent material available, particularly for subjects of current importance. Check the publication date of books as well as the month and year of periodicals.
- The source should be suitable, or appropriate. Consider only material that is relevant to the purpose of your paper. Do not waste time on books or articles that have little bearing on your topic. If you are writing on a controversial topic, you should include material that represents more than one point of view.

Compiling and organizing note cards

Careful notes will help you to organize the material for your paper.

- As you reread and study sources, write useful information on index cards. Be sure that each note card identifies the source (use the number of the bibliography card that corresponds to each source).
- In the lower right-hand corner of the card, write the page number on which you found the information. If one card contains several notes, write the page number in parentheses after the relevant material.
- Three helpful ways to take notes are paraphrasing, summarizing, and quoting directly.
  1. Paraphrase important details that you want to remember; that is, use your own words to restate specific information.
  2. Summarize main ideas that an author presents. When you summarize several pages, be sure to note the page on which the material begins and the page on which it ends—for example, 213–221.
  3. Quote the exact words of an author only when the actual wording is important. Be careful about placing the author's words in quotation marks.
- Identify the subject of each note card with a short phrase written in the upper left.

See the sample note card below, which includes information about careers and goals from three pages.



Careers and goals 12

Many people "crave work that will spark . . . excitement and energy." (5) Sher recognizes that a career does not necessarily satisfy a person's aim in life. (24) She also offers ads on how to overcome obstacles that people experience in defining their goals. (101)

- Organize your note cards to develop a working outline. Begin by sorting them into piles of related cards. Try putting the piles together in different ways that suggest an organizational pattern. (If, at this point, you discover that you do not have enough information, go back and do further research.) Many methods of organization are possible. You might also combine methods of organization.

Developing a thesis statement

A thesis statement tells what your topic is and what you intend to say about it—for example, "World War II changed the lives of African Americans and contributed to the rise of the civil rights movement."

- Start by examining your central idea.
- Refine it to reflect the information that you gathered in your research.
- Next, consider your approach to the topic. What is the purpose of your research? Are you proving or disproving something? illustrating a cause-and-effect relationship? offering a solution to a problem? examining one aspect of the topic thoroughly? predicting an outcome?
- Revise your central idea to reflect your approach.
- Be prepared to revise your thesis statement if necessary.

Drafting your paper

Consult your working outline and your notes as you start to draft your paper.

- Concentrate on getting your ideas down in a complete and logical order.
- Write an introduction and a conclusion. An effective introduction creates interest, perhaps by beginning with a question or a controversial quotation; it should also contain your thesis statement. An effective conclusion will summarize main points, restate your thesis, explain how the research points to important new questions to explore, and bring closure to the paper.

Avoiding Plagiarism

Plagiarism is the act of presenting an author's words or ideas as if they were your own. This is not only illegal, it is also unethical. You must credit the source not only for material directly quoted but also for any facts or ideas obtained from the source.

Consider this example:

From the original SparkNotes study guide by Melissa and Stephanie Martin

> Throughout the novel, Twain depicts the society that surrounds Huck as little more than a collection of degraded rules and precepts that defy logic. This faulty logic appears early in the novel, when the new judge in town allows Pap to keep custody of Huck.

Plagiarized usage

> Twain's depiction of society is as a collection of illogical rules and principles. A good example of this is when Pap is awarded custody of Huck.

Simply rewording the original passage is not enough. In order to legally and ethically use the words or ideas of another writer you must credit the writer of the original or rework the original into your own new idea.

Using Material Without Plagiarizing

1. Quote the original directly and credit the author.
   As Melissa and Stephanie Martin note in their SparkNotes study guide, Huck lives in a society that is "little more than a collection of degraded rules and precepts that defy logic." They offer the example of Pap being awarded custody of Huck.
2. Paraphrase the original and credit the author.
   In their SparkNotes study guide, Melissa and Stephanie Martin note that Twain's depiction of society is as a collection of illogical rules and principles. A good example of this is when Pap is awarded custody of Huck.
3. Use the information in the original to create your own idea.
   It is hard to blame Huck for wanting to escape from a world where he is forced to follow arbitrary rules, and where he is forced to live with an abusive father.

Crediting your source is not only fair to the writer of the original source, it is also the law. Plagiarism is a serious offence and can result in failing grades, expulsion, and even legal action.

- In addition to citing books and periodicals from which you take information, cite song lyrics, letters, and excerpts from literature.
- Also credit original ideas that are expressed graphically in tables, charts, and diagrams, as well as the sources of any visual aids you may include, such as photographs.
- You do not need to cite the source of any information that is common knowledge, such as "John F. Kennedy was assassinated in 1963 in Dallas, Texas."

In-text citations The most common method of crediting sources is with parenthetical documentation within the text. Generally a reference to the source and page number is included in parentheses at the end of each quotation, paraphrase, or summary of information borrowed from a source. An in-text citation points readers to a corresponding entry in your works-cited list—a list of all your sources, complete with publication information, that will appear as the final page of your paper. The Modern Language Association (MLA) recommends the following guidelines for crediting sources in text. You may wish to refer to the MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers by Joseph Gibaldi for more information and examples.

- Put in parentheses the author's last name and the page number where you found the information.
  An art historian has noted, "In Wood's idyllic farmscapes, man lives in complete harmony with Nature; he is the earth's caretaker" (Corn 90).
- If the author's name is mentioned in the sentence, put only the page number in parentheses.
  Art historian Wanda Corn has noted, "In Wood's idyllic farmscapes, man lives in complete harmony with Nature; he is the earth's caretaker" (90).
- If no author is listed, put the title or a shortened version of the title in parentheses. Include a page number if you have one. Some critics believe that Grant Wood's famous painting American Gothic pokes fun at small-town life and traditional American values ("Gothic").

Compiling a list of works cited

At the end of your text, provide an alphabetized list of published works or other sources cited.

- Include complete publishing information for each source.
- For magazine and newspaper articles, include the page numbers. If an article is continued on a different page, use + after the first page number.
- For online sources, include the date accessed.
- Cite only those sources from which you actually use information.
- Arrange entries in alphabetical order according to the author's last name. Write the last name first. If no author is given, alphabetize by title.
- For long entries, indent five spaces every line after the first.

How to cite sources

On the next three pages, you'll find sample style sheets that can help you prepare your list of sources—the final page of the research paper. Use the one your teacher prefers.

MLA Style

MLA style is most often used in English and social studies classes. Center the title Works Cited at the top of your list.

Source	Style
Book with one author	Isaacson, Walter. Einstein: His Life and Universe. New York: Simon & Schuster, 2007.
Book with two or three authors	Mortenson, Greg and Relin, David Oliver. Three Cups of Tea: One Man's Mission to Promote Peace…One School at a Time. New York: Penguin Books, 2006. [If a book has more than three authors, name only the first author and then write "et al." (Latin abbreviation for "and others")]
Book with editor(s)	Lehman, David and McHugh, Heather, eds. The Best American Poetry 2007. New York: Scribner, 2007.
Book with an organization or a group as author or editor	Adobe Creative Team. Adobe Photoshop CS3 Classroom in a Book. Berkeley: Adobe Press, 2007.
Work from an anthology	Kilmer, Joyce. "Trees." The Poetry Anthology, 1912–2002. Ed. Joseph Parisi. Chicago: Ivan R. Dee, 2004. 7
Introduction in a published book	Jackson, Peter. Introduction. The Making of Star Wars*: The Definitive Story Behind the Original Film.* By. J.W. Rinzler. New York: Del Rey, 2007. iii.
Encyclopedia article	"Jazz." Encyclopedia Britannica. 15th ed. 2007.
Weekly magazine article	Sacks, Oliver. "A Bolt from the Blue." The New Yorker. 23 July 2007: 38–42.
Monthly magazine article	Plotnikoff, David. "Hungry Man." Saveur. July 2007: 35–36.
Newspaper article	Long, Ray and Meitrodt, Jeffrey. "Some Budget Progress Made." Chicago Tribune. 26 July 2007: B3. [If no author is named, begin the entry with the title of the article.]
Internet	"Americans Embracing 'Green' Cleaning." ABC News. 30 January 2006. ABC News Internet Ventures. 1 August 2007 <http://abcnews.go.com/Technology/Business/story?id=1544322>.
Online magazine article	Parks, Bob. "Robot Buses Pull In to San Diego's Fastest Lane." *Wired Magazine.*15.08 (July 2007). 25. Oct. 2007 <http://www.wired.com/cars/futuretransport/magazine/15-08/st_robot>.
Radio or TV program	"Jungles." Planet Earth. Animal Planet. Discovery Channel. 25 July. 2007.
Videotape or DVD	Guggenheim, David, dir. An Inconvenient Truth. DVD. Paramount, 2006. [For a videotape (VHS) version, replace "DVD" with "Videocassette."]
Interview	Campeche, Tanya. E-mail interview. 25 Feb. 2004. [If an interview takes place in person, replace "E-mail" with "Personal"; if it takes place on the telephone, use "Telephone."]

CMS Style

CMS style was created by the University of Chicago Press to meet its publishing needs. This style, which is detailed in The Chicago Manual of Style (CMS), is used in a number of subject areas. Center the title Bibliography at the top of your list.

Source	Style
Book with one author	Isaacson, Walter. Einstein: His Life and Universe. New York: Simon & Schuster, 2007.
Book with two or three authors	Mortenson, Greg and Relin, David Oliver. Three Cups of Tea: One Man's Mission to Promote Peace…One School at a Time. New York: Penguin Books, 2006. [If a book has more than ten authors, name only the first seven and then write "et al." (Latin abbreviation for "and others")].
Book with editor(s)	Lehman, David and McHugh, Heather, eds. The Best American Poetry 2007. New York: Scribner, 2007.
Book with an organization or a group as author or editor	Adobe Creative Team. Adobe Photoshop CS3 Classroom in a Book. Berkeley: Adobe Press, 2007.
Work from an anthology	Kilmer, Joyce. "Trees." The Poetry Anthology, 1912–2002. Ed. Joseph Parisi, 7. Chicago: Ivan R. Dee, 2004.
Introduction in a published book	Rinzler, J.W. The Making of Star Wars: The Definitive Story Behind the Original Film. Introduction by Peter Jackson. New York: Del Rey, 2007.
Encyclopedia article	[Credit for encyclopedia articles goes in your text, not in your bibliography.]
Weekly magazine article	Sacks, Oliver. "A Bolt from the Blue." The New Yorker, July 23, 2007, 38–42.
Monthly magazine article	Plotnikoff, David. "Hungry Man." Saveur. July 2007, 35–36.
Newspaper article	Long, Ray and Meitrodt, Jeffrey. "Some Budget Progress Made." Chicago Tribune. July 26, 2007, B3. [Credit for unsigned newspaper articles goes in your text, not in your bibliography.]
Internet	ABC News Internet Ventures. "Americans Embracing 'Green' Cleaning." ABC News. http://abcnews.go.com/Technology/Business/story?id=1544322.
Online magazine article	Parks, Bob. "Robot Buses Pull In to San Diego's Fastest Lane." Wired Magazine. 15.08 (July 2007). http://www.wired.com/cars/futuretransport/magazine/15-08/st_robot.
Radio or TV program	[Credit for radio and TV programs goes in your text, not in your bibliography.]
Videotape or DVD	Guggenheim, David, dir. An Inconvenient Truth. Paramount, 2006. DVD. [For a videotape (VHS) version, replace "DVD" with "Videocassette."]
Interview	[Credit for interviews goes in your text, not in your bibliography.]

APA Style

The American Psychological Association (APA) style is commonly used in the sciences. Center the title References at the top of your list.

Source	Style
Book with one author	Isaacson, Walter. (2007). Einstein: His life and universe. New York: Simon & Schuster.
Book with two or three authors	Mortenson, Greg and Relin, David Oliver. Three cups of tea: One man's mission to promote peace…One school at a time. New York: Penguin Books, 2006. [If a book has more than ten authors, name only the first seven and then write "et al." (Latin abbreviation for "and others")].
Book with editor(s)	Lehman, David and McHugh, Heather. (Eds.). (2007). The best American poetry 2007. New York: Scribner.
Book with an organization or a group as author or editor	Adobe Creative Team. (2007). Adobe Photoshop CS3 Classroom in a Book. Berkeley: Adobe Press.
Work from an anthology	Kilmer, Joyce. "Trees." The Poetry Anthology, 1912–2002. Ed. Joseph Parisi, 7. Chicago: Ivan R. Dee, 2004.
Introduction in a published book	[Credit for introductions goes in your text, not in your references.]
Encyclopedia article	Jazz. (2007). In Encyclopedia Britannica. (Vol. 6, pp. 519). Chicago: Encyclopedia Britannica.
Weekly magazine article	Sacks, Oliver. (2007, July 23).A bolt from the blue. The New Yorker, 38–42.
Monthly magazine article	Plotnikoff, David. (2007, July). Hungry man. Saveur, 103, 35–36.
Newspaper article	Long, Ray and Meitrodt, Jeffrey. (2007, July 26). Some budget progress made. Chicago Tribune, p. B3. [If no author is named, begin the entry with the title of the article.]
Internet	ABC News Internet Ventures. (2006, January 30). ABC News. "Americans Embracing 'Green' Cleaning." Retrieved August 1, 2007, from http://abcnews.go.com/Technology/Business/story?id=1544322.
Online magazine article	Parks, Bob. (2007, July). Robot buses pull in to San Diego's fastest lane." *Wired Magazine.*15.08.Retreived July 25, 2007, from http://www.wired.com/cars/futuretransport/magazine/15-08/st_robot.
Radio or TV program	Jungles. (2007, July 25). Planet Earth [Television series episode]. Animal Planet. Silver Spring, MD: Discovery Channel.
Videotape or DVD	Guggenheim, David (Director). (2006). An inconvenient truth. DVD. Paramount, 2006. [For a videotape (VHS) version, replace "DVD" with "Videocassette."]
Interview	[Credit for interviews goes in your text, not in your bibliography.]

Reading Handbook

Reading Handbook

Being an active reader is a crucial part of being a lifelong learner. It is also an ongoing task. Good reading skills are recursive; that is, they build on each other, providing the tools you'll need to understand text, to interpret ideas and themes, and to read critically.

Understanding Text Structure

To follow the logic and message of a selection and to remember it, analyze the text structure, or organization of ideas, within a writer's work. Recognizing the pattern of organization can help you discover the writer's purpose and will focus your attention on important ideas in the selection. Look for signal words to point you to the structure.

- Spatial sequence uses words or phrases such as nearby, to the left, above, and behind to show the physical arrangement of people and objects in an area.
- Order of importance will use words such as most important and least necessary to compare the importance of things or ideas.
- Chronological order often uses such words as first, then, after, later, and finally to show a sequence of events in time.
- Cause-and-effect order discusses chains of events using words or phrases such as therefore, because, subsequently, or as a result.
- Comparison-contrast order may use words or phrases such as similarly, in contrast, likewise, or on the other hand.
- Problem-solution order presents a problem and then offers one or more solutions. A problem-solution structure may incorporate other structures such as order of importance, chronological order, or comparison-contrast order.

Comprehension Strategies

Because understanding is the most critical reading task, lifelong learners use a wide variety of reading strategies before, during, and after reading to ensure their comprehension.

Determining the Main Idea

The main idea of a selection is the writer's purpose in writing the selection. As you read, it will be helpful to determine the main idea not only of the entire piece, but also of each paragraph. After identifying the important details in each paragraph, pause and ask yourself

- What is the main point of this selection?
- What do these details add up to?
- What is the writer trying to communicate?

Summarizing

A summary is a short restatement of the main ideas and important details of a selection. Summarizing what you have read is an excellent tool for understanding and remembering a passage. To summarize a selection:

- Identify the main ideas.
- Determine the essential supporting details.
- Relate all the main ideas and essential details in a logical sequence.
- Paraphrase—that is, restate the selection in your own words.
- Answer who, what, where, when, and why questions.

The best summaries can easily be understood by someone who has not read the selection. If you're not sure whether an idea is a main idea or a supporting detail, try taking it out of your summary. Does your summary still sound complete?

Distinguishing between fact and opinion

It is always important to be able to tell whether the ideas in a selection are facts or the writer's opinions.

- Facts can be proven or measured; you can verify them in reference materials. Sometimes you can observe or test them yourself.

  Example: Chicago is about 800 miles from New York City.
- Opinions are often open to interpretation and contain phrases such as "I believe" or "from my point of view."

  Example: Chicago to New York is too far to drive.

As you read a selection, evaluate any facts as well as any opinions you find. Ask yourself:

- Are the facts relevant? Are they actually true?
- Are the opinions well informed and based on verifiable facts? Are they persuasive?

Drawing inferences and supporting them

An inference involves using your reason and experience to come up with an idea based on what a writer implies or suggests but does not directly state.

- Drawing a conclusion is making a general statement you can explain with reason or with supporting details from the text.
- Making a generalization is generating a statement that can apply to more than one item or group.

What is most important when inferring is to be sure that you have accurately based your thoughts on supporting details from the text as well as on your own knowledge.

Making a prediction

A prediction is an educated guess about what a text will be about based on initial clues a writer provides. You can also make predictions about what will happen next in a story as you read.

- Take breaks during your reading and ask yourself questions about what will happen next, such as, "How will this character react to this news?"
- Answer these questions for yourself, supporting your answers with evidence from the text. For example, "Sam will be jealous when he hears the news, because he is in love with Antonia."
- As you continue reading, verify your predictions.

Reading silently for sustained periods

When you read for long periods of time, your task is to avoid distractions. Check your comprehension regularly by summarizing what you've read so far. Using study guides or graphic organizers can help you get through difficult passages. Take regular breaks when you need them and vary your reading rate with the demands of the task.

Keep in mind:

Whichever strategies you choose to use while reading, it will always be helpful to:

- Read slowly and carefully.
- Reread difficult passages.
- Take careful notes.

Also, when reading more difficult material, consider these steps to modify or change your reading strategies when you don't understand what you've read.

- Reread the passage.
- Consult other sources, including text resources, teachers, and other students.
- Write comments or questions on another piece of paper for later review or discussion.

Language Handbook

Grammar Glossary

This glossary will help you quickly locate information on parts of speech and sentence structure.

A

Absolute phrase. See Phrase.

Abstract noun. See Noun chart.

Action verb. See Verb.

Active voice. See Voice.

Adjective A word that modifies a noun or pronoun by limiting its meaning. Adjectives appear in various positions in a sentence. (The gray cat purred. The cat is gray.)

Many adjectives have different forms to indicate degree of comparison. (short, shorter, shortest)

The positive degree is the simple form of the adjective. (easy, interesting, good)

The comparative degree compares two persons, places, things, or ideas. (easier, more interesting, better)

The superlative degree compares more than two persons, places, things, or ideas. (easiest, most interesting, best)

A predicate adjective follows a linking verb and further identifies or describes the subject. (The child is happy.)

A proper adjective is formed from a proper noun and begins with a capital letter. Many proper adjectives are created by adding these suffixes: -an, -ian, -n, -ese, and -ish. (Chinese, African)

Adjective clause. See Clause chart.

Adverb A word that modifies a verb, an adjective, or another adverb by making its meaning more specific. When modifying a verb, an adverb may appear in various positions in a sentence. (Cats generally eat less than dogs. Generally, cats eat less than dogs.) When modifying an adjective or another adverb, an adverb appears directly before the modified word. (I was quite pleased that they got along so well.) The word not and the contraction -n't are adverbs. (Mike wasn't ready for the test today.) Certain adverbs of time, place, and degree also have a negative meaning. (He's never ready.)

Some adverbs have different forms to indicate degree of comparison. (soon, sooner, soonest)

The comparative degree compares two actions. (better, more quickly)

The superlative degree compares three or more actions. (fastest, most patiently, least rapidly)

Adverb clause. See Clause chart.

Antecedent. See Pronoun.

Appositive A noun or a pronoun that further identifies another noun or pronoun. (My friend Julie lives next door.)

Appositive phrase. See Phrase.

Article The adjective a, an, or the.

Indefinite articles (a and an) refer to one of a general group of persons, places, or things. (I eat an apple a day.)

The definite article (the) indicates that the noun is a specific person, place, or thing. (The alarm woke me up.)

Auxiliary verb. See Verb.

B

Base form. See Verb tense.

C

Clause A group of words that has a subject and a predicate and that is used as part of a sentence. Clauses fall into two categories: main clauses, which are also called independent clauses, and subordinate clauses, which are also called dependent clauses.

A main clause can stand alone as a sentence.

Types of Subordinate Clauses

Clause	Function	Example	Begins with . . .
Adjective clause	Modifies a noun or a pronoun	Songs that have a strong beat make me want to dance.	A relative pronoun such as which, who, whom, whose, or that
Adverb clause	Modifies a verb, an adjective, or an adverb	Whenever Al calls me, he asks to borrow my bike.	A subordinating conjuction such as after, although, because, if, since, when, or where
Noun clause	Serves as a subject, an object, or a predicate nominative	What Philip did surprised us.	Words such as how, that, what, whatever, when, where, which, who, whom, whoever, whose, or why

There must be at least one main clause in every sentence. (The rooster crowed,* and *the dog barked.)

A subordinate clause cannot stand alone as a sentence. A subordinate clause needs a main clause to complete its meaning. Many subordinate clauses begin with subordinating conjunctions or relative pronouns. (When Geri sang her solo,* the audience became quiet.) The chart on the next page shows the main types of subordinate clauses.

Collective noun. See Noun chart.

Common noun. See Noun chart.

Comparative degree. See Adjective; Adverb.

Complement A word or phrase that completes the meaning of a verb. The four basic kinds of complements are direct objects, indirect objects, object complements, and subject complements.

A direct object answers the question What? or Whom? after an action verb. (Kari found a dollar. Larry saw *Denise.)

An indirect object answers the question To whom? For whom? To what? or For what? after an action verb. (Do me a favor. She gave the child a toy.)

An object complement answers the question What? after a direct object. An object complement is a noun, a pronoun, or an adjective that completes the meaning of a direct object by identifying or describing it. (The director made me the understudy for the role. The little girl called the puppy *hers.)

A subject complement follows a subject and a linking verb. It identifies or describes a subject. The two kinds of subject complements are predicate nominatives and predicate adjectives.

A predicate nominative is a noun or pronoun that follows a linking verb and tells more about the subject. (The author of "The Raven" is *Poe.)

A predicate adjective is an adjective that follows a linking verb and gives more information about the subject. (Ian became angry at the bully.)

Complex sentence. See Sentence.

Compound preposition. See Preposition.

Compound sentence. See Sentence.

Compound-complex sentence. See Sentence.

Conjunction A word that joins single words or groups of words.

A coordinating conjunction (and, but, or, nor, for, yet, so) joins words or groups of words that are equal in grammatical importance. (David and Ruth are twins. I was bored, so I left.)

Correlative conjunctions (both . . . and, just as . . . so, not only . . . but also, either . . . or, neither . . . nor, whether . . . or) work in pairs to join words and groups of words of equal importance.

(Choose either the muffin or the bagel.)

A subordinating conjunction (after, although, as if, because, before, if, since, so that, than, though, until, when, while) joins a dependent idea or clause to a main clause. (Beth acted as if she felt ill.)

Conjunctive adverb An adverb used to clarify the relationship between clauses of equal weight in a sentence. Conjunctive adverbs are used to replace and (also, besides, furthermore, moreover); to replace but (however, nevertheless, still); to state a result (consequently, therefore, so, thus); or to state equality (equally, likewise, similarly). (Ana was determined to get an A; therefore, she studied often.)

Coordinating conjunction. See Conjunction.

Correlative conjunction. See Conjunction.

D

Declarative sentence. See Sentence.

Definite article. See Article.

Demonstrative pronoun. See Pronoun.

Direct object. See Complement.

E

Emphatic form. See Verb tense.

F

Future tense. See Verb tense.

G

Gerund A verb form that ends in -ing and is used as a noun. A gerund may function as a subject, the object of a verb, or the object of a preposition. (Smiling uses fewer muscles than frowning. Marie enjoys walking.)

Gerund phrase. See Phrase.

I

Imperative mood. See Mood of verb.

Imperative sentence. See Sentence chart.

Indicative mood. See Mood of verb.

Indirect object. See Complement.

Infinitive A verb form that begins with the word to and functions as a noun, an adjective, or an adverb. (No one wanted to answer.) Note: When to precedes a verb, it is not a preposition but instead signals an infinitive.

Infinitive phrase. See Phrase.

Intensive pronoun. See Pronoun.

Interjection A word or phrase that expresses emotion or exclamation. An interjection has no grammatical connection to other words. Commas follow mild ones; exclamation points follow stronger ones. (Well, have a good day. Wow!)

Interrogative pronoun. See Pronoun.

Intransitive verb. See Verb.

Inverted order In a sentence written in inverted order, the predicate comes before the subject. Some sentences are written in inverted order for variety or special emphasis. (Up the beanstalk scampered Jack.) The subject also generally follows the predicate in a sentence that begins with here or there. (Here was the solution to his problem.) Questions, or interrogative sentences, are generally written in inverted order. In many questions, an auxiliary verb precedes the subject, and the main verb follows it. (Has anyone seen Susan?) Questions that begin with who or what follow normal word order.

Irregular verb. See Verb tense.

L

Linking verb. See Verb.

M

Main clause. See Clause.

Mood of verb A verb expresses one of three moods: indicative, imperative, or subjunctive.

The indicative mood is the most common. It makes a statement or asks a question. (We are out of bread. Will you buy it?)

The imperative mood expresses a command or makes a request. (Stop acting like a child! Please return my sweater.)

Types of Nouns

Noun	Function	Examples
Abstract noun	Names an idea, a quality, or a characteristic	capitalism, terror
Collective noun	Names a group of things or persons	herd, troop
Common noun	Names a general type of person, place, thing, or idea	city, building
Compound noun	Is made up of two or more words	checkerboard, globe-trotter
Noun of direct address	Identifies the person or persons being spoken to	Maria, please stand.
Possessive noun	Shows possession, ownership, or the relationship between two nouns	my sister's room
Proper noun	Names a particular person, place, thing, or idea	Cleopatra, Italy, Christianity

The subjunctive mood is used to express, indirectly, a demand, suggestion, or statement of necessity (I demand that he stop acting like a child. It's necessary that she buy more bread.) The subjunctive is also used to state a condition or wish that is contrary to fact. This use of the subjunctive requires the past tense. (If you were a nice person, you would return my sweater.)

N

Nominative pronoun. See Pronoun.

Noun A word that names a person, a place, a thing, or an idea. The chart on this page shows the main types of nouns.

Noun clause. See Clause chart.

Noun of direct address. See Noun chart.

Number A noun, pronoun, or verb is singular in number if it refers to one; plural if it refers to more than one.

O

Object. See Complement.

P

Participle A verb form that can function as an adjective. Present participles always end in -ing. (The woman comforted the crying child.) Many past participles end in -ed. (We bought the beautifully painted chair.) However, irregular verbs form their past participles in some other way. (Cato was Caesar's sworn enemy.)

Passive voice. See Voice.

Past tense. See Verb tense.

Perfect tense. See Verb tense.

Personal pronoun. See Pronoun, Pronoun chart.

Phrase A group of words that acts in a sentence as a single part of speech.

An absolute phrase consists of a noun or pronoun that is modified by a participle or participial phrase but has no grammatical relation to the complete subject or predicate. (The vegetables being done, we finally sat down to eat dinner.)

An appositive phrase is an appositive along with any modifiers. If not essential to the meaning of the sentence, an appositive phrase is set off by commas. (Jack plans to go to the jazz concert, an important musical event.)

A gerund phrase includes a gerund plus its complements and modifiers. (Playing the flute is her hobby.)

An infinitive phrase contains the infinitive plus its complements and modifiers. (It is time to leave for school.)

A participial phrase contains a participle and any modifiers necessary to complete its meaning. (The woman sitting over there is my grandmother.)

A prepositional phrase consists of a preposition, its object, and any modifiers of the object. A prepositional phrase can function as an adjective, modifying a noun or a pronoun. (The dog in the yard is very gentle.) A prepositional phrase may also function as an adverb when it modifies a verb, an adverb, or an adjective. (The baby slept on my lap.)

A verb phrase consists of one or more auxiliary verbs followed by a main verb. (The job will have been completed by noon tomorrow.)

Positive degree. See Adjective.

Possessive noun. See Noun chart.

Predicate The verb or verb phrase and any objects, complements, or modifiers that express the essential thought about the subject of a sentence.

A simple predicate is a verb or verb phrase that tells something about the subject. (We ran.)

A complete predicate includes the simple predicate and any words that modify or complete it. (We solved the problem in a short time.)

A compound predicate has two or more verbs or verb phrases that are joined by a conjunction and share the same subject. (We ran to the park and began to play baseball.)

Predicate adjective. See Adjective; Complement.

Predicate nominative. See Complement.

Preposition A word that shows the relationship of a noun or pronoun to some other word in the sentence. Prepositions include about, above, across, among, as, behind, below, beyond, but, by, down, during, except, for, from, into, like, near, of, on, outside, over, since, through, to, under, until, with. (I usually eat breakfast before school.)

A compound preposition is made up of more than one word. (according to, ahead of, as to, because of, by means of, in addition to, in spite of, on account of) (We played the game in spite of the snow.)

Prepositional phrase. See Phrase.

Present tense. See Verb tense.

Progressive form. See Verb tense.

Pronoun A word that takes the place of a noun, a group of words acting as a noun, or another pronoun. The word or group of words that a pronoun refers to is called its antecedent. (In the following sentence, Mari is the antecedent of she. Mari likes Mexican food, but she doesn't like Italian food.)

A demonstrative pronoun points out specific persons, places, things, or ideas. (this, that, these, those)

An indefinite pronoun refers to persons, places, or things in a more general way than a noun does. (all, another, any, both, each, either, enough, everything, few, many, most, much, neither, nobody, none, one, other, others, plenty, several, some)

An intensive pronoun adds emphasis to another noun or pronoun. If an intensive pronoun is omitted, the meaning of the sentence will be the same. (Rebecca herself decided to look for a part-time job.)

An interrogative pronoun is used to form questions. (who? whom? whose? what? which?)

A personal pronoun refers to a specific person or thing. Personal pronouns have three cases: nominative, possessive, and objective. The case depends upon the function of the pronoun in a sentence. The first chart on this page shows the case forms of personal pronouns.

A reflexive pronoun reflects back to a noun or pronoun used earlier in the sentence, indicating that the same person or thing is involved. (We told ourselves to be patient.)

A relative pronoun is used to begin a subordinate clause. (who, whose, that, what, whom, whoever, whomever, whichever, whatever)

Proper adjective. See Adjective.

Proper noun. See Noun chart.

R

Reflexive pronoun. See Pronoun.

Relative pronoun. See Pronoun.

S

Sentence A group of words expressing a complete thought. Every sentence has a subject and a predicate. Sentences can be classified by function or by structure. The second chart on this page shows the categories by function; the following subentries describe the categories by structure. See also Subject; Predicate; Clause.

A simple sentence has only one main clause and no subordinate clauses. (Alan found an old violin.) A simple sentence may contain a compound subject or a compound predicate or both. (Alan and Teri found an old violin. Alan found an old violin and tried to play it. Alan and Teri found an old violin and tried to play it.) The subject and the predicate can be expanded with adjectives, adverbs, prepositional phrases, appositives, and verbal phrases. As long as the sentence has only one main clause, however, it remains a simple sentence. (Alan, rummaging in the attic, found an old violin.)

A compound sentence has two or more main clauses. Each main clause has its own subject and predicate, and these main clauses are usually joined by a comma and a coordinating conjunction. (Cats meow, and dogs bark, but ducks quack.) Semicolons may also be used to join the main clauses in a compound sentence. (The helicopter landed; the pilot had saved four passengers.)

A complex sentence has one main clause and one or more subordinate clauses. (Since the movie starts at eight, we should leave here by seven-thirty.)

A compound-complex sentence has two or more main clauses and at least one subordinate clause. (If we leave any later, we may miss the previews, and I want to see them.)

Simple predicate. See Predicate.

Simple subject. See Subject.

Subject The part of a sentence that tells what the sentence is about.

A simple subject is the main noun or pronoun in the subject. (Babies crawl.)

A complete subject includes the simple subject and any words that modify it. (The man from New Jersey won the race.) In some sentences, the simple subject and the complete subject are the same. (Birds fly.)

Personal Pronouns

Clause	Singular Pronouns	Plural Pronouns	Function in Sentence
Nominative	I, you, she, he, it	we, you, they	subject or predicate nominative
Objective	me, you, her, him, it	us, you, them	direct object, indirect object, or object of a preposition

Types of Sentences

Sentence Type	Function	Ends with . . .	Examples
Declarative sentence	Makes a statement	A period	I did not enjoy the movie.
Exclamatory sentence	Expresses strong emotion	An exclamation point	What a good writer Consuela is!
Imperative sentence	Makes a request or gives a command	A period or an exclamation point	Please come to the party. Stop!
Interrogative sentence	Asks a question	A question mark	Is the composition due?

A compound subject has two or more simple subjects joined by a conjunction. The subjects share the same verb. (Firefighters and police officers protect the community.)

Subjunctive mood. See Mood of verb.

Subordinate clause. See Clause.

Subordinating conjunction. See Conjunction.

Superlative degree. See Adjective; Adverb.

T

Tense. See Verb tense.

Transitive verb. See Verb.

V

Verb A word that expresses action or a state of being. (cooks, seem, laughed)

An action verb tells what someone or something does. Action verbs can express either physical or mental action. (Crystal decided to change the tire herself.)

A transitive verb is an action verb that is followed by a word or words that answer the question What? or Whom? (I held the baby.)

An intransitive verb is an action verb that is not followed by a word that answers the question What? or Whom? (The baby laughed.)

A linking verb expresses a state of being by linking the subject of a sentence with a word or an expression that identifies or describes the subject. (The lemonade tastes sweet. He is our new principal.) The most commonly used linking verb is be in all its forms (am, is, are, was, were, will be, been, being). Other linking verbs include appear, become, feel, grow, look, remain, seem, sound, smell, stay, taste.

An auxiliary verb, or helping verb, is a verb that accompanies the main verb to form a verb phrase. (I have been swimming.) The forms of be and have are the most common auxiliary verbs: (am, is, are, was, were, being, been; has, have, had, having). Other auxiliaries include can, could, do, does, did, may, might, must, shall, should, will, would.

Verbal A verb form that functions in a sentence as a noun, an adjective, or an adverb. The three kinds of verbals are gerunds, infinitives, and participles. See Gerund; Infinitive; Participle.

Verb tense The tense of a verb indicates when the action or state of being occurs. All the verb tenses are formed from the four principal parts of a verb: a base form (talk), a present participle (talking), a simple past form (talked), and a past participle (talked). A regular verb forms its simple past and past participle by adding -ed to the base form. (climb, climbed) An irregular verb forms its past and past participle in some other way. (get, got, gotten)

In addition to present, past, and future tenses, there are three perfect tenses.

The present perfect tense expresses an action or a condition that occurred at some indefinite time in the past. This tense also shows an action or a condition that began in the past and continues into the present. (She has played the piano for four years.)

The past perfect tense indicates that one past action or condition began and ended before another past action started. (Andy had finished his homework before I even began mine.)

The future perfect tense indicates that one future action or condition will begin and end before another future event starts. Use will have or shall have with the past participle of a verb. (By tomorrow, I will have finished my homework, too.)

The progressive form of a verb expresses a continuing action with any of the six tenses. To make the progressive forms, use the appropriate tense of the verb be with the present participle of the main verb. (She is swimming. She has been swimming.)

The emphatic form adds special force, or emphasis, to the present and past tense of a verb. For the emphatic form, use do, does, or did with the base form. (Toshi did want that camera.)

Voice The voice of a verb shows whether the subject performs the action or receives the action of the verb.

A verb is in the active voice if the subject of the sentence performs the action. (The referee blew the whistle.)

A verb is in the passive voice if the subject of the sentence receives the action of the verb. (The whistle was blown by the referee.)

Troubleshooter

The Troubleshooter will help you recognize and correct errors that you might make in your writing.

Sentence Fragment

Problem: A fragment that lacks a subject

The grass is wet. Can't be mowed now.

Solution: Add a subject to the fragment to make it a complete sentence.

The grass is wet. It can't be mowed now.

Problem: A fragment that lacks a complete verb

We enjoyed our dinner. Beans, rice, and salad.
The storm was fierce. The wind blowing hard.

Solution A: Add either a complete verb or a helping verb to make the sentence complete.

We enjoyed our dinner. Beans, rice, and salad make a good meal.
The storm was fierce. The wind was blowing hard.

Solution B: Combine the fragment with another sentence.

We enjoyed our dinner of beans, rice, and salad.
The storm was fierce with the wind blowing hard.

Problem: A fragment that is a subordinate clause

We went to the park. Where we had often gone before.
Jan won the swimming medal. Which she gave to her parents.

Solution A: Combine the fragment with another sentence.

We went to the park, where we had often gone before.
Jan won the swimming medal, which she gave to her parents.

Solution B: Rewrite the fragment as a complete sentence, eliminating the subordinating conjunction or the relative pronoun and adding a subject or other words necessary to make a complete thought.

We went to the park. We had often gone there before.
Jan won the swimming medal. She gave it to her parents.

Problem: A fragment that lacks both a subject and a verb

The birds woke us with their songs. At six in the morning.

Solution: Combine the fragment with another sentence.

The birds woke us with their songs at six in the morning.

Rule of Thumb: Sentence fragments can make your writing hard to understand. Make sure every sentence has a subject and a verb.

Note: In almost all of the writing you do, especially for school, you should avoid sentence fragments. However, sentence fragments can be used to create special effects, such as adding emphasis or conveying realistic dialogue.

"Not again!" she cried.
The pizza was gone. All of it.

Run-On Sentence

Problem: Comma splice—two main clauses separated only by a comma

The sky is pitch black, there is no moon.

Solution A: Replace the comma with an end mark of punctuation, such as a period or a question mark, and begin the new sentence with a capital letter.

The sky is pitch black. There is no moon.

Solution B: Place a semicolon between the two main clauses.

The sky is pitch black; there is no moon.

Solution C: Add a coordinating conjunction after the comma.

The sky is pitch black, and there is no moon.

Problem: Two main clauses with no punctuation between them.

We picked the apples then we made pies.

Solution A: Separate the main clauses with an end mark of punctuation, such as a period or question mark, and begin the second sentence with a capital letter.

We picked the apples. Then we made pies.

Solution B: Separate the main clauses with a semicolon.

We picked the apples; then we made pies.

Solution C: Add a comma and a coordinating conjunction between the main clauses.

We picked the apples, and then we made pies.

Problem: The main clauses with no comma before the coordinating conjunction Elephants still live in the wild but they are endangered.

Solution: Add a comma before the coordinating conjunction to separate the two main clauses.
Elephants still live in the wild, but they are endangered.

Rule of Thumb: It often helps to have someone else read your longer sentences to see if they are clear. Since you know what the sentences are supposed to mean, you might miss the need for punctuation.

Lack of Subject-Verb Agreement

Problem: A subject that is separated from the verb by an intervening prepositional phrase
Ten pieces of the puzzle is on the floor.
The shoe department in each of our stores are closing.

Solution: Make the verb agree with the subject, which is never the object of a preposition.
Ten pieces of the puzzle are on the floor.
The shoe department in each of our stores is closing.

Problem: A predicate nominative that differs in number from the subject
Hamburgers is tonight's dinner.
Tonight's dinner are hamburgers.

Solution: Ignore the predicate nominative, and make the verb agree with the subject of the sentence.
Hamburgers are tonight's dinner.
Tonight's dinner is hamburgers.

Problem: A subject that follows the verb
On my desk is two letters from my dad.
Here is my answers to them both.

Solution: In an inverted sentence look for the subject after the verb. Then make sure the verb agrees with the subject.
On my desk are two letters from my dad.
Here are my answers to them both.

Rule of Thumb: Reversing the order of an inverted sentence may help you decide on the verb form to use: "My answers to them both are here."

Problem: A collective noun as the subject
The cross country team are in first place.
The team gathers at the captain's house after each meet.

Solution A: If the collective noun refers to a group as a whole, use a singular verb.
The cross country team is in first place.

Solution B: If the collective noun refers to each member of a group individually, use a plural verb.
The team gather at the captain's house after each meet.

Problem: A noun of amount as the subject
Five bushels are a great many tomatoes.
Three marbles is in my pocket.

Solution: Determine whether the noun of amount refers to one unit and is therefore singular or whether it refers to a number of individual unites and is therefore plural.
Five bushels is a great many tomatoes.
Three marbles are in my pocket.

Problem: A compound subject that is joined by *and
The hill and the lake makes a lovely setting for a picnic.
Spaghetti and meatballs are her favorite dinner.

Solution A: If the parts of the compound subject do not belong to one unit or if they refer to different people of things, use a plural verb.
The hill and the lake make a lovely setting for a picnic.

Solution B: If the parts of the compound subject belong to one unit or if both parts refer to the same person or thing, use a singular verb.
Spaghetti and meatballs is her favorite dinner.

Problem: A compound subject that is joined by or or *nor
Neither those trees nor that shrub are healthy.

Solution: Make the verb agree with the subject that is closer to it.
Neither those trees nor that shrub is healthy.

Problem: A compound subject that is preceded by many a, every, or *each

Many a dog and cat ends up in an animal shelter or a pound.

Solution: When many a, every, or each precedes a compound subject, the subject is considered singular. Use a singular verb.

Many a dog and cat ends up in an animal shelter or a pound.

Problem: A subject that is separated from the verb by an intervening expression

That issue, as well as several others, are bothering me.

Solution: Certain expressions, such as these beginning with as well as, in addition to, and together with, do not change the number of the subject. Ignore an intervening expression between a subject and its verb, and make the verb agree with the subject.

That issue, along with several others, is bothering me.

Problem: An indefinite pronoun as the subject

Neither of the boys are on time.

Solution: Determine whether the indefinite pronoun is singular or plural, and make the verb agree. Some indefinite pronouns are singular—another, anyone, everyone, one, each, either, neither, anything, everything, something, and somebody. Some are plural—both, many, few, several, and others. Some can be singular or plural—some, all, any, more, most, and none. In these cases, find the noun to which the pronoun refers to determine which verb form to use.

Neither of the boys is on time.

Lack of Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement

Problem: A singular antecedent that can be either male or female.

A climber must check his equipment carefully.

Solution A: Traditionally, a masculine pronoun has been used to refer to an antecedent that may be either male or female. This usage ignores or excludes females. Reword the sentence to use he or she, him or her, and so on.

A climber must check his or her equipment carefully.

Solution B: Reword the sentence so that both the antecedent and the pronoun are plural.

Climbers must check their equipment carefully.

Solution C: Reword the sentence to eliminate the pronoun.

A climber must check the equipment carefully.

Rule of Thumb: Although you may see the masculine forms used exclusively in older literature, they are not acceptable in contemporary writing.

Problem: A second-person pronoun that refers to a third-person antecedent

Juan likes sitcoms that make you think as well as laugh.

Solution A: Use the appropriate third-person pronoun.

Juan likes sitcoms that make him think as well as laugh.

Solution B: Use an appropriate noun instead of a pronoun.

Juan likes sitcoms that make people think as well as laugh.

Problem: A singular indefinite pronoun as an antecedent

Each of the volumes has their own index.

Solution: Each, every, either, neither, and one are singular and therefore require singular personal pronouns even when followed by a prepositional phrase that contains a plural noun.

Each of the volumes has its own index.

Rule of Thumb: To help you remember that each, either, and neither are singular, think each one, either one, and neither one.

Lack of Clear Pronoun Reference [Unclear Antecedent]

Problem: A pronoun reference that is weak or vague

We spent several weeks at the farm this summer, and it was exciting.

The label says to shake it before pouring a serving.

Solution A: Rewrite the sentence, adding a clear antecedent for the pronoun.

We spent our vacation at the farm this summer, and it was exciting.

Solution B: Rewrite the sentence, substituting a noun for the pronoun.
The label says to shake the bottle of salad dressing before pouring a serving.

Problem: A pronoun that could refer to more than one antecedent
Lauren and Abby wrote six songs, and she recorded them all.
Don't buy a car from that dealership: it will let you down.

Solution A: Rewrite the sentence, substituting a noun for the pronoun.
Lauren and Abby wrote six songs, and Abby recorded them all.

Solution B: Rewrite the sentence, making the antecedent of the pronoun clear.
A car from that dealership will let you down; don't buy one there.

Problem: The indefinite use of you or they
You just have to laugh at that scene in the movie.
They say the weather will be clear tomorrow.

Solution A: Rewrite the sentence, substituting a noun for the pronoun.
The audience just has to laugh at that scene in the movie.

Solution B: Rewrite the sentence, eliminating the pronoun entirely.
According to the forecast, the weather will be clear tomorrow.

Shift in Pronoun

Problem: An incorrect shift in person between two pronouns
Lynn likes the front seat, where you are most comfortable.
The Chins planted a maple on the south side of the house, where you need shade the most.

Solution A: Replace the incorrect pronoun with a pronoun that agrees with its a antecedent.
Lynn likes the front seat, where she is most comfortable.

Solution B: Replace the incorrect pronoun with an appropriate noun.
The Chins plants a maple on the south side of the house, where the house needs shade the most.

Shift in Verb Tense

Problem: An unnecessary shift in tense.
The children will give their mother flowers, and they kiss her.
After the party ended, we go home.

Solution: When two or more events occur at the same time, be sure to use the same verb tense to describe each event.
The children will give their mother flowers, and they will kiss her.
After the party ended, we went home.

Problem: A lack of correct shift in tenses to show that one event precedes or follows another
By the time the concert ended, we sat for four hours.

Solution: When two past events being described have occurred at different times, shift from the past tense to the past perfect tense to indicate that one action began and ended before another past action began. Use the past perfect tense for the earlier of the two actions.
By the time the concert ended, we had sat for four hours.

Rule of Thumb: When you need to use several verb tenses in your writing, it may help to first jot down the sequence of events you're writing about. Be clear in your mind what happened first, next, last.

Incorrect Verb Tense or Form

Problem: An incorrect or missing verb ending
When I began taking lessons, I learn about quarter, half, and whole notes.
I had start the lessons two months ago.

Solution: Add –ed to a regular verb to form the past tense and the past participle.
When I began taking lessons, I learned about quarter, half, and whole notes.
I had started the lessons two months ago.

Problem: An improperly formed irregular verb
James brung the book back to the library.
Catherine has writed six pages on that topic.

Solution: Irregular verbs form their past and past participles in some way other than by adding –ed. Memorize these forms, or look them up.
James brought the book back to the library.
Catherine has written six pages on that topic.

Problem: Confusion between the past form and the past participle

We have ate too many apples.
She had swam the Chesapeake last July.

Solution: Use the past participle form of an irregular verb, not the past form, when you use the auxiliary verb have.

We have eaten too many apples.
She had swum the Chesapeake last July.

Problem: Improper use of the past participle

The catcher thrown several runners out.
The DiCaprios done a fine job rearing those children.

Solution A: The past participle of an irregular verb cannot stand alone as a verb. Add a form of the auxiliary verb have to the past participle to form a complete verb.

The catcher had thrown several runners out.
The DiCaprios have done a fine job rearing those children.

Solution B: Replace the past participle with the past form of the verb.

The catcher threw several runners out.
The DiCaprios did a fine job rearing those children.

Misplaced or Dangling Modifier

Problem: A misplaced modifier

The children were swimming in the photograph.
Swooping down on a fish, I spotted the gull.
I saw a man at the movies eating popcorn.

Solution: Modifiers that modify the wrong word or seem to modify more than own word in a sentence are called misplaced modifiers. Move the misplaced phrase as close as possible to the word or words it modifies.

The children in the photograph were swimming.
I spotted the gull swooping down on a fish.
I saw a man eating popcorn at the movies.

Problem: Incorrect placement of the adverb only

Tricia only has enough money to buy a pencil.

Solution: Place the adverb only immediately before the word or group of words it modifies.

Only Tricia has enough money to buy a pencil.
Tricia has enough money to buy only a pencil.
Tricia has only enough money to buy a pencil.

Rule of Thumb: Note that each time only is moved, the meaning of the sentence changes. Check to be sure your sentence says what you mean.

Problem: A dangling modifier

Croaking loudly, I listened to the sounds of the frogs in the bog.
Stealing home, the game was won for the Pirates.

Solution: Dangling modifiers do not seem to logically modify any word in the sentence. Rewrite the sentence, adding a noun to which the dangling phrase clearly refers. Often you will have to add other words too.

I listened to the sounds of the frogs croaking loudly in the bog.
Stealing home, Layla won the game for the Pirates.

Missing or Misplaced Possessive Apostrophe

Problem: Singular nouns

The womans child loved the circus trapeze artists.

Solution: Use an apostrophe and –s to form the possessive of a singular noun, even one that ends in s.

The woman's child loved the circus's trapeze artist.

Problem: Plural nouns ending in – s

The hikers cars were parked at the base of the trail.

Solution: Use an apostrophe alone to form the possessive of a plural noun that ends in –s.

The hikers' cars were parked at the base of the trail.

Problem: Plural nouns not ending in –s

Did Brian join the mens group?

Solution: Use an apostrophe and –s to form the possessive of a plural noun that does not end in –s.

Did Brian join the men's group?

Problem: Pronouns

Everyones contribution helps.
These pencils are your's, and those pencils are their's.

Solution A: Use an apostrophe and –s to form the possessive of a singular indefinite pronoun.

Everyone's contribution helps.

Solution B: Do not use an apostrophe with any of the possessive personal pronouns.

These pencils are yours, and those pencils are theirs.

Problem: Confusion between its and it's

Will you tell me when its ten o'clock?
The cat licked it's fur.

Solution: Do not use an apostrophe to form the possessive of it. Use an apostrophe to form the contraction of it is.

Will you tell me when it's ten o'clock?
The cat licked its fur.

Missing Commas with Nonessential Element

Problem: Missing commas with nonessential participles, infinitives, and their phrases

Pounding hard on the roof the rain awakened me.
The whole set of cups chipped from many years of use was discarded.
To answer you question this software package is worth the price.

Solution: Determine whether the participle, infinitive, or phrase is essential to the meaning of the sentence. If it is not essential, set off the phrase with commas.

Pounding hard on the roof, the rain awakened me.
The whole set of cups, chipped from many years of use, was discarded.
To answer your question, this software package is worth the price.

Problem: Missing commas with nonessential adjective clauses

My mother who is a very generous woman gave us investment tips.

Solution: Determine whether the clause is essential to the meaning of the sentence. If it is not essential, set off the clause with commas.

My mother, who is a very generous woman, gave us investment tips.

Problem: Missing comas with nonessential appositives

John the lead-off batter singles on a line drive

Solution: Determine whether the appositive is essential to the meaning of the sentence. If it is not essential, set off the appositive with commas.

John, the lead-off batter, singled on a line drive.

Rule of Thumb: To determine whether a word or phrase is essential, try reading the sentence without it.

Problem: Missing commas with interjections and parenthetical expressions

Wow what a great cat that is
On Saturdays as a rule we sleep late.

Solution: Set off the interjection or parenthetical expression with commas.

Wow, what a great cat that is!
On Saturdays, as a rule, we sleep late.

Missing Commas in a Series

Problem: Missing commas in a series of words, phrases, or clauses

Alicia Nirupam and Matt made the honor roll.
Mark made the dough kneaded it and left it to rise
The firefighter carries the child out of the apartment down the stairs and into the arms of her mother.
Joe pitched the tent Meg gathered firewood and Bud unloaded the truck.

Solution: When there are three or more elements in a series, use a comma after each element that precedes the conjunction

Alicia, Nirupam, and Matt made the honor roll.
Mark made the dough, kneaded it, and left it to rise.
The firefighter carries the child out of the apartment, down the stairs, and into the arms of her mother.
Joe pitched the tent, Meg gathered firewood, and Bud unloaded the truck.

Rule of Thumb: When you're having difficulty with a rule of usage, try rewriting the rule in your own words. Then check with your teacher to be sure you have grasped the concept.

Mechanics

This section will help you use correct capitalization, punctuation, and abbreviations in your writing.

Capitalization

This section will help you recognize and use correct capitalization in sentences.

Rule: Capitalize the first word in any sentence, including direct quotations and sentences in parentheses unless they are included in another sentence.

Example: She said, "Come back soon."

Example: Emily Dickinson became famous only after her death. (She published only six poems during her lifetime.)

Rule: Always capitalize the pronoun I no matter where it appears in the sentence.

Example: Some of my relatives think that I should become a doctor.

Rule: Capitalize proper nouns, including

a. names of individuals and titles used in direct address preceding a name or describing a relationship.
Example: George Washington; Dr. Morgan; Aunt Margaret

b. names of ethnic groups, national groups, political parties and their members, and languages.
Example: Italian Americans; Aztec; the Republican Party; a Democrat; Spanish

c. names of organizations, institutions, firms, monuments, bridges, buildings, and other structures.
Example: Red Cross; Stanford University; General Electric; Lincoln Memorial; Tappan Zee Bridge; Chrysler Building; Museum of Natural History

d. trade names and names of documents, awards, and laws.
Example: Microsoft; Declaration of Independence; Pulitzer Prize; Sixteenth Amendment

e. geographical terms and regions or localities.
Example: Hudson River; Pennsylvania Avenue; Grand Canyon; Texas; the Midwest

f. names of planets and other heavenly bodies.
Example: Venus; Earth; the Milky Way

g. names of ships, planes, trains, and spacecraft.
Example: USS Constitution; Spirit of St. Louis; Apollo 11

h. names of most historical events, eras, calendar items, and religious names and items.
Example: World War II; Age of Enlightenment; June; Christianity; Buddhists; Bible; Easter; God

i. titles of literary works, works of art, and musical compositions.
Example: "Why I Live at the P.O."; The Starry Night; Rhapsody in Blue

j. names of specific school courses.
Example: Advanced Physics; American History

Rule: Capitalize proper adjectives (adjectives formed from proper nouns).

Example: Christmas tree; Hanukkah candles; Freudian psychology; American flag

Punctuation

This section will help you use these elements of punctuation correctly.

Rule: Use a period at the end of a declarative sentence or a polite command.

Example: I'm thirsty.
Example: Please bring me a glass of water.

Rule: Use an exclamation point to show strong feeling or after a forceful command.

Example: I can't believe my eyes!
Example: Watch your step!

Rule: Use a question mark to indicate a direct question.

Example: Who is in charge here?

Rule: Use a colon

a. to introduce a list (especially after words such as these, the following, or as follows) and to introduce material that explains, restates, or illustrates previous material.

Example: The following states voted for the amendment: Texas, California, Georgia, and Florida.
Example: The sunset was colorful: purple, orange, and red lit up the sky.

b. to introduce a long or formal quotation.
Example: It was Mark Twain who stated the following proverb: "Man is the only animal that blushes. Or needs to."

c. in precise time measurements, biblical chapter and verse references, and business letter salutations.

Example:	3:35 P.M.	7:50 A.M.
	Gen. 1:10–11	Matt. 2:23
	Dear Ms. Samuels:	Dear Sir:

Rule: Use a semicolon

a. to separate main clauses that are not joined by a coordinating conjunction.
Example: There were two speakers at Gettysburg that day; only Lincoln's speech is remembered.

b. to separate main clauses joined by a conjunctive adverb or by for example or that is.
Example: Because of the ice storm, most students could not get to school; consequently, the principal canceled all classes for the day.

c. to separate the items in a series when these items contain commas.
Example: The students at the rally came from Senn High School, in Chicago, Illinois; Niles Township High School, in Skokie, Illinois; and Evanston Township High School, in Evanston, Illinois.

d. to separate two main clauses joined by a coordinating conjunction when such clauses already contain several commas.
Example: The designer combined the blue silk, brown linen, and beige cotton into a suit; but she decided to use the yellow chiffon, yellow silk, and white lace for an evening gown.

Rule: Use a comma

a. between the main clauses of a compound sentence.
Example: Ryan was late getting to study hall, and his footsteps echoed in the empty corridor.

b. to separate three or more words, phrases, or clauses in a series.
Example: Mel bought carrots, beans, pears, and onions.

c. between coordinate modifiers.
Example: That is a lyrical, moving poem.

d. to set off parenthetical expressions, interjections, and conjunctive adverbs.
Example: Well, we missed the bus again.
Example: The weather is beautiful today; however, it is supposed to rain this weekend.

e. to set off nonessential words, clauses, and phrases, such as:

—adverbial clauses

Example: Since Ellen is so tall, the coach assumed she would be a good basketball player.

—adjective clauses

Example: Scott, who had been sleeping, finally woke up.

—participles and participial phrases

Example: Having found what he was looking for, he left.

—prepositional phrases

Example: On Saturdays during the fall, I rake leaves.

—infinitive phrases

Example: To be honest, I'd like to stay awhile longer.

—appositives and appositive phrases

Example: Ms. Kwan, a soft-spoken woman, ran into the street to hail a cab.

f. to set off direct quotations.
Example: "My concert," Molly replied, "is tonight."

g. to set off an antithetical phrase.
Example: Unlike Tom, Rob enjoys skiing.

h. to set off a title after a person's name.
Example: Margaret Thomas, Ph.D., was the guest speaker.

i. to separate the various parts of an address, a geographical term, or a date.
Example: My new address is 324 Indian School Road, Albuquerque, New Mexico 85350.
I moved on March 13, 1998.

j. after the salutation of an informal letter and after the closing of all letters.
Example: Dear Helen, Sincerely,

k. to set off parts of a reference that direct the reader to the exact source.
Example: You can find the article in the Washington Post, April 4, 1997, pages 33–34.

l. to set off words or names used in direct address and in tag questions.
Example: Yuri, will you bring me my calculator?
Lottie became a lawyer, didn't she?

Rule: Use a dash to signal a change in thought or to emphasize parenthetical material.

Example: During the play, Maureen—and she'd be the first to admit it—forgot her lines.

Example: There are only two juniors attending—Mike Ramos and Ron Kim.

Rule: Use parentheses to set off supplemental material. Punctuate within the parentheses only if the punctuation is part of the parenthetical expression.

Example: If you like jazz (and I assume you do), you will like this CD. (The soloist is Miles Davis.)
Example: The upper Midwest (which states does that include?) was hit by terrible floods last year.

Rule: Use brackets to enclose information that you insert into a quotation for clarity or to enclose a parenthetical phrase that already appears within parentheses.

Example: "He serves his [political] party best who serves the country best."—Rutherford B. Hayes Example: The staircase (which was designed by a famous architect [Frank Lloyd Wright]) was inlaid with ceramic tile.

Rule: Use ellipsis points to indicate the omission of material from a quotation.

Example: ". . . Neither an individual nor a nation can commit the least act of injustice against the obscurest individual. . . ." —Henry David Thoreau

Rule: Use quotation marks
a. to enclose a direct quotation, as follows:
Example: "Hurry up!" shouted Lisa.

When a quotation is interrupted, use two sets of quotation marks.

Example: "A cynic," wrote Oscar Wilde, "is someone who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing."

Use single quotation marks for a quotation within a quotation.

Example: "Did you say 'turn left' or 'turn right'?" asked Leon.

In writing dialogue, begin a new paragraph and use a new set of quotation marks every time the speaker changes.

Example: "Do you really think the spaceship can take off?" asked the first officer.
"Our engineer assures me that we have enough power," the captain replied.

b. o enclose titles of short works, such as stories, poems, essays, articles, chapters, and songs.
Example: "The Lottery" [short story]
"Provide, Provide" [poem]
"Civil Disobedience" [essay]

c. to enclose unfamiliar slang terms and unusual expressions.
Example: The man called his grandson a "rapscallion."

d. to enclose a definition that is stated directly.
Example: Gauche is a French word meaning "left."

Rule: Use italics
a. for titles of books, lengthy poems, plays, films, television series, paintings and sculptures, long musical compositions, court cases, names of newspapers and magazines, ships, trains, airplanes, and spacecraft. Italicize and capitalize articles (a, an, the) at the beginning of a title only when they are part of the title.
Example: E.T. [film]; The Piano Lesson [play]
The Starry Night [painting]
the New Yorker [magazine]
Challenger [spacecraft]
The Great Gatsby [book]
the Chicago Tribune [newspaper]

b. for foreign words and expressions that are not used frequently in English.
Example: Luciano waved good-bye, saying, "Arrivederci."

c. for words, letters, and numerals used to represent themselves.
Example: There is no Q on the telephone keypad.
Example: Number your paper from 1 through 10.

Rule: Use an apostrophe

a. for a possessive form, as follows:

Add an apostrophe and s to all singular nouns, plural nouns not ending in s, singular indefinite pronouns, and compound nouns. Add only an apostrophe to a plural noun that ends in s.

Example: the tree's leaves the man's belt
the bus's tires
the children's pets
everyone's favorite
my mother-in-law's job
the attorney general's decision the baseball player's error
the cats' bowls

If two or more persons possess something jointly, use the possessive form for the last person named. If they possess it individually, use the possessive form for each one's name.

Example: Ted and Harriet's family
Ted's and Harriet's bosses
Lewis and Clark's expedition Lewis's and Clark's clothes

b. to express amounts of money or time that modify a noun.

Example: two cents' worth
Example: three days' drive (You can use a hyphenated adjective instead: a three-day drive.)

c. in place of omitted letters or numerals.

Example: haven't [have not] the winter of '95

d. to form the plural of letters, numerals, symbols, and words used to represent themselves. Use an apostrophe and s.

Example: You wrote two 5's instead of one.
Example: How many s's are there in Mississippi?
Example: Why did he use three !'s at the end of the sentence?

Rule: Use a hyphen

a. after any prefix joined to a proper noun or proper adjective.

Example: all-American pre-Columbian

b. after the prefixes all-, ex-, and self- joined to any noun or adjective, after the prefix anti- when it joins a word beginning with i, after the prefix vice- (except in some instances such as vice president), and to avoid confusion between words that begin with re- and look like another word.

Example: ex-president self-important anti-inflammatory vice-principal re-creation of the event recreation time
re-pair the socks
repair the computer

c. in a compound adjective that precedes a noun.

Example: a bitter-tasting liquid

d. in any spelled-out cardinal or ordinal numbers up to ninety-nine or ninety-ninth, and with a fraction used as an adjective.

Example: twenty-three eighty-fifth one-half cup

e. to divide a word at the end of a line between syllables.

Example: air-port scis-sors
fill-ing fin-est

Abbreviations

Abbreviations are shortened forms of words.

Rule: Use only one period if an abbreviation occurs at the end of a sentence. If the sentence ends with a question mark or an exclamation point, use the period and the second mark of punctuation.

Example: We didn't get home until 3:30 A.M.
Example: Did you get home before 4:00 A.M.?
Example: I can't believe you didn't get home until 3:30 A.M.!

Rule: Capitalize abbreviations of proper nouns and abbreviations related to historical dates.

Example: John Kennedy Jr. P.O. Box 333
800 B.C. A.D. 456 1066 C.E.

Use all capital letters and no periods for most abbreviations of organizations and government agencies.

Example: CBS CIA PIN
CPA IBM NFL
MADD GE FBI

Spelling

The following basic rules, examples, and exceptions will help you master the spellings of many words.

Forming plurals

English words form plurals in many ways. Most nouns simply add s. The following chart shows other ways of forming plural nouns and some common exceptions to the pattern.

General Rules for Forming Plurals

if the word ends in	Rule	Example
ch, s, sh, x, z	add es	glass, glasses
a consonant + y	change y to i and add es	caddy, caddies
a vowel + y or o	add only s	cameo, cameos monkey, monkeys
a consonant + o common exceptions	generally add es but sometimes add only s	potato, potatoes cello, cellos
f or ff common exceptions	add s change f to v and add es	cliff, cliffs hoof, hooves
lf	change f to v and add es	half, halves

A few plurals are exceptions to the rules in the previous chart, but they are easy to remember. The following chart lists these plurals and some examples.

Special Rules for Forming Plurals

Rule	Example
To form the plural of most proper names and one-word compound nouns, follow the general rules for plurals.	Cruz, Cruzes Mancuso, Mancusos crossroad, crossroads
To form the plural of hyphenated compound nouns or compound nouns of more than one word, make the most important word plural.	sister-in-law, sisters-in-law motion picture, motion pictures
Some nouns have unusual plural forms.	goose, geese child, children
Some nouns have the same singular and plural forms.	moose scissors pants

Adding prefixes

When adding a prefix to a word, keep the original spelling of the word. Use a hyphen only when the original word is capitalized or with prefixes such as all-, ex-, and self- joined to a noun or adjective.

co + operative = cooperative inter + change = interchange pro + African = pro-African ex + partner = ex-partner

Suffixes and the silent e

Many English words end in a silent letter e. Sometimes the e is dropped when a suffix is added. When adding a suffix that begins with a consonant to a word that ends in silent e, keep the e.

like + ness = likenesssure + ly = surely COMMON EXCEPTIONS awe + ful = awful;
judge + ment = judgment

When adding a suffix that begins with a vowel to a word that ends in silent e, usually drop the e.

believe + able = believable expense + ive = expensive
COMMON EXCEPTION mile + age = mileage

When adding a suffix that begins with a or o to a word that ends in ce or ge, keep the e so the word will retain the soft c or g sound.

notice + able = noticeable courage + ous = courageous

When adding a suffix that begins with a vowel to a word that ends in ee or oe, keep the final e.

see + ing = seeing toe + ing = toeing

Drop the final silent e after the letters u or w.

argue + ment = argument owe + ing = owing

Keep the final silent e before the suffix -ing when necessary to avoid ambiguity.

singe + ing = singeing

Suffixes and the final y

When adding a suffix to a word that ends in a consonant + y, change the y to i unless the suffix begins with i. Keep the y in a word that ends in a vowel + y.

try + ed = tried fry + ed = fried stay + ing = staying display + ed = displayed copy + ing = copying joy + ous = joyous

Adding ly and ness

When adding ly to a word that ends in a single l, keep the l, but when the word ends in a double l, drop one l. When the word ends in a consonant + le, drop the le. When adding -ness to a word that ends in n, keep the n.

casual + ly = casually practical + ly = practically dull + ly = dully probable + ly = probably open + ness = openness mean + ness = meanness

Doubling the final consonant

Double the final consonant in words that end in a consonant preceded by a single vowel if the word is one syllable, if it has an accent on the last syllable that remains there even after the suffix is added, or if it is a word made up of a prefix and a one-syllable word.

stop + ing = stopping admit + ed = admitted
replan + ed = replanned

Do not double the final consonant if the accent is not on the last syllable, or if the accent shifts when the suffix is added. Also do not double the final consonant if the final consonant is x or w. If the word ends in a consonant and the suffix begins with a consonant, do not double the final consonant.

benefit + ed = benefited similar + ly = similarly raw + er = rawer
box + like = boxlike friend + less = friendless rest + ful = restful

Forming Compound Words

When joining a word that ends in a consonant to a word that begins with a consonant, keep both consonants.

out + line = outline
after + noon = afternoon
post + card = postcard pepper + mint = peppermint

ie and ei

Learning this rhyme can save you many misspellings: "Write i before e except after c, or when sounded like a as in neighbor and weigh." There are many exceptions to this rule, including seize, seizure, leisure, weird, height, either, neither, forfeit.

-cede, -ceed, and -sede

Because of the relatively few words with sēd sounds, these words are worth memorizing.

These words use -cede: accede, precede, secede.
One word uses -sede: supersede.
Three words use -ceed: exceed, proceed, succeed.

Logic and Persuasion Handbook

Persuasion

Propositions

One of the main reasons people write and talk is to persuade each other. Persuasive writing and speaking attempts to convince someone of the truth of a proposition, that is, a statement or claim. There are four basic types of proposition:

- A proposition of fact is a claim that certain information is correct.
  Candidate Wilkins comes from Illinois.
- A proposition of value is a statement that a feeling or judgment is valid.
  Candidate Wilkins is a friendly woman.
- A proposition about a problem combines fact and judgment.
  Candidate Wilkins is not qualified to run.
- A proposition of policy is a claim that someone should do something.
  Everyone should vote for candidate Wilkins.

A proposition may be true or false. In evaluating persuasive speaking and writing, you need to know which type of proposition is being made so that you can decide whether it is true or false.

Evidence and Arguments

Persuasive writing and speaking usually includes evidence, that is, reasons why someone should accept a proposition. Together, a proposition and a reason for accepting it make up an argument.

Everyone should vote for candidate Wilkins, because she is the most qualified.

An argument may be valid or invalid, that is, reasonable or unreasonable.

Appeals

Arguments are meant to appeal to certain beliefs, values, or feelings belonging to the reader or listener. Most reasons given in support of a proposition make at least one of four types of appeal:

- An appeal to logic is a claim based on fact and reason.
  Wilkins is unqualified, because she does not meet the age requirement.
- An appeal to ethics or values is a claim based on shared values or judgments.
  Wilkins is best, because she is the most honest and caring.
- An appeal to authority is a claim based on sources believed to be reliable.
  Wilkins is best, because the Metropolitan Bar Association supports her.
- An appeal to emotion is a claim based on shared feelings.
  Wilkins is best, because she has overcome hardship.

In evaluating arguments, you need to know which type of appeal is being made so that you can decide whether it is valid or invalid. Note that an argument may involve more than one type of appeal.

Exercise: Analyzing an Argument

Read the following statements. For each statement, identify the type of proposition made and the type of appeal used to support it..

1. If we want clean beaches, then we need to provide trash cans and arrange for garbage removal in the summer.
2. It is our responsibility as human beings to keep ocean ecosystems healthy by polluting them as little as possible or not at all.
3. According to eminent marine biologists, we have a lot to learn about the animals that live in the ocean depths.
4. Restricting owners of beachfront property from building wherever they want to on their property is highly unfair.

Statement	Proposition	Appeal
1	about a problem
2
3
4		to ethics or values

Logic

Inductive Reasoning

Inductive reasoning involves putting facts together to come up with a generalized statement as a conclusion.

Specific facts:

Fact 1. Star Wars is the second-biggest money maker of all time.

Fact 2. The number one movie at the box office in 2004 was Shrek 2.

Fact 3. Spider-man broke many box office records in 2002.

Generalization: Science fiction and fantasy films do very well at the box office.

Errors In Inductive Reasoning

To avoid errors in inductive reasoning, be sure you use a large enough sample of specific facts, and of course, make sure your facts are accurate. Assuming you have a large enough sample of accurate facts, make sure that your generalization is logical.

For example, it would be illogical to conclude from the facts above that movies whose titles begin with the letter S do well at the box office.

Deductive Reasoning

Deductive reasoning is essentially the opposite of inductive reasoning. With deductive reasoning you start with a generalization to come to a conclusion about a specific case.

Generalization: Paul can only eat vegetarian food.

Specific fact: The Glory Diner offers vegetarian food.

Conclusion: Paul can eat at the Glory Diner.

Syllogisms

A syllogism is a formal statement of a deductive argument. It consists of a major premise, or general statement; a minor premise, or related fact; and a conclusion based on the two.

Major premise: People who travel between countries need a passport.

Minor premise: Jody is flying from the United States to Spain.

Conclusion: Jody needs a passport.

Errors In Deductive Reasoning

Errors in deductive reasoning result from faulty construction of the argument. Make sure the major premise is a universal statement, that both premises are true, and that the conclusion follows logically from the premises.

Note: A syllogism is valid if it follows the rules of deductive reasoning. A syllogism is true if the statements are factually accurate. Therefore, a perfectly valid syllogism can be untrue. For example:

Major premise: All voters are good citizens.
[There is more to good citizenship than voting.]

Minor premise: My parents are voters.

Conclusion: Therefore, my parents are good citizens.

This conclusion is valid according to the premises; however, it isn't necessarily true because the major premise is flawed.

Exercise: Analyzing Logical Reasoning

For each argument below, identify whether inductive or deductive reasoning is used. Evaluate whether the conclusion is valid or invalid and explain your evaluation.

1. An epic poem is a serious, long narrative poem centered on the life of a cultural or national hero or heroine. El Cid is an epic poem. In more than 30,000 lines, it celebrates the life and accomplishments of a Spanish military and political leader who lived in the eleventh century.

2. If a computer can play compact discs, the computer must have been built before 1985. This computer can play CDs. This computer must have been built before 1985.

3. Many humorists use puns. Mark Twain used puns in his writing and his speeches. Ogden Nash used puns in his poems. Woody Allen uses puns in his movies.

Exercise: Using Logical Reasoning

Write a short essay arguing a proposition. In your argument, use at least two examples each of valid inductive and deductive reasoning.

Logical Fallacies

A logical fallacy is a particular type of faulty reasoning. Fallacies often seem reasonable at face value, so they are often used, both intentionally and unintentionally. Some fallacies are so common that they have names.

To identify fallacies in the writing and speaking of others and to avoid it in your own persuasive communication, you need to be able to identify fallacies and to understand why they are illogical.

- Ad Hominem
  Don't listen to what Smyth says about the election; he spent time in prison.
  An ad hominem argument (literally, an argument "against the person") implies that a defect in a person's character or behavior is evidence that what he says is unreliable. Note that the ad hominem fallacy contains a hidden premise: People who have spent time in prison cannot have valid opinions. Because this premise is untrue, the argument about Smyth is untrue also.
- Non Sequitur or False Causality
  This shirt is unlucky: every time I wear it, something bad happens.
  Non sequitur literally means "it doesn't follow." Just because two events occur together, it doesn't follow logically that one caused the other.
- Glittering Generalities
  If you love freedom, vote for Jack.
  Glittering generalities are words with overwhelmingly positive connotations, used to make it seem impossible to disagree with an idea. How can you argue against the idea of freedom? A listener's initial reaction to this statement might be, "Freedom is a good thing, so I must vote for Jack."
- Overgeneralization and Stereotype
  Tall people make excellent basketball players.
  An overgeneralization is any conclusion that may be accurate about a small group, but is inaccurate when applied to a much larger group. An overgeneralization about a group of people is called a stereotype.
- Argument from Authority and Celebrity Endorsement
  Four out of five doctors recommend Pumpidox for most heart conditions.
  Argument from authority is the quoting of an alleged expert on a certain topic. As a logical fallacy, arguments from authority rely solely on the mention of the word "expert," and give no clear facts from the expert. Companies often hire celebrities to appear in commercials for their products in the hope that audiences will respond to the likability of the famous person, even if that person has no real expert knowledge about the product.
- The Bandwagon Effect
  Choose America's favorite toothpaste!
  The term "jumping on the bandwagon" means doing or thinking something because everyone else is doing it or thinking it. This type of reasoning provides no evidence to support a decision or viewpoint.
- Card Stacking
  Senator Porter voted against childcare laws and recycling programs. It's time for new leadership!
  Card stacking involves piling on evidence that supports one side of an argument while ignoring or suppressing valid evidence supporting the other side. Saying that a politician voted against positive-sounding programs does not mean that he or she didn't have good reason to, or that the opposition has a better record.

Ethical Reasoning and Propaganda

Propaganda

Propaganda is the process of persuading by deliberately misleading or confusing an audience. Through the use of combinations of logical fallacies, propaganda can appeal to ethics or values, authority, or emotion, but they do so in a way that is unsupported or inappropriate.

Political propaganda

A vote for Marmelard is a vote for the enemy!

America: You're with us or against us!

Advertising

Be the best parent you can be: Serve your kids Super Goody cereal.

The most successful people shop at Blorland's Department Store.

Ethical Reasoning

Reasoning that persuades by helping its intended audience make informed decisions is called ethical reasoning. As a writer or speaker, you have the responsibility to use ethical reasoning and avoid propaganda. This means that you must gather complete information about a topic, check your facts for accuracy, and make sure that your reasoning includes no errors in logic or false conclusions. You should address opposing evidence with clear and accurate argumentation. Using ethical reasoning in your persuasive writing or speeches will strengthen your positions as your audience sees that you have logically addressed all sides of an idea.

Identifying Unethical Persuasive Techniques

The following essay contains several examples of faulty reasoning. Read through the entire text once, then go back and look for logical fallacies, invalid arguments, and manipulative appeals. For each example you find, make an entry in a chart like the one shown. Then write a paragraph evaluating the essay's argument.

Passage	Type(s) of Appeals	Why Invalid
"Principal Spaly"	Appeal to logic	Card stacking

Don't Take Away Our Freedom

The school board recently announced plans to remove all vending machines from our schools' cafeterias. They say that candy, snacks, and cola are bad for students. But is starvation good for students? Is taking away freedom to choose good for students?

Every expert on nutrition agrees that it is not healthy for kids to go for hours between meals without some sort of snack in between to tide them over. If the school board has its way, students will be passing out at their desks from hunger and dehydration. Principal Spaly claims that students are more likely to pass out from a "sugar crash." This is the same Principal Spaly who recently showed what he thought of students when he denied sophomores the right to park at the high school.

We are taught in these very schools that America is a land of democracy, freedom, and liberty. It is clear that the school board has forgotten this. Any student who loves his or her school will write to the school board and let them know how we feel.

Glossary/Glosario

This glossary lists the vocabulary words found in the selections in this book. The definition given is for the word as it is used in the selection; you may wish to consult a dictionary for other meanings of these words. The key below is a guide to the pronunciation symbols used in each entry.

Pronunciation Key

a	at	ō	hope	ng	sing
ā	ape	ô	fork, all	th	thin ä	father	oo	wood, put	t̲h̲	this
e	end	ōō	fool	zh	treasure
ē	me	oi	oil	ə	ago, taken, pencil, i	it	ou	out		lemon, circus
ī	ice	u	up	′	indicates primary stress
o	hot	ū	use	´	indicates secondary

English

A

abate (ə bāt′) v. to lessen or reduce in force or intensity; p. 97

abhor (ab hôr′) v. to regard with disgust; p. 98

abjectly (ab′ jekt lē) adv. in a humiliating, mean, or degrading manner; p. 952

abominable (ə bom′ ə nə bəl) adj. disgusting; detestable; p. 98

acquiesce (ak´ wē es′) v. to consent or agree silently, without objections; to comply passively; p. 124

adamant (ad′ ə mənt) adj. completely firm and unyielding; p. 1102

admonition (ad′ mə nish´ ən) n. a warning; cautionary advice; p. 194 adorn (ə dôrn′) v. to make beautiful; to decorate; p. 390 affliction (ə flik′ shən) n. great suffering, distress, or its cause; p. 450

alacrity (ə lak′ rə tē) n. speed; swiftness; p. 222

Español

A

abate/aminorar v. disminuir o reducir en fuerza o intensidad; p. 97

abhor/aborrecer v. despreciar; odiar algo en particular; p. 98

abjectly/abyectamente adv. de modo humillante, infame o indecente; p. 952

abominable/abominable adj. espantoso; detestable; p. 98

acquiesce/acatar v. aceptar o consentir sin protestar; acceder pasivamente; p. 124

adamant/obstinado adj. empeñado en un fin; terco; p. 1102

admonition/amonestación s. advertencia; consejo severo; p. 194

adorn/adornar v. embellecer; decorar; p. 390

affliction/aflicción s. gran sufrimiento, angustia, o su causa; p. 450

alacrity/alacridad s. prontitud; presteza; p. 222

alien (ā′ lē ən) adj. strange; unfamiliar; foreign; p. 906	alien/ajeno adj. extraño; foráneo; extranjero; p. 906
alight (ə līt′) v. to descend and come to rest; p. 24	alight/apearse v. descender; bajar; p. 24
allusion (ə lo͞o′ zhən) n. an indirect or casual reference; an incidental mention; p. 377	allusion/alusión s. referencia indirecta o casual; mención casual; p. 377
ambition (am bish′ən) n. a desire to achieve a particular end; p. 1277	ambition/ambición s. deseo de conseguir algo, esp. poder o riquezas; p. 1277
amble (am′ bəl) v. to walk at a leisurely pace; to stroll; p. 1333	amble/pasear v. andar por distracción y sin prisa; deambular; p. 1333
ambulatory (am′ byə lə tôr′ ē) adj. moving from place to place; p. 106	ambulatory/ambulante adj. que va de un lugar a otro; p. 106
ameliorate (ə mēl′ yə rāt′) v. to make better or more tolerable; to improve; p. 1057	ameliorate/mejorar v. hacer mejor o más tolerable; progresar; p. 1057
amiable (ā′ mē ə bəl) adj. friendly; p. 945	amiable/amigable adj. amistoso; p. 945
amorphous (ə môr′ fəs) adj. without definite form; p. 931	amorphous/amorfo adj. sin forma definida; p. 931
anarchy (an′ ər kē) n. the absence of government; p. 385	anarchy/anarquía s. ausencia de gobierno; p. 385
ancestral (an ses′ trəl) adj. of or relating to those from whom one is descended; p. 1163	ancestral/ancestral adj. relativo o perteneciente a los antepasados; p. 1163
animated (an′ ə mā′ tid) adj. full of life; active; lively; p. 945	animated/animado adj. lleno de vida; activo; vivaz; p. 945
apathetically (ap′ ə thet′ i kal ē) adv. in a manner showing little interest or concern; p. 612	apathetically/apáticamente adv. con una actitud que muestra poco interés o preocupación; p. 612
apparition (ap′ ə rish′ ən) n. a ghostlike or nearly invisible appearance; p. 664	apparition/aparición s. apariencia de un fantasma o algo casi invisible; p. 664
appease (ə pēz′) v. to bring to a state of peace or quiet; soothe; p. 97	appease/apaciguar v. calmar o aquietar; tranquilizar; p. 97
apprehension (ap′ ri hen′ shən) n. fear of what may happen in the future; anxiety; p. 73	apprehension/aprensión s. temor vago de lo que pueda pasar; ansiedad; p. 73
apt (apt) adj. likely; having a tendency; p. 707	apt/propenso(a) adj. que tiende (a); que tiene la tendencia (a); p. 707
arbitrary (är′ bə trer′ ē) adj. of a random or unreasonable character; p. 207	arbitrary/arbitrario(a) adj. que actúa por capricho o de forma ilógica; p. 207
ardently (ärd′ ent lē) adv. passionately; enthusiastically; p. 391	ardently/ardientemente adv. apasionadamente; con mucho entusiasmo; p. 391
arduous (är′ jo͞o əs) adj. requiring great exertion or endurance; difficult; p. 117	arduous/arduo adj. que requiere gran esfuerzo o trabajo; difícil; p. 117
aristocracy (a′ rə sto′ krə sē) n. people with high social status due to birth or title; p. 1310	aristocracy/aristocracia s. personas de un nivel social alto por razón de nacimiento o título; p. 1310
array (ə rā′) v. to place in proper or methodical order; p. 385	array/disponer v. colocar en el orden adecuado; arreglar; p. 385

assail (ə sāl′) v. to attack violently; p. 576	assail/embestir v. atacar con violencia; p. 576
assent (ə sent′) v. to express agreement; p. 392	assent/asentir v. afirmar; expresar acuerdo; p. 392
audaciously (ô dā′ shəs lē) adv. boldly; arrogantly; p. 377	audaciously/audazmente adv. atrevidamente; de manera osada; p. 377
avert (ə vurt′) v. to turn away or aside; p. 869	avert/desviar v. apartar; evitar; p. 869
azure (ā′zhər) adj. a light purplish blue; p. 685	azure/azul celeste adj. azul claro como el cielo; p. 685
B	B
balm (bäm) n. something that heals or soothes, as an ointment; p. 260	balm/bálsamo s. sustancia medicinal que cura o alivia, por ejemplo: un ungüento; p. 260
balmy (bä′ mē) adj. soothing; p. 1327	balmy/calmante adj. confortante; agradable; p. 1327
base (bās) adj. morally low; dishonorable; p. 1060	base/vil adj. de baja condición moral; deshonesto; p. 1060
beguile (bi gīl′) v. to influence by deceit; to trick; p. 258	beguile/engañar v. influenciar con mentiras; engatusar; p. 258
benediction (ben′ ə dik′ shən) n. a blessing or something that fosters goodness; p. 804	benediction/bendición s. con morales superiores o un carácter superior; p. 804
benefactor (ben′ ə fak′ tər) n. one who gives help or financial aid; p. 195	benefactor/benefactor s. que respalda una causa o ayuda con dinero; p. 195
benevolent (bə nev′ ə lent) adj. doing or desiring to do good; kind; p. 353	benevolent/benevolente adj. que hace el bien; amable; p. 353
bereft (bi reft′) adj. deprived of the possession or use of something; p. 91	bereft/despojado adj. privado de algo; p. 91
blithe (blīth) adj. lighthearted and carefree; cheerful; p. 191	blithe/alegre adj. despreocupado; animado; p. 191
blunder (blun′ dər) n. a serious error or mistake resulting from carelessness or confusion; p. 224	blunder/error craso s. equivocación o desacierto grave; p. 224
borne (bôrn) v. past participle of bear; given birth to; produced; p. 370	borne/nacido(a) pp. Que se le dio a luz; que dio fruto; p. 370
bosom (booz′ əm) n. the chest or heart; p. 813	bosom/pecho s. (lit.) seno, tórax o corazón; p. 813
bough (bou) n. tree branch; p. 664	bough/rama s. parte que nace del tronco de una planta o árbol; p. 664
bracken (bra′ kən) n. a type of fern that grows in humid, temperate areas; p. 718	bracken/helecho s. tipo de planta criptógama que crece en áreas húmedas y templadas; p. 718
brood (bro͞od) v. to focus the attention on a subject persistently and moodily; worry; p. 1293	brood/cavilar v. entregarse del todo a la contemplación, al dolor; preocupar; p. 1293
bulge (bulj) v. to swell or curve outward; p. 701	bulge/sobresalir v. hincharse o aumentar de tamaño; p. 701

C

calamity (kə lam′ ə tē) n. an unfortunate event or disaster; p. 543 cathedral (ke thē′ drəl) n. a church that is the official seat of a bishop; p. 450 censure (sen′ shər) v. to express disapproval of; to find fault with; to blame; p. 357 ceremonial (ser´ ə mō′ nē əl) adj. formal; p. 894

chide (chīd) v. to find fault with or to blame; p. 91

circumvent (sur´ kəm vent′) v. to get around or to avoid by clever maneuvering; p. 882

civic (siv′ ik) adj. related to citizenship; p. 1170

clamor (klam′ ər) n. confused, insistent shouting; p. 76

coax (kōks′) v. to persuade gently; p. 726

coerce (kō urs′) v. to force; p. 595

coincide (kō´ in sīd′) v. to occur at the same time; p. 1276

colossal (kə los′ əl) adj. extraordinary in size or degree; enormous; p. 1164 commensurate (kə men′ sər it) adj. equal to; proportionate; p. 207 commerce (kom′ ərs) n. exchange of ideas and opinions; p. 664 commodity (kə mod′ ə′ tē) n. a product or economic good; an article of trade; p. 67

compassion (kəm pash′ ən) n. deep awareness of another's suffering with a desire to help; p. 82

compel (kəm pel′) v. to force; p. 606

compensation (kom´ pən sa′ shən) n. payment; p. 1175

comprehension (kom´ pri hen′ shən) n. the act of grasping mentally; understanding; p. 896 compromise (kom′ prə mīz´) v. to endanger the reputation or interests of; to expose to suspicion; p. 1031

C

calamity/calamidad s. desgracia o infortunio; un disastre; p. 543 cathedral/catedral s. iglesia principal donde el obispo tiene su sede; p. 450

censure/censurar v. expresar desacuerdo; criticar algo; reprobar; p. 357 ceremonial/ceremonial adj. formal; relativo a las ceremonias; p. 894

chide/reprender v. hallar defectos con algo o reprobar; p. 91

circumvent/circunvenir v. rodear o evitar mediante una acción astuta; p. 882

civic/cívico(a) adj. relatado a las instituciones e intereses de la patria; p. 1170

clamor/algarabía s. griterío confuso e insistente; p. 76

coax/convencer v. persuadir a una persona para que haga algo; p. 726

coerce/constreñir v. forzar; p. 595

coincide/coincidir v. ocurrir al un mismo tiempo; p. 1276

colossal/colosal adj. extraordinario en tamaño o intensidad; enorme; p. 1164

commensurate/proporcionado(a) adj. igual a; en proporción con; p. 207 commerce/comercio s. intercambio de ideas y opiniones; p. 664 commodity/mercancía s. producto o bien económico; artículo que se vende o compra; p. 67

compassion/compasión s. interés por el sufrimiento ajeno junto con el deseo de ayudar; p. 82

compel/compeler v. forzar; p. 606

compensation/remuneración s. paga; p. 1175

comprehension/comprensión s. acto de entender algo; p. 896

compromise/implicar v. comprometer la reputación o el interés; abrir a sospecha; p. 1031

conciliatory (kən sil′ ē ə tôr′ ē) adj. trying to gain the goodwill of another by friendly acts; p. 1102	conciliatory/conciliador adj. que trata de ganarse la buena voluntad con una actitud amistosa; p. 1102
congenital (kən je′ nə təl) adj. of or relating to a condition that is present at birth, as a result of either heredity or environmental influences; p. 1293	congenital/congénito(a) adj. que existe al nacer, a consecuencia de herencia o influencias del ambiente; p. 1293
congregate (kong′ gri gāt′) v. to bring or come together in a group, a crowd, or an assembly; p. 1228	congregate/congregar v. juntarse o reunirse en un grupo, una masa o una asamblea; p. 1228
congress (kong′ gris) n. a formal meeting; p. 1224	congress/congreso s. reunión; p. 1224
conjecture (kən jek′ chər) v. to form an opinion without definite evidence; to guess; p. 498	conjecture/conjeturar v. formarse una opinión sin tener evidencia definitiva; suponer; p. 498
conjurer (kon′ jər ər) n. one who performs magic; sorcerer; p. 25	conjurer/mago s. que realiza magia; hechicero; p. 25
consecrate (kon′ sə krāt′) v. to set apart as sacred; to make or declare holy; p. 402	consecrate/consagrar v. declarar sagrado; santificar; p. 402
console (kən sōl′) v. to comfort; to cheer; p. 1325	console/consolar v. alentar; tranquilizar; p. 1325
consolidation (kən sä lə da′ shən) n. the process of uniting or merging; p. 939	consolidation/fusión s. el proceso de unir o fusionar; p. 939
constrained (kən strānd′) v. forced or limited; p. 803	constrained/constriñov v. obligado o compeleidor; p. 803
contemplation (kon′ təm plā′ shən) n. the act of thinking about something long and seriously; p. 1086	contemplation/contemplación s. acto de pensar larga y seriamente; p. 1086
contend (kən tend′) v. to argue; dispute; p. 385	contend/contender v. disputar; pelear; p. 385
contention (kən ten′ shən) n. verbal argument or struggle; quarreling; p. 1032	contention/contienda s. lucha o disputa verbal; pelea; p. 1032
continuity (kon′ tə no͞o′ ə tē) n. the state or quality of going on without interruption; p. 1164	continuity/continuidad s. estado o cualidad de seguir sin interrupción; p. 1164
convalescent (kon və le′ sənt) n. a person who is recovering from an illness, an injury, or a surgical operation; p. 418	convalescent/convaleciente s. persona que se recupera de una enfermedad, herida o cirugía; p. 418
convene (kən vēn′) v. to come together; assemble; p. 50	convene/congregarse v. reunirse; p. 50
copious (kō′ pē əs) adj. large in quantity; plentiful; p. 73	copious/copioso adj. grande en cantidad; abundante; p. 73
covet (kuv′ it) v. to desire, especially to an excessive degree, something belonging to another; p. 1062	covet/codiciar v. desear de forma intensa algo ajeno; p. 1062
crimson (krim′zən) adj. a bright purplish red; p. 685	crimson/carmesí adj. de color rojo granate muy vivo; p. 685
curt (kurt) adj. rudely brief, or short; terse; p. 989	curt/cortante adj. brusco y breve; seco; p. 989
cynic (si′ nik) n. a person whose outlook is scornfully and often habitually negative; p. 1294	cynic/cínico(a) s. persona que se burla o que ofende con ironía mordaz; p. 1294

D	D
daunt (dônt) v. to overcome with fear; to intimidate; p. 82	daunt/acobardar v. intimidar; atemorizar; p. 82
debris (də brē′) n. large number of fragments or broken pieces; p. 1009	debris/escombros s. gran número de fragmentos o piezas rotas; p. 1009
decimated (des′ ə māt´ əd) adj. destroyed or killed in large numbers; p. 1298	decimated/diezmado adj. destruido o liquidado en grandes cantidades; p. 1298
deduce (di do͞os′) v. to draw a conclusion from something known or assumed; p. 265	deduce/deducir v. sacar una conclusión de algo que se sabe o se asume; p. 265
deferential (def´ə ren′shəl) adj. yielding to someone else's opinions or wishes; p. 672	deferential/deferente adj. que cede a las opiniones o deseos ajenos; p. 672
degenerate (di jen′ ər it) adj. having declined in condition or character; deteriorated; p. 516	degenerate/degenerado(a) adj. que decae en calidad o condición moral; deteriorado; p. 516
degrading (di grā′ ding) adj. tending to drag down in character or social status; p. 1171	degrading/degradantev adj. que se rebaja o disminuye en dignidad o privilegios; p. 1171
deliberately (di lib′ ər it lē) adj. in a careful, thoughtful way; p. 214	deliberately/deliberadamente adv. hecho con atención y detenimiento; p. 214
deliberation (di lib´ ə rā′ shən) n. careful consideration; p. 51	deliberation/deliberación s. consideración atenta y cuidadosa; p. 51
delicious (di lish′ əs) adj. having a very pleasing taste; p. 679	delicious/delicioso(a) adj. que tiene un sabor agradable; p. 679
delirium (di lēr′ ē əm) n. a temporary state of mental disturbance characterized by confusion and disorientation; p. 1325	delirium/delirio s. estado temporal de alteración mental que se caracteriza por confusión y desorientación; p. 1325
delusion (di lo͞o′ zhen) n. a false impression or belief; p. 378	delusion/ilusión s. impresión o creencia falsa; p. 378
depend (di pend′) v. to rely on; p. 678	depend/depende v. basarse en algo; p. 678
depravity (di prav′ ə tē) n. the state of being morally bad or corrupt; p. 353	depravity/depravación s. condición moral baja o corrupta; p. 353
deprive (di prīv′) v. to take away from; to keep from enjoying or having; p. 146	deprive/privar(se) v. quitarle algo a alguien; dejar de tener o de disfrutar; p. 146
desolation (des´ ə lā′ shən) n. devastation, misery, sadness; p. 82	desolation/desolación s. devastación; miseria; p. 82
detached (di tacht′) adj. not involved emotionally; aloof; indifferent; p. 746	detached/indiferente adj. que no está involucrado emocionalmente; desinteresado; p. 746
detested (di test′ əd) v. greatly disliked or loathed; p. 664	detested/detestado(a) v. (part.) aborrecer, tener aversión; p. 664
diaspora (dī as′ pər ə) n. the scattering of a people; p. 1338	diaspora/diáspora s. dispersión de grupos humanos; p. 1338
diffuse (di fūz′) v. to spread widely; to scatter in all directions; p. 273	diffuse/difundir v. esparcir ampliamente; dispersar en todas las direcciones; p. 273

digress (dī gresʹ) v. to depart from the main subject; to ramble; p. 670	digress/divagar v. apartarse del tema principal; irse por las ramas; p. 670
dilapidated (di lapʹ ə dā´ tid) adj. fallen into ruin or decay; shabby; p. 498	dilapidated/dilapidado adj. que ha sido gastado o arruinado; muy usado; p. 498
din (din) n. loud, continuous noise; p. 222	din/estrépito s. ruido fuerte y continuo; p. 222
diplomatic (dip´ lə matʹ ik) adj. negotiating in a peaceful manner; p. 972	diplomatic/diplomático(a) adj. que negocia e interviene de manera cortés; p. 972
discern (di surnʹ) v. to recognize as different and distinct; distinguish; p. 84	discern/discenir v. reconocer como diferente; distinguir; p. 84
discord (disʹ kôrd) n. lack of agreement or harmony; conflict; p. 243	discord/discordia s. desacuerdo; conflicto; p. 243
disdain (dis dānʹ) v. to look down on; to despise; p. 1284	disdain/desdeñar v. menospreciar, despreciar; p. 1284
disposition (dis´ pə zishʹ ən) n. one's general way of thinking or feeling; p. 49	disposition/disposición s. modo de pensar o sentir; p. 49
dissension (di senʹ shən) n. disagreement or discord; p. 570	dissension/disensión s. desacuerdo o discordia; p. 570
dissipate (disʹ ə pāt´) v. to cause to scatter and gradually vanish; to break up and drive off; p. 868	dissipate/disipar v. hacer que desaparezca gradualmente; disolver; p. 868
diverse (di vursʹ) adj. composed of different elements; p. 830	diverse/diverso(a) adj. compuesto de elementos distintos; p. 830
doggedly (dôʹ gid lē) adv. in a stubbornly persistent manner; obstinately; p. 523	doggedly/obstinadamente adv. de manera persistente; firmemente; p. 523
downy (dou´ nē) adj. soft and fluffy, like the feathers of young birds; p. 1267	downy/aterciopelado adj. suave y velloso, como las plumas de un pájaro recién nacido; p. 1267
dusk (dusk) n. the time of day just before nightfall; p. 1270	dusk/anochecer s. tiempo en el que empieza a faltar la luz del día y se hace de noche; p. 1270
dusky (dusʹ kē) adj. murky or dark in color; p. 813	dusky/oscuro(a) adj. tan profundo o grande que no se puede poner en palabras; p. 813
dutiful (do͞oʹ ti fəl) adj. careful to fulfill obligations; p. 776	dutiful/cumplidor adj. que cumple responsablemente sus obligaciones; p. 776
dwell (dwel) v. to think about at length; p. 1184	dwell/dilatarse v. pensar con calma; tomarse su tiempo p. 1184
E	E
ecclesiastical (i klē´ zē asʹ ti kəl) adj. of or relating to the church; p. 1299	ecclesiastical/eclesiástico adj. relativo a la iglesia; p. 1299
elusive (i looʹ siv) adj. difficult to explain or grasp; p. 554	elusive/elusivo adj. difícil de explicar o entender; p. 554
embark (em bärkʹ) v. to set out on a venture; p. 59	embark/embarcar v. lanzarse a una empresa; partir en una aventura; p. 59

emblem (em′ bləm) n. an object or a representation that functions as a symbol; p. 1289	emblem/emblema s. un objeto o una representación que funciona como un símbolo; p. 1289
emphatic (em fa′tik) adj. forceful; p. 582	emphatic/enfático adj. enérgico; categórico; p. 582
enamel (i nam′ əl) n. a cosmetic or paint that gives a smooth, glossy appearance; p. 718	enamel/esmalte s. cosmético o barniz que da un acabado liso y brillante; p. 718
enamored (en am′ ərd) adj. inspired with love; charmed; captivated; p. 951	enamored/enamorado adj. prendado; encantado; cautivado; p. 951
endeavor (en dev′ ər) v. to make an effort to; to try; p. 123	endeavor/empeñarse v. esforzarse; tratar; p. 123
engrossed (en grōst′) adj. fully attentive to; completely engaged in; absorbed; p. 963	engrossed/enfrascado adj. dedicado por completo a pensar en algo; ensimismado; absorto; p. 963
enlighten (en līt′ ən) v. to give knowledge or wisdom to; p. 1311	enlighten/ilustrar v. dar o revelar conocimientos o sabiduría; p. 1311
entangled (en tan′ gəld) adj. twisted together; caught; p. 690	entangled/enredado(a) pp. liado; atrapado; p. 690
enterprising (en′ tər prī′ zing) adj. showing energy and initiative, especially in beginning new projects; p. 502	enterprising/emprendedor adj. que muestra dinamismo e iniciativa, especialmente al iniciar nuevos proyectos; p. 502
enunciate (i nun′ sē āt′) v. to pronounce distinctly; p. 1255	enunciate/enunciar v. pronunciar claramente; p. 1255
ephemeral (i fem′ rəl) adj. lasting for a very brief time; short-lived; p. 1164	ephemeral/efímero adj. que dura muy poco tiempo; fugaz; p. 1164
evacuate (i vak′ū āt′) v. to vacate or leave a place; p. 1004	evacuate/evacuar v. desalojar o desocupar un lugar; p. 1004
evade (i vād′) v. to escape or avoid, as by cleverness; p. 1045	evade/evadir v. evitar algo de modo astuto; p. 1045
exalt (ig zôlt′) v. to lift up; to put in high spirits; p. 794	exalt/exaltar v. elevar; animar; p. 794
exalted (ig zôl′ təd) adj. elevated; p. 555	exalted/exaltado adj. elevado; p. 555
exclusively (iks′ klo͞o siv lē) adv. without the inclusion or involvement of any others; p. 1311	exclusively/exclusivamente adv. sin la participación de otros; p. 1311
expedient (ək spē′ dē ənt) adj. convenient or efficient for a certain purpose; p. 223	expedient/conveniente adj. útil, oportuno, adecuado para un fin; p. 223
exploit (eks′ ploit) n. notable, heroic deed; feat; p. 135	exploit/proeza s. acto heroico o notable; hazaña; p. 135
extraneous (ek strā′nē əs) adj. not intrinsically belonging; not forming a vital part; coming from outside; p. 1219	extraneous/extraño(a) adj. que no pertenece intrínsicamente; que no forma un parte vital; que previene del exterior; p. 1219

F

feigned (fānd) adj. fictitious; not genuine; p. 65	feigned/fingido adj. falso; que no es genuino; p. 65
fetid (fe′ təd) adj. having a bad odor; p. 988	fetid/fétido adj. que tiene un olor malo; p. 988
fetus (fē′ təs) n. an unborn child that has been in utero for at least eight weeks; p. 978	fetus/feto s. bebé todavía no nacido que ha cumplido más de ocho semanas en el útero materno; p. 978
fitfully (fit′ fəl lē) adv. irregularly; in stops and starts; p. 1277	fitfully/intermitentemente adv. en forma irregular; que se interrumpe y prosigue; p. 1277
foment (fō ment′) v. to promote the development or growth of; p. 147	foment/fomentar v. promocionar el desarrollo o crecimiento de; p. 147
fondle (fond′ əl) v. to handle gently; p. 1210	fondle/acariciar v. tratar con amor y ternura; p. 1210
fortitude (fôr′ tə tood′) n. strength, particularly strength of mind that enables one to encounter danger or bear adversity with courage; p. 298	fortitude/forteleza s. fuerza, particularmente fuerza mental que se permite encontrar peligro o tolerar adversidad con valor; p. 298
fragrant (frā′grənt) adj. having a strong, pleasant smell; p. 576	fragrant/fragante adj. que tiene o despide un aroma; p. 576
fused (fūzd) adj. blended; p. 830	fused/fundido(a) adj. combinado; p. 830
futile (fū′ til) adj. serving no practical purpose; useless; worthless; p. 902	futile/fútil adj. inútil; insignificante; p. 902

G

gape (gāp) v. to stare with the mouth open, as in wonder or surprise; p. 1184	gape/boquear v. quedar boquiabierto por sorpresa o asombro; p. 1184
garment (gär′mənt) n. a piece of clothing; p. 1195	garment/vestido s. pieza de ropa; p. 1195
garrulous (gar′ə ləs) adj. talkative; p. 498	garrulous/parlanchín adj. que habla mucho; locuaz; p. 498
gaunt (gônt) adj. thin, bony, and hollow-eyed, as from hunger or illness; p. 915	gaunt/enjuto adj. flaco y ojeroso por hambre o enfermedad; con aspecto enfermizo; p. 915
genial (jēn′ yəl) adj. mild or friendly; p. 298	genial/simpático(a) adj. amable, amistoso; p. 298
ghetto (get′ō) n. neighborhood where a particular group of people are forced to live either by law, poverty, or social exclusion; p. 1338	ghetto/gueto s. barrio en que un grupo de gente están forzados de vivir a causa de la ley, la pobreza o exclusión social; p. 1338
glazed (glāzd) adj. covered with a smooth, glossy coating; p. 678	glazed/glaseado(a) adj. cubierto con una capa brillante; p. 678
glisten (glis′ ən) v. to shine or to reflect light; p. 701	glisten/refulgir v. emitir fulgor o resplandecer; p. 701
grapple (grap′ əl) v. to struggle in hand-to-hand combat; to wrestle; p. 961	grapple/forcejear v. luchar cuerpo a cuerpo; bregar; p. 961

gratify (grat′ ə fī′) v. to satisfy or indulge; p. 75	gratify/gratificar v. satisfacer o complacer; p. 75
grave (grāv) adj. dignified and gloomy; somber; p. 890	grave/grave adj. solemne y severo; sombrío; p. 890
gravity (grav′ ə tē) n. seriousness; importance; p. 1270	gravity/gravedad s. seriedad; importancia; p. 1270
grievous (grē′ vəs) v. causing or characterized by grief; extremely sad; p. 1234	grievous/doloroso(a) adj. que causa o implica sufrimiento; profunda pena; p. 1234
grimace (grim′ is) n. facial expression showing contempt, disgust, or pain; p. 755 / v. to contort the face, especially to express pain or displeasure; p. 1321	grimace/gesticular v. hacer muecas con la cara, especialmente para expresar dolor o molestia; p. 755, p. 1321
grope (grōp) v. to feel about uncertainly with the hands; to search blindly; p. 1183	grope/tantear v. palpar algo sin certeza; buscar a ciegas; p. 1183
guile (gīl) n. cunning, deceit, or slyness; p. 571	guile/ardid s. engaño; astucia; trampa; p. 571
gunner (gun′ ər) n. an airman or a soldier who operates a gun; p. 978	gunner/artillero(a) s. soldado de las fuerzas militares que sirve en la artillería; p. 978
H	H
hallow (hal′ ō) v. to make or select as holy; to regard or honor as sacred; p. 402	hallow/consagrar v. santificar; honrar como sagrado; p. 402
haughty (hô′ tē) adj. conceited; arrogant; p. 880	haughty/altanero adj. presumido; arrogante; p. 880
heave (hēv) n. an upward motion, or an effort to raise; p. 445	heave/elevación s. movimiento hacia arriba, o esfuerzo para levantar algo; p. 445
hemorrhage (he′ mə rij) n. a severe discharge of blood; p. 931	hemorrhage/hemorragia s. pérdida grave de sangre; p. 931
holocaust (hol′ ə kôst′) n. great or complete destruction, especially by fire; p. 1255	holocaust/holocausto s. destrucción grande o total, especialmente debida al fuego; p. 1255
hostile (host′ əl) adj. feeling or showing hatred; antagonistic; p. 902	hostile/hostil adj. que siente o demuestra odio; adverso; p. 902
husky (hus′ kē) adj. strong; burly; p. 711	husky/corpulento(a) adj. fornido; grandote; p. 711
hypocrisy (hi pok′ rə sē) n. an expression of feelings or beliefs not actually possessed or held; p. 135	hypocrisy/hipocresía s. expresión de sentimientos o creencias que en realidad no se tienen; falsedad; p. 135
hysterical (his ter′ i kəl) adj. characterized by panic or other uncontrolled emotion; p. 1247	hysterical/histérico(a) adj. caracterizado por pánico o alguna emoción sin freno; p. 1247
I	I
immaculate (i mak′ yə lit) adj. unblemished; flawless; pure; p. 1083	immaculate/inmaculado adj. sin mancha ni pecado; irreprochable; puro; p. 1083
immortality (im′ ôr tal′ ə tē) n. the condition of having eternal life; p. 604	immortality/inmortalidad s. vida eterna; p. 604

impede (im pēd′) v. to slow or block progress or action; obstruct; p. 265	impede/impedir v. detener o aminorar; obstaculizar; p. 265
imperative (im per′ ə tiv) n. something absolutely necessary; an essential; p. 1159	imperative/imperativo s. algo absolutamente necesario; algo esencial; p. 1159
imperial (im pēr′ ē əl) adj. of or relating to an empire or emperor; p. 450	imperial/imperial adj. relativo al imperio o al emperador; p. 450
imperially (im pēr′ ē əl ē) adv. majestically; magnificently; p. 575	imperially/imperialmente adv. majestuosamente; magníficamente; p. 575
implementation (im´ plə mən tā′ shən) n. putting into effect; putting into use; p. 1242	implementation/implementación s. suministro de los medios necesarios para llevar algo a cabo; p. 1242
implication (im´ plə kā′ shən) n. an effect or consequence; p. 973	implication/implicación s. efecto o consecuencia; p. 973
impromptu (im promp′ to͞o, -tū) adv. done on the spur of the moment; p. 416	impromptu/improvisadamente adv. hecho espontáneamente, de improviso; p. 416
impudent (im′ pyə dənt) adj. cocky, bold; p. 939	impudent/insolente adj. atrevido, descarado; p. 939
impudently (im′ pyə dənt lē) adv. in an offensively bold manner; p. 585	impudently/descaradamente adv. de modo ofensivo y atrevido; sin decoro ni vergüenza; p. 585
inaudibly (in ô′ də blē) adv. in a manner not able to be heard; p. 1270	inaudibly/inaudiblemente adv. de modo que no se puede escuchar; p. 1270
incessantly (in ses′ ənt lē´) adv. continually; happening over and over without interruption; p. 576	incessantly/incesantemente adv. de continuo; que no cesa ni se interrumpe; p. 576
incredulity (in′ krə do͞o′ lə tē, -dū′) n. disbelief; p. 417	incredulity/incredulidad s. descreimiento; p. 417
indentured (in den′ chərd) adj. bound by contract to serve someone for a time; p. 106	indentured/ligado por contrato adj. obligado por un contrato a servir a una persona por un tiempo determinado; p. 106
indictment (in dīt′ mənt) n. a formal legal accusation, charging the commission or omission of an act, which is punishable by law; p. 1105	indictment/acusación s. denuncia legal y formal por la comisión u omisión de un acto que castiga la ley; p. 1105
indifferent (in dif′ ər ənt) adj. lacking feeling or concern; having no marked feeling for or against; p. 1288	indifferent/indiferente adj. que no demuestra sentimiento o preocupacion: p. 1288
induce (in doos′) v. to lead by persuasion or influence; p. 354	induce/inducir v. influir o persuadir; p. 354
ineffably (in ef′ ə blē) adv. to a degree that is impossible to express; indescribably; p. 983	ineffably/inefablemente adv. sin poderse explicar; de modo indescriptible; p. 983
ineptly (i nept′ lē) adv. incompetently; awkwardly; clumsily; p. 1066	ineptly/ineptamente adv. sin aptitud o destreza; torpemente; p. 1066
inevitable (i nev′ ə tə bəl) adj. incapable of being avoided or evaded; certain to happen; p. 973	inevitable/inevitable adj. que no se puede evitar o eludir; irremediable; p. 973

infamy (in′ fə mē) n. a reputation as something evil or harmful; p. 972	infamy/infamia s. una reputación como algo funesto o dañoso; p. 972
infidel (in′ fə del´) n. an unbeliever; p. 106	infidel/infiel s. el que no cree; p. 106
infrastructure (in´ frə struk′ chər) n. the underlying base for an organization or a system; p. 1243	infrastructure/infraestructura s. elementos o servicios necesarios para la creación o el funcionamiento de una organización o sistema; p. 1243
ingenious (in jēn′ yəs) adj. exhibiting creative ability; inventive; p. 106	ingenious/ingenioso adj. que tiene habilidad creativa; talentoso; p. 106
ingenuously (in jen′ ū əs lē) adv. honestly; frankly; p. 585	ingenuously/ingenuamente adv. de modo honesto; francamente; cándidamente; p. 585
iniquity (in ik′ wə tē) n. sin; p. 282	iniquity/iniquidad s. pecado; maldad; p. 282
inquisitor (in kwi′ zə tər) n. one who asks questions; p. 933	inquisitor/inquisidor s. el que hace preguntas; p. 933
inscrutable (in skro͞o′ tə bəl) adj. mysterious, or not able to be interpreted or understood; p. 302	inscrutable/inescrutable adj. misterioso, que no se puede interpreter o entender; p. 302
insidious (in sid′ ē əs) adj. slyly dangerous; deceitful; deceptive; p. 117	insidious/insidioso adj. engañoso; malicioso; p. 117
installment (in stôl′ mənt) n. one part of a payment that has been divided; p. 1019	installment/cuota s. parte proporcional en que se divide un pago; p. 1019
intangible (in tan′ jə bəl) adj. not easily defined or evaluated by the mind; p. 603	intangible/intangible adj. que no es fácil de definir o evaluar; p. 603
integrate (in′ tə grāt´) v. to bring all parts together into a whole; p. 190	integrate/integrar v. unir todas las partes en un todo; p. 190
integrity (in teg′ rə tē) n. moral uprightness; honesty; p. 195	integrity/integridad s. rectitud moral; honestidad; p. 195
interminable (in tur′ mi nə bəl) adj. seemingly endless; p. 499	interminable/interminable adj. que parece no tener fin; p. 499
interpose (in´ tər pōz′) v. to intrude, intervene, or to put oneself between; p. 445	interpose/interponer v. meterse, mediar, poner algo entre cosas o personas; p. 445
intervene (in´ tər vēn′) v. to come or lie between; p. 607	intervene/intervenir v. tomar parte en un asunto; p. 607
intimation (in´ tə mā′ shən) n. a hint; a suggestion; p. 934	intimation/insinuación s. sugerencia; indirecta; p. 934
intimidated (in tim′ ə dāt´ əd) adj. made timid or fearful; frightened into submission or inaction; p. 962	intimidated/intimidado adj. atemorizado o asustado; reprimido; p. 962
irreproachable (ir´ i prō′ chə bəl) adj. free from blame; faultless; p. 288	irreproachable/irreprochable adj. libre de culpa; sin falta alguna; p. 288

J

jilt (jilt) v. to drop or reject as a sweetheart; p. 779

jostle (jo′ səl) v. to bump, push, or shove while moving, as in a crowd; p. 746

jubilant (jo͞o′ bə lənt) adj. extremely happy; triumphantly joyful; p. 963

K

kin (kin) n. relatives, or a group of people with common ancestry; p. 730

kinsmen (kinz′ men) n. someone who shares the same racial or cultural background as another; p. 803

L

lament (lə ment′) v. to express deep sorrow or grief; p. 84

latent (lā′ tənt) adj. present but not evident; hidden; p. 194

lattice (la′ təs) n. a structure of crisscrossed strips, commonly wood or metal, that forms a pattern of openings; p. 258

lean (lēn) adj. unproductive; lacking; p. 826

legacy (leg′ ə sē) n. an inheritance; p. 522

lethargy (leth′ ər jē) n. sluggish inactivity or drowsiness; p. 268

loiter (loi′ tər) v. to stand or linger idly or aimlessly about a place; p. 962

lopped (lopt) v. trimmed or chopped off, as the branches of a tree; p. 1234

lot (lot) n. way of life or purpose as determined by fate; fortune; p. 208 ludicrous (lo͞o′ də krəs) adj. deserving laughter; foolish; false; p. 206

lull (lul) v. to soothe or cause to sleep; p. 813

lurch (lurch) v. to move suddenly and unevenly; p. 745

J

jilt/dejar plantado v. rechazar; incumplir una cita; p. 779

jostle/empujar v. empellar mientras se camina, como en una multitud; p. 746

jubilant/jubiloso adj. dichoso; muy feliz por un triunfo; p. 963

K

kin/clan s. parientes o grupo de personas unidas por un vínculo familiar; p. 730

kinsmen/parientes s. alguien quien es parte de la misma raza o experiencia cultural; p. 803

L

lament/lamentar v. expresar gran pena o dolor; p. 84

latent/latente adj. presente pero no evidente; oculto; p. 194

lattice/entramado s. conjunto de láminas entrecruzadas, de metal o material flexible, que forma aperturas; p. 258

lean/escaso(a) adj. improductivo; pobre; p. 826 legacy/legado s. herencia; p. 522

lethargy/letargo s. estado de sopor o inactividad; p. 268

loiter/holgazanear v. permanecer en un lugar sin hacer nada; estar ocioso; p. 962

lopped/podado(a) v. cortar y quitar, por ej. las ramas de un árbol; p. 1234

lot/destino s. lo que determina el modo de vida o los acontecimientos; fortuna; p. 208

ludicrous/absurdo(a) adj. disparatado; sin sentido; equivocado; p. 206

lull/arrullar v. tranquilizar o adormecer; p. 813

lurch/tambalearse v. caminar o moverse sin equilibrio; p. 745

M

malinger (mə ling′ gər) v. to pretend incapacity or illness to avoid work; p. 670

manifest (man′ ə fest´) adj. apparent to the eye or the mind; evident; obvious; p. 195

marvel (mär′ vəl) v. to be filled with wonder; p. 1277 meager (mē′ gər) adj. deficient in quantity or completeness; p. 945

meandering (mē an′ dər ing) adj. following a winding course; p. 1312

melancholy (mel′ ən kol´ ē) adj. depressing; dismal; gloomy; p. 243

mildewed (mil′ dyūd) adj. coated or partially coated with a fungus that causes spoilage; p. 1224 millennium (mi le′ nē əm) n. a period of great happiness, peace, or prosperity; p. 819

misanthropic (mis´ ən throp′ ik) adj. having hatred for humankind; p. 298

morose (mə rōs′) adj. bad-tempered, gloomy, and withdrawn; p. 921

mortification (môr´ tə fi kā′ shən) n. feeling of shame, humiliation, or embarrassment; p. 107

mount (mount) v. to ascend or to soar; p. 685

mundane (mun dān′) adj. ordinary; p. 761

mute (mūt) adj. silent; p. 690 myriad (mir′ ē əd) adj. countless; innumerable; p. 215

N

nobly (nō′ blē) adv. with superior morals or character; p. 803

nostalgia (nə stal′ jə) n. a bittersweet longing for things, persons, or situations of the past; p. 1260

O

oblige (ə blīj′) v. to make grateful or indebted; to do a favor or service for; p. 370

M

malinger/fingirse enfermo v. hacerse el enfermo para no trabajar; p. 670

manifest/manifiesto adj. evidente o claro a la vista; obvio; p. 195

marvel/maravillar(se) v. ver con admiración y asombro; p. 1277 meager/exiguo adj. muy escaso; limitado; p. 945

meandering/tortuoso adj. que sigue un camino con muchas curvas; p. 1312

melancholy/melancólico adj. deprimente; funesto; desconsolador; p. 243

mildewed/mohoso(a) adj. cubierto total o parcialmente con un hongo que puede causar daños; p. 1224 millennium/edad de oro s. periodo de felicidad, paz o prosperidad; p. 819

misanthropic/misantrópico(a) adj. que siente aversión o rechazo al trato humano; p. 298

morose/adusto adj. malhumorado; taciturno; p. 921

mortification/mortificación s. sentimiento de aflicción, humillación o vergüenza; p. 107

mount/montar v. subir o remontar; p. 685

mundane/mundano adj. ordinario; usual; terrenal; p. 761

mute/mudo adj. silencioso; falta de sonido; p. 690 myriad/innumerable adj. que no se puede contar; incalculable; p. 215

N

nobly/noblemente adv. con morales superiores o un carácter superior; p. 803

nostalgia/nostalgia s. tristeza melancólica por la ausencia o alejamiento de cosas, personas o recuerdos del pasado; p. 1260

O

oblige/agradecer v. hacer agradecido o adeudado por algo; hacerle un favor o un servicio; p. 370

obliquely (ō blēk′ lē) adv. in a slanting or sloping direction; p. 526	obliquely/oblicuamente adv. de manera inclinada o sesgada; p. 526
oblivious (ə bliv′ ē əs) adj. without conscious awareness; unmindful; p. 1270	oblivious/abstraído adj. distraído; ensimismado; p. 1270
obscure (əb skyo͞or′) adj. little known or having an insignificant reputation; p. 541	obscure/obscuro(a) adj. no conocido; que tenga una reputación insignificante; p. 541
occult (ə kult′) adj. beyond human understanding; mysterious; p. 191	occult/sobrenatural adj. más allá de la comprensión humana; misterioso; p. 191
ominous (om′ə nəs) adj. like an evil omen; threatening; p. 756, p. 1249	ominous/ominoso adj. que da mal presagio; siniestro; p. 756, p. 1249
ordeal (ôr dēl′) n. a circumstance or experience that is painful or difficult; a trial; p. 1157	ordeal/tribulación s. circunstancia o experiencia dolorosa o difícil; p. 1157
P	P
palpable (pal′ pə bəl) adj. tangible; able to be touched or felt; p. 690	palpable/palpable adj. tangible; que puede tocarse con las manos; p. 690
patronage (pā′ trə nij) n. business; trade; custom; p. 817	patronage/clientela s. conjunto de parroquianos de un negocio, oficio o establecimiento; p. 817
pepper (pe′ pər) v. to shower with small objects; p. 685	pepper/salpicar v. esparcir cosas como rociándolas sobre una superficie; p. 685
perception (pər sep′ shən) n. an awareness; an insight; p. 555	perception/percepción s. conocimiento; idea; p. 555
perennial (pə ren′ ē əl) adj. continuing year after year; enduring; p. 191	perennial/perenne adj. que continúa año tras año; duradero; p. 191
perish (per′ ish) v. to pass from existence; to disappear; p. 402	perish/perecer v. dejar de existir; desaparecer; p. 402
perjury (pər′ jə rē) n. the act of swearing under oath to the truth of something that one knows to be untrue; p. 1084	perjury/perjurio n. el acto de atestiguar bajo juramento la verdad de algo que uno sabe que no es verdad; p. 1084
permeate (pur′ mē āt′) v. to penetrate, spread through, or diffuse; p. 1218	permeate/penetrar v. infiltrarse, introducirse o difundirse; p. 1218
perpetual (pər pech′ o͞o əl) adj. lasting forever; eternal; p. 190	perpetual/perpetuo adj. que dura por siempre; eterno; p. 190
perturbation (pur′ tər bā′ shən) n. state of being perturbed, anxious, or uneasy; p. 757	perturbation/perturbación s. agitación; ansiedad; inquietud; p. 757
perusal (pə ro͞o′ zəl) n. the process of examining carefully; p. 385	perusal/escudriñamiento s. proceso de examinar cuidadosamente; p. 385
pervade (pər vād′) v. to spread through every part; p. 378	pervade/penetrar v. saturar; llenar por todos lados; p. 378
petrified (pet′ rə fīd) adj. paralyzed with fear; stiff or like stone; p. 135	petrified/petrificado adj. paralizado de miedo; inmóvil como una piedra; p. 135

petulance (pe′ tū lens) n. irritability; impatience; p. 761	petulance/mal genio n. irritabilidad; impaciencia; p. 761
piety (pī′ ə tē) n. religious devoutness; goodness; p. 780	piety/piedad s. devoción religiosa; bondad; p. 780
placid (pla′ səd) adj. calm; peaceful; undisturbed; p. 259	placid/plácido adj. quieto; apacible; sin perturbación; p. 259
Plexiglas (plek′ si glas′) n. a light and very durable transparent plastic; p. 978	Plexiglas/plexiglás s. material acrílico transparente y flexible; p. 978
poignant (poin′ yənt) adj. sharp; severe; causing emotional or physical anguish; p. 392	poignant/punzante adj. agudo; lacerante; que causa angustia emocional o física; p. 392
pointless (point′ lis) n. making no sense; p. 1194	pointless/inútil s. vano, sin sentido; p. 1194
poise (poiz′) n. a state of balance; p. 719	poise/aplomo s. mesura, compostura; p. 719
poised (poizd) adj. having a calm, controlled, and dignified manner; composed; p. 906	poised/aplomado(a) adj. que tiene serenidad, seriedad y seguridad; con compostura; p. 906
ponder (pon′ dər) v. to think about thoroughly and carefully; p. 1184	ponder/ponderar v. pensar algo detenida y cuidadosamente; p. 1184
possessor (pə zes′ ər) n. one who has or takes control of something; owner; p. 1194	possessor/poseedor(a) s. persona que tiene en su poder el control de algo; dueño; p. 1194
posterity (pos ter′ ə tē) n. generations of the future; all of one's descendants; p. 50	posterity/posteridad s. generaciones del futuro; todos los descendientes; p. 50
premeditated (prē med′ ə tāt′ əd) adj. thought about beforehand; p. 973	premeditated/premeditado(a) adj. que se reflexionó con cuidado antes de realizar la acción; p. 973
premonition (prē′ mə nish′ ən) n. a warning, or foreboding about the future; p. 988	premonition/premonición s. advertencia o presagio de que algo va a ocurrir; p. 988
presume (pri zo͞om′) v. to expect something without justification; to take for granted; p. 670	presume/suponer v. esperar algo sin justicación; p. 670
presumptuous (pri zump′ cho͞o əs) adj. going beyond what is proper; excessively bold; p. 1299	presumptuous/atrevido(a) adj. que falta al respeto debido; insolente; p. 1299
pretense (prē′ tens) n. a false show or appearance, especially for the purpose of deceiving; falseness; p. 1037	pretense/simulación s. falsa apariencia, especialmente con el propósito de engañar; falsedad; p. 1037
prevalent (prev′ ə lent) adj. widespread; p. 242	prevalent/prevaleciente adj. frecuente; generalizado; p. 242
procure (prə kyo͞or′) v. to obtain by care or effort; p. 67	procure/procurarse v. obtener mediante esfuerzos; p. 67
prosperous (pros′ pər əs) adj. wealthy or successful; p. 540	prosperous/próspero(a) adj. rico o venturoso; p. 540
prostrate (pros′ trāt) adj. stretched out with face to the ground in humility, adoration, or submission; p. 377	prostrate/postrado adj. agachado o arrodillado en señal de humillación, adoración o sumisión; p. 377

protrude (prō tro͞od′) v. to stick out; to project; p. 390	protrude/sobresalir v. resaltar; proyectarse; p. 390
providence (prov′ ə dəns) n. divine care or guidance; foresight; p. 65	providence/providencia s. cuidado o guía divina; disposición; p. 65
proximity (prok sim′ ə tē) n. closeness in space, time, sequence, or degree; nearness; p. 271	proximity/proximidad s. cercanía en espacio, tiempo, secuencia o grado; p. 271
prudence (pro͞od′əns) n. exercise of good and cautious judgment; p. 98	prudence/prudencia s. ejercicio del buen juicio y la cordura; cautela; p. 98
R	R
racket (rak′ it) n. loud noise; clamor; din; p. 770	racket/bulla s. gritería; clamor; barullo; p. 770
rampages (ram′ pāj´ iz) v. rushes wildly about; scurries; p. 1234	rampages/alborotar v. pasar saqueando; corretear; p. 1234
random (ran′ dəm) adj. lacking a definite pattern; haphazard; p. 1255	random/causal adj. que no sigue un patrón definido; fortuito; p. 1255
rank (rangk) adj. having a strong, offensive odor; p. 1224	rank/fétido(a) adj. que tiene un olor repugnante; p. 1224
ration (rā′ shən) n. fixed portion or share; p. 58	ration/ración s. porción definida; p. 58
ravenous (rav′ ə nəs) adj. extremely hungry; p. 918	ravenous/voraz adj. extremadamente hambriento; p. 918
reap (rēp) v. to gather, as in harvesting a crop; p. 826	reap/cosechar v. recoger los cultivos cuando están maduros; p. 826
rear (rir) v. to lift upright; raise; p. 1259	rear/levantar v. alzar; subir; p. 1259
recede (ri sēd′) v. to move back or away from a point, limit, or mark; p. 1228	recede/retroceder v. recular o irse de un punto, un limite o una marca; p. 1228
recluse (rek′ lo͞os) n. someone who leads a secluded or solitary life; p. 298	recluse/ermitaño(a) s. persona que vive recluida o en soledad; p. 298
recompense (rek′ əm pens´) n. something given in return for something else; compensation; p. 92	recompense/recompensa s. algo dado en cambio de algo más; compensación; p. 92
rectitude (rek′ tə to͞od´) n. uprightness of moral character; honesty; p. 124	rectitude/rectitud s. buena condición moral; honestidad; p. 124
redress (rē′ dress´) n. compensation, as for wrong done; p. 385	redress/desagravio s. compensación por un error o mala actitud; p. 385
rejuvenated (ri jo͞o′ və nāt´ əd) adj. restored to youthful vigor or appearance; renewed; p. 1326	rejuvenated/rejuvenecido adj. que ha recuperado el vigor o la apariencia joven; renovado; p. 1326
remonstrate (ri mon′ strāt) v. to object; to protest; p. 118	remonstrate/rezongar v. objetar; protestar; p. 118
render (ren′ dər) v. to reproduce or depict in verbal or artistic form; p. 706	render/producir v. causar; generar; p. 706
repose (ri pōz′) n. relaxation; tranquility; eternal rest; p. 516	repose/descanso s. relax; tranquilidad; reposo eterno; p. 516

reprieve (ri prēvʹ) n. official postponement of the carrying out of a sentence; p. 1102

reprimand (repʹ rə mand´) v. to reprove or correct sharply; p. 1052

reproach (ri prōchʹ) n. an expression of disapproval; a reprimand; p. 523

repudiate (ri pūʹ dē āt´) v. to refuse to accept as valid; to reject; to renounce; p. 1159 resign (ri zīnʹ) v. to make oneself accept; p. 748 resignation (rez´ ig nāʹ shən) n. unresisting acceptance; submission; p. 214

resolution (rez´ ə lo͞oʹ shən) n. firmness of purpose; p. 135

resolve (ri zolvʹ) v. to decide; determine; p. 54

respite (resʹ pət) n. a period of rest or relief, as from work or sorrow; p. 259

retaliation (ri tal´ ē āʹ shən) n. the act of repaying an injury or a wrong by committing the same, or a similar, act; p. 1102 retractable (ri trakʹ tə bəl) adj. capable of being drawn back or in; p. 931

reverence (revʹ ər əns) n. a feeling of respect or deep affection; p. 208 revive (ri vīvʹ) v. to give new strength and vitality, or bring back to consciousness; p. 58

rouse (rouz) v. to awaken from sleep; p. 58

rudiment (ro͞oʹ də mənt) n. an imperfect or undeveloped part; p. 215

rue (ro͞o) v. to regret; to be sorry for; p. 923

ruinous (ro͞oʹ i nəs) adj. causing ruin; destructive; p. 517

S

sagacious (sə gāʹ shəs) adj. having or showing wisdom and keen perception; p. 282

salient (sālʹ yənt) adj. prominent or conspicuously noticeable; p. 570

sanction (sangkʹ shən) n. approval or support; p. 227

scintillating (sinʹ tə lā´ ting) adj. brilliant; sparkling; p. 816

reprieve/aplazamiento s. demora oficial de una sentencia; p. 1102

reprimand/reprender v. regañar o corregir severamente; p. 1052

reproach/reproche s. expresión de desacuerdo; censura; p. 523

repudiate/repudiar v. negarse a aceptar como válido; rechazar; renunciar; p. 1159 resign/resignarse v. obligarse a aceptar; conformarse; p. 748 resignation/resignación s. aceptación; conformismo; sumisión; p. 214 resolution/resolución s. acción de decidir con firmeza; p. 135

resolve/resolver v. decidir; determinar; p. 54

respite/respiro s. rato de descanso o alivio, en medio de un trabajo o una pena; p. 259

retaliation/represalia s. acto de vengarse o devolver un mal acto cometiendo un acto similar o igual; p. 1102

retractable/retráctil adj. capaz de encogerse; p. 931

reverence/reverencia s. respeto o veneración; p. 208

revive/revivir v. dar nueva fuerza y vitalidad; hacer que recupere el conocimiento; p. 58

rouse/despertar v. dejar de dormir; p. 58

rudiment/rudimento s. parte imperfecta o sin desarrollar; p. 215

rue/deplorar v. lamentar; sentir; p. 923

ruinous/ruinoso(a) adj. que arruina; que destruye; p. 517

S

sagacious/sagaz adj. que tiene o demuestra astucia y agudeza mental; p. 282

salient/destacado(a) adj. prominente o notoriamente evidente; p. 570

sanction/ratificación s. aprobación o respaldo; p. 227

scintillating/chispeante adj. brillante; destellante; p. 816

score (skôr) n. a group of twenty items; p. 402	score/veintena s. grupo de veinte objetos; p. 402
scorn (skôrn) n. contempt or disdain felt toward a person or an object considered despicable or unworthy; p. 1260	scorn/despreció v. desdén hacia una persona o un objeto que se considera desreciable o desmerecedor; p. 1260
scorned (skôrnd) v. treated with open contempt; rejected something as worthless; p. 576	scorned/despreciado v. tratar con desdén; despreciar; p. 576
scruple (skro͞o′ pəl) n. moral principle that restrains action; p. 76	scruple/escrúpulo s. principio moral que limita una acción; p. 76
scuffle (skuf′ əl) v. to move with a slow, heavy, shuffling gait; p. 868	scuffle/arrastrar los pies v. moverse con pasos rápidos y torpes; p. 868
sear (sēr) v. to char, scorch, or burn the surface with or as if with a sudden application of intense heat; p. 1293	sear/quemar v. calcinar, chamuscar o abrasar con fuego o algo muy caliente; p. 1293
secede (si sēd′) v. to formally withdraw from an alliance; p. 1247	secede/separarse de v. retirarse formalmente de una alianza; p. 1247
shtetl (shte′ təl) n. small Jewish town or community; p. 1338	shtetl/shtetl s. palabra de origen yiddish que significa pequeña ciudad o comunidad hebrea; p. 1338
sluggishly (slug′ ish lē) adv. slowly; without strength or energy; p. 877	sluggishly/perezosamente adv. lentamente; sin energía ni entusiasmo; p. 877
sneer (snēr) v. to smile or laugh scornfully or critically; p. 711	sneer/reírse socarronamente v. sonreír o reír despreciativamente o criticamente; p. 711
snicker (sni′ kər) n. a snide, partly suppressed laugh, often expressing disrespect; p. 794	snicker/risita burlona s. risa solapada que puede demostrar burla o falta de respeto; p. 794
solemn (sol′ əm) adj. serious; somber; p. 895	solemn/solemne adj. serio; grave; p. 895
solidarity (sol′ ə dar′ ə tē) n. unity of a group that produces a sense of community; p. 1175	solidarity/solidaridad s. adhesión o apoyo a una causa ajena; p. 1175
solitude (sol′ e to͞od′) n. the state of being alone; p. 1333	solitude/soledad s. falta de compañía, estar solo; p. 1333
sown (sōn) v. planted; p. 826	sown/sembrados v. (part.) plantados; p. 826
speculate (spek′ yə lāt′) v. to engage in risky business ventures, hoping to make quick profits; p. 248	speculate/especular v. participar en negocios arriesgados con el deseo de obtener ganancias rápidas; p. 248
spurn (spurn) v. to reject with contempt or disdain; to scorn; p. 1284	spurn/desdeñar v. rechazar con menosprecio o desdén; p. 1284
stately (stāt′ lē) adj. noble; dignified; majestic; p. 920	stately/majestuoso adj. noble; imponente; espléndido; p. 920
stature (stach′ ər) n. a level attained; standing; status; p. 1159	stature/estatura s. nivel alcanzado; posición; p. 1159
stigma (stig′ mə) n. mark or characteristic of disgrace; p. 1245	stigma/estigma s. marca o señal de mala fama; p. 1245

stipulate (stip′ yə lāt′) v. to require or demand as part of an agreement; p. 1176	stipulate/estipular v. establecer o concertar de común acuerdo; p. 1176
stooped (sto͞opt) adj. bent forward and downward; p. 1184	stooped/encorvado adj. doblado hacia adelante y hacia abajo; p. 1184
striking (strī′ king) adj. impressive; attractive; p. 1277	striking/atractivo(a) adj. admirable; que atrae la atención; p. 1277
stupor (sto͞o′ pər) n. a confused or dazed state of mind; p. 543	stupor/estupor s. disminución de las funciones intelectuales, aletargamiento; p. 543
subjugation (sub′ jə gā′ shən) n. act of bringing under control; domination; p. 117	subjugation/subyugación s. acto de someter o poner bajo control; dominación; p. 117
sublime (səb līm′) adj. of great spiritual or intellectual value; noble; p. 214	sublime/sublime adj. de gran valor espiritual o intelectual; noble; p. 214
subsequently (sub′ sə kwent′ lē) adv. at a later time; p. 417	subsequent/subsiguiente adv. que sigue inmediatamente; p. 417
subservient (səb sur′ vē ənt) adj. useful, in an inferior capacity, to promote an end; submissive; p. 1034	subservient/subordinado adj. útil, en una capacidad inferior, para conseguir un fin; sumiso; p. 1034
subtle (sut′ əl) adj. barely noticeable; not open, direct, or obvious; p. 788	subtle/sutil adj. que no es obvio ni directo; p. 788
subverting (səb vurt′ ing) v. overthrowing and destroying; p. 1234	subverting/subvirtiendo v. derrocar y destruir; p. 1234
succumb (sə kum′) v. to give in or submit to; p. 986	succumb/sucumbir v. rendirse; ceder; p. 986
surmise (sər mīz′) v. to infer from little evidence; to guess; p. 245	surmise/suponer v. conjeturar con poca o ninguna evidencia; presumir; p. 245
susceptible (sə sep′ tə bəl) adj. easily influenced or affected; p. 417	susceptible/susceptible adj. sensible o capaz de recibir modificación; p. 417
swelter (swel′ tər) v. to suffer from oppressive heat; p. 1228	swelter/achicharrar v. padecer de calor opresivo; p. 1228
swindle (swin′ dəl) v. to cheat someone out of money or property; p. 1021	swindle/estafar v. engañar a alguien para sacarle dinero o propiedad; p. 1021
T	T
tactful (takt′ fəl) adj. able to speak or act without offending others; p. 776	tactful/discreto adj. capaz de hablar o actuar sin ofender a otros; p. 776
taper (tā′ pər) v. to become progressively thinner or smaller; p. 701	taper/reducir v. disminuir en tamaño o intensidad; p. 701
tedious (tē′ dē əs) adj. tiresome because of length; boring; p. 668	tedious/tedioso adj. pesado a causa de su extensión o duración; aburrido; p. 668
temper (tem′ pər) v. to modify or moderate; soften; p. 50	temper/atemperar v. modificar o moderar; suavizar; p. 50

tempest (tem′pist) n. a violent storm; p. 570	tempest/tempestad s. tormenta con fuertes vientos; p. 570
tenure (ten′ yər) n. conditions or terms under which something is held; p. 123	tenure/tenencia s. condiciones o términos bajo los cuales se posee algo; p. 123
terminus (tur′ mə nəs) n. one end of a travel route or the station placed there; p. 1012	terminus/término s. final de un recorrido o el extremo de una línea de transporte público; p. 1012
token (tō′ ken) n. something serving as an indication, a proof, or an expression of something else; a sign; p. 1289	token/muestra s. indicio, demostración o prueba de algo; un señal; p. 1289
transformed (trans formәd′) adj. changed in a dramatic way; p. 1211	transformed/convertido(a) adj. transformado en algo distinto de lo que era; p. 1211
transfusion (trans fū′ zhən) n. the act of passing life-saving fluids from one to another; p. 1211	transfusion/transfusión s. transferencia de sangre o plasma de una persona a otra; p. 1211
trepidation (trep′ə dā′ shən) n. nervous anticipation; anxiety; dread; p. 524	trepidation/perturbación s. anticipación nerviosa; ansiedad; p. 524
tribute (tri′ byüt) n. something given to show affection, gratitude, or respect; p. 939	tribute/tributo s. reconocimiento en muestra de afecto, gratitud o respeto; p. 939
tumultuously (to͞o mul′ cho͞o əs lē) adv. in an agitated manner; violently; p. 554	tumultuously/tumultuosamente adv. de modo agitado; violentamente; p. 554
turret (tur′it) n. a small, rotating domelike structure that is mounted with guns and attached to the body of an aircraft; p. 978	turret/torreta giravtoria s. pequeña torre acorazada, con forma de domo que rota y está montada en un avión, que sirve para sostener piezas de artillería; p. 978
twinge (twinj) n. a sudden, sharp physical or emotional pain; p. 940	twinge/punzada s. dolor repentino y agudo que puede ser físico o afectivo; p. 940
tyranny (tir′ə nē) n. cruel use of authority; oppressive power; p. 134	tyranny/tiranía s. abuso cruel de la autoridad; poder opresivo; p. 134
tyrant (tī′ rənt) n. a ruler who exercises power or authority in an unjust manner; one who has absolute power; p. 147	tyrant/tirano(a) s. gobernante que abusa de su poder y autoridad de manera injusta; quien tiene el poder absoluto; p. 147
U	U
uncanny (un kan′ ē) adj. peculiarly unsettling in an eerie way; p. 582, p. 1249	uncanny/espectral adj. inquietante y extraño; misterioso; p. 582, p. 1249
undeviating (un dē′ vē āt′ ing) adj. not turning away from; p. 1299	undeviating/recto adj. que no se desvía o extravía; p. 1299
unencumbered (ən in kəm′ bərd) adj. unhindered; unburdened; p. 1334	unencumbered/aligerado(a) adj. aliviado o sin carga; p. 1334
unique (ū nēk′) adj. unusual; p. 830	unique/único(a) adj. fuera de lo común; p. 830

unorthodox (un ôr′ thə doks´) adj. not customary or traditional; p. 1312

unperturbed (un pər turbd′) adj. undisturbed; calm; p. 1092

unsheathed (un shēthd′) adj. removed from a protective case; p. 830

usurpation (ū´sər pā′ shən) n. the act of seizing power without legal right or authority; p. 122

V

valedictory (val´ ə dik′ tə rē) adj. of or relating to an occasion or expression of farewell; p. 1229

vanity (van′ i tē) n. excessive pride, as in one's looks; p. 779

vanquish (vang′ kwish) v. to defeat; p. 356

vassal (vas′ əl) n. a person in a subservient position; p. 147

vault (vôlt) n. an arched structure forming a roof or ceiling; p. 24 venerable (ven′ ər ə bəl) adj. deserving respect because of age, character, or position; p. 281 vigorously (vig′ ər əs lē) adv. with power, energy, and strength; p. 893

vile (vīl) adj. evil, repulsive, or degrading; p. 571, p. 1077

vindicate (vin′ də kāt´) v. to justify; to prove correct in light of later circumstances; p. 879 vindictive (vin dik′tiv) adj. desiring revenge; p. 902

virulent (vir′ yə lənt) adj. extremely poisonous or harmful; p. 882 vivid (viv′ id) adj. perceived as bright and distinct; brilliant; p. 1288

vogue (vōg) n. fashion; style; p. 816

volition (vō lish′ ən) n. act of choosing or deciding; p. 1005

W

wallowing (wol′ ō ing) v. moving in a clumsy manner or with difficulty; p. 1210

unorthodox/no ortodoxo adj. que no es usual ni tradicional; p. 1312

unperturbed/inalterado adj. que no se molesta o altera; calmado; p. 1092

unsheathed/desenvainado(a) adj. que se sacó que su vaina o funda; p. 830

usurpation/usurpación s. acto de tomar el poder sin derecho o autoridad legal; p. 122

V

valedictory/de despedida adj. de una ocasión o una expresión de adiós; p. 1229

vanity/vanidad s. orgullo excesivo, particularmente por la apariencia física; p. 779

vanquish/subyugar v. derrotar; conquistar p. 356

vassal/vasallo n. persona en una posición subordinada; p. 147

vault/bóveda s. estructura arqueada que forma un techo o cielo raso; p. 24

venerable/venerable adj. que merece respeto debido a la edad, carácter o posición; p. 281 vigorously/vigorosamente adv. con poder, energía y fuerza; p. 893

vile/vil adj. malvado; bajo; repulsivo; degradante; p. 571, p. 1077

vindicate/vindicar v. justificar; demostrar que es correcto ante nuevas circunstancias; p. 879 vindictive/vengativo adj. que desea venganza; p. 902

virulent/virulento adj. extremadamente nocivo o dañino; p. 882

vivid/vívido adj. auténtico; realista; distintivo; p. 1288

vogue/moda s. que está en boga; que se estila; p. 816

volition/volición s. acto de la voluntad de escoger y decidir; p. 1005

W

wallowing/andando pesadamente v. moverse torpemente o con dificultad; p. 1210

wane (wān) v. to decrease gradually; to decline; p. 1300

wanton (wont′ ən) adj. resulting from extreme cruelty or neglect; p. 711

warily (wār′ ə lē) adv. in a watchful or alert manner; cautiously; p. 1255

withered (wi′ thərd) adj. shriveled; p. 745

woo (wo͞o) v. to tempt or invite; p. 1259

X

xenophobic (zen′ə fō′ bik) adj. having an extreme fear of foreigners or strangers; p. 1010

Z

zealous (zel′ əs) adj. filled with enthusiastic devotion; passionate; p. 288

wane/declinar v. menguar o disminuir gradualmente; p. 1300

wanton/despiadado(a) adj. que es inhumano, cruel o sin piedad; p. 711

warily/cautelosamente adv. de modo cuidadoso o alerta; p. 1255

withered/marchito adj. seco; arrugado; p. 745

woo/atraer v. tentar o buscar el apoyo de alguien; p. 1259

X

xenophobic/xenófobo adj. que siente hostilidad hacia los extranjeros; p. 1010

Z

zealous/fervoroso adj. lleno de entusiasmo y devoción; apasionado; p. 288

Academic Word List

To succeed academically in high school and prepare for college, it is important to know academic vocabulary–special terms used in classroom discussion, assignments, and tests. These words are also used in the workplace and among friends to share information, exchange ideas, make decisions, and build relationships. Research has shown that the words listed below, compiled by Averil Coxhead in 2000, are the ones most commonly used in these ways. You will encounter many of them in the Glencoe Language Arts program. You will also focus on specific terms in connection with particular reading selections.

Note: The lists are ordered by frequency of use from most frequent to least frequent.

List One

analysis approach area assessment assume authority available benefit concept consistent constitutional context contract create data definition derived distribution economic environment established estimate evidence export factors financial formula function identified income indicate individual interpretation involved issues labor legal legislation major method occur percent period policy principle procedure process required research response role section sector significant similar source specific structure theory variables

List Two

achieve acquisition administration affect appropriate aspects assistance categories chapter commission community complex computer conclusion conduct consequences construction consumer credit cultural design distinction elements equation evaluation features final
focus impact injury institute investment items journal maintenance normal obtained participation perceived positive potential previous primary purchase range region regulations relevant resident resources restricted security select site sought strategies survey text traditional transfer

List Three

alternative circumstances comments compensation components consent considerable constant constraints contribution convention coordination core corporate corresponding criteria deduction demonstrate document dominant emphasis ensure excluded framework funds illustrated immigration implies initial instance interaction justification layer link location maximum minorities negative outcomes partnership philosophy physical proportion published reaction registered reliance removed scheme sequence sex shift specified sufficient task technical techniques technology validity volume

List Four

access adequate annual apparent approximated attitudes attributed civil code commitment communication concentration conference contrast cycle debate despite dimensions domestic emerged error ethnic goals granted hence hypothesis implementation implications imposed integration internal investigation job label mechanism obvious occupational option output overall parallel parameters phase predicted principal prior professional project promote regime resolution retained series statistics status stress subsequent sum
summary
undertaken

List Five

academic adjustment alter amendment aware capacity challenge clause compounds conflict consultation contact decline discretion draft enable energy enforcement entities equivalent evolution expansion exposure external facilitate fundamental generated generation image liberal license logic marginal medical mental modified monitoring network notion objective orientation perspective precise prime psychology pursue ratio rejected revenue stability styles substitution sustainable symbolic target transition trend version welfare whereas

List Six

abstract accurate acknowledged aggregate allocation assigned attached author bond brief capable cited cooperative discrimination display diversity domain edition enhanced estate exceed expert explicit federal fees flexibility furthermore gender ignored incentive incidence incorporated index inhibition initiatives input instructions intelligence interval lecture migration minimum ministry motivation neutral nevertheless overseas preceding presumption rational recovery revealed scope subsidiary tapes trace transformation transport underlying utility

List Seven

adaptation adults advocate aid channel chemical classical comprehensive comprise confirmed contrary converted couple decades definite deny differentiation disposal dynamic eliminate empirical equipment extract file finite foundation global grade guarantee hierarchical identical ideology inferred innovation insert intervention isolated media mode paradigm phenomenon priority prohibited publication quotation release reverse simulation solely somewhat submitted successive survive thesis
topic transmission ultimately unique visible voluntary

List Eight

abandon accompanied accumulation ambiguous appendix appreciation arbitrary automatically bias chart clarity conformity commodity complement contemporary contradiction crucial currency denote detected deviation displacement dramatic eventually exhibit exploitation fluctuations guidelines highlighted implicit induced inevitably infrastructure inspection intensity manipulation minimized nuclear offset paragraph plus practitioners predominantly prospect radical random reinforced restore revision schedule tension termination theme thereby uniform vehicle via virtually visual widespread

List Nine

accommodation analogous anticipated assurance attained behalf bulk ceases coherence coincide commenced concurrent confined controversy conversely device devoted diminished distorted duration erosion ethical format founded incompatible inherent insights integral intermediate manual mature mediation medium military minimal mutual norms overlap passive portion preliminary protocol qualitative refine relaxed restraints revolution rigid route scenario sphere subordinate supplementary suspended team temporary trigger unified violation vision

List Ten

adjacent albeit assembly collapse colleagues compiled conceived convinced depression encountered enormous forthcoming inclination integrity intrinsic invoked levy likewise nonetheless notwithstanding odd ongoing panel persistent posed reluctant so-called straightforward undergo whereby

Index of Skills

Literary Concepts

Action
    See also Plot.
  falling 929, 1022, 1073
  rising 929, 1022, 1073
Alliteration 255, 438, 441, 453, 1225
Allusion 81, 86, 667, 674, 798, 799
Analogy 447, 504, 506
Anecdote 1162, 1165
Aphorism 110, 111
Apostrophe 572, 710, 713
Archetype 21, 23, 26, 252, 279, 897
Argument 121, 123, 221, 228, 369, 371, 1073, 1095
Assonance 438, 441, 447
Author's purpose 48, 52, 93, 126, 145, 148, 189, 193, 428, 579, 599, 677, 680, 703, 743, 750, 971, 974, 1015, 1236
Author's style 743, 749, 1280
Autobiographical narrative 1118
Autobiography 105, 109, 352, 358, 907, 991
Axiom 444
Bias 57, 61
Biography 150
  biographical narrative 150, 734
Blank verse 715, 720, 733
Catalog of images and details 412, 1297, 1302
Character 239 antagonist 239
  foil 960, 968
  protagonist 239, 774, 784, 924
Characterization 241, 252, 291, 725, 733, 783, 943, 958, 1114
  direct 241, 725, 943
  indirect 241, 725, 943, 1254, 1256
Climax 556, 929, 1022, 1073, 1095
    See also Plot.
Colloquialism 799
Comic books 1316, 1317
Concrete details 815, 822, 1182
Conflict 552, 556, 599, 771, 929, 935, 1073, 1114
  external 552, 599, 771, 929, 935, 1073, 1114
  internal 552, 599, 771, 929, 935, 1073, 1114
Connotation 96, 101, 113, 1209, 1212
Context
  cultural 667, 674, 1332, 1335
  historical 81, 86, 306, 350, 361, 1051, 1072
  social 550, 567
Couplet 140, 143
  heroic 143
Creation myth 20–21
Cultural context 667, 674, 1332, 1335
Denotation 96, 1209, 1212
Description 145, 148, 398, 889, 897
Dialect 497, 503, 943, 957
Dialogue 914, 925, 1027, 1050, 1114, 1272
Diary 362–363
Diction 63, 68, 137, 383, 386, 938, 941
Drama 1116–1117
Dramatic irony 936
    See also Irony.
Dramatic monologue 515, 518, 674
Elements, of a short story 239
Emotional appeals 112–113
Essay 180, 1309, 1313
  formal 180, 1309, 1313 informal (personal) 1309, 1313
Ethical appeals 112–113
Exaggeration 112
    See also Hyperbole.
Exposition 1022, 1073, 1265, 1272
    See also Plot.
Extended metaphor 219, 825, 827, 1235
External conflict
    See Conflict.
Falling action 929, 1022, 1073
    See also Plot.
Fiction R7
Figurative language 194, 196, 1193, 1196, 1230
  apostrophe 572, 710, 713
  figures of speech 115, 119, 1233, 1235
  hyperbole 112
  imagery 96, 100, 112, 444, 449, 663, 665, 683, 686, 787, 789, 977, 979, 1305, 1307 metaphor 90, 93, 213, 219, 304, 441, 825, 827, 1233, 1235
  personification 448, 449, 453, 831, 1233, 1235, 1292, 1295
  simile 213, 691, 831, 1223, 1225
  symbol 279, 291, 1287, 1290
Figure of speech 115, 119, 1233, 1235, 1285, 1292
Fireside poets 210–211
First-person point of view
    See Point of view.
Flashback 539, 547, 886
Flash-forward 900, 907
Foil 960, 968
Folktale R8
Foreshadowing 252, 875, 886, 925
Form 677, 680
Formal essay 180, 1309, 1313
    See also Essay.
Frame story 1275, 1280
Free verse 409, 412, 415, 1196, 1225, 1258, 1261
Full rhyme 438
Genre 1240
Gothic novel 184
Graphic novel 998–1000, 1316–1317
Hero
  tragic 1096, 1114
Heroic couplet 143
  meter and rhyme patterns 143
Historical context 81, 86, 306, 350, 361, 1051, 1072
Historical fiction R9
Historical narrative 416, 419, 822
Hyperbole 112
Iambic pentameter 143, 805
Idiom 1018, 1022
Imagery 96, 100, 112, 444, 449, 663, 665, 683, 686, 787, 789, 977, 979, 1305, 1307
Imagist poetry 660–661, 687, 698
Implied theme 239, 867, 871, 1096
Implied thesis 209
Informal (personal) essay 1309, 1313
  See also Essay.
Interior monologue R10
Internal conflict
    See Conflict.
Internal rhyme 441, 453
Inversion 140, 143
Irony 574, 577, 924, 935, 936
  dramatic R11
  situational 577, 924, 935

  - verbal 577, 935
- Irregular rhythm 705, 708, 1206
- Italian (Petrarchan) sonnet 787, 789
- Jargon 1250
- Journal 375
- Juxtaposition 815, 822
- Letter 362–363
- Literary criticism 455
- Literary history 20-21, 112-113, 210-211, 238-239, 362-363, 536-537, 660-661, 740-741, 1024-1025, 1116-1117, 1316-1317
- Literary traditions
  - contrasting 660–661
- Logical arguments 121, 221, 228, 1073
- Magic realism 1319, 1329
- Memoir 362–363, 991
- Metaphor 90, 93, 213, 219, 304, 441, 825, 827, 1233, 1235
  - extended 219, 825, 827, 1235
- Meter 143, 444, 802, 805
  - foot 444, 802
- Metonymy R12
- Modernism 740–74
- Monologue 515, 518, 674
- Mood 349, 449, 452, 814, 979, 1182, 1185, 1206, 1227, 1230
- Motif 1337, 1340
- Motivation 295, 304, 753, 771, 957
- Mysteries 238–239
- Myth 20–21, 33, 37, 46
- Narrative 57, 81
  - autobiographical 1118
  - biographical 150–153, 734
  - historical 416, 419, 822
- Narrative poetry 255, 261, 725, 733, 1332, 1335
- Narrator 239, 982, 991, 1251
- Naturalism 536–537, 569
- Nonfiction R13
  - creative 1118
- Novel R13
  - Gothic 184
  - graphic 998–1000, 1316–1317
  - Regionalist 636–637
- Octave 787
  - See also Sonnet.
- Oral history 1168, 1177
- Oral tradition 34, 37
- Oratory 369, 371
- Origin myth 20–21, 46
- Parable 290
- Parallelism 113, 401, 403, 1313
- Parody 1251
- Personification 448, 449, 453, 831, 1233, 1235, 1292, 1295
- Persuasion 112–113, R14
- Petrarchan sonnet 787, 789
  - See also Sonnet.
- Plays R15
  - See also Drama.
- Plot 252, 548, 929, 935, 1018, 1022, 1023, 1073, 1095
  - climax 556, 929, 1022, 1073, 1095
  - conflict 552, 556, 599, 771, 929, 935, 1073, 1114
  - exposition 1022, 1073, 1265, 1272
  - falling action 929, 1022, 1073
  - predictions 241, 252, 539, 548
  - resolution 556, 1022, 1073
  - rising action 929, 1022, 1073
- Poetry 255, 340–341, 687 , 698
  - See also Sonnet.
  - fireside 210–211
  - free verse 409, 412, 415, 1196, 1225, 1258, 1261
  - imagist 660–661, 687, 698
  - narrative 255, 261, 725, 733, 1332, 1335
  - symbolist 660–661
- Point of view 57, 61, 239, 275, 388, 398, 399, 548, 772, 1003, 1015, 1283, 1285
  - first-person 275, 388, 772, 1003, 1015, 1283, 1285
  - objective 1015
  - omniscient 388, 772
  - second-person 1285
  - third-person 772, 1003, 1015, 1285
  - third-person limited 388, 772
  - third-person omniscient 388, 398, 772
- Postmodernism 1143, 1148, R15
- Propaganda 992, R15
- Realism 486–487, 536–537
- Refrain 345, 349, 814
- Regionalism 858–859
- Regionalist novel 636–637
- Regular rhythm 705, 708, 1206
- Repetition 255, 261, 371, 811, 814
- Resolution
  - See Plot.
- Rhetoric 112–113
- Rhetorical devices 112–113, 1203, 1207
  - analogy 447, 504, 506
  - emotional appeal 112–113
  - hyperbole 112
  - metaphor 90, 93, 213, 219, 304, 441, 825, 827, 1233, 1235
  - parallelism 113, 401, 403, 1313
  - question 112, 115, 119
  - repetition 255, 261, 371, 811, 814
- Rhetorical questions 112, 115, 119
- Rhyme 140, 143, 438, 441, 444, 447, 453
  - full 438
  - internal 441, 453
  - slant 438, 441, 447, 1261
- Rhyme scheme 569, 572, 722, 724, 938, 941
- Rhythm 705, 708, 715, 1203, 1206
  - See also Meter.
  - irregular 705, 708, 1206
  - regular 708, 1206
- Rising action 929, 1022, 1073
  - See also Plot.
- Romanticism 178–179
- Satire 1240, 1251
- Science fiction 238–239, 1240, 1250
- Sensory details 96, 398, 753, 771, 977
  - See also Imagery.
- Sequence 23, 26, 262, 275, 875, 886
- Sestet 787
  - See also Sonnet.
- Setting 239, 602, 615, 749, 1220
- Short story 238–239, 740–741, 1240
  - mysteries 238–239
  - science fiction 238–239, 1240, 1250
- Simile 213, 691, 831, 1223, 1225
- Situational irony 577, 924, 935
  - See also Irony.
- Slant rhyme 438, 441, 447, 1261
- Social context 550, 567
- Sonnet 787, 789
  - Italian (Petrarchan) 787, 789
  - meter and rhyme patterns 787
- Sound devices 255, 261, 438, 441, 444, 447
  - alliteration 255, 438, 441, 453, 1225
  - assonance 438, 441, 447
  - meter 444, 802, 805
  - repetition 255, 261, 371, 811, 814
  - rhythm 705, 708, 715, 1203
- Speaker 715, 720, 722, 724, 814,
- Stage directions 1051, 1072, 1114
- Stanza 829, 831
- Stated theme 239, 689, 1096
- Stream of consciousness 740–741, 774, 783
- Structure 121, 126, 140, 143, 683, 686, 1156, 1160, 1177

- Style 401, 403, 689, 691, 705, 708, 743, 749, 1329
- Suspense 262, 275, 615
- Syllogism 121
- Symbol 279, 291, 1287, 1290, 1302
- Symbolism 887, 1290
- Symbolist poetry 660–661
- Theme 189, 193, 239, 349, 547, 689, 691, 811, 814, 1096, 1114
  - implied 193, 239, 689, 867, 871, 1096
  - predictions 811, 814
  - stated 193, 239, 689, 1096
- Thesis 204, 209
  - implied 204, 209
- Third-person omniscient point of view 388, 398, 772
- Third-person point of view
  - See Point of view.
- Title 811, 827
- Tone 133, 137, 196, 361, 380, 386, 700, 703, 871, 1215, 1220, 1340
- Totem 21
- Tragedy 1096, 1114
- Tragic flaw 1096, 1114
- Tragic hero 1096, 1114
- Trickster 21
- Typographical motif 1340
- Understatement 741, 1251
- Verbal irony 403, 577, 935
  - See also Irony.
- Verse paragraph 1209, 1212
- Visualizing 889, 898, 977, 979
- Voice 105, 109, 420, 428, 791, 798, 1227, 1261

Reading and Critical Thinking

- Activating prior knowledge 982, 992, 1162, 1165
- Analyzing 26, 32, 37, 52, 61, 68, 77, 86, 93, 100, 109, 111, 119, 125, 130, 137, 143, 148, 153, 193, 196, 202, 209, 219, 228, 251, 261, 274, 290, 304, 349, 358, 371, 380, 386, 398, 403, 406, 412, 415, 419, 427, 436, 441, 444, 447, 449, 452, 457, 503, 506, 513, 518, 527, 534, 547, 556, 572, 577, 598, 615, 623, 665, 673, 680, 686, 691, 703, 708, 713, 720, 722, 724, 732, 738, 749, 770, 783, 789, 798, 805, 809, 814, 821, 827, 831, 871, 885, 897, 907, 924, 935, 941, 957, 968, 974, 979, 991, 1014, 1022, 1050, 1072, 1095, 1113, 1154, 1160, 1165, 1177, 1185, 1201, 1206, 1212, 1220, 1225, 1230, 1235, 1238, 1250, 1256, 1261, 1271, 1280, 1285, 1290, 1295, 13102, 1307, 1313, 1328, 1335, 1340
  - biographical narrative 150–153
  - cause-and-effect relationships 198, 292, 352, 358, 602, 616, 1168, 1178
  - characterization 943, 958
  - concrete details 815, 822, 1182, 1185
  - contrasting images 277, 415, 436, 749, 979
  - figures of speech 115, 119
  - historical context 81, 86, 306, 345, 349, 1051, 1072
  - historical purpose of texts and photographs 909
  - language 791, 799
  - literary criticism 455
  - literary influences 112
  - logical arguments 121, 228, 1073
  - philosophical assumptions 735
  - political assumptions 1198
  - rhetorical devices 1203, 1207
  - sound devices 255, 261, 438, 441, 444, 447, 1305, 1307
  - style 401, 403, 689, 691, 705, 708, 1280
  - text structure 121, 126, 140, 143, 929, 936
  - theme 1096, 1114
  - tone 802, 805
  - voice 1227, 1231
- Analyzing graphic information 175, 177, 331, 333, 548, 649, 1139, 1141
- Applying background knowledge 552, 556, 914, 925
- Argument
  - evaluating 121, 126, 369, 371, 1073, 1095
- Author's beliefs, drawing conclusions about 90, 94, 1003, 1015
- Author's purpose, recognizing 145, 148, 189, 193, 677, 680, 700, 703, 743, 750, 1236
- Background knowledge, applying 552, 556, 914, 925
- Before You Read 22, 34, 44, 47, 56, 62, 69, 80, 89, 95, 104, 114, 120, 132, 139, 144, 188, 203, 212, 221, 240, 254, 262, 278, 294, 344, 351, 368, 374, 382, 387, 400, 408, 416, 420, 437, 448, 531, 538, 551, 568, 573, 578, 601, 662, 666, 676, 682, 688, 699, 704, 709, 714, 725, 742, 752, 773, 786, 790, 801, 810, 815, 824, 828, 866, 874, 888, 899, 913, 928, 937, 942, 959, 970, 976, 981, 1002, 1017, 1026, 1051, 1073, 1097, 1161, 1167, 1181, 1192, 1202, 1208, 1214, 1222, 1226, 1232, 1239, 1253, 1257, 1264, 1274, 1282, 1286, 1291, 1296, 1304, 1308, 1318, 1331, 1336
- Bias, recognizing 57, 61
- Big Idea
  - An Era of Protest 1143, 1144–1145, 1156, 1160, 1162, 1165, 1168, 1177, 1180, 1182, 1185, 1191, 1196, 1201, 1203, 1206, 1209, 1212
  - Extending and Remaking Traditions 1143, 1148–1149, 1265, 1271, 1275, 1280, 1283, 1285, 1287, 1290, 1292, 1295, 1297, 1302, 1305, 1307, 1309, 1313, 1319, 1328, 1332, 1335, 1337, 1340
  - The Harlem Renaissance 656–657, 787, 789, 798, 802, 805, 811, 814, 815, 825, 827, 829, 831
  - Kinship with Nature 179, 182, 189, 196, 204, 213, 219
  - Life in the City 860–861, 900, 907, 929, 935, 938, 941, 943, 957, 960, 968
  - Life in the New World 11, 14–15, 57, 61, 63, 67, 68, 70, 77, 81, 86, 90, 93, 96, 100
  - Modern Fiction 743, 749, 753, 770, 774, 783
  - Modernism 651, 654–655, 703
  - A Nation Divided 335, 338, 375, 380, 383, 386, 388, 397, 401, 403
  - Naturalism 487, 492, 569, 572, 574, 577, 579, 602, 615
  - Nature and Technology 1143, 1146–1147, 1215, 1220, 1223, 1225, 1227, 1230, 1233, 1235, 1240, 1250, 1254, 1256, 1258, 1261
  - New Poetics 652–653, 663, 665, 667, 673, 677, 680, 683, 686, 687, 689, 691, 698, 700, 703, 708, 710, 713, 715, 720, 722, 724
  - Optimism and Individualism 179, 180, 220, 221, 228, 236

  A Poetic Revolution 335, 340, 409, 420, 427, 438, 452, 457
  The Power of Darkness 179, 184, 241, 251, 255, 261, 262, 274, 279, 290, 295, 304
  Realism 487, 490, 536, 539, 547, 550, 552, 556, 567
  Regionalism 487, 488, 497, 503, 506, 513, 514, 534
  Resistance to Slavery 335, 336, 345, 349, 350, 352, 358, 361, 369, 371
  Return to Regionalism 858–859, 867, 871, 875, 889, 897, 916
  The Road to Independence 11, 16–17, 105, 115, 140, 145, 148
  Romanticism 173, 178–179, 186, 279, 290
  The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling 11, 12, 23, 26, 33, 34, 37, 46, 48, 52
  United States and the World 862–863, 971, 974, 977, 979, 980, 982, 991, 1001, 1003, 1014, 1018, 1022, 1027, 1050, 1072, 1096, 1113
Building background 23, 27, 34, 38, 44, 48, 57, 63, 70, 81, 90, 96, 105, 115, 121, 133, 140, 145, 150, 189, 204, 213, 221, 229, 231, 241, 255, 262, 279, 295, 306, 345, 352, 359, 360, 369, 375, 383, 388, 401, 404, 409, 416, 420, 430, 438, 455, 497, 515, 520, 532, 539, 552, 557, 566, 569, 574, 579, 602, 617, 663, 667, 677, 683, 689, 700, 705, 710, 715, 735, 743, 753, 774, 787, 791, 802, 811, 815, 825, 829, 867, 875, 889, 900, 909, 914, 929, 938, 943, 960, 971, 977, 993, 998, 1003, 1018, 1027, 1051, 1073, 1096, 1156, 1162, 1168, 1182, 1193, 1203, 1209, 1215, 1223, 1227, 1233, 1240, 1254, 1258, 1265, 1275, 1283, 1287, 1283, 1287, 1292, 1297, 1305, 1309, 1319, 1332, 1337
Cause-and-effect relationships, analyzing 198, 292, 352, 358, 602, 616, 1168, 1178
Characterization
  analyzing 943, 958
  evaluating 725, 733
Characters
  comparing and contrasting 900, 908 drawing conclusions about 515, 518, 774, 784, 1027, 1050 making inferences about 574, 577, 1265, 1272
  responding to 1018, 1023
Clarifying meaning 448, 449, 508, 569, 572, 1193, 1197
Comparing and contrasting
  across time and place 33, 46, 220, 236, 350, 361, 550, 567, 687, 698, 980, 1001, 1180, 1191
  Big Idea treatments 33, 46, 220, 236, 350, 361, 550, 567, 687, 698, 980, 1001, 1180, 1191
  characters 900, 908 cultures 33, 46, 220, 236, 980, 1001, 1180, 1191
  historical context 350, 362
  mythic elements 33, 46
  narratives about relationships 550, 567 persuasive messages 220, 236
  portrayals of people 350, 361
  reflections 980, 1001
  social context 550, 567
  speakers 715, 720, 724
  themes 1180, 1191
  tone 802, 805
Comprehension, monitoring 63, 68, 295, 305
Concrete details, analyzing 815, 1182, 1183, 1185
Connecting 110, 111, 213, 219 to the author 26, 52, 77, 93, 109, 119, 137, 193, 196, 261, 349, 358, 380, 406, 412, 441, 444, 449, 452, 572, 665, 680, 691, 703, 713, 722, 724, 738, 770, 783, 798, 814, 831, 897, 957, 1050, 1220, 1225, 1285, 1290, 1307, 1313, 1335, 1340 to the autobiography 70, 352, 358, 815 to the Big Idea 52, 61, 68, 77, 86, 93, 100, 109, 111, 119, 125, 137, 143, 148, 193, 196, 261, 274, 290, 304, 345, 349, 358, 371, 380, 386, 397, 403, 427, 452, 457, 534, 547, 556, 572, 577, 665, 673, 680, 686, 691, 703, 708, 713, 722, 749, 770, 783, 789, 798, 814, 827, 831, 871, 897, 907, 935, 941, 957, 968, 974, 979, 991, 1014, 1022, 1050, 1072, 1095, 1113, 1160, 1165, 1177, 1185, 1196, 1201, 1206, 1212, 1220, 1225, 1230, 1235, 1250, 1256, 1261, 1271, 1280, 1285, 1290, 1295, 1302, 1307, 1313, 1328, 1335, 1340 to contemporary issues 829, 831, 1254, 1256 to cultural context 667, 674, 1332, 1335 to the essay 133, 189, 204, 213, 221, 1209, 1297, 1309 to the history 63, 809 to the interview 1168
  to the journal 375
  to the letters 145, 148, 153 to the memoir 982
  to the myth 23, 26, 34
  to the narrative 57, 81, 309, 367 to personal experience 825, 827, 867, 872, 1292, 1295 to the play 1027
  to poetry 90, 140, 255, 409, 420, 427, 438, 515, 569, 574, 663, 667, 677, 683, 689, 700, 705, 715, 787, 802, 811, 825, 829, 938, 977, 1193, 1215, 1223, 1227, 1258, 1283, 1287, 1292, 1332, 1337 to political context 404 to reading selections 23, 34, 48, 57, 63, 70, 81, 90, 96, 105, 115, 121, 133, 140, 145, 189, 204, 213, 221, 241, 255, 262, 279, 295, 345, 352, 369, 375, 383, 388, 401, 409, 420, 438, 497, 515, 520, 532, 539, 552, 569, 574, 579, 602, 663, 667, 677, 683, 689, 700, 705, 710, 715, 743, 753, 774, 787, 791, 802, 811, 815, 825, 829, 867, 875, 889, 900, 914, 929, 938, 943, 960, 971, 977, 1003, 1018, 1027, 1051, 1073, 1096, 1156, 1162, 1168, 1182, 1193, 1203, 1209, 1215, 1223, 1227, 1233, 1240, 1254, 1258, 1265, 1275, 1283, 1287, 1283, 1287, 1292, 1297, 1305, 1309, 1319, 1332, 1337 to the sermon 96
  to the song 1203
  to the speaker 436
  to the speech 369, 401, 406, 971 to the spirituals 345
  to the story 241, 262, 279, 295, 388, 539, 552, 579, 602, 623, 743, 753, 774, 791, 867, 875, 889, 900, 916, 943, 960, 1003, 1018, 1182, 1240,

    - 1254, 1265, 1275, 1305, 1319
  - to today 37, 68, 86, 100, 111, 125, 143, 148, 186, 202, 239, 251, 274, 290, 304, 342, 371, 386, 397, 403, 415, 419, 427, 534, 556, 577, 625, 673, 686, 708, 720, 789, 805, 827, 871, 935, 941, 974, 979, 991, 1022, 1113, 1154, 1160, 1177, 1185, 1196, 1201, 1230, 1235, 1250, 1256, 1280, 1302
- Connotation
  - examining 96, 101, 113, 1209, 1212, 1283, 1285
- Cultural context
  - connecting to 667, 674, 1332, 1335
- Denotation
  - examining 1209, 1212
- Determining
  - main idea and supporting
    - details 128, 383, 386, 1160, 1309, 1314
- Distinguishing fact and opinion 221, 228, 375, 380, 971, 974, 1166, 1297, 1303
- Drawing conclusions 194, 197, 420, 428
  - about author's beliefs 90, 94, 1003, 1015
  - about characters 515, 518, 1027, 1050
  - about culture 48, 52
  - about the protagonist 774, 784
- Evaluating 26, 32, 37, 52, 61, 68, 77, 86, 93, 100, 109, 111, 119, 125, 130, 137, 143, 148, 153, 193, 196, 202, 209, 219, 228, 251, 261, 274, 290, 304, 349, 358, 371, 380, 386, 398, 403, 406, 412, 415, 419, 427, 436, 441, 444, 447, 449, 452, 457, 503, 506, 513, 518, 527, 534, 547, 556, 572, 577, 598, 615, 623, 665, 673, 680, 686, 691, 703, 708, 713, 720, 722, 724, 732, 738, 749, 770, 783, 789, 798, 805, 809, 814, 821, 827, 831, 871, 885, 897, 907, 924, 935, 941, 957, 968, 974, 979, 991, 1014, 1022, 1050, 1072, 1095, 1113, 1154, 1160, 1165, 1177, 1185, 1201, 1206, 1212, 1220, 1225, 1230, 1235, 1238, 1250, 1256, 1261, 1271, 1280, 1285, 1290, 1295, 13102, 1307, 1313, 1328, 1335, 1340
  - argument 121, 126, 369, 371, 1073, 1095
  - characterization 725, 733
  - description 897
  - diction 938, 941
  - evidence 221, 228
  - figures of speech 1233, 1235
  - sensory details 753, 771, 1215, 1221
  - style 532, 534
- Evidence
  - evaluating 221, 228
- Examining
  - connotation 96, 101, 113, 1209, 1212, 1283, 1285
  - denotation 1209, 1212
- Fact and opinion, distinguishing 375, 380, 971, 974, 1297, 1303
- Figures of speech
  - analyzing 115, 119
  - evaluating 1233, 1235
- Generalizations, making 960, 968, 1337, 1341
- Genres
  - identifying (short story) 1240
- Graphic organizer 78, 115, 453, 806, 1003, 1207, 1261, 1341
  - bar graph 333
  - character web 1265
  - chart 57, 63, 90, 96, 105, 115, 137, 196, 198, 252, 255, 304, 306, 352, 364, 369, 383, 388, 398, 401, 455, 508, 515, 532, 539, 574, 579, 602, 615, 617, 683, 689, 710, 743, 753, 774, 787, 802, 815, 822, 825, 871, 886, 907, 909, 914, 925, 938, 943, 957, 960, 971, 1003, 1015, 1018, 1051, 1073, 1114, 1156, 1162, 1168, 1177, 1182, 1193, 1203, 1209, 1215, 1223, 1227, 1230, 1233, 1240, 1258, 1275, 1280, 1283, 1297, 1302, 1313, 1329
  - compare-contrast chart 304, 802
  - concept web 1096
  - concrete details 1182
  - concrete details chart 1182
  - context clues chart 1281
  - diagram 48, 109, 292, 548, 615, 749, 1022, 1207, 1221
  - double-entry journal 145, 700
  - evaluating diction chart 938
  - figurative language chart 1233
  - idea web 799
  - map 333, 1309
  - note taking 23, 34, 57, 63, 81, 96, 115, 255, 262, 306, 342, 352, 369, 383, 388, 409, 460, 494, 539, 574, 663, 677, 683, 689, 710, 753, 774, 787, 825, 938, 960, 971, 982, 1027, 1073, 1121, 1150, 1168, 1203, 1223, 1240, 1275, 1283, 1297, 1309
  - paraphrase chart 137, 1156
  - preview chart 914
  - relationship chart 1051
  - response-evidence chart 459, 1018
  - scale 1251
  - semantic features chart 372
  - sensory details chart 1215
  - sentence completion 811
  - sequence chain 313
  - sequence chart 875, 1152
  - storyboard 470
  - table 398, 401
  - track ideas 743
  - Venn diagram 715, 900, 1231, 1271, 1292
  - web diagram 291, 428, 453, 547, 783, 977, 1027, 1206, 1220, 1340
  - word map 101, 275, 1015, 1231
  - word web 94, 101, 150, 683, 784, 1305
- Historical context, analyzing 81, 86, 306, 345, 349, 1051, 1072
- Identifying
  - genre 1240
  - sequence 23, 26, 262, 275, 520, 528, 875, 886
- Imagery
  - interpreting 683, 686, 787, 789, 1223, 1225
- Independent reading 164–165, 320–321, 472–473, 636–637, 842–843, 1128–1129, 1358–1359
- Inferring
  - See Making inferences.
- Interpreting 26, 32, 37, 52, 61, 68, 77, 86, 93, 100, 109, 111, 119, 125, 130, 137, 143, 148, 153, 193, 196, 202, 209, 219, 228, 251, 261, 274, 290, 304, 349, 358, 371, 380, 386, 398, 403, 406, 412, 415, 419, 427, 436, 441, 444, 447, 449, 452, 457, 503, 506, 513, 518, 527, 534, 547, 556, 572, 577, 598, 615, 623, 665, 673, 680, 686, 691, 703, 708, 713, 720, 722, 724, 732, 738, 749, 770, 783, 789, 798, 805, 809, 814, 821, 827, 831, 871, 885, 897, 907, 924, 935, 941, 957, 968, 974, 979, 991, 1014, 1022, 1050, 1072, 1095, 1113, 1154, 1160, 1165, 1177, 1185, 1201, 1206, 1212, 1220, 1225,

1230, 1235, 1238, 1250, 1256, 1261, 1271, 1280, 1285, 1290, 1295, 13102, 1307, 1313, 1328, 1335, 1340
  imagery 683, 686, 787, 789, 1223, 1225
Language, analyzing 791, 799
Logical sequence 262, 276
Main ideas
  determining 128, 383, 386, 1309, 1314
Making generalizations 960, 968, 1337, 1341
  about characters 960, 968
Making inferences 279, 291
  about characters 574, 577, 1265, 1272
  about theme 710, 713, 1258, 1262
Making and verifying predictions 241, 252, 388, 398, 539, 548
Making predictions about theme 811, 814
Meaning
  clarifying 448, 449, 508, 569, 572, 1193, 1197
Monitoring comprehension 63, 68, 295, 305
Mood, analyzing 345, 349, 449, 724, 814, 1050, 1113, 1206, 1220
Myths 26, 33, 37, 46
Organizational patterns 145, 316
Paraphrasing 409, 412, 415, 1156, 1160
Philosophical assumptions, analyzing 735
Plot
  making inferences 252
  responding to 1018, 1023
Political assumptions
  analyzing 1198
Predictions 241, 252
  making and verifying 241, 252, 388, 398, 539, 548
Previewing 11, 48, 57, 63, 81, 90, 105, 115, 121, 128, 189, 198, 204, 213, 241, 255, 279, 295, 335, 336, 338, 340, 345, 352, 364, 375, 383, 388, 401, 409, 420, 438, 515, 539, 552, 569, 574, 579, 602, 663, 667, 677, 683, 689, 700, 705, 710, 715, 743, 753, 774, 787, 791, 802, 806, 811, 815, 825, 829, 857, 867, 875, 889, 900, 938, 943, 960, 971, 977, 982, 1003, 1018, 1027, 1152, 1156, 1162, 1168, 1182, 1193, 1203, 1209, 1215, 1223, 1227, 1233, 1240, 1254, 1258, 1265, 1275, 1287, 1292, 1297, 1305, 1309, 1319, 1332, 1337
Prior knowledge, activating 982, 992, 1162, 1165
Protagonist
  drawing conclusions 774, 784
Questioning 34, 37, 364, 663, 665, 1275, 1281,
Reading Check 7, 9, 13, 15, 17, 175, 177, 181, 183, 185, 331, 333, 337, 339, 341, 483, 485, 489, 491, 493, 647, 649, 653, 655, 657, 853, 855, 859, 861, 863, 1139, 1141, 1145, 1147, 1149
Reading graphical information 8-9, 176-177, 332-333, 484-485, 648-649, 854-855, 1140-1141
Recalling 371, 720
Recognizing
  author's purpose 27, 48, 51, 52, 115, 126, 145, 148, 189, 193, 279, 337, 367, 401, 430, 455, 579, 677, 680, 700, 703, 710, 743, 750, 971, 974, 1015, 1236
  bias 57, 61
Responding 26, 32, 37, 52, 61, 68, 77, 86, 93, 100, 109, 111, 119, 125, 130, 137, 143, 148, 153, 193, 196, 202, 209, 219, 228, 251, 261, 274, 290, 304, 349, 358, 371, 380, 386, 398, 403, 406, 412, 415, 419, 427, 436, 441, 444, 447, 449, 452, 457, 503, 506, 513, 518, 527, 534, 547, 556, 572, 577, 598, 615, 623, 665, 673, 680, 686, 691, 703, 708, 713, 720, 722, 724, 732, 738, 749, 770, 783, 789, 798, 805, 809, 814, 821, 827, 831, 871, 885, 897, 907, 924, 935, 941, 957, 968, 974, 979, 991, 1014, 1022, 1050, 1072, 1095, 1113, 1154, 1160, 1165, 1177, 1185, 1201, 1206, 1212, 1220, 1225, 1230, 1235, 1238, 1250, 1256, 1261, 1271, 1280, 1285, 1290, 1295, 13102, 1307, 1313, 1328, 1335, 1340 to plot and characters 1018, 1023
Reviewing 547
Rhetorical devices
  analyzing 1203, 1207
Scanning 806
Sensory details
  evaluating 753, 771, 1215, 1221
Sequence
  identifying 23, 26, 520, 528, 875, 886
Setting
  analyzing relevance of 617
Setting Purposes for Reading 23, 27, 48, 57, 63, 70, 81, 90, 96, 105, 115, 121, 133, 140, 145, 189, 198, 204, 221, 241, 255, 279, 306, 345, 352, 364, 369, 375, 388, 401, 404, 409, 420, 430, 438, 455, 515, 539, 552, 569, 574, 579, 602, 617, 663, 667, 683, 689, 700, 710, 743, 753, 787, 802, 806, 811, 815, 825, 829, 867, 875, 889, 900, 909, 916, 929, 938, 943, 960, 971, 982, 1003, 1018, 1027, 1051, 1073, 1152, 1156, 1162, 1168, 1182, 1193, 1198, 1203, 1209, 1215, 1223, 1233, 1236, 1240, 1258, 1265, 1275, 1283, 1287, 1292, 1297, 1305, 1309, 1319, 1332, 1337
Skimming 364
Sound devices
  analyzing 255, 261, 438, 441, 444, 447, 453, 1305, 1307
Style
  analyzing 401, 403, 689, 691, 705, 708
  evaluating 532, 534
Summarizing 133, 138, 204, 209, 579, 599, 1287, 1290
Supporting details, determining 128, 383, 386, 1309, 1314
Text structure
  analyzing 929, 936, 1152
Theme
  analyzing 1097, 1114
  making inferences 291, 710, 713, 1258, 1262
  making predictions 811, 814
  summarizing 599
Tone
  analyzing 802, 805
Verifying predictions 241, 252, 388, 398, 539, 548
Visualizing 889, 898, 977, 979, 1319, 1329
Voice
  analyzing 105, 109, 1227, 1231

Vocabulary

Academic vocabulary 37, 53-54, 78, 94, 101, 111, 126, 138, 143, 197, 252, 275, 291, 305, 349, 398, 419, 428, 453, 507, 528, 534, 548, 599, 616, 674, 722, 724, 733, 750, 771, 784, 791, 822, 886, 898, 908, 925, 936, 958, 992, 1015, 1023, 1114, 1178, 1197, 1207, 1221, 1231,

1251, 1272, 1281, 1303, 1307, 1329, 1341
Affixes 873
Analogies 145, 148, 241, 252, 305, 403, 528, 689, 691, 708, 791, 799, 811, 814, 889, 898, 968, 1072, 1162, 1165, 1193, 1197, 1233, 1235, 1251, 1258, 1262
Antonyms 111, 119, 228, 305, 549, 674, 722, 750, 787, 789, 829, 831, 1207, 1319, 1329, 1340
Base words 131, 873, 1315
Connotation 138, 352, 358, 372, 548, 572, 577, 710, 713, 875, 886, 971, 974, 982, 992, 1283, 1285, 1332, 1335
Context clues 68, 126, 197, 219, 277, 375, 380, 419, 577, 599, 665, 686, 774, 784, 825, 827, 900, 908, 938, 941, 977, 979, 1018, 1023, 1095, 1168, 1178, 1215, 1221, 1275, 1281, 1287, 1290, 1337, 1341 contrast 277
  definition 277
  example 277
  synonym 277
Denotation 138, 352, 358, 372, 548, 572, 577, 710, 713, 875, 886, 971, 974, 982, 992, 1283, 1285, 1332, 1335
Dictionary use 102
Discipline-specific words 53–54
Etymology 78, 101, 131, 275, 503, 616, 700, 703, 802, 805, 943, 958, 1003, 1015, 1182, 1185, 1227, 1231
Graphic organizer 111, 722, 1207, 1341
  chart 503, 1281
  diagram 109, 1314
  word map 78, 101, 616, 1015, 1231
Greek roots (word parts) 873
Homonyms 800
Latin roots (word parts) 873
Loaded words 1166
Math and science terms 53, 975
Multiple-meaning words 53–54
Noun suffixes 1315
Political science terms 131
Prefixes 109, 131, 383, 873, 929, 936, 1297, 1309, 1314
Roots (word parts) 109, 131, 383, 386, 873, 929, 936, 1297, 1309, 1314
  Greek 873
  Latin 873
Suffixes 109, 131, 383, 873, 929, 936, 1297, 1309, 1314
Synonyms 23, 26, 52, 61, 94, 111, 261, 277, 291, 398, 549, 677, 680, 715, 720, 722, 753, 771, 822, 1207, 1209, 1212, 1223, 1225, 1265, 1272, 1341
Thesaurus use 549
Visual vocabulary 32, 243, 499, 500, 613, 776, 781, 880, 954, 964, 1019, 1158, 1299, 1321
Vocabulary reference materials thesaurus 549
Word origins 78, 101, 131, 275, 503, 616, 700, 703, 802, 805, 943, 958, 975, 1003, 1015, 1182, 1185, 1227, 1231
Word parts 109, 383, 386, 873, 929, 936, 1254, 1256, 1297, 1303, 1309, 1314
Word usage 86, 193, 209, 369, 371, 453, 515, 518, 556, 733, 867, 872, 914, 925, 1114, 1156, 1158, 1292, 1295

Writing

Advice column 1129
Allusion, applying 799
Analysis
  personal 464
Analyzing
  couplets 143
  cultural context 46, 1191
  elements of a poem 835
  figurative language 94
  genre elements 835
  historical context 236
  imagery 616
  language 750, 936
  literary trends 698
  mood 675
  nuance 454
  poem 833
  point of view 399
  professional writing model 155–156, 311–312, 625–627, 833–834, 1119–1120, 1343–1345
  reflections 1001
  relationships 567
  setting 616
  storytelling 46
  style 316, 454
  tone 138, 361
  workshop writing model 158–159, 314–315, 461–465, 836–837, 1122–1123, 1346–1347 Appeals emotional 155 logical 155
Applying
  allusion 799
  dialogue 161, 898
  characterization 734
  diction 101, 750
  flashback 1273
  form 1330
  imagery 616
  irony 936
  mood 675
  parallelism 1314
  point of view 548, 772
  style 898
  symbolism 1303
  tone 138
Argument 157, 823
    See also Persuasive Writing.
  organizing 157
Audience 155, 157, 158, 310, 311, 315, 459, 625, 833, 1118, 1343, 1347
Author's craft
  evaluating 105, 193, 305, 386, 444
  responding to 111, 130, 143, 193, 211, 276, 309, 444, 547, 600
Author's purpose, exploring 115, 126, 306, 409, 429, 599, 833, 835, 836, 837
Author's style 631
Avoiding stilted language 1124
Brainstorming 675, 750, 1303, 1314
Business writing
  letter 827
Call to action 156
Characterization 1118, 1119, 1123
Characterization, applying 734
Character sketch 708, 968
Checklists 154, 160, 310, 316, 458, 466, 624, 632, 832, 838, 1118, 1124, 1342, 1348 Chronological order 1121
  clarifying with 627
Citing sources 460, 463, 465
Claim 1347
Clarifying with chronological order 627
Coherence, paragraph 464, 466
Command of language 625, 630, 834, 837
Conclusion 156, 464, 627, 834, 837, 1347
Consistent focus 630
Counterarguments 159
Creation myth 26

Creative nonfiction 1118-1125
Creative writing
  advice column 1129
  character sketch 708, 968 brochure 789
  creation myth 26
  dialogue 37, 358, 722
  drections 1335
  journal 193, 313, 388, 419, 441, 534, 637, 703, 831, 971, 979, 1185, 1256, 1295
  letter 52, 68, 148, 209, 572
  list 86, 680, 724, 1209, 1290
  memo 380, 691
  nonfiction 1118–1119
  poetry 143, 412, 444, 577, 713, 805, 833, 835, 1225, 1285
  press release 974
  short story 61, 675, 772, 1330
  speech 371, 1165
  stage directions 1072
Critical evidence, identifying 160
Critical review 926
Descriptive details 311
Descriptive essay 616
Details 1121
  concrete 1121, 1273
  descriptive 311
  sensory 1273
Dialogue 37, 358, 722, 1050, 1235
  applying 161, 898
Diction, applying 101, 750
Direct quotations 127, 467, 833, 836
Directions 1335
Drafting 79, 127, 158, 253, 276, 292, 314, 399, 429, 461, 529, 600, 629, 675, 734, 772, 823, 836, 887, 926, 1016, 1115, 1122, 1252, 1273, 1330, 1346
Drawing conclusions 464
Editing 79, 127, 161, 253, 276, 292, 317, 399, 429, 467, 529, 600, 633, 675, 734, 772, 823, 839, 887, 926, 1016, 1115, 1125, 1252, 1273, 1330, 1349
Editorial 1342-1349
Elaboration
  reasons 316
  description 316
  dialogue 316
Embedded quotations 839
Emotional appeal 159, 162, 572, 598, 1347
Essay 18, 46, 127, 154-161, 186, 236, 276, 292, 310-317, 361, 399, 415, 429, 447, 454, 458, 467, 529, 567, 600, 616, 624-633, 675, 698, 734, 772, 823, 832-839, 887, 926, 941, 1001, 1016, 1115, 1118-1125, 1191, 1252, 1273, 1303, 1307, 1314, 1330, 1342-1349
  autobiographical narrative 1273
  biographical narrative 734
  descriptive 616
  expository 292, 399, 454, 458-467, 624-633, 832-839, 887, 1016, 1252 persuasive 127, 600, 823, 926, 1115 reflective 310-317, 429, 529
  short story 61, 675, 772, 1330
Evaluating
  author's craft 305
  sources 459, 465
Evaluating
  example 160
  expert opinion 160
  statistic 160
    See also Supporting evidence.
Explanation of ambiguities 626
Exploring author's purpose 429
Expository essay 292, 399, 454, 458-467, 624-633, 832-839, 887, 1016, 1252
Expository writing 292, 399, 454, 458-467, 624-633, 832-839, 887, 1016, 1252
First-person point of view 311, 314
Flashback, applying 1273
Focus 837
Foreshadowing 1122
Form, applying 1330
Genre elements, analyzing 835
Graphic organizer 1341
  character web 1265
  chart 90, 115, 137, 197, 198, 276, 304, 305, 313, 364, 454, 515, 539, 599, 617, 675, 743, 750, 787, 802, 815, 822, 823, 829, 835, 871, 872, 886, 898, 907, 916, 941, 943, 957, 958, 971, 1003, 1015, 1018, 1051, 1073, 1114, 1152, 1162, 1168, 1177, 1182, 1193, 1196, 1197, 1207, 1209, 1215, 1223, 1227, 1230, 1233, 1240, 1252, 1258, 1261, 1275, 1281, 1283, 1297, 1302, 1303, 1313
  checklist 643, 838, 1348, 1365
  chronological list 1287
  concept web 1097
  diagram 48, 109, 292, 548, 615, 749, 1022, 1207, 1221
  double-entry journal 145, 700
  note taking 186, 306, 342, 352, 388, 409, 574, 663, 677, 689, 710, 743, 753, 774, 806, 825, 938, 960, 971, 982, 1027, 1073, 1121, 1150, 1168, 1203, 1223, 1240, 1275, 1283, 1297, 1309 prewriting 127, 276, 292, 313, 399, 429, 454, 459, 734, 823, 926, 1016 1252, 1235, 1330
  pro/con chart 1345
  sequence chain 313
  scale 1251
  storyboard 313
  Venn diagram 715, 900, 1231, 1271, 1292
  web diagram 291, 428, 453, 547, 783, 798, 977, 1027, 1206, 1220, 1340
  word map 101, 275, 1015, 1231
Historical investigation 1023
Imagery 616, 1120
  applying 616
  analyzing 616
  comparison 110
Information
  analyzing 460
  searching for 616
In-text citations 127, 467
In-text quotations
    See Quotations.
Introduction 155, 833, 1347
Irony, applying 936
Journal 193, 313, 388, 419, 441, 534, 637, 703, 831, 971, 979, 1185, 1256, 1295
  double-entry 145, 700
Language
  examining 750, 1303, 1314
  stilted 1124
Letter 52, 68, 148, 209, 572, 1359
List 86, 680, 724, 1209, 1290
Literary analysis 834
  poem 832-839
  short story 624-633
Literary criticism 305
Literary devices 1120
Literary elements 626
Literary research paper, historical investigation 458–467
Logical fallacy 992
Logical organization 627
Main ideas 461
Major points 625

Margins 467
Memo 380
Metaphor 157
Monologue 784
  dramatic 575, 674
  interior 403, 1273
Mood
  applying 675
Narrative details 311, 315
Narrative purpose 314
Nonfiction summary 79, 386
Note cards 460
Note taking 186, 255, 342, 352, 460, 539, 574, 710, 753, 1121
Nuance 454
Opposing arguments 159
Organization 627, 632, 837, 1345
Organizational plan 835, 1346
Outlining 157, 460
Paragraphs 449
  coherence 464, 466
  organization 887
Parallelism 161
  applying 1314
Paraphrasing 460, 462
Peer review 161, 316, 317, 466, 467, 632, 633, 838, 839, 1124, 1125, 1348, 1349
Personal analysis 464
Personal opinions 1346
Persuasion
  responding to 600, 926
Persuasive writing 127, 154–161, 197, 600, 823, 926, 1115, 1342–1349
Persuasive speech 154–161
Persuasive techniques 156, 159, 1344, 1345, 1347
  hyperbole 1345
  irony 1345
  repetition 1345
  rhetorical question 1345
  word choice 1345
Plagiarism 157, 313, 460, 628, 835, 1121
Plot 1120, 1123
  planning 1121
Plot summary 253, 261, 406, 1095
Poetry 143, 412, 444, 577, 713, 805, 1225, 1285
  free verse 1285
  punctuating quotations 839
Point of view 239, 290, 399, 548, 772, 833, 1347
  adding evidence to support 160
  applying 548, 772
  analyzing 399, 836
  first person 275, 314, 772, 1251
  of narrator 275
  responding to 399
Presenting 161, 317, 467, 633, 839, 1125, 1349
Press release 974
Prewriting 79, 127, 157, 253, 276, 292, 313, 399, 429, 459, 529, 600, 628, 675, 734, 772, 823, 835, 887, 926, 1016, 1115, 1121, 1252, 1273, 1330, 1345
Primary source quotations 125, 127, 924, 1250
Primary sources 465, 626
Professional writing model, analyzing 155–156, 311–312, 625–627, 833–834, 1119–1120, 1343–1345
Proofreading 79, 127, 161, 253, 276, 292, 317, 399, 429, 467, 529, 600, 633, 675, 734, 772, 823, 839, 887, 926, 1016, 1115, 1125, 1252, 1273, 1330, 1349
Publishing 625
Purpose 155, 157, 158, 310, 459, 625, 833, 834, 836, 837, 1118, 1343
Quickwrite 230, 359, 564, 566, 695, 697, 1186, 1190
Quotations 458, 467, 1001
  brackets in 1252
  direct 127, 462, 629, 833, 836
  embedded 839
  indirect 467
  primary source 127
Quoting sources 460, 462, 464, 629, 833, 836
  punctuating 460, 839
Reflective essay (writing) 310-317, 429
Repetition 872
Report 872, 1023, 1178
Research report 458–467
Research questions 459
Response essay 1307
Review 926
Revising 79, 127, 160, 253, 276, 292, 316, 399, 429, 466, 529, 600, 632, 675, 734, 772, 823, 838, 887, 926, 1016, 1115, 1124, 1252, 1273, 1330, 1348
Rhetorical devices 157, 312, 314
  analogy 1345
  call to action 1345
  parallelism 1345
  repetition 1345
Schedule 1121
Secondary sources 463
Sensory details 1123
Sentence combining 87–88
Sentence fluency 160, 316, 466, 632
Sentence formation 926, 1329
Sentence fragments 1273
Sentence frames 276, 292, 399, 429, 454, 600, 823, 1016 Sentences
  combining 927
  difficult 295
  direct 750
  inverted 140
  run-on 675
  short 926
  supporting 1303
Sentence structure 101, 159, 751
  varying 750, 751, 834
Sequence of events 1123
Setting
  analyzing 616
Shades of meaning 632
Short story 675, 772, 1330
Significance 312, 315, 1123
Sound devices
  analyzing 261
Sources
  encyclopedia 465
  evaluating 459, 465
  Internet 465, 1023
  paraphrasing 460, 569
  primary 460, 465, 626, 1014
  punctuating quotations 460, 839
  quoting 460, 839
  secondary 460, 465
  summarizing 460
  variety of 465
Spacing 467
Speech 371, 1165
Stage directions 1072
Statistics 155, 157
Stilted language, avoiding 1124
Structure 101, 750, 799, 936, 1303, 1314
Style
  applying 101, 161, 548, 616, 750, 898
Summarizing 228, 386
  information 228, 460
  main ideas 32, 367, 406, 436, 457, 513, 623, 738, 809, 912, 1154, 1201
  plot 253
  sequence of events 79
Support 630, 833, 836, 1344, 1347

- Supporting evidence 157, 158, 159, 459, 626, 1347
  - adding 158, 160
  - details 154, 157, 158, 159, 160, 312, 315, 625, 626, 1273
  - example 160
  - expert opinion 160
  - statistics 160, 176, 872
- Symbolism
  - applying 1303
- Techniques, exploring 835
- Theme
  - applying 811
- Thesis 155, 157, 158, 460, 461, 464, 625, 627, 628, 629, 834, 835, 836, 1344
- Title 161
  - punctuating 161
- Tone 156, 158, 1345, 1347, 1348
  - applying 138
  - using appropriate 158
- Topic
  - exploring 835
  - finding 313, 628, 835, 1121, 1345
  - investigating 459
  - narrowing 459
- Traits of Strong Writing 160, 316, 466, 632, 838, 1124, 1348
- Transitions 462, 463
- Using quotations correctly 467
- Verb tense 1125
  - See also Grammar, Verb tense.
- Viewpoints
  - See Point of view.
- Voice 1344, 1348
- Weblogs 1343
- Word choice 838, 1344, 1347
- Word-processing 161, 317, 467, 633, 839, 1125, 1349
- Works-cited list 460, 467
- Workshop model, analyzing 158–159, 314–315, 461–465, 629–632, 836–837, 1122–1123, 1346–1347
- Writing about literature 46, 79, 127, 197, 236, 253, 276, 292, 305, 361, 399, 429, 529, 567, 567, 600, 624, 784, 823, 887, 926, 1001, 1016, 1191, 1252
- Writing frames 158, 314, 629, 836, 1122, 1346
- Writing process 154, 310, 458, 616, 832, 1118, 1342

Grammar

- Absolute phrase 529
- Active voice 1330
- Adjective 79
  - comparative degree 292, 1115
  - possessive 276
  - prepositional phrase as 293
  - superlative degree 292, 1115
- Adjective clause 88, 149
- Adverb 88
  - comparative degree 292
  - conjunctive 600
- Adverb clause 149
  - See also Clause.
- Agreement
  - pronoun-antecedent 1349
  - subject-verb 633
- Apostrophes 276
- Appositive 87, 530
  - nonrestrictive 530
  - restrictive 530
- Appositive phrase 87
- Brackets
  - in quotations 467, 1252
- Clause 600, 1179
  - adjective 88, 149
  - adverb 149
  - introductory 927
  - main 149, 600, 1273
  - as modifiers 149
  - subordinate 149, 675, 1273
- Comma 149, 1179
  - with coordinating conjunctions 751
  - with introductory clause 927
  - with nonessential elements 149
- Comma splice 317
- Comparative degree 292, 1115
- Compound words 681
  - forming with hyphens 429
- Conjunction 399
  - coordinating 88, 399, 600, 675, 751, 1179
  - subordinating 88, 399
- Conjunctive adverb 600
- Coordinating conjunction 88, 399, 600, 675, 751
  - using commas with 751
- Dangling modifiers 293
- Dash 381
- Degrees of comparison 292
- Ellipses 467, 823
- Em dash 454
- Future tense 253
  - See also Verb tense.
- Hyphen 429
- Introductory clause 927
- Introductory phrase 927
- Italics
  - for titles 1016
- Misplaced modifiers 293, 734
- Modifiers
  - clauses as 149
  - comparative 292
  - dangling 293
  - misplaced 293, 734
  - multiple words 429
  - superlative 292
- Multiple words
  - modifiers 429
- Nonessential elements 149
- Noun 79
  - compound 429
- Paragraphing 887
- Parallelism (parallel structure) 161, 401, 403, 1313
  - See also Literary Concepts, Parallelism.
- Parentheses 127
  - with in-text citations 127
- Participial phrase 88, 293
- Participle 88, 293
- Parts of speech 79
  - adjective 79
  - adverb 88
  - nouns 79
- Passive voice 1330
  - See also Voice.
- Past tense 253
  - See also Verb tense.
- Phrase
  - infinitive 927
  - introductory 927
  - participial 88, 293
  - prepositional 87, 293, 927
- Point of view, avoiding unintended shift 772
- Possessive 276
- Present tense 253
  - See also Verb tense.
- Pronoun
  - relative 149
- Pronoun-antecedent agreement 1349
- Punctuation
  - of poetry quotations 839
  - of subordinate clauses 149
  - to correct run-on sentences 1179

Run-on sentences 675, 1179
Semicolon 600, 1179
Sentence
  run-on 675, 1179
Sentence fragments 1273
Sentence structure 149, 751
Subject-verb agreement 633
Superlative degree 292, 1115
Tense, verb
    See Verb tense.
Transitional expressions 381
Underlining 1016
Verb
  agreement, subject-verb 624
Verb tense 253, 1125
  future 253
  past 253
  present 253
Voice (of verb) 1330
  active voice 1330
  passive voice 1330
Word comparison 292

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing

Active listening 163
Appeals
  emotional 162, 197, 305
  ethical 162, 197
  logical 162, 1281
Audience, for oral presentation 468
Building background 23, 27, 34, 48, 57, 63, 70, 81, 90, 96, 105, 115, 121, 133, 140, 145, 150, 189, 204, 213, 221, 229, 231, 241, 255, 262, 279, 295, 306, 345, 352, 359, 360, 369, 375, 388, 404, 409, 416, 430, 438, 454, 515, 539, 552, 557, 566, 569, 574, 579, 602, 617, 663, 667, 677, 683, 689, 692, 694, 696, 700, 705, 710, 715, 743, 753, 774, 787, 791, 802, 811, 815, 825, 829, 867, 875, 889, 900, 909, 914, 929, 938, 943, 960, 971, 975, 982, 993, 998, 1003, 1018, 1027, 1051, 1073, 1096, 1156, 1168, 1182, 1186, 1187, 1190, 1193, 1198, 1203, 1209, 1215, 1223, 1227, 1233, 1236, 1240, 1254, 1258, 1265, 1275, 1283, 1287, 1292, 1297, 1305, 1309, 1319, 1332, 1337
Compare
  cultures 46, 236, 1001, 1191
  Imagist poetry 698
  portrayals of people 361
  Realism 567
Critical viewing 77, 274, 598, 673
Debate 958, 1281, 1350–1351
  listening 1351
  propositions 1350
Discussion starter 45, 360, 1189
Effective listening 1351
Evidence preparation 958
Equipment 469
Graphic organizer
  chart 305, 469, 958, 1197, 1207
  storyboard 470
  timeline 6–7, 174–175, 330–331, 482–483, 646–647, 852–853, 1138–1139
  Venn diagram 1231
Group discussion 46, 77, 93, 125, 186, 228, 236, 251, 274, 275, 290, 304, 313, 361, 372, 397, 398, 428, 452, 453, 547, 556, 567, 634–635, 674, 686, 691, 698, 733, 749, 770, 771, 783, 798, 821, 822, 885, 886, 897, 924, 925, 935, 957, 991, 1014, 1015, 1114, 1121, 1177, 1189, 1191, 1196, 1206, 1220, 1230, 1231, 1251, 1261, 1262, 1271, 1280, 1302, 1313, 1328, 1337, 1340
Interviewing 1178
Listening and viewing techniques 471
Listening techniques 841
Literary criticism 251, 290, 397, 427, 452, 885
Literature groups 1197, 1231
Monologue 784
Multimedia presentation (exhibit) 468–471
Nonverbal techniques 163, 197, 319, 784, 841, 908, 1207, 1262, 1341
Oral interpretation of music 1207
Oral interpretation of poetry 840–841, 1262
Oral response to literature 634–5
Oral presentation delivery techniques 319, 471, 841 discussion participation 635
  evaluation 163, 197, 305, 784, 958, 1127, 1178, 1197, 1231, 1262, 1281, 1341
  monologue 784
  oral interpretation of music 1207
  oral interpretation of poetry 840–841, 1262
  oral response to literature 634–5 persuasive speech 119, 162–163, 197, 908
  photo essay 1126–1127
  recitation 840
  reflective presentation 318–319
  response to literary criticism 305 on Romantic writing tradition 186 of song 1207
  visual aids in 468–471, 908, 992, 1262, 1341
Oral research report 468–471, 305, 992, 1341 with visual aids 468–471, 992, 1341 Performing
  monologue 784
  oral interpretation 840–841, 1207, 1262
Persuasive speech 119, 162–163, 197, 908
Photo essay 1126–1127
Planning (Preparing)
  debate 958, 1281, 1350–1351
  literature groups 1197, 1231
  multimedia presentation 468–471, 1262
  oral interpretation 840–841, 1207, 1262
  oral presentation 162, 468–469, 840–841
  photo essay 1127
  reflective presentation 318–319
Propositions of fact 1350
  of policy 1350
  of problem 1350
  of value 1350
Realism 567
Recitation of a literary work 840–841
Reflective presentation 318–319
Rehearsing 163, 319, 471, 784, 841
Speaking frame 1127, 1351
Technology skills for recording presentation 163, 469
  for reflective presentation 317
  word-processing 161, 317, 467, 839, 872, 1023, 1349
Tone (of voice) 105, 577, 1231
Verbal techniques 163, 197, 319, 471, 841
Verisimilitude 567

- Visual aids
  - in multimedia presentations
    - (exhibits) 468–469, 470
  - in oral research reports 186, 468–469, 470, 992, 1126, 1341
  - in presentations 112, 1126
- Visual display
  - of artistic treatments of literary
    - works 18, 172, 177, 181, 185, 373, 407, 553, 644, 660, 661, 673, 698, 726, 730, 736, 809, 850, 859, 861, 863, 865, 969, 1136, 1145, 1149, 1151, 1183, 1199, 1200, 1213, 1237, 1263, 1272, 1317
  - cartoons 992, 998–1000
  - collage 236, 319, 321, 1001
  - concept map 9
  - in cultural comparisons 21, 27, 34, 72, 74, 177, 236, 649
  - multimedia 468–469
  - photographs 909, 1145
  - political cartoons 113
  - primary visual artifact 77, 274, 535
  - writer's culture 1191, 1341
- Visual literacy
  - compare and contrast
    - characters 1271
- Visual media
  - cartoons 992, 998–1000
  - historical photographs 909, 1014, 1022, 1025, 1126, 1145, 1153, 1154, 1183, 1237
  - for oral interpretation 468–469, 992, 1262
  - for persuasive speech 112, 113, 908
  - political cartoons 113
  - for reflective presentation 77, 84, 319
  - sketching 889

Research, Test-Taking, and Study Skills

- ACT 616, 822, 886, 908, 1015, 1314
- Art and photo exhibits 1126
- Coordinating conjunctions 751
- Evaluating sources 459, 465
- Foreshadowing 886, 925
- Grammar tests 170-171, 326-327, 478-479, 642-643, 848-849, 1134-1135, 1364-1365
- Graphic organizer 806, 1341
  - analogy/relationship chart 1051
  - bound book 18
  - cause-and-effect chart 292
  - cause-and-effect diagram 602
  - character analysis chart 1050
  - character web 1265
  - charts 115, 305, 459, 515, 617, 743, 787, 802, 815, 823, 829, 871, 886, 898, 907, 916, 925, 941, 943, 957, 958, 971, 1003, 1015, 1051, 1073, 1162, 1168, 1177, 1182, 1193, 1196, 1197, 1207, 1209, 1215, 1223, 1227, 1230, 1233, 1240, 1252, 1258, 1261, 1275, 1283, 1297, 1302, 1303, 1313
  - checklist 160, 316, 466, 838, 1365
  - concept map 333
  - concept web 1097
  - concrete details chart 1182
  - context clues chart 1281
  - diagram 109, 292, 1022, 1221
  - discussion group chart 634, 635, 783, 925, 1196, 1220, 1280, 1337
  - discussion group web diagram 1340
  - double-entry journal 145
  - etymology chart 131
  - figurative language chart 1233
  - Foldables 18, 186, 342, 494, 658, 864, 1150
  - four-tab book 864
  - layered-look book 1150
  - main idea web 616
  - multimedia presentation 469, 470
  - outline chart 133
  - questions 705
  - response-evidence chart 459, 1018
  - semantic features chart 372
  - sequence chain 313
  - sequence chart 822, 835, 875, 1152
  - sequence of events 1152
  - statistical chart 872
  - storyboard 470
  - table 398
  - three-column chart 829, 1114
  - three-pocket book 186
  - three-tab book 342, 658
  - timeline 6–7, 79–80, 174–175, 330–331, 342, 646–647, 852–853
  - time references 929
  - two-column chart 617, 1302
  - Venn diagram 715, 900, 1231, 1271, 1292
  - web diagrams 291, 428, 453, 547, 783, 798, 977, 1027, 1206, 1220, 1340
  - word map 101, 275, 1015, 1231
  - word web 94, 101, 150, 683, 784, 1305
- Information
  - analyzing 460
  - searching for 616, 1254
- Internet research 465, 1023
- Internet sources 459, 461, 549, 1023
- Interview 1168
- In-text citations 127, 467
- Note cards 460
- Note taking 23, 34, 57, 63, 70, 81, 96, 105, 115, 186, 255, 262, 342, 352, 369, 383, 388, 409, 460, 539, 574, 663, 677, 683, 689, 753, 774, 787, 825, 938, 960, 971, 982, 1027, 1073, 1121, 1150, 1168, 1203, 1223, 1240, 1275, 1283, 1297, 1309
- Observation
  - recording 829
- Oral presentation
  - checklist 471, 635
- Paraphrasing sources 460, 569
- Plagiarism 157, 313, 460, 628, 835, 1121
- Primary sources 125, 460, 465, 924
- Propaganda 992, 1166
- Quotations 458, 467, 1001
  - brackets in 1252
  - direct 127, 462, 629, 833, 836
  - embedded 839
  - indirect 467
  - primary source 127
- Quoting sources 460, 462, 464, 629, 833, 836
  - punctuating 460, 839
- Reading tests 166-168, 322-324, 474-476, 638-640, 844-846, 1130-1132, 1360-1362
- Reference materials 465
- Research questions 459, 1221
- Research reports 458–459, 872, 1178, 1221
  - Internet 1023
  - oral 46, 305, 1231
    - with visual aids 186, 468–469
- Revising 1179, 1252
- SAT 137, 547, 1196, 1220, 1231, 1262
- Secondary sources 460, 465
- Sentence combining 88

Sentence completion items 169, 477, 1133
Sources
  evaluating 459, 465
  Internet 459, 465, 549, 1023
  paraphrasing 460, 569
  primary 125, 460, 465
  punctuating 127, 460
  quoting 460
  secondary 460, 465
  summarizing 137, 204, 460, 1221
  variety of 465
Suffixes 1315
Summarizing sources 137, 204, 460, 1221
Test practice 166-171, 322-327, 474-479, 638-643, 844-849, 1130-1135, 1360-1365 grammar 170-171, 326-327, 478-479, 642-643, 848-849, 1134-1135, 1364-1365
  reading 166-168, 322-324, 474-476, 638-640, 844-846, 1130-1132, 1360-1362
  vocabulary 169, 325, 477, 641, 847, 1133, 1363
  writing 171, 327, 479, 643, 849, 1135, 1365
Test-taking tips 53
Thesis 155, 157, 158, 460, 461, 464, 625, 627, 628, 629, 834, 835, 836, 1344
Topic
  exploring 835
  finding 313, 628, 835, 1121, 1345
  investigating 459
  narrowing 459
Vocabulary tests 169, 325, 477, 641, 847, 1133, 1363
Works-cited list 460, 467
Writing checklist 1365
Writing tests 171, 327, 479, 643, 849, 1135, 1365

Interdisciplinary Activities

Art 186, 342, 494, 658, 864, 1023, 1126–1127, 1150, 1191
Daily life and culture 732, 821, 1113, 1328
History 150–153, 361, 809, 821, 872, 1116–1117, 1316–1317
Math 872
Music 1207
Science 1221
Social Studies 992
Sociology 872

Index of Authors and Titles

A

Achebe, Chinua 38
Acquainted with the Night 723
Adams, Abigail 144
Address upon Receiving the Nobel Prize in Literature Stockholm, December 10, 1950 884
Ai 1331
All Rivers Run to the Sea, from 981
Alvarez, Julia 1253
Ambush 1181
American Childhood, An, from 311
And Ain't I a Woman? 368
Any Human to Another 828
anyone lived in a pretty how town 707
April Showers 538
Arctic Dreams: Imagination and Desire in a Northern Landscape, from 617
Ars Poetica 688
Asians Dying, The 1192
Autobiography of Ben Franklin, The, from 17, 104
Awakening, The, from 491

B

Baldwin, James 959
Bean Eaters, The 940
Beat! Beat! Drums! 414
Because I could not stop for Death 448 beware : do not read this poem 696
Bierce, Ambrose 387
Biology of Joy, The 198
Birches 718
Bishop, Elizabeth 1214
Blachman, Jeremy 1343
Black Boy, from 899
black man talks of reaping, A 824
Bontemps, Arna 824
Bourke-White, Margaret 909, 1130
Bradford, William 63
Bradstreet, Anne 89
Breakfast 868
Brooks, Gwendolyn 861, 937
Bruchac, Joseph 34
Bustle in a House, The 446

C

Cabeza de Vaca, Álvar Núñez 56
Cain, Becky 155
Caldwell, Erskine 909
Camouflaging the Chimera 1190
Carson, Rachel 1236
Carver, Raymond 1274
Cather, Willa 489, 519
Cavalry Crossing a Ford 341
Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County, The 496
Chekhov, Anton 557
Chesnut, Mary 374
Chicago 709
Chief Joseph 531
Choice: A Tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. 1161
Chopin, Kate 491, 551
Cisneros, Sandra 1304
Civil Disobedience, from 221
Cofer, Judith Ortiz 1149, 1282
Collins, Billy 455, 1291
Cottonmouth Country 1257
Courage 1208
Crane, Stephen 493, 578
Crisis, No. 1, The, from 132
Crossing the Water 1229
Crucible, The 1026
Cullen, Countee 828
Cummings, E. E. 653, 704

D

Daisies 1260
Danticat, Edwidge 1318
Darling, The 557
Death of the Ball Turret Gunner, The 976
Death of the Hired Man, The 725
Declaration of Independence, In Congress, July 4, 1776 120
Dekanawida 47
Devil and Tom Walker, The 240
Dickinson, Emily 341, 437
Dillard, Annie 311, 1360
Douglass 568
Douglass, Frederick 337, 351, 474
Dove, Rita 1152
Dunbar, Paul Laurence 568
Dust Changes America, from 1130
Dust Tracks on a Road, from 790
Dylan, Bob 1202

E

Early Autumn 844
Eating Poetry 694
Edwards, Jonathan 95
El Olvido (Según las Madres) 1282
Eliot, T. S. 666
Emerson, Ralph Waldo 181, 188, 322
Emily Dickinson: An Introduction, from 455
Ending Poem 1336
Equiano, Olaudah 69
Erdrich, Louise 1296
Everything Stuck to Him 1274

F

Fall of the House of Usher, The, from 185
Faulkner, William 874
Fiddler Jones 517
Filling Station 1218
Fireworks 685
Fish, The 1214
Fitzgerald, F. Scott 752
Franklin, Benjamin 17, 104, 166
Frederick Douglass 359
Frost, Robert 714
Four Freedoms, The, from 863
Fuller, Margaret 203

G

Gandhi, Mohandas K. 229
Gettysburg Address, The 400
Gibbs, Nancy 508
Gift in Wartime, The 1186
Glück, Louise 1257
Go Down, Moses 347
Grapes of Wrath, The, from 859
Grass 712

H

Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall, A 1202
Hawthorne, Nathaniel 278
Hayden, Robert 359
Hemingway, Ernest 655, 742

Henry, Patrick 114
Hersey, John 1002
Hiroshima, from 1002
Hongo, Garrett 993
How the Leopard Got His Claws 38
How the World Was Made 22
How They Chose These Words 128
Hughes, Langston 657, 810, 844
Hughes, Robert 806
Hurston, Zora Neale 790

I

I: Six Nonlectures, from 653
I, Too 810
I Chop Some Parsley While Listening to Art Blakey's Version of "Three Blind Mice" 1291
I Have Killed the Deer 13
I Hear America Singing 408
I heard a Fly buzz when I died 445
I Will Fight No More Forever 531
If We Must Die 801
If you were coming in the Fall 439
In a Station of the Metro 662
In Another Country 742
In Texas Grass 360
In the Heart of the Sea, from 306
Iroaganachi, John 38
Iroquois Constitution, The, from 47
Irving, Washington 240
Isaacson, Walter 128

J

Jarrell, Randall 976
Jefferson, Thomas 120
Jilting of Granny Weatherall, The 773
Job Posting: The New York Times 1343
John Adams, from 150
Johnson, James Weldon 786
Journal, The, from 183
Jungle, The, from 638

K

Kaplan, Justin 430
Keep Your Hand on the Plow 348
Kennedy, President John F. 735
King, Martin Luther Jr. 1145, 1155
Kingston, Maxine Hong 1264
kitchenette building from A Street in Bronzeville 861
Komunyakaa, Yusef 1190
Knapp, Bettina L. 625
Kubota, from 993
Kunitz, Stanley 1232

L

La Relación, from 56
Lacayo, Richard 364
Latin Deli: An Ars Poetica, The, from 1149
Le Guin, Ursula K. 1239
Lee, Robert E. 382
Lemonick, Michael D. 198
Letter from a Birmingham Jail, from 1145
Letter to His Son 382
Letter to John Adams 144
Letters to a Young Poet 692
Life Along the Mississippi 508
Life of Olaudah Equiano, The, from 69
Life You Save May Be Your Own, The 913
Lightning is a yellow Fork, The 341
Lin, Maya 1198
Lincoln, Abraham 339, 400
Lincoln at Gettysburg: The Words That Remade America, from 404
London, Jack 601
Long Walk to Freedom, from 231
Lopez, Barry 617
Lost, from 1147
Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock, The 666
Lowell, Amy 682
Lucinda Matlock 514

M

MacLeish, Archibald 688
Magic Barrel, The 942
Malamud, Bernard 942
Man with the Blue Guitar, The, from 702
Man with the Saxophone, The 1331
Mandela, Nelson 231
Mary Chesnut's Civil War, from 374
Masters, Edgar Lee 514
Maus: A Survivor's Tale, from 998
McCullough, David 150
McKay, Claude 801
Meaning of July Fourth for the Negro, The, from 337
Melville, Herman 294
Mending Wall 714
Merwin, W. S. 1192
Miller, Arthur 1026
Minister's Black Veil, The 278
Miniver Cheevy 576
Mistral, Gabriela 566
Moby-Dick, from 294
Momaday, N. Scott 27
Mooney, James 24
Morales, Aurora Levins 1336
Morales, Rosario 1336
Morrison, Toni 1308
Much Madness is divinest Sense 442
My Bondage and My Freedom, from 353, 474
My City 786
My Father and the Figtree 1286
My life closed twice before its close 440

N

Names of Women, The 1296
Narrative of the Captivity and Restoration of Mrs. Mary Rowlandson, A, from 80
Nature, from 188
Negro Artist and the Racial Mountain, The, from 657
Negro Speaks of Rivers, The 813
Nineteen Thirty-Seven 1318
Nye, Naomi Shihab 1286

O

O Pioneers!, from 489
O'Brien, Tim 1181
Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge, An 387
O'Connor, Flannery 913
Of Plymouth Plantation, from 62
On the Eve of Historic Dandi March 229
One Writer's Beginnings, from 1119
Open Boat, The 578

P

Pact, A 662
Paine, Thomas 132
Philbrick, Nathaniel 306
Pit and the Pendulum, The 262
Plath, Sylvia 1226
Poe, Edgar Allan 185, 254
Poor Richard's Almanack, from 110
Porter, Katherine Anne 773
Portrait, The 1017
Pound, Ezra 662
Prayer to the Pacific 44
Proposal for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial 1198

Proposals for Electoral College Reform, from 155

R

Raab, Lawrence 833
Raven, The 254
Red Badge of Courage, The, from 493
Red Wheelbarrow, The 676
Reed, Ishmael 696
Remarks at Amherst College 735
Richard Cory 573
Richness 566
Rilke, Rainer Maria 692
Rivera, Tomás 1017
Robert Frost's "Mending Wall," from 833
Robinson, Edwin Arlington 573
Rockpile, The 959
Roethke, Theodore 1222
Roosevelt, Franklin D. 863, 970
Root Cellar 1222
Rose for Emily, A 874
Rowlandson, Mary 80

S

Salvador Late or Early 1304
Sandburg, Carl 709
Second Inaugural Address, March 4, 1865, from 339
Second Tree from the Corner, The 928
Self-Reliance, from 181, 194, 322
Separation 1195
Sexton, Anne 1208
Sight in Camp in the Daybreak Gray and Dim, A 413
Silent Spring, from 1236
Silko, Leslie Marmon 44
Sinclair, Upton 638
Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God, from 95
Sky Tree, The 34
Slavery Under Glass 364
Sleep in the Mojave Desert 1226
Snow 1253
somewhere i have never travelled,gladly beyond 704
Song of Myself, from 420
Soul selects her own Society, The 440
Specimen Days, from 416
Speech to the Second Virginia Convention 114
Spiegelman, Art 998
SQ 1239
Stafford, William 1361
Stanzas from a Black Epic 806
Stay Alive, My Son, from 1187
Steinbeck, John 859, 866
Stevens, Wallace 699
Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening 721
Story of an Hour, The 551
Strand, Mark 694
Stride Toward Freedom, from 1157
Study of Two Pears 699
Success is counted sweetest 443
Summer Rain 682
Sun Also Rises, The, from 655
Swing Low, Sweet Chariot 344

T

Terkel, Studs 1167
There's a certain Slant of light 450
This Is Just to Say 679
This is my letter to the World 451
Thoreau, Henry David 183, 212, 221
Thoughts on the African-American Novel 1308
To Build a Fire 601
To Don at Salaam 937
To His Excellency, General Washington 139
To My Dear and Loving Husband 92
Torchbearer, The 1152
Transfiguration, from 1360
Traveling Through the Dark 1361
Tropics in New York, The 804
Troupe, Quincy 360
Truth, Sojourner 368
Tu, Tran Mong 1186
Twain, Mark 496
Two Views of the River, from 504

U

Upon the Burning of Our House, July 10th, 1666 89

W

Wagner Matinée, A 519
Wagoner, David 1147
Walden, from 212
Walker, Alice 1161
Walt Whitman: A Life, from 430
War Against the Trees, The 1232
War Message to Congress December 8, 1941 970
Way to Rainy Mountain, The, from 27
We Wear the Mask 571
Welty, Eudora 888, 1119
Wharton, Edith 538
Wheatley, Phillis 139
When I Heard the Learn'd Astronomer 411
When the Negro Was in Vogue 815
When You Go Away 1195
Whistle, The, from 166
White, E. B. 928
Whitman, Walt 341, 408
Wiesel, Elie 981
Williams, William Carlos 676
Wills, Garry 404
Winter Dreams 752
Woman in the Nineteenth Century, from 203
Woman Warrior, The, from 1264
Working: Roberto Acuna, Farm Worker, from 1167
Worn Path, A 888
Wright, Richard 899

Y

Yathay, Pin 1187
You Have Seen Their Faces, from 909

Acknowledgments

Unit 1

Excerpt from The Way to Rainy Mountain by M. Scott Momaday. Copyright 1969 © by the University of New Mexico Press. Reprinted by permission from the author.

Excerpt from "The Account: Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca's Relación" is reprinted by permission from the publisher of The Account: Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca's Relación, edited and translated José Fernández and Fatava (Houston: Arte Público Press – University of Houston, © 1993).

"To His Excellency George Washington" from The Poems of Phyllis Wheatley, edited and with an introduction by Julien D. Mason Jr. Copyright © 1966 by the University of North Carolina Press, renewed 1989. Used by permission of the Publisher.

"The Sky Tree" retold by Joseph Bruchac, from Keepers of Life, by Michael Caduto and Jospeh Bruchac. Copyright © 1994, Fulcrum Publishing, 350 Indiana St., Suite 350, Golden, CO 80401. (800) 992-2908.

From Lang, Amy Schranger, ed. "A True History of the Captivity and Restoration of Mary Rowlandson" in Andrews, William L., Sargent Bush Jr., Annette Kolodny, Amy Schranger Lang and Daniel B. Shea, eds. Journeys in the New Worlds: Early American Women's Narratives. Copyright 1990. Reprinted by permission of the University of Wisconsin Press.

Unit 2

"On the Eve of the Great Historic Dandi March" by Mohandas K. Gandhi from Collected Speeches: 1909–1939, Volume I, copyright © 1938 by New Directions Publishing Company. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

Long Walk to Freedom by Nelson Mandela. Copyright © 1994, 1995 by Nelson Rolihlahla Mandela. By permission of Little, Brown and Co., Inc.

In the Heart of the Sea: The Tragedy of the Whaleship Essex by Nathaniel Philbrick. Copyright © 2000. Reprinted by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Putnam Inc.

Unit 3

Reprinted with the permission of Simon & Schuster Adult Publishing Group from Lincoln at Gettysburg: The Words That Remade America, by Garry Wills. Copyright © 1992 by Literary Research, Inc.

"Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and "Go Down, Moses" from Religious Folk-Songs of the Negro, edited by R. Nathaniel Dett. Reprinted courtesy of AMS Press, Inc.

Excerpt from Mary Chesnut's Civil War edited by C. Vann Woodward. Copyright © 1986 by C. Vann Woodward, Sally Bland Metts, Barbara G. Carpenter. Sally Bland Johnson, and Katherine W. Herbert. Reprinted by permission of Yale University Press.

Poems #511, #303, #67, #435, #1624, #1732, #465, #1078, #712, #238, #441 reprinted by permission of the publishers and the Trustees of Amherst College from The Poems of Emily Dickinson, Thomas H. Johnson, ed., Cambridge, Mass: The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, copyright © 1951, 1955, 1979, , 1983 by the President and Fellows of Harvard University Press.

"Frederick Douglass" copyright © 1966 by Robert Hayden, from Collected Poems of Robert Hayden by Frederick Glaysher, editor. Reprinted by permission of Liveright Publishing Corporation.

Unit 4

Gabriela Mistral, "Richness" from Selected Poems: A Bilingual Edition, translated and edited by Doris Dana (Baltimore: The Johns Hopkins Press, 1971). Copyright © 1961, 1964, 1970, 1971 by Doris Dana. Reprinted with the permission of Writer's House, LLC, New York, on behalf of the proprietors.

Unit 5

From I: Six Nonlectures by E.E. Cummings. Copyright 1953, © 1981 by the Trustees for the E.E. Cummings Trust. Used by permission of Liveright Publishing Corporation.

"The Negro Artist and the Racial Mountain" by Langston Hughes. Copyright © 1926 by Langston Hughes. Reprinted by permission of Harold Ober Associates Incorporated.

"Fireworks" and "Summer Rain" from The Complete Poetical Works of Amy Lowell. Copyright © 1955 by Houghton Mifflin Company. Copyright renewed © 1983 by Houghton Mifflin Company, Brinton P. Roberts, Esquire. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Company. All rights reserved.

"Oread" by HD (Hilda Doolittle), from Collected Poems, 1912–1944, copyright © 1982 by the Estate of Hilda Doolittle. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

"In a Station of the Metro" by Ezra Pound, from Personae, copyright © 1926 by Ezra Pound. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

"The Red Wheelbarrow" by William Carlos Williams, from Collected Poems: 1909–1939, Volume I, copyright © 1938 by New Directions Publishing Company. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

"This is just to Say" by William Carlos Williams, from Collected Poems: 1909-1939, Volume I, copyright © 1938 by New Directions Publishing Corp. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

"Ars Poetica" from Collected Poems, 1917–1982 by Archibald MacLeish. Copyright © 1985 by The Estate of Archibald MacLeish. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Company. All rights reserved.

From the book Letters to a Young Poet. Copyright © 2000 by Rainer Maria Rilke. Reprinted with permission of the New World Library, Novato, CA. www.newworldlibrary.com Toll free 800/972-6657 ext. 52

“beware: do not read this poem” from the book New and Collected Poems. Copyright © 1989 by Ishmael Reed. Permission granted by Lowenstein-Yost Associates.

“Study of Two Pears” from The Collected Poems of Wallace Stevens by Wallace Stevens, copyright 1954 by Wallace Stevens and renewed 1982 by Holly Stevens. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

“Eating Poetry” from Selected Poems by Mark Strand, copyright © 1979, 1980 by Mark Strand. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

“anyone lived in a pretty how town” copyright 1940, © renewed 1968, 1991 by the Trustees of the E. E. Cummings Trust, from Collected Poems: 1904–1962 by E. E. Cummings. Edited by George J. Firmage. Reprinted by permission of Liveright Publishing Corporation.

“somewhere i have never travelled,gladly beyond” Copyright 1931, © 1959, 1991 by the Trustees for the E.E. Cummings Trust. Copyright © 1979 by George James Firmage, from Complete Poems: 1904-1962 by E.E. Cummings, edited by George J. Firmage. Used by permission of Liveright Publishing Corporation.

“Frederick Douglass.” Copyright © 1966 by Robert Hayden, from Collected Poems of Robert Hayden, by Robert Hayden, edited by Frederick Glaysher. Used by permission of Liveright Publishing Corporation.

““Spotting by the Woods on a Snowy Evening,” “Mending Wall,” “Birches,” and “The Death of a Hired Man” from The Poetry of Robert Frost, edited by Edward Connery Lathem. Copyright 1944, 1951, © 1956, 1958 by Robert Frost, © 1967 by Lesley Frost Ballantine, copyright 1916, 1923, 1928, 1930, 1939 © 1969 by Henry Holt & Co., Inc. Reprinted by permission of Henry Holt & Co., Inc.

“My City” copyright 1935 by James Weldon Johnson, renewed © 1963 by Grace Nail Johnson, from Saint Peter Relates an Incident by James Weldon Johnson. Reprinted by Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Putnam Inc.

Excerpt from Dust Tracks on a Road by Zora Neale Hurston. Copyright © 1942 by Zora Neale Hurston. Copyright renewed 1970 by John C. Hurston. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc.

“I, Too” copyright © 1994 by The Estate of Langston Hughes, “The Negro Speaks of Rivers,” copyright © 1994 by The Estate of Langston Hughes, from The Collected Poems of Langston Hughes by Langston Hughes. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

From The Perfect Hour by James L.W. West III, copyright © 2005 by James L.W. West III. Used by permission of Random House, Inc.

“In Another Country” reprinted by permission of Scribner, an imprint of Simon & Schuster Adult Publishing Group, from Men Without Women by Ernest Hemingway. Copyright © 1927 by Charles Scribner’s Son. Copyright renewed 1955 by Ernest Hemingway.

“Any Human to Another” from On These I Stand by Countee Cullen. Copyrights held by the Amistad Research Center, Tulane University, administered by Thompson and Thompson, Brooklyn, NY.

“The Jilting of Granny Weatherall” from Flowering Judas and Other Stories, copyright © 1930 and renewed 1958 by Katherine Anne Porter, reprinted by permission of Harcourt Brace & Company.

“A Black Man Talks of Reaping” by Arna Bontemps. Reprinted by Permission of Harold Ober Associates Incorporated. From Personals. Copyright © 1963 by Arna Bontemps.

Unit 6

“Breakfast” from The Long Valley by John Steinbeck. Copyright 1938, renewed © 1966 by John Steinbeck. Reprinted by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Putnam Inc.

“A Rose for Emily” from Collected Stories of William Faulkner by William Faulkner. Copyright © 1930 and renewed 1958 by William Faulkner. Reprinted with permission of Random House, Inc.

“The Life You Save May Be Your Own” from A Good Man is Hard to Find and Other Stories, copyright © 1953 by Flannery O’Connor and renewed 1981 by Regina O’Connor, reprinted by permission of Harcourt Brace & Company.

“Upon Receiving the Nobel Prize for Literature” from Essays, Speeches & Public Letters by William Faulkner by William Faulkner, edited by James B. Meriwether. Copyright © 1950 by William Faulkner. Reprinted by permission of Random House, Inc.

Excerpt from Black Boy by Richard Wright. Copyright © 1937, 1942, 1944, 1945 by Richard Wright. Copyright renewed © 1973 by Ellen Wright. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc.

“The Rockpile” © 1965 by James Baldwin is collected in Going to Meet the Man, published by Vintage Books. Copyright renewed. Used by arrangement with the James Baldwin Estate.

“The Magic Barrel” by Bernard Malamud, reprinted by the permission of Russell & Volkening, as agents for the author. Copyright © 1954, 1958 by Bernard Malamud, renewed 1986 by Bernard Malamud.

"The Second Tree from the Corner” from The Second Tree from the Corner by E. B. White. Copyright © 1947 by E. B. White. Copyright renewed. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publisher, Inc.

“The Bean Eaters” and “To Don at Salaam” by Gwendolyn Brooks. Reprinted by consent of Brooks Permissions.

“A Worn Path” from A Curtain of Green and Other Stories, copyright 1941 and renewed 1969 by Eudora Welty, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc., and Russell and Volkening as agents for the author.

“The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner” from The Complete Poems by Randall Jarrell. Copyright © 1969 by Mrs. Randall Jarrell. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, Inc.

“The Portrait” is reprinted with permission from the publisher of …And The Earth Did Not Devour Him by Tomás Rivera (Houston: Arte Público Press- University of Houston, © 1992).

From The Crucible by Arthur Miller. Copyright 1952, 1953, 1954, renewed © 1980, 1981, 1982 by Arthur Miller. Used by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Group (USA) Inc.

From Hiroshima by John Hersey, copyright © 1946 and renewed 1974 by John Hersey. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

From All Rivers Run to the Sea by Elie Wiesel, copyright © 1995 by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

Acknowledgments

Unit 1

Excerpt from The Way to Rainy Mountain by M. Scott Momaday. Copyright 1969 © by the University of New Mexico Press. Reprinted by permission from the author.

Excerpt from "The Account: Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca's Relación" is reprinted by permission from the publisher of The Account: Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca's Relación, edited and translated José Fernández and Fatava (Houston: Arte Público Press – University of Houston, © 1993).

"To His Excellency George Washington" from The Poems of Phyllis Wheatley, edited and with an introduction by Julien D. Mason Jr. Copyright © 1966 by the University of North Carolina Press, renewed 1989. Used by permission of the Publisher.

"The Sky Tree" retold by Joseph Bruchac, from Keepers of Life, by Michael Caduto and Jospeh Bruchac. Copyright © 1994, Fulcrum Publishing, 350 Indiana St., Suite 350, Golden, CO 80401. (800) 992-2908.

From Lang, Amy Schranger, ed. "A True History of the Captivity and Restoration of Mary Rowlandson" in Andrews, William L., Sargent Bush Jr., Annette Kolodny, Amy Schranger Lang and Daniel B. Shea, eds. Journeys in the New Worlds: Early American Women's Narratives. Copyright 1990. Reprinted by permission of the University of Wisconsin Press.

Unit 2

"On the Eve of the Great Historic Dandi March" by Mohandas K. Gandhi from Collected Speeches: 1909–1939, Volume I, copyright © 1938 by New Directions Publishing Company. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

Long Walk to Freedom by Nelson Mandela. Copyright © 1994, 1995 by Nelson Rolihlahla Mandela. By permission of Little, Brown and Co., Inc.

In the Heart of the Sea: The Tragedy of the Whaleship Essex by Nathaniel Philbrick. Copyright © 2000. Reprinted by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Putnam Inc.

Unit 3

Reprinted with the permission of Simon & Schuster Adult Publishing Group from Lincoln at Gettysburg: The Words That Remade America, by Garry Wills. Copyright © 1992 by Literary Research, Inc.

"Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and "Go Down, Moses" from Religious Folk-Songs of the Negro, edited by R. Nathaniel Dett. Reprinted courtesy of AMS Press, Inc.

Excerpt from Mary Chesnut's Civil War edited by C. Vann Woodward. Copyright © 1986 by C. Vann Woodward, Sally Bland Metts, Barbara G. Carpenter. Sally Bland Johnson, and Katherine W. Herbert. Reprinted by permission of Yale University Press.

Poems #511, #303, #67, #435, #1624, #1732, #465, #1078, #712, #238, #441 reprinted by permission of the publishers and the Trustees of Amherst College from The Poems of Emily Dickinson, Thomas H. Johnson, ed., Cambridge, Mass: The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, copyright © 1951, 1955, 1979, , 1983 by the President and Fellows of Harvard University Press.

"Frederick Douglass" copyright © 1966 by Robert Hayden, from Collected Poems of Robert Hayden by Frederick Glaysher, editor. Reprinted by permission of Liveright Publishing Corporation.

Unit 4

Gabriela Mistral, "Richness" from Selected Poems: A Bilingual Edition, translated and edited by Doris Dana (Baltimore: The Johns Hopkins Press, 1971). Copyright © 1961, 1964, 1970, 1971 by Doris Dana. Reprinted with the permission of Writer's House, LLC, New York, on behalf of the proprietors.

Unit 5

From I: Six Nonlectures by E.E. Cummings. Copyright 1953, © 1981 by the Trustees for the E.E. Cummings Trust. Used by permission of Liveright Publishing Corporation.

"The Negro Artist and the Racial Mountain" by Langston Hughes. Copyright © 1926 by Langston Hughes. Reprinted by permission of Harold Ober Associates Incorporated.

"Fireworks" and "Summer Rain" from The Complete Poetical Works of Amy Lowell. Copyright © 1955 by Houghton Mifflin Company. Copyright renewed © 1983 by Houghton Mifflin Company, Brinton P. Roberts, Esquire. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Company. All rights reserved.

"Oread" by HD (Hilda Doolittle), from Collected Poems, 1912–1944, copyright © 1982 by the Estate of Hilda Doolittle. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

"In a Station of the Metro" by Ezra Pound, from Personae, copyright © 1926 by Ezra Pound. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

"The Red Wheelbarrow" by William Carlos Williams, from Collected Poems: 1909–1939, Volume I, copyright © 1938 by New Directions Publishing Company. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

"This is just to Say" by William Carlos Williams, from Collected Poems: 1909-1939, Volume I, copyright © 1938 by New Directions Publishing Corp. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

"Ars Poetica" from Collected Poems, 1917–1982 by Archibald MacLeish. Copyright © 1985 by The Estate of Archibald MacLeish. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Company. All rights reserved.

From the book Letters to a Young Poet. Copyright © 2000 by Rainer Maria Rilke. Reprinted with permission of the New World Library, Novato, CA. www.newworldlibrary.com Toll free 800/972-6657 ext. 52

“beware: do not read this poem” from the book New and Collected Poems. Copyright © 1989 by Ishmael Reed. Permission granted by Lowenstein-Yost Associates.

“Study of Two Pears” from The Collected Poems of Wallace Stevens by Wallace Stevens, copyright 1954 by Wallace Stevens and renewed 1982 by Holly Stevens. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

“Eating Poetry” from Selected Poems by Mark Strand, copyright © 1979, 1980 by Mark Strand. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

“anyone lived in a pretty how town” copyright 1940, © renewed 1968, 1991 by the Trustees of the E. E. Cummings Trust, from Collected Poems: 1904–1962 by E. E. Cummings. Edited by George J. Firmage. Reprinted by permission of Liveright Publishing Corporation.

“somewhere i have never travelled,gladly beyond” Copyright 1931, © 1959, 1991 by the Trustees for the E.E. Cummings Trust. Copyright © 1979 by George James Firmage, from Complete Poems: 1904-1962 by E.E. Cummings, edited by George J. Firmage. Used by permission of Liveright Publishing Corporation.

“Frederick Douglass.” Copyright © 1966 by Robert Hayden, from Collected Poems of Robert Hayden, by Robert Hayden, edited by Frederick Glaysher. Used by permission of Liveright Publishing Corporation.

““Spotting by the Woods on a Snowy Evening,” “Mending Wall,” “Birches,” and “The Death of a Hired Man” from The Poetry of Robert Frost, edited by Edward Connery Lathem. Copyright 1944, 1951, © 1956, 1958 by Robert Frost, © 1967 by Lesley Frost Ballantine, copyright 1916, 1923, 1928, 1930, 1939 © 1969 by Henry Holt & Co., Inc. Reprinted by permission of Henry Holt & Co., Inc.

“My City” copyright 1935 by James Weldon Johnson, renewed © 1963 by Grace Nail Johnson, from Saint Peter Relates an Incident by James Weldon Johnson. Reprinted by Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Putnam Inc.

Excerpt from Dust Tracks on a Road by Zora Neale Hurston. Copyright © 1942 by Zora Neale Hurston. Copyright renewed 1970 by John C. Hurston. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc.

“I, Too” copyright © 1994 by The Estate of Langston Hughes, “The Negro Speaks of Rivers,” copyright © 1994 by The Estate of Langston Hughes, from The Collected Poems of Langston Hughes by Langston Hughes. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

From The Perfect Hour by James L.W. West III, copyright © 2005 by James L.W. West III. Used by permission of Random House, Inc.

“In Another Country” reprinted by permission of Scribner, an imprint of Simon & Schuster Adult Publishing Group, from Men Without Women by Ernest Hemingway. Copyright © 1927 by Charles Scribner’s Son. Copyright renewed 1955 by Ernest Hemingway.

“Any Human to Another” from On These I Stand by Countee Cullen. Copyrights held by the Amistad Research Center, Tulane University, administered by Thompson and Thompson, Brooklyn, NY.

“The Jilting of Granny Weatherall” from Flowering Judas and Other Stories, copyright © 1930 and renewed 1958 by Katherine Anne Porter, reprinted by permission of Harcourt Brace & Company.

“A Black Man Talks of Reaping” by Arna Bontemps. Reprinted by Permission of Harold Ober Associates Incorporated. From Personals. Copyright © 1963 by Arna Bontemps.

Unit 6

“Breakfast” from The Long Valley by John Steinbeck. Copyright 1938, renewed © 1966 by John Steinbeck. Reprinted by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Putnam Inc.

“A Rose for Emily” from Collected Stories of William Faulkner by William Faulkner. Copyright © 1930 and renewed 1958 by William Faulkner. Reprinted with permission of Random House, Inc.

“The Life You Save May Be Your Own” from A Good Man is Hard to Find and Other Stories, copyright © 1953 by Flannery O’Connor and renewed 1981 by Regina O’Connor, reprinted by permission of Harcourt Brace & Company.

“Upon Receiving the Nobel Prize for Literature” from Essays, Speeches & Public Letters by William Faulkner by William Faulkner, edited by James B. Meriwether. Copyright © 1950 by William Faulkner. Reprinted by permission of Random House, Inc.

Excerpt from Black Boy by Richard Wright. Copyright © 1937, 1942, 1944, 1945 by Richard Wright. Copyright renewed © 1973 by Ellen Wright. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc.

“The Rockpile” © 1965 by James Baldwin is collected in Going to Meet the Man, published by Vintage Books. Copyright renewed. Used by arrangement with the James Baldwin Estate.

“The Magic Barrel” by Bernard Malamud, reprinted by the permission of Russell & Volkening, as agents for the author. Copyright © 1954, 1958 by Bernard Malamud, renewed 1986 by Bernard Malamud.

”The Second Tree from the Corner” from The Second Tree from the Corner by E. B. White. Copyright © 1947 by E. B. White. Copyright renewed. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publisher, Inc.

“The Bean Eaters” and “To Don at Salaam” by Gwendolyn Brooks. Reprinted by consent of Brooks Permissions.

“A Worn Path” from A Curtain of Green and Other Stories, copyright 1941 and renewed 1969 by Eudora Welty, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc., and Russell and Volkening as agents for the author.

“The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner” from The Complete Poems by Randall Jarrell. Copyright © 1969 by Mrs. Randall Jarrell. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, Inc.

“The Portrait” is reprinted with permission from the publisher of …And The Earth Did Not Devour Him by Tomás Rivera (Houston: Arte Público Press- University of Houston, © 1992).

From The Crucible by Arthur Miller. Copyright 1952, 1953, 1954, renewed © 1980, 1981, 1982 by Arthur Miller. Used by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Group (USA) Inc.

From Hiroshima by John Hersey, copyright © 1946 and renewed 1974 by John Hersey. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

From All Rivers Run to the Sea by Elie Wiesel, copyright © 1995 by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

"Kubota" from Volcano: A Memoir of Hawaii by Garrett Hongo, copyright © 1995 by Garrett Hongo. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

From Maus I: A Survivor's Tale/My Father Bleeds History by Art Spiegelman, copyright © 1973, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1984, 1985, 1986 by Art Spiegelman. Used by permission of Pantheon Books, a division of Random House, Inc.

Unit 7

From Stride Toward Freedom by Martin Luther King, Jr. Reprinted by arrangement with the Estate of Martin Luther King, Jr., c/o Writers House as agent for the proprietor of New York, NY. Copyright © 1958 Martin Luther King Jr., copyright renewed 1986 Coretta Scott King.

"Choice, A Tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr." from In Search of Our Mothers' Gardens, Womanist Prose, copyright © 1963 by Alice Walker, reprinted with permission of Harcourt, Brace & Company.

"A Fable for Tomorrow" from Silent Spring by Rachel Carson. Copyright © 1962 by Rachel L. Carson, renewed 1990 by Roger Christie. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Company. All rights reserved.

"Roberto Acuna" from Working by Studs Terkel. Reprinted by permission of Donadio & Olson, Inc. Copyright © 1972, 1974 by Studs Terkel.

"Ambush" from The Things They Carried. Copyright © 1990 by Tim O'Brien. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Company. All rights reserved.

"Snow" from How the Garcia Girls Lost Their Accents. Copyright © 1991 by Julia Alvarez. Published by Plume, an imprint of The Penguin Group (USA), and originally in hardcover by Algonquin Books of Chapel Hill. Reprinted by permission of Susan Bergholz Literary Services, New York. All rights reserved.

"Courage" from The Awful Rowing Toward God, by Anne Sexton. Copyright © 1975 by Loring Conant Jr., Executor of the Estate of Anne Sexton. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Company. All rights reserved.

"My Father and the Figtree" from Words Under the Words, by Naomi Shihab Nye. Reprinted by permission of the author.

From The Woman Warrior by Maxine Hong Kingston, copyright © 1975, 1976 by Maxine Hong Kingston. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

"El Olvido" by Judith Ortiz Cofer is reprinted by permission from the publisher of Terms of Survival (Houston: Arte Publico Press: University of Houston, 1997).

"The Names of Women" by Louise Erdrich. Copyright © 1992 by Louise Erdrich. Reprinted by permission of the Wylie Agency.

"Salvador Late or Early" from Woman Hollering Creek. Copyright © 1991 by Sandra Cisneros. Published by Vintage Books, a division of Random House, Inc., and originally in hardcover by Random House, Inc. Reprinted by permission of Susan Bergholz Literary Services, New York. All rights reserved.

"The Gift in Wartime" by Tran Mong Tu. Reprinted by permission of the author.

From Stay Alive, My Son by Pin Yathay. Copyright © 1987 by Pin Yathay. Forward by David Chandler copyright © 2000 Cornell University press. Used by permission of the publisher, Cornell University Press.

Yusef Komunyakaa, "Camouflaging the Chimera," from Pleasure Dome: New and Collected Poems, © 2001 by Yusef Komunyakaa and reprinted by permission of Wesleyan University Press.

"The Fish" from The Complete Poems 1927–1979 by Elizabeth Bishop. Copyright © 1979, 1983 by Alice Helen Methfessel. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Strauss & Giroux, Inc.

"Root Cellar" copyright 1943 by Modern Poetry Association, Inc., from Collected Poems of Theodore Roethke by Theodore Roethke. Used by permission of Doubleday, a division of Random House, Inc.

"Nineteen Thirty-Seven" from Krik? Krak! By Edwidge Danticat. Copyright © 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995 by Edwidge Danticat. Reprinted by permission of Soho Press.

"Thoughts on the African-American Novel" by Toni Morrison, from Black Women Writers (1950–1980) by Mari Evans. Copyright © 1983 by Mari Evans. Reprinted by permission of Doubleday, a division of Random House, Inc.

"I Chop Some Parsley While Listening to Art Blakely's Version of 'Three Blind Mice'" from Picnic, Lightning by Billy Collins, copyright © 1998. Reprinted by permission of the University of Pittsburgh Press.

"Daisies" and "Cottonmouth Country" from The Wild Iris by Louise Glück. Copyright © 1993 by Louise Glück. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers.

"Ending Poem" from Getting Home Alive, copyright © 1986 by Aurora Levins Morales and Rosario Morales. Reprinted by permission of Firebrand Books.

Content from The Academic Word List, developed at the School of Linguistics and Applied Language Studies at Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand, is reprinted by permission of Averil Coxhead. http://language.massey.ac.nz/staff/awl/index.shtml.

Photography

Cover ©The Metropolitan Museum of Art/Art Resource, NY(bkgd)WizData, inc./Alamy Images; T6 (t)James L. Amos/CORBIS, (b)Images.com/CORBIS; T7 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; T8 Terra Foundation for American Art, Chicago/Art Resource, NY; T9 Edward Hopper/AKG; T10 Lowe Art Museum/SuperStock; T11 SuperStock; T12 T14 Bettmann/CORBIS; T15 Images.com/CORBIS; T17 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; T18 CORBIS; T21 Christie's Images; T23 The Barnes Foundation, Merion Station, Pennsylvania/CORBIS; T25 Leon Dabo/Indianapolis Museum of Art, Gift of S. O. Buckner/Bridgeman Art Library; T27 20TH CENTURY FOX/THE KOBAL COLLECTION/BARRY WETCHER; T30 Bettmann/CORBIS; T31 Zifen Qian/SuperStock; T33 Manu Sassoonian/Art Resource, NY; T39 Mary Evans Picture Library; T40 Margaret Bourke-White/Time & Life Pictures/Getty Images; T42 2005 Marvel/CORBIS; T82 David Schmidt/Masterfile. 3 Digital Vision/Getty Images; 4 Brooklyn Museum of Art/Bridgeman Art Library; 6 (t)New York Historical Society/Bridgeman Art Library, (cl)Erich Lessing/Art Resource, NY, (c)Werner Forman/Art

Resource, NY, (cr)New York Historical Society/Bridgeman Art Library; 7 (tl)Musee des Beaux-Arts, Orleans, Roger-Viollet, Paris/Bridgeman Art Library, (tr)From the Collections of The Henry Ford Museum, (bl)The Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, (br)NPS: Amer. Rev. War/Guilford Courthouse; 9 (t)Art Archive/Musee de la Marine, Paris/Dagli Orti, (c)Art Resource, NY, (b)New York Historical Society/Bridgeman Art Library; 10 Bettmann/CORBIS; 13 Werner Forman/Art Resource, NY; 15 (cr)New York Historical Society/Bridgeman Art Library; 19 Century Association, New York/Bridgeman Art Library; 20 Pat O'Hara/CORBIS; 21 Lowe Art Museum/SuperStock; 24 D. Robert Franz/Getty Images; 25 Marilyn Angel Wynn/Nativestock.com; 27 Werner Forman/Art Resource, NY; 31 Joseph Sohm; Visions of America/CORBIS; 32 Bates Littlehales/Animals Animals; 34 Robert Holmes; 36 The Granger Collection; 38 Private Collection/Bridgeman Art Library; 40 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 43 Art Resource, NY; 44 Courtesy of Historic Prophetstown; 46 Seattle Art Museum, Gift of Katherine White and the Boeing Company; 47 Library of Congress; 51 CORBIS; 55 Worcester Art Museum/Bridgeman Art Library; 56 ClipArt.com; 58 Richard T. Norwitz/CORBIS; 58 The New York Public Library/Art Resource, NY; 60 Getty Images; 62 Bettmann/CORBIS; 64 Burstein Collection/CORBIS; 66 The Granger Collection; 69 Royal Albert Memorial Museum, Exeter/Bridgeman Art Library; 71 SuperStock; 72 National Maritime Museum, London; 74 Burstein Collection/CORBIS; 76 Peter Newark American Pictures/Bridgeman Art Library; 77 (tl tc)Getty Images, (b)Bridgeman Art Library/Getty Images; 80 Trustees of the Boston Library; 82 North Wind Picture Archives; 84 The Granger Collection; 89 The Art Archive/St. Biddolph, Boston/Eileen Tweedy; 92 Victoria & Albert Museum, London/Art Resource, NY; 95 The Granger Collection; 97 Adam Woolfitt/CORBIS; 98 National Portrait Gallery, London/SuperStock; 103 SuperStock; 104 Christie's Images Ltd.; 106 Michael Sheldon/Art Resource, NY; 107 Collection of The New York Historical Society; 112 Bettmann/CORBIS; 113 Frank Modell/The New Yorker/cartoonbank.com; 114 Getty Images; 116 Virginia Historical Society, Richmond; 120 Bettmann/CORBIS; 122 Comstock/PunchStock; 123 Bettmann/CORBIS; 124 Getty Images; 129 National Archives; 130 Archive Photos/NewsCom; 132 134 Bettmann/CORBIS; 136 North Wind Picture Archive; 139 Library of Congress; 140 Chateau de Versailles/ET Archive, London/SuperStock; 141 Bettmann/CORBIS; 144 Getty Images; 146 National Park Service, Adams National Historical Park; 150 (b)AP Images, (tl tr)National Park Service, Adams National Historical Park; 156 Getty Images; 159 Photonica/Getty Images; 164 (l r)book provided by Little Professor Book Company. Photo by Aaron Haupt; 165 (cr)Courtesy of Blue Hull Press; 172 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 174 (t)British Museum, (cl)MPI/Getty Images, (cr)Bettmann/CORBIS, London/Bridgeman Art Library, (br) Museum of London/Bridgeman Art Library; 175 (t)Library of Congress, (cl)Getty Images, (cr)Archivo Iconografico, S.A./CORBIS, (b)George Frederick Watts/Trustees of the Watts Gallery, Compton, Surrey, UK/Bridgeman Art Library; 177 (tl)The Granger Collection, NY, (tr)The New York Public Library/Art Resource, NY, (b)Josiah Wolcott/Massachusetts Historical Society/Bridgeman Art Library; 178 Minnesota Historical Society/CORBIS; 181 Terra Foundation for American Art, Chicago/Art Resource, NY; 183 Art Resource, NY; 185 Bildarchiv Preussischer Kulturbesitz/Art Resource, NY; 187 Francis G. Mayer/CORBIS; 188 Bettmann/CORBIS; 191 Francis G. Mayer/CORBIS; 199 James Schnepf; 200 (b)Penny Gentieu, (t)Bettmann/CORBIS; 201 (l r)Bettmann/CORBIS; 203 Getty Images; 205 206 Bettmann/CORBIS; 210 Bettmann/CORBIS; 212 Hulton Archive/Getty Images; 214 Farrell Grehan/CORBIS; 216 Christie's Images; 220 (b)David Turnley/CORBIS; 222 Jean Miele/CORBIS; 223 The Pierpont Morgan Library/Art Resource, NY; 225 George Caleb Bingham/Private Collection/Bridgeman Art Library; 229 Bettmann/CORBIS; 231 David Turnley/CORBIS; 232 Louise Gubb/CORBIS SABA; 235 Private Collection/Bridgeman Art Library; 236 David Turnley/CORBIS; 237 Museum of Fine Arts, Boston; 238 (r)Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 239 Everett Collection; 240 Bettmann/CORBIS; 243 Photo Researchers, Inc.; 245 The Cleveland Museum of Art, Mr. & Mrs. William H. Marlatt Fund; 247 The Ogden Museum of Southern Art, University of New Orleans; 250 The Fine Arts Museum of San Francisco. Gift of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller III.; 251 Getty Images; 254 Bettmann/CORBIS; 256 Scala/Art Resource, NY; 258 Erich Lessing/Art Resource, NY; 260 Hamburger Kunsthalle, Hamburg/Bridgeman Art Library; 263 Scala/Art Resource, NY; 266 Hamburger Kunsthalle, Hamburg/Bridgeman Art Library; 270 Giraudon/Art Resource, NY; 274 (b)Private collection, Index/Bridgeman Art Library, (tl tc)Getty Images; 278 Peabody Essex Museum, Salem, MA/Bridgeman Art Library; 280 CORBIS; 283 National Museum of American Art, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 287 Lee Snider/Photo Image/CORBIS; 290 Palazzo Barberini, Rome/Bridgeman Art Library; 294 Bettmann/CORBIS; 296 William Page/Peabody Essex Museum, Salem, MA/Bridgeman Art Library; 300 Images.com/CORBIS; 303 James L. Amos/CORBIS; 306 Peabody Essex Museum, Salem, MA/Bridgeman Art Library; 307 308 309 Courtesy of Nantucket Historical Association; 320 Richard Howard/Time & Life Pictures/Getty Images; 320 Stock Montage/SuperStock; 328 Dennis Malone Carter/Bridgeman Art Library; 330 Bettmann/CORBIS; 330 CORBIS; 330 North Wind Picture Archives; 331 Mary Evans Picture Library/The Image Works; 331 Mary Evans Picture Library; 331 Military History, Smithsonian Institution; 331 New York Historical Society/Bridgeman Art Library; 333 CORBIS; 333 Currier & Ives/Art Resource, NY; 333 James Captain Hope/Art Resource, NY; 334 Alexander Gardner/CORBIS; 337 William Tolman Carlton/Bridgeman Art Library; 339 Medford Historical Society, MA/CORBIS; 341 Private Collection, David Findlay Jr Fine Art, NYC/Bridgeman Art Library; 343 Brooklyn Museum of Art, NY/Bridgeman Art Library; 344 The Jacob and Gwendolyn Lawrence Foundation/Art Resource, NY; 346 National Museum of American Art, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 347 Hampton University Museum, VA; 348 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 351 National Portrait Gallery, Smithsonian Institution/Art Resource, NY; 353 Hampton University Museum, VA; 355 The Jacob and Gwendolyn Lawrence Foundation/Art Resource, NY; 361 Private Collection/Bridgeman Art Library; 362 Library of Congress; 363 Mary Evans Picture Library/The Image Works; 365 Andy Snow; 366 (tl tr b)Taro Yamasaki, (c)Courtesy National Underground Railroad Freedom Center; 367 Andy Snow; 368 Bettmann/CORBIS; 370 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 373 A National Guard Heritage Print by Rick Reeves, courtesy National Guard Bureau; 374 Private Collection/Art Resource, NY; 376 Bettmann/CORBIS; 378 Mary Evans Picture Library/The Image Works; 379 Bettmann/CORBIS; 382 Matthew Brady/CORBIS; 384 SEF/Art Resource, NY; 387 Bettmann/CORBIS; 389 Lindy Powers/Jupiter Images; 390 National Trust Photographic Library/John Hammond/The Image Works; 391 The Metropolitan Museum of Art, Gift of Mrs. John A. Rutherford, 1914. Photograph ©1980 The Metropolitan Museum of Art; 394 Courtesy

Rodrigue Studios; 396 G.E. Kidder Smith/CORBIS; 397 Getty Images; 400 SuperStock, Inc./SuperStock; 402 Reza Estakhrian/Getty Images; 407 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 408 CORBIS; 410 Christie's Images; 411 Photography Courtesy of Gwendolyn Knight Lawrence/Art Resource, NY; 413 New York Historical Society/Bridgeman Art Library; 414 Brooklyn Museum of Art, NY. Dick S. Ramsay Fund; 416 Christie's Images/CORBIS; 418 Chicago Historical Society/Bridgeman Art Library; 420 Tony Craddock/Getty Images; 422 Columbus Museum of Art, Ohio: Museum Purchase, Howald Fund, 1942.083; 426 Brooklyn Museum/Superstock; 427 Getty Images; 430 Mark Lennihan/AP Images; 430 Robert McIntosh/CORBIS; 433 The New York Public Library/Art Resource, NY; 434 The Pierpont Morgan Library/Art Resouce, NY; 435 Chip East/Reuters/CORBIS; 437 Hulton Archive/Getty Images; 439 Private Collection/Christie's Images; 440 Clare Marie Leonard/CORBIS; 442 Images.com/CORBIS; 443 Collection of the Birmingham Museum of Art, AL; Gift of John Meyer; 445 Private Collection/Bridgeman Art Library; 446 Oldham Art Gallery, Lancashire, UK/Bridgeman Art Library; 448 Alinari/Art Resource, NY; 450 Private Collection/Christie's Images/Bridgeman Art Library; 451 Christie's Images; 452 Getty Images; 452 Private Collection/Bridgeman Art Library; 455 Christie's Images Ltd.; 457 James Marshall/CORBIS; 461 Bettmann/CORBIS; 465 Courtesy of Vicksburg National Archive; 471 CORBIS; 471 National Archives/Picture Research Consultants; 472 (r)Hulton Archive/Getty Images, Courtesy HarperCollins Children's Books; 473 (cr)Collection of Edith Hariton/Antique Textile Resource, Bethesda; 480 National Gallery of Art, Washington, DC. Gift of the W.L. and May T. Mellon Foundation.; 482 (t)Bettmann/CORBIS; 483 (b)Bettmann/CORBIS, (t bc)Library of Congress, (tc)Smithsonian Images; 485 (l)Bettmann/CORBIS, (c)CORBIS, (r)Library of Congress; 486 Currier & Ives/Art Resource, NY; 489 J. Eastman Johnson/New York Historical Society/Bridgeman Art Library; 491 Réunion des Musées Nationaux/Art Resource, NY; 493 CORBIS; 495 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 496 Bettmann/CORBIS; 498 Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, Smithsonian Institution, Gift of Joseph H. Hirshhorn, 1966.; 499 Library of Congress; 500 CORBIS; 501 Bettmann/CORBIS; 503 The Willem de Kooning Foundation/Artists Rights Society, New York; 504 Historical Picture Archive/CORBIS; 505 506 Bettmann/CORBIS; 508-511 Diana Walker; 512 Steve Liss; 514 Bettmann/CORBIS; 516 Mary Evans Picture Library; 517 Art Resource, NY/Art ©T.H. Benton and R.P. Benton Testamentary Trusts/UMB Bank Trustee/Licensed by VAGA, NY; 520 Bettmann/CORBIS; 522 The Heyden Collection, Museum of Fine Arts, Boston; 524 David David Gallery/SuperStock; 527 Johan Elbers/Time Life Pictures/Getty Images; 528 Private Collection, Peter Newark American Pictures/Bridgeman Art Library; 531 National Portrait Gallery, Smithsonian Institution/Art Resource, NY; 533 ©1979 Howard Terpning ©The Greenwich Workshop® Inc.; 535 The Newark Museum/Art Resource, NY; 536 Photo Collection Alexander Alland, Sr./CORBIS; 537 538 Bettmann/CORBIS; 540 Private collection, ©Connaught Brown, London/Bridgeman Art Library; 544 Hulton-Deutsch Collection/CORBIS; 551 Missouri Historical Society; 553 Butler Institute of American Art, Youngstown, OH, Museum Purchase 1923/Bridgeman Art Library; 557 Scala/Art Resource, NY; 559 Bildarchiv Preussischer Kulturbesitz/Art Resource, NY; 562 Scala/Art Resource, NY; 566 Christie's Images/CORBIS; 567 National Gallery of Art, Washington, DC/Bridgeman Art Library; 568 Library of Congress; 570 Photograph Courtesy of Gwendolyn Knight Lawrence/Art Resource, NY; 571 Christie's Images/CORBIS/Art ©Romare Bearden Foundation/Licensed by VAGA NY; 573 Bettmann/CORBIS; 575 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 578 Bettmann/CORBIS; 580 Ingram Publishing/Alamy Images; 583 Christie's Images; 587 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 590 National Museum of American Art, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 593 Courtesy DC Moore Gallery, NYC; 598 (b)Private Collection/Christie's Images; 598 (t)Getty Images; 601 Underwood & Underwood/CORBIS; 603 The Cavalry Club/E.T.Archives/SuperStock; 607 ©Agnew's, London/Bridgeman Art Library; 610 Wetzel and Company; 612 ©The Maas Gallery, London/Bridgeman Art Library; 613 Giraudon/Art Resource, NY; 617 Frank Krahmer/Masterfile; 617 Mark Lennihan/AP Images; 620 Brian A. Vikander/CORBIS; 628 Brand X; 630 Photodisc Collection/Getty Images; 636 (cr)Bettmann/CORBIS, (l)Courtesy HarperCollins Publishers, (r)Amanita Pictures; 637 (4)Grazia Neri/Woodfin Camp; 644 Howard A. Thain/New York Historical Society/Bridgeman Art Library; 646 (b)Imageworks, (t)Fotosearch/Comstock Royalty Free; 647 (b)Austrian Archives/CORBIS, (c)David J. & Janice L. Frent Collection/CORBIS, (tl)National Archives/John F. Kennedy Library, (tr)National Portrait Gallery, Smithsonian Institution/Art Resource, NY; 649 (tl b)Bettmann/CORBIS, (tr)Underwood & Underwood/CORBIS; 649 651 Library of Congress; 653 Terra Foundation for American Art/Art Resource, NY; 655 National Gallery of Art, Washington, DC. Collection of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon.; 657 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 659 The Museum of Modern Art/Licensed by SCALA/Art Resource, NY; 660 (r)Réunion des Musées Nationaux/Art Resource, NY; 661 Ando Hiroshige/Art Resource, NY; 662 David Lees/CORBIS; 666 Bettmann/CORBIS; 668 Collection of the Newark Museum/Art Resource, NY; 668-669 Robert van der Hilst/CORBIS; 671 San Diego Museum of Art. Gift of Anne R. and Amy Putnam; 673 (b)San Diego Museum of Art. Gift of Anne R. and Amy Putnam; 673 (t)Getty Images; 676 Lisa Larsen/Time Life Pictures/Getty Images; 678 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 679 The Barnes Foundation, Merion Station, Pennsylvania/CORBIS; 682 Bettmann/CORBIS; 684 akg-images; 685 Images.com/CORBIS; 688 Oscar White/CORBIS; 692 Christie's Images/CORBIS; 694 695 Images.com/CORBIS; 696 Mary Iverson/CORBIS; 698 (bc)Images.com/CORBIS; 699 Bettmann/CORBIS; 701 Simon Fletcher/Private Collection/Bridgeman Art Library; 702 Estate of Pablo Picasso/Artists Rights Society, NY/Art Institute of Chicago. IL; 704 Bettmann/CORBIS; 706 Private Collection, New York/Bridgeman Art Library; 707 Archivo Iconografico, S.A./CORBIS; 709 Yousuf Karsh/Woodfin Camp & Associates; 711 Bettmann/CORBIS; 712 CNAC/MNAM/Dist. Reunion des Musees Nationaux/Art Resource, NY; 714 Bettmann/CORBIS; 716 Yale University Art Gallery, New Haven, CT.; 718 Age Fotostock America Inc.; 721 Gerrit Greve/CORBIS; 723 Fine Art Photographic Library/CORBIS; 726 CORBIS; 730 Collection of Harrison Young, Beijing, China.; 732 (1c)Getty Images; 733 A. Corton/Visuals Unlimited; 735 Bob Krist/CORBIS; 736 Ted Streshinsky/CORBIS; 739 Butler Institute of American Art, Youngstown, OH/Bridgeman Art Library; 740 (r)Edward Hopper/AKG; 741 Speiser & Easterling-Hallman Collection, Thomas Cooper Library, University of South Carolina; 742 John Springer Collection/CORBIS; 744 746 Scala/Art Resource, NY; 752 Bettmann/CORBIS; 754 Kirsten Soderlind/CORBIS; 756 Private Collection/Bridgeman Art Library; 759 Visual Arts Library/Art Resource, NY; 760 Images.com/CORBIS; 764 Erich Lessing/Art Resource, NY; 766 Florence Griswold Museum, Old Lyme, CT, Gift of the Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection & Insurance Co./Bridgeman Art

Library; 770 (b)Bettmann/CORBIS, (lc)Getty Images; 771 PhotoEssentials/FotoSearch; 773 Bettmann/CORBIS; 775 Photograph Courtesy of Hirschl & Adler Galleries, NY; 776 ET Archive, London/ SuperStock; 779 Christie's Images; 781 Getty Images; 782 Alinari /Art Resource; 785 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/ Art Resource, NY; 786 CORBIS; 788 The Jacob and Gwendolyn Lawrence Foundation/Art Resource, NY; 790 CORBIS; 792 Philadelphia Museum of Art: The Louis E. Stern Collection, 1963; 795 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington DC/Art Resource, NY; 797 Scala/ Art Resource, NY; 801 CORBIS; 803 ©1946 The Charles White Archives; 804 Private Collection/Superstock; 807 The Phillips Collection, Washington, DC.; 808 The Museum of Modern Art/Licensed by SCALA/Art Resource, NY; 809 The Phillips Collection, Washington, DC.; 810 Robert W. Kelley/Time Life Pictures/Getty Images; 812 Private Collection/ Bridgeman Art Library; 813 Indianapolis Museum of Art, Gift of S. O. Buckner/Bridgeman Art Library; 816 Schomburg Center, The New York Public Library/Art Resource, NY; 817 Penguin/CORBIS; 821 (b)Underwood & Underwood/CORBIS, (l c)Getty Images; 824 AP Images; 826 San Diego Museum of Art, San Diego, CA, Museum purchased with funds provided by Mrs. Leon D. Bonnet; Art ©Estate of Robert Gwathmey/Licensed by VAGA, NY; 828 National Portrait Gallery, Smithsonian Institution/Art Resource, NY; 830 National Museum of American Art, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 835 Library of Congress; 837 Getty Images; 842 (r)Courtesy Barnes & Noble Books, (l)Courtesy HarperCollins Publishers; 850 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/ Art Resource, NY; 852 (t)Christie's Images, (bl)U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, (br)Mary Altaffer/AP Images; 853 (tl tr)David J. & Janice L. Frent Collection/CORBIS, (cl)The Nobel Foundation, (cr)Getty Images, (b)Matthias Kulka/zefa/CORBIS; 855 (t cl)Bettmann/CORBIS, (cr)CORBIS; 856 CORBIS; 859 861 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 863 (l r)CORBIS; 865 SuperStock/Licenced by VAGA, NY; 866 Bettmann/CORBIS; 868 870 UPI/CORBIS; 874 Cofield Collection, Center for the Study of Southern Culture, University of Mississippi; 876 Ingram Publishing/AGE Fotostock; 878 Leeds Museums and Galleries U.K/ Bridgeman Art Library; 880 Glow Images/Alamy Images; 881 Private Collection, James Goodman Gallery, New York/Bridgeman Art Library; 883 Bildarchiv Preussischer Kulturbesitz/Art Resource, NY; 885 Getty Images; 888 Hulton Archive/Getty Images; 890 892 895 Eudora Welty/CORBIS; 899 Hulton Archive/CORBIS; 903 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 905 Lois Mailou Jones Pierre-Noel Trust; 909 Time & Life Pictures/Getty Images; 911 912 Margaret Bourke-White/Time & Life Pictures/Getty Images; 913 Flannery O'Connor Collection, Ina Dillard Russell Library, Georgia College & State University; 915 Courtesy Hubert Shuptrine; 917 G. Kalt/zefa/ CORBIS; 919 Martyn Goddard/CORBIS; 921 Dan Holmberg/CORBIS; 924 (b)Bettmann/CORBIS; 924 (t)Getty Images; 927 Bettmann/ CORBIS; 928 Hulton Archive/Getty Images; 930 932 Private Collection/ Bridgeman Art Library; 934 Jeff Greenberg/Photo Researchers; 937 Bettmann/CORBIS; 939 Art Resource, NY; 940 Cameraphoto Arte, Venice/Art Resource, NY; 942 David Lee/CORBIS; 944 Erich Lessing/Art Resource, NY; 946 The Jewish Museum, NY/Art Resource, NY; 949 The Newark Museum/Art Resource, NY; 950 North Wind Picture Archives; 954 Christopher Morris/Black Star Publishing; 955 The Jewish Museum, NY/Art Resource, NY; 957 Erich Lessing/Art Resource, NY; 959 Bettmann/CORBIS; 961 The Jacob and Gwendolyn Lawrence Foundation/Art Resource, NY; 963 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 964 Eddie Stangler/Index Stock Imagery NY; 965 Patti Mollica/CORBIS; 966 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 969 Collection of Whitney Museum of American Art, NY, Photography by Geoffrey Clements, NY; Art © Jasper Johns/Licensed by VAGA, NY 970 Bettmann/CORBIS; 973 CORBIS; 976 AP Images; 978 Baldwin H. Ward/CORBIS; 980 Stephen Bradley/Alamy Images; 981 AFP/Getty Images; 983 985 Nathan Benn/ CORBIS; 986 CORBIS; 988 Nathan Benn/CORBIS; 994 Corbis Premium RF/Alamy Images; 995 998 CORBIS; 999 1000 From MAUS 1: A Survivor's Tale/My Father Bleeds History by Art Spiegelman, copyright ©1973, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1984 -1985 -1986 by Art Spiegelman; 1001 CORBIS; 1002 Bettmann/CORBIS; 1004 Time Life Pictures/Getty Images; 1006 John Van Hasselt/CORBIS SYGMA; 1008 Hulton Archive/Getty Images; 1010 Time Life Pictures/Getty Images; 1013 1014 CORBIS; 1014 Getty Images; 1019 Photodisc; 1019 Scala/ Art Resource, NY; 1020 Courtesy Robert C. Buitron; 1024 CORBIS; 1025 Sal Veder/AP Images; 1026 Bettmann/CORBIS; 1028 (bkgd)Daniel Root/Photonica/Getty Images; 1028 (inset)20TH CENTURY FOX/THE KOBAL COLLECTION/WETCHER, BARRY; 1036 Daniel Root/Photonica/Getty Images; 1039 Nanette Carter; 1042 20TH CENTURY FOX/THE KOBAL COLLECTION; 1046 Courtesy of SBC Communications; 1049 Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, NY. ©2007 The Pollock, Krasner Foundation/Artists Rights Society New York; 1054 Mark Peterson/CORBIS; 1059 20TH CENTURY FOX/THE KOBAL COLLECTION; 1061 20TH CENTURY FOX/THE KOBAL COLLECTION; 1064 Harvard University Art Museums, Fogg Art Museum, Gift of Saundra B. Lane in honor of James Cuno/Photo: Allan Macintyre ©President and Fellows of Harvard College; 1067 Albright-Knox Art Gallery, Buffalo. Gift of Seymour H. Knox, 1957; 1068 © 2007 The Pollock-Krasner Foundation/Artists Rights Society, New York; 1071 Images.com/CORBIS; 1076 20TH CENTURY FOX/THE KOBAL COLLECTION; 1081 Nanette Carter; 1085 20TH CENTURY FOX/THE KOBAL COLLECTION; 1089 Estate of Elaine DeKooning; 1093 Images. com/CORBIS; 1098 Robbie Jack/CORBIS; 1101 Gayle Ray/SuperStock; 1103 The Lane Collection. Courtesy Museum of Fine Arts, Boston; 1107 1109 20TH CENTURY FOX/THE KOBAL COLLECTION/BARRY WETCHER; 1111 Todd Davidson/Images.com; 1113 (l c)Getty Images, MPI/Getty Images ; 1116 AP Images; 1117 The Kobal Collection; 1119 Brand X Pictures; 1120 Digital Vision/Getty Images; 1126 (l c r)CORBIS; 1128 (l)Courtesy Simon & Schuster, (r)Time Life Pictures/ Getty Images; 1129 (b)Aaron Haupt; 1136 Louis K. Meisel Gallery, Inc./CORBIS; 1138 (bl)Dave Bartruff/CORBIS, (br)Getty Images, (cl)Bettmann/CORBIS, (cr)W. Cody/CORBIS, (t)Warner Bros./Photofest; 1139 (bl)Reuters/CORBIS, (br)ROMEO RANOCO/Reuters/CORBIS, (c)John Duricka/AP Images, (cl)Reuters/CORBIS, (cr)Chris Trotman/ Duomo/CORBIS, (t)National Organization of Women; 1141 (c)Ralf-Finn Hestoft/CORBIS, (l)John Nordell/Getty Images, (r)Nik Wheeler/ CORBIS; 1142 Wally McNamee/CORBIS; 1145 Bettmann/CORBIS; 1147 Getty Images; 1149 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 1151 Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, Smithsonian Institution, Museum Purchase, 1977. Photographer, Lee Stalsworth; 1153 AP Images; 1154 Brian Lanker; 1155 Flip Schulke/CORBIS; 1157 Images.com/CORBIS; 1158 1159 Bettmann/CORBIS; 1161 Noah Berger/AP Images; 1163 From the collection of the W¸rth Museum, K¸nzelsau, Germany. Photography by Tim Stamm; 1167 Bettmann/CORBIS; 1169 Leonard Nadel/National Museum of American History/Handout/Reuters/CORBIS; 1171 1172 1173 CORBIS; 1174 Peter Turnley/CORBIS; 1175 Bettmann/CORBIS; 1180 CORBIS; 1181 David Pickoff/AP Images; 1183 Collection National Guard Bureau, Pentagon, Washington, DC. From the original painting by Mort Kunstler. ©1984 Mort Kunstler, Inc.; 1186 CORBIS; 1187 Christine Spengler/CORBIS SYGMA; 1191 Steve Starr/CORBIS; 1192 Christopher Felver/CORBIS; 1194 Brenda Chrystie/CORBIS; 1198 Jacob Halaska/IndexStock; 1199 Library of Congress; 1200 Iconica/Getty Images; 1202 Jerry Schatzberg/CORBIS; 1204 Frank Driggs Collection/Getty Images; 1207 1208 Bettmann/CORBIS; 1210 Tate Gallery, London/Art Resource, NY; 1213 Andy Warhol Foundation/CORBIS; 1214 Bettmann/CORBIS; 1216 Francis G. Mayer/CORBIS; 1218 The Museum of Modern Art/Art Resource, NY; 1222 Bettmann/CORBIS; 1224 Freyda Miller/CORBIS; 1226 Bettmann/CORBIS; 1228 Georgia O'Keeffe Museum, Santa Fe/Art Resource, NY; 1229 Didier Dorval/Masterfile; 1230 (b)Mark Lennihan/AP Images; 1230 (t)Royalty-Free/CORBIS; 1232 1237 Betttmann/CORBIS; 1239 Copyright by Marian Wood Kolisch; 1241 1243 1244 1246 1247 1248 Images.com/CORBIS; 1250 (b)Scala/Art Resource, NY, (t)Getty Images; 1257 Dorothy Alexander; 1259 Brand X Pictures/PunchStock; 1260 Victoria & Albert Museum, London/Art Resource, NY; 1263 Malcah Zeldis/Art Resource, NY; 1264 Doug Menuez/CORBIS; 1266 Zifen Qian/SuperStock; 1269 Phil Schermeister/CORBIS; 1270 North Wind Picture Archives; 1271 Getty Images; 1272 Vince Streano/Getty Images; 1274 Sophie Bassouls/CORBIS SYGMA; 1276 Ditz/Private Collection/Bridgeman Art Library; 1278 Paul Bullard/Private Collection, Agnew's, London/Bridgeman Art Library; 1282 Miriam Berkley; 1284 Kactus Foto/SuperStock; 1286 Gerardo Somoza/CORBIS; 1288 PhotoCuisine/CORBIS; 1291 Christopher Felver/CORBIS; 1293 Gilbert Mayers/SuperStock; 1296 David Ash/CORBIS; 1298 Courtesy Louise Erdrich, c/o Rembar and Curtis; 1299 Peter Harholdt/SuperStock; 1301 (l)Courtesy Louise Erdrich, c/o Rembar and Curtis; 1304 Cynthia Farah; 1306 Christie's Images; 1308 Charles Rex Arbogast/AP Images; 1310 Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC/Art Resource, NY; 1316 Private Collection, Christie's Images/Bridgeman Art Library; 1317 2005 Marvel/CORBIS; 1318 Pascal Le Segretain/Getty Images; 1321 Amanita Pictures; 1323 Collection of Jonathan Demme; 1324 Manu Sassoonian/Art Resource, NY; 1327 Yale University Art Gallery, New Haven, CT.; 1328 (l c)Getty Images; 1331 Heather Conley Photographs; 1333 Franklin McMahon/CORBIS; 1336 Linda Haas; 1338 Phoenix Art Museum, Arizona, Mr and Mrs Gene Lemon in honour of Clayton Kirking/Bridgeman Art Library; 1341 Private Collection, Photo ©Heini Schneebeli /Bridgeman Art Library; 1343 BananaStock/Picture Quest; 1352 (l r)Bettmann/CORBIS; 1353 David J. & Janice L. Frent Collection/CORBIS; 1354 (inset)Courtesy of the Democratic National Committee; (bkgd)Getty Images; 1356 Margaret Bourke-White/Time & Life Pictures/Getty Images; 1357 Courtesy American for the Arts; 1358 (l)Courtesy Scholastic, Inc., (r)Courtesy Vintage and Anchor Books; 1359 (br)Reuters/CORBIS.